Ancient Near Eastern Texts
Relating to the Old Testament
TRANSLATORS AND ANNOTATORS

W. F. Albright, Johns Hopkins University
Robert D. Biggs, University of Chicago
J. J. Finkelstein, Yale University
H. L. Ginsberg, Jewish Theological Seminary
Albrecht Goetze, Yale University
A. K. Grayson, University of Toronto
A. Jamme, W.F., The Catholic University
S. N. Kramer, University of Pennsylvania
Theophile J. Meek, University of Toronto
William L. Moran, S.J., Harvard University
A. Leo Oppenheim, University of Chicago
Robert H. Pfeiffer, Harvard University
Erica Reiner, University of Chicago
Franz Rosenthal, Yale University
A. Sachs, Brown University
E. A. Speiser, University of Pennsylvania
Ferris J. Stephens, Yale University
John A. Wilson, University of Chicago
ANCIENT NEAR EASTERN TEXTS

'Relating to the Old Testament

EDITED BY JAMES B. PRITCHARD

Third Edition with Supplement

PRINCETON · NEW JERSEY
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
1969
Contents

THIRD EDITION WITH SUPPLEMENT

INTRODUCTION xix
INTRODUCTION TO THE THIRD EDITION XXV
ABBREVIATIONS 677

I. MYTHS, EPICS, AND LEGENDS

EGYPTIAN MYTHS, TALES, AND MORTUARY TEXTS (John A. Wilson) 3

Creation and Myths of Origins 3
The Creation by Atum 3
Another Version of the Creation by Atum 3
The Theology of Memphis 4
The Repulsing of the Dragon and the Creation 6
All Men Created Equal in Opportunity 7
Thebes as the Place of Creation 8
The Assignment of Functions to Thoth 8
The Primeval Establishment of Order 9
The Mythological Origin of Certain Unclean Animals 10

Deliverance of Mankind from Destruction 10

Heroic Tales—Exploits of Gods and Human Beings 11

The Repulsing of the Dragon 11
The God and His Unknown Name of Power 12
The Contest of Horus and Seth for the Rule 14
Astarte and the Tribute of the Sea 17
The Story of Si-nuhe 18
The Taking of Joppa 22
The Story of Two Brothers 23
The Journey of Wen-Amon to Phoenicia 25
The Legend of the Possessed Princess 29
The Tradition of Seven Lean Years in Egypt 31

Mortuary Texts: Life after Death 32

The Conquest of Death 32
The Fields of Paradise 33
The Good Fortune of the Dead 33
The Protestation of Guiltlessness 34
CONTENTS

SUMERIAN MYTHS AND EPIC TALES (S. N. Kramer)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Enki and Ninhursag: a Paradise Myth</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dumuzi and Enkimdu: the Dispute between the Shepherd-God and the Farmer-God</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Deluge</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gilgamesh and Agga</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gilgamesh and the Land of the Living</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Death of Gilgamesh</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Inanna’s Descent to the Nether World</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Duties and Powers of the Gods: Inscription on the Statue of King Kurigalzu</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

AKKADIAN MYTHS AND EPICS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Creation Epic (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Creation Epic—Additions to Tablets V-VII (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>501</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Epic of Gilgamesh (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Epic of Gilgamesh—Notes and Additions (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>503</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Creation of Man by the Mother Goddess (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Cosmological Incantation: The Worm and the Toothache (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adapa (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nergal and Ereshkigal (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nergal and Ereshkigal—Additions (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>507</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atrahasis (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>104</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atrahasis—Additional Texts (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>512</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Descent of Ishtar to the Nether World (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>106</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Vision of the Nether World (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Myth of Zu (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Myth of Zu (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>514</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Etana (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Etana—Additions (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>517</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Legend of Sargon (E. A. Speiser)</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Babylonian Theogony (A. K. Grayson)</td>
<td>517</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

HITTITE MYTHS, EPICS, AND LEGENDS (Albrecht Goetze)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Moon that Fell from Heaven</td>
<td>120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kingship in Heaven</td>
<td>120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Song of Ullikummis</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Myth of Illuyankas</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Telepinus Myth</td>
<td>126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>El, Ashertu and the Storm-god</td>
<td>519</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

UGARITIC MYTHS, EPICS, AND LEGENDS (H. L. Ginsberg)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Poems about Baal and Anath</td>
<td>129</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CONTENTS

The Legend of King Keret 142
The Tale of Aqhat 149

II. LEGAL TEXTS

COLLECTIONS OF LAWS FROM MESOPOTAMIA AND ASIA MINOR 159

The Laws of Ur-Nammu (J. J. Finkelstein) 523
Sumerian Laws, YBC 2177 (J. J. Finkelstein) 525
The Edict of Ammisaduqa (J. J. Finkelstein) 526
Lipit-Ishtar Lawcode (S. N. Kramer) 159
The Laws of Eshnunna (Albrecht Goetze) 161
The Code of Hammurabi (Theophile J. Meek) 163
The Middle Assyrian Laws (Theophile J. Meek) 180
The Hittite Laws (Albrecht Goetze) 188
The Neo-Babylonian Laws (Theophile J. Meek) 197

EGYPTIAN AND HITTITE TREATIES 199

Egyptian Treaty (John A. Wilson) 199
Treaty between the Hittites and Egypt 199

Hittite Treaties (Albrecht Goetze) 201
Treaty between Hattusilis and Ramses II 201
Treaty between Mursilis and Duppi-Tessub of Amurru 203
God List, Blessings and Curses of the Treaty between Suppiluliumas and Mattiwaza 205
Treaty of Suppiluliumas and Aziras of Amurru 529

AKKADIAN TREATIES FROM SYRIA AND ASSYRIA (Erica Reiner) 531

Treaty between Niqmepa of Alalakh and Ir-3IM of Tunip 531
Treaty between Idrimi and Pilliya 532
Treaty between Ashurnirari V of Assyria and Mati'ilu of Arpad 532
Treaty of Esarhaddon with Baal of Tyre 533
The Vassal-Treaties of Esarhaddon 534

HITTITE INSTRUCTIONS (Albrecht Goetze) 207
Instructions for Palace Personnel to Insure the King’s Purity 207
Instructions for Temple Officials 207
From the Instructions for the Commander of the Border Guards 210

DOCUMENTS FROM THE PRACTICE OF LAW 212

Egyptian Documents (John A. Wilson) 212
A Royal Decree of Temple Privilege 212
The Vizier of Egypt 212

vii
CONTENTS

Results of a Trial for Conspiracy 214
From the Record of a Lawsuit 216
Mesopotamian Legal Documents (Theophile J. Meek) 217
Sumerian 217
Old Akkadian 217
New Sumerian 217
Old Assyrian 217
Old Babylonian 218
Late Sumerian 219
Middle Babylonian 219
Nuzi Akkadian 219
Middle Assyrian 220
Neo-Assyrian 221
Neo-Babylonian 221
Additional Mesopotamian Legal Documents (J. J. Finkelstein) 542
Aramaic Papyri from Elephantine (H. L. Ginsberg) 222
Mibtahiah's First Marriage 222
Contract of Mibtahiah's Third Marriage 222
Manumission of a Female Slave and her Daughter, June 12, 427 B.C. 548
Marriage Contract of a Former Slave Girl who is Subject to Paramone, 420 B.C. 548

III. HISTORICAL TEXTS

EGYPTIAN HISTORICAL TEXTS (John A. Wilson) 227
Brief Texts of the Old Kingdom 227
Asiatic Campaigns under Pepi I 227
Middle Kingdom Egyptian Contacts with Asia 228
The Egyptian Mines in Sinai 229
The Inscription of Khu-Sebek, Called Djaa 230
Asiatics in Egyptian Household Service 553
The Hyksos in Egypt 230
The War against the Hyksos 232
The War against the Hyksos (Continued) 554
The Expulsion of the Hyksos 233
The Asiatic Campaigns of Thut-mose III 234
Lists of Asiatic Countries under the Egyptian Empire 242
A Trip to the Lebanon for Cedar 243
Pharaoh as a Sportsman 243
The Asiatic Campaigning of Amen-hotep II 245
A Syrian Captive Colony in Thebes 248

viii
CONTENTS

Scenes of Asiatic Commerce in Theban Tombs 248
The Egyptians and the Gods of Asia 249
Texts from the Tomb of General Hor-em-heb 250
Tut-ankh-Amon's Restoration after the Amarna Revolution 251
The Era of the City of Tanis 252
A Campaign of Seti I in Northern Palestine 253
Campaigns of Seti I in Asia 254
Beth-Shan Stelae of Seti I and Ramses II 255
The Asiatic Campaigning of Ramses II 255
The Journal of a Frontier Official 258
The Report of a Frontier Official 259
The Pursuit of Runaway Slaves 259
A Syrian Interregnum 260
From the Lists of Ramses III 260
The War against the Peoples of the Sea 262
The Megiddo Ivories 263
The Campaign of Sheshonk I 263

BABYLONIAN AND ASSYRIAN HISTORICAL TEXTS (A. Leo Oppenheim) 265

Texts from the Beginnings to the First Dynasty of Babylon 265

   Historiography Documents 265
   The Sumerian King List 265
   The "Sargon Chronicle" 266

   Historical Documents 267
   Sargon of Agade 267
   Naram-Sin in the Cedar Mountain 268
   Gudea, ensi of Lagash 268

Texts from Hammurabi to the Downfall of the Assyrian Empire 269

   Historiographic Documents 269
   List of Date Formulae of the Reign of Hummurabi 269
   List of Year Names: Samsuiluna, King of Babylon 271
   The Babylonian King List B 271
   The Babylonian King List A 272
   The Synchronistic Chronicle 272
   Excerpts from the Lists of Assyrian Eponyms 274
   The Assyrian King List 564

   Historical Documents 274
   Shamshi-Adad I (about 1726-1694): First Contact with the West 274
CONTENTS

The Dedication of the Shamash Temple by Yahdun-Lim 556
The Story of Idrimi, King of Alalakh 557
Tiglath-pileser I (1114-1076): Expeditions to Syria, the Lebanon, and the Mediterranean Sea 274
Ashurnasirpal II (883-859): Expedition to Carchemish and the Lebanon 275
The Banquet of Ashurnasirpal II 558
Shalmaneser III (858-824): The Fight against the Aramean Coalition 276
Adad-nirari III (810-783): Expedition to Palestine 281
Tiglath-pileser III (744-727): Campaigns against Syria and Palestine 282
Sargon II (721-705): The Fall of Samaria 284
Sennacherib (704-681) 287
Esarhaddon (680-669) 289
Ashurbanipal (668-633) 294

The Neo-Babylonian Empire and its Successors 301

Historiographic Documents 301
Text from the First Year of Belibni to the Accession Year of Shamashshumukin 301
Text from the First Year of Esarhaddon to the First Year of Shamashshumukin 303
Text from the Tenth to the Seventeenth Year of Nabopolassar:
   Events Leading to the Fall of Nineveh 303
Text from the Accession Year of Nabonidus to the Fall of Babylon 305
The Uruk King List from Kandalanu to Seleucus II 566
A Seleucid King List 566

Historical Documents 307
Nebuchadnezzar II (605-562) 307
The Conquest of Jerusalem 563
Nabonidus (555-539) 308
The Mother of Nabodinus 560
Nabonidus and his God 562
Cyrus (557-529) 315
Xerxes (485-465) 316
Antiochus Soter (280-262/1) 317

HITTITE HISTORICAL TEXTS (Albrecht Goetze) 318
Suppiluliumas Destroys the Kingdom of Mitanni 318
Suppiluliumas and the Egyptian Queen 319
Hattusilis on Muwatallis' War against Egypt 319

PALESTINIAN INSCRIPTIONS (W. F. Albright) 320
The Gezer Calendar 320
The Moabite Stone 320
The Ostraca of Samaria 321
CONTENTS

The Siloam Inscription 321
The Lachish Ostraca 321
A Letter from the Time of Josiah 568
Three Ostraca from Arad 568

IV. RITUALS, INCANTATIONS, AND DESCRIPTIONS OF FESTIVALS

EGYPTIAN RITUALS AND INCANTATIONS (John A. Wilson) 325

A Ritual for Offering Food 325
The Daily Ritual in the Temple 325
Circumcision in Egypt 326
Charms against Snakes 326
Curses and Threats 326
Magical Protection for a Child 328
The Exeoration of Asiatic Princes 328
Religious Drama in Egypt 329

AKKADIAN RITUALS (A. Sachs) 331

Temple Program for the New Year's Festival at Babylon 331
Ritual to be Followed by the Ka/«-Priest when Covering the Temple Kettle-Drum 334
Temple Ritual for the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Days of an Unknown Month at Uruk 338
Ritual for the Repair of a Temple 339
Program of the Pageant of the Statue of the God Anu at Uruk 342
Daily Sacrifices to the Gods of the City of Uruk 343

HITTITE RITUALS, INCANTATIONS, AND DESCRIPTION OF FESTIVAL (Albrecht Goetze) 346

Ritual for the Purification of God and Man 346
Ritual to Counteract Sorcery 347
Ritual against Pestilence 347
Purification Ritual Engaging the Help of Protective Demons 348
Ritual against Impotence 349
Ritual against Domestic Quarrel 350
Evocatio 351
The Soldiers' Oath 353
Ritual before Battle 354
Removal of the Threat Implied in an Evil Omen 355
Ritual for the Erection of a House 356
Ritual for the Erection of a New Palace 357
The Festival of the Warrior-God 358
EGYPTIAN HYMNS AND PRAYERS (John A. Wilson) 365

A Hymn to Amon-Re 365
A Universalist Hymn to the Sun 367
Amon as the Sole God 368
The God Amon as Healer and Magician 369
The Hymn to the Aton 369
Hymns to the Gods as a Single God 371
Hymn to the Nile 372
The Hymn of Victory of Thut-mose III 373
From Amen-hotep III's Building Inscription 375
Hymn of Victory of Mer-ne-Ptah (The "Israel Stela") 376
Joy at the Accession of Mer-ne-Ptah 378
Joy at the Accession of Ramses IV 378
A Prayer of Thoth 379
A Prayer to Re-Har-akhti 379
A Prayer for Help in the Law Court 380
Gratitude for a God's Mercy 380
A Penitential Hymn to a Goddess 381

SUMERIAN PETITION (S. N. Kramer) 382

Petition to a King 382

SUMERO-AKKADIAN HYMNS AND PRAYERS (Ferris J. Stephens) 383

Hymn to Ishtar 383
Prayer of Lamentation to Ishtar 383
Hymn to the Moon-God 385
Prayer to the Moon-God 386
Prayer of Ashurbanipal to the Sun-God 386
Hymn to the Sun-God 387
Psalm to Marduk 389
Prayer to the Gods of the Night 390
Prayer to Every God 391

SUMERIAN HYMNS (S. N. Kramer) 573

Hymn to Enlil, the All-Beneficent 573
Hymn to Enlil as the Ruling Deity of the Universe 576
Hymn to Ninurta as God of Vegetation 576
Hymn to Ninurta as a God of Wrath 577
Ishkur and the Destruction of the Rebellious Land 577
Self-Laudatory Hymn of Inanna and Her Omnipotence 578
CONTENTS

Hymnal Prayer of Enheduanna: The Adoration of Inanna in Ur 579
Hymn to the Ekur 582
Ur-Nammu Hymn: Building of the Ekur and Blessing by Enlil 583
The King of the Road: A Self-Laudatory Shulgi Hymn 584

HITTITE PRAYERS (Albrecht Goetze) 393
Prayer of Pudu-hepas to the Sun-Goddess of Arinna and her Circle 393
Plague Prayers of Mursilis 394
Daily Prayer of the King 396
Prayer to be Spoken in an Emergency 397
Prayer of Arnuwandas and Asmu-Nikkal Concerning the Ravages Inflicted on Hittite Cult-Centers 399
Prayer of Kantuzilis for Relief from his Sufferings 400

VI. DIDACTIC AND WISDOM LITERATURE

FABLES AND DIDACTIC TALES 405

Egyptian Didactic Tales (John A. Wilson) 405
   A Dispute over Suicide 405
   The Protests of the Eloquent Peasant 407

Akkadian Fable 410
   Dispute between the Date Palm and the Tamarisk (Robert H. Pfeiffer) 410
   Dispute between the Tamarisk and the Date Palm (Robert D. Biggs) 592

PROVERBS AND PRECEPTS 412

Egyptian Instructions (John A. Wilson) 412
   The Instruction of the Vizier Ptah-hotep 412
   The Instruction for King Meri-ka-Re 414
   The Instruction of King Amen-em-het 418
   The Instruction of Prince Hor-dedef 419
   The Instruction of Ani 420
   The Instruction of Amen-em-Opet 421

Akkadian Proverbs and Counsels 425
   Proverbs (Robert H. Pfeiffer) 425
   Proverbs (Robert D. Biggs) 593
   The Instructions of Shuruppak (Robert D. Biggs) 594
   Counsels of Wisdom (Robert H. Pfeiffer) 426
   Counsels of Wisdom (Robert D. Biggs) 595

Aramaic Proverbs and Precepts (H. L. Ginsberg) 427
   The Words of Ahiqar 427
CONTENTS

OBSERVATIONS ON LIFE AND THE WORLD ORDER

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Egyptian Observations (John A. Wilson)</td>
<td>431</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Divine Attributes of Pharaoh</td>
<td>431</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In Praise of Learned Scribes</td>
<td>431</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Satire on the Trades</td>
<td>432</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sumerian Wisdom Text (S. N. Kramer)</td>
<td>589</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Man and his God: A Sumerian Variation of the &quot;Job&quot; Motif</td>
<td>589</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Akkadian Observations on Life and the World Order

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&quot;I Will Praise the Lord of Wisdom&quot; (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>434</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ludlul Bel Nemeqi, &quot;I Will Praise the Lord of Wisdom&quot; (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>596</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Pessimistic Dialogue between Master and Servant (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>437</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dialogue of Pessimism (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>600</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Dialogue about Human Misery (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>438</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Babylonian Theodicy (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>601</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ORACLES AND PROPHECIES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Egyptian Oracles and Prophecies (John A. Wilson)</td>
<td>441</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Admonitions of Ipu-wer</td>
<td>441</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Prophecy of Nefer-rohu</td>
<td>444</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Divine Nomination of Thut-mose III</td>
<td>446</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Divine Nomination of an Ethiopian King</td>
<td>447</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Divine Oracle through Visible Sign</td>
<td>448</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Divine Oracle through a Dream</td>
<td>449</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Akkadian Oracles and Prophecies</td>
<td>449</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An Old Babylonian Oracle from Uruk (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>604</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oracles Concerning Esarhaddon (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>449</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oracles Concerning Esarhaddon (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>605</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Letter to Ashurbanipal (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>450</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Letter to Ashurbanipal (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>605</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oracle of Ninlil Concerning Ashurbanipal (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>450</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An Oracular Dream Concerning Ashurbanipal (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>451</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An Oracular Dream Concerning Ashurbanipal (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>606</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prophecies (Robert H. Pfeiffer)</td>
<td>451</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prophecies (Robert D. Biggs)</td>
<td>606</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VII. LAMENTATIONS

SUMERIAN LAMENTATIONS (S. N. Kramer)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lamentation over the Destruction of Ur</td>
<td>455</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lamentation over the Destruction of Sumer and Ur</td>
<td>611</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CONTENTS

VIII. SECULAR SONGS AND POEMS

EGYPTIAN SECULAR SONGS AND POEMS (John A. Wilson) 467

A Song of the Harper 467
Love Songs 467
Songs of the Common People 469
In Praise of the City Ramses 470

IX. LETTERS

AN EGYPTIAN LETTER (John A. Wilson) 475
A Satirical Letter 475
A SUMERIAN LETTER (S. N. Kramer) 480
Letter of King Ibbi-Sin 480
AKKADIAN LETTERS (W. F. Albright) 482
The Mari Letters 482
The Amarna Letters 483
AKKADIAN LETTERS (William L. Moran, S.J.) 623
Divine Revelations (Appendix k-x) 623
The Substitute King 626
A Happy Reign 626
A Royal Decree of Equity 627
A Letter to a God 627
Punishment by Fire 627
Treaties and Coalitions (a-b) 628
"The God of my Father" 628
A Loan between Gentlemen 629
A Boy to his Mother 629
Divine Revelations (Appendix, k-x) 629

ARAMAIC LETTERS (H. L. Ginsberg) 491
Letters of the Jews in Elephantine 491
Assignment to a New Lessor of Land Abandoned in the Egyptian Rebellion of 410 B.C. 633
(For letters in Hebrew see the Lachish Ostraca, pp. 321-322)

X. MISCELLANEOUS TEXTS

EGYPTIAN TEXTS (John A. Wilson) 495
The Authority of Ancient Documents 495
The Interpretation of Dreams 495
SUMERIAN SACRED MARRIAGE TEXTS (S. N. Kramer) 637
  Dumuzi and Inanna: Pride of Pedigree 637
  Dumuzi and Inanna: Love in the Gipar 638
  Dumuzi and Inanna: Courting, Marriage, and Honeymoon 638
  Dumuzi and Inanna: The Ecstasy of Love 639
  Inanna and the King: Blessing on the Wedding Night 640
  Dumuzi and Inanna: Prayer for Water and Bread 641
  Dumuzi and Inanna: Prosperity in the Palace 642
  "Lettuce is my Hair": A Love-Song for Shu-Sin 644
  "Life is your Coming": The King as Brother and Son-in-law 644
  "The Honey-man": Love-Song to a King 645
  "Set me Free, my Sister": The Sated Lover 645

SUMERIAN MISCELLANEOUS TEXTS (S. N. Kramer) 646
  The Curse of Agade: The Ekur Avenged 646
  Ua-auga: A Sumerian Lullaby 651

SUMERIAN LOVE SONG (S. N. Kramer) 496
  Love Song to a King 496

HERRITE OMEN (Albrecht Goetze) 497
  Investigating the Anger of the Gods 497

CANAANITE AND ARAMAIC INSCRIPTIONS (Franz Rosenthal) 653
  Building Inscriptions 653
    Yehimilk of Byblos 653
    Azitawadda of Adana 653
    Kilamuwa of YVy-Sam'al 654
    Barrakab of YVy-Sam'al 655
  Cultic Inscriptions 655
    Ben-Hadad of Damascus 655
    Kilamuwa of YVy-Sam'al 655
    Zakir of Hamat and Lu'ath 655
    Yehawmilk of Byblos 656
    The Marseilles Tariff 656
    The Carthage Tariff 657
    The King of Kedar 657
    Punic Ex-voto Inscriptions 658
  Incantations 658
    The Amulet from Arslan Tash 658
    The Uruk Incantation 658
CONTENTS

Political Documents 659
  The Treaty between KTK and Arpad 659
Sepulchral Inscriptions 661
  Ahiram of Byblos 661
  Agbar, Priest of the Moon-god in Nerab 661
  Tabnit of Sidon 662
  Eshmun'azar of Sidon 662
SOUTH-ARABIAN INSCRIPTIONS (A. Jamme, W.F.) 663
  Sabaean Inscriptions 663
  Minaean Inscriptions 665
  Qatabanian Inscriptions 667
  Hadrami Inscriptions 669

XI. SUPPLEMENT

ADDENDA 671
  Index of Biblical References 683
  Index of Names 687
Introduction

THE ancient Near East, until about a century ago, had as its chief witness the text of the Hebrew Bible. Relatively insignificant was the evidence recovered from sources outside the Bible; that which had been found had not been sufficiently understood to serve as a reliable historical source. Through explorations and excavations carried on within the last century in Egypt, Mesopotamia, Asia Minor, and Syria, a wealth of new information has become available. This new light from extrabiblical texts has served not only to enlarge immeasurably the horizon for a knowledge of the ancient Near East, but it has also sharpened considerably the understanding of the content of the Bible itself. Not infrequently has an interest in biblical history and literature led those who pursued it into fields of discovery which have had far-reaching significance for humanistic studies in general. Hitherto unknown languages with considerable literatures have been the by-products of activity begun by those interested primarily in biblical research. The results of the labor of those whose interest led them beyond the narrower confines have now become the tools of all biblical scholars.

The purpose of this work is to make available to students of the ancient Near East—serious students of the Old Testament, we believe, are necessarily such—the most important extrabiblical texts in translations which represent the best understanding which present-day scholarship has achieved. Many of the relevant texts have been hitherto accessible only in obscure and highly technical journals. Some have been circulated widely in translations which represent a stage of understanding now happily superseded by more thorough study. Yet other texts included here have not hitherto been published in translation into a modern language.

This is not the first attempt of its kind. Extrabiblical sources have long been considered important for an understanding of the Hebrew Bible. Almost three centuries ago, John Spencer, Master of Corpus Christi College in Cambridge, sought to interpret the ritual laws of the Hebrews in the light of the relevant material from Egypt, Greece, and Rome. As early as 1714, Hadrian Reland of Utrecht published his monumental work on Palestinian geography, in which he recognized the importance of the monuments for biblical study. W. Robertson Smith* and Julius Wellhausen, in the latter part of the nineteenth century, found in the literature of Arabia a point of vantage for a better understanding of biblical customs and institutions.

The importance of Assyriology for biblical studies was widely heralded through the spectacular announcements of George Smith. In a paper read before the Society of Biblical Archaeology on December 3, 1872, Smith gave translations from the Assyrian account of the flood and predicted that "we may expect many other discoveries throwing light on these ancient periods." Two years later he described the fragments of an extrabiblical account of creation in a letter to the London Daily Telegraph. These sensational announcements served to create interest among biblical scholars in the science of Assyriology, as well as to elicit popular support for further excavation and research.

At about the same time that England was becoming aware of the significance of cuneiform studies, Eberhard Schräder published his Die Keilinschriften und das alte Testament (1872), a work which enjoyed the popularity of successive editions in German and an English translation. Schrader's arrangement of the relevant cuneiform material was in the form of a commentary upon the canonical books. Later, H. Winckler published a textbook of the cuneiform inscriptions illustrating the biblical material; this appeared in three editions.

1 De legibus Hebracorum ritualibus et earum rationibus (Cambridge, 1685).
2 Palaestina ex monumentis veteribus illustrate.
3 Kinship and Marriage in Early Arabia (1885).
4 Reste arabischen Heidentums (1887).
5 Transactions of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, n (1873), 213-234.
6 March 4, 1875.
8 Keilinschrifftliches Textbuch zum alten Testament (Leipzig, 1892, 1903, 1909).
bors can be seen to best advantage only when there is a fairly comprehensive picture of the neighbors. Thus there has been attempted a fair sampling of the extant literature from quarters contiguous to Palestine. This broader selection of materials serves yet another purpose: it makes the collection of use to students of other phases of the history of the ancient Near East.

While this is the largest collection of translations of texts relating to the Old Testament yet made, two practical considerations have limited our attainment of the goal of a truly representative selection. First, the accidents of discovery have frequently—to judge from past experience—presented anything but a representative sampling of the epigraphic material of a particular culture. Thus it may well be that certain types of literary expression from a given area have turned up in abundance, while other types of texts remain either entirely unrepresented, or with but few examples. In appraising any area or period one must keep in mind the real possibility that the sampling obtained from excavations may not necessarily be representative. Secondly, the availability of competent scholars, who could give useful translations of the known texts, has limited at a few points the selection offered in this volume. Certain areas are represented by only a few examples of texts because of the limitations which other duties or interests imposed on the scholars best equipped to make trustworthy translations. No compromise in the quality of translation was considered worth making in the interest of achieving the ideal of a completely representative selection. It should be noted, however, that the number of competent scholars who have contributed to this project is several times more than that of those who have engaged hitherto in such an undertaking.

Particularly baffling has been the problem of selecting Babylonian and Assyrian historical texts. Obviously the more important records of Babylonian and Assyrian kings mentioned in the Old Testament should be included—particularly those texts which describe campaigns conducted in Palestine and Syria. The reference in a text to a place or person known from the Bible often has been the criterion for inclusion. This selection with its index should place within ready reach the cuneiform texts containing geographical information about Syro-Palestine as it was recorded by the royal scribes of the invaders from Mesopotamia. While no claim is made for an exhaustive listing of the Palestinian place names in the records from Mesopotamia, one may expect to find here the more important references found in the texts preserved from each of the major periods of Mesopotamian history from the beginning down through the early part of the third century B.C.

In addition to the specifically historical material there has been included for each major period of Mesopotamian history a representative selection of historiographic documents, as illustrations of the methods employed by the chroniclers of the names of kings, the years, and the important events in history. These texts, while obviously not relevant to the content of the Old Testament, have been considered important as background material, throwing light upon the methods of ancient historical science.

While Gressmann's Altorientalische Texte zum alten Testament has served as a basis for discussion in the making of the present choice, the selection is a new one. The editor has had the cooperation of the contributors in this task. He, rather than they, must shoulder the final responsibility for the choice made. References are frequently given to significant discussions of the relationship of the texts to biblical passages in order that the student may form his own opinion of the relation of Israel to the surrounding world. The references in the footnotes to biblical material are intended to help the honest student, not to cajole him. It is hoped that this volume of translations, intended primarily for students of the Old Testament, will serve to give a perspective for a better understanding of the likenesses and the differences which existed between Israel and the surrounding cultures.

The arrangement of the texts is according to literary types. The advantage of this order over that followed by Gressmann was first suggested by Professor Ferris J. Stephens: the greatest number of readers will approach this work from an interest in the Old Testament rather than primarily from an interest in one of the other linguistic or cultural areas. For those whose interest is regional or linguistic, there has been compiled a second table of contents listing the texts according to languages.

The form of the presentation of each text aims at supplying the reader with the greatest amount of help within the least possible space. Brief introductions are given, as a rule, to the translations. They are calculated to supply, when available, the following information: a title which indicates something of the contents of the text, the provenience, the date of composition and of the actual writing of the particular text translated, the original or official publication, important translations, references to important discussions or commentaries, and other bibliographical references which might be useful to the reader. In some cases, where the contents of the text are very obscure, a brief note of interpretation has been added. An attempt has been made to keep the introductions brief so that as many texts as possible could be included in the volume. The introduction to the text and the annotations printed in the footnotes are the work of the translator whose name appears at the beginning of the section.

The general form of citation and of reference claims only the authority of general usage. At many points, what prevails as general usage in a particular discipline has been surrendered in the interest of consistency throughout the volume. Only in rare instances could the editor find such ancient authority for his demands as in the case of the numbering of every tenth line of poetry, a practice to be seen, for example, in certain cuneiform texts. More frequently he has had to adopt a rule and adhere to it, in spite of the good-natured taunts of the contributors. In the interest of readability the text of the translation proper has been kept as free as possible from diacritics. Normalized spellings of proper names have been employed within the translations. This means, for example, that proper names from cuneiform sources have the simple $h$ for the $a$, to which cuneiformists are accustomed. Thus, every $h$ in proper names from cuneiform texts, except those preceded by $s$, represents the $h$. Also, in the normalization of proper names the $/\,\slash$ is rendered as $\text{sh}$. Unless some serious misunderstanding is likely to result the differences between $s$ and $/\,\slash$ and $f$, are not indicated in proper names appearing in the translations. The name of the Assyrian god $\text{AHtr}$ has been normalized to $\text{Ashur}$, despite the fact that this form so widely used in English publications does not indicate the doubling of the $/\,\slash$. Italics within the translations have been used for two purposes: first, to designate a doubtful translation of a known text; secondly, to indicate transliterations. While this second use of italics has been the general rule, in some cases it was necessary to differentiate the languages in transliterations. Here practices prevailing in the particular discipline to which the text belongs have been followed. For example, in texts where it was necessary to indicate that the transliteration was Sumerian, letter-spaced Roman was used; italic was used for the Akkadian; small capitals were used to indicate the ideogram or the cuneiform sign. In transliterations of Akkadian words diacritics have been omitted from all determinatives (indicated by superior letters).

Square brackets have been used for restorations; round brackets (parentheses) indicate interpolations made by the translator for a better understanding of the translation. Obvious scribal omissions have been placed between triangular brackets; braces indicate instances of scribal repetition of material. In the translations from Ugaritic, half square brackets have been used to designate a text which has been partly restored.

A lacuna has been indicated by three dots; in case the lacuna comes before a final sentence dot, four dots appear. Following customary usage in some disciplines, a lacuna in which the text is wholly damaged or missing has been indicated in some translations by three dots enclosed within square brackets. The length of a long broken portion of text has sometimes been indicated by the translator with a statement within parentheses. Short breaks generally have not been indicated as to length; three dots may thus mean a break from as little as one sign or symbol to entire lines or passages. It has been assumed that readers who could make effective use of the information concerning the length of the missing portion of the text would be likely to have access to the original text or its transliteration.

References to the tablets, columns, lines of the text have been given usually in parentheses either within the translation, as in prose, or in the right-hand margin, when the form is poetry. Capital Roman numerals indicate the number of the tablet or some other well-recognized division; lower-

---

14 e.g. CT, xiii (1901), 14-15; K 13,761 (King, STC, t,164).

xxii
INTRODUCTION

"case Roman numerals have been used for columns; Arabic numerals indicate the line or lines. The Egyptian hieratic texts often used rubrics for emphasis or punctuation: passages in red ink, where the general context was in black ink. The translations of these texts use small-capital letters to indicate such rubrics.

It is a source of considerable pride that there have been eleven translators who have cooperated to produce this volume. Each is a specialist within the field with which he deals. The competence of the several translators is attested by the scientific literature which they have contributed upon various problems within their respective fields. In many cases the translators have had first-hand acquaintance with the texts themselves; in every case the translator has made use of the original or scientific publication of the text which he has translated. Because of the original character of this work the contributors to the volume have frequently felt it necessary to include in the footnotes matters of considerably more technical nature than the non-specialist is likely to utilize. These notes, it is hoped, will not distract the general reader. They will be of service, where they appear, to the more specialized reader in enabling him to see the grounds for some of the newer readings and translations offered in this volume.

The spirit of cooperative scholarship has been apparent throughout the four years this volume has been in preparation. On occasions it has been possible for members of the group to meet together for discussion of the various problems arising out of this collaboration. An advisory committee of three of the contributors has frequently advised the editor on problems which have arisen. The spirit of give-and-take has been evident in the willingness of each of the contributors to submit his completed manuscript to another member of the group for careful reading before publication. While each of the translators bears the sole responsibility for his work, not infrequently have criticisms given by colleagues been gratefully incorporated into the final draft.

A word should be said about the particular difficulty of finding general agreement on chronology. Each translator has been responsible for the dates found within the introductions and notes to his own contribution. Attempt has been made, however, to iron out as much of the discrepancy as possible and to offer to the reader a chronology which represents fairly widely held views.

Egyptian chronology is still in a state of flux, with major uncertainty for dates before 2500 B.C. and the possibility of minor adjustment for dates after 2000 B.C. The dates suggested in this volume are tentative and are often given in terms of the nearest round number. For example, Amen-em-het III is stated to have reigned "about 1840-1790" rather than "1839-1791, with about two years' margin of error"; the Old Kingdom is dated "about 2700-2200" rather than "about 2664-2181." For later periods there is little deviation from such standard reference works as The Cambridge Ancient History.

For the dates used in the section devoted to Babylonian and Assyrian historical texts, reference may be made to A. Poebel, The Assyrian King List from Khorsabad, JNES, n (1943), pp. 85-88. The dates as given by Poebel have been used in other places as well. Frequently references in the footnotes will direct the reader to other discussions of chronology upon which the translator has relied.

One point at which this volume differs from its predecessors is the inclusion of a sizable body of translations of Hittite texts. These are scattered widely in the various sections of the volume. Since these texts have not been widely discussed as to their relation to the Old Testament, the following paragraphs will serve as orientation for the general reader.

Almost all Hittite texts which we possess come from ruins near the Turkish village Bogazkoy in the center of Anatolia. The ruins represent what is left of Hattusa, the capital of the Hittite empire which flourished between 1800 and 1200 B.C. The texts are written—according to a custom which the Hittites adopted from the inhabitants of Mesopotamia—on clay tablets in cuneiform. They once belonged to "archives" or "libraries" buried under the debris when Hattusa was destroyed about

xxiii
INTRODUCTION

1225 B.C. This means that all of them are older than this date. A more exact date can be assigned to those which were composed by, or in the name of, specific kings. For this reason the sequence of the kings, at least for the so-called "later Hittite kingdom" may be given here:

- Arnuwandas: 15th century
- Tudhaliyas: 15th century
- Suppiluliumas, Tudhaliyas’ son: about 1390-1354
- Mursilis, Suppiluliumas’ son: about 1353-1323
- Muwatallis, Mursilis’ son: about 1323-1300
- Urhi-Tessub, Muwatallis’ son: about 1300-1293
- Hattusilis, Mursilis’ son: about 1293-1270
- Tudhaliyas, Hattusilis’ son: about 1270-1240
- Arnuwandas, Tudhaliyas’ son: about 1240-1225

The Bogazköy texts, the greater number of which are preserved in the museums of Istanbul and Ankara, a smaller collection being in the Vorderasiatische Abteilung of the Staatliche Museen at Berlin, have been published in various series. For general orientation on the Hittites and the problems connected with them the reader may be referred to the following books: A. Götze, Das Hethiter-Reich (=AO, xxvn/2 [1928]); A. Götze, Kleinasien in Kulturgeschichte des alten Orients (Handbuch der Altertumswissenschaft, m, 1, 3) (1933); L. Delaporte, Les Hittites (1936); E. Cavaignac, Le probleme hittite (1936); G. Furlani, La religione degli Hittiti (1936).

INTRODUCTION TO THE SECOND EDITION

In the preparation of the second edition each of the translators who contributed to the first edition has had opportunity not only to make corrections of mistakes and misprints, but to add to footnotes and introductions the most urgent bibliographical notations of the advancing research on the texts. Two entirely new sections have been included: a selection of Canaanite and Aramaic Inscriptions, prepared by Franz Rosenthal, of the University of Pennsylvania; and South-Arabic Inscriptions, translated by A. lamme, of the Society of the White Fathers of Africa. An Addenda has also been added, composed of additional texts of Akkadian Myths and Epics, translated by E. A. Speiser. An index to the names in the additional materials follows the general index.

The translator of the Egyptian texts has modified some of the dates used in the first edition for the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties, in order to provide the needed synchronism between Akh-en-Aton and Ashur-uballit I of Assyria, who began to reign about 1356 B.C. See especially M. B. Rowton's article in JEA, xxxiv (1948), 57-74. Readers should make the following tentative adjustments in dates given below for individual reigns.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>King</th>
<th>1439-1406</th>
<th>Ramses I</th>
<th>1303-1302</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Amen-hotep II</td>
<td>1406-1398</td>
<td>Setil</td>
<td>1302-1290</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thut-mose IV</td>
<td>1398-1361</td>
<td>Ramses II</td>
<td>1290-1224</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amen-hotep III</td>
<td>1369-1353</td>
<td>Mer-ne-Ptah</td>
<td>1224-1214</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Akh-en-Aton</td>
<td>1355-1352</td>
<td>Amen-meses</td>
<td>1214</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smenkh-ka-Re</td>
<td>1352-1344</td>
<td>Si-Ptah</td>
<td>1214-1207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tut-ankh-Amon</td>
<td>1344-1340</td>
<td>Seti II</td>
<td>1207-1202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eye</td>
<td>1340-1303</td>
<td>Syrian interregnum</td>
<td>1202-1197</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Introduction

TO THE THIRD EDITION

SINCE Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament was first published in 1950, many new texts have been discovered and some of the older ones have come to be better understood. In 1955 a second, revised edition appeared with changes and corrections in the text and the addition of two new sections, Canaanite and Aramaic Inscriptions and South-Arabian Inscriptions, which were obviously relevant for the study of the Old Testament. Now after eighteen years we have made a more extensive revision in an attempt to keep pace with new discoveries and research.

Each surviving contributor to the former editions has been asked to make necessary corrections to his earlier translations, to bring the references in his annotations up to date wherever desirable, and to contribute translations of any relevant texts that have been discovered or published since the earlier selections were made. In addition to the translations from original participants the work of five new contributors appears in this volume. A. K. Grayson kindly consented to bring up to date Akkadian Myths and Epics, which had been contributed by the late E. A. Speiser. J. J. Finkelstein assumed responsibility for additional Akkadian Legal Texts, a section for which the late T. J. Meek was previously responsible, as well as for the translation of the Sumerian laws of Ur-Nammu. With the recent emergence of interest in the concept of covenant in Old Testament studies, it has seemed appropriate to include an entirely new genre of texts, Akkadian Treaties from Syria and Assyria, translated by Erica Reiner. The understanding of Akkadian Didactic and Wisdom literature has been greatly improved since the late Robert H. Pfeiffer made his translations and new material has become available. Robert D. Biggs has made entirely new translations of the texts within this section. William L. Moran, SJ. has provided translations of a number of new Akkadian letters that belong to the extensive corpus of tablets from Mari. A perusal of the Table of Contents will make it clear that not only these new contributors but a number of the former translators have labored to enlarge considerably the volume of material provided in the earlier editions.

Since the additions fall neatly into the general categories and literary types of the first edition and generally supplement rather than antiquate the former translations it was apparent that they could be published in a separate volume. By it an owner of the first or the second edition can bring his collection of ancient Near Eastern texts up to date without discarding an expensive and possibly annotated volume. The third edition of ANET incorporates these additions of the Supplement and includes those line corrections which translators felt were essential. Whenever these corrections and additions could not be fitted into the line and page of the former edition they have been included in a section on Addenda with reference to the quarter of the page to which the addition applies. It is hoped that the user of the Supplement can see readily the place to which the addition or change belongs.

The additional texts of the second edition have been included in the Supplement, so that it will serve to bring up to date the first edition as well as the second. An entirely new index has been constructed for the names appearing in the book.
I. Myths, Epics, and Legends
Creation and Myths of Origins

THE CREATION BY ATUM

The following text served in the dedication ritual of a royal pyramid by recalling the first creation, when the god Atum of Heliopolis was on a primeval hillock arising out of the waters of chaos and there brought the first gods into being. In like manner, the god is now asked to bless the rising pyramid, an analogue of the hillock.

The text was carved inside the pyramids of Mer-ne-Re and Pepi II (Nefer-ka-Re) of the Sixth Dynasty (24th century B.C.), from which the following translation is made. Parts of the text were popular in later times, to promote the immortality of individuals.1

The hieroglyphic text appears in K. Sethe, Die altägyptischen Pyramidentexten, 11 (Leipzig, 1910), §1652-56. Extracts from the Egyptian Myths, Tales, and Mortuary Texts

OF THE CREATION BY ATUM

An ancient Egyptian's title to eternal happiness was often asserted by associating him with various superhuman forces, including the greatest gods of the land. Thus he secured their invincible immortality. The following extract from the popular 17th chapter of the Book of the Dead sets the deceased Egyptian in juxtaposition with the creator-god Atum, implicitly securing renewed creation of life.

This text was used all over Egypt for many centuries. The following translation is taken from the Eighteenth to Twenty-First Dynasties version of the Book of the Dead (1500-1000 B.C.). The text goes back at least as far as the Middle Kingdom (2000 B.C.), when it was inscribed in the coffins of nobles. By the Eighteenth Dynasty, the text had been amplified with explanatory and confirmatory glosses.

The current translation of the opening lines of the 17th chapter is made from H. Grapow, Religiöse Urkunden (Urkunden zur Religion des alten Aegypten (Jena, 1925), 237 ff.1

Title

The beginning of exaltations and beatifications; going up and down in the necropolis; being an effective spirit in the beautiful west; being in the retinue of Osiris; being satisfied with the food of Wen-nofer. The spell for coming forth by day, assuming any forms that he may wish to assume, playing at the draughtboard, sitting in the arbor, and coming forth as a living soul, by X, after he moors. It is of benefit to him who may do it on earth, when the speech of the Lord of All takes place:

Speech of the Creator, with Glosses

"I am Atum when I was alone in Nun; I am Re in his (first) appearances, when he began to rule that which he had made."2

2 The god of Heliopolis was compounded of two phases of the sun, Atum and Kheperer (later Atum and Re). The sanctuary at Heliopolis had a stone of sacred recognition. Associated with this stone was a bird, which was much later to be taken as the phoenix. This part of the texts is full of plays on words, such as weben "arise," and ben-hud, etc.

3 The creation of Shu, god of air, and of Tefnut, goddess of moisture, was as explosive as a sneeze, cf. p. 6 below.

4 The k° was the after ego, or the guardian spirit, or—perhaps better—the vital force of a personality. Pictorially it was depicted as the sheltering arms. The creator-god Atum put his own vital force into his first creatures.

5 The first nine gods, the Great Ennead, are here given, in their four generations: (1) Atum, the creator; (2) Shu, god of air, and Tefnut, goddess of moisture; (3) Geb, god of earth, and Nut, goddess of the sky; (4) the god Osiris and the goddess Isis; the god Seth and the goddess Nephthys. cf. p. 6 below.
THEOLOGY OF MEMPHIS

When the First Dynasty established its capital at Memphis, it was necessary to justify the sudden emergence of this town to central importance. The Memphite god Ptah was therefore proclaimed to have been the First Principle, taking precedence over other recognized creator-gods. Mythological arguments were presented that the city of Memphis was the place where the Two Lands are united and that the Temple of Ptah was the "balance in which Upper and Lower Egypt have been weighed."

The extracts presented here are particularly interesting, because creation is treated in an intellectual sense, whereas other creation stories (like pp. 3-4 above) are given in purely physical terms. Here the god Ptah conceives the elements of the universe with his mind ("heart") and brings them into being by his commanding speech ("tongue"). Thus, at the beginning of Egyptian history, there was an approach to the Logos Doctrine.

The extant form of this document dates only to 700 B.C., but linguistic, philological, and geological evidence is conclusive in support of its derivation from an original text more than two thousand years older.

The so-called "Shabaka Stone" is No. 498 in the British Museum. It was published by S. Sharpe, Egyptian Inscriptions from the British Museum and Other Sources (London, 1837), 1, Pis. 36-38. The first understanding of its contents was that of J. H. Breasted, in ZAes, xxxix (1901), 39-54, followed by A. Erman, Ein Denymal memphitischer Theologie (SPAW, 1911, 916-50). K. Sethe devoted a masterly study to its contents, Dramatische Texte zu altägyptischen Mysterienspielen (Untersuch., x, Leipzig, 1928), followed by H. Junker, Die Götterlehre von Memphis (APAW, 1939, Nr. 22, Berlin, 1940). The present part of the text has been studied by J. H. Breasted, The Dawn of Conscience (New York, 1933), 29-42, and in H. Frankfort et al., The Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man (Chicago, 1946), 55-60.

(1) Live the Horus: Who Prospers the Two Lands; the Two Goddesses: Who Prospers the Two Lands; the Horus of Gold: Who Prospers the Two Lands; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nefer-ka-Re; the Son of Re: Sha-[ba-ka], beloved of Ptah-South-of-His-Wall, living like Re forever. His majesty copy[ed] this text anew in the House of his father Ptah-South-of-His-Wall. Now his majesty had found (it) as (something) which the ancestors had made but which was worm-eaten. It was unknown from beginning to end. Then [his majesty] copied [it] anew, (so that) it is better than its state formerly, in order that his name might endure and his memorial be made to last in the House of his father Ptah-South-of-His-Wall in the course of eternity, through that which the Son of Re: [Sha-ba-ka] did for his father Ptah-tenen, so that he might be given life forever

(7) The Ennead gathered themselves to him, and he judged Horus and Seth. He prevented them from quarreling (further), and he made Seth the King of Upper Egypt in the land of Upper Egypt, at the place where he was (born), Su. Then Geb made Horus the King of Lower Egypt in the land of Lower Egypt, at the place where his father was drowned, Pezshet-TawL Thus Horus stood in (one) place, and Seth stood in (another) place, and they were reconciled about the Two Lands....

4(i) Words spoken (by) Geb (to) Seth: "Go to the place in which thou wilt be born." Seth—Upper Egypt.

Words spoken (by) Geb (to) Horus: "Go to the place in which thy father was drowned." Horus—Lower Egypt.

Words spoken (by) Geb (to) Horus and Seth: "I have judged you." Lower and Upper Egypt.

(But then it became) ill in the heart of Geb that the portion of Horus was (only) equal to the portion of Seth. So Geb gave his (entire) inheritance to Horus, that is, the son of his son, his first-born. (Thus) Horus stood over the (entire) land. Thus this land was united, proclaimed with the great name: "Ta-tenen, South-of-His-Wall, the Lord of Eternity." The Two Great Sorceresses grew upon his head. So it was that Horus appeared as King of Upper and Lower Egypt, who united the Two Lands in Wall Nome, in the place in which the Two Lands are united.

(15c) It happened that reed and papyrus were set at the great double door of the House of Ptah. That means Horus and Seth, who were reconciled and united, so that they associated and their quarrelling ceased in the place which they reached, being joined in the House of Ptah, "the Balance of the Two Lands," in which Upper and Lower Egypt have been weighed....

(48) The gods who came into being as Ptah:—

Ptah who is upon the Great Throne . . .; Ptah-Nun, the father who [begot] Atum; Ptah-Naunet, the mother who bore Atum; Ptah the Great, that is, the heart and tongue of the Ennead; [Ptah]... who gave birth to the gods;...

(53) There came into being as the heart and there came into being as the tongue (something) in the form of Atum. The mighty Great One is Ptah, who transmitted [life to all gods], as well as (to) their ^a's, through this heart, by which Horus became Ptah, and through this tongue, by which Thoth became Ptah.

(Thus) it happened that the heart and tongue gained control over [every] (other) member of the body, by teaching that he is in every body and in every mouth of all gods, all men, [all] cattle, all creeping things, and (everything) that lives, by thinking and commanding everything that he wishes.

(55) His Ennead is before him in (the form of) teeth and lips. That is (the equivalent of) the semen and hands of Atum. Whereas the Ennead of Atum came into being by his semen and his fingers, the Ennead (of Ptah), however, is the teeth and lips in this mouth, which pronounced the name of everything, from which Shu and Tefnut came forth, and which was the fashioner of the Ennead.

The sight of the eyes, the hearing of the ears, and the smelling the air by the nose, they report to the heart. It is this which causes every completed (concept) to come forth, and it is the tongue which announces what the heart thinks.

Thus all the gods were formed and his Ennead was completed. Indeed, all the divine order really came into being through what the heart thought and the tongue commanded. Thus the ^a-spirits were made and the hemsut-Bspiits were appointed, they who make all provisions and all nourishment, by this speech. (Thus justice was given to) him who does what is liked, (and injustice to) him who does what is disliked. Thus life was given to him who has peace and death was given to him who has sin. Thus were made all work and all crafts, the action of the arms, the movement of the legs, and the activity of every member, in conformance with (this) command which the heart thought, which came forth through the tongue, and which gives value to everything.

(Thus) it happened that it was said of Ptah: "He who made all and brought the gods into being." He is indeed Ta-tenen, who brought forth the gods, for everything came forth from him, nourishment and provisions, the offerings of the gods, and every good thing. Thus it was discovered and understood that his strength is greater than (that of the other) gods. And so Ptah was satisfied, after he had made everything, as well as all the divine order. He had formed the gods, he had made cities, he had founded nomes, he had put the gods in their shrines, (60) he had established their offerings, he had founded their shrines, he had made their bodies like that (with which) their hearts were satisfied. So the gods entered into their bodies of every (kind of) wood, of every (kind of) stone, of every (kind of) clay, or anything which might grow upon him, in which they had taken form. So all the gods, as well as their ^a's gathered themselves to him, content and associated with the Lord of the Two Lands.

The Great Seat, which rejoices the heart of the gods, which is in the House of Ptah, the mistress of all life, is the Granary of the God, through which the sustenance of the Two Lands is prepared, because of the fact that Osiris drowned in his water, while Isis and Nephthys watched. They saw him and they were distressed at him. Horus commanded Isis and Nephthys repeatedly that they lay hold on Osiris and prevent his drowning. (63) They turned (their) heads in time. So they brought him to land. He entered the mysterious portals in the glory of the lords of eternity, in the steps of him who heart conceives and releases thought, which the tongue, as a herald, puts into effective utterance.

1 The crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt.
2 The province (nome) of Memphis was named "White Wall."
3 The intertwining tutelary plants of Upper and Lower Egypt, the reed(?!) and the papyrus, symbolize the reconciliation of the two parts of Egypt and of their gods.
4 Or, with Junker: "who have (their) form in Ptah."
5 Three other forms of Ptah appear in badly broken context These forms of Ptah apply to the statement that follows. Ptah was both Nun, the abysmal waters, and his consort Naunet, and in these capacities he brought forth Atum, the creator-god of the Heliopolitan theology.
6 Ptah thought of and created by speech the creator-god Atum ("Totality"), thus transmitting the divine power of Ptah to all other gods. The gods Horus and Thoth, a commonly associated pair, are equated with the organs of thought and speech.
7 Or, as heart and tongue.
8 A distinction is made between the act of creation by Atum through anum (cf. p. 6 below) and the creation by Ptah through commanding speech with teeth and lips. Pronouncing a name was creative. Shu and Tefnut were the first deities to be spoken.
9 The senses report to the heart. With this reported material, the

Thus all the gods were formed and his Ennead was completed. Indeed, all the divine order really came into being through what the heart thought and the tongue commanded. Thus the ^a-spirits were made and the hemsut-Bspiits were appointed, they who make all provisions and all nourishment, by this speech. (Thus justice was given to) him who does what is liked, (and injustice to) him who does what is disliked. Thus life was given to him who has peace and death was given to him who has sin. Thus were made all work and all crafts, the action of the arms, the movement of the legs, and the activity of every member, in conformance with (this) command which the heart thought, which came forth through the tongue, and which gives value to everything.

(Thus) it happened that it was said of Ptah: "He who made all and brought the gods into being." He is indeed Ta-tenen, who brought forth the gods, for everything came forth from him, nourishment and provisions, the offerings of the gods, and every good thing. Thus it was discovered and understood that his strength is greater than (that of the other) gods. And so Ptah was satisfied, after he had made everything, as well as all the divine order. He had formed the gods, he had made cities, he had founded nomes, he had put the gods in their shrines, (60) he had established their offerings, he had founded their shrines, he had made their bodies like that (with which) their hearts were satisfied. So the gods entered into their bodies of every (kind of) wood, of every (kind of) stone, of every (kind of) clay, or anything which might grow upon him, in which they had taken form. So all the gods, as well as their ^a's gathered themselves to him, content and associated with the Lord of the Two Lands.

The Great Seat, which rejoices the heart of the gods, which is in the House of Ptah, the mistress of all life, is the Granary of the God, through which the sustenance of the Two Lands is prepared, because of the fact that Osiris drowned in his water, while Isis and Nephthys watched. They saw him and they were distressed at him. Horus commanded Isis and Nephthys repeatedly that they lay hold on Osiris and prevent his drowning. (63) They turned (their) heads in time. So they brought him to land. He entered the mysterious portals in the glory of the lords of eternity, in the steps of him who... shines forth on the horizon, on the ways of Re in the Great Seat. He joined with the court and associated with the gods of Ta-tenen Ptah, the lord of years.

Thus Osiris came to be in the land in the "House of the Sovereign" on the north side of this land, which he had reached. His son Horus appeared as King of Upper Egypt and appeared as King of Lower Egypt, in the embrace of his father Osiris, together with the gods who were in front of him and who were behind him.

THE REPULSING OF THE DRAGON AND THE CREATION

This text employed myth for ritual and magical recitation. In Egyptian belief the ship of the sun-god Re made a journey through the skies above by day and the skies below by night. Every night this ship faced the peril of destruction from a demon lurking in the underworld, Apophis. An important part of the ritual of Egyptian temples was the repulsing of this dragon, and thus the repulsing of the perils which might face nation or people. The following ritual is an extract from a papyrus containing a group of texts, for which the general heading is: "THE BEGINNING OF THE BOOK OF OVERTHROWING APOPHIS, THE ENEMY OF RE AND THE ENEMY OF King Wen-nofer—life, prosperity, health!—the justified, performed in the course of every day in the Temple of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, Presiding over Karnak." The particular interest of the section given below is that it adds to these spells against Apophis a statement about creation.

The text is preserved in the Papyrus Bremner-Rhind (British Museum 10188), which may have come from Thebes. The present manuscript is dated about 310 BC, but the text makes a deliberate attempt to preserve a language two thousand years older than that date. There is no doubt that the basic material derives from a relatively early period.

Photographic facsimiles of the papyrus were published by Budge in Egyptian Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum, First Series (London, 1910), Pts. i-xix. Faulkner gave a transcription from hieratic into hieroglyphic in The Papyrus Bremner-Rhind (Bibliotheque Aegyptiaca, 111, Brussels, 1933). The latest study and translation of the entire papyrus was given by Faulkner in JEA, xxii (1936), 121 ff.; xxiii (1937), 10 ff., 166 ff.; xxiv (1938), 41 ff.; with the section below (xxvi 21—xxviii 20) treated in xxm, 172 ff.

For another reference to the repulsing of a monster at creation, see p. 417, §49. For another account of the Repulsing of the Dragon, see pp. 11-12.

(xxvi 21) ... THE BOOK OF KNOWING THE CREATIONS of Re and OF OVERTHROWING APOPHIS. THE WORDS TO BE SPOKEN.

The All-Lord said, after he had come into being:

I am he who came into being as Khepri. When I had come into being, being (itself) came into being, and all beings came into being after I came into being. Many were the beings which came forth from my mouth, before heaven came into being, before earth came into being, before the ground and creeping things had been created in this place. I put together (some) of them in Nun as weary ones," before I could find a place in which I might stand. It (seemed) advantageous to me in my heart; I planned with my face; and I made (in concept) every form when I was alone, before I had spat out what was Shu, before I had sputtered out what was Tefnut, and before (any) other had come into being who could act with me.

T planned in his own heart, and there came into being a multitude of forms of beings, the forms of children and the forms of their children. I was the one who copulated with my fist, I masturbated (xxvii 1) with my hand. Then I sowed with my own mouth: I spat out what was Shu, and I sputtered out what was Tefnut. It was my father Nun who brought them up, and my Eye followed after them since the ages when they were distant from me.

After I had come into being as the sole god, there were three gods beside me. I came into being in this land, whereas Shu and Tefnut rejoiced in Nun, in which they were. They brought to me my Eye with them. After I had joined together my members, I swept them over them. That is how men came into being from the tears which came forth from my Eye. It was angry with me, after it returned and found that I had made another in its place, having replaced it with the Glorious Eye, which I had made. Then I advanced its place on my head, and after it had ruled this entire land, its rage fell away to its roots, for I had replaced what had been taken away from it. I came forth from the roots, and I created all creeping things and whatever lives among them. Then Shu and Tefnut brought forth (5) Geb and Nut. Then Geb and Nut brought forth Osiris, Horus Khenti-en-irti, Seth, Isis, and Nephthys from the body, one of them after another; and they brought forth their multitudes in this land.

When (these gods) rich in magic spoke, it was the 5 There is a play on the name Nun, the primordial waters in which creation took place, and nenu "the weary," usually a designation of the dead, but here those in inchoate pause.

6 Other texts locate the creation on a primeval hillock arising out of the waters of Nun. cf. pp. 3, 4, and 8.

7 The first two children of the creator-god were Shu, the air-god, and Tefnut, the goddess of moisture. The statement of their ejection into being takes place on the Eye of Re. See H. Junker, Die Onuris-legenden (Vienna, 1917).

8 Nun, Shu, and Tefnut, who went out after the wandering Eye of Re. See H. Junker, Die Onuris-legenden (Vienna, 1917).

9 Reference to another myth, in which, however, it was Shu and Tefnut who went out after the wandering Eye of Re. See H. Junker, Die Onuris-legenden (Vienna, 1917).

10 Apparenty Re wept when he found that his Eye was missing from his body. He made a substitute eye, which displeased his missing Eye when it returned to him. The labored point of the context is a play on the words remet "tears," and romet "mankind," in explanation of human creation, cf. pp. 8a, n.6; 11, n.6: 366, n.17.

11 Re appeased his wrathful Eye by making it the uraeus on his brow, the symbol of rule.

12 An obscure or corrupt statement on the creation of vegetation. In the next sentence, the "among them" may refer to plant life.

13 Shu and Tefnut, the children of Atum-Re, were miraculously brought into being. But their children, Geb (earth) and Nut (sky), were normally born "from the body," as were also the divine children of Geb and Nut. Thus we have the Ennead, the nine ruling gods, with Horus as an added member, cf. p. 3 above. The context now continues by pointing out how these created beings were to use their magic against the demon enemy of Re.
(very) spirit\(^5\) of magic, for they were ordered to annihilate my enemies by the effective charms of their speech, and I sent out these who came into being from my body to overthrow that evil enemy.

He is one fallen to the flame, Apophis with a knife on his head. He cannot see, and his name is no (more) in this land. I have commanded that a curse be cast upon him; I have consumed his bones; I have annihilated his soul in the course of every day; I have cut his vertebrae at his neck, severed with a knife which hacked up his flesh and pierced into his hide.\(^6\) . . . (n) . . . I have taken away his heart from its place, his seat, and his tomb. I have made him nonexistent: his name is not; his children are not; he is not and his family is not; he is not and his false-door is not;\(^7\) he is not and his heirs are not. His egg shall not last, nor shall his skin be not. He is fallen and overthrown. . . .

(xxviii 4) . . . See thou, O Re! Hear thou, O Re! Behold, I have driven away thy enemy; I have wiped him out with my feet; I have spat upon him. Re is triumphant over thee—variant reading: over his every fallen enemy.\(^8\) . . . Drive thou away, consume thou, burn up every enemy of pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—whether dead or alive, and the names of their fathers, the names of their mothers, and the names of (their) children, inside the box, they are to be made in wax and put on the fire following the name of Apophis and burned up at the time when Re shows himself. Thus thou shalt do the first time at the height of the sun and (again) when Re sets in the west, when the sunlight is fleeing from the mountain. These things are in truth more advantageous to thee than any (other) procedure. It will go well with him who does them on earth or in the necropolis.\(^9\)

ALL MEN CREATED EQUAL IN OPPORTUNITY

The Middle Kingdom was a period in which social justice and the rights of the common man were emphasized. The text which follows purports to give the words of the creator-god in making all men equal in access to the basic necessities of life.

The text is inscribed on four wooden coffins from el-Bersheh in Middle Egypt and dates to the Middle Kingdom (2000 B.C.). Thus far, it is known only from that period.

The hieroglyphic text is as yet unpublished, except for the reference and translation given by J. H. Breasted, The Dawn of Conscience (New York, 1933), 221 f. It will be published in the volumes by A. de Buck, The Egyptian Coffin Texts (OIP). The present translation was made from photographs for Coffin B3C (Cairo Museum 28085) and B6C (Cairo 28094), part—BIC (Cairo 28083). The text also appears on BBb (Boston Museum 20.1822-27)? (Sec Addenda).

Other texts below deal with creation and origins. For example, Amon as creator is presented in the text of pp. 368-369, Aton as creator in pp. 370-371. Other myths of origins deal with the founding of the city of Tanis (pp. 252-253) or the setting up of an estate of a god (pp. 31-32).

The All-Lord says in the presence of those stilled from tumult on the journey of the court: "Pray, be prosperous in peace! I repeat for you four good deeds which my own heart did for me in the midst of the serpent-coil, in order to still evil.\(^{10}\) did four good deeds within the portal of the horizon.\(^{11}\)

"I made the four winds that every man might breathe thereof life his fellow in his time. That is (one) deed thereof.

\(^{15}\) The Egyptian word is "a, the accompanying spirit or vital force of a personality.

\(^{16}\) The detailed narration of the destruction of Apophis continues ad nauseam, including the activities of various gods in defense of Re. Extracts only are given here.

\(^{17}\) Destruction involves killing and also the prohibition of maintenance offerings at the false-door of a tomb.

\(^{18}\) Literally: 'The voice of Re is made true against thee—another saying against his every fallen enemy.' The reciter is permitted a variant.

\(^{19}\) These exorcisms against the enemy of the supreme god were deemed to be effective also against the enemies of the god-king.

\(^{20}\) There was an under-heaven to correspond to the heaven above. In the preceding clauses, the two barques of the sun have been reversed: the sun should go to rest in the evening-barque, for his journey through the under-heaven.

\(^{21}\) These instructions for the manual activity accompanying the recitation show that the interest of the exorcism is the application of magic against the dragon-demon to the damnation of the enemies of the pharaoh.
"I made the great inundation that the poor man might have rights therein like the great man. That is (one) deed thereof.

I made every man like his fellow. I did not command that they do evil, (but) it was their hearts which violated what I had said. That is (one) deed thereof.

I made their hearts to cease from forgetting the West, in order that divine offerings might be given to the gods of the nomen. That is (one) deed thereof.

I brought into being the four gods from my sweat, while men are the tears of my eye."

THEBES AS THE PLACE OF CREATION

Every important cult-center of Egypt asserted its primacy by the dogma that it was the site of creation. The following is an extract from a long hymn extolling Thebes and its god Amon-Re. It is dated shortly after the Amarna Revolution and is a renewed confirmation of Theban domination. The manuscript was studied by A. H. Gardiner in Leiden Papyrus I 350 was published by C. Leemans, Monumens igitur du music d'antiquitis des Pays-Bas h Leide (Leiden, 1841-82), II, Pis. CUX-CXIII. The text was studied by A. H. Gardiner in ZAE, xl (1905), 12-42, and by A. Erman, Der Leidener Amonshymnus (SPAW, 1923, 62-81). It is translated in Erman, LAE, 293-302.

TENTH STANZA.¹

Thebes is normal beyond every (other) city. The water and land were in her from the first times. (Then) (ii 11) sand came to delimit the fields and to create her ground on the hillock; (thus) earth came into being.²

Then men came into being in her, to found every city with her real name, for their name is called "city" (only) under the oversight of Thebes, the Eye of Re.³

Her majesty came as the Sound Eye and the Beneficial Eye,⁴ to bind the land thereby together with (her)

\(\text{\text{by coming to rest and alighting in Ishru in her form as Sekhmet, the Mistress of the Two Lands.}} \)

¹ The juxtaposition of this statement of god's equilibrarian creation and this statement of man's disobedience of god's command means that man— and not god—is responsible for social inequality.

² The pious service of local gods would provide credit for continued life in the West, the realm of the dead. This idea is related to the equilibrarian statements which precede it. By the Middle Kingdom, the full and powerful afterlife, which had previously been the prerogative of kings alone, had been extended to all worthy men and might be won locally, without attachment to the royal court. The nomen were the Egyptian provinces.

³ There arc two puns: fudu "four" and felut "sweat"; and ronet "men" and rømet "ears." cf. p. 6, n. n. above. In somewhat uncertain terms there is a relation of the creation of gods to the creation of humans, both exodations of the creator-god. The attempt is clumsy, because one pun calls for four gods, instead of the usual nine. These may be the four gods who assist the dead man on his arrival in the afterworld (e.g. K. Sethe, Die dgyptischen Pyramidentexte, n. 14565-57).

⁴ There is a series of numbered "houses," i.e.

"chapters" or "stanzas." The present stanza is ii 1-15 of the papyrus. Each stanza begins and ends with a pun based on the number. Here the word ren "ten" is picked up by the word meter, which probably means "normal" or "standard."

² Thus the primeval hillock, upon which creation took place, is located in Thebes, cf. pp. 3-4 above.

³ Pun: wser "rich" and wser "Thesheis."

⁴ Opposite-her-Lord" (Le. Amon) was an epithet of Thebes. "Appointed-of-Places" was the name of the Temple of Karnak.

⁵ Re.⁶ Re's commands are for all the attendant gods.

⁷ An otherwise unknown designation for a part of the Underworld. It may mean a subterranean cavern.

⁸ Re cannot do full justice to the denizens of the world and to the denizens of the Underworld. Since he feels a responsibility to illumine the latter, he assigns the moon, Thoth, to be his deputy there.

⁹ A corrupt passage. In the first part there may be reference to mankind's rebellion, as in the passage on the destruction of mankind, pp. 10-11. The second part may refer to the Apophis demon, the enemy of the sun-god; cf. pp. 6-7, 11-12.

¹⁰ A play on words: hab "tread upon" and hub "birds" the bird sacred to Thoth.

¹¹ In command. The gods of primeval chaos were associated with the underworld.

¹² Another play on words: hwn "speech" and tkheni, another term for the ibis.

¹³ Another play on words: inch "encompass" and iah "moon."

THE ASSIGNMENT OF FUNCTIONS TO THOTH

The Egyptians, like the Hebrews, were fond of punning explanations of names and phenomena. The following text provides the explanation of a number of cosmological or mythological phenomena. The sun-god Re here assigns responsibility for the moon to the god Thoth, who thus becomes die "place-taker" for the sun, an adjutant of the gods.

The text is found on the Tut-ankh-Amon shrine, now in the Cairo Museum, and in the Theban tombs of Seti I, Ramses II, and Ramses III. It thus ranges from the middle of the 14th century to the middle of the 12th century B.C. However, its original was probably much earlier. The parallel texts are presented by Ch. Maystre in BITAO, XI (1941), 93-98. The line numbers, 62-74, follow the Seti I version. There is a translation in G. Roeder, Ufunden zur Religion des alten Aegyptens (Jena, 1923), 147-48." (See Addenda).

Then the majesty of this god¹ said: "Pray, summon to me Thoth!" Then he was brought immediately. Then the majesty of this god said to Thoth: "Behold ye,² I am here in the sky in my (proper) place. Inasmuch as I (65) shall act so that the light may shine in the Underworld and the Island of Baba,³ thou shalt shrie there and keep in order those who are in them,⁴ those who may perform deeds of rebellion... against me, (70) the followers of this dissatisfied being.⁵ Thou shalt be in my place, a place-taker. Thus thou shalt be called: "Thoth, the place-taker of Re." Moreover, (1) shall have thee tread upon those greater than thou." That is how the ibis of Thoth came into being.⁶ "Moreover, I shall have thee stretch out thy hand" in the face of the primeval gods, who are greater than thou. My speech is good, if thou actest (so)." That is how the ibis of Thoth came into being.⁷ "Moreover, I shall have thee encompass the two heavens with thy beauty and with thy rays." That is how the moon of Thoth came into being."
"Moreover, I shall have thee go all the way around the Hau-nebut." That is how the baboon of Thoth came into being. That is how he became the vizier. Moreover, thou shalt be my place-taker, and the faces of all who see thee shall be opened through thee, so that the eye of every man praises god for thee." 11

The Primeval Establishment of Order

A responsibility of the creator-god Atum was to bring the world into order and to assign places and functions. The conquest of hostile forces and the delimitation of the next world are themes of the following text. Insofar as it deals with the quest of hostile forces and the delimitation of the next world, it is further decreed that a man shall see his fellow, (so that) my face shall see thy face." 10

Title

(1) Spell for Not Dying a Second Time. Words to Be Spoken by Ani, the triumphant.

Atum's Question

"O Thoth, what is it that has happened? It is among the children of Nut! They have made an uproar; they have seized upon quarreling; they have done evil deeds; they have created rebellion; they have made slaughters; (5) they have created imprisonment. Moreover, in everything which we might do, they have made the great into the small. Give thou greatly, Thoth!" Thus spoke Atum.

Thoth's Reply

"Thou shalt not see (such) evil deeds, thou shalt not suffer, (for) their years are cut short and their months are curbed, inasmuch as the destruction of hidden things was made for them through all that thou hast done." 3

Words of the Deceased

"I am thy palette, O Thoth, and I have offered up to thee thy inkwell. I am not among those whose hidden things should be damaged. Damage should not be done to me." 4

Words spoken by the Osiris Ani (10): "O Atum, what is it? I am departing to the desert, the silent land!" 9

Atum's Answer

"It has no water, it has no air—deep, deep, dark, dark, boundless, boundless—in which thou livest in the peace of heart of the silent land. Sexual pleasures are not enjoyed in it, (but) a blessed state is given to (thee) in recompense for water, air, and sexual pleasure, and peace of heart in recompense for bread and beer." Thus spoke Atum.

Protest of the Deceased

"In the sight of thy face? Indeed, I cannot bear the lack of thee! Every (other) god has assumed his place in the forefront of (the sun barque) Millions-of-Years!"

Atum's Reply

"Thy place belongs to thy son Horus"—thus spoke Atum—"Indeed, it shall be that he sends forth the great, (15) while he also shall rule thy place, and he shall inherit the throne which is in the Island of Flame. It is further decreed that a man shall see his fellow, (so that) my face shall see thy face." 10

Question of the Deceased, as Osiris

"O Atum, what is (my) duration of life?"—thus he spoke.

Atum's Answer

"Thou art (destined) for millions of millions (of years), a lifetime of millions. I have caused that he send out the great ones. Further, I shall destroy all that I have made, and this land will return into Nun, into the floodwaters, as (in) its first state. I alone am a survivor, together with Osiris, when I have made my form in another state, serpents which men do not know and gods do not see.

"How good is what I have done for Osiris, distinct from all (other) gods! I have given (20) him the desert, the silent land, with his son Horus as heir upon his throne which is in the Island of Flame. Further, I have made his place in the barque of Millions-of-Years. Horus remains upon his throne, for the purpose of founding his monuments also. The soul of Seth has been sent apart from all (other) gods, because I have caused the restraint of his soul, which is in the (sun) barque, because he wishes to fear the divine body." 14

---

24 Another play, anun "turn back," possibly "go around," and anun the baboon sacred to Thoth. The Hau-nebut were peoples to the north of Egypt, thus in an outer range of circuit.
25 He play on words which led to this identification has dropped out. Thoth was the vizier of the gods.
26 In the absence of the sun, men can see because of the moon.
27 Men are grateful.
28 His concept was originally related to the kingship, the dead pharaoh becoming Osiris, while his son and successor became Horus.
29 That is, among the partisans of Seth, who was the "son of Nut."
30 This seems to be the answer of Thoth, assuring Atum that the punishment of evil resides in the system which Atum created.
31 By identifying himself with the scribal equipment of Thoth, the deceased dissociates himself from the rebellious beings.
32 The deceased asks the creator-god to describe the land of burial.
Words of Horus

"O my father Osiris, mayest thou do for me what thy father Re did for thee! I remain upon earth, so that I may establish my place."

Words of Osiris

"My heir is healthy, my tomb endures; they are my adherents (still) on earth. (25) My enemies have been given into ernes, for Selqet is binding them. Am thy son, my father Re. Thou dost these things for me for the sake of life, prosperity, and health, while Horus remains upon his throne. Mayest thou cause that this my time of passing to a state of reverence may come."

THE MYTHOLOGICAL ORIGIN OF CERTAIN UNCLEAN ANIMALS

The Egyptians viewed certain animals as devoted for a definite purpose and therefore taboo for other purposes, specifically as unclean for eating. The following text is a mythological explanation of a taboo against eating pork. Not all of the text is clear, but it does involve two well-known elements: the conflict of Horus and Seth for the rule, and a damage to one of Horus' eyes, which were the two heavenly luminaries.

The text first occurs in the coffins of the Middle Kingdom, from which it is here translated, and is continued into the Book of the Dead, being used for many centuries.

The hieroglyphic text is given by A. de Buck, The Egyptian Coffin Texts, (OIP, XLIX, Chicago, 1938), Spell 157, pp. 326 ff. It later became the 112th chapter of the Book of the Dead and is studied and translated by K. Sethe et al. in ZAeS (1923), LVIII, 1 ff. Other Middle Kingdom coffin, which treats Spells 157 and 158 consecutively without break, has an instruction at the end of Spell 158: "Not to be spoken while eating pork."

The Efficacy of This Text

BEING DESTINED FOR FOOD IN THE NECROPOLIS. BEING FAVORED AND LOVED UPON EARTH. BEING AMONG THE FOLLOWERS OF HORUS AND HIS RETINUE. A MYSTERY WHICH ONE LEARNED IN THE HOUSE. KNOWING THE SOULS OF Bum*

The Claim of Exceptional Knowledge

O Batu of the evening, ye swamp-dwellers, ye of Mendes, ye of the Mendes nome, ye of the Butine House of Praise, ye of the Shade of Re which kjiouw not praise, ye who brew stoppered beer—do ye know why Buto was given to Horus? Ye do not know it, (but) I know remain in the sun barque, where he had the important duty of fighting the Apophis demon, cf. pp. 6-7 above and pp. 11-12 below.

10 Horus, the son and successor of the deceased, asstes to the dispositions of the supreme god.
11 Just how Selqet, a scorpion goddess, functioned is uncertain.
12 May Horus, die successor on earth, aid in the beatification of Osiris, the deceased. In this speech, Osiris accepts the dispositions made by Atura-Re.

Deliverance of Mankind from Destruction

The themes of this myth are the sin of mankind, the destructive disappointment of their creator, and the deliverance of mankind from annihilation. However, the setting of the present text shows that its purpose was magical protection rather than moral teaching. On the walls of three royal tombs of the Empire, it accompanies certain charms to protect the body of the dead ruler. This implies that the former deliverance of mankind from destruction will, be valid also in this individual case.

The text appears on the walls of the tombs of Seti I, Ramses II, and Ramses III at Thebes. Its date is thus 14th-12th centuries B.C., although the language used and the corrupted state of the text show that it followed an older original. The texts were published together by Ch. Maystre in BIFAO, XI (1941), 53-73.

The line numbers below are those of the Seti I version. There is a translation in Erman, LAE, 47-49.

Other reference to man's rebelliousness and the god's punishment of men will be found in pp. 8-10, 417.

The destroyed and restored eye came to be identified with the moon.

5 Following the reasoning of Sethe, an old sign for "black" has degenerated into a mere stroke, following the word for "part" or "mark." It is not clear how Horus, covering his uninjured eye, could see the injury in his wounded eye.
6 Homonyma, ma-hedj "see-white" and ma-hedu "oryx." The oryx was a beast of Seth, and thus also unclean to Horus. The sense of the passage must be that Horus failed to see what Re saw.
7 The words "another time" perhaps mean that Re directed Horus' attention to the same black mark, but with a more specific statement that the mark of injury looked like a pig, Seth's beast.
8 Probably inflamed.
9 In view of what follows, this must mean that Horus lost consciousness in Re's presence.
10 More literally: "thus is how the pig became alomminated for Horus by the gods, like their followers," all rubricized. The omitted conclusion of the myth states that the pig had previously been a sacrificial animal for Horus and relates the myth about Horus to the Souls of Buto, with whom the deceased is so well acquainted.
It happened that... Re, the god who came into being by himself, when he was king of men and gods all together. Then mankind plotted something in the (very) presence of Re. Now then, his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—was old. His bones were of silver, his flesh of gold, and his hair of genuine lapis lazuli.

Then his majesty perceived the things which were being plotted against him by mankind. Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health! said to those who were in his retinue: "Pray, summon to me my Eye, Nun also. He is to bring his court with him. Thou art with me when I was in Nun, and thou shalt bring them secretly, let not mankind see; let not their hearts escape. Thou shalt come with them to the Great House, that they may tell their plans, since the times when I came from Nun to the place in which I came into being." Then Re said to Nun: "O eldest god, in whom I came into being, O ancestor gods, behold mankind, which came into being from my Eye—they have plotted things against me. Tell me what ye would do about it. Behold, they have plotted something in the (very) place flooded. Then her face (looked) beautiful beside him, putting their heads to the ground. Then she drank, and it was good in her heart. Then she came (back) drunken, without having perceived mankind.

Then this goddess came and slew mankind in the desert. Then the majesty of this god said: "Welcome, Hat-Hor, who hast done for me the deed for which I came." Then this goddess said: "As thou livest for me, I have prevailed over mankind, and it is pleasant in my heart!" Then the majesty of Re said: "I shall prevail over them as a king (15) by diminishing them!"

---

1. The eye of the sun-god was an independent part of himself, with a complicated mythological history.
2. The abysmal waters, in which creation took place.
3. Was Re unwilling that mankind repent its rebellious purposes?
4. Uncertain. The translation assumes that Re is asking advice on the changed conditions since creation.
6. Mankind originated as the tears of the creator-god. See pp. 6, 8, 366.
7. It seems to be argued that the Eye in its normal form is not adequate to the work of destruction, so that it should assume its form as Hat-Hor.
8. The introductory formula of an oath.
9. Uncertain. The translation assumes the sense that Re can rule mankind if they are fewer in number. It is also possible to translate: "I shall prevail over them. But do not diminish them (any further)." At any rate, it soon becomes clear that Re wishes the destruction to cease, whereas Hat-Hor is unwilling to halt her lustful annihilation.
10. The formula by which the origin of a name was explained. Sekhmet, "She Who Prevails," the goddess of violence, is here given as a form of Hat-Hor. Herakleopolis, "the Child of the King," seems to be in punning relation to the previous word, k3q3. "The mash of die night" is used in meaningless anticipation here, as it belongs to that part of the story which follows.
11. Didi was a red coloring material, but it is not certain whether it was mineral or vegetable. Red ochre has been found in the region of Elephantine, and hematite in the eastern desert.
12. An epithet of the High Priest of Re.
13. The meaning of this phrase is not clear.
14. The fields were covered with the blood-red beer, the "sleep-maker," to a height of about 9 inches.
The text is taken from Middle Kingdom coffins and survived into the Book of the Dead. Hieroglyphic text in A. de Buck, The Egyptian Coffin Texts, n O/P, xlix, Chicago, 1938), Spell 160, pp. 373 ii. Later the 107th chapter of the Book of the Dead, with contributions to the 107th, 11th, and 149th chapters, studied by K. Sethe et d. in ZAes, LX (1924), 73 II.

References to the repulsing of the dragon enemy of the sun-god are common in the Egyptian texts here translated: pp. 6-7, 8; 9-10; M. n-7; 253; 363; 366; 367.

Title

NOT DYING BECAUSE OF A SNAKE. GOING IN AND OUT OF THE WESTERN DOORS OF HEAVEN. FLOURISHING UPON EARTH, ON THE PART OF A LIVING OR DEAD SOUL. KNOWING THE WESTERN SOULS.

The Dragon of the West

I know that mountain of Bakhu upon which heaven rests. It is of /-/-/stone, 300 rods in its length and 120 rods in its width. Sobek, Lord of Bakhu, is on the east of this mountain. His temple is of carnelian.

A serpent is on the brow of that mountain, thirty cubits in its length, three cubits of the front thereof being of flint/ I know the name of that serpent: "He Who is on the Mountain That He may Overthrow" is his name.

Now at the time of evening it shall turn its eye against Re. Then there shall come a halt among the crew and great stupefaction in the midst of the journey. Then Seth shall bend himself in its direction. The speech which he says as magic:

"I stand beside thee, so that the journey may progress (again). O thou whom I have seen from afar, close thou thine eye! I have been blindfolded; I am the male. Cover thy head, so that thou may be well and I may be well. I am the Rich-in-Magic; (it) has been given to me (to use) against thee. What is that? It is being an effective personality. O thou who goest upon his belly, thy strength belongs to thy mountain; (whereas), behold me—when I go off by myself, thy strength (will be) with me, for I am he who lifts up strength. I have come that I might despoil the earth-gods. O Re, may he who is in his evening be gracious to me, when we have made the circuit of heaven. (But) thou art in thy fetters—that is what was commanded about thee previously."

Then Re goes to rest in life.

The Western Souls

The God

AND HIS UNKNOWN NAME OF POWER

To the ancient, the name was a dement of personality and of power. It might be so charged with divine potency that it could not be pronounced. Or the god might retain a name hidden for himself alone, maintaining this dement of power over all other gods and men. The following myth tells how the supreme god Re had many names, one of which was hidden and was thus a source of supremacy. The goddess Isis plotted to learn this name and thus to secure power for herself. For this purpose, she employed the venom of a snake against Re. The text thus came to be employed as a conjunction against the bite of a scorpion, and this use probably accounts for the survival of the myth.

The two manuscripts have been dated to the Nineteenth Dynasty (1350-1200 B.C.). The Turin text is ascribed to Lower Egypt, the Beatty text to Thebes.

The spell of the divine god, who came into being by himself, who made heaven, earth, water, the breath of life, fire, gods, men, small and large cattle, creeping things, birds, and fishes, the king of men and gods at one time, (for whom) the limits (go) beyond years, abounding in names, unknown to that (god) and unknown to this (god).

Now Isis was a clever woman. Her heart was craftier than (cxxxi) i a million men; she was choicer than a million gods; she was more discerning than a million of the noble dead. There was nothing which she did not know in heaven and earth, like Re, who made the content of the earth. The goddess purposed in her heart to learn the name of the august god.

Now Re entered every day at the head of the crew, taking his place on the throne of the two horizons. A divine old age had slackened his mouth. He cast his spittle upon the ground and spat it out, fallen upon the soil. Isis kneaded it for herself with her hand, together with the earth on which it was. She built it up into an August snake; she made it in the form of a sharp point. It did not stir alive before her, (but) she left it at the crossroads past which the great god used to go according to the desire of his heart throughout (5) his Two Lands.

The August god appeared out of doors, with the gods from the palace accompanying him, so that he might stroll as on every day. The August snake bit him. The living fire came forth from his own self, and it vanished among the grass. When the divine god could gain his voice, the noise of his majesty reached the heavens. His Ennead said: "What is it? What is it?", and his gods answered: "What? What?" (But) he could not find his voice to answer about it. His lips were trembling, and all his members shuddered. The poison took possession of his flesh as the Nile takes possession (of the land) after it.

When the great god had composed his heart, he cried out to his retinue: "Come to me, ye who came into being in my body, ye gods who came forth from me, that I may make known to you what has happened! Something painful has stabbed me. My heart does [not] recognize it, my eyes have not seen it, my hand did not make it, and I do not recognize it in all that I have made. I have not tasted a pain like unto it, and there is nothing more painful (10) than it.

"I am a noble, the son of a noble, the fluid of a god, who came into being as a god. I am a great one, the son of a great one. My father thought out my name. I am abounding in names and abounding in forms. My forms exist as every god; I am called A turn and Horus-of-Praise. My father and my mother told me my name, (but) it was hidden in my body before I was born, in order that the power of a male or female magician might not be made to play against me. While I was going out of doors to see what I had made (and to) stroll in the Two Lands which I have created, something has stung me—I know not what. It is not really fire; it is not really water; (but) I have a birth of chill.

"Let the children of the gods be brought to me, the beneficent of speech, who know their (magic) spells, whose wisdom reaches the heavens."

(cxxxiii 1) So the children of the gods came, every one of them having his mourning, (but) Isis came with her skill, her speech having the breath of life, her utterances expelling pain, and her words reviving him whose throat was constricted. She said: "What is it, what is it, my divine father? What—a snake stabbed weakness into thee? One of thy children lifted up his head against thee? Then I shall cast it down with effect.

The holy god opened his mouth: "It is that I was going along the way, strolling in the Two Lands and the foreign countries, for my heart desired to see what I had created, when I was bitten by a snake, without seeing it. It is not really fire; it is not really water; (but) I am colder than water, I am hotter than fire. (5) My entire body is sweating, while I am shivering. My eye (is) not steadfast, and I cannot see. The heavens are beating upon my face as at the time of summer."

Then Isis said: "Tell me thy name, my divine father, for a person lives with whose name one recites (magic)."

"I am he who made heaven and earth, who knotted together the mountains, and created what is thereon. I am he who made the waters, so that the Heavenly Cow might come into being. I am he who made the bull for the cow, so that sexual pleasures might come into being. I am he who made the heaven and the mysteries of the two horizons, so that the soul of the gods might be placed therein. I am he who opened his eyes, so that light might come into being, who closed his eyes, so that darkness might come into being, in conformance with whose command the Nile flows, (but) whose name the gods have not learned. I am he who made the hours, so that days might come into being. I am he who made the year and created the river. I am he who made the living fire, in order to bring into being (10) the work of the palace.

(Am) I am Khepri in the morning, Re at noon, and Atun who is in the evening."

(But) the poison was not checked in its course, and the great god did not recover.

Then Isis said to Re: 'Thy name is not really among these which thou hast told me. If thou tellest it to me, the poison will come forth, for a person whose name is pronounced lives.'

The poison burned with a burning. It was more powerful than flame or fire.

Then the majesty of Re said: "Let thy ears be given to me, my daughter Isis, that my name may come forth from my body into thy body. The (most) divine among the gods conceived it, so that my place might be wide in the Barque of Millions (of Years). If there should take place a first time of (its) issuing [from] my heart, tell it to (thy) son Horus, after thou hast threatened him with an oath of the god and hast placed the god in his eyes." The great god divulged his name to Isis, the Great of Magic.

"Flow forth, scorpion poison! Come forth from Re, O Eye of Horus! Come forth from the burning god (lxxvii 1) at my spell! It is I who acts; it is I who sends (the message). Come upon the ground, O mighty poison! Behold, the great god has divulged his name, and..."
Re is living, the poison is dead. So-and-so, the [son] of So-and-so, is living, and the poison is dead, through the speech of Isis the Great, the Mistress of the Gods, who knows Re (by) his own name."

Directions for the Use of This Charm

Words to be spoken over an image of Atum and of Horus-of-Praise, a figure of Isis, and an image of Horus, painted on the hand of him who has the sting and licked off by the man—(or) done similarly on a strip of fine linen, placed at the throat of him who has the sting. It is the way of caring for a scorpion poison. (Or) it may be worked up with beer or wine and drunk by the man who has a scorpion (bite). It is what kills the poison—really successful a million times.

The Contest of Horus and Seth for the Rule

Lower Egypt and Upper Egypt are two distinct lands, but are united by contiguity, common dependence upon the Nile, and isolation from other lands. Egyptians have always been conscious of the difference between the "Two Lands," and the reconciliation of two competing areas is a recurrent theme in mythology and the dogma of rule. The commonest expression of this theme is a contest between the gods Horus and Seth to inherit the rule of Osiris, father of Horus and brother of Seth, with a final reconciliation of the two feuding gods to become a united pair.

The following tale draws from this myth for a lusty folkstory, told for entertainment rather than didactic purpose. The language, style, and treatment of the tale are colloquial—and will be so translated—and the gods are depicted as petty and childish. The setting of the story is juridical, with the supreme tribunal of the gods, the Ennead, attempting to settle the contest. The president of this tribunal is the sun-god Re.

The manuscript of the story was written in Thebes in the Twentieth Dynasty (12th century B.C.). The hieratic text is on Papyrus Chester Beatty I, recto i-xvi 8. Published with photographs, a transcription into hieroglyphic, transliteration, and commentary by A. H. Gardiner, The Library of A. Chester Beatty, Description of a Hieratic Papyrus with a Mythological Story, Love-Songs, and Other Miscellaneous Texts (Oxford, 1931). Gardiner gives another transcription into hieroglyphic in Late Egyptian Stories (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, 1, Brussels, 1932), 37-60.

I (i i-ii)

The judging of Horus and Seth [took place], the strange of form, the greatest and mightiest of princes who (ever) were; when a [divine] child sat before the All-Lord, claiming the office of his father Osiris, the beautiful of appearings, [the son] of [Pt]ah, who lights up [the west with] his [appearance], while Thoth was presenting the Eye [to] the mighty prince who is in Heliopolis.

Then Shu, the son of Re, said before [Atum, the] mighty [prince] who is in Heliopolis: "Just is the Lord, strong and ... is he, in saying: Give the office to [Horus]!" (5) Then Thoth [said] to the [Ennead: "Right.] a million times!" then Isis [gave] a great cry, and she rejoiced very, [very much, and she stood] before the All-[Lord.] and she said: "North wind, (go) to the west! Give the good news to King Wen-nofer—life, prosperity, health!" (then) Shu, the son of Re, [said]: "[The] presenting of the Eye is the justice of the Ennead!"

What the All-Lord [said]: "Here—what do you mean by taking action alone!" then ... said: "He has [taken] the name-ring of Horus, and the [White] Crown has been [put] on his head!" then the All-Lord was silent for a long [time, for] he was angry [at] the Ennead.

Then Seth, the son of Nut, said: "Have him dismissed (10) along with me, so that I may show you how my hand prevails over his hand [in the] presence of the Ennead, for nobody knows [any other] way [to] strip him!" then Thoth said to him: "Shouldn't we know the guilty one? Now, should the office of Osiris be given to Seth, when [his] son Horus is standing (here in court) ?%?

Then the Re-Har-akhti was very, very angry, for it was the wish of the Re (i i) to give the office to Seth, the great of strength, the son of Nut. And Onuris gave a great cry before the Ennead, saying: "What are we going to do!"

II (i 2-7)

(In their confusion, the gods appeal to a god of generation, who might—as a sort of obstetrician—advise them on the legitimacy of the two contestants. This god evades the responsibility of a decision and suggests that they might ask the ancient goddess Neith, an old crone whose lore might be decisive.)

III (i 7-iii 7)

Then the Ennead said to Thoth in the presence of the All-Lord: "Please write a letter to Neith, the Great, the God's Mother, in the name of the All-Lord, the Bull Residing in Heliopolis." then Thoth said: "I will do (it), yes, I will, I will!" then he sat down to write a letter, and he said:

---

At a time when the moon-god Thoth was offering to the sun-god Re the sacred eye, which was both an eye of heaven and a symbol of justice, the youthful Horus put in his claim to his father's rule.

The north wind was the propitious wind. Osiris Wen-nofer was ruler in the west, the realm of the dead.

This member of the Ennead, whose name is lost in a lacuna, regards the election of Horus to the rule as an accomplished fact: Horus' name written among the seven names of the Ennead!

The advocate Thoth takes the legal position that a court of justice has a responsibility to establish the rights and wrongs of a case when a client has made a formal appeal.

Re's partiality to Seth may be a result of Seth's activity in repelling the monster which nightly threatened to destroy the barque of Re (cf. pp. 11-12 above).
"The King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Re-(ii 10) Atum, the beloved of Thoth, the Lord of the Two Lands, the Heliopolitan,... 8 to this effect: This your servant spends the night in concern over Osiris and consulting the Two Lands every day, while Sobek endures forever. 9 What are we going to do for the two men who have been in the court for eighty years up to now, but (iii 1) no one is able to pass judgment on the two? Please write us what we should do!"

THEN Neith, the Great, the God’s Mother, sent a letter to the Ennead, saying: “Give the office of Osiris to his son Horus! Don’t do these great acts of wickedness, which are not in their place, or I shall be angry, and the sky will crash to the ground! And have the All-Lord, the Bull Residing in Heliopolis, told: Double Seth in his property; give him Anath and Astarte, your two daughters; and (5) put Horus in the place of his father Osiris.” 10

THEN the letter of Neith, the Great, the God’s Mother, reached the Ennead, while they were sitting in the broad hall (named) "Horus-Foremost-of-Horns," and the letter was put in Thoth’s hand. THEN Thoth read it out in the presence of the All-Lord and the entire Ennead. And they said with one voice: “This goddess is right!”

IV (iii 7-iv 3)

THEN the All-Lord was angry at Horus, and he said to him: "You are weak in your body, so this office is too much for you, you boy, with the taste of his mouth (still) bad!” 11 THEN Onuris was angry a million times, and likewise the entire Ennead, that is, the Thirty—life, prosperity, health! 12 And the god Baba drew himself up, and he (iii 10) said to the Re-Har-akhti: "Your shrine is empty!” 13 THEN the Re-Har-akhti was hurt at the retort which had been made to him, and he lay down on his back, and his heart was very wretched. THEN the Ennead went out, and they gave a great cry in the face of the god Baba, and they said to him: "Get out! This crime which you have committed is very great!” And they went to their tents. THEN the great god spent a day (iv 1) lying on his back in his arbor, and his heart was very wretched, and he was alone.

NOW AFTER A LONG TIME, THEN Hat-Hor, the Lady of the Southern Sycamore, came, and she stood before her father, the All-Lord, and she uncovered her private parts before his face. 14 THEN the great god laughed at her. THEN he got up, and he sat down with the Great Ennead, and he said to Horus and Seth: "Say your say!"

V (iv 3-v 6)

(The discussion immediately breaks down into wrangling. When Isis, the mother of Horus, intervenes on her son’s behalf, Seth is furious and threatens to kill one of the gods every day. He refuses to take part in the trial while Isis is present. The gods therefore isolate themselves on "Central Island" and charge the ferryman not to transport any woman resembling Isis.)

VI (v 6-vi 2)

(Isis disguises herself and bribes the ferryman to take her over to "Central Island.")

VII (vi 2-viii i)

(In the guise of a maiden, Isis lures Seth away from the Ennead and, by a play on words, tricks him into validating the claim of Horus.)

VIII (viii 1-6)

(Over the protest of Seth, the Ennead awards the office to Horus.)

IX (viii 6-ix 7)

(Seth succeeds in staying the award by challenging Horus to an ordeal. They become two hippopotamuses and try to stay under water for three full months, with the office to be given to the one who lasts longest under water. However, Isis complicates the contest by trying to harpoon Seth. He appeals to her sisterly feeling, and she withdraws the harpoon from his hide.)

X (ix 7-xi 1)

(Horus is angry at his mother’s change of heart and cuts off her head. The Ennead permits Seth to punishing Horus by removing his eyes and burying them “to illuminate the earth.” Hat-Hor restores Horus’s sight with drops of gazelle milk. Re appeals to the two contestants to stop quarreling. This episode must have some relation to the sun and the moon as the two eyes of Horus in his function as sky-god.)

XI (xi i-xiii 2)

(A bawdy episode, in which Seth attempts to impugn the virility of Horus but is outwitted by Isis.)

XII (xiii 2-xiv 4)

THEN Seth made a great oath to god, saying: "The office shouldn’t be given to him until he has been dismissed (from court) with me and we have built ourselves some stone ships and we have a race, the two (of us)! Then the one who beats his opponent, (xiii 5) the office of Ruler—life, prosperity, health!—shall be given to him!”

14 Hat-Hor was the goddess of love. Her role here was to cajole the supreme god out of his sulkiness and bring him back to the tribunal.
THEN Horns built himself a ship of cedar, and he plastered it with gypsum, and he launched it on the water in the evening time, without any man who was in the entire land having seen it. THEN Seth saw the ship of Horus, and he thought it was stone, and he went to the mountain, and he cut off a mountain peak, and he built himself a stone ship of 138 cubits. THEN they embarked in their ships in the presence of the Ennead. Then the ship of Seth sank in the water. THEN Seth changed himself into a hippopotamus, (10) so that he might cause the wreck of Horus’ ship. THEN Horus took his harpoon, and he threw it at the majesty of Seth. THEN the Ennead said to him: "Don’t throw it at him!"

THEN he took the water weapons, and he laid them in his ship, and he sailed downstream to Sais to speak (to) Neith, the Great, the God’s Mother:17 “Let me be judged with Seth, since we have been in the court for eighty years up to now, (xiv) but no one is able to pass judgment on us! He has not been declared right over me, but a thousand times up to now I have been right over him every day! But he pays no attention to anything that the Ennead says. I contended with him in the broad hall (named) ‘Way-of-Truths,’ and I was declared right over him. I contended with him in the broad hall (named) ‘Horus-Foremost-of-Horns,’ and was declared right over him. I contended with him in the broad hall (named) ‘Field-of-Reeds,’ and I was declared right over him. I contended with him in the broad hall (named) ‘the-Field-Pool,’ and I was declared right over him.

And the Ennead said to Shu, the son of Re: "Horus, the son of Isis, is right in all that he has said!"18

XIII (xiv 5-xv 10)

So Thoth said to the All-Lord: "Have a letter sent to Osiris, so that he may pass judgment on the two boys." THEN Shu, the son of Re, said: "What Thoth has said to the Ennead is right a million times!" THEN the All-Lord said to Thoth: "Sit down and write a letter to Osiris, so that we may hear what he has to say." THEN Thoth sat down to complete a letter to Osiris, saying: "The Bull: the Lion that Hunts for Himself; the Two Goddesses: Protecting the Gods and Curbing the Two Lands; the Horus of Gold: Discoverer of Mankind in the Primeval Time; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Bull Residing in Heliopolis—life, prosperity, health!—the Son of Ptah: Beneficial One of the Two Banks, Who Appears as Father of His Ennead, while he eats of gold and every (kind of) precious fayence—life, prosperity, health!19 Please write us what we are to do for Horus and Seth, so that we may not do something in our ignorance."

Now after (many days) after this, THEN the (10) letter reached the king, the Son of Re: Great of Overflow, Lord of Provisions.20 Then he gave a great cry when the letter was read out before him. THEN he answered it very, very quickly to the place where the All-Lord was with the Ennead, saying: "Why should my son Horus be cheated, since I am the one who made you strong? Now I am the one who made barley and emmer to keep the gods alive, as well as the cattle after the gods! And no (other) god or goddess at all found himself (able) to do it!"

Then the (xv 1) letter of Osiris reached the place where the Re-Har-akhti was, sitting with the Ennead in Xois at the bright(est) time.21 Then it was read out before him and the Ennead. And the Re-Har-akhti said: "Please answer for me the letter very quickly to Osiris, and say to him about the letter: ‘Suppose that you had never come into being, or suppose that you had never been born—barley and emmer would still exist!’ "22

Then the letter of the All-Lord reached Osiris, and it was read out before him. THEN he sent to the Re-Har-akhti again, saying: "Very, very fine is everything that you have done, you discoverer of the Ennead as a deed (accomplished) while justice was permitted to sink down into the Underworld!23 Now look at the case again, yourself! As to (5) the land in which I am, it is filled with savage-faced messengers, and they are not afraid of any god or goddess! I can send them out, and they will bring back the heart of anyone who does wrong, and (then) they will be here with me!24 Why, what does it mean, my being here resting in the West, while every single one of you is outside? Who among them25 is stronger than I? But see, they26 discovered falsehood as an accomplishment. Now when Ptah, the Great, South-of-His-Wall, Lord of the Life of the Two Lands, made the sky, didn’t he say to the stars which are in it: ‘You shall go to rest (in) the West every night, in the place where King Osiris is?’ And, after the gods, the people and the folk shall also go to rest in the place where you are”—so he said to me.27

Now after (many days) after this, the letter of Osiris reached the place where the All-Lord was with the Ennead. THEN Thoth took the letter, and he read it out titles of the addresser, given in imitation of the fivefold titulary of a pharaoh. Attention might be directed to the interesting epithet of Re: "Discoverer of Mankind in the Primeval Time." Osiris (see the next note) it treated as the ruler of another realm, that of the dead.28

A royal name for Osiris as the god of grain.29

Xois in the Delta was a cult-seat of Re. "The bright time" may be high noon.

Re abandons the real issue and argues Osiris’s claim to have made the grain which keeps the gods alive.

In the sarcastic view of Osiris, Re’s preoccupation with building up his circle of gods has led him to neglect justice.

Here, perhaps for the first time, the Egyptian underworld is regarded as a Hades for evildoers, from which Osiris may send out angels ("messengers") to claim evildoers.

Nic. but read "you."

Osiris’s argument of superior authority is that he is the god of the dead and that stars, gods, and humans ultimately come to be under his rule.
before the Re-Har-akhti (10) and the Ennead. THEN they said: "Right, right in all that he has said is the (King): Great of Overflow, Lord of Provisions—life, prosperity, health!"

XIV (xv 10-16 8)

Then Seth said: "Let us be taken to the Central Island, so that I may contend with him." THEN he went to the Central Island, and Horus was conceded the right over him. THEN Atum, Lord of the Two Lands, the Heliopolitan, sent to Isis, saying: "Fetch Seth, fastened in handcuffs!" THEN Isis fetched Seth, fastened in handcuffs, he being a prisoner. THEN Atum said to him: "Why didn't you allow judgment to be passed on (the two of) you, instead of taking the office of Horus for yourself?" THEN Seth said to him: "No, my good lord! Let Horus the son of Isis, be called and given the office of (xvi i) his father Osiris!"

THEN Horus, the son of Isis, was brought, and the White Crown was set upon his head, and he was put in the place of his father Osiris. And it was said to him: "You are the good king of Egypt; you are the good Lord—life, prosperity, health!—of Every Land up to eternity and forever!" THEN Isis gave a great cry to her son Horus, saying: "You are the good king! My heart rejoices that you light up the earth with your color!"

THEN Ptah, the Great, South-of-His-Wall, Lord of the Life of the Two Lands, said: "What is to be done for Seth? For, see, Horus has been put in the place of his father Osiris!" THEN the Re-Har-akhti said: "Let Seth, the son of Nut, be given to me, so that he may live with me and be a son to me. And he shall speak out in the sky, and men shall be afraid of him."27

THEN they (5) went to say to the Re-Har-akhti: "Horus, the son of Isis, has arisen as the Ruler—life, prosperity, health!" THEN the Re rejoiced very much, and he said to the Ennead: "You should be glad! To the ground, to the ground, for Horus, the son of Isis!" Then Isis said: "Horus has arisen as the Ruler—life, prosperity, health! The Ennead is in jubilee, and heaven is in joy!" They took wreaths when they saw Horus, the son of Isis, arisen as the great Ruler—life, prosperity, health!—of Egypt. The hearts of the Ennead were content, and the entire earth was in jubilation, when they saw Horus, the son of Isis, assigned the office of his father Osiris, Lord of Busiris.

It has come to a happy ending in Thebes, the Place of Truth.

ASTARTE AND THE TRIBUTE OF THE SEA

The excuse for introducing so damaged a document is that we may have here the Egyptian version of a tale current in Asia. The badly damaged papyrus gives us little certainty about the purport of the story, but it may be guessed that it told how the gods—in this case, the Egyptian gods—were freed of the obligation to pay tribute to the sea. The Phoenician goddess Astarte, whom the Egyptians of the Empire had introduced into Egypt and who here appears as the "daughter of Ptah," was instrumental in this deliverance from tribute. Any reconstruction must be treated with great reserve.

The Astarte Papyrus, formerly in the Amherst collection and now in the Morgan collection in New York, dates from the Eighteenth or Nineteenth Dynasty (1550-1200 B.C.). Photographs of the papyrus were given by P. E. Newberry, The Amherst Papyrus (London, 1899), Pis. XIX-XL. Photographs, a translation, and commentary were given by A. H. Gardiner in Studies Presented to F. Ll. Griffith (London, 1932), 74 ff. Gardiner points out a general similarity between the Astarte tale and Enuma elish, the Babylonian account of the creation, in which the enemy of the gods is Tiamat, the sea (cf. pp. 60-72). A. H. Sayce called attention to possible Hittite parallels in JEA, xix (1933), 56 ff. A transcription into hieroglyphic was given by Gardiner in Late-Egyptian Stories (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, i, Brussels, 1932), 76-81.

(At the visible beginning of the text all seems to be well with the gods, of whom Ptah, the Sky, and the Earth are mentioned. In what follows, it seems that the Sea claims tribute from the gods as their ruler and that the harvest-goddess Renenut delivered this.)

(i x+8) ... [his] throne of Ruler—life, prosperity, health! And he ... carried to him ... from the tribunal. Then Renenut carried [this tribute to the Sea, as it was due to him] as Ruler—life, prosperity, health! [One of the gods said]: "... sky. Now, behold, tribute must be brought to him, ... (x+n) ... his ... He will carry us off as booty. ... our own for ..." [Then] Renenut [carried] his tribute of silver and gold, laps lazuli, the ... the boxes.

(At this point the Ennead of gods seems to express apprehension and ask questions. Perhaps their relations with the Sea have worsened through his added demands. Apparently they need an intermediary and pick Astarte as suitable for that purpose. It seems that Renenut sent a bird to appeal to Astarte to undertake this mission on behalf of the gods.)

(ii x+3) ... And Renenut took a ... Astarte. Then said [Renenut to one of certain] birds: "Hear what I shall say; thou shouldst not go away ... another. Come, that thou mayest go to Astarte... [and fly to] her house and speak under [the window of the room where] she is sleeping and say to her: 'If [thou art awake, hear my voice.] If thou art asleep, I shall waken [thee. The Ennead must send tribute to the] Sea as Ruler over the [Earth and as Ruler over] (x+7) the Sky. Pray, come thou to them in this [hour]!... (x+12) ... that thou go thyself, carrying the tribute of [the Sea] ..." Then Astarte wept...

(Astarte is apparently persuaded and undertake the mission. She must cajole the Sea and appeal to his sympathy, perhaps because the tribute which she brings is insufficient.)

(x+17) ... So [she] bore [the tribute off] the [Sea. She reached the Sea.] singing and laughing at him. [Then the Sea] saw Astarte sitting on the shore of the Sea. Then she said to her: "Whence comes [thou,] thou daughter of Ptah, thou furious and tempestuous goddess? Are (thy) sandals which (are on thy) feet broken, are thy clothes which are upon thee torn by the goddess to him. The next words may be his message to Ptah.

27 The special attachment of Re and Seth is again indicated; cf. n.7 above. Seth was to be located, as the thunder-god, in the heavens with the sun-god; cf. pp. 27, 23; 249.

(iii y-2) ... [the Enne]ad. If they give to me thy [daughter,] ... them, what should I do against them myself?" And Astarte heard what the Sea [said] to her, and she lifted herself up to go before the Ennead, to [the] place where they were gathered. And the great ones saw her, and they stood up before her. And the lesser ones saw her, and they lay down upon their bellies. And her throne was given to her, and she sat down. And there was presented to her the —

(Thus Astarte was accepted as a member of the Ennead. Several lacunae follow, with brief passages of text. It seems that the Sea is unyielding in his demands for tribute, so that the gods must put their personal jewelry into the balances to make up the required weight.)

[Then] (iv y) the messenger of Ptah went to tell these words to Ptah and to Nut. Then Nut untied the beads which were at her throat. Behold, she put (them) into the scales....

(v y) ... It means [arguing] with the Ennead. Then he will send and demand ... the seal of Geb ... [to fill] the scales with it. Then...

(The remainder of a long tale is confined to meaningless scraps. The three brief excerpts given below show that the contest between the Ennead and the Sea continued through a number of episodes.)

(xi y) ... and he will cover the ground and the mountains and ...

(xv y) ... [come] to fight with him, because ... seating himself calmly. He will not come to fight with us." Then Seth sat down...

(verso b) — and the Sea left...

THE STORY OF SI-NUHE

A strong love of country was a dominant characteristic of the ancient Egyptian. Though he might feel the responsibilities of empire-building, he wished the assurance that he would close his days on the banks of the Nile. That sentiment made the following story one of the most popular classics of Egyptian literature. An Egyptian official of the Middle Kingdom went into voluntary exile in Asia. He was prosperous and well established there, but he continued to long for the land of his birth. Finally he received a royal invitation to return and join the court. This was his real success in life, and this was the popular point of the story. Much of the tale is pompous and over-styled in wording and phrasing, but the central narrative is a credible account, which fits the period as we know it. If this was fiction, it was based on realities and deserves a respected place in Egyptian literature.

The story opens with the death of Amen-em-het I (about 1960 B.C.) and continues in the reign of his successor, Sen-Usert I (about 1971-1928 B.C.). Manuscripts are plentiful and run from the late Twelfth Dynasty (about 1800 B.C.) to the Twenty-First Dynasty (about 1000 B.C.). The most important papyri are in Berlin (3922 [the B manuscript] and 10490 [the R manuscript]), and were published by A. H. Gardiner, in Berlin, Staatlichen Museen. Hieratische Papyri, V. Die Erzählung des Sinuhe ... (Leipzig, 1909), Fis. 1-15. G. Maspero studied the texts in Les Memoires de Sinouhit (Bibliothèque eTérude, 1, Cairo, 1908). The definitive study of the texts was made by A. H. Gardiner, Notes on the Story of Sinuhe (reprinted from Recueil de travaux ..., Vols, xxxn-xxxvi, Paris, 1916), in which reference is given to the antecedent literature. A. M. Blackman gives a transcription of the texts into hieroglyphic in Middle-Egyptian Stories (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, 11, Brussels, 1932), 1-41. Since Gardiner's edition, several additional documents have come to light, summarized in B. van de Walle, La Transmission des textes littéraires égyptiens (Bruxelles, 1948), 69-66. The most imposing of these new copies has been published by J. W. B. Barns, The Ashmolean Ostraca of Sinuhe (Oxford, 1952). There are interesting comments on Si-nuhe in Syria by J. J. Cline in Melanges offerts à Monsieur Rene Dussaud (Paris, 1939), n, 829-840. The story is also translated in Erman, LAE, 14-29.

(R1) THE HEREDITARY PRINCE AND COUNCIL. Judge and District Overseer of the domains of the Sovereign in the lands of the Asiatics, real acquaintance of the king, his beloved, the Attendant Si-nuhe. He says:

I was an attendant who followed his lord, a servant of the royal harem (and of) the Hereditary Princess, the great of favor, the wife of King Sen-Usert in (the pyramid town) Khenem-sut, the daughter of King Amen-em-het (R5) in (the pyramid town) Qa-nefru, Nefru, the lady of reverence.¹

YEAR 30, THIRD MONTH OF THE FIRST SEASON, DAY 7.*

The god ascended to his horizon; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Sehetep-ib-Re was taken up to heaven and united with the sun disc. The body of the god merged with him who made him.² The Residence City was in silence, hearts were in mourning, the Great Double Doors were sealed shut. (Rio) The courtiers (sat) head on lap, and the people were in grief.

Now his majesty had sent an army to the land of the Tehenu-Libyans, with his eldest son as the commander thereof, the good god Sen-Usert, (R15) and even now he was returning and had carried off living captives of the Tehenu-Libyans and all (kinds of) cattle without number.

The courtiers of the palace sent to the western border to let the King's Son know the events which had taken place at the court. The messengers met him on the road, (R20) and they reached him in the evening time. He did not delay a moment; the falcon³ flew away with his attendants, without letting his army know it Now the royal children who had been following him in this ¹ Si-nuhe's service was to Nefru, the daughter of Amen-em-het I and wife of Sen-Usert I.

² Around 1960 B.C., the date of Amen-em-het Fs death, as given here, would have fallen early in March.
³ The pharaoh was the "Son of Re," the sun-god. At death he was taken bade into the body of his creator and father.
⁴ Although he had been coregent with his father for ten years, he had to go immediately to the capital before word of his father's death became widely known. See the next note.
army had been sent for, (Bi) and one of them was summoned. While I was standing (near by) I heard his voice as he was speaking and I was a little way off. My heart was distraught, my arms spread out (in dismay), trembling fell upon all my limbs.\(^5\) I removed myself by leaps and bounds to seek a hiding place for myself. I placed (5) myself between two bushes, in order to cut (myself) off from the road and its travel.\(^6\)

*I set out southward, (but) I did not plan to reach this Residence City, (for) I thought that there would be civil disorder, and I did not expect to live after him. I crossed Lake Ma’at’y near Sycamore, and I came to Snefru Island. I spent the day there on the edge of (10) the fields. I came into the open light, while it was (sill) day, and I met a man standing near by. He stood in awe of me, for he was afraid. When the time of the evening meal came, I drew near to Ox-town. I crossed over in a barge without a rudder, by aid of the west wind.\(^6\) I passed by the east of the quarry (15) above Mistress-of-the-Red-Mountain.\(^7\) I gave (free) road to my own	Mistress-of-the-Red-Mountain.

One foreign country gave me to another. I set off for Byblos and approached Qedem,\(^10\) and spent (30) a year and a half there. Ammi-enshi— he was a ruler of Upper Retenu—took me and said to me: "Thou wilt do well with me, and thou wilt hear the speech of Egypt" He said this, for he knew my character, he had heard of my wisdom, and the people of Egypt who were there with him\(^18\) had borne witness for me.

Then he said to me: (35) "Why hast thou come hither? Has something happened in the Residence City?" Then I said to him: "The King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Sehetep-ib-Re is departed to the horizon, and no one knows what might happen because of it." But I said equivocally: "I had come from an expedition to the land of Temeh, when report was made to me. My heart quailed; it carried (40) me off on the way of flight. (Yet) no one had gossiped about me; no one had spat in my face; not a belitting word had been heard, nor had my name been heard in the mouth of the herald. I do not know what brought me to this country. It was as though it might be a god."

Then he said to me: "Well, what will that land be like without him, that beneficent god, the fear of whom pervaded (45) foreign countries like (the fear of) Sekhmet in a year of pestilence?\(^14\) I spoke to him that I might answer him: "Well, of course, his son has entered into the palace and has taken the inheritance of his father. Moreover, he is a god without his peer. There is no other who surpasses him. He is a master of understanding, effective in plans and beneficent of decrees. Going forth and coming back are in conformance with (50) his command. He it was who subdued the foreign countries while his father was in his palace, and he reported to him that what had been charged to him had been carried out.\(^5\) How joyful is this land which he has ruled! (71) He is one who extends its frontiers. He will carry off the lands of the south, and he will not consider the northern countries (seriously), (for) he was made to smite the Asiatics and to crush the Sand-Crossers. Send to him! Let him know thy name! Do not utter a curse against his majesty. He will not fail to do (75) good to the country which shall be loyal to him!"

Then he said to me: "Well, really, Egypt is happy that it knows that he is flourishing. Now thou art here. Thou shalt stay with me. What I shall do for thee is good."

He set me at the head of his children. He married me to his eldest daughter. He let me choose for myself of his country, (80) of the choicest of that which was with him on his frontier with another country. It was a good land, named Yaa. Figs were in it, and grapes. It had more wine than water. Plentiful was its honey, abundant its olives. Every (kind of) fruit was on its trees. Barley was there, and emmer. There was no limit to any (kind of) cattle. (85) Moreover, great was that which accrued apparently went east from Byblos, a location in the valley between the Lebanon and Anti-lebanon is a possibility, but it would be wrong to push the evidence so closely. As it stands, the story gives a picture of Syria-Palestine in the patriarchal period.

\(^{10}\) The goddess Sekhmet had to do with disease.

\(^{5}\) This translation omits some of the fulsome praise.
to me as a result of the love of me. He made me ruler of a tribe of the choicest of his country. Bread was made for me as daily fare, wine as daily provision, cooked meat and roast fowl, beside the wild beasts of the desert, for they hunted (90) for me and laid before me, beside the catch of my (own) hounds. Many... were made for me, and milk in every (kind of) cooking.

I spent many years, and my children grew up to be strong men, each man as the restrainer of his (own) tribe. The messenger who went north or who went south to the Residence City (95) stopped over with me, (for) I used to make everybody stop over. I gave water to the thirsty. I put him who had strayed (back) on the road. I rescued him who had been robbed. When the Asiatics became so bold as to oppose the rulers of foreign countries, I counseled their movements. This ruler of (100) (Re)tenu had me spend many years as commander of his army. Every foreign country against which I went forth, when I had made my attack on it, was driven away from its pasturage and its wells. I plundered its cattle, carried off its inhabitants, took away their food, and slew people in it (105) by my strong arm, by my bow, by my movements, and by my successful plans. I found favor in his heart, he loved me, he recognized my valor, and he placed me at the head of his children, when he saw how my arms flourished.

A mighty man of Retenu came, that he might challenge me (no) in my (own) camp. He was a hero without his peer, and he had repelled all of them. He said that he would fight me, he intended to despoil me, and he planned to plunder my cattle, on the advice of his tribe. That prince discussed (it) with me, and I said: "I do not know him. Certainly I am no confederate of his, (115) so that I might move freely in his encampment. Is it the case that I have (ever) opened his door or overthrown his fences? (Rather), it is hostility because he sees me carrying out thy commissions. I am really like a stray bull in the midst of another herd, and a bull of (these) cattle attacks him."

During the night I strung my bow and shot my arrows," I gave free play to my dagger, and polished my weapons. When day broke, (Re)tenu was come. (130) It had whipped up its tribes and collected the countries of a (good) half of it. It had thought (only) of this fight. Then he came to me as I was waiting, (for) I had placed myself near him. Every heart burned for me; women and men groaned. Every heart was sick for me. They said: "Is there another strong man who could fight against him?" Then (he took) his shield, his battle-axe, (135) and his armful of javelins. Now after I had let his weapons issue forth, I made his arrows pass by me uselessly, one close to another. He charged me, and I shot him, my arrow sticking in his neck. He cried out and fell on his nose. (140) I felled him with his (own) battle-axe and raised my cry of victory over his back, while every Asiatic roared. I gave praise to Montu, while his adherents were mourning for him. This ruler Ammi-enashi took me into his embrace. Then I carried off his goods and plundered his cattle. What he had planned to do (145) to me I did to him. I took what was in his tent and stripped his encampment. I became great thereby, I became extensive in my wealth, I became abundant in my cattle.

Thus did god to show mercy to him upon whom he had laid blame, whom he had led astray to another country. (But) today his heart is assuaged...

Now when the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Kheper-ka-Re, the justified, was told about this situation in which I was, then his majesty kept sending (175) to me with presentations from the royal presence, that he might gladden the heart of this servant like the ruler of any foreign country. The royal children in his palace let me hear their commissions.

Copy of the decree which was brought to this servant about bringing him (back) to Egypt.

"The Horus: Living in Births; the Two Goddesses: Living in Births; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Kheper-ka-Re; the Son of Re: (180) Amen-em-het, living forever and ever. Royal decree to the Attendant Si-ruhu. Behold, this decree of the king is brought to thee to let thee know that:

"Thou hast traversed the foreign countries, starting from Qedem to (Re)tenu. One country gave thee to another, under the advice of thy (own) heart to thee. What hast thou done that anything should be done to thee? Thou hast not cursed, that thy word should be punished. Thou hast not spoken against the counsel of the nobles, that thy speeches should be opposed. (185) This plan (simply) carried away thy heart. It was in no heart against thee. This thy heaven which is in the palace is firm and steadfast today. Her head is covered with the kingship of the land. Her children are in the court.

"MAYEST THOU LAY UP TREASURES WHICH THEY MAY GIVE THEE; MAYEST THOU LIVE ON THEIR BOUNTY. Do thou return to Egypt, that thou mayest see the home in which thou didst grow up and kiss the ground at the Great Double Door and join with the courtiers. For today, surely, (190) thou hast begun to grow old; thou hast lost thy virility. Recall thou the day of burial, the passing to a revered state, when the evening is set aside for thee with ointments and wrappings from the hands of Tait.

A funeral procession is made for thee on the day of..."
interment, a mummy case of gold, with head of lapis lazuli, with the heaven above thee, as thou art placed upon a sledge, oxen dragging thee and singers in front of thee, when the dance (195) of the maa is performed at the door of thy tomb, 29 when the requirements of the offering table are summoned for thee and there is sacrifice beside thy offering stones, thy pillars being hewn of white stone in the midst of (the tombs of) the royal children. It should not be that thou shouldst die in a foreign country. Asiatics should not escort thee. Thou shouldst not be placed in a sheepskin when thy wall is upon a sledge, oxen dragging thee and singers in front of thee. Whether I am at home or whether I am in this place, thou art he who covers this horizon, the sun disc rises at thy pleasure, the water in the River is drunk as thou wisihest, and the air in the sky is breathed as thou biddest. This servant will hand over (235) THE VIZIERSHIP WHICH THIS SERVANT HAS EXERCISED IN THIS PLACE.

Then they came for this servant. — I was permitted to spend a day in Yaa handing over my property to my children, my eldest son being responsible for my tribe. (240) My tribe and all my property were in his charge: my herds, all my cattle, my fruit, and every pleasant tree of mine.

Then this servant came southward. I halted at the "Ways of Horus." 36 The commander there who was responsible for the patrol sent a message to the Residence to make (it) known. Then his majesty sent a capable overseer of peasants of the palace, with loaded ships in his train, (245) carrying presentations from the royal presence for the Asiatics who had followed me, escorting me to the "Ways of Horus." I called, each of them by his name. Every butler was (busy) at his duties. When I started and set sail, the kneading and straining (of beer) was carried on beside me, until I had reached the town of Lisht. 38

When day had broken, very early, they came and summoned me, ten men coming and ten men going to usher me to the palace. 39 I put my brow to the ground between the sphinxes, (250) while the royal children were waiting in a recess to meet me. The courtiers who usher into the audience hall set me on the way to the private chambers. I found his majesty upon the Great Throne in a recess of fine gold. When I was stretched out upon my belly; I knew not myself in his presence, (although) this god greeted me pleasantly. I was like a man caught in the dark: (255) my soul departed, my body was powerless, my heart was not in my body, that I might know life from death.

THEN HIS MAJESTY SAID TO ONE OF THESE COURTiers: "Lift him up. Let him speak to me." Then his majesty said: "Behold, thou art come. Thou hast trodden the foreign countries and made a flight. (But now) elderliness has attacked thee; thou hast reached old age. It is no small matter that thy corpse be (properly) buried; thou shouldst not be interred by bowmen. 40 Do not, do not act thus any longer: (for) thou dost not speak (260) when thy name is pronounced!" Yet (I) was afraid to respond, and I answered it with the answer of one afraid: "What is it that my lord says to me? I should answer it, (but) there is nothing that I can do: it is really the hand of a god. It is a terror that is in my belly like that which produced the fated flight. BEHOLD,
I AM BEFORE THEE. THINE IS LIFE. MAY THY MAJESTY DO AS HE PLEAS.

Then his majesty said to the Queen: "Here is Si-nuhe, (265) I AM BEFORE THEE. THINE IS LIFE. MAY THY MAJESTY DO a very great cry, and the royal children clamored all together. Then they said to his majesty: "It is not really he, O Sovereign, my lord!" Then his majesty said: "It is really he!" Now when they had brought with them their bead-necklaces, their rattles, and their sistra, then they presented them to his majesty. ... Loose the horn their faces. The language and style are relatively colloquial Late Egyptian, so that the following translation uses "you" instead of "thou," except in address of the gods. The beginning of the story is lost. One may assume that General Thoth has been besieging the port of loppa in Palestine and is confirming with the Prince of loppa to arrange some kind of terms.

... 220(-) mary/anyy . . . them according to the number of baskets. . . . [replied] to Thoth: [Have] ioo [(-) x] [loaves given to] him. The garrison of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—. . . ." their faces.

Now after an hour they were drunken, and Thoth said to [the Enemy of Joppa: "I'll deliver] myself, along with (my) wife and children, (into) your own town.3 Have the (5) mafryanu bring in [the horses and give] them feed, or an apir* may pass by . . . them." So they guarded the horses and gave them feed.

1 On a gold bowl in the Louvre, Thoth is called: "the trusted man of the king in every foreign country and the islands which are in the midst of the Sea; he who fills the storehouses with lapsis lazuli, silver, and gold; the Overseer of Foreign Countries; the Commander of the Army." On other materials belonging to Thoth, he is called: "the Follower of the King in Every Foreign Country;" "the trusted man of the King in God's Country," i.e. the East; "the Garrison Commander"; and "the Overseer of Northern Countries." See Schae, Urvunden der 18. Dynastie (Vr., 1), iv, 999-1002.

3 The inclusion of wife and children makes it reasonable to assume that Thoth was offering to go over to the side of Joppa.

4 The 'Apiru were foreigners, some of whom served the Egyptians at this time. For the probable connection of the term 'Apiru with the term appearing in cuneiform as Habiru, the latter being the assumed origin of the word "Hebrew," see J. A. Wilson, in ASL, xiii (1933), 275-80. Habiru was not an ethnic, and the present 'Apir was not a Hebrew as far as we have any evidence, cf. p. 247, n.47.

town, like that which is done for a chief courtier. My statue was overlaid with gold, and its skirt was of fine gold. It was his majesty who had it made. There is no poor man for whom the like has been done.

(So) I was under (310) the favor of the king's presence until the day of mooring had come.44

IT HAS COME (TO ITS END), FROM BEGINNING TO END AS IT HAD BEEN FOUND IN WRITING.

THE TAKING OF JOPPA

One of the important officers in the army of the empire-builder Thut-mose III (about 1490-1436 B.C.) was a certain Thoth (or Thuti), who has left us evidence of his responsible concern for the conquest and administration of foreign countries.1 His fame continued for some generations, as he appears as the hero in the following tale in a manuscript of the Nineteenth Dynasty (dated to about 1390 B.C.).

Papyrus Harris 500, now 10060 in the British Museum, verso 1-3. The manuscript is said to have come from Thebes. Photograph in Facsimiles of Egyptian Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Second Series, ed. by E. A. W. Budge (London, 1923), Pi. xlvii. Transcription into hieroglyphic in A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Stories (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, 1, Brussels, 1932), 82-85. A study by H. P. Blok, De beide Volksverhalen van Papyrus Harris 500 Verso (Leyden, 1925) was reviewed by T. E. Peet, in JEA, xi (1925), 336-37. Translations by Peet, JEA, xi (1925), 225-27, and by Erman, LAE, 167-69.

The language and style are relatively colloquial Late Egyptian, so that the following translation uses "you" instead of "thou," except in address of the gods. The beginning of the story is lost. One may assume that General Thoth has been besieging the port of loppa in Palestine and is confirming with the Prince of loppa to arrange some kind of terms.

... 220(-) mary/anyy . . . them according to the number of baskets. . . . [replied] to Thoth: [Have] ioo [(-) x] [loaves given to] him. The garrison of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—. . . ." their faces.

Now after an hour they were drunken, and Thoth said to [the Enemy of Joppa: "I'll deliver] myself, along with (my) wife and children, (into) your own town.3 Have the (5) mafryanu bring in [the horses and give] them feed, or an apir* may pass by . . . them." So they guarded the horses and gave them feed.

44 Until the day of death. Gardiner has pointed out that the story resembles an autobiography prepared for a tomb wall, and "its nucleus may be derived from the tomb of a real Sinuhe, who led a life of adventure in the Near East, and who was subsequently buried at Lish" (Notes on the Story of Si-nu-eh, 168).

1 On a gold bowl in the Louvre, Thoth is called: "the trusted man of the king in every foreign country and the islands which are in the midst of the Sea; he who fills the storehouses with lapsis lazuli, silver, and gold; the Overseer of Foreign Countries; the Commander of the Army." On other materials belonging to Thoth, he is called: "the Follower of the King in Every Foreign Country;" "the trusted man of the King in God's Country," i.e. the East; "the Garrison Commander"; and "the Overseer of Northern Countries." See Schae, Urvunden der 18. Dynastie (Vr., iv), iv, 999-1002.

3 The inclusion of wife and children makes it reasonable to assume that Thoth was offering to go over to the side of Joppa.

4 The 'Apiru were foreigners, some of whom served the Egyptians at this time. For the probable connection of the term 'Apiru with the term appearing in cuneiform as Habiru, the latter being the assumed origin of the word "Hebrew," see J. A. Wilson, in ASL, xiii (1933), 275-80. Habiru was not an ethnic, and the present 'Apir was not a Hebrew as far as we have any evidence, cf. p. 247, n.47.
And [the Enemy of Joppa wanted to see the great staff of] King Men-kheper-Re—life, prosperity, health!—and they came and reported (this) to Thoth. Then [the Enemy of Joppa] said to Thoth: "I want to see the great staff of King Men-kheper-Re—life, prosperity, health!—of which the name is . . . -the-Beautiful.' By the [a of King Men-kheper-Re—life, prosperity, health!—if you have it today, (10) good, and bring it to me!"

And he did so and brought the great staff of King Men-kheper-Re, [and he laid hold of] his cloak, and he stood upright, and said: "Look at me, O Enemy of Joppa! Behold the King Men-kheper-Re—life, prosperity, health!—the fierce Hon, the son of Sekhmet! Amon gave him his [victory]!" [And he] raised his [hand] and struck the Enemy of Joppa on the forehead. And he fell down, (ii 1) made [prostrate] before him. And he put him in fetters . . . the leather. And he . . . pieces of metal, which [he had had made to] punish this Enemy of Joppa. And the piece of metal of four nemset (weight) was put on his feet.

And he had the two hundred baskets which he had made, and he had two hundred soldiers get down (5) into them. And their arms were filled (with) bonds and fetters, and they were sealed up with seals. And they were given their sandals, as well as their carrying-poles and staves. And they had every good soldier carrying them, totaling five hundred men. And they were told: "When you enter the city, you are to let out your companions and lay hold on all the people who are in the city and put them in bonds (10) immediately."

And they went out to tell the charioteer of the Enemy of Joppa: "Thus speaks your lord: 'Go and tell your mistress: 'Rejoice, for Amon, your good father, has given you the Enemy of Joppa, along with all his people, as well as his (10) city! Send men to take them away as plunder, so that you may fill the House of your father Amon-Re, King of the Gods, with male and female slaves, who are fallen under your feet forever and ever! It has come to a happy ending, (written) by the ka of a scribe skillful with his fingers, the Scribe of the Army..."

THE STORY OF TWO BROTHERS

This folk tale tells how a conscientious young man was falsely accused of a proposal of adultery by the wife of his elder brother, after he had actually rejected her advances. This part of the story has general similarity to the story of Joseph and Potiphar's wife. The two chief characters are brothers named Anubis and Bata. These were the names of Egyptian gods, and the tale probably does have a mythological setting. However, it served for entertainment, rather than ecclesiastical or moral purpose. The story is colloquial and is so translated.

Papyrus D'Orbiney is now British Museum 10183. Facsimiled in Select Papyri in the Hieratic Character from the Collections of the British Museum, v (London, 1860), Pis. 59-60, and in G. Möller, Hieratische Lesestücke (Leipzig, 1927), 1-20. The manuscript can be closely dated to about 1250 B.C. in the Nineteenth Dynasty. Transcription into hieroglyphic in A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Stories (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, 1, Brussels, 1932), 9-29. Translation in Erman, LAE, 150-61.

N O W  T H E Y  S A Y  T H A T  (O N C E)  T H E R E  W E R E  T W O  b r o t h e r s of one mother and one father. Anubis was the name of the elder, and Bata was the name of the younger. Now, as for Anubis, he [had] a house and had a wife, [and] his younger brother (lived) with him as a sort of minor. He was the one who made clothes for him and went to the fields driving his cattle. He was the one who did the plowing and who harvested for him. He was the one who did all (kinds of) work for him which are in the fields. Really, his younger [brother] was a good (grown) man. There was no one like him in the entire land. Why, the strength of a god was in him.

[NOW] A F T E R  M A N Y  D A Y S  A F T E R  T H I S, [h]is younger brother (5) [was tending] his cattle in his custom of every [day], and he [left off] (to go) to his house every evening, loaded [with] all (kinds of) plants of the field, [with] milk, with wood, and [with] every [good thing of] the fields, and he laid them in front of his [elder brother], who was sitting with his wife. And he drank and he ate, and [he went out to sleep in] his stable among his cattle [by himself].

N O W  W H E N I T  W A S  D A W N  A N D  A S E C O N D  D A Y  H A D  C O M E, [h]e prepared [food], which was cooked, and laid it before

5 Thut-mose III.
6 The Egyptian goddess of war.
7 Nemset might mean a weight or a clamp, to prevent the movement of the Prince of Joppa.
8 If the translation "carrying-poles" is correct, this equipment was issued to the 500 soldiers who carried the baskets (or sacks?), and not to the 200 who were carried. The similarity of the stratagem to that in the tale of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" is obvious.
9 Probably this charioteer had driven the Prince of Joppa out to the parade and was waiting outside the Egyptian camp.
10 The wife of the Prince of Joppa.
11 The Egyptian god whom the Egyptians equated with gods of foreign countries.
12 The terminal point of the quotation is uncertain. It is possible to read: "(You) shall tell her about these two hundred baskets," which are filled with men in fetters and bonds," i.e. delivered to Joppa as prisoners. However, the point of the deception would then be lost. More likely the phrase is a parenthesis of the storyteller: Tell her about these two hundred baskets—supposedly filled with tribute, but actually filled with Egyptian soldiers.
his elder brother. [And he] gave him bread for the fields. And he drove his cattle out to let them feed in the fields. He went along after his cattle, and they would say to him: “The grass [of] such-and-such a place is good,” and he would understand whatever they said and would take them to the place (ii 1) of good grass which they wanted. So the cattle which were before him became very, very fine. They doubled their calving very, very much.

Now at the time of plowing his [elder] brother said to him: "Get a yoke [of oxen] ready for us for plowing, for the fields have come out, and it is fine for plowing. Also come to the fields with seed, for we shall be busy (with) plowing [in] the morning.” So he spoke to him. Then his (5) younger brother did all the things which his elder brother had told him to [do].

Now when it was dawn (and a second) day had come, they went to the fields with their [seed], and they were busy [with] plowing, and [their hearts] were very, very pleased with their activity at the beginning of [their] work.

Now after many [days] after this, they were in the fields and ran short of seed. Then he sent his younger brother, saying: “Go and fetch us seed from the village.” And his younger brother found the wife of his elder brother sitting and doing her hair. Then he said to her: "Get up and give me (some) seed, (iii 1) for my younger brother is waiting for me. Don’t delay!” Then she said to him: “Go and open the bin and take what you want! Don’t make me leave my combing unfinished!” Then the lad went into his stable, and he took a big jar, for he wanted to carry off a lot of seed. So he loaded himself with barley and emmer and came out carrying them.

Then she said to him: "How much (is it) that is on your shoulder?” [And he] said to her: (5) “Three sacks of emmer, two sacks of barley, five in all is what is on your shoulder.” So he spoke to her. Then she [talked with] him, saying "There is [great] strength in you! Now I see your energies every day!” And she wanted to know him as one knows a man.

Then she stood up and took hold of him and said to him: “Come, let’s spend an [hour] sleeping (together)! This will do you good, because I shall make fine clothes for you!” Then the lad [became] like a leopard with [great] rage at the wicked suggestion which she had made to him, and she was very, very much frightened. Then he argued with her, saying: “See here—you are like a mother to me, and your husband is like a father to me! Because—being older than I—he was the one who brought me up. What (iv 1) is this great crime which you have said to me? Don’t say it to me again! And I won’t tell it to a single person, nor will I let it out of my mouth to any man!” And he lifted up his load, and he went to the fields. Then he reached his elder brother, and they were busy with activity (at) their work.

Now at the [time] of evening, then his elder brother left off (to go) to his house. And his younger brother tended his cattle, and [he] loaded himself with everything of the fields, and he took his cattle (5) in front of him, to let them sleep (in) their stable which was in the village.

But the wife of his elder brother was afraid (because of) the suggestion which she had made. Then she took fat and grease, 5 and she became like one who has been criminally beaten, wanting to tell her husband: “It was your younger brother who did the beating!” And her husband left off in the evening, after his custom of every day, and he reached his house, and he found his wife lying down, terribly sick. She did not put water on his hands, after his custom, nor had she lit a light before him, and his house was in darkness, and she lay (there) vomiting. So her husband said to her: “Who has been talking with you?” Then she said to him: “Not one person has been talking with me except your (v 1) younger brother. But when he came [to] take the seed to you he found me sitting alone, and he said to me: ‘Come, let’s spend an hour sleeping (together)! Put on your curls!’ So he spoke to me. But I wouldn’t listen to him: ‘Aren’t I your mother?—for your elder brother is like a father to you!’ So I spoke to him. But he was afraid, and he beat (me), so as not to let me tell you. Now, if you let him live, I’ll kill myself! Look, when he comes, don’t [let him speak], for, if I accuse (him of) this wicked suggestion, he will be ready to do it tomorrow (again)!"

Then his elder brother became (5) like a leopard, and he made his lance sharp, and he put it in his hand. Then his elder (brother) stood behind the door (of) his stable to kill his younger brother when he came back in the evening to put his cattle in the stable.

Now when the sun was setting, he loaded himself (with) all plants of the fields, according to his custom of every day, and he came back. When the first cow came into the stable, she said to her herdsmen: "Here’s your elder brother waiting before you, carrying his lance to kill you! Run away from him!” Then he understood what his first cow had said. And (vi 1) another went in, and she said the same. So he looked under the door of his stable, and he saw the feet of [his] elder brother, as he was waiting behind the door, with his lance in his hand. So he laid his load on the ground, and he started to run away and escape. And his elder brother went after him, carrying his lance.

Then his younger brother prayed to the Re-Harakhti, (5) saying: “O my good lord, thou art he who judges the wicked from the just!” Thereupon the Re heard all his pleas, and the Re made a great (body of) water appear between him and his elder (brother), and it was full of crocodiles. So one of them came to be on one side and the other on the other. And his elder brother struck his hand twice because of his not killing him. Then his younger brother called to him from the

---

4 Sic, but read "elder."
5 It has been suggested that these were to make her omit
6 Sic, but read "my shoulder.” He was carrying more than u bushels.
7 The wig of her festive attire.
and he was judged with her in their presence, and there was agreement among them. And his elder brother was brought to him, and he made him crown prince in his entire land. And he (spent) thirty years as King of Egypt. And he departed from life, and his elder brother stood in his place on the day of death.

IT HAS COME TO A HAPPY ENDING. (Dedicated) to the Λα of the Scribe of the Treasury Qa-gabu, of the Treasury of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—(to) the Scribe Hori, and (to) the Scribe Mer-em-OpeL Done by the Scribe Inena, the master of this writing. As for him who may disagree with this writing, (to) Thoth will be an opponent to him.

THE JOURNEY OF WEN-AMON TO PHOENICIA

When the Egyptian Empire disintegrated, it left a vacuum in its place for a generation or two. Egyptians, Asians, and Africans continued to think in terms of an authority which was no longer real. In the following tale Egypt had already become a "bruised reed" but was continuing to assert traditional expressions of dominance. The Asians were beginning to express their scepticism and their independence of their great neighbor to the south.

The story is almost picturesque in its atmosphere and must be classed as a narrative. Nevertheless, it deals at close range with actual individuals and situations and must have had a basis of fact, here exaggerated by the conscious and unconscious humor of the narrator. It does represent the situation in Hither Asia about 1100 B.C. more tellingly than a document of the historical-propagandistic category could do.

Wen-Amon, an official of the Temple of Amon at Karnak, tells how he was sent to Byblos on the Phoenician coast to procure lumber for the ceremonial barge of the god. Egypt had already split into small states and did not support his mission with adequate purchasing value, credentials, or armed force.

The papyrus, now in the Moscow Museum, comes from el-Hibe in Middle Egypt and dates to the early Twenty-first Dynasty (11th century B.C.), shortly after the events it relates. A transcript of some of the hieratic text may be seen in G. Möllers, Hieratische Lesestücke, 11 (Leipzig, 1927), 29. The original publication, out of his own collection, was by W. Goelmans, in Recueil de travaux . . . , xxi (1899), 74-102. Transcription into hieroglyphic is in A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Stories (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, 1, Brussels, 1932), 61-76. A. Erman published a translation in ZAŠ, xxxv (1900), 1-14, and again in LÄF, 174-85. The present translation profited by photographs of the manuscript. The text is written in the colloquial of Late-Egyptian and is so translated.

YEARS, 4TH MONTH OF THE 3RD SEASON, DAY 16: In the day on which Wen-Amon, the Senior of the Forecourt of the House of Amon, [Lord of the Thrones] of the Two Lands, set out to fetch the woodwork for the great and august barque of Amon-Re, King of the Gods,

3 In the poem on Ramses II's battle at Kadesh on the Orontes, the Valley of the Cedar appears to be in or near the Lebanon. cf. JEA, xix (1923), 128.
4 The mutilation was a self-imposed ordeal to support his oath to the Pharaoh, who was now Bata himself.
5 As in other cases, the Egyptians avoid direct statement of the woman's condemnation to death.
6 Qe-gabu was the master and Inena the pupil, cf. p. 259 below.
7 The god of writing.
8 The year was most likely the fifth of the "Repeating of Births," corresponding to the 23rd of the weak Ramses XI. Ne-su-Re-neb-As and Heri-Hor are treated as effective rulers but not given royal titles. The month dates throughout the papyrus are in obvious confusion; only a drastic revision would provide chronological sense.
which is on [the River and which is named:] "User-het-Amon." On the day when I reached Tanis, the place [where Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded] and Ta-net-Amon were, I gave them the letters of Amon-Re, King of the Gods, and they (5) had them read in their presence. And they said: "Yes, I will do as Amon-Re, King of the Gods, our [lord], has said!" I spent up to the 4th month of the 3rd season in Tanis. And Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded and Ta-net-Amon sent me off with the ship captain Mengetet, and I embarked on the great Syrian sea in the 1st month of the 3rd season, day 1.

I reached Dor, a town of the Tjeker, and Beder, his prince, had 50 loaves of bread, one jug of wine, (10) and one leg of beef brought to me. And a man of my ship ran away and stole one [vessel] of gold, [amounting] to 5 deben, four jars of silver, amounting to 20 deben, and a sack of 11 deben of silver. [Total of what] he [stole]: 5 deben of gold and 31 deben of silver.

I got up in the morning, and I went to the place where the Prince was, and I said to him: "I have been robbed in your harbor. Now you are the prince of this land, and you are its investigator who should look for my silver. Now about this silver—it belongs to Amon-Re, (15) King of the Gods, the lord of the lands; it belongs to Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded; it belongs to Heri-Hor, my lord, and the other great men of Egypt! It belongs to you; it belongs to Weret; it belongs to Mekmer; it belongs to Zakar-Baal, the Prince of Byblos!"

And he said to me: "Whether you are important or whether you are eminent—look here, I do not recognize this accusation which you have made to me! Suppose it had been a thief who belonged to my land who went on your boat and stole your silver, I should have repaid it to you from my treasury, until they had (20) found this thief of yours—whoever he may be. Now about the thief who robbed you—he belongs to you! He belongs to your ship! Spend a few days here visiting me, so that I may look for him."

1 spent nine days moored (in) his harbor, and I went (to) call on him, and I said to him: "Look, you have not found my silver. [Just let] me [go] with the ship captains and with those who go (to) sea!" But he said to me: "Be quiet! ..." (30) I went out of Tyre at the break of dawn—Zakar-Baal, the Prince of Byblos, (30) ship. (31) Found 30 deben of silver in it, and I seized upon it (30) [And I said to the Tjeker: "7 have seized upon] your silver, and it will stay with me [until] you find [my silver or the thief] who stole it! Even though you have not stolen, I shall take it But as for you...

So they went away, and I enjoyed my triumph [in] a tent (on) the shore of the [sea], (in) the harbor of Byblos. And [I hid] Amon-of-the-Road, and I put his property inside him™.

And the [Prince] of Byblos sent to me, saying: "Get [out of (35) my] harbor!" And I sent to him, saying: "Where should I go to? ... If you have a ship] to carry me, have me taken to Egypt again!" So I spent twenty-nine days in his [harbor, while] he [spent] the time sending to me every day to say: "Get out (of) my harbor!"

Now while he was making offering to his gods, the god seized one of his youths and made him possessed. And he said to him: "Bring up [the] god! Bring the messenger who is carrying him! (40) Amon is the one who sent him out! He is the one who made him come!" And while the possessed (youth) was having his frenzy on this night, I had (already) found a ship headed for Egypt and had loaded everything that I had into it. While I was watching for the darkness, thinking that when it descended I would load the god (also), so that no other eye might see him, the harbor master came to me, saying: "Wait until morning—so says the Prince." So I said to him: "Aren’t you the one who spend the time coming to me every day to say: ‘Get out of (my) harbor’? Aren’t you saying ‘Wait’ tonight (45) in order to let the ship which I have found get away—and (then) you will come again (to) say: ‘Go away!’? So he went and told it to the Prince. And the Prince sent to the captain of the ship to say: ‘Wait until morning—so says the Prince!’

When morning came, he sent and brought me up, but the god stayed in the tent where he was, (on) the shore of the sea. And I found him sitting (in) his upper room, with his back turned to a window, so that the waves of the great Syrian sea broke against the back (50) of his head.

So I said to him: "May Amon favor you!" But he said

* Somewhere in this break or in one of those which follow there was the statement of Wen-Amon’s arrival at Byblos (Gebal) on the Phoenician coast.

14 Nearly the same amount as the silver which had been stolen from him, without account of the gold.
13 It is by no means certain that Wen-Amon appropriated this silver from the Tjeker. However, the restoration of the Tjeker in this context helps to explain their vengeful attitude late in the story (6.62 ff.).
15 Or “inside it,” the tent. Just as images of gods led the Egyptian armies into battle, so the emissary of the temple had an idol, a “traveling Amon,” to make his mission successful. The restoration “hid” depends in part on a later statement that Amon-of-the-Road was to be withheld from public view. The divine image would have its daily cult and therefore its cultic apparatus. If the translation above is correct, this apparatus was stored within the hollow image.
16 “A great boy of his great boys,” perhaps a court page, was seized with a prophetic frenzy. The determinative of the word “prophecetically possessed” shows a human figure in violent motion or epileptic convulsion.
to me "How long, up to today, since you came from the place where Amon is?" So I said to him: "Five months and one day up to now." And he said to me: "Well, you're truthful! Where is the letter of Amon which (should be) in your hand? Where is the dispatch of the High Priest of Amon which (should be) in your hand?" And I told him: "I gave them to Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded and Ta-net-Amon." And he was very, very angry, and he said to me: "Now see—neither letters nor dispatches are in your hand! Where is the cedar ship which Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded gave to you? Where is (55) its Syrian crew? Didn't he turn you over to this foreign ship captain to have him kill you and throw you into the sea? (Then) with whom would they have looked for the god? And you too—with whom would they have looked for you too?" So he spoke to me.18

But I said to him: "Wasn't it an Egyptian ship? Now it is Egyptian crews which sail under Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded! He has no Syrian crews." And he said to me: "Aren't there twenty ships here in my harbor which are in commercial relations17 with Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded? As to this Sidon, (ii 1) the other (place) which you have passed, aren't there fifty more ships there which are in commercial relations with Werket-El, and which are drawn up to his house?" And I was silent in this great time.19

And he answered and said to me: "On what business have you come?" So I told him: "I have come after the woodwork for the great and august barque of Amon-Re, King of the Gods. Your father did (it), (5) your grandfather did (it), and you will do it too!" So I spoke to him. But he said to me: "To be sure, they did it! And if you give me (something) for doing it, I will do it! Why, when my people carried out this commission, Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—sent six ships loaded with Egyptian goods, and they unloaded them into their storehouses! You—what is it that you're bringing me—me also?" And he had the journal rolls of his fathers brought, and he had them read out in my presence, and they found a thousand deben of silver and all kinds of things in his scrolls.

(10) So he said to me: "If the ruler of Egypt were the lord of mine, and I were his servant also, he would not have to send silver and gold, saying: 'Carry out the commission of Amon!' There would be no carrying of a royal-gift,20 such as they used to do for my father. As for me—me also—I am not your servant! I am not the servant of him who sent you either! If I cry out to the Lebanon, the heavens open up, and the logs are here lying (on) the shore of the sea! Give (15) me the sails which you have brought to carry your ships which would hold the logs for (Egypt)! Give me the ropes [which] you have brought [to lash the cedar] logs which I am to cut down to make you — which I shall make for you (as) the sails of your boats, and the spars will be (too) heavy and will break, and you will die in the middle of the sea!22 See, Amon made thunder in the sky when he put Seth near him.23 Now when Amon (20) founded all lands, in founding them he founded first the land of Egypt, from which you come; for craftsmanship came out of it, to reach the place where I am, and learning came out of it, to reach the place where I am. What are these silly trips which they have had you make?24

And I said to him: "(That's) not true! What I am on are no 'silly trips' at all! There is no ship upon the River which does not belong to Amon! The sea is his, and the Lebanon is his, of which you say, 'It is mine!' It forms (25) the nursery for User-het-Amon, the lord of [every] ship!25 Why, he spoke—Amon-Re, King of the Gods—and said to Heri-Hor, my master: 'Send me forth!' So he had me come, carrying this great god. But see, you have made this great god spend these twenty-nine days moored (in) your harbor, although you did not know (it). Isn't he here? Isn't he the (same) as he was? You are stationed (here) to carry on the commerce of the Lebanon with Amon, its lord.* As for your saying that the former kings sent silver and gold—suppose that they had life and health; (then) they would not have had such things sent! (30) (But) they had such things sent to your fathers in place of life and health!26 Now as for Amon-Re, King of the Gods—he is the lord of this life and health, and he was the lord of your fathers. They spent their lifetimes making offering to Amon. And you also—you are the servant of Amon! If you say to Amon: 'Yes, I will do (it)!' and you carry out his commission, you will live, you will be prosperous, you will be healthy, and you will be good to your entire land and your people! (But) don't wish for yourself anything belonging to Amon-Re, (King of) the Gods. Why, a lion wants his own property!* Have your secretary brought to me, so that (35) I may send him to Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded and Ta-net-Amon, the officers* whom Amon put in the north of his land, and they will have all kinds of things sent. I shall send him to them to say: "Let it be brought until I shall go (back again) to the south, and I shall (then) have every bit of the debt still (due to you) brought to you." So I spoke to him. 28

So he entrusted my letter to his messenger, and he loaded in the keel, the bow-post, the stern-post, along with four other hewn timbers—seven in all—and he had them taken to Egypt. 29 And in the first month of the second season his messenger who had gone to Egypt came back to me in Syria. And Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded and Ta-net-Amon sent: (40) 4 jars and 1 kₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖₖ₆

38 Wen-Amon proposes that Zakar-Baal appeal to Ne-su-Ba-neb-Ded to advance the payment against Wen-Amon’s ultimate return to Egypt.

39 Zakar-Baal was sufficiently trustful to advance some of the timbers for the barque of Amon.

30 Ta-net-Amon.

31 Seasoning in the mountains.

32 The meaning of the butler’s grim jest is lost to us. The word “lotus-blossom” has the determinative of a lotus leaf and also a hide. It probably was a sunshade of lotus design. At any rate, the shadow of something personal belonging to Zakar-Baal accidentally fell upon Wen-Amon. Zakar-Baal’s butler, whose name should make him an Egyptian, steps in to cut Wen-Amon off from this shadow and maliciously says that it is the shadow of pharaoh of Egypt. Zakar-Baal quaintly tells the butler not to pursue the matter. Perhaps we have to do with the blight of majesty. The butler’s jest has point if the shadow of pharaoh was too intimate and holy to fall upon a commoner. Or see A. L. Oppenheim in BASOR, no. 107 (1947), 7-7.

40 If you use wind or weather as excuses for delay, you will find me just as dangerous.

41 We do not know who this Kha-em-Waset was. This was one of the names of Ramses IX, but is not here written as royal. The same pharaoh had a vizier of this name, which was quite common in Thebes at the time. At any rate, there is an implicit threat in the reference.

42 This should rule out the possibility that Kha-em-Waset was Ramses IX, as Wen-Amon would probably not refer to a pharaoh as “a man.”

43 A libation to help maintain the dead.

44 We cannot be sure whether the irony was conscious or unconscious.

45 Wen-Amon had been away from Egypt for more than a year, seeing two flights of birds southward.

46 Egyptian women who entertained or participated in cult ceremonies in Asia are known, for example, in the inscriptions on the Megiddo ivories (p. 263 below), cf. also p. 246, n.30.
EGYPTIAN MYTHS, TALES, AND MORTUARY TEXTS cares, for tomorrow you shall hear whatever I have to say."

When morning came, he had his assembly summoned, and he stood in their midst, and he said to the Tjeker: "What have you come (for)?" And they said to him: "We have come after the blasted ships which you are sending to Egypt with our opponents!" But he said to them: "I cannot arrest the messenger of Amon inside my land. Let me send him away, and you go after him to arrest him."42

So he loaded me in, and he sent me away from there at the harbor of the sea. And the wind cast me on the land of (75) Alashiya.43 And they of the town came out against me to kill me, but I forced my way through them to the place where Heteb, the princess of the town, was. I met her as she was going out of one house of hers and going into another of hers.

So I greeted her, and I said to the people who were standing near her: "Isn't there one of you who understands Egyptian?" And one of them said: "I understand it." So I said to him: "Tell my lady that I have heard, as far away as Thebes, the place where Amon is, that injustice is done in every town but justice is done in the land of Alashiya.44 Yet injustice is done here every day!"

And she said: "Why, what do you (mean) (8o) by saying it?" So I told her: "If the sea is stormy and the wind casts me on the land where you are, you should not let them take me in charge to kill me. For I am a messenger of Amon. Look here—as for me, they will search for me all the time! As to this crew of the Prince of Byblos which they are bent on killing, won't its lord find ten crews of yours, and he also kill them?"

So she had the people summoned, and they stood (there). And she said to me: "Spend the night..."

(At this point the papyrus breaks off. Since the tale is told in the first person, it is fair to assume that Wen-Amon returned to Egypt to tell his story, in some measure of safety or success.)

THE LEGEND OF THE POSSESSED PRINCESS

This text is a pious forgery of the end of the pharaonic period. The priests of a temple at Karnak wished to enlarge the fame of their god, composed a circumstantial tale of his ancient success as a healer, cast the tale back into the reign of Ramses II, and installed the inscription in their temple. Ramses II had reigned in the 13th century B.C., whereas this text may have come from the 4th or 3rd century B.C. However, it drew successfully on traditional elements of Egypt's past: the far reach of the Egyptian Empire, the reputation of Egyptian physicians in other countries, and the marriage of Ramses II to the daughter of the Hittite king.

40 The word used is the same as Hebrew miked. e.g. Num. 16:2. cf. J. A. Wilson, in JNES, rv (1945) 245.

41 The belabored, belabored ships which you send to Egypt by our companions of quarreling. This either means that Wen-Amon's ships should be smashed up or is an abusive term like English "blasted."

42 Zakar-Baal's apparently cynical abandonment of Wen-Amon's jurisdictional justification, since Wen-Amon's appropriation of Tjeker property apparently took place somewhere between Tyre and Byblos.

43 Egyptian t-resh, probably Cyprus.

44 Diplomatic exaggeration, rather than a quotation.

"The Bentresh Stela" was discovered near the Temple of Amon at Karnak, and is now Louvre C 284. It was published by E. Lederain, Les monuments Egyptiens de la Bibliothèque Nationale (Paris, 1879-81), Fis. xxxvi-xliv. It has been translated by Breasted, AR, iii, §429-47. See also the comments of G. Posener in BIFAO, xxiv (1934), 75-8*.

The Horus: Mighty Bull, Pleasing of Appearances, Enduring of Kingship like Atum; Horus of Gold: Powerful of Arm, Repelling the Nine Bows;4 the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re; Son of Re, of his body: Ramses Meri-Amon, beloved of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, and all the Ennead of Thebes....

Now his majesty was in Naharin4 according to his custom of every year, while the princes of every foreign country were come, bowing down in peace to the glory of his majesty (from) as far away as the marshlands. Their tribute of gold, [silver], lapis lazuli, (5) turquoise, and all the woods of God's Land was on their backs, each one leading his fellow.

Then the Prince of Bekhten4 caused that his tribute be brought, and he set his eldest daughter at the head thereof, giving honor to his majesty and asking [the breath] from him. And the woman was exceedingly pleasing to the heart of his majesty, beyond anything. Then her name was formally fixed as: the Great King's Wife, Neferu-Re.8 When his majesty reached Egypt, she fulfilled every function (of) King's Wife.

It happened that, in the year 23, 2nd month of the third season, day 22,8 while his majesty was in Thebes, the Victorious, the Mistress of Cities, performing the ceremonies of his father Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, at his beautiful Feast of Southern Opet,7 the place of his heart's (desire) of the first times, one came to say to his majesty: "There is a messenger of the Prince of Bekhten who has come bearing much tribute for the King's Wife." Then he was introduced into the presence of his majesty with his tribute. He said, in giving honor to his majesty: "Praise to thee, O Re of the Nine Bows! Behold, we live through thee!"

Then he spoke and kissed the ground before his majesty. He spoke again in the presence of his majesty: "I have come to thee, O sovereign, my lord, on behalf of Bint...

1 Although the two names which follow are those of Ramses II, the composer of this text has ignorantly used names of Thut-mose IV for the preceding names.

2 Perhaps written Naharin here. Mesopotamia, or, for the Egyptians, the region of the Great Bend of the Euphrates.

3 The east in general, the land of the rising sun.

4 Not identifiable and perhaps legendary. This tale puts it at 17 months' journey from Egypt. It has been suggested that this might be a corrupted writing for Bactria.

5 In Ramses IPs 34th year, he married the eldest daughter of the Hittite king; cf. pp. 256-258 below. The Hittite king sent his daughter at the head of abundant tribute. She pleased the king very much, and he fixed her formal name as "the King's Wife Maat-nefru-Re." The similarity of situation and name in our text is more than a coincidence. The priestly editor drew upon a remembered past.

6 The dates in this text are so carefully constructed as to appear circumstantial. See notes 11, 17, and 21 below.

7 Or "in Southern Opet," which was Luxor. This was probably Amon's "Feast of the Valley," which fell in the third season of the year.
resh, the younger sister of the King's Wife Nefru-Re. Sickness has pervaded her body. Grant that thy majesty may send a wise man to see her!"

Then his majesty said: "Bring me the staff of the House of Life and the official body (10) of the Residence." They were ushered in to him immediately. His majesty said: "Behold, ye have been summoned so that ye may hear this matter. Now bring me from amongst you one skilled in his heart, who can write with his fingers." So the Royal Scribe Thut-em-heb came into the presence of his majesty, and his majesty commanded that he go to Bekhten with this messenger.

So the wise man arrived in Bekhten, and he found Bint-resh in the condition of one possessed of spirits. Indeed, he found an enemy with whom to contend. And the Prince of Bekhten again [sent to] his majesty, saying: "O sovereign, my lord, grant that your majesty command that a god be brought [to contend with this spirit.] This message came] to his majesty in the year 26, 1st month of the third season, at the time of the Feast of Amon, when his majesty was in Thebes.

Then his majesty repeated (it) in the presence of Khonsu-in-Thebes-Nefert-hotep, saying: "O my good lord, I act again before thee on behalf of the daughter of the Prince of Bekhten." Then Khonsu-in-Thebes-Nefert-hotep was conducted to Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans, the great god, who expels disease-demons.

Then his majesty said before Khonsu-in-Thebes-Nefert-hotep: "O my good lord, if thou turnest thy face toward Khonsu-(i5)the-Carrier-out-of-Plans, the great god, who expels disease-demons, he will be made to go to Bekhten." (There was) very much nodding. Then his majesty said: "Set thy magical protection with him, that I may make his majesty go to Bekhten to save the daughter of the Prince of Bekhten." (There was) very much nodding of the head of Khonsu-in-Thebes-Nefert-hotep. Then he made magical protection for Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes four times. His majesty commanded that Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes be taken to a great barque, five river-boats, and many chariots and horses (of) the west and the east.

This god arrived in Bekhten in the completion of one year and five months. Then the Prince of Bekhten came with his army and his officials, before Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans, and he placed himself upon his belly, saying: "Thou hast come to us. Mayest thou be merciful to us, by the command of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re!" Then this god went to the place where Bint-resh was. Then he made magical protection for the daughter of the Prince of Bekhten, that she might become well immediately.

Then this spirit which was with her said in the presence of Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes: "Welcome, O great god who expels disease-demons! Bekhten is thy home, its people are thy slaves, and I am thy slave! (20) I shall go to the place from which I came, in order to set thy heart at rest about that for which thou hast come. But may thy majesty command to celebrate a holiday with me and with the Prince of Bekhten." Then this god nodded to his prophet, saying: "Let the Prince of Bekhten make a great offering in the presence of this spirit." Now while these things which Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes did with the spirit were (taking place), the Prince of Bekhten was waiting with his soldiers, and he was very frightened. Then he made a great offering in the presence of Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes and this spirit, the Prince of Bekhten celebrating a holiday on their behalf. Then the spirit went peacefully to the place which he wished, by the command of Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes, while the Prince of Bekhten was rejoicing very much, together with every man who was in Bekhten.

Then he schemed with his heart, saying: "I will cause this god to stay here in Bekhten. I will not let him go (back) to Egypt." Then this god tarried for three years and nine months in Bekhten. Then, while the Prince of Bekhten was sleeping on his bed, he saw this god coming to him, outside of his shrine. He was a falcon of gold, and he flew (up) to the sky and (off) to Egypt. And (25) he awoke in a panic. Then he said to the... prophet of Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes: "This god is (still) here with us. He should go (back) to Egypt. So let his chariot go to Egypt." Then the Prince of Bekhten let this god proceed to Egypt, after he had been given very much tribute of every good thing, and very many soldiers and horses.

They arrived successfully in Thebes. Then Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes went to the House of Khonsu-in-Thebes-Nefer-hotep, to set the tribute of every good thing which the Prince of Bekhten had given him before Khonsu-in-Thebes-Nefer-hotep, (but) without delivering everything thereof into his House. Khonsu-the-Carrier-out-of-Plans-in-Thebes arrived successfully at his (own) House in the year 33, 2nd month of the second season, day 19, of the Prince of Bekhten let this god proceed to Egypt, after the Prince of Bekhten had given him good thing which the Prince of Bekhten had given him for whom "given-life" is made, like Re forever.

THE TRADITION OF SEVEN LEAN YEARS IN EGYPT

The inscription is carved on a rock on the island of Siheil near the First Cataract. It was published by H. K. Brugsch, Die biblischen sieben Jahre der Hungerstern (Leipzig, 1891), and by I. Vandier, La famine dans V&gypte ancienne (Cairo, 1936), 192-99. Photographs were also used for the following translation.

Other heroic tales given below are the Story of Apophis and the primeval hillock of earth, the throne of Re, (to see) if some guidance be in them. So he went, and he returned to me immediately, that he might instruct me on the inundation of the Nile, and everything about which they had written. He uncovered for me the hidden spells thereof, to which the ancestors had taken (their) way, without their equal among kings since the limits of time. He said to me: "There is a city in the midst of the waters [from which] the Nile rises, named Elephantine. It is the Beginning of the Beginning, the Beginning Name, (facing) toward Wawat®. It is the joining of the land, the primeval hillock of earth, the throne of Re, when he reckons to cast life beside everybody. 'Pleasant of Life' is the name of its dwelling. 'The Two Caverns' is the name of the water; they are the two breasts which pour 15 The chief Khonsu did not receive all the "tribute." The entrepreneur Khonsu retained his commission.

16 The sojourn in Bekhten had been 45 months. According to n.17 above, the round trip might take 34 months. The resultant 79 months is within 2 months of the 81 months between the present date and that against n.11 above.

17 These texts have been gathered in Vandier, op. cit. For example, on his p. 105, he gives a previously unpublished text from the First Intermediate Period (23rd-22nd century B.C.) from a tomb some distance south of Thebes. When the entire Upper Egypt was dying because of hunger, with every man eating his (own) children, I never allowed death to occur from hunger in this nome. I gave a loan of grain to Upper Egypt. . . . Moreover, I kept alive the domain of Elephantine and kept alive the native-nation in these years, after the towns of Hefat and Hor-mer had been satisfied. He took care of his home districts first.

18 Vandier, op. cit., 40-42, reviews the arguments for dating the writing of the text to Ptolemy X Soter II on the basis of much older documents.

8 To Madir, the Governor at Elephantine.

4 Or: "in a pause of seven years."

5 "Found empty" may be used of the desolation of buildings. However, it is particularly common as a scerbal notation to mark a lacuna in an older text. Its appearance here might be raised as an argument that our inscription derived from an earlier and damaged original.

8 "Hi-em-hotep was the famed minister of Djoser, whose reputation for wisdom (cf. pp. 432, n.4; 467, n.4 below) later brought him deification. On his career, see K. Sethe, Imhotep, der Asklepios der Aegypter (Untersuch, n. Leipzig, 1902), 93-118.

9 Thoth of Hermopolis, the god of wisdom and of priesdy lore.

10 For this passage see A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxiv (1938), 166. The House of Life was the scriptorium in which the sacred and magic books were kept. 'The Souls of Re,' or emantations from the creator-god, were the books themselves.

11 As the southernmost of Egyptian administrative districts, Elephantine was the "Nome of the Beginning." Wawat was that part of Nubia immediately south of the First Cataract.

12 In a context which has many uncertainties, it is certain that Elephantine is likened to the mound on which creation took place; see p. 4, n.7.
forth all good things. It is the couch of the Nile, in which he becomes young (again). He fecundates (the land) by mounting as the male, the bull, to the female; he renews (his) virility, assuaging his desire. He rushes twenty-eight cubits (high at Elephantine); he hastens at Diospolis seven cubits (high). Khnum is there as a god “...”.

(18) ... As I slept in life and satisfaction, I discovered the god standing over against me. I offer to thee thy west in Manu and thy east (in) Iteers..."

The regions of Horus serve thee, and the regions of Seth are Atum, thy belly is Atum, thy back is Atum, thy rear is Atum, thy legs are Atum, and thy face is Anubis.

Then I awoke quickly, my heart cutting off weariness. I made this decree beside my father Khnum:"

"An offering which the King gives to Khnum, the Lord of the Cataract Region, Who Presides over Nubia, in recompense for these things which thou wilt do for me:

"I offer to thee thy west in Manu and thy east (in) Bakhu, from Elephantine as far as [Takompso], for twelve iters on the east and west, whether arable land or desert or river in every part of these iters..."

The stretch of 12 iters from Elephantine south to a place called Takompso constituted the Dade[architos] known from the Greek writers. Unfortunately, the location of Takompso and the length of the iter at the time in question are unknown. See Sethe, op.cit., 59 ff. In Egyptian mythology the Nile emerged from two underground caverns at Elephantine.

The goddess of the harvest.

These two extracts from the Pyramid Texts insist upon the immortality of the pharaoh. The device used is to identify him with the gods, whose death would not come into question, particularly with Osiris and his son Horus.

These two texts are carved inside the pyramids of Unis of the Fifth Dynasty and Pepi II of the Sixth Dynasty (25th and 24th centuries B.C.). Originally used for the pharaoh only, the texts were extended to queens by the end of the Sixth Dynasty and to worthy nonroyal persons by the Eleventh-Twelfth Dynasties (21st century B.C. and after). The pyramids of Unis and Pepi II are at Sakkarah. The material used in these two utterances is demonstrably much older than the Fifth Dynasty, as indicated by the archaic linguistic usages and—less certainly—by mythological references.

The texts are published in K. Sethe, Die altägyptischen Pyramidentexte, 1 (Leipzig, 1908), and Uebersetzung und Kommentar zu den altägyptischen Pyramidentexten, 1, (Gliickstadt und Hamburg, undated). Extract a, which is Pyramid Utterance 213, will be found as §104-35; extract b, from Utterance 219, as §167-93.

1. Thus as Horus, the son of Osiris.
2. The dead.
3. The deceased is here the god of the dead, Anubis, who is depicted as jackal-headed on a human body. Thus here the parts of the body other than the head are equated with the god Atum, who is depicted in human form.
4. Lower and Upper Egypt.
5. The deceased is introduced to Atum as his (great-grand)son Osiris. Thus the deceased shares the immortality of Osiris.
6. In successive stanzas, the deceased is then introduced as Osiris to Shu, Tefnut, Geb, Nut, Isis, Seth, Nephthys, Thoth, Horus, the Great Ennead, the Little Ennead, and Nun.[u5]. The language is almost the same in every case, except for such variants as relationship would require. For example, it would be absurd to state that Seth, who had murdered Osiris, had caused him to live on. In that case the address therefore runs: “O Seth, the one here is that brother of thine, Osiris, who has been caused to survive and to live on, that he might punish thee.” Following the addresses to the several gods, the text proceeds to enunciate the immortality of Osiris in each of several cult-centers.

Mortuary Texts: Life after Death

THE CONQUEST OF DEATH

O King Unis, thou hast not at all departed dead, thou hast departed living! For thou sittest upon the throne of Osiris, with thy scepter in thy hand, that thou mightest give command to the living, and with the grip of thy wand in thy hand, that thou mightest give command to those secret of place. Thy arm is Atum, thy shoulders are Atum, thy belly is Atum, thy back is Atum, thy rear is Atum, thy legs are Atum, and thy face is Anubis.

The regions of Horus serve thee, and the regions of Seth serve thee.

What thou hast eaten is an eye. Thy belly is rounded out with it. Thy son Horus leaves it for thee, that thou

Thus as Horus, the son of Osiris.

The dead.

The deceased is here the god of the dead, Anubis, who is depicted as jackal-headed on a human body. Thus here the parts of the body other than the head are equated with the god Atum, who is depicted in human form.

Lower and Upper Egypt.

The deceased is introduced to Atum as his (great-grand)son Osiris. Thus the deceased shares the immortality of Osiris.

In successive stanzas, the deceased is then introduced as Osiris to Shu, Tefnut, Geb, Nut, Isis, Seth, Nephthys, Thoth, Horus, the Great Ennead, the Little Ennead, and Nun.[u5]. The language is almost the same in every case, except for such variants as relationship would require. For example, it would be absurd to state that Seth, who had murdered Osiris, had caused him to live on. In that case the address therefore runs: “O Seth, the one here is that brother of thine, Osiris, who has been caused to survive and to live on, that he might punish thee.” Following the addresses to the several gods, the text proceeds to enunciate the immortality of Osiris in each of several cult-centers.
mayest live on it? He lives—this King Unis lives. He does not die—this King Unis does not perish. He is not judged—this King Unis is not judged. He judges—this King Unis judges.

Thy body is the body of this King Unis. Thy flesh is the flesh of this King Unis. Thy bones are the bones of this King Unis. When thou departest, this King Unis departeth. When this King Unis departeth, thou departest.

THE FIELDS OF PARADISE

As the sun went to rest every night and was gloriously reborn every morning, so also a mortal left this world but was reborn for eternal happiness in the other world. The eastern horizon of heaven was thus an analogue for entry into paradise. The following text gives a few of the wonders of that home of the blessed.

The spell first occurs in the coffins of the Middle Kingdom. The hieroglyphic text is given by A. de Buck, The Egyptian Coffin Texts, h (O/P xix, Chicago, 1938), Spell 159, pp. 363 ff. It later became the 109th chapter of the Book of the Dead and is studied by K. Sethe et al. in ZAes, LIX (1924), 1 ff. (cf. also the 107th and 149th chapters and the vignette to the 110th chapter).①

Title

GOING IN AND OUT OF THE EASTERN DOORS OF HEAVEN AMONG THE FOLLOWERS OF RE. I KNOW THE EASTERN SOULS.①

The Place of Rebirth

I know that central door from which Re issues in the east. Its south is the pool of |ha-h|Tës, in the place where Re sails with the breeze; its north is the waters of ro-fowl, in the place where Re sails with rowing.② I am the keeper of the halyard in the boat of the god; I am the keeper of the halyard in the boat of the god; I am the oarsman who does not weary in the barque of Re.③

I know those two sycamores of turquoise(-green) between which Re comes forth, the two which came from the sowing of Shu at every eastern door at which Re arises.④

I know that Field of Reeds of Re.⑤ The wall which is around it is of metal. The height of its barley is four cubits; its beard is one cubit, and its stalk is three cubits.⑥ Its emmer is seven cubits; its beard is two cubits, and its stalk is five cubits.⑦ It is the horizon-dwellers, nine cubits in height,⑧ who reap it, by the side of the Eastern Souls.⑨

Conclusion

I KNOW THE EASTERN SOULS. THEY ARE HAR-AKHTI, THE KHURER-CALF, AND THE MORNING STAR."

THE GOOD FORTUNE OF THE DEAD

The Egyptians looked upon death as a continuation of this life and a fulfillment of the good things of this life. The following text sets forth the quietude which is the happy lot of the dead.

Carved on the wall of the tomb of Nefer-hotep at Thebes (Tomb No. 50) and dated to the reign of Hor-em-heb (about 1349-1319 B.C.). From the same tomb comes the Song of the Harper (p. 467 below). Published by A. H. Gardiner in PSBA, xxxv (1913), 165-70, and by M. Lichtheim, with translation and bibliography, in JNES, iv (1945), 197-98, 212. The setting and significance of the text are discussed by Gardiner, The Attitude of the Ancient Egyptians to Death and the Dead (Cambridge, 1935), 32.

The Singer with the Harp of the God's Father of Amon, Nefer-hotep, the triumphant, said:

All ye excellent nobles, the Ennead of the Mistress of Life,① Hear ye how praises are made to the God's Father, With homage paid to the excellent noble's efficacious soul, Now that he is a god living forever, Magnified in the West. May they become a remembrance for the future, For all who come to pass by.

I have heard those songs which are in the ancient tombs And what they tell in magnifying (life) on earth And in belittling the necropolis. Why is it that such is done to the land of eternity, The right and true, without terrors? Quarreling is its abomination, And there is no one who arrays himself against his fellow.

This land which has no opponent—

① For the claim of acquaintance with otherworldly forces, cf. pp. 10, 12a, n. 1.
② The 17th chapter of the Book of the Dead (H. Grapow, Religion aus dem Altertum [Urf., v], 28) mentions this door, with explanatory glosses: "I reach the land of the horizon-dwellers; I go forth from the august door. What is it? It is the Field of Reeds, which brings forth provisions for the gods who are about the shrine (of the sun-god). Further, as for that 'august door,' it is the door of the liftings of (die air-god) Shu. Another version: it is the door of the Underworld. Another version: it is the leaves of the door through which my father Atum proceeds, when he proceeds to the eastern horizon of heaven."③
③ The door has pleasant waters, where birds delight to be. On the Nile, movement south or upstream uses the prevailing north wind and a raised sail, movement north or downstream uses the current and the aid of oars. So also, in paradise the waters must be the same as in this world.
④ Whether the movement is with the breeze or by rowing, the deceased has a useful function in the sun barque.
⑤ The Elysian Fields of the Egyptians included a se`het iaru "Field of Reeds" and a se`het hotep "Field of Offerings." See n.10 below.
⑥ Almost 7 feet tall, of which the ear was about 20 inches long.
⑦ About 12 feet tall, of which the ear was about 41 inches long.
⑧ Over 15 feet tall. We are not clear about the "horizon-dwellers." Some later texts change them from ak`iiti to ak`hu "effective personalities," that is, the blessed dead.
⑨ The vignette to the 110th chapter of the Book of the Dead shows the fields of paradise. For example, in the Papyrus of Ani (British Museum 10470; E. A. W. Budge, The Book of the Dead [London 1898], Translation Volume, PL opp. p. 179.), fields surrounded and cut by waterways are shown, with the deceased plowing, reaping, and threshing. Part of this area is labeled as the "Field of Reeds" and as the "place of the effective personalities, whose length is 7 cubits; the barley is of 3 cubits. It is the noble dead who reap it.
⑩ Har-akhti, that is, Horus of the (Morning) Horizon, and the Morning Star are obviously in place in the east. We know little about the |hurer-calf, possibly a newborn suckling calf.
① The song is addressed to the honored dead and the gods of the necropolis.
All our kinsfolk rest in it since the first day of time. They who are to be, for millions of millions, Will all have come to it. There exists none who may tarry in the land of Egypt; There is not one who fails to reach thy place.

As for the duration of what is done on earth, It is a kind of a dream; (But) they say: "Welcome, safe and sound!" To him who reaches the West.

THE PROTESTATION OF GUILTLESSNESS

Among the literary remains from ancient Egypt, a large proportion of the texts seeks to secure eternal happiness for the deceased individual. Under the Empire and later, such mortuary texts were normally on papyrus and have been gathered together by modern scholars under the title, the "Book of the Dead." A common part of this collection of miscellaneous texts envisages the deceased as testifying before a posthumous court and denying any guilt in various crimes and shortcomings. This so-called "negative confession" is one of our few sources for Egyptian social law. Its negative protestations must be studied together with the positive attitudes in the wisdom literature (pp. 412-425).

The following translation takes extracts from a portion of the 129th chapter of the Book of the Dead as gathered by Ch. Maystre, Les déclarations d’innocence (Livre des morts, chapitre 25), (Cairo, 1937). Maystre’s texts run from the Eighteenth to the Twenty-first Dynasty (1550-950 B.C.).

Many other texts here translated were employed for mortuary purposes, e.g., pp. 3-4, 10-11, 11-12, etc. For a funerary ritual, see p. 325. For the judgment after death, see p. 415. For attitudes toward death, see pp. 412-414, 467. For a brief description of an Egyptian funeral, see pp. 20-21.

What is said on reaching the Broad-Hall of the Two Justices, absolving X of every sin which he has committed, and seeing the faces of the gods:

Hail to thee, O great god, lord of the Two Justices! I have come to thee, my lord, I have been brought that I might see thy beauty. I know thee; I know thy name/1 I have come to thee; I have been brought that

(Ai) I have not committed evil against men.

(A2) I have not mistreated cattle.

(A3) I have not committed sin in the place of truth.

(A4) I have not known that which is not.

(A5) I have not seen evil...

(A7) My name has not reached the Master of the Barque.

(A8) I have not blasphemed a god.

(A9) I have not done violence to a poor man.

(A10) I have not done that which the gods abominate.

(A11) I have not defamed a slave to his superior.

(A12) I have not made (anyone) sick.

(A13) I have not made (anyone) weep.

(A14) I have not killed.

(A15) I have given no order to a killer.

(A16) I have not caused anyone suffering.

(A17) I have not cut down on the food-income in the temples.

(A18) I have not damaged the bread of the gods.

(A19) I have not taken the loaves of the blessed (dead).

(A20) I have not had sexual relations with a boy.

(A21) I have not defiled myself.

(A22) I have neither increased or diminished the grain-measure.

(A23) I have not diminished the aroura

(A24) I have not falsified a half-aroura of land.

(A25) I have not added to the weight of the balance.

(A26) I have not weakened the plummet of the scales.

(A27) I have not taken milk from the mouths of children.

(A28) I have not driven cattle away from their pasturage.

(A29) I have not snared the birds of the gods.

(A30) I have not caught fish in their marshes.

(A31) I have not held up the water in its season.

(A32) I have not built a dam against running water.

(A33) I have not quenched a fire at its (proper) time.

(A34) I have not neglected the (appointed) times and their meat-offerings.

(A35) I have not driven away the cattle of the god’s property.

(A36) I have not stopped a god on his procession.

I am pure!--four times.

My purity is the purity of that great benu-bird which is in Herakleopolis, because I am really that nose of the Lord of Breath, who makes all men to live, on that day of filling out the Eye (of Horus) in Heliopolis, in the second month of the second season, the last day, in the presence of the lord of this land. I am the one who has seen the filling out of the...
Eye in Heliopolis. Evil will never happen to me in this land or in this Broad-Hall of the Two Justices, because I know the names of these gods who are in it, the followers of the great god.\(^{18}\)

(B1) O Wide-of-Stride, who comes forth from Heliopolis, I have not committed evil.

(B2) O Embracer-of-Fire, who comes forth from Babylon,\(^{91}\) have not stolen.

(B3) O Nosey, who comes forth from Hermopolis, I have not been covetous.

(B4) O Swallower-of-Shadow, who comes forth from the pit, I have not robbed.

(B5) O Dangerous-of-Face, who came forth from Rosemen, I have not killed men.

(B6) O Ruti, who comes forth from heaven, I have not damaged the grain-measure.

(B7) O His-Eyes-are-of-Flint, who comes forth from the shrine, I have not caused crookedness.

(B8) O Flamer, who comes forth backward, I have not stolen the property of a god.

(B9) O Breaker-of-Bones, who comes forth from Herakleopolis, I have not told lies.

(B10) O Commander-of-Fire, who comes forth from Memphis, I have not taken away food.

(B11) O Dweller-in-the-Pit, who comes forth from the west, I have not been contentious.

(B12) O White-of-Teeth, who comes forth from the Faiyum, I have not trespassed.

(B13) O Eater-of-Blood, who comes forth from the execution-block, I have not slain the catde of the god.

(B14) O Eater-of-Entrails, who comes forth from the Thirty,\(^{71}\) have not practised usury.

(B15) O Lord-of-Justice, who comes forth from Ma'att, I have not stolen the bread-ration.

(B16) O Wanderer, who comes forth from Busiris, I have not gossiped.

(B17) O Aadu, who comes forth from Heliopolis, my mouth has not gone (on unchecked).

(B18) O D/W/s-/-serpent, who comes forth from Bu- siris, I have not argued with some one summoned because of his property.

(B19) O Wamenti-serpent, who comes forth from the place of judgment, I have not committed adultery.\(^{21}\)

(B20) O Maat-Intef, who comes forth from the Temple of Min, I have not defiled myself.

(B21) O Superior-of-the-Nobles, who comes forth from Inau, I have not caused terror.

(B22) O Wrecker, who comes forth from the Scute Nome, I have not trespassed.

(B23) O Mischief-Maker, who comes forth from the sanctuary, I have not been (over) heated.

(B24) O Child, who comes forth from the Heliopolite Nome, I have not been unresponsive to a matter of justice.

(B25) O Ser-\(\text{\`h}er\)u, who comes forth from Wensi, I have not been quarrelsome.

(B26) O Bastet, who comes forth from the sanctum, I have not winked.\(^{22}\)

(B27) O His-Face-Behind-Him, who comes forth from Tep-het-djat, I have not been perverted; I have not had sexual relations with a boy.

(B28) O Hot-of-Leg, who comes forth from the twilight, I have not swallowed my heart.\(^{28}\)

(B29) O Dark-One, who comes forth from the darkness, I have not been abusive.

(B30) O Bringer-of-His-Peace, who comes forth from Sais, I have not been (over)-energetic.

(B31) O Lord-of-Faces, who comes forth from the Heroonpolite Nome, my heart has not been hasty.

(B32) O Plan-Maker, who comes forth from Utenet, I have not transgressed my color; I have not washed the god.\(^{24}\)

(B33) O Lord-of-Horns, who comes forth from Siat, my voice is not (too) much about matters.

(B34) O Nefer-tem, who comes forth from Memphis, I have not committed sins; I have not done evil.

(B35) O Tem-sepy who comes forth from Busiris, I have not been abusive against a king.

(B36) O Acting-with-His-Heart, who comes forth from Tjebu, I have not waded in water.\(^{28}\)

(B37) O Flowing-One, who comes forth from Nun,\(^{28}\) my voice has not been loud.

(B38) O Commander-of-the-People, who comes forth from his shrine, I have not been abusive against a god.

(B39) O Neheb-neferty who comes forth from the Salt Nome, I have never made puffings-up.\(^{27}\)

(B40) O Neheb-khiy who comes forth from the town, I have not made discriminations for myself.

(B41) O High-of-Head serpent, who comes forth from the cavern, my portion has not been (too) large, not even in my (own) property.

(B42) O In-af serpent, who comes forth from the cemetery, I have not blasphemed against my local god.

\(\text{WORDS TO BE SPOKEN BY X:}\)\(^{28}\)

Hail to you, ye gods who are in this Broad-Hall of the Two Justices! I know you; I know your names. I shall not fall for dread of you. Ye have not reported guilt of mine up to this god in whose retinue ye are; no deed of mine has come from you. Ye have spoken truth about me in the presence of the All-Lord, because I acted justly in Egypt. I have not been abusive to a god. No deed of mine has come from a king who is in his day.

Hail to you who are in the Broad-Hall of the Two \(^{18}\) In the B part of this protestation, which follows, the deceased addresses each of the 42 divine jurors by name. Some of the names defy translation; some show power or Rightfulness, but many apply to the judgment scene rather indifferently.

\(^{91}\) Egyptian Babylon, near modern Cairo.

\(^{71}\) A law court of Egyptian magistrates in this world.

\(^{21}\) "I have not had sexual relations with the wife of (another) male."

\(^{22}\) Winked at injustice?

\(^{23}\) Have not been evasive, over-secret?

\(^{24}\) Meaning of both parts obscure.

\(^{25}\) An idiom?

\(^{26}\) The abysmal waters.

\(^{27}\) An idiom?

\(^{28}\) X stands for the name and title of the deceased. One text has: “those words which follow (the hearing in) the Broad-Hall of the Two Justices.” From here on the translation is based on one manuscript; see n.1 above.
Justice, who have no deceit in your bodies, who live on truth and who eat of truth in the presence of Horus, who is in his sun disc. May ye rescue me from Babi, who lives on the entrails of elders on that day of the great reckoning. Behold me—I have come to you without sin, without guilt, without evil, without a witness (against me), without one against whom I have taken action. I live on truth, and I eat of truth. I have done that which men said and that with which gods are content. I have satisfied a god with that which he desires. I have given bread to the hungry, clothing to the naked, and a ferry-boat to him who was marooned. Justices, who are in his sun disc. May ye rescue me from him who was marooned.

"Welcome, welcome, in peace!" is said by those who see me here to be announced. "What is thy condition?" "I am pure of sin. I have protected myself from the strife of those who are in (40) their days. I am not among them. "Then to whom shall I announce thee? I shall announce thee to (him whose) ceiling is of fire, whose walls are living serpents, and whose pavement is water. Who is he?" "He is Osiris." "Then go thou. Behold, thou art announced. Thy bread is the Restored Eye; thy beer is the Restored Eye. Thou hast invocation-offerings upon earth in the Restored Eye." So spoke Osiris to X, the deceased.

Instructions for the Use of the Spell

To be done in conformance with what takes place in this Broad-Hall of the Two Justices. This spell is to be recited when one is clean and pure, clothed in (fresh) garments, shod with white sandals, painted with stibium, and anointed with myrrh, to whom cattle, fowl, incense, bread, beer, and vegetables have been offered. Then make thou this text in writing on a clean pavement with ochre smeared with (50) earth upon which pigs and (other) small cattle have not trodden. As for him on whose behalf this book is made, he shall be prosperous and his children shall be prosperous, without greed, because he shall be a trusted man of the king and his courtiers. Loaves, jars, bread, and joints of meat shall be given to him from the altar of the great god. He cannot be held back at any door of the west, (but) he shall be ushered in with the Kings of Upper and Lower Egypt, and he shall be in the retinue of Osiris.

Right and true a million times.

of the door demand that he give their magical names before he passes through. Then the pavement of the hall will not let him tread upon it until he tells the magical names of his two treading feet. He passes these information tests successfully, and then is confronted by the doorkeeper.

On Thoth as the interpreter, or Master of Protocol, see K. Sethe in Studies Presented to F. Ll. Griffith (London, 1932), 433.

"On Thoth as the interpreter, or Master of Protocol, see K. Sethe in Studies Presented to F. Ll. Griffith (London, 1932), 433.

"On Thoth as the interpreter, or Master of Protocol, see K. Sethe in Studies Presented to F. Ll. Griffith (London, 1932), 433."
Enki and Ninhursag:
a Paradise Myth

"Enki and Ninhursag" is one of the best preserved of the Sumerian myths uncovered to date. The story it tells is well nigh complete and at least on the surface most of the details of its rather complicated plot are reasonably intelligible. Unfortunately, the main purpose of the myth as a whole is by no means less; it adds much that is significant for the Near Eastern mythological horizon, and perhaps even provides a number of interesting parallels to the motifs of the biblical paradise story as a "land" and a "city," where the action of the story takes place.

Probably neither sickness nor death (lines 14-30). It is a city where Man, named Ninkurra (lines 89-108). Enki then impregnates his granddaughter Ninkurra, and the latter gives birth to the goddess Uttu (lines 109-127). Enki is now evidently prepared to impregnate his great-granddaughter Uttu when Ninhursag, the great-grandmother, intervenes and offers the latter some pertinent advice. Unfortunately the relevant passage (lines 128-152) is almost completely destroyed. But to judge from the passage that follows (lines 153-185) Uttu may have been instructed by Ninhursag not to cohabit with Enki until and unless he brings her a gift of cucumbers, apples, and grapes. That be as it may, we next see Enki obtain the cucumbers, apples, and grapes from a gardener who probably brought them to him in gratitude for his watering the dikes, ditches, and uncultivated places (lines 153-167). Enki brings them to Uttu as a gift, and the latter now joyfully receives his advances and cohabits with him (lines 165-185).

But of this union probably no new goddess is born. Instead, Ninhursag seems to utilize Enki's semen in a way which leads to the sprouting of eight different plants: the "tree"-plant, the "honey"-plant, the roadweed-plant, the apasar-plant, the Morn-plant, the caper-plant, a plant whose name is illegible, and the cassia-plant (lines 186-193). And now Enki commits a sinful deed. As he looked about him in the marshland, he noticed the eight plants and probably decided to determine their fate. But first, it seems, he had to know their heart, that is, he probably had to taste what they were like. And so his messenger, the two-faced god Isimud, plucks each of the eight plants for Enki, and the latter eats them one by one (lines 196-217). Angered by this act, Ninhursag, the goddess who is so largely responsible for their first coming into existence, utters a curse against Enki, saying that until he dies she will not look upon him with the "eye of life." And, as good as her word, she immediately disappears.

Whereupon, Enki no doubt begins to pine away, and the Anunnaki, the "great" but nameless Sumerian gods, sit in the dust. At this point the fox comes to the rescue; he asks Enil, the leader of the Sumerian pantheon, what would be his reward if he brought Ninhursag back to the gods. Enll names his reward, and the fox, sure enough, succeeds in some way in having Ninhursag return to the gods in Dilmun (lines 221-249). Ninhursag then seats the dying Enki by her vulva, and asks where he feels pain. Enki names an organ of the body which hurts him, and Ninhursag then informs him that she has caused a certain deity to be born for him, the implication being that the birth of the deity will result in the healing of the sick member. All in all, Ninhursag repeats the question eight times. Each time Enki names an organ of the body which pains him, and in each case Ninhursag announces the birth of a corresponding deity (lines 250-268). Finally, probably at the request of Ninhursag, Enki decreed the fate of the newborn deities, the last of whom, Enshag by name, is destined to be "the lord of Dilmun."

The text of "Enki and Ninhursag" is based primarily on a fairly well-preserved six-column tablet excavated in Nippur and
"[The place] is [pure]..., [the land] Dilmun is pure; [The land Dilmun] is [pure]..., ... the [la]od [D][ilmun] is pure; The land Dilmun is pure, the land Dilmun is clean; The land Dilmun is clean, the land Dilmun is most bright. Who had lain by himself in Dilmun— The place, after Enki had lain with his wife, That place is clean, that place is most bright; (Who had lain) by himself (in Dilmun)— The place, (after) Enki (had lain) by Ninsikilla, That place is clean, (that place is bright). In Dilmun the raven utters no cries. The ittidu-bird" utters not the cry of the ittidu-bird, The lion, kills not, The wolf snatches not the lamb, Unknown is the kid-devouring wild dog., Unknown is the grain-devouring..., [Unknown] is the... widow, The bird on high... s not its..., The dove droops not the head, The sick-eyed says not "I am sick-eyed," The sick-headed (says) not "I am sick-headed," Its... old woman (says) not "I am an old woman," Its old man (says) not "I am an old man," Unbathed is the maid, no sparkling water is poured in the city, Who crosses the river utters n o . . . , The wailing priest walks not round about him, The singer utters no wail, By the side of the city he (utters) no lament.

Ninsikilla says to her father20 Enki:

"The city thou hast given, the city thou hast given, thy..., Dilmun, the city thou hast given, the city (thou hast given, thy ...), Has not o f the river; Dilmun, the city thou hast given, the city (thou hast given, thy...), ...

... furrowed fields (and) farms,21 ...

..."

[Father Enki answers Ninsikilla, his daughter]: ["Let Utu standing in heaven, From the ..., the breast of his...], [From the... of Nanna],23 [From the 'mouth whence issues the water of the earth,' bring thee sweet water from the earth]; Let him bring up the water into thy large..., Let him make thy city drink from it the waters of abundance, (Let him make) Dilmun (drink from it) the waters of abundance.

Let thy well of bitter water become a well of sweet water, [Let thy furrowed fields (and) farms bear thee grain],24 Let thy city become the bank-quay5 house of the land,25 (50)

Now Utu is a ... " Utu standing in heaven, From the..., the breast of his..., From the... of Nanna, From the "mouth whence issues the water of the earth," brought her sweet water from the earth; He brings up the water into her large... makes her city drink from it the waters of abundance, Makes Dilmun (drink from it) the waters of ab(undance), Her well of bitter water, verily it is become a well of sweet water, Her furrowed fields (and) farms bore her grain, Her city, verily it is become the bank-quay house of the land Dilmun, (verily it is become) the bankr(quay) house (of the land), Now Utu is..., verily it was so.

Who is alone, before the wise Nintu, the mother of the land,28
Enki (before) the wise Nintu, (the mother of the land),
Causes his phallus to water the dikes,²⁹
Causes his phallus to submerge the reeds, Verily causes his phallus to³⁰..., Thereupon he said, "Let no one walk in the marshland," (70) Thereupon Enki said: ("Let no one walk in the marshland.")³¹
He swore by the life of Anu.³²
His... of the marshland,... 0/ the marshland,
Enki... d his semen of Damgalnunna,³³
Poured the semen in the womb of Ninhursag.
She took the semen into the womb, the semen of Enki.
One day being her one month,
Two days being her two months,
Three days being her three months,
Four days being her four months,
Five days (being her five months),
Nine [days] being her nine months, the months of
One day being her one month,
Two days being her two months,
Three days being her three months,
Four days being her four months,
Five days (being her five months),
Six days (being her six months),
Seven days (being her seven months),
Eight [days] (being her eight months),
Nine [days] being her nine months, the months of
"womanhood."
Like... fat, like... fat, like good princely fat, [Nintu], the mother of the land, like [... fat], (like ... fat, like good princely fat),
Gave birth to [Ninmu].
Ninmu... d at the bank of the river,³⁴
Enki in the marshland looks about, looks about,
He says to his messenger Isimud:
"Shall I not kiss the young one, the fair?
(Shall I not kiss) Ninmu, the fair?"
His messenger Isimud answers him:
"Kiss the young one, the fair,³⁵
(Kiss) Ninmu, the fair,
For my king I shall blow up a mighty wind, I shall blow up a mighty wind."
First he set his foot in the boat,³⁶
Then he set it on dry land,
He embraced her, he kissed her,
Enki poured the semen into the womb,
She took the semen into the womb, the semen of Enki,
One day being her one month,
Two days being her two months,
Nine days being her nine months, the months of
"womanhood,"³⁸
[Like... fat, like... fat, like good princely fat,] [Ninmu], (like) . . . [fat], (like ... fat, like good princely fat),
Gave birth to Nink[urra].
Ninkurra... d at the bank of the river,
Enki in the marshland [looks about, looks about],
He [says] to his messenger Isimud:
"Shall I not [kiss] the young one, the fair?
(Shall I not kiss) Ninkurra, the fair?"
His messenger Isimud answers him:
"Kiss the young one, the fair, (Kiss) Ninkurra, the fair.
For my king I shall blow up a mighty wind, I shall blow up a mighty wind?"
First he set his foot in the boat,
Then he set it on dry land,
He embraced her, he kissed her,
Enki poured the semen into the womb,
She took the semen into the womb, the semen of Enki,
One day being her one month,
Nine days being her nine months, the months of
"womanhood,"³⁹
Like... fat, like... fat, like good, princely fat, Ninkurra, (like) ... fat, (like... fat, like good, princely fat),
Gave birth to Utu, the fair lady.
Nintu says [to] Utu, [the fair lady]:
"Instruction I offer thee, [take] my instruction,
A word I speak to thee, [take] my word. (130)
Someone in the marshland look[s] about, [looks about],
Enki in the marshland [looks about, looks about],
The eye ...
(approximately 10 lines destroyed)
... Utu, the fair lady ..., ...
... in his..., ...
... heart...
Bring [the cucumbers in their...],
Bring [the apples in their [...] ,
Bring the grapes in their..., (150)
In the house may he take hold of my leash,³⁷
May Enki there take hold of my leash."
A second time while he³⁸ was filling with water,
He filled the dikes with water,
He filled the ditches with water,
He filled the uncultivated places with water.
The gardener in the dust in his joy ..., He embrac[es] him.
"Who art thou who... [my] garden?"³⁹
Enki [answers] the gardener:
... (approximately 10 lines destroyed)
[Bring me the cucumbers in their...],
[Bring me the apples in their...],
[Bring me the grapes in their... ]
[He] brought him the cucumbers in their..., He brought him the apples in their...,
He brought him the grapes in their..., he heaped them on his lap.
Enki, his face turned green, he gripped the staff,
To Uttu Enki directed his step.
"Who . . . st in her house, open." 40 (170)
"Thou, who art thou?"
"I, the gardener, would give thee cucumbers, apples, and grapes as a 'so be it.' " 41
Uttu with joyful heart opened the door of the house.
Enki to Uttu, the fair lady,
Gives the cucumbers in their...,
Gives the apples in their...,
Gives the grapes in their
Uttu, the fair lady . . . s the ... for him, . . . s the ... for him. 42
Enki took his joy of Uttu,
He embraced her, lay in her lap, (180)
He . . . s the thighs, 46 he touches the . . . ,
He embraced her, lay in her lap,
With the young one he cohabited, he kissed her.
Enki poured the semen into the womb,
Ninhursag . . . d the apples, the apples as a permanent gift.
Ninhursag seats Enki in the marshland looks about, loo\s about,
He says to his messenger Isimud:
"Of the plants, their fate . . . ,
[The "honey"-plant spro]outed,
[The roadweed-plant spro]outed,
[The ... plant s]prouted,
[The thorn ]sprouted,
[The caper-plant ]sprouted,
[The roadweed ]-plant spro]outed,
[The cassia-plant sprouated], (190)
Ninhursag . . . d the semen from the thighs,
[The "tree"-plant sprout]ed,
Ninhursag seats Enki at her vulva: (25 9)
"My brother, 58 what hurts thee?"
"My ... hurts me."
"Ninutu I have caused to be born for thee." 45
"My brother, what hurts thee?"
"My tooth hurts me."
"Ninsutu I have caused to be born for thee."
"My brother, what hurts thee?"
"My mouth hurts me."
"Ninkasi I have [caused] to be [born] for thee." (260)
"My brother what hurts thee?" "My . . . [hurts me]."
"Nazi I have caused to be [born] for thee."
"My brother, what hurts thee?" [My] arm [hurts me].
"Azimu I have [caused] to be [born] for thee.
"My brother, what hurts thee?" [My] rib [hurts me].
"Ninti I have caused to be [born] for thee.
"My brother, what hurts thee?" [My ... [hurts me].
"Enshag I have caused to be [born] for thee.
Let Ninti be the queen
Let N[inti] be the queen
Let Azi[mua] marry Ningishzida,
Let [Ensha]be the lord of Dilmun."

Dumuzi and Enkimdu: the Dispute between the Shepherd-God and the Farmer-God

This poem is one of a group of Sumerian compositions whose plot is based on what may not inapdy be described as the "Cain-Abel" motif; their contents consist in large part of disputes between two gods, two demigods, or two kings, each of whom attempts to convince the other of his superiority by extolling his own virtues and achievements and belittling those of his opponent To be sure, in all our extant compositions, the dispute ends in a reconciliation, or at least in a peaceful settlement, rather than in a murder; indeed in the case of the present poem, one of the characters, the farmer-god, is an unusually meek and peaceful person who takes the wind out of his opponent's sails by refusing to quarrel in the first place. But the psychological ingredient is the same throughout, an aggressive attitude on the part of one of the characters resulting, at least in some cases, from a feeling of inferiority and frustration. In the case of the present poem, it is Dumuzi, the shepherd-god, who, having been rejected by the goddess Inanna in favor of the farmer-god, is impelled to enumerate his superior qualities in elaborate detail, and to pick a quarrel with his peace-loving rival. The characters of our poem are four in number: the goddess Inanna; her brother, the hero, the warrior, Utu; the shepherd-god Dumuzi; and the farmer-god Enkimdu. Its contents may be summarized as follows: Following a brief introduction, whose contents are largely fragmentary (lines 1-9), we find Utu addressing his sister and urging her to become the wife of the shepherd Dumuzi (lines 10-19). Inanna's answer (lines 20-34) consists of a flat refusal; she is determined instead to marry the farmer Enkimdu. Following several fragmentary lines of uncertain meaning (lines 35-39), the text continues with a long address of the shepherd, directed probably to Inanna, in which he details his superior qualities (lines 40-64). We then find the shepherd rejoicing on die riverbank, probably because his argument had convinced Inanna and induced her to change her mind. There he meets Enkimdu and starts a quarrel with him (lines 65-73). But the latter refuses to quarrel and agrees to allow Dumuzi's flocks to pasture anywhere in his territory (lines 74-79). The latter, thus appeased, invited the farmer to his wedding as one of his friends (lines 80-87). Whereupon, Enkimdu offers to bring him and Inanna several selected farm products as a wedding gift (lines 84-87). The poet then ends the composition with the conventional literary notations.

The text of the poem is reconstructed from three tablets and fragments excavated in Nippur; they date from the first half of the second millennium BC. A transliteration and translation of the poem prepared recently by the writer will be found in JCS, 11 (1948), pp. 60-68. A preliminary sketch of the plot of the poem under the title Inanna Prefers the Farmer, together with translations of several excerpts from the poem was published by the writer in SM, (1944), 101-103. An interpretation of the contents of the poem under the title, The Wooing of Inanna: Relative Merits of Shepherd and Farmer, was published by Thorkild Jacobsen in The Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man (1946), 166-168.

Who is a maid, the stable... The maid Inanna, the sheepfold... Kneeling in the furrows... Inanna... A garment... ... I am not... From... ... wife of the shepherd Her brother, the hero, the warrior, Utu Says [to] the pure Inanna:
"O my sister, let the shepherd marry thee, O maid Inanna, why art thou unwilling? His fat is good, his milk is good, The shepherd, everything his hand touches is bright, O Inanna, let the shepherd Dumuzi marry thee, O thou who..., why art thou unwilling? His good fat he will eat with thee, O protector of the king, why art thou unwilling?" ["Me" the shepherd shall not marry, In his new [garment] he shall not drape me, When I... he shall not... me, Me, the maid, let the farmer marry, ... The reader will do well to note that there is no introductory statement to indicate who addresses whom in any of the speeches in our poem except in case of the first, that is, in the case of Utu's address to Inanna; in all other instances it is only from the context that we can gather who the speaker is. Helpful to the translator, however, is the Sumerian diatasis in which the speech is reproduced; when it is in the Eneasal dialect, the speaker must be Inanna.

* It must be stressed, however, that this is only an inference from the context, it is not expressly stated anywhere in the text.
The farmer who makes plants grow abundantly,
The farmer who makes grain grow abundantly,
... (Approximately 8 lines are destroyed.^
Me...
This matter...
To the shepherd...
The king of [dike, ditch, and plow] ...
The shepherd Dumuzi...
... to speak ...
"The farmer (more) than I, the farmer (more) than I, the farmer, what has he more (than I) ? (40)
Enkimdu, the man of dike, ditch, and plow,
(More) than I, the farmer, what has he more (than I)? Should he give me his black garment, I would give him, the farmer, my black ewe for it, Should he give me his white garment, I would give him, the farmer, my white ewe for it, Should be pour me his prime date wine,
I would pour him, the farmer, my yellow milk for it
Should he pour me his good date wine,
I would pour him, the farmer, my yajuw milk for it, (50) Should he pour me his ... date wine,^8 I would pour him, the farmer, my ... milk for it, Should be pour me his diluted date wine, I would pour him, the farmer, my plant-milk for it, Should be give me his good portions, I would give him, the farmer, my ittirda-mi\k for them, Should be give me his good bread, I would give him, the farmer, my honey-chzzsz for it, Should be give me his small beans, I would give him, the farmer, my small cheeses for them; (60)
After I shall have eaten, shall have drunk,
I would leave for him the extra fat, I would leave for him the extra milk;
(More) than I, the farmer, what has he more (than I) ?^" He rejoiced, he rejoiced, ... on the riverbank rejoiced, On the riverbank, the shepherd on the riverbank rejoiced,
The shepherd, moreover, [led] the sheep on the riverbank.
To the shepherd walking to and fro on the riverbank, To him who is a shepherd, the farmer [approached], The farmer Enkimdu [approached]. (70)
Dumuzi, the farmer, the king of dike and ditch ... ,
In his plain, the shepherd in his [plain starts] a quarrel with him, The shepherd Dumuzi in his plain starts a quarrel with him.
"I against thee, O shepherd, against thee, O shepherd, I against thee
Why shall I strive ?
Let thy sheep eat the grass of the riverbank, In my meadowland let thy sheep walk about, In the bright fields of Erech let them eat grain, Let thy kds and lambs drink the water of my Unun canal."

"As for me, who am a shepherd, at my marriage, (80)
O farmer, mayest thou be counted as my friend, O farmer Enkimdu, as my friend, O farmer, as my friend, Mayest thou be counted as my friend."
"I would bring thee wheat, I would bring thee beans, I would bring thee,...
O thou who art a maid, whatever is... to thee,
O maid Inanna,... I would bring thee."
In the dispute which took place between the shepherd and the farmer,^7
O maid Inanna, thy praise is good.
It is a balbale.8

The Deluge

This Sumerian myth concerning the flood, with its Sumerian counterpart of the antediluvian Noah, offers the closest and most striking parallel to biblical material as yet uncovered in Sumerian literature. Moreover, its introductory passages are of considerable significance for Mesopotamian cosmogony; they include a number of important statements concerning the creation of man, the origin of kingship, and the existence of at least five antediluvian cities. Unfortunately, only one tablet inscribed with this myth has been uncovered to date, and of that tablet only the lower third is preserved. As a result, much of the context of the story is obscure, and but a few of the passages can be rendered with any degree of certainty. Briefly sketched, the contents run as follows: Following a break of about 37 lines, we find a deity^ addressing other deities and probably stating that he will save mankind from destruction.4 As a result, the deity continues, man will build the cities and temples of the gods. Following the address are three lines which are difficult to relate to the context; they seem to describe the actions performed by the deity to make his words effective. These lines are in turn followed by four lines concerned with the creation of man, animals, and, perhaps, plants. Here another break of about 37 lines follows, after which we learn that kingship was lowered from heaven, and that five cities were founded. A break of about 37 lines now follows; these must have dealt largely with the decision of the gods to bring the flood and destroy mankind. When the text becomes intelligible again we find some of the gods dissatisfied and unhappy over the cruel decision. We are then introduced to Ziusudra, the counterpart of the biblical Noah, who is described as a pious, a god-fearing king,* constandy on the lookout for revelations in dreams or incantations. Ziusudra seems to station himself by a wall, where he hears the voice of a deity^ informing him of the decision taken by the assembly of the gods to send a flood and "to destroy the seed of mankind." The text

^ To judge from the other compositions of this literary genre, one might have expected here a line reading approximately "The shepherd having proved the victor over the farmer."
^ Balbale is the technical name for a category of Sumerian compositions which, to judge from the extant material, are hymnal in character; the actual meaning of the complex is still uncertain.

1 There is some possibility that it is more than one deity who is speaking; the relevant Sumerian verbal forms in this passage seem to be inconsistent in regard to the use of the singular and plural. The name of the speaker (or speakers) is destroyed; probably it is either Enki or Anu and Enlil (perhaps better Anu Enlil; cf. n.7).
2 The nature of this destruction is not known; it is rather unlikely that it refers to the deluge.
3 The text does not give the name of the state over which he ruled, but we know from the Sumerian king list that he is supposed to have ruled over Sumer from his capital city Shuruppak; cf. AS 11, p. 26, n.34.
4 Possibly EnVi; the name of the deity is not given in the text.
must have continued with detailed instructions to Ziusudra to build a gigantic boat and thus save himself from destruction. But all this is missing since there is another break of about 30 lines at this point. When the text becomes intelligible once again, we find that the flood in all its violence had already come upon the "land," and raged there for seven days and nights. But then the sun-god Utu came forth again, bringing his precious light everywhere, and Ziusudra prostrates himself before him and offers sacrifices. Here again there follows a break of about 30 lines. The last extant lines of our text describe the deification of Ziusudra. After he had prostrated himself before Anu and Enlil, he was given "life like a god" and breath eternal, and translated to Dilum, "the place where the sun rises." The remainder of the poem, about 39 lines of text, is destroyed.

The "deluge" tablet, or rather the lower third of it which is extant, was excavated in Nippur, and is now in the University Museum. It was published by Arno Poebel in PBS, v (1914), No. 1; a transliteration and translation of the text, together with a detailed commentary, were published by the same author in PBS, iv, Pt. 1, pp. 9-70. Poebel's translation is still standard, and except for slight modifications, underlies the present translation.10

(approximately first 37 lines destroyed)

“My kindred, in its destruction I will...
To Nintu will return the... of my creatures, I will return the people to their settlements,... Of the cities, verily they will build their places of (divine) ordinances. Of our houses, verily they will lay their bricks in pure places,

The places of our decisions verily they will found in pure places. He directed the things of the templens, Perfected the rites (and) the exalted (divine) ordinances,

On the earth he... d, placed the... there.22 After Anu, Enil, Enki, and Ninhursag had fashioned the black-headed (people), Vegetation luxuriant from the earth, Animals, four-legged (creatures) of the plain, were brought artfully into existence.

(50) (approximately 37 lines destroyed)

After the... of kingship had been lowered from heaven, After the exalted /tiarc?/ (and) the throne of kingship had been lowered from heaven, He [perfected the [rites (and) the [exalted ([divine ordinances)... 28

Founded the [five] cities in... pure places, Call[ed] their names, [apportioned] them as [cult-centers,]

The first of these cities, Eridu, he gave to Nudimmud, the leader, The second, Badtibira, he gave to... The third, Larak, he gave to Endurbihursag, The fourth, Sippur, he gave to the hero Utu, The fifth, Shuruppak, he gave to Sud, When he had called the names of these cities, apportioned them as cult-centers, He brought... Established the cleaning of the small rivers as...

(approximately 37 lines destroyed)

That is probably the same deity or deities whose address has just come to an end; cf. n.i.

The Sumerian verbal form in this and the next line contains an infix which should be rendered "in (or upon) it (or him, them)," but at present it is difficult to see what this infix relates to.

Note that the translation of this line was accidentally omitted in PBS, iv, Pt. 2, p. 17.

The word "black-headed" usually refers to the inhabitants of Sumer and Babylon; in the present context, however, it seems to refer to mankind as a whole. For Sumerian concepts concerning the creation of man, cf. SM, 68 ff., and Jacobsen, JNES, v (1946), pp. 134 ff.

From the earth" seems to be repeated in the Sumerian text.

Jacobsen, in AS II, 11, p. 58, restores men at the beginning of the line; there is, however, room for more than one sign in the break.

In favor of this restoration, cf. PBS, v, No. 25, rev. v, line 4.

Identity of deity or deities uncertain; perhaps it is Anu Enlil, cf. n.i.

The translation in PBS, iv, Pt 2, p. 18, seems to take care of only part of the break in this and the following line.

Our translation does not treat the verbal forms in this line as relatives in spite of their form.

cf. now Jacobsen, AS II, p. 59, n.i.11.

The word rendered tentatively as "first" in this line is represented by a sign whose reading cannot as yet be identified.

Nudimmud is another name for the water-god Enki.

To judge from the surrounding lines one would expect here the name of the tutelary deity of Badtibira, that is Latarak (cf. p. 57 of this work).

However, the relevant Sumerian complex is not preceded by the "god" determinative, and seems on the surface to mean "the tabeod garment."

Nothing is known of this deity; for the reading of the first part of the name as Hendur- rather than Pa-, cf. K. Tallquist, Akkadische Gotterpitheta (1938), p. 435; Poebel, ZA, xxxvii, 143 ff.

That is, the sun-god, well known as the tutelary deity of both Sippur and Larsa.

The tutelary goddess of Shuruppak identified by the later Babylonian theologians with the goddess Ninlil, the wife of Enlil.

The rest of the line is unintelligible, although practically all the Sumerian signs are legible; it may deal with rain and water supply.
The flood...³⁸

Then did Nin[tu weep] like a ..., The pure Inanna [set up] a lament for its people, Enki took counsel with himself, Anu, Enlil, Enki, (and) Ninhursag ..., the gods of heaven and earth [uttered] the name of Enlil. Then did Ziusudra, the king, the palttu³⁸ of..., Build giant...;

Humly obedient, reverently [he]..., Attending daily, constantly [he]..., Bringing forth all kinds of dreams,⁴ [he]..., Uttering the name of heaven (and) earth,⁴ [he] ...

... the gods a wall... Ziusudra, standing at its side, list[ened].

"Stand by the wall at my left side ...,"⁴⁷

By the wall I will say a word to thee, [take my word].,⁴⁸ [Give] ear to my instruction: By our ... a flood [will sweep] over the cult-centers; To destroy the seed of mankind ..., Is the decision, the word of the assembly [of the gods]. By the word commanded by Anu (and) Enlil⁴⁹... , Its kingship, its rule [will be put to an end]*   (150)

(160)

(201)

At the same time, the flood sweeps over the cult-centers,⁵⁰ After, for seven days (and) seven nights, The flood had swept over⁵¹ the land,⁵² (And) the huge boat had been tossed about by the windstorms on the great waters,

Utu came forth, who sheds light on heaven (and) earth.

Ziusudra opened a window of the huge boat, The hero Utu brought his rays into the giant boat.⁸⁵ Ziusudra, the king, Prostrated himself before Utu, (210)

The king kills an ox, slaughters a sheep. (approximately 39 lines destroyed)

"Ye will utter 'breath of heaven,' 'breath of earth,' verily it will stretch itself by your..., "⁹⁸ (251)

Anu (and) Enlil uttered "breath of heaven," "breath of earth," by their..., it stretched itself. Vegetation, coming up out of the earth, rises up. Ziusudra, the king, Prostrated himself before Anu (and) Enlil. Anu (and) Enlil cherished Ziusudra,⁵⁷ Life like (that of) a god they give him, Breath eternal like (that of) a god they bring down for him. Then, Ziusudra the king, The preserver of the name⁵⁸ of vegetation (and) of the seed of mankind, (260)

In the land⁵⁹ of crossing the land of Dilmun, the place where the sun rises, they were caused to dwell. (Remainder of the tablet, about 39 lines of text, destroyed.)

Gilgamesh and Agga

The Sumerian poem, "Gilgamesh and Agga," is one of the shortest of all Sumerian epic tales; it consists of no more than 115 lines of text. In spite of its brevity, however, it is of unusual significance from several points of view. In the first place, its plot deals with humans only; unlike the rest of the Sumerian epic tales, it introduces no mythological motifs involving any of the Sumerian deities. Secondly it is of considerable historical importance; it provides a number of hitherto unknown facts concerning the early struggles of the Sumerian city states. Finally, it is of very special significance for the history of political thought and practice. For as Thorkild Jacobsen was die first to point out, it records what are, by all odds, the oldest two political assemblies ⁴ Lines 251-253, although fully preserved, are at present extremely difficult to render, and the present translation is to be considered as highly doubtful. For not only is the relation of the passage to the context quite obscure, but it contains a number of grammatical difficulties which cannot be explained unless scribal errors are postulated. Thus, to list only some of the contextual problems, the identity of the individual whose speech probably ends with line 251, is uncertain (note that our translation assumes that he is addressing Anu (and Enlil); the antecedent of "it" in lines 251 and 252 (perhaps "he" or "she") is unknown; the Sumerian word rendered by the English word "stretch" in these two lines may have a different meaning here; the relation of the contents of line 253 to the preceding two lines is quite uncertain. As for the grammatical problems, note that the verbal form in line 251 might have been expected to read "utter ye" instead of "ye will utter"; the Sumerian words and complexes rendered as "your" in line 251, "uttered" and "by their" in line 252, are grammatically unjustified unless scribal errors are assumed; line 253, whose rendering is quite literal, seems clumsy and partially redundant.

³⁸ The line is actually written not below the preceding line but on the left edge; it was therefore assumed to be a colophon in PBS, iv, Pt. 2, p. 63 (cf. also Heidel, loc. cit., p. 105). In all likelihood, however, it is a line that was accidentally omitted by the scribe in its proper place, and was therefore inserted on the left edge, where its correct position on the reverse of the tablet was indicated by means of a short horizontal line. The line is poorly preserved; the restoration assumed by our translation is by no means certain. If the rendering is correct, "name" might perhaps connote "existence."

³⁹ The Sumerian word rendered by "mountain" in this line may also be translated as "mountain-land" or "mountain-land." Perhaps the crossing of the sun immediately upon his rising in the east; the Sumerian word used may also mean "of rule." That is, possibly Anu and Enlil.

¹ See last paragraph of this introduction.
as yet known to man. To be sure, the tablets on which the poem has been found inscribed date back no earlier than the first half of the second millennium B.C.; however, the events recorded in them go back to the days of Gilgamesh and Agga, that is probably to the first quarter of the third millennium B.C. 1

The contents of the poem may be summarized as follows: 2 Agga, the king of Kish has sent envoys to Gilgamesh in Erech (lines 1-2); the purpose of the mission is not stated, but the context makes it obvious that they brought an ultimatum demanding of the Erechites to submit to Kish or take the consequences. Gilgamesh seeks the advice of the assembly of elders and urges them, for reasons that are far from clear, to fight rather than submit (lines 3-8). But the elders are contrary-minded; they would rather submit to Kish than fight it out (lines 9-14). Gilgamesh, displeased with this answer, now turns to the “heroes,” that is, of arms-bearing males, and repeats his plea for war with Kish rather than submission to its rule (lines 15-29). In a long statement ending with a eulogy of Gilgamesh and highly encouraging words of victory, the assembly of “men” declares for war and independence (lines 24-39). Gilgamesh is now well pleased; in a speech to Enkidu, he is highly confident of victory over Agga (lines 40-47). In a very short time, however, Agga besieges Erech, and in spite of their brave words, the Erechites are dumbfounded (lines 48-50). Gilgamesh then addresses the “heroes” of Erech and asks for a volunteer to go before Agga (lines 51-54). A hero by the name of Birhurturri readily volunteers; he is confident that he can confound Agga’s judgment (lines 55-58). No sooner does Birhurturri pass through the city gates, however, than he is seized, beaten, and brought before Agga. He begins to speak to Agga, but before he has finished, another hero from Erech, one Zabar . . . ga by name, ascends the wall (lines 59-67). There now follows a series of passages which are of utmost importance for the understanding of the plot of the tale, but which, for reasons outlined in notes 19, 20, and 22 are difficult and obscure. Certainly it is, however, that in some way Agga has been induced to take a more friendly attitude and probably to lift the siege (lines 68-96). We then come to a passage whose meaning is quite certain; it consists of an address by Gilgamesh to Agga thanking him for all his kindness (lines 100-106). The poem concludes with a paean of praise to Gilgamesh (lines 107-end).

The text of "Gilgamesh and Agga" is reconstructed from eleven tablets and fragments; ten were excavated in Nippur, while the eleventh is of unknown provenience. All the pieces date from the first half of the second millennium B.C.; the date of the actual composition of the poem, however, is still unknown.

1 It is well to note at this point that our poem provides an excellent example of one of the major difficulties confronting the translator of the Sumerian unilingual material. Here is a composition whose text is in practically perfect condition; there is hardly a single word broken or missing. Moreover, the reading of almost all the signs is certain; so, too, the meaning of most of the individual words. In spite of these favorable conditions, the translation of several crucial passages remains uncertain and obscure; cf. particularly lines 5-7, a passage repeated in lines 11-13 and 20-22; lines 75-80 and the corresponding passage in lines 94-99. The major difficulty with these passages consists of their archaic style; the aphoristic, riddle-like character of their contents, obscures, at least for the present, their real meaning. As for the historical background behind our poem, the reader should bear in mind that the Sumerian historians divided the history of their land into two major periods, the period before the flood and the one after the flood. The first dynasty immediately after the flood, according to these ancient historians, was that of the city of Kish; its last king was the Agga of our poem. The Dynasty of Kish was followed by the Dynasty of Eanna, or Erech (Erech is used more or less as a synonym of Eanna); the Gilgamesh of our poem is the fifth ruler of this Dynasty. However, since our Gilgamesh was preceded by four rulers of the Dynasty of Erech, who between them reigned over a considerable span of time, it is obvious that the dynasties of Kish and Erech must have overlapped to a large extent.

2 A transliteration and translation of the poem based on the four of the six texts then known was published by M. Wittek, Orientalia NS, v (1936), 331-346. An excellent translation of most of the first forty-one lines of the poem was published by Jacobsen, JNES, n (1943), 165-166. A brief resume of the contents of the poem was published by the writer in JAOS, xxv (1944), 17-18. The writer’s scientific edition of the poem (with commentary by Jacobsen) appeared in AJA, Lin, 1 ff.

[The envoys of Agga, the son of Enmebaragesi proceeded [from Kish] to Gilgamesh in Erech.

[The lord] Gilgamesh before the elders of his city
Put the [matter], seeks out (their) word:
"To complete the [wells], to complete edl the wells of the land," 3

To complete the [wells] (and) the small bowls of the land,
To dig the wells, to complete the fastening ropes,
Let us not submit to the house of Kish, let us smite it with weapons."

The convened assembly of the elders of his city
Answer Gilgamesh:
(10) "To complete the wells, to complete all the wells of the land;
To complete the wells (and) the small bowls of the land,
To dig the wells, to complete the fastening ropes,
Let us submit to the house of Kish, let us not smite it with weapons."

Gilgamesh, the lord of Kullab, 5
Who performs heroic deeds for Inanna, 6
Took not the word of the elders of his city to heart.
A second time Gilgamesh, the lord of Kullab,
Before the men of his city put the matter, seeks out (their) word:
"To complete all the wells, to complete all the wells of the land."

(20) To complete the wells (and) the small bowls of the land,
To dig the wells, to complete the fastening ropes,
Do not submit to the house of Kish, let us smite it with weapons."

The convened assembly of the men of his city answer
Gilgamesh:
"O ye who stand, O ye who sit," 7

1 Lines 5-7, and the identical lines 11-13 and 20-22, contain a proverb-like or riddlelike passage whose meaning in the context is altogether obscure; the renderings given are those usually attributed to the individual words, but they may prove unjustified. Similarly, the grammatical relationships between the various complexes are by no means certain. To judge from the contents of line 8, one might be led to conclude that the passage contained in lines 5-7 gives Gilgamesh’s reasons for his plea to fight rather than submit to Kish. It will be noted, however, that in the passage immediately following, the very same words are used by the assembly of elders to justify their decision to submit to Kish rather than go to war. In short we may have here an early example of what is now generally described as “double-talk.”

5 For lines 11-13, ct comment to lines 5-7.
6 Kullab is a district in or close to Erech; the two are frequently mentioned together.

7 Next to the heaven-god Anu, the goddess Inanna, more commonly known by her Semitic name Ishtar, was the most important deity of Erech.

8 For lines 20-22, ct comment to lines 5-7. In line 23, note that while the second verb is the expected first person plural, the first verb is the second person plural, which is difficult to see the reason for the change.

9 Lines 24-27, if the rendering is correct, seem to describe the aristocrats ruling Erech; just what the relationship between these individuals and the two assemblies may have been, however, remains uncertain.
O ye who are raised with the sons of the king,
O ye who press the donkey’s thigh,
Whoever holds its life,
Do not submit to the house of Kish, let us smite it with weapons.

Erech, the handiwork of Anu,
Its lofty dwelling place established by Anu,
Its great wall touching the clouds,

He saw the wall,
Verily it is his… forehead,
Verily it is his…. face,
Verily it is his gracious finger.

The multitude did not cast itself down, the multitude did not rise.
The multitude did not cover itself with dust,
(Thy people) of all the foreign lands were not overwhelmed.
On the mouths of (the people) of the lands, dust was not heaped.

The prow of the magurru-boat was not cut down,
Agga, the king of Kish, restrained not his soldierly heart
They keep on striking him, they keep on beating him,
Birhurturri—they crush his flesh.
After Zabar… ga, Gilgamesh ascends toward the wall, Terror fell upon the old and young of Kullab,
The men of Erech held their battle weapons at their sides,
The door of the city gate—they stationed themselves at its approaches,

Enkidu went out toward the city gate.

Gilgamesh peered over the wall,
He saw Agga:
"Behold thy king, thy stout man— is he not also my king?"

Birhurturri says to him:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king
The stout man—is he not also my king?"

Verily the stout man is my king,
Verily it is his… forehead,
Verily it is his… face,
Verily it is his gracious finger.

The multitude did not cast itself down, the multitude did not rise.

The multitude did not cover itself with dust,
(Thy people) of all the foreign lands were not overwhelmed.

On the mouths of (the people) of the lands, dust was not heaped.

The prow of the magurru-boat was not cut down.

Agga, the king of Kish, restrained not his soldierly heart
They keep on striking him, they keep on beating him.

Birhurturri—they crush his flesh.

After Zabar… ga, Gilgamesh ascends toward the wall, Terror fell upon the old and young of Kullab,
The men of Erech held their battle weapons at their sides,
The door of the city gate—they stationed themselves at its approaches,

Enkidu went out toward the city gate.

Gilgamesh peered over the wall,
He saw Agga:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king— is he not also my king?"

"Behold thy king, thy stout man— is he not also my king?"

Birhurturri says to him:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king
The stout man—is he not also my king?"

Verily the stout man is my king,
Verily it is his… forehead,
Verily it is his… face,
Verily it is his gracious finger.

The multitude did not cast itself down, the multitude did not rise.

The multitude did not cover itself with dust,
(Thy people) of all the foreign lands were not overwhelmed.

On the mouths of (the people) of the lands, dust was not heaped.

The prow of the magurru-boat was not cut down.

Agga, the king of Kish, restrained not his soldierly heart
They keep on striking him, they keep on beating him.

Birhurturri—they crush his flesh.

After Zabar… ga, Gilgamesh ascends toward the wall, Terror fell upon the old and young of Kullab,
The men of Erech held their battle weapons at their sides,
The door of the city gate—they stationed themselves at its approaches,

Enkidu went out toward the city gate.

Gilgamesh peered over the wall,
He saw Agga:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king— is he not also my king?"

"Behold thy king, thy stout man— is he not also my king?"

Birhurturri says to him:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king
The stout man—is he not also my king?"

Verily the stout man is my king,
Verily it is his… forehead,
Verily it is his… face,
Verily it is his gracious finger.

The multitude did not cast itself down, the multitude did not rise.

The multitude did not cover itself with dust,
(Thy people) of all the foreign lands were not overwhelmed.

On the mouths of (the people) of the lands, dust was not heaped.

The prow of the magurru-boat was not cut down.

Agga, the king of Kish, restrained not his soldierly heart
They keep on striking him, they keep on beating him.

Birhurturri—they crush his flesh.

After Zabar… ga, Gilgamesh ascends toward the wall, Terror fell upon the old and young of Kullab,
The men of Erech held their battle weapons at their sides,
The door of the city gate—they stationed themselves at its approaches,

Enkidu went out toward the city gate.

Gilgamesh peered over the wall,
He saw Agga:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king— is he not also my king?"

"Behold thy king, thy stout man— is he not also my king?"

Birhurturri says to him:
"O servant of the stout man, thy king
The stout man—is he not also my king?"

Verily the stout man is my king,
Verily it is his… forehead,
Verily it is his… face,
Verily it is his gracious finger.

The multitude did not cast itself down, the multitude did not rise.

The multitude did not cover itself with dust,
(Thy people) of all the foreign lands were not overwhelmed.

On the mouths of (the people) of the lands, dust was not heaped.

The prow of the magurru-boat was not cut down.

Agga, the king of Kish, restrained not his soldierly heart
They keep on striking him, they keep on beating him.

Birhurturri—they crush his flesh.

After Zabar… ga, Gilgamesh ascends toward the wall, Terror fell upon the old and young of Kullab,
The men of Erech held their battle weapons at their sides,
The door of the city gate—they stationed themselves at its approaches,
The stout man is my king."

As he spoke, The multitude cast itself down, the multitude rose, The multitude covered itself with dust, (The people) of all the foreign lands were overwhelmed, On the mouths of (the people) of the lands dust was heaped, The prow of the magarru-boat was cut down, Agga, the king of Kish, restrained his soldierly heart.

Gilgamesh, the lord of Kullab (100) Says to Agga:43
"O Agga, my overseer, O Agga, my steward, O Agga, my army leader, O Agga, the fleeing bird thou hast filled with grain, O Agga, thou hast given me breath, thou hast given me life, O Agga, thou bringest the fleeing man to rest." Erech, the handivon41 of the gods,42 The great wall touching the sky, The lofty dwelling place established by Anu,

O thou ... -headed, thou prince beloved of Anu, Agga has set thee free for Kish."

Before Utu he has returned to thee the power of former days; O Gilgamesh, lord of Kullab, Thy praise is good.

The poem "Gilgamesh and the Land of the Living" is one of the Sumerian epic tales probably utilized by the Semitic authors in their redaction of the Babylonian Epic of Gilgamesh.1 Unfortunately, to date only 175 lines of the poem have been re-covered; even so, it is recognizable as a literary creation which must have had a profound emotional and aesthetic appeal to its highly credulous ancient audience. Its motivating theme, man's anxiety about death and its sublimation in the notion of an immortal name, has a universal significance that lends it high poetic value. Its plot structure reveals a careful and imaginative selection of just those details which are essential to its predominately poignant mood and heroic temper. Stylistically, too, the poet obtains the appropriate rhythmic effect by the skillful use of an uncommonly varied assortment of repetition and parallelism patterns. All in all, there is little doubt that the poem before us is "one of the finest Sumerian literary works as yet uncovered."

The contents of the poem may be briefly summarized as follows: The "lord" Gilgamesh, realizing that, like all mortals, he too must die sooner or later, is determined at least to raise up a name for himself before he meets his destined end. He therefore sets his heart on journeying to the far distant Land of the Living* with the probable intention of felling its cedars and bringing them to Erech. He informs his loyal servant and constant companion Enkidu, of his intention, and asks him if there is anything he can do to equip him for the support of his contemplated journey to the Land of the Living (lines 13-18). Utu at first seems rather skeptical about Gilgamesh's qualifications. But Gilgamesh only repeats his plea in more persuasive language (lines 19-25). Utu takes pity on him and decides to help him, probably by immobilizing in some way the seven vicious demons personifying the destructive weather phenomena that might menace Gilgamesh in the course of his journey across the mountains situated between Erech and the Land of the Living (lines 34-45). Overjoyed, Gilgamesh gathers fifty volunteers from Erech, unattached men who have neither "honor" nor "mother" and who are ready to follow him in whatever he does (lines 45-59). After having weapons of bronze and wood prepared for himself and his companions, they cross the seven mountains with the help of Utu (lines 54-61). Just what happens immediately after the crossing of the last of the seven mountains is not clear, since the relevant passage (lines 62-70) is poorly preserved. When the text becomes intelligible again we find that Gilgamesh had fallen into a heavy sleep from which he is awakened only after considerable time and effort (lines 71-83). Thoroughly aroused by this unexpected delay, he swears by his mother Ninsun and by his father Lugalbanda that he will enter the Land of the Living and brook no interference from either man or god (lines 84-97). Enkidu pleads with him to turn back, for the guardian of the cedars is the fearful monster Huwawa, whose destructive attack none may withstand (lines 95-105). But Gilgamesh will have none of this caution. Convinced that with Enkidu's help no harm can befall either of them, he bids him put away fear and go forward with him (lines 106-119). Spying from his cedar house, however, is the monster Huwawa who seems to make vain, but frantic, efforts to drive off Gilgamesh and his adventurous band (lines 120-126). Following a break of some lines we learn that, after cutting down seven trees, Gilgamesh had probably come to Huwawa's inner chamber (lines 127-141). Strangely enough, at the very first, and seemingly very light, attack on the part of Gilgamesh, Huwawa is overcome with fright; he thereupon utters a prayer to the sun-god Utu and adjures Gilgamesh not to kill him (lines 142-151). Gilgamesh would like to act the generous victor, and in riddle-like phrases suggests to Enkidu that Huwawa be set free. But Enkidu, fearful of the consequences, advises against such unwise action (lines 152-161). Following Huwawa's indignant criticism of Enkidu's ungenerous attitude, our two heroes proceed to cut off his neck (lines 162-166). They then seem to bring Huwawa's corpse before Enlil and Ninlil, but what follows is quite uncertain, for after several fragmentary lines our available material comes to an end.

4 For a detailed discussion of the Sumerian sources of the Babylonian epic of Gilgamesh, cf. JAOS, LIX (1944), 8-23; note that our poem is there entitled "Gilgamesh and Huwawa."

The text of "Gilgamesh and the Land of the Living" is reconstructed from fourteen tablets and fragments; eleven were excavated in Nippur, one in Kish, while the provenience of two is unknown. All the available tablets and fragments date from the first half of the second millennium B.C. A scientific edition of the poem, including copies of unpublished material in the University Museum, transmutation, translation, and commentary, was published by the writer in JCS, 1 (1947), 3-46; here, too, will be found a copy of a tablet in the Yale Babylonian Collection, copied by Ferris J. Stephens, and a copy of a tablet in the Oriental Museum of the University of Illinois, copied by Albrecht Goetze.

The lord, toward the Land of the Living set his mind,
The lord, Gilgamesh, toward the Land of the Living set his mind,
He says to his servant Enkidu:
"O Enkidu, not (yet) have brc\ and stamp brought forth the fated end,
I would enter the 'land,' I would set up my name,
In its places where the names have been raised up, I would raise up my name,
In its places where the names have not been raised up, I would raise up the names of the gods."
His servant Enkidu answers him:
"O my master, if thou wouldst enter the 'land,' inform Utu,
The 'land,' it is Utu's charge,
The land of the cut-down cedar, it is the hero Utu's charge—inform Utu."
Gilgamesh laid his hands on an all-white kid,
A brown kid, an offering, he pressed to his breast,
In his hand he placed the silver staff of his...,
He says to Utu of heaven:
"O Utu, I would enter the 'land,' be thou my ally,
I would enter the land of the cut-down cedar, be thou my ally."
Utu of heaven answers him:
"... verily thou art, but what art thou to the 'land'?"
"O Utu, a word I would speak to thee, to my word thy ear."
I would have it reach thee, give ear to it.
In my city man dies, oppressed is the heart,
Man perishes, heavy is the heart,
I peered over the wall,
Saw the dead bodies... floating on the river;
As for me, I too will be served thus; verily 'tis so.
Man, the tallest, cannot stretch to heaven,
Man the widest, cannot cover the earth.
Not (yet) have brc\ and stamp brought forth the fated end,
I would enter the 'land,' I would set up my name,
In its places where the names have been raised up, I would raise up my name,
In its places where the names have not been raised up, I would raise up the names of the gods."
Utu accepted his tears as an offering,
Like a man of mercy, he showed him mercy,
The seven heroes, the sons of one mother,
The first, a... that...,
The second a viper that...,
The third, a dragon that...,
The fourth, a scorching fire that...,
The fifth, a raging snake that turns the heart, that...,
The sixth, a destructive deluge that floods the land,
The seventh, the speeding... [lightning] which cannot be [turned back];
These seven...,
He brings into the... of the mountains.
Who felled the cedar, acted joyfully,
The lord Gilgamesh acted joyfully,
In his city, as one man, he...,
As two companions, he...
"Who has a house, to his house! Who has a mother, to his mother!"
Let single males who would do as I (do), fifty, stand at my side.
Who had a house, to his house; who had a mother, to his mother,
Single males who would do as he (did), fifty, stood at his side.
To the house of the smiths he directed his step,
The... -tree, the... -axe, his "Might of Heroism" he caused to be cast there.
To the... garden of the plain he [directed] his step,
The... -tree, the... -tree, the... -tree, his [felled] there.
The "sons" of his city who accompanied him [placed them] in their hands.
The first, a... that
Having been brought into the... of the mountains,
The first [mo]untain they cross, he comes not upon his Upon their crossing the seventh mountain, 6... he did not wander about,
[The lord Gil]gamesh fells the cedar.
... to Gilgamesh,
... Gilgamesh... brought,
... stretched out,
... like... seized,
... set up for him,
[The "sons" of his city] who accompanied him, (70)

... it is a dream,... it is a sleep,...
... silence...
He touches him, he rises not,
He speaks to him, he [answers not.
"Who art lying, who art lying, O Gilgamesh, lord, son of Kullab, how long wilt thou lie?
The 'land' has become dark? the shadows have spread over it,
Dusk has [brought forth] its light,
Utu has gone with lifted head to the bosom of his mother Ningal,
O Gilgamesh, how long [wilt thou] lie?
Let not the 'sons' of thy city who have accompanied thee,
Stand waiting for thee at the foot of the mountain,
Let not thy mother who gave birth to thee be driven off to the 'square' of thy city."
He gave heed,
With his "word of heroism" he [covered himself] like a garment,
His garment of thirty shekels which he carried in his hand he... d on his breast,
Like a bull he stood on the "great earth."
He put (his) mouth to the ground, (his) teeth shook.
"By the life of Ninsun, my mother who gave birth to me, of pure Lugalbanda, my father," (90)
May I become as one who sits to be wondered at on the knee of Ninsun, my mother who gave birth to me."
A second time moreover he says to him:
"By the life of Ninsun, my mother who gave birth to me, of pure Lugalbanda, my father, Until I will have fought that 'man,' if he be a man, [until] I will have fought him, if he be a god,
My step directed to the 'land,' I shall not direct to the city."
The faithful servant pleaded,... d life,
He answers his master:
"O my master, thou who hast not seen that 'man,' art not terror-stricken,
I, who have seen that 'man,' am terror-stricken.
The hero, his teeth are the teeth of a dragon, (100)
His face is the face of a lion, His... is the onrushing floodwater,
From his forehead which devours trees and reeds none escapes.
o my master, journey thou to the 'land,' I will journey to the city,
1 will tell thy mother of thy glory, let her shout,
I will tell her of thy ensuing death, [let her] shed bitter tears."
"For me another will not die, the loaded boat will not sink,
The three-ply cloth will not be cut,
The... will not be overwhelmed,
House (and) hut, fire will not destroy.
Do thou help me (and) I will help thee, what can happen to us?"
After it had sunk, after it had sunk,7
After the Magan-boat had sunk,
After the boat, 'the might of Magilum,' had sunk,
In the..., the boat of the living creatures, are seated those who come out of the womb;
Come, let us go forward, we will cast eyes upon him,
If we go forward, (And) there be fear, there be fear, turn it back,
There be terror, there be terror, turn it back,
In thy..., come, let us go forward." (120)
Who is ..., is not at peace,
Huwawa, moreover,... d his cedar house,
He fastened his eye upon him, the eye of death,
He rodeh his head to him, shook his head at him, He spoke to him..., Who are... men he... like...
Gilgamesh..., (break of approximately 7 lines)
"By the life [of Ninsun,] my mother who gave birth to me, [of pure Lugalbanda, my father],"
In the 'land' verily I have known thy dwelling, My little weak... verily I have brought into the 'land' for thee as..., ...
in thy... I would enter."
He himself uprooted the first for him,
The "sons" of his city who accompanied him (140)
Cut down its crown, bundle it, Lay it at the foot of the mountain.
After he himself had finished off for him the seventh, he approached his chamber,
He... d the "snake of the wine-quay" in his wall,
Like one pressing a kiss he slapped his cheek.
Huwawa, (his) teeth shook*
He warded off Gilgamesh: "To Utu I would say a word: 'O Utu, a mother who gave birth to me I know not, a father who reared me I know not, In the "land" thou didst give birth to me, thou dost rear me."
(150)
He adjured Gilgamesh by the life of heaven, life of earth, life of the nether world, Took him by the hand, brought him to...
Then did the heart of Gilgamesh take pity on the..., He says to his servant Enkidu: "O Enkidu, let the caught bird go (back) to its place,
Let the caught man return to the bosom of his mother." Enkidu answers Gilgamesh: "The tallest who has not judgment, Namtar9 will devour, Namtar who knows no distinctions.

* The implications of lines 111-114 are obscure; it is not even certain that Gilgamesh is the speaker as assumed in the translation.
8 Note the important new renderings in lines 145-151: they are based largely on a still unpublished fragment copied by me in Istanbul's Museum of the Ancient Orient.
9 The evil demon "Fate."
If the caught bird goes (back) to its place, (160)
If the caught man returns to the bosom of his mother, Thou wilt not return to the city of the mother who gave birth to thee."

Huwwawa says to Enkidu:
"Against me, O Enkidu, thou hast spoken evil to him, O hired man who... the food, who stands next to the...of the rival, thou hast spoken evil words to him."

When he had thus spoken, They cut off his neck, They placed upon him... They brought him before Enlil and Ninlil. Enlil brought forth his palace servant from the sea, And Ninlil brought forth... When Enlil and Ninlil... "Why thus...? ...
... let him come forth, let him seize,

The Death of Gilgamesh

The "Death of Gilgamesh" consists of a text which is but a small part of a poem of unknown length. From the available material, together with a copy of one of the tablets, have been published by the writer in BASOR, No. 94 (1944), 2-12.5

Section A

... the road taken...
... who brings up from its...
... with the killing from its...
... daily unto distant days.
After... had been placed,... which had been granted,... destruction old and ancient,... the weapon which he brought up,... which he directed,... the flood which destroyed the land, (lines 11-24 destroyed)
... the son of Utu?
In the nether world, the place of darkness, verily will give him light.
Mankind, as much as has been named, Who beside him will build its form unto distant days? The mighty heroes, the seers, like the new moon verily have...
Who beside him has directed the power and the might before them? (30)

In the month of Ab, the...of the shades, Without him verily there is no light before them. Enlil, the great mountain, the father of the gods—O lord Gilgamesh, the meaning of the dream (is)— Has destined thy fate, O Gilgamesh, for kingship, for eternal life he has not destined it (But)... of life, be not sad of heart, Be not aggrieved, be not depressed.
Who of man committed a wrong.... The forbidden, thy bond cut loose...
The light (and) dar'ness of mankind he has granted thee.9

Supremacy over mankind he has granted thee, Unmatched... he has granted thee, Onslaughts unrivalled he has granted thee,

Woolley in the tombs of Ur—and that Gilgamesh performs the placation rites essential to their comfortable sojourn in the nether world. The remainder of the poem is poorly preserved; it probably ends with a special tribute to the glory and memory of Gilgamesh.

The text of the "Death of Gilgamesh" is reconstructed from three tablets excavated in Nippur, dating from the first half of the second millennium B.C. A translation and transliteration of the available material, together with a copy of one of the tablets, have been published by the writer in BASOR, No. 94 (1944), 2-12.5

The text it seems impossible to offer an intelligent conjecture.

Note the new rendering which omits the translation of the last two lines of text. The present translation differs somewhat from that in BASOR; the more significant variations are pointed out in the notes.

Because of the fragmentary condition of lines i-10, the attempted renderings are to be taken as pointers only; the punctuation, too, is of course altogether uncertain.

Note the new rendering which omits the translation of the last two complexes of this line; their rendering in BASOR with "verily made (fel) the thresholds with them" is based on a literal interpretation of the text which may be unjustified. Note, too, the new rendering of line 31.

If the rendering is correct, which is not too likely, the line might be taken to indicate the extent of Gilgamesh's power and influence.

Notes:

1 A variant and considerably expanded version of our poem is found on a fragmentary tablet from Nippur dating from the same period as the other Nippur tablets and fragments; its contents will be found transiterated and analyzed in the JCS study in notes 205, 206, 217, 222, 226, 241, 245, 250, 252.

There is some possibility that the text of our poem is a continuation of the epic tale "Gilgamesh and Huwwawa"; cf. pp. 47-50 of the present volume.

It is by no means certain, however, that the two sections are part of the same poem.

That this section contains the last lines of whatever poem it is a part of, is certain from its last line which is typical of the end of Sumerian compositions.

That Gilgamesh was conceived by the Sumerian theologians and myth makers as king of the nether world is known especially from a text discussed in BASOR, No. 94, 6, n.11.
Attacks from which none may escape, he has granted thee.
Do not... thy faithful... palace servant,
Before Utu thou shalt... ,
A garment...
, The leader...
(break of approximately 10 lines)
Who destroyed evil [lies, rises not],
Who [established justice in the land] lies, rises not,
Who... lies, rises not,
Who is firm of muscle, lies, rises not,
The lord of Kullab lies, rises not,
Who... lies, rises not,
Who... [who ascends the mountain] he lies, he rises not,
On the bed of Fate he lies, he rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,

Who... lies, rises not,
... lies,
Gilgamesh, the son of Ninsun,
At the place of libations... poured out date wine,
... caused to be inhaled for him.
The people of Erech,
... have no possessions,
... their rival king has not been born to Nintu;
Who has no [rival], who is without [equal],

Inanna's Descent to the Nether World

The Sumerian myth "Inanna's Descent to the Nether World" is highly significant for the light on the Sumero-Babylonian religious tenets, particularly those concerning death and the nether world. Moreover, as the predecessor and prototype of the Semitic myth "Ishtar's Descent to the Nether World," it provides us with an ancient and highly instructive example of literary borrowing and transformation. Briefly sketched, its contents run as follows: For some unknown reason, Inanna, queen of heaven, has set her heart upon visiting the nether world. She therefore collects all the appropriate divine ordinances, adorns herself with her queenly robes and jewels, and is ready to enter the "land of no return." Queen of the nether world is her older sister, and—at least so it seems—bitter enemy, Ereshkigal. Fearing lest her sister put her to death in the nether world, Inanna instructs her messenger Ninshubur, who is always at her beck and call, that if after three days she shall have failed to return, he is to set up a hue and cry for her in heaven, in the assembly hall of the gods. He is then to go to Nippur, the city of Enlil, and plead with the latter to save Inanna and not let her be put to death in the nether world. If Enlil refuses he is to go to Ur, the city of the moon-god Nanna, and repeat his plea. If Nanna, too, refuses, he is to go to Eridu, the city of Enki, the god of wisdom, and the latter, who "knows the food of life," who "knows the water of life," will surely come to her rescue.

Inanna then descends to the nether world and approaches Ereshkigal's temple of lapis lazuli. At the gate she is met by the chief gatekeeper, who demands to know who she is and why she has come. Inanna conceals a false excuse for her visit, and the gatekeeper, upon instructions from his mistress, leads her through the seven gates of the nether world. As she passes through each of the gates her garments and jewels are removed piece by piece in spite of her protests. Finally, after entering the last gate, she is brought stark naked and on bended knees before Ereshkigal and the Anunnaki, the seven dreaded judges of the nether world. These fasten upon her their "eye" of death and she is turned into a corpse which is then hung from a stake. So pass three days and three nights. On the fourth day Ninhursag, seeing that her mistress has not returned, proceeds to make the rounds of the gods in accordance with her instructions. As Inanna had predicted, both Enil and Nanna refuse all help. Enki, however, devises a plan to restore her to life. He fashions theurgical and alurgical, two sexless creatures, and entrusts to them the "food of life" and the "water of life," with instructions to proceed to the nether world and sprinkle this "food" and "water" (probably) sixty times upon Inanna's impaled corpse. This they do, and Inanna revives. As she leaves the nether world, however, she is accompanied by the dead and by the bogeys and harpies who have their home there. Surrounded by this ghosdy, ghasdy crowd she wanders from city to city in Sumer.

The text of "Inanna's Descent to the Nether World," is reconstructed from thirteen tablets and fragments, all of which were excavated in Nippur and are now either in the Museum of the Ancient Orient in Istanbul or in the University Museum in Philadelphia. All were actually inscribed in the first half of the second millennium B.C. but the date of the first composition

* The Anunnaki, to judge from the available Sumerian material, are the unnamed "great gods" of the Sumerian pantheon who participated in the assemblies called by the leading deities before making final decisions; they were conceived as begotten by the heaven-god Anu on the "mountain of heaven and earth" (cf. SM. 72-3). Presumably, therefore, they were sky-gods, and just how the Sumerian mythographers got seven of them to the nether world to act as judges in it (cf. line 63 of our myth) is as yet unknown.
* This seems to be the literal meaning of the Sumerian; presumably, the stake projected from a wall and pierced the dead body which thus "hung from it."
* Enki gave the two creatures quite a number of additional instructions, which would, no doubt, prove highly revealing for Sumerian mythological concepts and religious tenets; but unfortunately the relevant lines (224-242 and lines 246-265) are largely destroyed.
* To this summary, which is based on the text of the myth as reconstructed in PAPS, LXXXV (cf. the paragraph following our summary) there can now be made a most important addition based on an as-yet-unpublished tablet in the Yale Babylonian Collection, which I had the opportunity of studying some time ago through the courtesy of Ferris J. Stephens, curator of the Yale Babylonian Collection, and Albrecht Goetze, his colleague. This tablet contains 29 lines of text; it begins with line 264 of the text as reconstructed in PAPS and duplicates the latter until line 327; from there on the text of the Yale tablet fills in part of the 40-line gap mentioned on p. 320 of PAPS, LXXXV. With the help of this new material, the events which took place upon Inanna's departure from the nether world are seen to be as follows: As soon as Inanna leaves the nether world with her ghosdy and demoiac companions, she is met by her messenger Ninshubur, who throws himself at her feet, sits in the dirt, and dresses in mourning. His demons accompanying Inanna seem to threaten to carry him off to the nether world, but Inanna tells them who he is and how he had served her faithfully, and—this is not quite certain—that consequently they should do him no harm. They then proceed to Umma and its temple Sigkursuggage; here Shara, the tutelary deity of Umma, threw himself at her feet, sat in the dirt and dressed in mourning. The demons accompanying Inanna seem to threaten to carry him off to the nether world, but Inanna tells them who he is and how he had served her faithfully, and—this is not quite certain—that consequently they should do him no harm. They then proceed to Badihira and its temple Emushkalanna; here Latarak, the tutelary deity of Badihira, threw himself at her feet, sat in the dirt, and dressed in mourning. Once again the demons seem to threaten to carry him off the god, and once again Inanna seems to dissolve them. They then proceed to a city whose name is uncertain; it may perhaps be Inanna's own city Erech, since its temple complex seems to be named Kullab, a district in, or adjacent to, Erech. And here comes what is, no doubt, the most surprising and revealing part of the text. In Kullab(P), the god Dumuzi, unlike the gods Ninshubur, Shara of Umma, and Latarak of Badihira, does not throw himself at Inanna's feet; nor does he show any signs of mourning. Instead, he seats himself on a "high seat" totally unmindful of Inanna and her companions. Whereupon Inanna hands Dumuzi over into the hands of the demons, no doubt to carry him off to the nether world. Dumuzi bursts into tears and raises his hands in prayer to the sun-god Utu to save him from the demons. At this point our text breaks off, so that the end of the myth is still unknown.
of the myth is unknown. A first edition of the text of the myth, based on the eight tablets and fragments then available, was published by the writer in RA, xxxiv (1937), 93-134. Following the publication of several additional pieces belonging to the myth, the writer published a new edition of the text based on all the thirteen pieces in PAPS, xxxv (1942), 293-323. PIs. 1-18. A study and translation of the text based on the writer’s first edition, that in RA, xxxiv, were published by A. Falkenstein in AOJ, xiv (1942), 113-138. A study and translation of the text based on the writer’s first edition and on the additional material published by the writer in RA, xxxvi, together with an analysis of the Falkensteins article in AOJ, xiv, were published by Maurus Witzel in Orientia NS, xrv (1945), 24-69.

From the ["great above"] she set her mind toward the "great below.

The goddess, from the "great above," she set her mind towards the "great below.

Inanna, from the "great above," she set her mind towards the "great below.

My lady abandoned heaven, abandoned earth, to the nether world she descended,

Inanna abandoned heaven, abandoned earth, to the nether world she descended,

Abandoned lordship, abandoned ladyship, to the nether world she descended,

In Eech she abandoned Eanna, to the nether world she descended,

In Badtibira she abandoned Emushikalamma, to the nether world she descended,

In Zabalam she abandoned Giguna, to the nether world she descended,

In Adab she abandoned Esharra, to the nether world she descended,

In Nippur she abandoned Baratumgarra, to the nether world she descended,

In Kish she abandoned Hursakalamma, to the nether world she descended,

In Agade she abandoned Eulmash, to the nether world she descended.

She arrayed herself in the seven ordinances,

Some difficulty varied considerably together with the surface below.

When I shall have come to the nether world, Fill heaven with complaints for me,

In the assembly shrine cry out for me,

In the house of the gods rush about for me,

Scratch thy eyes for me, scratch thy mouth for me,

Like a pauper in a single garment dress for me,

To the Ekur, the house of Enlil, all alone direct thy step.

Upon thy entering the Ekur, the house of Enlil,

Weep before Enlil:

'O Father Enlil, let not thy daughter be put to death

in the nether world,

Let not thy good metal be covered with the dust of the nether world.
Let not thy good lapis lazuli be broken up into the stone of the stoneworker,
Let not thy boxwood be cut up into the wood of the woodworker,
Let not the maid Inanna be put to death in the nether world.

If Enlil stands not by thee in this matter, go to Ur. In Ur, upon thy entering the house of ... of the land, The Ekishnugal, the house of Nanna, (50)
Weep before Nanna:
'O Father Nanna, let not thy daughter be put to death in the nether world,

Let not thy good metal be covered with the dust of the netherworld,
Let not thy good lapis lazuli be broken up into the stone of the stoneworker,
Let not thy boxwood be cut up into the wood of the woodworker,
Let not the maid Inanna be put to death in the nether world.

If Nanna stands not by thee in this matter, go to Eridu. In Eridu, upon thy entering the house of Enki, Weep before Enki:
'O Father Enki, let not thy daughter be put to death in the nether world,

Let not thy good metal be covered with the dust of the netherworld,
Let not thy good lapis lazuli be broken up into the stone of the stoneworker,
Let not thy boxwood be cut up into the wood of the woodworker,
Let not the maid Inanna be put to death in the nether world.

Father Enki, the lord of wisdom, Who knows the food of life, who knows the water of life,
He will surely bring me to life,"
Inanna walked towards the nether world,
To her messenger Ninshubur she says:
"Go, Ninshubur,
The word which I have commanded thee do not neglect"

When Inanna arrived at the lapis lazuli palace of the nether world, (60)
At the door of the nether world she acted evilly,
In the palace of the nether world she spoke evilly:
"Open the house, gatekeeper, open the house,
"Open the house, Neti, open the house, all alone I would enter."
Neti, the chief gatekeeper of the nether world, Answers the pure Inanna:
"Who, pray, art thou?"
"I am Inanna of the place where the sun rises," (80)
"If thou art Inanna of the place where the sun rises,
Why pray hast thou come to the land of no return?
On the road whose traveler returns not, how hath thy heart led thee?"
The pure Inanna answers him:
"My elder sister Ereshkigal, Because her husband, the lord Gugalanna, had been killed, To witness his funeral rites,
...; verily 'tis so."
Neti, the chief gatekeeper of the nether world, Answers the pure Inanna:
"Stay, Inanna, to my queen let me speak,
To my queen Ereshkigal let me speak... let me speak."
Neti, the chief gatekeeper of the nether world, Enters the house of his queen Ereshkigal (and) says to her:
"O my queen, a maid, Like a god ..., The door ..., ...
In Eanna ..., She has arrayed herself in the seven ordinances,
She has gathered the ordinances, has placed them in her hand, All the ordinances she has set up at (her) waiting foot, The lugurra, the crown of the plain, she has put upon her head, The wig of her forehead she has taken, The measuring rod (and) line of lapis lazuli she has gripped in her hand, Small lapis lazuli stones she has tied about her neck, Sparkling ... stones she has fastened to her breast, A gold ring she has put about her hand, A breastplate which ..., she has tightened about her breast, Kohl which ..., she has daubed on her eyes, With the /n/t-garment, the garment of ladyship, she has covered her body."

Then Ereshkigal, [Answers] Neti, her chief gatekeeper: "Come, Neti, chief gatekeeper of the [nether world],
The word which I (shall) have commanded thee, do [not] ne [gleet]."
Of the seven gates of the nether world, [open their locks],
Of the gate [Ganzir, the face of the nether world, define its rules].
Upon her entering, bows low...
Neti, the chief gatekeeper of the nether world, (120) Heeded the word of his queen.
Of the seven gates of the nether world, [he opened] their locks,
Of the gate Ganzir, the face of the nether world, [he defined] its rules.
To the pure Inanna he says:
"Come, Inanna, enter." Upon her entering, (127)
The iugurra, the crown of the plain of her head was removed. (128)
"What, pray, is this?" (129)
"Be silent, Inanna, the ordinances of the nether world are perfect,
O Inanna do not [question] the rites of the netherworld." (130)
Upon her entering the second gate,
The measuring rod (and) line of lapis lazuli was removed.
"What, pray, is this?"
"Be silent, Inanna, the ordinances of the nether world are perfect,
O Inanna, do not [question] the rites of the netherworld.
"What, pray, is this?"
"Be silent, Inanna, the ordinances of the nether world are perfect,
O Inanna do not [question] the rites of the netherworld." (130)
Upon her entering the third gate,
The small lapis lazuli stones of her neck were removed.
"What, pray, is this?"
"Be silent, Inanna, the ordinances of the nether world are perfect,
O Inanna do not [question] the rites of the netherworld." (140)
Upon her entering the fourth gate,
The sparkling stones of her breast were removed.
"What, pray, is this?"
"Be silent, Inanna, the ordinances of the nether world are perfect, O Inanna do not [question] the rites of the netherworld." (160)
Bowed low....
The pure Ereshkigal seated herself upon her throne,
The Anunnaki, the seven judges, pronounced judgment before her,
They fastened (their) eyes upon her, the eyes of death,
At their word, the word which tortures the spirit,
...,
The sic "woman" was turned into a corpse,
The corpse was hung from a stake.
After three days and three nights had passed,
Her messenger Ninshubur, (170)
Her messenger of favorable words,
Her carrier of true words,
Fills the heaven with complaints for her,
Cried out for her in the assembly shrine,
Rushed about for her in the house of the gods,
Scratched his eyes for her,
Scratched his mouth for her,
Scratched his large... which... is not with man,
Like a pauper in a single garment dressed for her,
To the Ekur, the house of Enlil, all alone he directed his step.
Upon his entering the Ekur, the house of Enlil,
Before Enlil he weeps,
"O, Father Enlil, let thy daughter be put to death
in the nether world," (180)
Let not thy good metal be covered with the dust of the netherworld,
Let not thy good lapis lazuli be broken up into the stone of the stoneworker,
Let not thy boxwood be cut up into the wood of the woodworker,
Let not the maid Inanna be put to death in the nether world.

Father Enil answers Ninshubur:
"My daughter has asked for the 'great above,' has asked for the 'great below,'
Inanna has asked for the 'great above,' has asked for the 'great below,'
The ordinances of the nether world, the . . . ordinances, the ordinances—she has reached their place, (190)
Who is it that to their place . . . ?
Father Enil stood not by him in this matter, he [went] to Ur.

In Ur, upon his entering the house of____of the land,
The Ekicknugal, the house of Nanna,
Before Nanna he weeps:
"O Father Nanna, let not thy daughter be put to death in the nether world,
Let not thy good metal be covered with the dust of the nether world,
Let not thy good lapis lazuli be broken up into the stone of the stonecutter,
Let not thy boxwood be cut up into the wood of the woodworker,
Let not the maid Inanna be put to death in the nether world."

(200)

Father Nanna answers Ninshubur:
"My daughter has asked for the 'great above,' has asked for the 'great below,'
Inanna has asked for the 'great above,' has asked for the 'great below,'
The ordinances of the nether world, the . . . ordinances—she has reached their place,
Who is it that to their place . . . ?"
Father Nanna stood not by him in this matter, he went to Eridu.

In Eridu upon his entering the house of Enki,
Before Enki he weeps:
"O Father Enki, let not thy daughter be put to death in the nether world,
Let not thy good metal be covered with the dust of the nether world,
Let not thy boxwood be cut up into the wood of the woodworker,
Let not the maid Inanna be put to death in the nether world."

(210)

Father Enki answers Ninshubur:
"The corpse . . .
Upon the corpse hung from a stake they directed the pulhu (and) the melammu.
Sixty times the food of life, sixty times the water of life, they sprinkled upon it, Surely Inanna will arise."

(266)

The pure Ereshkigal answers the kalaturru and kurarru.
"The corpse . . .
Upon the corpse hung from a stake they directed the pulhu (and) the melammu.

The large demons like . . .

(280)

Walked at her side.

45 "Boxwood" should have been italicized as doubtful wherever it appears in PAPS, LXXXV.
46 Note the new renderings of lines 189-190; it is due primarily to Landsberger's suggestion that kurgarru is equal to qir-M. Akk. esenu, "to desire," etc.; the lines may also be rendered "My daughter has desired it (death?) in the 'great above,' has desired it in the 'great below,'" etc.
47 Note the attempted new rendering of this difficult but crucial line.
48 Note the slightly modified rendering from that in PAPS, LXXXV.
49 For this variant rendering, cf. Witzel's excellent comment (loc. cit., 47); cf. now especially JCS 1, 10, line 27.
50 This probably correct rendering was suggested by Landsberger, who read the Sumerian complex dubbin-ur-te-gin(!)-na.
51 These lines contained a number of instructions to the stonecutter and dweller of the nether world (cf. note 5); many of the broken lines end in a second person plural imperative.
52 Note the variant rendering of the end of the line; for some possible interpretations of the pulhu and melammu, cf. Oppenheim's study of the words in JAOs, LXIII, 31-34.
53 Note the new rendering.
54 "Fled" should have been rendered as doubtful in PAPS, LXXXV.
55 The rendering of this line is quite uncertain and its implications are obscure; as it stands now, it seems to say that the incoming dead may raise difficulties, now that the Anunnaki, the judges in the nether world (cf. note 31), are no longer there to judge them. For the suggestion that this line contains a rhetorical question, cf. Falkenstein, loc. cit., 127.
56 The new rendering of the line follows Falkenstein's excellent comment, loc. cit., 127-128. The "demons" throughout the text refer to a type known as gi-da-demons.
57 Landsberger notes that the gi-dub-ba-an probably has nothing to do with tablet styluses, and the present evidence seems to bear him out.
Who by his face was no [messenger], held a staff in her hand.
Who by his body was no [carrier], carried a weapon on the loin.

They who accompanied her,
They who accompanied Inanna, (Were beings who) know not food, who know not water,

Who eat not sprinkled flour,
Who drink not libated [water].
Who take away the wife from the loins of man,
Who take away the child from the ..
of the nursemaid.

Inanna ascends from the nether world.

Upon Inanna's ascending from the nether world,
[Her messenger] Ninshubur threw himself at her feet,
Sat in the dust, dressed in sackcloth.

The demons say to the pure Inanna:

"My messenger of favorable words,
The pure Inanna answers the demons:
"O Inanna, wait before thy city, let us carry him off."

The demons say to the pure Inanna:

"O Inanna, wait before thy city, let us carry him off."

The pure Inanna answers the demons:

"Let us accompany her, in Badtibira to the Emushkalamma let us accompany her."

In Badtibira, from the Emushkalamma Latarak threw himself at her feet,
Sat in the dust, dressed in sackcloth.

The demons say to the pure Inanna:

"O Inanna, wait before thy city, let us carry him off."

The demons say to the pure Inanna:

"Let us accompany her, in Umma to the Sigkurshagga let us accompany her."

In Umma, from the Sigkurshagga, Shara threw himself at her feet,
Sat in the dust, dressed in sackcloth.

The demons say to the pure Inanna:

"My messenger of favorable words,
My carrier of true words,
(Who) fails not my directions, (300)
Scratched his eyes for me, scratched his mouth for me,
Scratched his large ... which s not with man,
Like a pauper in a single garment dressed for me,
To the Ekur, the house of Enlil,
In Ur, to the house of Nanna,
In Eridu, to the house of Enki,
He brought me to life."

"Let us accompany her, in Umma to the Sigkurshagga let us accompany her."

In Umma, from the Sigkurshagga, Shara threw himself at her feet,
Sat in the dust, dressed in sackcloth.

This fragment begins with a passage running from col. i to perhaps col. v, which seems to concern the Igigi, the gods who have no "messenger" and no "carrier" and who are from the Yale tablet described in note 6.

"O Inanna, wait before thy city, let us carry him off." The pure Inanna answers the demons:

"Let us accompany her, in Badtibira to the Emushkalamma let us accompany her." (322)

"O Inanna, wait before thy city, let us carry him off." The pure Inanna answers the demons:

"Let us accompany her, in Umma to the Sigkurshagga let us accompany her." (300)

"Let us accompany her, in Umma to the Sigkurshagga let us accompany her." (310)

"Let us accompany her, in Umma to the Sigkurshagga let us accompany her." (322)
Badna, and the Anunnaki; it is so fragmentary, however, that its sense escapes us. Beginning with, perhaps, the middle of col. v and ending with col. vii, we find a description of the duties assigned to the moon-god Nanna which ends in a passage stating that the Igigi directed the cult-rites for Nanna from the Eugal of heaven, and that Kurigalzu reestablished "the ancient days." The remainder of the fragment continues with a description of the duties and powers assigned, perhaps by the gods Enlil and Ninlil, to a deity whose name is not found in the extant text. The translation of the more intelligible portions of this fragment reads as follows:

(i) (practically completely destroyed)

(ii) ... they ... d. The light of the Igigi (and) the gods Badna was covered up by its (their?) ... the Igigi.

(iii) He (she?) does not ... Becau[se] their king had punished the Anunnaki, (because) he had put them out of the ... of all the lands, out of heaven

(iv) To lift (bear?) the ... to give all the minute directions, they ... d in its (their?) midst...

(v) Its (their?) pure ... they did not bring close; the ... they did not give. That Nanna might make bright the night, that during the day he might ... in the ... that he might make known the signs in (of?) the night ...

(vi) (practically entirely unintelligible)

(vii) [From the Eugal of heaven, the place of the wide-knowing Anu, the Igigi ... who are kings who pronounce the word], who are [pure gods]; from the place of Enlil and Ninlil, the Igigi ... who are kings who pronounce the word, who are gods of true decrees, directed the cult-rites for Nanna from him who knows the heart [I, Kurigalzu, who caused the Eugal to appear ...[ set up there the old days unto future days].

(viii) ...; of the pure places of the fisherman of the gods, he returned their... To return to Nammu, they charge the mission of ... To raise up ... ; to multiply riches and treasure....

(ix) After he had fashioned there ... , as the exalted head-goat of his chosen heir, Enlil and Ninlil

Fragment B

This fragment consists of two parts, a and b, whose relative positions in the inscription are quite uncertain. Bb is here given first since it seems to treat of matters involving the moon, and its text may therefore have preceded or followed that of fragment A.

(Bb i) For the ... of his trust they made known its

---

A. Sumerian myths and epic tales

---

Fragment C

Fragment C begins with the assignment of duties and powers to the goddess Ninisanna, and ends with a passage stating that the Igigi directed the cult-rites for her from the Eugal of heaven, and that Kurigalzu reestablished "the ancient days"; in other words, a passage which, except for the name of the deity, is identical with that which closes the portion of the text of A, dealing with the god Nanna. The fragment then continues with the duties and powers assigned to the god Nergal, the husband of Ninisanna and king of the nether world; it, too, probably ends with the "cult-rites" passage that marks the close of the Nanna and Ninisanna passages. The fragment then seems to continue with the "portions" and "lots" assigned to the goddess Inanna.

(i) (practically entirely destroyed)

(ii) (Only the phrases "[Enlil and Nin][ll]l," "wifehood," and the temple name "Eugal" can be made out)

(iii) Enlil and Ninlil as fate ... ; to make ... very wisely from its (their?) good garment... whatever is brought forth, Enlil and Ninlil....

(iv) [From the Eugal of heaven, the place of the wide-knowing Anu, the Igigi ... who are kings who pronounce the word, who are pure gods; from the place of Enlil and Ninlil, the Igigi ... who are kings who pronounce the word], who are gods of true decrees, [directed the cult-rites for Ninisanna from him who knows the heart I, Kurigalzu, who caused the Eugal to appear ... set up there the old days unto future days. For Nergal, Enlil [and] Nin[ll]l[d] the tail end and the "mouth" of the nether world, the place with[ther the Anunnaki drew nigh]

(v) Of that which overwhelms..., to ... its net; to weaken its strength ... ; to bring in the ... who have neither a covering roof, nor a headdress, nor a ... ; as for those without head or hand, the snatching demons who did not submit to the Eugal____their great...

(vi) ... of the earth, they presented to him all sleeping mankind.... From the Eugal of heaven, the place of the wide-knowing Anu, the Igigi... who are kings who pronounce the word, who are pure gods; from the place of Enlil and Ninlil, the Igigi ...[ ... who are kings who pronounce the word, who are gods of true

---

Asghirbabbar [the reading of die name is uncertain] is the name of the god of the new moon. Urash, who makes bright the land, the wide ... of the black-headed people....

(Ba i) (largely destroyed)

(Ba ii) To...; to fashion the image of mankind.13...

---
decrees, directed the cult-rites for Nergal from him who knows the heart. I, Kurigalzu, who caused the Eugal to appear ... set up there the old days unto future days ... ]

(vii) The great Igigi who parade in the sky, whose brilliance, like fire, . . . s the evening and the black night, did not at all enlarge the ... As for Belitili who crosses the sky, in the earth . . . , from the districts) of the sky ...

(viii) As for her who, like . . . had been put out from the districts) of the sky, they gave her as (her) portion the built Eshaga, the Eshaga, where all good things are stored; they filled her hands with the good word which soothes the flesh and the spirit for wife and husband. On those who heed her, a firm eye....

(ix) they gave to Inanna . . . as a share; they built for Belitili the . . . , the large grove, her abode of lordship; [they] adorned for her....

Fragment D

This fragment, too, seems to deal with the tasks and duties assigned to the goddess Inanna. Col. i is practically entirely destroyed. In col. ii only the phrase "that mankind might do its work" is intelligible. Col. iii is almost altogether unintelligible in spite of the fact that the signs are well preserved; the major difficulty lies with the extreme uncertainty of the word division. The remainder of the fragment reads:

(iv) To devour the — ; to as ... ; to raise high the position of those who turn evil to good, they gave to Inanna . . . among her portions....

(v) [From the Eugal of heaven, the place of the wide-knowing Anu, the Igigi . . . who are kings who pronounce the word], who are [pure gods; from] the place of E[nil and Ninlil], the Igigi . . . who are gods of true decrees, [directed the cult-rites for Inanna from him who knows the heart. I, Kurigalzu, who caused the Eugal to appear — set up there the old days unto future days]]]

(vi) For . . . they directed there the....
Akkadian Myths and Epics

TRANSLATOR: E. A. SPEISER

The material here offered is intended to be representative rather than exhaustive. It is not always possible to draw a sharp line between Akkadian compositions devoted to myths and related material, and those that concern other types of religious literature, not to mention special categories of historical nature. Furthermore, considerations of space and time have tended to exclude sundry literary remains whose bearing on the purpose of this work is not immediately apparent. It is hoped, however, that nothing of genuine relevance has been omitted.

As regards the order of the individual subjects, it was deemed advisable to present in succession the two major survivals of this group of texts, namely, The Creation Epic and The Epic of Gilgamesh. The alternative procedure would have been to group some of the minor subjects with the one epic, and some with the other. The present arrangement has a sound biblical precedent in the order of the books of the Prophets.

In translating material which has come down to us in poetic form, there arises the inevitable conflict between adherence to the force and flavor of the original idiom—as that idiom is understood—and adherence to the given poetic form. In the present instance, preference was given to the demands of meaning, whenever necessary. Elsewhere slight exceptions have been made in an effort to reflect the measures of the Akkadian verse—normally a unit of two distinct halves with two beats in each half. Where the text presents an overlong line as a result of a mechanical combination of two verses, the added verse has been indented in the translation so as not to alter the line count of the text. In lines grown unwieldy for other reasons—such as theological addition in the original, or the helplessness of the translator when confronted with the economy or the elusiveness of the Akkadian idiom—indentation has likewise proved to be a convenient device.

The struggle between cosmic order and chaos was to the ancient Mesopotamians a fateful drama that was renewed at the turn of each new year. The epic which deals with these events was therefore the most significant expression of the religious literature of Mesopotamia. The work, consisting of seven tablets, was known in Akkadian as Enuma Eliš "When on high," after its opening words. It was recited with due solemnity on the fourth day of the New Year's festival.

Portions of this work were first made available in modern times by George Smith, in The Chaldean Account of Genesis (1876). The flow of material has continued intermittently ever since. We owe these texts to three main sources: (a) The British excavations at Nineveh; the relevant texts have been published in CT, xiii (1901) and in L. W. King's The Seven Tablets of Creation (2 Vols., 1902). (b) The German excavations at Ashur; texts in E. Ebeling's Keilschrifttexte aus Assur religiosen Inhalts (1915 ff.). (c) The British-American excavations at Kish; texts in S. Langdon's Oxford Editions of Cuneiform Texts (1923 ff.; Vol. vii). Scattered fragments have appeared in the periodical publications. A convenient compilation of the texts has been given by A. Deimel in his Enuma Eliš (2nd ed., 1936). This book contains a useful textual apparatus, but it does not altogether eliminate the need for comparison with the basic publications. In recent years, large gaps in Tablet VII have been filled by E. Ebeling in MAOG, XII (1939), part 4, and these additions have been supplemented and elucidated by W. von Soden in ZA, xlvi (1942), 1-26. The only part that still is largely unknown is Tablet V.

The various studies and translations of this epic are too numerous for a complete survey. The more recent ones include: S. Langdon, The Babylonian Epic of Creation (1923); E. Ebeling, AOT, 108 ff.; R. Labat, Le poème babyloni'en de la création (1935); and A. Heidel, The Babylonian Genesis (1942). For the sake of ready reference, I have retained the line count employed by Labat. Heidel's careful translation could scarcely be overestimated in its usefulness. Except for the portions of Tablet VII, which have appeared since, it constituted the fullest rendering possible at the time of its publication. Attention should also be called to W. von Soden's grammatical study, Der hymnisch-epische Dialekt des Akkadischen, ZA, xI-xII (1932 ff.), and to A. L. Oppenheim's notes on Mesopotamian Mythology I, Orientalia, xvi (1947), 207-38.

There is as yet no general agreement as regards the date of composition. None of the extant texts antedates the first millennium BC. On the internal evidence, however, of the context and the linguistic criteria, the majority of die scholars would assign die epic to the Old Babylonian period, i.e. the early part of the second millennium BC. There does not appear to be any convincing reason against this earlier dating.

The poem is cast in metric form. One seventh-century copy of Tablet IV, for instance, still shows plainly the division of lines into halves, thus bringing out the two beats of each half. Theological, political, and exegetical considerations have led to various changes and additions, but these are readily recognized for the most part thanks to the underlying metric framework. Unfortunately, a translation cannot make use of this type of evidence, however obvious it may be. In general, the successive revisions have marred the poetic effect of the whole. Nevertheless, enough passages have come down intact to bear witness to a genuine literary inspiration in many instances.

The Creation Epic

The Creation Epic

The struggle between cosmic order and chaos was to the ancient Mesopotamians a fateful drama that was renewed at the turn of each new year. The epic which deals with these events was therefore the most significant expression of the religious

Tablet I

When on high the heaven had not been named,
Firm ground below had not been called by name, Naught but primordial Apsu, their begetter, Their waters com mingling as a single body; No reed hut had been matted, no marsh land had appeared.

When no gods whatever had been brought into being, Uncalled by name, their destinies undetermined—
Then it was that the gods were formed within them.5 Lahmu and Lahamu were brought forth, by name they were called. (10)

Before they had grown in age and stature, Anshar and Kishar were formed, surpassing the others. They prolonged the days, added on the years.8 Anu was their heir, of his fathers the rival; Yea, Anshar’s first-born, Anu, was his equal.

Anu begot in his image Nudimmud. Yea, Anshar’s first-born, Anu, was his equal.

They prolonged the days, added on the years. (And) Mummu

The divine brothers banded together, They disturbed Tiamat as they surged back and forth™ Yea, they troubled the mood

Apsu could not lessen their clamor Their doings were loathsome unto [ ...].

"O Mummu, my vizier, who rejoicest my spirit,

Then Apsu, the begetter of the great gods, As (that one) sat down on his knees to kiss him,18

When the gods heard (this), they were astir, (Then) lapsed into silence and remained speechless.

"What? Should we destroy that which we have built? Injecting woe into her mood:

She was wroth and called out to her husband.

When Apsu heard this, his face grew radiant

As for Mummu, by the neck he embraced him

He named it “Apsu,” for shrines he assigned (it).

In his sacred chamber in profound peace had rested, Having thus upon Apsu established his dwelling,

He made artful his spell against it, surpassing and holy.

Ea, the all-wise, saw through their

A master design against it he devised and set up, Made artful his spell against it, surpassing and holy.

He recited it and made it subsist in the deep,

As he poured sleep upon him. Sound asleep he lay,

When Mummu, the adviser, put it on himself,

Having fettered Apsu, he slew him.

Mummu he bound and left behind lock.

Having thus upon Apsu established his dwelling,

He laid hold on Mummu, holding him by the nose-rope.

After Ea had vanquished and trodden down his foes,

Had secured his triumph over his enemies, In his sacred chamber in profound peace had rested, He named it “Apsu,” for shrines he assigned (it). In that same place his cult hut27 he founded.

"Their ways are verily loathsome unto me. By day I find no relief,18 nor repose by night. I will destroy, I will wreck their ways, That quiet may be restored. Let us have rest!" (40)

As soon as Tiamat heard this, She was wrought and called out to her husband. She cried out aggrieved, as she raged all alone, Injecting woe into her mood:

“What? Should we destroy that which we have built? Their ways indeed are most troublesome, but let us attend™ kindly!"

Then answered Mummu, giving counsel to Apsu; [Ill-wishing] and ungracious was Mummu’s advice: "Do destroy, my father, the mutinous ways. Then shalt thou have relief by day and rest by night!" (50)

When Apsu heard this, his face grew radiant Because of the evil he planned against the gods, his sons.

As for Mummu, by the neck he embraced him

As (that one) sat down on his knees to kiss him,18 (Now) whatever they had plotted between them, Was repeated unto the gods, their first-born.

When the gods heard (this), they were astir, (Then) lapsed into silence and remained speechless.

Surpassing in wisdom, accomplished, resourceful, Ea, the all-wise, saw through their™ scheme.

A master design against it he devised and set up, Made artful his spell against it, surpassing and holy.

He recited it and made it subsist in the deep,

As he poured sleep upon him. Sound asleep he lay,

When Apsu he had made prone, drenched with sleep, Mummu, the adviser, was powerless to stir

He loosened his band, tore off his tiara, Removed his halo28 (and) put it on himself.

Having fettered Apsu, he slew him.

Mummu he bound and left behind lock.

Having thus upon Apsu established his dwelling,

He laid hold on Mummu, holding him by the nose-rope. After Ea had vanquished and trodden down his foes, Had secured his triumph over his enemies, In his sacred chamber in profound peace had rested, He named it "Apsu," for shrines he assigned (it). In that same place his cult hut he founded.
In the chamber of fates, the abode of destinies,
Ea and Damkina,28 his wife, dwelled (there) in splendor.
In the chamber of fates, the abode of destinies,
A god was engendered, most able and wisest of gods.

In the heart of Apsu27 was Marduk created,
In the heart of holy Apsu was Marduk created.
He who begot him was Ea, his father;
She who bore him was Damkina, his mother.
The breast of goddesses he did suck.81
The nurse that nursed him filled him with awesomeness.
Alluring was his figure, sparkling the lift of his eyes.
Lordly was his gait, commanding from of old.
When Ea saw him, the father who begot him,
He exulted and glowed, his heart filled with gladness.

He produced streams to disturb Tiamat.
When the dread fourfold wind he88 created,
Withal eleven of this kind she brought forth.
They are set for combat, growling, raging, (130)
The raising of weapons for the encounter, advancing to their hand she entrusted as she seated him in the Council:
"I have cast for thee the spell, exalting thee in the Assembly of the gods.
To counsel all the gods I have given thee full power.44
Verily, thou art supreme, my only consort art thou!

When the dread fourfold wind he88 created,
Thy vitals were diluted and so we can have no rest.
Let Apsu, thy consort, be in thy mind89
And Mummu, who has been vanquished! Thou art left alone!

[ ... ] thou paces about distraught,
[ ... ] thou art not love us!
[ ... ] pinched are our eyes,
[ ... ] without cease. Let us have rest!
[ ... ] and render (them) as the wind!"
[When] Tiamat [heard] (these) words, she was pleased:40

"[ ... ] you have given. Let us make monsters,
[ ... ] and the gods in the midst of us.
[ ... ] let us do battle and against the gods [... ]!"
They thronged and marched at the side of Tiamat.
Enraged, they plot without cease night and day,
They are set for combat, growling, raging,

They form a council to prepare for the fight.
Mother Hubur,41 she who fashions all things,
Added matchless weapons, bore monster-serpents,
Sharp of tooth, unsparing of fang.
[With venom] for blood she has filled their bodies.
Roaring dragons she has clothed with terror,
Has crowned them with haloes, making them like gods,
So that he who beholds them shall perish abjectly,
(And) that, with their bodies reared up, none might turn [them back].41

She set up the Viper, the Dragon, and the Sphinx,

The Great-Lion, the Mad-Dog, and the Scorpion-Man,
Mighty lion-demons, the Dragon-Fly, the Centaur—
Bearing weapons that spare not, fearless in battle.
Firm were her decrees, past withstanding were they.
Withal eleven of this kind she brought [forth].
From among the gods, her first-born, who formed [her Assembly],
She elevated Kingu, made him chief among them.
The leading of the ranks, command of the Assembly,

The Assyrian versions substitute here and elsewhere Lahmu and Anu for the Babylonian Ea and Damkina; similarly, Anshar-Ashur replaces Marduk.

* "The Deep."
82 Var. "Ashur" here and in the next line.
83 Var. "she caused him to suck."
84 The technical term laqatu refers primarily to the final inspection of their work by craftsmen before it is pronounced ready for use. cf. also Th. Bauer, Das Inschriftenwerk Assurbanipals (Leipzig, 1933), n. 84.
86 The word play of the Akkadian inši erti cannot readily be reflected.

Akkadian màṣīt(ya)itu reflects a double pun: cf. Orientalia, xv (1946), 380, n. 6; Za, xxxv (1923), 239, and Za, xxxvi (1924), 77-79. Grammatically, "Our son, our son!" is also possible.
87 New texts (LKA, 3 and AnSt ii, 32 f.—cf. Addenda) have filled in gaps in lines 104 ff., adding the new line 108a. Space precludes detailed comments on various points. In LKA, 3, 106 read qa- Curtis.
88 Thus LKA, 3.

"The literal translation of this idiomatic phrase is "Into thy hand(s) I have charged (filled)."
Thy utterance shall prevail over all the Annunaki!"
She gave him the Tablet of Destinies, fastened on his breast:
"As for thee, thy command shall be unchangeable,
[Thy word] shall endure!"
As soon as Kingu was elevated, possessed of [the rank
of Anu],
For the gods, his sons, [they] decreed the fate:
"Your word shall make the first subside, (160)
Shall humble the 'Power-Weapon,' so potent in (its) \textit{sweep}'"\textit{"}

Tablet II

When Tiamat had thus lent import to her handiwork,
She prepared for battle against the gods, her offspring.
To avenge Apsu, Tiamat wrought evil.
When he came before his grandfather, Anshar,
To Anshar, his (fore)father he betook himself.
When he came before his grandfather, Anshar,
All that Tiamat had plotted to him
he repeated:
"My father, Tiamat, who bore us, detests us.
She has set up the Assembly\textsuperscript{48} and is furious with rage.
All the gods have rallied to her;
Even those whom you brought forth march at her side.
They throng and march at the side of Tiamat,
Enraged, they plot without cease night and day.
They are set for combat, growling, raging,
They have formed a council to prepare for the fight
Mother Hubur, she who fashions all things,
With venom for blood she has filled their bodies.
Roaring dragons she has clothed with terror,
Has crowned them with haloes, making them like gods,
So that he who beholds them shall perish abjectly,
(And) that, with their bodies reared up, none might turn them back.
She has set up the Viper, the Dragon, and the Sphinx,
The Great-Lion, the Mad-Dog, and the Scorpion-Man,
Mighty lion-demons, the Dragon-Fly, the Centaur—
Bearing weapons that spare not,
Fearless in battle. (30)
Firm are her decrees, past withstanding are they.
Withal eleven of this kind she has brought forth.
From among the gods, her first-born, who formed her Assembly,
She has elevated Kingu, has made him chief among them.
The leading of the ranks, command of the Assembly,
The raising of weapons for the encounter, advancing to combat,
In battle the command-in-chief—
These\textsuperscript{49} to his hands [she entrusted] as she seated him in the Council:
'[I have cast the spell] for thee, exalting thee in the Assembly of the gods.
[To counsel all the] gods [I have given thee] full power.\textsuperscript{44}
(40)
[Verily, thou art supreme, my only consort] art thou!
[Thy utterance shall prevail over all the Anunnaki!]'
She has given him the Tablet of Destinies, fastened on his breast:
'[As for thee, thy command shall be unchangeable],
They word shall endure!'
As soon as Kingu was elevated, possessed of the rank
of Anu,
,[For the gods, her sons, they decreed the fate:
'[Your word] shall make the fire subside,
Shall humble the "Power-Weapon," [so potent in (its) su/eepl]''
[When Anshar heard that Tiamat] was sorely troubled,
[He smote his loins\textsuperscript{51} and] bit his lips.
(50)
[Gloomy was his heart], resdess his mood.
[He covered] his [mouth] to stifle his outcry:
"[. . . ] batde.
[The weapon thou hast made], up, bear thou!
[Lo, Mummu and] Apsu thou didst slay.
[Now, slay thou Kingu, who marches before her.
[. . . ] wisdom."
[Answered the counselor of] the gods, Nudimmud.
(30)
The reply of Ea-Nudimmud is lost in the break.
Apparently, Ea had no remedy, for Anshar next turns to Anu:)
[To Anu,] his son, [a word] he addressed:
"[. . . ] this, the most puissant of heroes,
Whose strength [is outstanding], past resisting his onslaught [Go] and stand thou up to Tiamat,
That her mood [be calmed], that her heart expand.
[If] she will not hearken to thy word,
Then tell her our [word], that she might be calmed."
When [he heard] the command of his father, Anshar,
[He made straight] for her way, following the road to her.
(30)
[But when Anu was near (enough)] to see the plan of Tiamat,
[He was not able to face her and] he turned back.
[He came abeedy to his father], Anshar.
\textit{[As though he were Tiamat}\textsuperscript{50} thus he] addressed him:
\textsuperscript{49} cf. note 47.  \textsuperscript{50} Tablet I, 159 has "his."
\textsuperscript{54} As a sign of distress.
\textsuperscript{55} cf. Oppenheim, loc. cit., 220, n.i. Note also the intransitive forms of this verb in the \textit{Legend of Zu} (below), A 23, 8 52.
\textsuperscript{56} The suffix -ki in the next line makes it apparent that the statement addressed to Anshar is an exact quotation of Anu’s previous speech to Tiamat The context bears out this interpretation.
"My hand suffices not for me to subdue thee."

Speechless was Anshar as he stared at the ground,

Hair on edge, shaking his head at Ea.

All the Anunnaki gathered at that place;

Their lips closed tight, [they sat] in silence.

"No god" (thought they) "can go to battle and,"

Facing Tiamat, escape [with his life]."

Lord Anshar, father of the gods, [rose up] in grandeur,

And having pondered in his heart, he [said to the Anunnaki]:

"He whose [strength] is potent shall be [our] avenger,

He who is [en] in battle, Marduk, the hero!"

Ea called [Marduk] to his place of seclusion.

[Giving counsel, he told him what was in his heart:]

"O Marduk, consider my advice. Hearken to thy father.

I will go and attain thy heart's desire.

[Anshar], be not muted; open wide thy lips.

He kissed his lips, his (own) gloom dispelled.

The lord rejoiced at the word of his father;

I will go and attain thy heart's desire.

What male is it who has pressed his fight against thee?

[It is but] Tiamat, a woman, that flies at thee with weapons!

[O my father—creator, be glad and rejoice;

The neck of Tiamat thou shalt soon tread upon!]

[O my father—creator, be glad and rejoice;

[The neck] of Tiamat thou shalt soon tread upon!"

"My son, (thou) who knowest all wisdom,

Calm [Tiamat] with thy holy spell.

On the storm-chariot proceed with all speed.

From her [presence] they shall not drive (thee)!

Turn (them) back!"

The lord [presence] at the word of his father.

His heart exulting, he said to his father:

"Creator of the gods, destiny of the great gods,

If I indeed, as your avenger,

Am to vanquish Tiamat and save your lives,

Set up the Assembly, proclaim supreme my destiny!

When jointly in Ubshukinnā you have sat down rejoicing,

Let my word, instead of you, determine the fates.

Unalterable shall be what I may bring into being;

Neither recalled nor changed shall be the command of my lips."

Tablet III

Anshar opened his mouth and

To Gaga, his vizier, a word he addressed:

"O Gaga, my vizier, who gladdenest my spirit,

To Lahmu and Lahamu I will dispatch thee.

Thou knowest discernment, art adept at fine talk;

The gods, thy fathers, produce thou before me!

Let all the gods proceed hither,

Let them hold converse, sit down to a banquet,

Let them eat festive bread, poured wine;

For Marduk, their avenger, let them fix the decrees.

Be on thy way, Gaga, take the stand before them,

And that which I shall tell thee repeat thou unto them:

'Anshar, your son, has sent me hither,

Charging me to give voice to [the dictates] of his heart,

[Saying]: "Tiamat, she who bore us, detests us.

She has set up the [Assembly] and is furious with rage.

All the gods have rallied to her;

Even those whom you brought forth march at her side.

They throng and march at the side of Tiamat.

Enraged, they plot without cease night and day.

They are set for combat, growling, raging,

They have formed a council to prepare for the fight.

Mother Hubur, she who fashions all things,

Has added matchless weapons, has born monster-serpents,

Sharp of tooth, unsparing of fang.

With venom for blood she has filled their bodies.

Draining dragons she has clothed with terror,

And day.

They have formed a council to prepare for the fight.

Mother Hubur, she who fashions all things,

She has set up the Viper, the Dragon, and the Sphinx,

The Great-Lion, the Mad-Dog, and the Scorpion-Man,

Mighty lion-demons, the Dragon-Fly, the Centaur—

Bearing weapons that spare not, fearless in battle.

Firm are her decrees, past withstanding are they.

Withal eleven of this kind she has brought forth.

From among the gods, her first-born, who formed [her Assembly],

She has elevated Kingu, has made [him] chief among them.

The leading of the ranks, [command of the Assembly],

The raising of weapons for the encounter,

In battle the command-in-chief—

These to his hands [she entrusted] as she sefated him in the Council:

'I have] cast the spell for thee, [exalting thee] in the Assembly of the gods.

To counsel all the gods [I have given thee full power].

[Verily], thou art supreme, my [only consort art thou]!

Thy utterance shall prevail over all the [Anunnaki]."

She has given him the Tablet of Destinies, [fastened on his breast]:

This use of pataqu is attested for metallurgy.
'As for thee, thy command shall be unchangeable,
Thy word shall endure!'

As soon as Kingu was elevated, possessed of the rank of Anu,
For the gods, her sons, they decreed the fate: (50)
'Your word shall make the fire subside,
Shall humble the "Power-Weapon," so potent in (its) sweepV'

I sent forth Anu; he could not face her,
Nudimmud was afraid and turned back.
Forth came Marduk, the wisest of gods, your son,
His heart having prompted him to set out to face Tiamat.
He opened his mouth, saying unto me:
'If I indeed, as your avenger,
Am to vanquish Tiamat and save your lives,
Set up the Assembly, proclaim supreme my destiny!' (60)
When joindy in Ubshukinna you have sat down rejoicing,
Let my word, instead of you, determine the fates.
Unalterable shall be what I may bring into being;
Neither recalled nor changed shall be the command of my lips!'

Now hasten hither and promptly fix for him your decrees,
That he may go forth to face your mighty foe!'"

Gaga departed, proceeding on his way.

Before Lahmu and Lahamu, the gods, his fathers,
He made obeisance, kissing the ground at their feet to address them:
"It was Anshar, your son, who has sent me hither,
Charging me to give voice to the dictates of his heart,
Saying: 'Tiamat, she who bore us, detests us.
She has set up the Assembly and is furious with rage.
All the gods have rallied to her,
Even those whom you brought forth march at her side.
They throng and march at the side of Tiamat
Enraged, they plot without cease night and day.
They are set for combat, growling, raging,
They have formed a council to prepare for the fight
Mother Hubur, she who fashions all things,
Has added matchless weapons, has born monster-serpents,
Sharp of tooth, unsparking of fang.
With venom for blood she has filled their bodies,
Roaring dragons she has clothed with terror,
Has crowned them with haloes, making them like gods,
So that he who beholds them shall perish abjectly,
(And) that, with their bodies reared up, none might turn them back.
She has set up vipers, dragons, and sphinxes,
Great-lions, mad-dogs, and scorpion-men,
Mighty lion-demons, dragon-flies, and centaurs—

Bearing weapons that spare not, fearless in battle.
Firm are decrees, past withstanding are they.
Withal eleven of this kind she has brought forth.
From among the gods, her first-born, who formed her Assembly,
She has elevated Kingu, has made him chief among them.
The leading of the ranks, command of the Assembly,
The raising of weapons for the encounter, advancing to combat,
In battle the command-in-chief—
These to his hands she has entrusted as she seated him in the Council: (100)
'I have cast the spell for thee, exalting thee in the Assembly of the gods.
To counsel all the gods I have given thee full power.
Verily, thou art supreme, my only consort art thou!
Thy utterance shall prevail over all the Anunnaki!'
She has given him the Tablet of Destinies, [fastened on his breast]:
'As for thee, thy command shall be unchangeable,
Thy word shall endure!'
As soon as Kingu was elevated, [possessed of the rank of Anu],
For the gods, her sons, [they decree the fate]:
'Your word shall make the fire subside,
[Shall humble the "Power-Weapon," so potent in (its) sweepV]
I sent forth Anu; he could not [face her].
Nudimmud was afraid [and turned back].
Forth came Marduk, the wisest [of gods, your son],
[His heart having prompted him to set out] to face Tiamat.
He opened his mouth, [saying unto me]:
'If I indeed, [as your avenger],
Am to vanquish Tiamat [and save your lives],
Set up the Assembly, [proclaim supreme my destiny]!
When in Ubshukinna [joindy you sit down rejoicing],
Let my word, instead of [you, determine the fates]. (120)
Unalterable shall be what [I] may bring into being;
Neither recalled nor changed shall be the command [of my lips]!'

Now hasten hither and promptly [fix for him] your decrees,
That he may go forth to face your mighty foe!"
When Lahmu and Lahamu heard this, they cried out aloud,
All the Igigi59 waited in distress:
"How strange60 that they should have made [this] decision!
We cannot fathom the doings of Tiamat!"
They made ready61 to leave on their journey,
All the great gods who decree the fates. (130)
They entered before Anshar, filling [Ubshukinna].
They kissed one another in the Assembly.
They held converse as they [sat down] to the banquet. They ate festive bread, poured [the wine], They wetted their drinking-tubes with sweet intoxicant. As they drank the strong drink, [their] bodies swelled. They became very languid as their spirits rose. For Marduk, their avenger, they fixed the decrees.

Tablet IV
They erected for him a princely throne. Facing his fathers, he sat down, presiding. Thou art indeed our avenger. To raise or bring low—these shall be (in) thy hand. Thy decree is unrivaled, thy command is Anu.

He constructed a bow, marked it as his weapon, He then made a net to enfold Tiamat therein. He mounted the storm-chariot irresistible and terrifying. He harnessed (and) yoked to it a team-of-four, The Killer, the Relentless, the Trampler, the Swift. He brought forth Imhullu "the Evil Wind," the Whirlwind, the Hurricanes, the Fourfold Wind, the Sevenfold Wind, the Cyclone, the Matchless Wind; Then he sent forth the winds he had brought forth, the seven of them. To stir up the inside of Tiamat they rose up behind him. Then the lord raised up the flood-storm, his mighty weapon. He mounted the storm-chariot irresistible [and] terrifying. He wasExpecting an answer.
Is it in their place that they have gathered, (or) in thy place?"

Thereupon the lord, having [raised] the flood-storm, his mighty weapon,

[T]o enraged Tiamat he sent word as follows:

"Why art thou risen," art haughtily exalted,

_Thou hast_ charged thine own heart to stir up conflict, . . . sons reject their own fathers,

Whilst thou, who hast born them,

   hast foreshown love! (80)

_Thou hast appointed Kingu as thy consort,

Conferring upon him the rank of Anu, not rightfully his."

Against Anshar, king of the gods, thou seekest evil;

[Against] the gods, my fathers, thou hast confirmed thy wickedness.

[Though] drawn up be thy forces, girded on thy weapons,

Stand thou up, that I and thou meet in single combat!"

When Tiamat heard this,

She was like one possessed; she took leave of her senses.

While the gods of battle sharpen their weapons.

She recites a charm, keeps casting her spell,

Then joined issue Tiamat and Marduk, wisest of gods.

The lord spread out his net to enfold her,

The Evil Wind, which followed behind, he let loose in

When Tiamat opened her mouth to consume him,

As the fierce winds charged her belly,

He drove in the Evil Wind that she close not her lips.

He released the arrow, it tore her belly,

It cut through her insides, splitting the heart.

He cast down her carcass to stand upon it

After he had slain Tiamat, the leader,

And the eleven creatures which she had charged with awe,

The whole band of demons that marched on her right,

And Kingu, who had been made chief among them,

Bound and accounted him to Uggae."

He took from him the Tablet of Destinies, not rightfully his,

Sealed (them) with a seal and fastened (them) on his breast

When he had vanquished and subdued his adversaries,

Had . . . the vainglorious foe,

Had wholly established Anshar's triumph over the foe,

And turned back to Tiamat whom he had bound.

The lord trod on the legs of Tiamat,

With his unsparing mace he crushed her skull.

When the arteries of her blood he had severed,

The North Wind bore (it) to places undisclosed.

On seeing this, his fathers were joyful and jubilant,

Then the lord paused to view her dead body,

That he might divide the monster and do artful works.

He split her like a shellfish into two parts:

Half of her he set up and ceiled it as sky,

And the gods, her helpers who marched at her side,

Trembling with terror, turned their backs about,

In order to save and preserve their lives.

Tightly encircled, they could not escape.

He made them captives and he smashed their weapons.

Thrown into the net, they found themselves ensnared;

Placed in cells, they were filled with wailing;

Bearing his wrath, they were held imprisoned.

And the eleven creatures which she had charged with awe,
In her belly he established the zenith. The Moon he caused to shine, the night (to him) entrusting. He appointed him a creature of the night to signify the days: "Monthly, without form designs with a crown. At the month's very start, rising over the land, Thou shalt have luminous horns to signify six days, On the seventh day reaching a [half]-crown. At full moon in opposition in mid-month. When the sun overtakes thee at the base of heaven, Diminish [thy crown] and retrogress in light. (20) At the time of disappearance approach thou the course of the sun, And [on the thirtieth thou shalt again stand in opposition to the sun."

(See Supplement)

Tablet VI

When Marduk hears the words of the gods, His heart prompts (him) to fashion artful works. Opening his mouth, he addresses Ea To impart the plan he had conceived in his heart: "Blood I will mass and cause bones to be. To impart the plan he had conceived in his heart: If your former statement was true, The king addresses a word to the Anunnaki: (20) Marduk summoned the great gods to Assembly; Let the great gods be here in Assembly, And [the seven days they may endure."

(20)

Marduk summoned the great gods to Assembly; Presiding graciously, he issues instructions. To his utterance the gods pay heed. The king addresses a word to the Anunnaki: "If your former statement was true, And said to Marduk, their lord: "Now, O lord, thou who hast caused our deliverance, What shall be our homage to thee?"

(50)

Let us build a shrine whose name shall be called 'Lo, a chamber for our nightly rest'; let us repose in it, Let us build a throne, a recess for his abode On the day that we arrive we shall repose in it" When Marduk heard this, Brightly glowed his features, like the day: "Construct Babylon, whose building you have requested, Let its brickwork be fashioned. You shall name it "The Sanctuary."

The Anunnaki applied the implement; For one whole year they molded bricks. When the second year arrived,

Do (now) the truth on oath by me declare? Who was it that contrived the uprising, And made Tiamat rebel, and joined battle? Let him be handed over who contrived the uprising. His guilt I will make him bear. You shall dwell in peace P The Igigi, the great gods, replied to him, To Lugaldimmerankia, counselor of the gods, their lord: "It was Kingu who contrived the uprising, And made Tiamat rebel, and joined battle. They bound him, holding him before Ea. They imposed on him his guilt and severed his blood (vessels). Out of his blood they fashioned mankind. He imposed the service and let free the gods. After Ea, the wise, had created mankind, Had imposed upon it the service of the gods— That work was beyond comprehension; As artfully planned by Marduk, did Nudimmud create it— Marduk, the king of the gods divided All the Anunnaki above and below. He assigned (them) to Anu to guard his instructions. Three hundred in the heavens he stationed as a guard. In like manner the ways of the earth he defined. In heaven and on earth six hundred (thus) he settled. After he had ordered all the instructions, To the Anunnaki of heaven and earth had allotted their portions, The Anunnaki opened their mouths And said to Marduk, their lord: "Now, O lord, thou who hast caused our deliverance, What shall be our homage to thee?"

(50)

Let us build a shrine whose name shall be called 'Lo, a chamber for our nightly rest'; let us repose in it, Let us build a throne, a recess for his abode On the day that we arrive we shall repose in it" When Marduk heard this, Brightly glowed his features, like the day: "Construct Babylon, whose building you have requested, Let its brickwork be fashioned. You shall name it "The Sanctuary."

The Anunnaki applied the implement; For one whole year they molded bricks. When the second year arrived, 68 cf. Oppenheim, Orientalia, xvi (1947), 234. 69 "The king of the gods of heaven and earth." 70 For lines 28-50 see the fragment published by E. Weidner in AJo, xi (1936) 72-74. This material was not available to Labat; von Soden's additions (cf. note 89) came too late to be utilized by Heidel. 71 EA. 72 Here and elsewhere in this epic the Anunnaki are understood to be the celestial gods (normally Igigi) as well as those of the lower regions. 73 Not "O Nannar," as translated by some. For this rebus writing signifying inanna "now" cf. AJo, xi (1936), 73. 74 Reading u-la-ri-il, with von Soden, loc. cit., 4. 75 For the New Year's festival. 76 For this and the preceding line cf. v. Soden, loc. cit.

In their presence he was seated in grandeur. Having built a stage-tower as high as Apsu, they set up in it an abode for Marduk, Enlil, (and) Ea in their presence he was seated in grandeur. After they had achieved the building of Esagila, All the Anunnaki erected their shrines. The three hundred Igigi . . . . all of them gathered, The lord being on the lofty dais which they had built as his abode, (70)

The gods, his fathers, at his banquet he seated: "This is Babylon, the place that is your home!" Make merry in its precincts, occupy its broad [places]."

The great gods took their seats, They set up festive drink, sat down to a banquet. After they had made merry within it, In Esagila, the splendid, had performed their rites. The norms had been fixed (and) all [their] portents, All the gods apportioned the stations of heaven and earth.

The fifty great gods took their seats. (80)
The seven gods of destiny set up the three hundred [in heaven]. Enlil raised the bow, his weapon, and laid (it) before them. The gods, his fathers, saw the net he had made. When they beheld the bow, how skillful its shape, His fathers praised the work he had wrought Raising (it), Anu spoke up in the Assembly of the gods, As he kissed the bow: "This is my daughter!"

He named the names of the bow as follows: "Longwood is the first, the second is Accurate; its third name is Bow-Star, in heaven I have made it shine."

(Lines 86-112, hitherto largely or wholly destroyed, have now been filled in by another Sultantepe duplicate; cf. Gurney, Anatolian Studies, n. 33. A translation of lines 91-104 will be found on p. 503. Labat's assumed lines 98 is to be deleted, following von Soden, ZA, XL (1932), 169, but his line count has been retained for convenience.)

"Most exalted be the Son, our avenger; Let his sovereignty be surpassing, having no rival. May he shepherd the black-headed ones, his creatures. To the end of days, without forgetting, let them acclaim his ways.

May he establish for his fathers the great food-offerings; Their support they shall furnish, shall tend their sanctuaries."

May he cause incense to be smelled, . . . their spells, Make a likeness on earth of what he has wrought in heaven. May he order the black-headed to revere him, May the subjects ever bear in mind to speak of their god, And may they at his word pay heed to the goddess. May food-offerings be borne for their gods and goddesses.

Without fail let them support their gods! Their lands let them improve, build their shrines, Let the black-headed wait on their gods. As for us, by however many names we pronounce, he is our god!

Let us then proclaim his fifty names:

'He whose ways are glorious, whose deeds are likewise,

Who provides grazing and drinking places, enriches their stalls,

Who with the flood-storm, his weapon, vanquished the detractors,

(And) who the gods, his fathers, rescued from distress. Truly, the Son of the Sun, most radiant of gods is he. In his brilliant light may they walk forever! On the people he brought forth, endowed with life,

The service of the gods he imposed that these may have ease. Creation, destruction, deliverance, grace— Shall be by his command. They shall look up to him! (2) MARUKKA verily is the god, creator of all, Who gladdens the heart of the Anunnaki, appeases the Igigi.

(3) MARUTUKU verily is the refuge of his land, city, and people. Unto him shall the people give praise forever.

(4) BARASHAKUSHU stood up and took hold of its reins;

Wide is his heart, warm his sympathy.

(5) LUGALDIMMERANKIA is his name which we proclaimed in our Assembly.

His commands we have exalted above the gods, his fathers.

Verily, he is lord of all the gods of heaven and underworld The king at whose discipline the gods above and below are in mourning.
(6) NARI-LUGALDIMMERANKIA is the name of him
Whom we have called the monitor of the gods;
Who in heaven and on earth founds for us retreats in trouble,
And who allots stations to the Igigi and Anunnaki.
At his name the gods shall tremble and quake in retreat.

(7) ASARULUDU is that name of his
Whose horned cap
Who produces riches and treasures, establishes abundance,
Who in heaven and on earth founds for us retreats in distress.
Who restored the lost gods, as though his own creation;
Who destroys the wayward foes. Let us praise his names!

(8) NAMTILLAKU, the god of the benign breath, the lord who
Who, as the protecting deities
He is truly the light of the gods, the mighty leader,
Like us, do you utter his names!

(9) NAMRU, whose name was thirdly called
The shining god who illumines our ways.
Asaruludu, whose name was thirdly called (9) NAMTILLAKU, the god who maintains life,
Who restores the lost gods, as though his own creation;
The lord who revives the dead gods by his pure incantation,
Who destroys the wayward foes. Let us praise his prowess!

Asaruludu, whose name was thirdly called (9) NAMTILLAKU, the god who maintains life,
Who restores the lost gods, as though his own creation;
The lord who revives the dead gods by his pure incantation,
Who destroys the wayward foes. Let us praise his prowess!

(10) ASARU, bestower of cultivation, who established water levels;
Creator of grain and herbs, who causes vegetation to sprout.

(11) ASARUALIM, who is honored in the place of counsel,
Who excels in council;
To whom the gods hope, not being possessed of fear.

(12) ASARUALIMNUNNA, the gracious, light of the father, his begetter,
Who directs the decrees of Anu, Enlil, Ea and Ninigiku.
He is their provider who assigns their portions,
Whose horned cap is plenty, multiply [ing ... ].

(13) TU-TU is he, who effects their restoration.

Let him purify their shrines that they may have ease.
Let him devise the spell that the gods may be at rest
Should they rise in anger, let them turn [back].
Verily, he is supreme in the Assembly of the gods;
No one among the gods is his equal.
Tutu is (14) ZIUKINNA, life of the host of [the gods],
Who established for the gods the holy heavens;
Who keeps a hold on their ways, determines their courses;
He shall not be forgotten by the beclouded. Let them remember his deeds!
Tutu they thirdly called (15) ZI-KU, who establishes holiness,
The god of the benign breath, the lord who hearkens and accedes;
Who produces riches and treasures, establishes abundance;
Who has turned all our wants to plenty;
Whose benign breath we smelled in sore distress.
Let them speak, let them exalt, let them sing his praises!
Tutu, fourthly, let the people magnify as (16) AGAKU, the lord of the holy charm, who revives the dead;
Who had mercy on the vanquished gods,
Who removed the yoke imposed on the gods, his enemies,
(And) who, to redeem them, created mankind;
The merciful, in whose power it lies to grant life.
May his words endure, not to be forgotten,
In the mouth of the black-headed, whom his hands have created.
Tutu, fifthly, is (17) TUKU, whose holy spell their mouths shall murmur;
Who with his holy charm has uprooted all the evil ones.
(18) SHAZU, who knows the heart of the gods,
Who examines the inside;
From whom the evildoer cannot escape;
Who sets up the Assembly of the gods, gladdens their hearts;
Who subdues the insubmissive; their wide-spread [pro]tection;
Who directs justice, roots out crooked talk,
Who roots all enemies,
Who with the weapon roots out all enemies,
Who frustrates their plans, scatters (them) to the winds;
Who plots out all the wicked ones who tremble before him.

122 This verse confirms the equation of aiir with Sumerian nari made by S. N. Kramer, BASOR, 79 (1940), 25, n. 25. The meaning "monitor" for this form and "admonition, instruction" for alitu would seem to fit all known instances.

123 Lit. "seats."

124 The Judu and lamassu.

126 Lit. "proclaim."

127 The reading III-AM on a new fragment brings the numbers into agreement with the actual enumeration and eliminates the discrepancies entailed in previous mistaken readings.

128 Another metaphor for "mankind."

Let the gods exult in Assembly!
Shazu, fourthly, (21) ZAHURIM, who insures a hearing for the gods, his fathers,
Creator of the gods, his fathers,
Who roots out the enemies, destroys their progeny;
Who frustrates their doings, leaving nothing of them.
May his name be evoked and spoken in the land! (50)
Shazu, fifthly, they shall praise as (22) ZAHURIM, the lord of the living,
Who destroys all adversaries, all the disobedient;
[pur]sues the evil;
Who all the fugitive gods brought home to their shrines.
May this his name endure!
To Shazu, moreover, they shall render all honor as (23) ZAHURIM,
Who all the foes destroyed as though in battle.
(24) ENBILULU, the lord who makes them flourish, is he;
The mighty one who named them, who instituted roast-offerings;
Who all the foes destroyed as though in battle.
May the gods exult in Assembly!
Shazu,
To Shazu, moreover, they shall, sixthly, render all honor.
The lord who named them, who instituted roast-offerings;
Who all the foes destroyed as though in battle.
May this his name endure!

135 Lit. “sets up.”
136 THI, meaning of gugallu fails to come through in v. Soden’s rendering as “Walter.” Attention may be called to my translation in AASOR, xvi (1936), 99. The term starts out with the value of “inspector of canals” and is thence transferred to the weather-gods (Adad; cf. Ennuge in Gilg., XI, 6). Eventually it comes to be applied to gods of vegetation and fertility, but in most contexts, including the present, the original connection is still apparent, cf. Th. Jacobsen, JNES, v (1946), 130.
137 Lit. “sets up.”
138 For lines 70-76 cf. the discussion by Landsberger in Die Welt des Orientes, 1 (1950), 362 ff., which is affected only slightly by the recently published text in lKA, 8. Note especially the variant reading in King, STC, n. lxxii, 16.

Sirsir, secondly, they named (29) MALAH—and so forth—188 Tiamat is his vessel and he the rider.
(30) GIL, who stores up grain heaps—massive mounds—Who brings forth barley and millet, furnishes the seed of the land.
(31) GILMA, who makes lasting the lofty abode of the gods,
Creator of security,
The hoop that holds the barrel together, who presents good things.
(32) AGILMA, the exalted one, who tears off the crown from the wrong position,
Who creates the clouds above the waters, makes enduring aloft
(33) ZULUM, who designates the fields for the gods, allots the creation,
Who grants portions and food-offerings, tends the shrines.
(34) MUMMU, creator of heaven and earth, who directs...
The god who sanctifies heaven and earth is, secondly,
(35) ZULUMMAR,
Whom no other among the gods can match in strength.
(36) AGILMA, who heaps up abundance for the people’s consumption?²⁹
The irrigator of the plantations of the gods.
(37) PAGALGUENNA, the foremost of all the lords, whose strength is outstanding;
Who is pre-eminent in the royal abode, most exalted of the gods.
(38) LUGALDURMAH, the king who frustrated the work of Tiamat,
Rooted out her weapons;
Whose foundation is firm in front and in the rear.
(39) ARANUNNA, counselor of Ea, creator of the gods, his fathers,
Whose princely ways no god whatever can equal.
(40) DUMUDUKU, whose pure dwelling is renewed in Duku;¹⁴⁰

Dumuduku, without whom Lugalkudug makes no decision.
(41) LUGALLANNA, the king whose strength is outstanding among the gods,
The lord, strength of Anu, who became supreme at the call of Anshar.
(42) LUGALLANGA, who carried off all of them amidst the struggle,¹⁴¹

140 “Pure Dwelling,” a sacred chamber in the Temple at Babylon.
141 Lit. “sets up.”
142 cf. v. Soden, loc. cit., but contrast Landsberger, ad loc.
(43) IRKINGU, who carried off Kingu in the thick\(^{28}\) of the battle,
Who conveys guidance for all, establishes rulership,
(44) KINMA, who directs all the gods, the giver of counsel,
At whose name the gods quake in fear, as at the storm.
(45) ESIZKUR shall sit aloft in the house of prayer;
May the gods bring their presents before him,
That (from him) they may receive their assignments;
None can without him create artful works.
Four black-headed ones are among his creatures\(^{144}\);
Aside from him no god \(\textit{nows} \) the answer as to their days.

(46) GIBIL, who maintains the \textit{sharp point} of the weapon,
Who creates artful works in the battle with Tiamat;
Who has broad wisdom, is accomplished in insight,
(47) ADDU be his name, the whole sky may he cover.
May his beneficent roar ever hover over the earth;
May he, as Mummu\(^{148}\), diminish the clouds\(^{147}\);
Below, for the people may he furnish sustenance.
(48) ASHARU, who, as is his name, guided\(^{148}\) the gods of destiny;
All of the people are verily in his charge.
(49) NEBIRU shall hold the crossings of heaven and earth,
So that they (the gods) cannot cross above and below.
They must wait upon him.
Nebiru is the star\(^{49}\) which in the skies is brilliant.
Verily he holds the central position, they shall bow down to him\(^{150}\).
Saying: "He who the midst of the Sea restlessly crosses,
Let 'Crossing' be his name, who controls\(^{151}\) its midst
May they uphold the course of the stars of heaven;
May he shepherd all the gods like sheep.
May he vanquish Tiamat; may her life be strait and short!\(^{152}\)
Into the future of mankind, when days have grown old,
May she recede\(^{58}\) without cease and stay away forever.\(^{154}\)

Because he created the spaces and fashioned the firm ground,
Father Enlil called his name (50) \textit{'Lord of the Lands.'} \(^{158}\)

When all the names which the Igigi proclaimed,
Ea had heard, his spirit rejoiced,
Thus: "He whose names his fathers have glorified,
He is indeed even as I; his name shall be Ea.
All my combined rites he shall administer;
All my instructions he shall carry out!"
With the tide "Fifty" the great gods
Proclaimed him whose names are fifty and made his way supreme.

Epilogue
Let them be kept (in mind) and let the leader explain them\(^{158}\).
Let the wise and the knowing discuss (them) together.
Let the father recite (them) and impart to his son.
Let the ears of shepherd and herdsman be opened.
Let him rejoice in Marduk, the Enlil of the gods,
That his land may be fertile and that he may prosper.
Firm in his order, his command unalterable,
The utterance of his mouth no god shall change.
When he looks he does not turn away his neck;
When he is angry, no god can withstand his wrath.
Vast is his mind, broad his sympathy,
Sinner and transgressor may come before him.
\(\text{\text{\textsuperscript*}}\)

(See the Supplement for the remainder of the Epilogue.)

The Epic of Gilgamesh

The theme of this epic is essentially a secular one. The poem deals with such earthly things as man and nature, love and adventure, friendship and combat—all masterfully blended into a background for the stark reality of death. The climactic struggle of the protagonist to change his eventual fate, by learning the secret of immortality from the hero of the Great Flood of long ago, ends in failure; but with the failure comes a sense of quiet resignation. For the first time in the history of the world a profound experience on such a heroic scale has found expression in a noble style. The scope and sweep of the epic, and its sheer poetic power, give it a timeless appeal. In antiquity, the influence of the poem spread to various tongues and cultures. Today it captivates student and poet alike.

The Akkadian tide of the poem, which was taken as usual from the opening words, is \textit{Sa naqba imuru}, "He who saw everything." The prevailing meter has the normal four beats to a line. The work is divided into twelve tablets. The longest of these contains over three hundred lines. It happens to be the so-called Flood Tablet (XI), virtually in a perfect state of preservation. The rest has survived in portions, some of considerable size and others in relatively small fragments. All but a few of the Akkadian texts come from the library of Ashurbanipal at Nineveh. Unlike the Creation Epic, however, the Gilgamesh Epic is known also from versions which antedate the first millennium B.C. From the middle of the second millennium have come down fragments of an Akkadian recension current in the Hittite Empire, and the same Bogazkoy archives have yielded also important fragments of a Hittite translation, as well as a fragment of a Hurrian rendering of the epic. From the first half of the second millennium we possess representative portions of the Old Babylonian version of the epic, which pertain to Tablets I-III, and X. That this version was itself a copy of an earlier text is suggested by the internal evidence of the material. The original date of composition of the Akkadian work has to be placed at the turn of the second millennium, if not slightly earlier.

The connection between the Epic of Gilgamesh as we know it in its Akkadian form, and its various Sumerian analogues, has been clarified in recent years thanks to the work of C. J. Gadd on the Epic of Gilgamesh, Tablet XII, RA, xxxi (1933), 126 if., and especially by the studies of S. N. Kramer; see his summary in The Epic of Gilgamesh and its Sumerian Sources, JAO, LXIV (1944), 7 ff. It has been demonstrated that Tablet XII is not of a piece with the other eleven tablets of the poem, but is instead a literal translation from the Sumerian. The epic proper, on the other hand, while utilizing certain motifs which are featured in Sumerian poems, does so largely in the course of developing a central theme that has no Sumerian prototype. In other words, the first eleven tablets of the Akkadian poem of Gilgamesh constitute an instance of creative borrowing which, substantially, amounts to an independent creation.1

The text of the Assyrian version, now available in the model edition published, with transliteration and notes, by R. Campbell Thompson under the title of The Epic of Gilgamesh (1930). Thompson's arrangement and line count have been adopted in this translation, except for the passages that have been allocated otherwise, as will be noted in each given instance. The sources of the texts not given by Thompson will be cited in detail in the course of the translation.

Of the literature on the subject only a small selection can be listed. One cannot fail, however, to cite the work of Peter Jensen, antiquated though it may be in some respects, for no scholar has done more than he to bring the epic to the attention of the modern world. The translation, transliteration, and notes in his Assyrisch-babylonischen Mythen und Epen (Keilinschriftliche Bibliothek, vi, 1900) remain useful to this day; and his monumental Das Gilgamesch-Epos in der Weltliteratur (Vol. 1, 1906; Vol. 11, 1926) testifies to his enduring preoccupation with this subject. Important progress was made by A. Ungnad and H. Gressmann, Das Gilgamesch-Epos (1919), and Ungnad returned to the subject on two subsequent occasions: Die Religion der Babylonier und Assyrier (1921), and Gilgamesch-Epos und Odyssey (Kulturfragen, 4/5, 1925). E. Ebeling contributed a translation to AOT (2nd ed., 1926). The standard German translation is now that of A. Schott, Das Gilgamesch-Epos (1934). In English we have R. Campbell Thompson's translation into hexameters, entitled The Epic of Gilgamesh (1928). To W. E. Leonard we owe a rendering into free rhythms, entitled Gilgamesh (1934), based on a German translation by H. Ranke. The book of G. Contenau, Upopie de Gilgamesh is more valuable perhaps for its general orientation than for the particular contribution of the translation. An informed translation accompanied by brief notes has been published by F. M. Bohl under the Dutch title Het Gilgamesj-Epos (1941). The latest and most dependable translation in English, with brief notes and an extensive discussion of the biblical-parallels is that of A. Heidel, The Gilgamesh Epic and Old Testament Parallels (1946). I have profited considerably from Heidel's treatment, as I have also from that of Schott (see above). The same holds true of Schott's notes, published in ZA, xxxii (1934), 92 ff., and of the notes by A. L. Oppenheim, Mesopotamian Mythology II, Orientalia, xvi (1948), 17 ff.

Tablet I

(Text: mutilated or missing—see the Supplement) (3-7) He who saw everything [to the end] of the land, [Who all things experienced, [considered all! [... ] together [...], [...] of wisdom, who all things [...].

The [h]idden he saw, [laid bare] the undisclosed. He brought report of before the Flood, Achieved a long journey, tiring and resting. All his toil he engraved on a stone stela. Of ramparted8 Uruk the wall he built, Of hallowed Eanna,4 the pure sanctuary.

Behold its outer wall, whose cornice5 is like copper, Peer at the inner wall, which none can equal! Seize upon the threshold, which is from of old! Draw near to Eanna, the dwelling of Ishtar, Which no future king, no man, can equal. Go up and walk6 on the walls of Uruk, Inspect the base terrace, examine the brickwork: Is not its brickwork of burnt brick?

Did not the Seven [Sages]7 lay its foundations?

(Remainder of the column broken away. A Hittite fragment [cf. J. Friedrich, ZA, xxxix (1929), 2-5] corresponds in part with the damaged initial portion of our column ii, and hence appears to contain some of the material from the end of the first column. We gather from this fragment that several gods had a hand in fashioning Gilgamesh, whom they endowed with superhuman size. At length, Gilgamesh arrives in Uruk.)

Two-thirds of him is god, [one-third of him is human]. The form of his body [...]

The onslaught of his weapons verily has no equal. By the drum8 are aroused [his] companions. (10) The nobles of Uruk are worried in [their chambers]: "Gilgamesh leaves not the son to [his] father; [Day] and [night] is unbridled his arrogance. [Is this Gilga]mesh, [the shepherd of ramparted] Uruk?

Is this [our] shepherd, [bold, stately, wise]? [Gilgamesh] leaves not [the maid to her mother],

1 cf. S. N. Kramer, loc. cit., 23, n.116. To the material listed in this article add now id., ICS, 1 (1947), 3-46.

2 For the restoration of the first two lines cf. GETH, i n., and Böhl, HGE, III.

3 For this translation of Uru-sapi of cf. Leonard, Gilgamesh, 3.

4 The temple of Anu and Ishtar in Uruk.

5 Oppenheim, Orientalia, xvii (1948), 19, n.2.

8 For the seven sages, who brought civilization to seven of the oldest cities in the land, see H. Zimmer, ZA, xxxv (1923), 151 ff.

9 For pukh· cf. the introduction to Tablet XII and note 233. Here perhaps the reference is to the abuse for personal purposes of an instrument intended for civic or religious use.

10 For the various writings of the name cf. GETH, 8 f.; Th. Jacobsen, The Sumerian King List (1939), 89 f., n.128; and S. N. Kramer, JAO, lxxv (1944), 11, n.15, and A. Goetze, ICS, 1 (1937)? 254.
The warrior's daughter, [the noble's spouse]!

The gods hearkened to their plaint,

The gods of heaven Uruk's lord [they ...]:

"Did not [Aruru]²⁰ bring forth this strong wild ox?"

(The onslaught of his weapons) verily has no equal.

By the drum are aroused his [companions].

Gilgamesh leaves not the son to his father;

Day and night [is unbridled his arrogance].

Is this the shepherd of [ramparted] Uruk?

Is this the shepherd of [ramparted] Uruk?

Gilgamesh leaves not the maid to [her mother].

Bold, stately, (and) wise? . . .

When [Anu] had heard out their plaint,

Create now his double;

When Aruru heard this,

[On the step]pe she created valiant Enkidu,

With the gazelles he feeds on grass,

With the wild beasts he jostles at the watering-place,

With the teeming creatures his heart delights in water.

(Now) a hunter, a trapping-man,²⁹

Faced him at the watering-place.

He took the road, in Uruk he set [his foot]:

"Thou, Aruru, didst create [the man];

Create now his double;"³¹

His stormy heart²² let him match.

Let them contend, that Uruk may have peace!"

When Aruru heard this,

A double of Anu she conceived within her.

Aruru washed her hands,

Pinched off clay and cast it on the steppe.¹⁸

[On the step]pe she created valiant Enkidu,

Offspring of . . . , essence⁴ of Ninurta.

[Sha]lggy¹⁵ with hair is his whole body,

He is endowed with head hair like a woman.

The locks of his hair sprout like Nisaba.¹⁶

He knows neither people nor land;

Garbed is he like Sumuqan."

With the gazelles he feeds on grass,

With the wild beasts he jostles at the watering-place,

With the teeming creatures his heart delights in water.

(Now) a hunter, a trapping-man,²⁹

Faced him at the watering-place.

[One] day, a second, and a third

He faced him at the watering-place.

When the hunter saw him, his face became motionless.

He and his beasts went into his house,

[Sore afraid, still, without a sound,

(While) his heart [was disturbed], overclouded his face.

For woe had [entered] his belly;

His face was like that [of a wayfarer] from²⁰ afar.

(iii)

The hunter opened [his mouth] to speak,

Saying to [his father]:

"My father, there is [a] fellow who [has come from the hills],

He is the mightiest in the land; strength he has.

[Like the essence] of Anu, so mighty [his strength]!

[Ever] he ranges over the hills,

[Ever] with the beasts [he feeds on grass].

[Ever sets he] his feet at the watering-place.

[I am so frightened that] I dare not approach him!

[He filled in] the pits that I had dug,

[He tore up] my traps which I had [set],

The beasts and creatures of the steppe

[He has made slip through my hands].²¹

[He does not allow] me to engage in fieldcraft!²²

[His father opened his mouth to speak],

Saying to the hunter:

"[My son], in Uruk [there lives] Gilgamesh.

[No one is there more mighty] than he.

[Like the essence of Anu, so mighty] is his strength!

[Go, then, toward Uruk set] thy face,

[Speak to him of] the power of the man.

[Let him give thee a harlot-lass²⁸]. Take (her) [with thee].

[Let her prevail against him] by dint of [greater] might

[When he waters the beasts at] the watering-place,

[She shall pull off] her cloth[ing, laying bare] her riper-

[As soon as he sees] her, he will draw near to her.

Reject him²⁴ will his beasts [that grew up on] his

[steppe]!"

[Giving heed to] the advice of his father,

The hunter went forth [to Gilgamesh].

He took the road, in Uruk he set [his foot]:

"[... ] Gilga[mesh ... ]].

There is a fellow [who has come from the hills],

He is the mightiest in the land; strength he has].²⁰

(iii)

Like the essence of Anu, so mighty [his strength]!

²⁰ The verb šu₃₃ is used here as "come" and "go." The state here described suggests the end, not the beginning, of a journey.

²¹ Or perhaps "he has made me forfeit," the causative form of a phrase which, with the verb in the simple stem, has a well-established legal connotation.

²² cf. Thompson, EG, 11.

²³ The two terms seem to be employed here as a compound of the type used with amelu, cf. above, note 19. For ti₃₃ru₃₃ the meaning ("temple-iprostitute") is amply established. The root lamu₃₃ in the sense of "be happy," occurs as a verbal noun in VIII, iii, 5. The noun means here "pleasure-girl."

²⁴ Lit. "regard as stranger, deny."
[Ever] he ranges over the hills,
Ever with the beasts [he feeds on grass],
Ever [sets] he his feet at the watering-place.
I am so frightened that I dare not approach [him]!
He filled in the pits that [I] had dug,
He tore up my

The wild beasts of the steppe drew away from his body.
Starded was Enkidu, as his body became taut,
His knees were motionless—for his wild beasts had gone.
Enkidu had to slacken his pace—it was not as before;
But he now had [wi]sdom, [br]oader understanding.
Returning, he sits at the feet of the harlot.
He looks up at the face of the harlot,
His ears attentive, as the harlot speaks;
[The harlot] says to him, to Enkidu:
"Thou art [wi]se," Enkidu, art become like a god!
Why with the wild creatures dost thou roam over the steppe?
Come, let me lead thee [to] ramparted Uruk,
To the holy temple, abode of Anu and Ishtar,
Where lives Gilgamesh, accomplished in strength,
And like a wild ox lords it over the folk."
As she speaks to him, her words find favor,
His heart enlightened,
he yearns for a friend.
Enkidu says to her, to the harlot:
"Up, lass, escort thou me."
To the pure sacred temple, abode of Anu and Ishtar,
Where lives Gilgamesh, accomplished in strength,
And like a wild ox lords it over the folk.
I will challenge him [and will b]oIdly address him,
(v)
[I will] shout in Uruk: 'I am he who is mighty!''I am the [one who can alter destinies,
[He] who] was born on the steppe is mighty; strength he has.'"
"[Up then, let us go, that he may see] thy face."
[I will show thee Gilgamesh; where] he is I know well.
Come then, O Enkidu, to ramparted [Uruk],
Where people are re[split]ent in festal attire,
(Where) each day is made a holiday,
Where [.] lads . . . ,
And la[ss]es [.] . . . of figure. (10)
Their ripeness [ . . . ] full of perfume.
They drive the great ones from their couches!
To thee, O Enkidu, who rejoicest in living,
I will show Gilgamesh, the joyful man!
Look thou at him, regard his face;
He is radiant with manhood, vigor he has.
With ripeness gorgeous is the whole of his body,
Mightier strength has he than thou,
Never resting by day or by night.
O Enkidu, renounce thy presumption! (20)
Gilgamesh—of him Shamash is fond;
Anu, Enlil, and Ea have broadened his wisdom.
Before thou comest down from the hills,
Gilgamesh will see thee in (his) dreams in Uruk:
For Gilgamesh arose to reveal his dreams,
Saying to his mother:
"My mother, I saw a dream last night:
There appeared the stars in the heavens.
Like the essence of Anu it descends upon me.
I sought to lift it; it was too stout for me.
I sought to drive it off, but I could not remove it.
(30)

That thou didst place it at my feet,
[Thou didst love it and was drawn to it as though to a woman],
[It was I who made it vie with thee;]
[The wise mother of Gilgamesh, who is versed in all knowledge,] Says to her son:
"In the midst of the nobles.
While the nobles kissed its feet.
I felt joyful and I walked about
As I set my forehead.
(40)

Gilgamesh arose to reveal the dream,
Saying to his mother;
"My mother, in the time of night
I felt joyful and I walked about
In the midst of the nobles.
The stars assembled in the heavens.
The handiwork of Anu descended towards me.
I sought to lift it; it was too heavy for me!
I sought to move it; move it I could not!
Uruk-land was gathered about it,
While the nobles kissed its feet.
When thou seest him, thou wilt rejoice.
(20)

The mother of Gilgamesh, who knows all,
Says to Gilgamesh:
"Forsooth, Gilgamesh, one like thee
Was born on the steppe,
And the hills have reared him.
When thou seest him, thou wilt rejoice.
(20)

The nobles will kiss his feet;
Thou wilt embrace him and him;
Thou wilt lead him to me."
He lay down and saw another
[He] arose and said to his mother:
"[My mother], I saw another
[...] in the confusion, In the street
[Of] broad-marted Uruk

See von Soden, ZA, 84 (1939), 210.
To press the carrying strap against it; for this method, which is witnessed on the Ur Standard and is still practiced in modern Iraq, cf. Th. Jacobsen, Acta Orientalia, vui (1930), 67, n.3.
For mi-in di cf. JCS, 1 (1947), 30, n.6; Orientalia, XVIII, 387.
If ina e-ii-e may be read and so interpreted.
There lay an axe, and
They were gathered round it.
That axe, strange was its shape.
As soon as I saw it, I rejoiced.
I loved it, and as though to a woman,
I was drawn to it.
I took it and placed it
At my side."

The mother of Gilgamesh, who knows all,
[Says to Gilgamesh]:

"Because I made it vie with thee."

While Gilgamesh reveals his dream, Enkidu sits before the harlot.
The two of them make love together.
He forgot the steppe where he was born.
For six days and seven nights Enkidu came forth
Mating with the lass.
Then the harlot opened her mouth, saying to Enkidu:
"As I look at thee, Enkidu, thou art become like a god;
Wherefore with the wild creatures dost thou range over the steppe?
Up, I will lead thee to broad-marted Uruk,
To the holy temple, the abode of Anu,
Enkidu, arise, I will lead thee to Eanna, the abode of Anu,
Where lives Gilgamesh, accomplished in deeds,
And thou, like...

Wilt love [him like] thyself.
Up, arise from the ground,
The shepherd's bed!"
He hearkened to her words, approved her speech;
The woman's counsel fell upon his heart.
She pulled off (her) clothing;
With one (piece) she clothed him,
With the other garment she clothed herself.
Holding on to his hand, she leads him like a child
To the shepherd-hut, the place of the sheepfold.
Round him the shepherds gathered.

The milk of wild creatures
He was wont to suck.

Food they placed before him;
He gagged, he gaped
And he stared.
Nothing does Enkidu know
Of eating food;
To drink strong drink he has not been taught.
The harlot opened her mouth,
Saying to Enkidu:
"Eat the food, Enkidu,
As is life's due;
Drink the strong drink, as is the custom of the land."
Enkidu ate the food, Until he was sated;
Of strong drink he drank seven goblets.
Carefree became his mood (and) cheerful,
His heart exulted
And his face glowed.
He rubbed the shaggy growth,
The hair of his body, anointed himself with oil,
Became human.
He put on clothing, He is like a groom!
He took his weapon
To chase the lions,
That shepherds might rest at night.
Enkidu is their watchman,
The bold man, the unique hero!
To he said:
He made merry.
When he lifted his eyes, He beheld a man.
He says to the harlot: "Lass, fetch the man!
Why has he come hither? His name let me hear."
The harlot called the man, going up to him and saying to him:
"Sir, whither hastenest thou? What is this thy toilsome course?"
The man opened his mouth, saying to En[kidu]:
"Into the meeting-house he has intruded, Which is set aside for the people,
He made merry.
When he lifted his eyes, He beheld a man.
He says to the harlot: "Lass, fetch the man!
Why has he come hither? His name let me hear."
The harlot called the man, Going up to him and saying to him: "Sir, whither hastenest thou? What is this thy toilsome course?"
The man opened his mouth, saying to En[kidu]:
"Into the meeting-house he has intruded, Which is set aside for the people,
... for wedlock?
On the city he has heaped defilement,
Imposing strange things on the hapless city.
For the king of broad-marted Uruk
The drum\(^\text{28}\) of the people is free for nuptial choice.
For Gilgamesh, king of broad-marted Uruk,
The drum of the people is free
For nuptial choice,
That with lawful\(^\text{55}\) wives he might mate!
He is the first,
The husband\(^*\) comes after.
By the counsel of the gods it has (so) been ordained.
With the cutting of his umbilical cord
It was decreed for him!"
At the words of the man
His face grew pale."

\(\text{(some three lines missing)}\)

\(\text{(vi)}\)

\(\text{(some six lines missing)}\)

[Enkidu] walks [in front]
And the lass behind him.
When he entered broad-marted Uruk,
The populace gathered about him. (10)
As he stopped in the street
Of broad-marted Uruk,
The people were gathered,
Saying about him:
"He is like Gilgamesh in build!\(^58\)
Though shorter in stature,
He is stronger of bone.

[He is the strongest in the land]; strength he has.
The milk of wild creatures
He was wont to suck.
In Uruk (there will be) a constant \text{(clatter of) arms}"
The nobles rejoiced:
"A hero has appeared
For the man of proper mien!
For Gilgamesh, the godlike,
His equal has come forth."
For Ishhara\(^\text{59}\) the bed
Is laid out.
Gilgamesh. [...]
At night...[,]
As he approaches,
[Enkidu] stands in the street
To bar the way

\(\text{Tablet 111}\)

\text{OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION}\n
In the Assyrian Version, this tablet is extant only in fragments, which will be translated below, under B. The older text is that of the "Yale Tablet" \(\text{(YOS, iv, 3, Pis. 1-7)}\), which continues the account of the "Pennsylvania Tablet."

\(\text{(i)}\)

(Mutilated or missing. Gilgamesh has decided on an expedition against monstrous Huwawa [Assyrian Hum-} baba], who resides in the Cedar Forest. Enkidu tries to dissuade him, but is unsuccessful, as may be gathered from the following verses.)

"[Why] dost thou desire
To do [this thing]?\(\text{13}\)"

\(\text{(some three lines missing)}\)

\(\text{(vi)}\)

\(\text{(some five lines missing)}\)

\(\text{Gilgamesh [...]}\)

On the steppe [...]
Sprouts [...].
He rose up and [...]
Before him.
They met in the Market-of-the-Land.
Enkidu barred the gate
With his foot,
Not allowing Gilgamesh to enter.
They grappled each other,
Holding fast like bulls.
They shattered the doorpost,
As the wall shook.
Gilgamesh and Enkidu
Grappled each other,
Holding fast like bulls;
They shattered the doorpost,
As the wall shook.
As Gilgamesh bent the knee—
His foot on the ground—\(\text{60}\)
His fury abated
And he turned away.
When he had turned away,
Enkidu to him
Speaks up, to Gilgamesh:
"As one alone thy mother
Bore thee,
The wild cow of the steer-folds,
Ninsunna!
Raised up above men is thy head.
Kingship over the people
Enlil has granted thee!"

\(\text{\ldots for wedlock?}\)

\(\text{defilement,}\)

\(\text{hapless}\)

\(\text{drum}\)

\(\text{lawful}\)

\(\text{husband}\)

\(\text{brideship.}\)

\(\text{Very obscure. But if pufyu is to be given here the same meaning as}\)

\(\text{in I, ii, 10 and XII, i ff., then one must seek here a reference to some such instrument whose sound could summon the listeners to a given task or occasion.}\)

\(\text{Lit. "decreed," i.e. to their husbands.}\)

\(\text{Reading mu-tum} \text{ with Schott, OLZ, 1933, 521.}\)

\(\text{Reading i-ri-qu. For the end of column iii and the whole of column}\)

\(\text{iv cf. G. Dossin, La pétre d'Enkidu (1931).}\)

\(\text{Read: pa-da-tam. See von Soden, loc. cit.}\)

\(\text{A form of Ishtar, as goddess of love.}\)
They kissed each other
And formed a friendship.

(remainder missing or mutilated)

(19)

"("

(some twenty-five lines missing or mutilated)

The eyes [of Enkidu filled] with tears,
[As bitterly] he sighed.
[Ye/a, En]kidu's eyes filled with tears.
[Il/ll] was his heart,
[As bitterly] he sighed.
[ Gilgamesh], bearing with him, [Say]s to Enkidu:
"[My friend, why] do thine eyes
[Fill with tears]? [Is ill] thy [heart],
[As bitterly thou sigh]est?"

En[kidu opened his mouth],
Saying to Gilgamesh:
"A cry I [has bound my neck veins].
My arms are limp,
And my strength has turned to weakness."

Gilgamesh opened his mouth,
Saying to Enkidu:
"[In the forest resides] fierce Huwawa.
[Let us, me and thee, s]lay [him],
[That all evil from the land we may ban]ish!"

Enkidu opened his mouth,
Saying to Gilgamesh:
"I found it out, my friend, in the hills,
As I was roaming with the wild beasts.
For ten thousand [leagues]66 extends the forest.
[Who is there] that would go down into it? [Huwa]wa—his roaring is the storm-flood,
His mouth is fire, his breath is death!
Why dost thou desire
To do this thing?
An unequal struggle
Is (tangling with) the siege engine, Huwawa."

Gilgamesh opened his mouth,
Saying to Enkidu:
"[The cedar]—its mountain I would scale!"

Enkidu opened his mouth, (28-35)

(29)

Saying to [Gilgamesh]:
"How can we go
To the Cedar Forest?
Its [keeper is Wer].
He is mighty, never res[ting].
Huwawa, Wer [. . . ]
Adad [. . . ]
He [. . . ]"

To safeguard [the Cedar Forest],
As a terror to mortals has Enlil appointed him."

(Here fits in the fragment of the Assyrian Version, II, v, published in GEth, PI. x, top. Line 4 of this text is restored from a Neo-Babylonian fragment published by A. Heidel, JNES x (1952), 140-43.

"To safeguard the Cedar Forest,
As a terror to mortals has Enlil appointed him. HUMBABA—his roaring is the storm-flood,
His mouth is fire, his breath is death!
At sixty leagues he can hear the wild cows of the forest;
Who is there that would go down to his Forest?
To safeguard the cedars,
As a terror to mortals has Enlil appointed him;
Weakness lays hold on him who goes down to the forest."

(the Old Babylonian Version continues)

Gilgamesh opened his mouth,
Saying to [Enkidu]:
"Who, my friend can scale h[e]aven?"
Only the gods [live] forever under the sun.
As for mankind, numbered are their days;
Whatever they achieve is but the wind!
Even here thou art afraid of death.
What of thy heroic might?
Let me go then before thee,
Let thy mouth call to me, 'Advance, fear not!'
Should I fall, I shall have made me a name:
'Gilgamesh'—they will say—against fierce Huwawa Has fallen!' (Long) after My offspring has been born in my house,"

(obscure; 18-21 mutilated)

"[Thus calling] to me, thou hast grieved my heart.
[My hand] I will poise
And [will fe]ll the cedars.
A [name] that endures I will make for me!
[. . . ] my friend, the smith I will commission,
[Weapons] they shall cast in our presence."

[. . . ] the smith they commissioned,
The artisans sat down to discuss (it).
Mighty adzes they cast;  (30)
Axes of three talents68 each they cast.
Mighty swords they cast—
The blades, two talents each,
The (n)obs on their sheaths, thirty minas each,

61 Reading "u-a-qi-um-ma.
62 For this idiom cf. Schott, ZA, XLII (1934), 107.
63 The noun "ab-nu-a-tum" is generally derived from "appu and taken to refer, in the sense of "female companions," to "Enkidu's sorrow at the loss of his Love:" cf. Thompson, EG, 20. The context, however, would seem to favor Schott's derivation as based on nubbii "to wail," loc. cit., 107.
64 Lit. "has bound my neck veins."
66 Lit "double-hours," a measure of distance as well as of time.
67 Lit. "men."
68 Cf. JCS 1 (1947), 12, 55. The talent had sixty minas.
[... ] of the swords, thirty minas gold each,
Giligamesh and Enkidu were each laden with ten talents.
[In the] gate of Uruk, whose bolts are seven,
[...] the populace gathered.
[...] in the street of broad-marted Uruk.
[... ] Gilgamesh
[...] of broad-marted [Uruk].
[...] sat down before him,
[Sp]eaking [ ... ]:
"[ ... ] of broad-marted [Uruk]."
(one line missing)

 aún

"Him of whom they speak, I, Gilgamesh, would see,
At whose name the lands are ever in terror.
I will conquer him in the Cedar Forest!
How strong is the offspring of Uruk
I will cause the lands to hear!
My hand I will poise and will fell the cedars,
A name that endures I will make for me!"
The elders of broad-marted Uruk
Said to Gilgamesh in reply:
"Thou art yet young, Gilgamesh, thy heart has carried thee away. (10)
That which thou wouldst achieve thou knowest not.
We hear that Huwawa is wondrous in appearance;
Who is there to face his weapons?
For ten thousand leagues extends the forest;
Who is there that would go down into it?
Huwawa—his roaring is the storm-flood,
His mouth is fire, his breath is death!
Why dost thou wish to do this thing?
An unequal struggle is (tangling with) the siege engine,
When Gilgamesh heard this speech Huwawa."

He looked round, smiling, towards [his] friend:
"Now, my friend, thus [ ... ]."
(Rest of the speech destroyed. When the text again becomes intelligible, the elders are addressing Gilgamesh:)

"May thy god [protect] thee.
[May he lead thee] on the road back in safety.
To the landing-place at Uruk [may he bring thee back]!"
Giligamesh kneels down [before Shamash],
The words which he speaks [ ... ]:
"I go, O Shamash, my hands [raised up in prayer].
May it henceforth be well with my soul.
Bring me back to the landing-place at [Uruk];
Establish [over me] (thy) protection!"

Giligamesh called [his] friend
[And inspected] his omen.
This appears to have been unfavorable, for the text continues after a small break:

Tears run down [the face] of Gilgamesh:

"[ ... ] a road I have never traveled,
[ ... ] I know not.
[ ... ] I should fare well.
[ ... ] with joyful heart.
[ ... ] thrones."
[They brought him] his gear,
[ ... ] mighty [sword],
[Bow] and quiver
They placed [in] his hands.
[He] took the adzes,
[ ... ] his quiver,
[The bow] of Anshan.69
His sw[^ord he placed] in his girdle.
[ ... ] they could start on their journey,
[The populace] presses close [to Gilgamesh]:
"[ ... ] mayest thou return to the city!"
[The elders] pay him homage,
As they counsel Gilgamesh [about] the journey:
"Trust [not], Gilgamesh, in thine own strength!
Let thine [eyes] be clear;70 guard thyself!
Let Enkidu go before thee;
He knows71 the [way], has traveled the road.
[Within] the forest, all the passes
Of Huwawa let him penetrate?72
[He who goes] in front protects the companion;
Let his [eyes] be clear; [let him guard himself].
May Shamash [grant] thee thy desire;
What thy mouth has spoken may he show thine eyes!
May he open for thee the barred path,
The road unclose for thy treading,
The mountain unclose for thy foot!
May the night bring thee things of thy delight,
And may Lugalbanda stand by thee
In regard to thy wish.
Childlike, mayest thou attain thy wish!
After the slaying of Huwawa, for which thou strivest,
Wash thou thy feet!
At rest time at night dig thou a well;
Ever pure shall be the water in thy waterskin!
Cool water offer thou to Shamash.
And be thou ever mindful of Lugalbanda!"
[Enkidu] opened his mouth, saying to Gilgamesh:
"[Since] contend thou wilt, be on (thy) way.
Let thy heart be [un]afraid. Follow me!
[ ... ] I know his dwelling place,
[And also the road] which Huwawa travels."
(Mutilated or missing. Gilgamesh had bid adieu.)

68 A district in Elam.
69 cf. Landsberger, ZA, XI.H (1934), no, n.2. The sense of «-»«-» lu lu-wu-ra-ma would be close to our "look sharp!" cf. Assyrian Version, m, i, 3.
70 Lit. "has seen."
71 Lit. "make him slip through," Akk. hal-lip-ii, cf. Schott, ZA, XII.3 (1934), II.1.
72 Reading ta-na-qt.
[When the elders heard] this speech of his, They sent [off] the hero upon his way: "Go, Gilgamesh, may [____], May thy god [be at thy side]."

(four lines mutilated)

ASSYWAN VERSION: Tablet III

The beginning of this section links up with column vi 19 of the preceding so that there is only a slight overlap.

(i)

[The elders opened their mouths, saying to Gilgamesh]: "Trust not, Gilgamesh, in all thine own strength. Let thine [eyes] be sated; When the elders heard this speech of his, He who goes in front saves the companion; He who knows the path protects his friend. Let Enkidu go in front of thee. He knows the way to the Cedar Forest, We, the Assembly, entrust the King to thee. Enkidu shall protect the friend, safeguard the companion. Over the pitfalls he shall carry his body! We, the Assembly, entrust the King to thee. Deliver thou back the King unto us!"

Gilgamesh opened his mouth to speak, Saying to Enkidu: "Up, my friend, let us go to Egalmah, Ninsun, the wise, who is versed in all knowledge, Deliver thy back the King unto us!"

Gilgamesh came forward as he entered [the palace]: "O Ninsun, I make trust [worthy] thy hands:
A far journey, to the place of Humbaba. An uncertain road I am about to travel.
[Until the day that I go and return], [Until I reach the Cedar Forest], [And banish from the land all evil, hateful to Shamash], [Pray thou to Shamash on my behalf]!"

(The above restorations are based on column ii 12 ff. The remainder of the break cannot be restored.)

(ii)

[Ninsun] entered [her chamber], [. . .]... She put on a garment as beseems her bo[dy], [She put on an ornament] as beseems her breast, [. . .] and donned her tiara. [. . .] the ground ...

17 In accordance with Landsberger’s reading (cf. n.70, above) and a personal suggestion by Goetze, the first word should be |\u0111\u0141|. I read the last word of this line rubku|.
"The Great Palace."

18 Reading ag-do-liit; with Landsberger, ZA, XLI (1934), i n, n.3. For the meaning, cf. the D-form udalipur “who lords it,” I, iv, 46.
"Lit “a bathe I know not.”

She c[limbed the stairs], mounted to the parapet, Ascended the [roof], to Shamash offered incense. The smoke-offering set up, to Shamash she raised her hands:
"Why, having given me Gilgamesh for a son, With a resdess heart didst thou endow him? And now thou didst affect him to go On a far journey, to the place of Humbaba, To face an uncertain battle, To travel an uncertain road! Until the day that he goes and returns, Until he reaches the Cedar Forest, Until he has slain the fierce Humbaba, And has banished from the land all evil thou dost hate— In day time, when thou . . ., May Aya, thy bride, fearlessly78 remind thee, And may she [commend] him to the watchmen of the night!"

(long break)

(iv)

She put out the incense, prof[nouncing the spell]. She then called Enkidu to impart (this) message: "Mighty Enkidu, thou not my womb’s issue, I herewith have adopted thee With the devotees of Gilgamesh, The priestesses, the votaries, and the cult women!"

… she placed round the neck of Enkidu.

(The remainder of this column, the whole of column v, and the first seven lines of column vi are missing or too mutilated for translation.)

(vi)

"Let [Enkidu] pr[oteect the friend, safeguard the companion], Over the pitfalls [let him carry his body]! We, the Assembly, [entrust the King to thee]; Del[iver thou] back [the King unto us]."

Enkidu opened his mouth [to speak], Saying [to Gilgamesh]: "My friend tu[rn . . . ], A way not [. . . ]."

(remainder of the tablet destroyed)

Tablet IV

For this tablet, and for several of the following, the sequence of the extant texts is at times uncertain since the context must be pieced together from scattered Assyrian fragments and from such additions as have come to light elsewhere, particularly at Bogazkoy (in Hittite as well as in Akkadian). The arrangement here followed has been adopted from A. Schott, cf. ZA, XLII (1934), 113 ff. No existing fragments can be assigned with certainty to any of the first columns of the Assyrian Version. A small portion of the missing record of the journey to the Cedar Forest is preserved on a fragment from Uruk, published by A. Oppenheim, Orientalia, xvn (1948), 33 ff.
At twenty leagues they broke off a morsel; At thirty (further) leagues they prepared for the night. Fifty leagues they walked all day. [The distance of a month and fifteen days they traversed in three days. [Before Shamash] they dug [a well].

(\phi) (The beginning is missing.80 The two friends have arrived at the gate of the forest, which is guarded by Humbaba's watchman. Gilgamesh appears to need encouragement from Enkidu.)

"[Bethink thee of what] thou didst say in Uruk! [Arise] and stand up [that thou mayest slay him]."

[... Gilgamesh, the offshoot of Uruk.

When Gilgamesh heard the words of [his] mouth, He was inspired with confidence:81 "[Hurry, step up to him, that he may not depart], [Go] down to the woods and [disappear! He is wont to cloak himself with seven cloaks; [One] he has donned; six are still off [...]."

Like a raging wild ox he [...], ... he departed [...].

The watchman of the forest calls out [...]. Humbaba, like [...].

(vi) (beginning missing)

[Enkidu] opened his [mouth] to speak, [Saying to Gilgamesh]:
"[Let us not go] down [into the heart of the forest]! [In opening] [the gate my hand] became limp."

Gilgamesh opened his mouth to speak, Saying [to Enkidu]
"[...] my friend, like weaklings [...]. [... we] have traveled, all of them [...]. [...] before us [...].

My [friend], who art versed in combat, accomplished [in battle], Touch but my [garment], and thou wilt not fear [death].

(unintelligible) (32-33)

That the limpness may depart from thy arm, And the weakness pass' [from thy hand], [Do but] stand by, my friend, that we may go down together [...].

Let thy heart [lux]uriate in combat; Forget death and do not [...].

A man, resolute (yet) discreet, [...],

When he goes [in front], he guards himself And safeguards the companion. [Even though] they fa[U],84 they have made a name," [At the] green [mountain] the two arrived. (40) Their words were [silent]ed;85 they themselves stood still.

When he goes [in front], he guards himself And safeguards the companion. [Even though] they fa[U],84 they have made a name," [At the] green [mountain] the two arrived. (40) Their words were [silent]ed;85 they themselves stood still.

Tablet V

(i) They stood still and gazed at the forest, They looked at the height of the cedars, They looked at the entrance to the forest. Where Humbaba was wont to walk was a path; Straight were the tracks and good was the going. They beheld the cedar mountain, abode of the gods, Throne-seat of Irmini.88 From the face of the mountain The cedars87 raise aloft their luxuriance. Good is their shade, full of delight. There is cover in their brushwood, cover in their [...].

(remainder fragmentary)

Sleep overcame [them]—the surge of the night. At midnight, sleep [departed] from him.88 A dream he tells to Enkidu, [his] friend: "If thou didst not arouse me, why [am I awake]? Enkidu, my friend, I must have seen a dream! Didst thou arouse me? Why [...]?

Aside from my first dream, a second [dream] I saw: In my dream, my friend, a mountain [toppled]. It laid me low, taking hold of my feet [...]. The glare was overpowering! A man [appeared]. The fairest in the land was he; his grace [...]. From under the mountain he pulled me out, Gave me water to drink; my heart qui[eted]. On the ground he set [my] feet."

Enkidu said to this god [...]. To Gilgamesh: "My friend, let us go [...]."

(remainder fragmentary)
The dream is most precious...
[...] favorable is [thy] dream,
The mountain, my friend, which thou sawest,
[is Humbaba].
[We] shall seize Humbaba, sh[all kill him],
[And shall cast] his corpse on the plain.
On the morrow [...]."

At thirty (further) leagues they prepared [for the night].

Before Shamash they dug a well [...].

Gilgamesh went up to [the mountain],

His fine-meal he offered up [...]:

"Mountain, bring me a dream [...], Furnish for him [...]!"

(iv)
[The mountain] brought a dr[eam for Enkidu],

It furnished for him [...],

A cold shower passed over [...];

It made him lie down [...],

Sleep, which is shed on mankind, fell on him.

In the middle watch he ended his sleep.

He started up, saying to his friend:

"My friend, didst thou not call me? Why am I awake?
Didst thou not touch me? Why am I startled?
Did not some god go by? Why is my flesh numb?
My friend, I saw a third dream,
Did not some god go by? Why is my flesh numb?"

The heavens shrieked, the earth boomed,

Lightning flashed, a flame shot up,

[The clouds] swelled, it rained death!

Then the glow vanished, the fire went out,

[And all that] had fallen was turned to ashes.

Let us go down! Outside we can take counsel.

[When] Enkidu [heard] the dream he had brought him,

He said to Gilgamesh.

(Enkidu's reply is lost. The subsequent break in the Assyrian version is made up in part by the Hittite recension; cf. J. Friedrich, ZA XXXIX [1929], 8 ff.)

[Gilgamesh] seized [the axe in (his) hand]
[... and] felled [the cedar].

[But when Huwawa] heard the noise,

[He] became angry: "Who has [come],
[Has sighted the trees, which] had been grown in my mountains,

And has felled the cedar?"

[Then] down from heaven spoke to them
Heavenly Shamash: "Draw near,
Fear you not, and [...]
March, as long [...]
Into (his) house he does not [enter ...]."

(Remainder of fragment mutilated. A further fragment implies that things had not gone well with the two friends, for)

His tears [came down in] streams.

And Gilgamesh [said] to heavenly Shamash:

(two lines fragmentary and obscure)

"But I have [come] to heavenly Shamash
And have taken the road assigned [...]."

Heavenly Shamash hearkened to the prayer of Gilgamesh;

And against Huwawa mighty winds
Rise up: the great wind, the north wind, [...],

The storm wind, the chill wind, the tempestuous wind,

The hot wind; eight winds rose up against him
Beat against the eyes [of Huwawa].

And he is unable to move forward,

Nor is he able to move back.

Then Huwawa let up.

Thereupon Huwawa replied to Gilgamesh:

"Let me go, Gilgamesh; thou [wilt be] my [master],
And I shall be thy servant. And of [the trees]
Which I have grown, I shall [...]
Strong[...]
Cut down and houses [...]."

But Enkidu [said] to [Gilgamesh]:

"To the word which Huwawa [has spoken]
H[ark] not [...]
Let not Huwawa [...]."

(The sequel seems to be found in the mutilated Assyrian fragment, GETH, Pl. 19, which ends [line 47] with these words:

[... ] the head of Huwaba[ba they cut down ...].

\begin{center}
Tablet VI
\end{center}

He" washed his hairy hair, polished his weapons,

The braid of his hair he shook out against his back.

He cast off his soiled (things), put on his clean ones,

Wrapped a fringed cloak about and fastened a sash.

When Gilgamesh had put on his tiara,

Glorious Ishtar raised an eye at the beauty of Gilgamesh:

"Come, Gilgamesh, be thou (my) lover!

Do but grant me of thy fruit.

Thou shalt be my husband and I will be thy wife.

I will harness for thee a chariot of lapis and gold,
Whose wheels are gold and whose horns are brass.\footnote{\textit{Gilgamesh}.}

\footnote{\textit{The reasons for thus rendering} elmi\textit{u} \textit{are listed in C. Thompson, An Assyrian Dictionary of Chemistry and Geology} (1936), 76 f.}
Thou shalt have storm-demons to hitch on for mighty mules.

In the fragrance of cedars thou shalt enter our house.

When our house thou enterest, Threshold (and) dais shall kiss thy feet!

Humbled before thee shall be kings, lords, and princes!
The yield of hills and plain they shall bring thee as tribute.

Thy goats shall cast triplets, thy sheep twins,

Thy chariot horses shall be famed for racing,

A back door [which does not] keep out blast and wind;

A siege engine which destroys the enemy land; (40)

Pitch which soils its bearers;

A shoe which pinches [the foot ]

For Tammuz, the lover of thy youth,

Which lover didst thou love forever?

That I should taste the food of stench and foulness?

For his mother, Silili, thou ordainedst wailing!

Thou decreedst for him the muddied to drink;¹⁰²

For his mother, Sillili, thou ordainedst wailing!

Then thou lovedst the keeper of the herd,

Who ash-cakes ever did heap up for thee,

Daily slaughtered kids for thee;

Yet thou smotest him, turning him into a wolf,

And his dogs bite his thighs,¹⁰⁸

Then thou lovedst Ishhallani, thy father's gardener,

Who baskets of dates ever did bring to thee,

And daily did brighten thy table.

Thine eyes raised at him, thou didst go to him:

'O my Ishhallani, let us taste of thy vigor!'

Put forth thy "hand" and touch our "modesty!"¹⁰⁴

Ishhallani said to thee:

What dost thou want with me?

Has my mother not baked, have I not eaten,

That I should taste the food of stench and foulness?¹⁰⁸

Does reed-work afford cover against the cold?²⁰⁸

As thou didst hear this [his talk],

Thou smotest him and turn[edst] him into a mole.

Thou placedst him in the midst of... [ ] ;

He cannot go up... nor can he come down... §²⁰⁸

If thou shouldst love me, thou wouldst [treat me] like them.”

When Ishtar heard this,

Ishhtar was enraged and [mounted] to heaven. (80)

Forth went Ishtar to w[ep] before Anu, her father,

Her tears flow in the presence of Anu, her mother:

"My father, Gilgamesh has heaped insults upon me!

Gilgamesh has recounted my stinking deeds,

My stench and my foulness."

Anu opened his mouth to speak,

Saying to glorious Ishhtar:

"Art thou the father? Didst thou not quarrel with king

Gilgamesh?

And so Gilgamesh has recounted thy stinking deeds,

Thy stench and [thy] foulness." (91)

Ishhtar opened her mouth to speak,

Saying to An[u], her father:

"My father, please give me the Bull of Heaven that he smite [king] Gilgamesh... in his home.

[And] fill Gil[gamesh ...]!

If thou [dost not] give me [the Bull of Heaven],

I will smash [the doors of the nether world],¹⁰⁸

I will pla[ce those above ]

I will raise up the dead eating (and) alive,

So that the dead shall outnumber the living!" (100)

Anu opened his mouth [to speak],

I will raise up the dead eating (and) alive,

So that the dead shall outnumber the living!" (100)

Anu opened his mouth [to speak],

¹⁰² Lit. "to make turbid (and) drink."

¹⁰³ cf. E. Ebeling, Tod und Leben (1931), 103, n. c.

¹⁰⁴ cf. W. F. Albright, RA, xvi (1919), 183.

¹⁰⁵ Lit. "to make turbid (and) drink."

¹⁰⁶ cf. E. Ebeling, Tod und Leben (1931), 103, n. c.

¹⁰⁸ The present translation of pāšt u cered follows Th. Bauer, Assurbanipal, 11, 78, n. i; cf. also, A. Heidel, GE, 2nd ed. (1949)> 57>

¹⁰⁹ The metaphor has common Semitic analogues.

¹¹⁰ This appears to be a proverbial expression.

¹¹¹ For suggestions about the meaning of the terms which have been left untranslated, cf. Oppenheim, Oriëndia, xvii (1948), 37, n.4.

¹¹² For lines 96-100 cf. Descent of Ishtar, obv. 17-20.
Saying to glorious Ish[ar]:
"If thou dost desire of me the Bull of Heaven,
[There will be] in the land of Uruk seven years of (barren) husks.
Hast thou gathered [grain against the (years of barren)] husks?
Hast thou grown grass [for the beasts]?

[Ishtar opened her mouth] to speak,
[Saying to Anu, her father:]
"[Grain for the people] I have stored,
[Grass for the beasts] I have provided. (110)
[If there should be seven] years of husks,
[I have gathered] [grain for the people],
[I have grown] grass [for the beasts]."

(Lines 114-116, which contained the rest of Ishtar's speech, are missing. For lines 117-131 see p. 505.)

Enkidu opened his mouth to speak,
Saying [to Gilgamesh]:
"My friend, we have gloried [...]."

(Lines 135-49 mutilated, but the course of the battle is made plain by the following:)
Between neck and horns [he thrust] his sword. (150)
When they had slain the Bull, they tore out his heart,
Placing it before Shamash.
They drew back and did homage before Shamash.
The two brothers sat down.

Then Ishtar mounted the wall of ramparted Uruk,
Sprang on the battlements, uttering a curse:
"Woe unto Gilgamesh because he insulted me!!
By slaying the Bull of Heaven!"
When Enkidu heard this speech of Ishtar,
He threw the right thigh of the Bull of Heaven,
Tossing it in her face:
"Could I but get thee, like unto him. (160)
I would do unto thee.
His entrails I would hang at thy side!"
(Thereupon) Ishtar assembled the votaries,
The (pleasure-)lasses and the (temple-)harlots.
Over the right thigh of the Bull of Heaven she set up a wail.
But Gilgamesh called the craftsmen, the armorers,
All (of them).

The artisans admire the thickness of his horns:
Each is cast from thirty minas of lapis;
The coating* on each is two fingers (thick); (170)
Six measures of oil, the capacity of the two,
He offered as ointment to his god, Lugalbanda.
He bought (them) and hung them in his princely bedchamber.

In the Euphrates they washed their hands,
They embraced each other as they went on,
Riding through the market-street of Uruk.
The people of Uruk are gathered to gaze [upon them].
Gilgamesh to the lyre maids* of Uruk
Says (these) words:
"Who is most splendid among the heroes?
Who is most glorious among men?"
"Gilgamesh is most splendid among the heroes, Gilgamesh is most glorious among men."

(mutilated) (184-186)
Gilgamesh in his palace holds a celebration.
Down he the heroes on their beds of night.
Also Enkidu lies down, a dream beholding.
Up rose Enkidu to relate his dream,
Saying to his friend:
"My friend, why are the great gods in council?"

Tablet VII
The first two columns of this tablet are missing in the Assyrian Version. Enkidu's dream, however, is the subject of KUB, VIII, 48, and this Hittite text has been dealt with by I- Friedrich in "[...]. . . Then daylight came."
[And] Enkidu answered Gilgamesh:
"Hejar the dream which I had last night:
Anu, Enil, Ea, and heavenly Shamash
[Were in council].
And Anu said to Enil:
'Because the Bull of Heaven they have slain, and Huwawa
They have slain, therefore'—said Anu—'the one of them
Who stripped the mountains of the cedar [Must die!]'
But Enil said: 'Enkidu must die;
Gilgamesh, however, shall not die!' (10)

Then heavenly Shamash answered valiant Enil:
'Was it not at my command

109no These footnotes have been deleted.
111 For *uppulu in this sense cf. B. Meissner, MAOG, xi (1937), 46-47.
Comparison with Arab, tfi 'litde' may be suggested in further support.

112 The Bull's.
113 For this meaning of *tabuqahu cf. Oppenheim, *loc. at., 40, n.2. The singular is common in the Nuzi texts.
114 The *g-r-measure was the equivalent of about 250 quarts.
115 For this meaning of *ina urri hammatti cf. Landsberger, MAOG, rv (1928/29), 299, n.2.
116 The context calls clearly for musicians or singers, not servant girls;
hence neither *fuppulu (cf. n.m) nor *tabalu can underlie the present term.
However, Heb. *nebel 'psaltery' suggests an excellent semantic and morphological background.
117 Catch-line of the following tablet.
118 Text "thy." See, however, Schott, GE, 45, n.1.
That they slew the Bull of Heaven and Huwawa?

Should now innocent

Enkidu die? But Enlil turned

In anger to heavenly Shamash: ‘Because, much Ufa

One of their comrades, thou didst daily go down to them.’”

Enkidu lay down before Gilgamesh.

And as his tears were streaming down, (he said):

"O my brother, my dear brother! Me they would Clear at the expense of my brother!"

Furthermore:

"Must I by the spirit (of the dead)

Sit down, at the spirit’s door,

Never again [to behold] my dear brother with (mine)

eyes?”

(The remainder is lost. In a deathbed review of his life, Enkidu seems to bemoan the events that had led up to this sorry state, cursing the successive steps in his fated life. One of his curses, preserved in an Assyrian fragment, is directed against the gate that lamed his hand.)

Enkidu lifted up [his eyes], Speaking with the door as though [it were human]:

"Thou door of the woods, uncomprehending,

Not endowed with understanding!

At twenty leagues away I found choice thy wood,

(Long) before I beheld the lofty cedar.

There is no counterpart of thy wood [in the land].

Six dozen cubits is thy height, two dozen thy breadth

[...].

Thy pole, thy pole-ferrule, and thy pole-knob [...].

A master-craftsman in Nippur built thee [...].

Had I known, O door, that this [would come to pass]

And that this [thy] beauty [...],

I would have lifted the axe, would have [...],

I would have set a reed frame upon [thee]!”

(See the Supplement.)

I will curse thee with a great curse,

With great speed let my curses attack thee.

Thou shalt not build a house for thy charms. (10)

(See p. 505.) (n-18a)

... which is over people shall not be ... in thy house.

[...] thy road shall be thy dwelling place,

[The shadow of the wall] shall be thy station,

[...] thy feet,

[The besotted and the thirsty shall smite] thy cheek!

(mutilated)

(23-30)

Because me [thou hast...

And because [...] upon me."

When Shamash heard [these words] of his mouth, Forthwith he called down to him [from] heaven:

"Why, O Enkidu, cursest thou the harlot-lass,

Who made thee eat food fit for divinity,

And gave thee to drink wine fit for royalty,

Who clothed thee with noble garments,

And made thee have fair Gilgamesh for a comrade?

And has (not) now Gilgamesh, thy bosom friend;

(40)

Made thee lie on a noble couch?

He has made thee lie on a couch of honor,

Has placed thee on the seat of ease, the seat at the left,

That [the prin]ces of the earth may kiss thy feet!

He will make Uruk’s people weep over thee (and)

lament,

Will fill [joyful] people with woe over thee.

And, when thou art gone,"

He will his body with uncut hair invest,

Will don a lion skin and roam over the steppe.”

(When) Enkidu [heard] the words of valiant Shamash, [...] his vexed heart grew quiet.

(Short break. Relenting, Enkidu changes his curse into a blessing. He addresses himself once again to the girl:) "Come, lass, I will decree thy fate,

My mouth which cursed thee shall turn and bless thee.

Governors and nobles shall love thee.

He who is one league away shall smite his thigh.

[. . . the young] shall unloose his girdle.

[. . .] cornelian, lapis, and gold.

[May he be paid] back who defiled thee,

[May his home be emptied], his heaped-up storehouse,

[To the presence of] the gods [die priest] shall let thee enter,

119 Text “his.”

120 Referring to Gilgamesh; cf. Friedrich, loc. cit., 51.

121 The episode of the gate (K. 3388, Gilg., PIs. 14–15) was assigned by Thompson to the beginning of Tablet IV. See, however, Schott, ZA, XLII (1934), 113 ff.

122 For the meaning of the terms employed in this line cf. my note in JCS, 11 (1948/49), 225 ff.

123 Perhaps u-kar-fri-ha/ “made ride upon.”

124 Reading ai-mi-ʾī-i-ū.
That night he pours out his feelings to his friend:

[On thy account] shall be forsaken the wife,
(though) a mother of seven.”

[... Enki]du, whose mood is bitter,
[...] lies down all alone.
That night [he pours out] his feelings to his friend:

"... My friend, I saw a dream last night:
While I was standing between them
The heavens shouted, the earth responded;"80

[... like] the talons of an eagle were his claws.
[...] he...
Looking at me, he leads me to the House of Darkness,
So that my arms were[...]

To the house which none leave who have entered it,
On the road from which there is no way back,
Where dust is their fare and clay their food;
[...]... he transformed me,
They are clothed like birds, with wings for garments,
They were serving bake[meats] and pouring
I looked at [rulers], their crowns put away;
In the House of Dust, which I entered, (40)
I [saw princes], those (born to) the crown,
Reside incantatory and ecstatic,
Reside High Priest and acolyte,
These doubl[es]82 of Anu and Enlil were serving meat roasts;
They were serving bake[meats] and pouring
Cool water from the waterskins.
In the House of Dust, which I entered,
Reside High Priest and acolyte,
Reside incantatory and ecstatic,
Reside the laver-anointers of the great gods,
Ereshkigal [lives there], Queen of the
[...]
[And Belit-]Seri, recorder of the nether world, kneels before her.
[She holds a tablet] and reads out to her.
[Lifting] up her head, she beheld me:
[Saying: 'Who'] has brought this one hither?"

(10)

(The remainder of the tablet in the Assyrian Version is missing. The following fragment /GETh, 34; Pis. 15-16] may be relevant, as argued by Schott, ZA, XLII [1934], 113 ff.)

"Remember all my travels [with him]!"
My friend saw a dream whose [portents] were un[favorable]:

The day on which he saw the dream was ended.
Stricken is Enkidu, one day, [a second day].
Enkidu's [suffering],83 on his bed, [increases].
A third day, a fourth day [...].
A fifth day, a sixth, and a seventh;
An eighth, a ninth, [and a tenth day],
Enkidu's suffering, on his bed, [increases].
An eleventh and a twelfth day [...].
[Stricken] is Enkidu on his bed [of poun].
At length he called Gilgamesh [and said to him]:
'My friend, [... J has cursed me!
[Not] like one [fallen] in battle [shall I die],
For I feared the battle [...].
My friend, he who [is slain] in battle [is blessed].
But as for me, [...]."

Tablet VIII
(The extant texts of the Nineveh version contain only a few fragmentary lines of the first column of this Tablet. The gap has recently been filled in part by the Sultantepe text S.U. 51, 7, published by O. R. Gurney, with transliteration, translation and textual notes, in JCS, vm (1954), 90-95. The reverse duplicates for the most part the Nineveh material for column ii and has therefore been incorporated in the lines which follow. They contain the lament of Gilgamesh uttered before the elders of Uruk at the deathbed of Enkidu:)

(ii)

"Hear me, O elders [and give ear] unto me!
It is for Enkidu, my friend, that I weep,
Moaning bitterly like a wailing woman.
The axe at my side, my hand's trust,
The dirk in my belt, the shield in front of me,
My festal robe, my richest trimming—
O my younger friend, thou chasedst
The wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe!
Enkidu, my younger friend, thou who chasedst
The wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe!
We who [have conquered] all things, scaled the mountains,
Who seized the Bull [and slew him],
Brought affliction89 on Hubaba,40 who [dwelled] in the Cedar Forest!
What, now, is this sleep that has laid hold on thee?
Thou art benighted and canst not hear [me]!!"
But he lifts not up his head;
He touched his heart, but it does not beat. Then he veiled (his) friend like a bride [...], Storming over him like a lion, Like a lioness deprived of [her] whelps.

Pulling out (his) hair and strewn [it ...],

And, clad in a [lion] skin, [I shall roam over the steppe]

As though uncflean!"

With the first glow [of dawn], [Gilgamesh ...].

(long break)

"On a couch [of honor I made thee lie],'

I placed thee [on the seat of ease, the seat at the left], That the princes of the earth [might kiss thy feet]! Over thee I will make [Uruk’s] people weep (and) [lament], Joyful people [I will fill with woe over thee]. And, when thou art gone, [I shall invest my body with uncut hair], And, clad in a [lion] skin, [I shall roam over the steppe]!"

With the first glow of dawn, [Gilgamesh] Loosened his band [...].

The remainder of the tablet is missing or too fragmentary for translation, with the exception of the following lines:

Brought out a large table of elammaqu wood, Filled with honey a bowl of cornelian, Filled with curds a bowl of lapis, [...] he decorated and exposed to the sun.

Tablet IX

For Enkidu, his friend, Gilgamesh Weeps bitterly, as he ranges over the steppe: "When I die, shall I not be like Enkidu? Woe has entered my belly."

Saying to [Gilgamesh]:

To [. . .] of the gods went out my orisons. [...] preserve thou me!"

His wife answers the scorpion-man:

"Two-thirds of him is god, one-third of him is human."

Addressing (these) words [to the offspring] of the gods:

"[Why hast thou come on this] far journey? And [why hast thou arrived] before me, [Traversing seas]! whose crossings are difficult? [The purpose of thy com]ing I would learn."

The scorpion-man opens his mouth [to speak],"Then he arrived at the mountain range of Mashu, Which daily keeps watch over sun [rise and sunset]— Whose peaks reach to the nether world below— Scorpion-men guard its gate, Whose terror is awesome and whose glance was death. Their shimmering halo sweeps the mountains That at sunrise and sunset keep watch over the sun. When Gilgamesh beheld them, with fear (10) And terror was darkened his face. Regaining his composure, he approached them. A scorpion-man calls to his wife: "He who has come to us—his body is the flesh of the gods!"

His wife answers the scorpion-man:

"Never was there, Gilgamesh, [a mortal who could achieve that]."

Who joined the Assembly [of the gods, in search of life]. About death and life [I wish to ask him]."

The scorpion-man opened his mouth [to speak], Saying to [Gilgamesh]:

"Never was there, Gilgamesh, [a mortal who could achieve that]."

The mountain’s trail no one [has traveled]. For twelve leagues [extends its] interior. Dense is the darkness and [light there is] none. To the rising of the sun [...] To the setting of the sun [...]"

(remainder mutilated or broken)
"Whether in sorrow [or pain],
In cold or [heat],
Sighing [or weeping—I will go].
Now [open the gate of the mountain]!
"The scorpion-man [opened his mouth to speak];
Sighing or weeping—I will go.
In cold or [heat],
"Go, Gilga[mesh...]
To Gilgamesh he [says]:
"The mountains of Mashu [...].
To the word [of the scorpion-man he gave heed].
The gate of die mountain [is open to thee]!
The mountains (and) ranges [...].
When Gilga[mesh heard this],
In safety may [...].
When one league [he had attained],
Along the road of the sun he went.
When two leagues [he had attained]
He can [see nothing ahead or behind].
Dense is the darkness and light there is none;
He can [see nothing ahead or behind].
When seven leagues he had attained,
When ten leagues [he had attained],
He can [see nothing ahead or behind].
Dense is the darkness and light there is none;
He can [see nothing ahead or behind].
When eleven leagues he had attained, the dawn breaks.155
[When eleven leagues he had attained], the dawn breaks.155
[And when he attained twelve leagues], it had grown bright.
On seeing the grove of stones, he heads for [... ].156
The carnelian bears its fruit;
It is hung with vines good to look at.
The lapis bears foliage;
It, too, bears fruit lush to behold.
This entire column is mutilated or lost. What little remains suggests a further account of the marvels to be seen in this garden of jewels.

Tablet X
This tablet, which traces further the successive stages in Gilgamesh's quest of immortality, happens to be represented by as many as four separate versions. Two of these, however, the Hittite (cf. ZA, xxxix [1929], 20 EF) and the Hurrian (cf. ZA, xxxv [1924], 133 ff.), are extant only in fragments that are too slight for connected translation. Substantial portions are available, on the other hand, in the Old Babylonian and Assyrian recensions. The Old Babylonian material was published by B. Meissner, MVAG, VH (1902).

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

\[r 1\]
(top broken away)

With their skins [he clothes himself],157 as he eats flesh.
[. . . , O Gilgamesh, which has not happened]
As long as my wind drives the waters."
Shamash was distraught, as he betook himself to him;
He says to Gilgamesh:
"Gilgamesh, whither rovest thou?
The life thou pursuest thou shalt not find."
Gilgamesh says to him, to valiant Shamash:
"After marching (and) roving over the steppe,
Must I lay my head in the heart of the earth
That I may sleep through all the years?
Let mine eyes behold the sun
That I may have my fill of the light!
Darkness withdraws when there is enough light.
May one who indeed is dead behold yet the radiance of the sun!"

\[ii\]

(Beginning lost. Gilgamesh is addressing Siduri, the ale-wife:)
"He who with me underwent all hardships—
Enkidu, whom I loved dearly,
Who with me underwent all hardships—
Has now gone to the fate of mankind!
Day and night I have wept over him.
I would not give him up for burial—\[i\]
\[ibid.\]
\[ibid.\]
\[ibid.\]
In case my friend should rise at my plaint—
Seven days and seven nights,
Until a worm fell out of his nose.
Since his passing I have not found life,
I have roamed like a hunter in the midst of the steppe.
O ale-wife, now that I have seen thy face,
Let me not see the death which I ever dread."
The ale-wife said to him, to Gilgamesh:

(iii)
"Gilgamesh, whither rovest thou?
The life thou pursuest thou shalt not find.
When the gods created mankind,
Death for mankind they set aside,
For this is the task of mankind!"
Let thy garments be sparkling fresh,
Day and night dance thou and play!
Of each day make a feast of rejoicing,
Make thou merry!
Let thy spouse delight in thy bosom!
Thy head be washed; bathe thou in water.
Pay heed to the litde one that holds on to thy hand.
As the ale-wife gazes afar off;
Speaking in her own heart [she says] (these) words,
"Surely, this one is a killer!"
Whither is he heading [ ... ]?
As the ale-wife saw him, she locked the door.
She barred her gate, securing the bolt.
But he, Gilgamesh, on hearing the sounds,
Held up his point (i^ staff) and pla[ced . . . ].
Gilgamesh [says] to her, [to the ale-wife]:
"Ale-wife, what sawest thou [that thou hast locked thy door],
Hast barred thy gate, [hast secured the bolt]?
I will smash [thy] door, shatffer thy gate!"
(The remainder of the column is badly mutilated.
Much can be restored, however, from the repetitious sections of the succeeding columns and from a fragment [Sp. 299], published in GETH, PI. 42. cf. also A. Schott, ZA, XLII (1934), 132 f., whose restorations and numbering of the lines have here been adopted; cf. also Heidel, GE, 72-3.)
Gilgamesh [says] to her, to the ale-wife:
"I slew the watchman of the forest,
Brought affliction on Humbaba who dwelled in the Cedar Forest,
Slay the lions in the mountain [passes],
[Seize and] slay the Bull that came down from heaven,
[Why then are] thy cheeks [wasted], is sunken thy face, (Is so sad thy heart), are worn thy features?
[(Why) should there be woe in thy belly, Thy face be like [that of a wayfarer from afar],
[With] cold and heat be seared thy countenance,
Although the two versions overlap in several instances, it has seemed best to present each separately. For the beginning of this account cf. the Hittite fragments, ZA, xxxix (1929), lines 9 ff. See the Addenda.

(1)
The ale-wife Siduri, [who dwells by the deep sea]
And sits [ ... ].
For her they made a jug,
They made for her [a mashing bowl of gold].
With a veil she is covered and [ ... ],
Gilgamesh comes up to her and [ ... ].
He is clad in skins [ ... ],
The flesh of the gods is in [his body].
There is woe in [his belly],
His face is [like] that of a wayfarer from afar.
The ale-wife said to him, to Gilgamesh:
"Tell me, thou, what is thy name?
Am I a stranger to thee, Gilgamesh?
I am Sursunabu, (he) of Utanapishtim"
"As for me, Gilgamesh is my name,
Who have traversed the mountains,
A distant journey, as the sun rises,
O Sursunabu, now that I have seen thy face,
Show me Utanapishtim the Faraway."
[As in quest of a wind-puff\textsuperscript{170} thou roamest over the steppe?\textsuperscript{1}]

[Gilgamesh says to her, to the ale-wife]:

"[O ale-wife, why should my cheeks not be so wasted],
[So sunken my face],
[So sad my heart, so worn my features]? \textsuperscript{(ii)}

[[Why] should there not be woe in my belly],
[Not be so seared my countenance with cold and heat],
[And in quest of a wind-puff should I not roam over the steppe]?\textsuperscript{171}

[My younger friend],
[Who chased the wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe],
[Enkidu, my younger friend],
[Who chased the wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe],
[We who conquered all things, scaled the mountains],

(ii)

[Who seized the Bull of Heaven and slew him],
[Brought affliction on Humbaba who dwelled in the Cedar Forest]—

[My friend, whom I loved so dearly],
[Who underwent with me all hardships],
[Him has overtaken the fate of mankind]!
[Six days and seven nights I wept over him],
[Until the worm fell out of his nose].

[Fearing death, I roam over the steppe];

The matter of my friend [rests (heavy) upon me].
[On faraway paths] I roam [over the steppe]; \textsuperscript{(10)}

The matter of Enkidu, [my friend, rests (heavy) upon me].

[How can I be silent? How can I be still?]
[My friend, whom I loved, has turned to clay!]
[Must I, too, like him, lay me down],
[Not to rise again for ever and ever]"

[Gilgamesh] also says to her, to the ale-wife:

"[Now], ale-wife, which is the way to Utnapishtim?
[What are] its markers? Give me, O give me, its markers!
If it be seemly, the sea I will cross;
If it be not seemly, over the steppe I will range!"

The ale-wife said to him, to Gilgamesh: \textsuperscript{(20)}

"Never, O Gilgamesh, has there been a crossing,
And none who came since the beginning of days could cross the sea.

Only valiant Shamash crosses the sea;
Other than Shamash, who can cross (it) ?

Toilsome is the place of crossing,
Very toilsome the way thereto,

\textsuperscript{170} For sikr sari Oppenheim, Orientalia, xxvii (1948), 49, proposes 'mirage.' We obtain, however, much the same sense by translating "wind-puff," lit. "deposit, creation of the wind." cf. the ziqiqu-amelitu "wind-puff people," E. Ebeling, Tod und Leben (1931), 30 and 33, 35; and, below, XII, 81.

\textsuperscript{171} For this passage see the rendering of Leonard, Gilgamesh, 47 f.

And in between are the Waters of Death that bar its approaches
Where then, O Gilgamesh, wouldst thou cross the sea?
On reaching the Waters of Death, what wouldst thou do?
Gilgamesh, there is Urshanabi,\textsuperscript{172} boatman to Utnapishtim.

With him are the Stone Things.\textsuperscript{173} In the woods he picks 'urnu-snafes.'\textsuperscript{174}

Go! Let thy face behold.
If it be suitable, cross thou with him;
If it be not suitable, draw thou back."

When Gilgamesh heard this, he raised the axe in [his hand],
Drew the dirk [from his belt], slipped into (the forest),
And went down to them.\textsuperscript{175}

Like a spear he descended among them,

(See the Supplement)

(iii)

Urshanabi said to him, to Gilgamesh:

"Why are thy cheeks wasted, is sunken [thy face],
Is so sad thy heart, [are worn thy features]? (Why) should there be woe in [thy belly],
[Thy face be like that] of a wayfarer from afar,
With cold and heat be seared [thy countenance],
[As in quest of a wind-puff] thou roamest over the steppe"

[Gilgamesh] said [to him], to [Urshanabi]:

"[Urshanabi, why should my] cheeks [not be so wasted],
[So sunken my face],
[So sad] my [heart], so worn my features? (10)
[Why] should there not be woe in [my belly],
[My face not be like that of a wayfarer from afar],
Not be so seared [my countenance with cold and heat],
[And in quest of a wind-puff should I not roam over the steppe]?" \textsuperscript{(iii)}

[My younger friend],
[Who chased the wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe],
[Enkidu, my younger friend],
[Who chased the wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe],
[We who conquered all things, scaled the mountains],

[Who seized the Bull of Heaven and slew him],
[Brought affliction on Humbaba who dwelled in the Cedar Forest]—

My friend, [whom I loved so dearly], \textsuperscript{(20)}

[Who underwent with me all hardships],
[Who chased the wild ass of the hills, the panther of the steppe],
[We who conquered all things, scaled the mountains],

\textsuperscript{172} Sursunabu in Old Babylonian.

\textsuperscript{173} The lit abhe "those of stone" are apparently stone figures of unusual properties, to judge from the relevant Hittite fragment, ZA, xxxix (1929), 26, line 3, and pp. 59-60. cf. now J. Friedrich, AFI, xv (1945-51), 105 and KUB, xxxii, 123. Further see A. Millard, Iraq, xxvi (1964), 103-05 and C. J. Gadd, Iraq, xxv (1966), 118-21.

\textsuperscript{174} In referring to this passage, Landsberger, Faune (1934), 65, points out that the urnu-snake has long been supposed to be a favorite with sailors. At all events, whatever the meaning of the term may be in the present connection, its properties seem to be on a par with those of the Stone Things.

\textsuperscript{175} The stone images.
Enkidu, my friend, whom I loved so dearly,
Who underwent with me all hardships
[He] has overtaken [the fate of mankind]!
Six days [and seven nights I wept over him],
Until [the worm fell out of his nose].
Fear [ring death, I roam over the steppe],
The matter of my friend rests (heavy) upon me.
Six days [and seven nights I wept over him],
On [faraway] paths [I roam over the steppe];
[The matter of my friend rests (heavy) upon me].
How can I be silent? How can I be still?
[He] has overtaken [the fate of mankind]!
Must I too, like [him], lay me [down],
My friend, whom I loved, has turned to clay!

What are its markers? Give me, O give me, its markers!

Now, Urshanabi, which is the road to Utnapishtim?
On distant roads [I roam over the steppe];
Urshanabi said to him, to Gilgamesh:
If it be seemly, the sea I will cross;
Thy hands, Gilgamesh, have hindered the crossing!
Thou hast broken the Stone Things, hast picked them in the woods.
Gilgamesh, raise the axe in [thy hand],
Go down to the woods and cut down twice-sixty poles
Of sixty cubits each.
Apply the bitumen and attach ferrules."
Then bring (them) [to me]!"
When Gilgamesh [heard] this,
He raised the axe in his hand,
Drew [the dirk from his belt],
Went down to the woods and cut [twice-sixty poles]
Of sixty cubits each.
He applied the bitumen and attached the ferrules;
And he brought [(them) to] him.
Gilgamesh and Urshanabi boarded [the boat].
They launched the boat on the waves and they [sailed away].
A run of a month and fifteen days they left behind by the third day.
Urshanabi arrived thus at the Waters
[of Death].

Urshanabi said to him, to Gilgamesh:
"Thy hands, Gilgamesh, have hindered [the crossing]!
Thou hast broken the Stone Things, hast picked [the 'umru-sna]es]
The Stone Things are broken, the umru is not [in the woods]."
Gilgamesh, raise the axe in [thy hand],
Go down to the woods and cut down twice-sixty poles
Of sixty cubits each.
Apply the bitumen and attach ferrules."
Then bring (them) [to me]!"
When Gilgamesh [heard] this,
He raised the axe in his hand,
Drew [the dirk from his belt],
Went down to the woods and cut [twice-sixty poles]
Of sixty cubits each.
He applied the bitumen and attached the ferrules;
And he brought [(them) to] him.
Gilgamesh and Urshanabi boarded [the boat].
They launched the boat on the waves and they [sailed away].
A run of a month and fifteen days they left behind by the third day.
Urshanabi arrived thus at the Waters
[of Death].

(vi)
Urshanabi [said] to him, to [Gilgamesh]:
"Press on, Gilgamesh, [take a pole],
(But) let thy hand not touch the Waters of Death. [ ... ]!
A second, a third, and a fourth pole take thou, Gilgamesh,
A fifth, a sixth, and a seventh pole take thou, Gilgamesh,
An eighth, a ninth, and a tenth pole take thou, Gilgamesh!
At twice-sixty Gilgamesh had used up the poles,
Then he ungirded his loins. [...]"
Gilgamesh pulled off [his] cl[oth ... ].
With his hand he holds it aloft as a sail.
Utnapishtim peers into the distance.
Speaking to his heart, [he says] (these) words,
As [he takes counsel] with himself:
"Why have [the Stone Things] of the boat been broken,
And rides [in her] one who is not her master?
He who has come hither is not of my men;
And [...] ."
I peer, but I [cannot... ],
I peer, but [I cannot... ],
I peer, but [...] ."
(The remainder of this column and the beginning of the next are lost. Gilgamesh meets Utnapishtim and, to judge from the available fragments, is greeted with questions that are exact duplicates of those previously put to him by Siduri and Urshanabi. The same holds true of the first part of his reply. The concluding part follows: )

(vi)
Gilgamesh also said to him, to Utnapishtim:
"That now I might come and behold Utnapishtim,
Whom they call the Faraway,
I ranged and wandered over all the lands,
I traversed difficult mountains,
And I crossed all the seas!
My face was not sated with sweet sleep,
I fretted myself with wakefulness;
I filled my joints with misery.
I had not reached the ale-wife's house,
When my clothing was used up.
I [sl]ew bear, hyena, lion, panther,
Tiger, stag, (and) ibex—
The wild beasts and creeping things of the steppe.
Their flesh I ate and their skins I w[rapped about me]."
(The remainder of this column is too mutilated for translation. The beginning of the last column is broken away, except for the conclusion of the sage observations of Utnapishtim: )

"Do we build a house for ever?
Do we seal (contracts) for ever?
Do brothers divide shares for ever?
Does hatred persist for ever in [the land]?
Does the river for ever raise up (and) bring on floods?
The dragon-fly leaves (its) shell—
That its face might (but) glance at the face of the sun.

176 Each pole was good only for a single thrust, since not a drop of the water must touch the hand; cf. GETh, 85.
178 Reading a-dul-a a-aa.
179 For qilippu cf. Oppenheim, Orientalu, xvii (1918), 50, n.3, although his precise interpretation has not been followed here.
Since the days of yore there has been no permanence;
The resting and the dead, how alike they are!
Do they not compose a picture of death,
The commoner and the noble,
Once they are near to [their fate]?
The Anunnaki, the great gods, foregather;
Death and life they determine.

But of death, its days are not revealed."

Tablet XI

Gilgamesh said to him, to Utnapishtim the Faraway:
"As I look upon thee, Utnapishtim,
Thy features are not strange; even as I art thou.
Thou art not strange at all; even as I art thou.
My heart had regarded thee as resolved
(But) of death, its days are not revealed."

Utnapishtim said to him, to Gilgamesh:
'I will reveal to thee, Gilgamesh, a hidden matter
And a secret of the gods will I tell thee:
Shurippak—a city which thou knowest,
[And] which on Euphrates' banks is situate—
That city was ancient, (as were) the gods within it,
When their heart led the great gods to produce the flood.
[There] were Anu, their father,
Valiant Enil, their counselor,
Ninurta, their assistant,
Ninigiku-Ea was also present with them;
There were Elfinu, their assistant,
[Yet] thou liest indolent upon thy back!
Tell me, how joinedst thou the Assembly of the gods,
In thy quest of life?"

Ea opened his mouth to speak,
Saying to me, his servant:
"Thou shalt then thus speak unto them:
"I have learned that Enlil is hostile to me,
So that I cannot reside in your city,
Nor set my foot in Enlil's territory.
To the Deep I will therefore go down,
To dwell with my lord Ea.
[But upon] you he will shower down abundance,
[The choicest] birds, the rarest fishes.
[The land shall have its fill] of harvest riches.
[He who at dusk orders] the husk-greens,
Will shower down upon you a rain of wheat"

With the first glow of dawn,
The land was gathered [about me].
(too fragmentary for translation)
The litde ones [carried] bitumen,
While the grown ones brought [all else] that was needful.

On the fifth day I laid her framework.
One (whole) acre was her floor space.
Ten dozen cubits the height of each of her walls,
Ten dozen cubits each edge of the square deck.
I laid out the contours (and) joined her together.
I provided her with six decks,
Dividing her (thus) into seven parts.
Her floor plan I divided into nine parts.
I hammered water-plugs into her.
I saw to the punting-poles and laid in supplies.
Six 'sar' (measures) of bitumen I poured into the furnace,
Three sar of asphalt [also] poured inside.
Three sar of oil the basket-bearers carried,
Aside from the one sar of oil which the calling consumed,
And the two sar of oil [which] the boatman stowed away.

Bullocks I slaughtered for the [people],
And I killed sheep every day.
Must, red wine, oil, and white wine
[I gave the] workmen [to drink], as though river water,
That they might feast as on New Year's Day.
I op[ened ... ] ointment, applying (it) to my hand.

1 Lit "draw, design."
103 For the sense of tagmir fahhī cf. F. Thureau-Dangin, Hutteme campagne de Sargon (1912), line 52, and p. II, n.7. And for the factitive force of the intensive conjugation cf. Heidel, EG, 80, n.164.
105 Presumably, the dwelling place of Utnapishtim. Ea addresses him through the barrier of the wall.
106 Line 11 has the uncommon form Shurippak instead.
107 The Akkadian for "ship" is feminine, although without the grammatical feminine ending.
108 For the description of the subterranean waters of the Apsu cf. Creation Epic, IV, 62.
Who turned to blackness all that had been light.

Whatever I [had] of gold I laded upon her;
Whatever I [had] of silver I laded upon her;
So that they had to shift the floor planks.

He who orders unease at night, showers down a rain of blight.
Board thou the ship and batten up the entrance!

All my family and kin I made go aboard the ship.

I watched the appearance of the weather.
The weather was awesome to behold.
I boarded the ship and battened up the entrance.
To batten down the (whole) ship, to Puzur-Amurri, the boatman,
I handed over the structure together with its contents.

With the first glow of dawn,
A black cloud rose up from the horizon.
Inside it Adad thunders,
While Shullat and Hanish go in front,
Moving as heralds over hill and plain.
Erragal tears out the posts;
Forth comes Ninurta and causes the dikes to follow.
The Anunnaki gods weep with her,
The gods were frightened by the deluge,
The sea grew quiet, the tempest was still, the flood ceased.
I looked at the weather: stillness had set in,
And all of mankind had returned to clay.
The Anunnaki gods weep with her,
The landscape was as level as a flat roof.
I looked about for coast lines in the expanse of the sea:
In each of fourteen regions
There emerged a region(-mountain).
On Mount Nisir the ship came to a halt.
Mount Nisir held the ship fast,
Allowing no motion.
One day, a second day, Mount Nisir held the ship fast,
Allowing no motion.
A third day, a fourth day, Mount Nisir held the ship fast,
Allowing no motion.
A fifth, and a sixth (day), Mount Nisir held the ship fast,
Allowing no motion.

When the seventh day arrived,
I sent forth and set free a dove.
The dove went forth, but came back;
Since no resting-place for it was visible, she turned round.
Then I sent forth and set free a swallow.
The swallow went forth, but came back; since no resting-place for it was visible, she turned round.

Then I sent forth and set free a raven.

Upon their pot-stands I heaped cane, cedarwood, and myrtle.

The gods smelled the savor,

When at length as the great goddess arrived,

Then I sent forth and set free a raven.

Upon their pot-stands I heaped cane, cedarwood, and myrtle.

The gods smelled the savor,

When at length as the great goddess arrived,

She lifted up the great jewels which Anu had fashioned to her liking:

'Ye gods here, as surely as this lapis upon my neck I shall not forget,

Let the gods come to the offering; for he, unreasoning, brought on the deluge.

And my people consigned to destruction.'

Standing between us, he touched our foreheads to bless us:

'Hitherto Utanapishtim has been but human.

Henceforth Utanapishtim and his wife shall be like unto us gods.

Utanapishtim shall reside far away, at the mouth of the rivers.

Thus they took me and made me reside far away.

But now, who will for thy sake call the gods to Assembly to see a dream,

Would that a famine had risen up to smite mankind!

It was not I who disclosed the secret of the great gods.

I let Atrahasis see a dream,

And he perceived the secret of the gods.

Now then take counsel in regard to him!'

Thereupon Enlil went aboard the ship.

Holding me by the hand, he took me aboard.

He ate, circles, caws, and turns not round.

And offered a sacrifice.

I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

That the life which thou seest thou mayest find? Up, lie not down to sleep for six days and seven nights."

As he sits there on his haunches,

Sleep fans him like the whirlwind.

Utanapishtim says to her, to his spouse: "Behold this hero who seeks life! Sleep fans him like a mist."

His spouse says to him, to Utanapishtim the Faraway: "Touch him that the man may awake, that he may return safe on the way whence he came, through the gate by which he left he may return to his land."

Utanapishtim says to her, to his spouse: "Since to deceive is human, he will seek to deceive thee."

Up, bake for him wafers, put (them) at his head, and mark on the wall the days he slept.

She baked for him wafers, put (them) at his head, and marked on the wall the days he slept.

His first wafer is dried out,

(But) let not Enlil come to the offering, for six days and seven nights.

"Exceeding Wise," an epithet of Utanapishtim.

For six days and seven nights.

As he sits there on his haunches,

Sleep fans him like the whirlwind.

Utanapishtim says to her, to his spouse: "Behold this hero who seeks life! Sleep fans him like a mist."

His spouse says to him, to Utanapishtim the Faraway: "Touch him that the man may awake, that he may return safe on the way whence he came, through the gate by which he left he may return to his land."

"Since to deceive is human, he will seek to deceive thee."

Up, bake for him wafers, put (them) at his head, and mark on the wall the days he sleeps.

She baked for him wafers, put (them) at his head, and marked on the wall the days he slept.

His first wafer is dried out,

The second is gone bad,

The seventh—just as he touched him the man awoke.

The swallow went forth, but came back; since no resting-place for it was visible, she turned round.

Then I sent forth and set free a raven.

The raven went forth and, seeing that the waters had diminished, he eats, circles, caws, and turns not round.

Then I let out (all) to the four winds and offered a sacrifice.

I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up, the gods crowded like flies about the sacrificer.

He eats, circles, caws, and turns not round.

And offered a sacrifice.

I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,

The gods smelled the sweet savor.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I saw the ship, Enlil was wroth.

When at length as Enlil arrived, I poured out a libation on the top of the mountain.

Seven and seven cult-vessels I set up,
"Searcely had sleep surged over me, (220)
When straightway thou dost touch and rouse me!"

Utnapishtim [says to him], to Gilgamesh:
"[Go], Gilgamesh, count thy waifers,
[That the days thou hast slept] may become known to thee:
Thy [first] wafer is dried out,
[The second is gone] bad, the third is soggy;
The crust of the fourth has turned white;
[The fifth] has a moldy cast,
The sixth (still) is fresh-colored.
[The seventh]—at this instant thou hast awakened."

Gilgamesh says to him, to Utnapishtim the Faraway:
"[What then] shall I do, Utnapishtim, (230)
Gilgamesh says to him, to Utnapishtim the Faraway:
"[Go], Gilgamesh, count thy waifers,
When straightway thou dost touch and rouse me!"

"Scarcely
223 had sleep surged over me, (220)
When straightway thou dost touch and rouse me!"

Gilgamesh and Urshanabi boarded the boat,
[They launch]ed the boat on the waves (and) they sailed away.

His spouse says to him, to Utnapishtim the Faraway:

"Gilgamesh has come hither, toiling and straining.
What wilt thou give (him) that he may return to his land?"

At that he, Gilgamesh, raised up (his) pole,
To bring the boat nigh to the shore.
Utnapishtim [says] to him, [to] Gilgamesh:
"Gilgamesh, thou hast come hither, toiling and straining.
What shall I give thee that thou mayest return to thy land?
I will disclose, O Gilgamesh, a hidden thing,
And [a secret of the gods I will] tell thee:
This plant, like the buckthorn is [its ... ].
Its thorns will prick thy hands just as does the rose.
If thy hands obtain the plant, [thou wilt find new life]."

No sooner had Gilgamesh heard this,
Than he opened the water-pipe,228
He tied heavy stones [to his feet].
They pulled him down into the deep [and he saw the plant].
He took the plant, though it pricked his hands.
He cut the heavy stones [from his feet].
The [sea] cast him up upon its shore.

Gilgamesh says to him, to Urshanabi, the boatman:
"Urshanabi, this plant is a plant apart,228
Whereby a man may regain his life's breath.
I will take it to Ramparted Uruk,
Will cause [ ... ] to eat the plant... !
Its name shall be 'Man Becomes Young in Old Age.'
I myself shall eat (it)
And thus return to the state of my youth."

After twenty leagues they broke off a morsel,
After thirty (further) leagues they prepared for the night.
Gilgamesh saw a well whose water was cool.
He went down into it to bathe in the water.
A serpent sniffed the fragrance of the plant;
It came up [from the water] and carried off the plant.
Going back it shed its slough,227

Thereupon Gilgamesh sits down and weeps,
(290)
His tears running down over his face.
[He took the hand]228 of Urshanabi, the boatman:
"[For] whom,229 Urshanabi, have my hands toiled?
For whom is being spent the blood of my heart?
I have not obtained a boon for myself.
For the earth-lion228 have I effected a boon!
And now the tide228 will bear (it) twenty leagues away!
When I opened the water-pipe228 and [ ... ] the gear,
I found that which has been placed as a sign for me:
I shall withdraw,
And leave the boat on the shore!" (300)

After twenty leagues they broke off a morsel,
After thirty (further) leagues they prepared for the night

When they arrived in ramparted Uruk,
Gilgamesh says to him, to Urshanabi, the boatman:
"Go up, Urshanabi, walk on the ramparts of Uruk.
Inspect the base terrace, examine its brickwork,
If its brickwork is not of burnt brick,
And if the Seven Wise Ones laid not its foundation!
One 'sar' is city, one sar orchards,
One sar margin land; (further) the precinct of the Temple of Ishtar.
Three sar and the precinct comprise Uruk."

Tablet XII

Contents and circumstantial evidence mark this tablet as an inorganic appendage to the epic proper. The basic theme is concluded with the hero’s failure to attain his quest. Moreover, the last lines of Tablet XI are the same as the final lines of the introduction to the entire work (I, i, 16-19). Lasdy, Gadd (RA, xxxi [1933], 126 ff.) and Kramer JAOS, lxiv (1944)) 7 ff. have demonstrated that Tablet XII is a direct translation from the Sumerian; the remaining tablets—as pointed out by Kramer—give every indication of creative borrowing and independent formulation. The Akkadian version of the present tablet is a translation of the second part of a Sumerian legend. The first part—disregarded by the Akkadian translator—is fortunately extant and has been published by Kramer in his monograph Gilgamesh and the Huluppu-Tree (1938). Since the beginning is essential as an introduction to Tablet XII, it may be summarized briefly, as follows:

Shortly after the creation of the universe, a tree growing on the bank of the Euphrates was uprooted by the south wind. Inanna made from the base of the tree a puk\u, probably a magic Drum, and from the crown a mit\l/u, apparently a Drumstick of similar magic potency, and gave them both to Gilgamesh. One day both these precious objects fell into the nether world. Gilgamesh and Enkidu brought them to the carpenter’s wife, and the further recognition that the small fragment containing the beginning of the first eight lines in Thompson’s edition (GETH, Pt. 55) is not part of the main portion of the tablet, but a duplicate (as shown, among other things, by the fact that no proper join has been made). What Thompson mistook for the beginning of the tablet is in reality line 4, corresponding to line 48 in Gadd’s Sumerian text. Line 1 is, of course, given by the catch-line in the translation given below, restorations based on the Sumerian text will be indicated by square brackets. I had the opportunity to talk over the whole problem with Dr. Kramer and I have adopted from him several new observations which will be pointed out in the footnotes.

the same term is used, perhaps to a pipe connecting with a source of sweet waters which would nourish the miraculous plant.

"That time when I verily ha[d]\textsuperscript{233} the Drum in the carpenter’s house,
[(When) the carpenter’s wife was verily like my mother who bore me],

[(When) the carpenter’s daughter was verily like my younger sister]!
Lo, [who will bring up] the Drum from the nether world?
[Who will bring up] the Drumstick [from the nether world]?"

Enkidu\textsuperscript{284} [says to him, to Gilgamesh, [his lord]:
"My lord, why criest thou (and) why [is so ill] thy heart?
Lo, I will bring [up] the Drum from the nether world,
I will bring [up] the Drumstick from the nether world."

Gilgamesh [says to him, to Enkidu,
[his servant]:

"If [thou wilt go down] to the nether world,
[I will speak a word to thee, take my word]\textsuperscript{235}
My admonition(s)\textsuperscript{236} [heed thou well]:
Clean raiment [thou shalt not put on]!
As a sojourner\textsuperscript{237} they would ma[rk thee].\textsuperscript{238}
With sweet oil from the cruse thou shalt not anoint thee!
At its fragrance they would gather about thee.
A throw stick into the nether world thou shalt not hurl!
Those struck with the throw stick would surround thee.
A staff into thy hands thou shalt not take!
(20)
The spirits would tremble\textsuperscript{239} on thy account.
Sandals to thy feet thou shalt not fasten,
A sound against the nether world thou shalt not make,
Thy wife whom thou lovest thou shalt not kiss,
Thy son whom thou lovittest thou shalt not strike,
Thy son whom thou loveast thou shalt not kiss,
Thy son whom thou hatest thou shalt not strike!
The wailing of the nether world would seize thee!"—
"She who rests, she who rests.
The mother of Ninazu,\textsuperscript{240} she who rests;
Her holy shoulders are not covered with raiment,
[To his lord’s admonitions Enkidu gave no heed.\textsuperscript{242}
Her cruse-shaped breasts are not wrapped with cloth.\textsuperscript{241}
[(When) the carpenter’s wife was verily like my mother who bore me],

[(When) the carpenter’s daughter was verily like my younger sister]!
Lo, [who will bring up] the Drum from the nether world?
[Who will bring up] the Drumstick [from the nether world]?"

Enkidu\textsuperscript{284} [says to him, to Gilgamesh, [his lord]:
"My lord, why criest thou (and) why [is so ill] thy heart?
Lo, I will bring [up] the Drum from the nether world,
I will bring [up] the Drumstick from the nether world."

Gilgamesh [says to him, to Enkidu,
[his servant]:
At the fragrance of it they gathered about him. With sweet oil from the cruse he anointed himself: He hurled the throw stick into the nether world. Those struck with the throw stick surrounded him. A staff [he took into his] hand: The spirits trembled [on his account]. Sandals to [his feet he fastened], (40) A sound [against the nether world he made], Namtar did not seize him, Fever did not seize him; Nergal's unsparing deputy did not seize him; The nether world seized him.

"The mother of Ninazu, she who rests, Her holy shoulders are not covered with raiment, Her cruse-shaped breasts are not wrapped with cloth." She allowed not Enkidu to ascend from the nether world.

Namtar did not seize him, Fever did not seize him; The nether world seized him.

Nergal's unsparing deputy did not seize him; The nether world seized him.

On the battlefield of men he did not fall; The nether world seized him! Father Ea, lo, my Drum fell into the nether world.

Those struck with the throw stick surrounded him. To Eridu he went: "Father Ea, lo, my Drum fell into the nether world.

Enkidu, whom I sent to bring them up, the nether world seized. Nergal's unsparing deputy did not seize him; The nether world seized him. Nergal's unsparing deputy did not seize him; The nether world seized him.

Father Ea [did intercede for him in the matter]; [He said] to [Nergal], "He has a valiant hero, Ne rgal..., [Open] forthwith a hole [in the earth, That the spirit of [Enkidu may issue forth from the nether world], That to his brother [he might tell the ways of the nether world]."

Nergal, the valiant hero, [hearkened to Ea], Scarcely had he opened a hole in the earth, When the spirit of Enkidu, like a wind-puff, Issued forth from the nether world. They embraced and kissed each other; They exchanged counsel, sighing at each other; "Tell me, my friend, tell me, my friend, Tell me the order of the nether world which thou hast seen."

"I shall not tell thee, I shall not tell thee! (But) if I tell thee the order of the nether world which I have seen, Sit thou down (and)weep!"
Creation of Man
by the Mother Goddess

The basic theme of this myth is the creation of man out of clay mixed with the flesh and blood of a slain god. Unfortunately, the Old Babylonian text which deals with this subject (A) is incomplete and in a singularly poor state of preservation. Furthermore, the account came to be used as part of an incantation to facilitate childbirth, with the result that the myth itself seems to have been restated only in its bare outlines. It is too important, however, to be ignored, in spite of its lacunae and its uncertainties.

The ritual part of this Old Babylonian text agrees closely with the concluding portion of the Assyrian Version of the Atrahasis Epic—a fact which was first recognized by E. Ebeling.1 Accordingly, the Assyrian analogue in question has been detached from the Atrahasis Epic—with which it has only an incidental connection—and has been appended in this place as Version B.

Texts: (A) T. G. Pinches, CT, vi (1898), Pl. 5; republished with minor changes by S. Langdon, UM, x, 1 (1915), Pis. in-iv. (B) L. W. King, CT, xv (1902), Pl. 49, col. iv, and K. D. Macmillan, Beiträge zur Assyriologie, v (1906), 688. Principal edition and translation: E. Ebeling, Tod und Leben (1931), No. 37, pp. 172-77. Other translations: (A, obverse only) Langdon, op. cit., 25-26, and Heidel, BG2, 66-67. (a) P. Lensen, KB, vi, 1, 286-87, and Heidel, GE, 115-16. The line count here followed is that of Ebeling, loc. cit.

OLD BABYLONIAN TEXT

(oververse)

(preceding column and top of the present column destroyed)

"That which is slight he shall raise to abundance; The work of god8 man shall bear!"

The goddess they called to enquire,4 The midwife of the gods, the wise Mami:

"Thou art the mother-womb, The one who creates mankind. Create, then, Lullu5 and let him bear the yoke! The yoke he shall bear, . . . . . . . ; The work of god man shall bear!"

Nintu opened her mouth, (10) Saying to the great gods: "With me is the doing of (this) not suitable;8 With Enki is (this) work (proper)! He purifies everything, Let him give me the clay, then I will do (it)!"

Enki opened his mouth, Saying to the great gods: "On the first of the month, the seventh and fifteenth days, I will prepare a purification, a bath.

1 Tod und Leben (1931), 172.
2 It starts, however, with the first intelligible line and not with the first line of which there is any trace. Although Ebeling’s additions and interpretations are offered with great reserve, they are not uniformly satisfactory.
3 Read: it-i-su-ma la nar-su with von Soden, Orienta NS, xxvi (1957), 308.
4 Langdon, op. cit., 286-87.
5 Read: to-up-i-ak Him with von Soden, Orientalia NS, xxvi (1957), 172.
6 "the savage, the first man," cf. The Creation Epic, VI, 6, p. 68, n. 86. Lullu corresponds in effect to Adam.
7 Read: it-i-su-ma la nar-su with von Soden, Orientalia NS, xxvi (1957), 308.
8 Read: io-mu-ti sur-[ri i-mu-tu], with Ebeling, loc. cit.
Let one god be slain, (20)
And let the gods be purified by immersion
In his flesh and his blood.
Let Nintu7 mix clay,
God and man,
Let them together be smeared with clay.
Unto eternity let us hear the drum."

(remainder of obverse too fragmentary for translation)

[... ] her breast,
[... ] the beard,
[... ] the cheek of the man.
[... ] and the raising
[... ] of both eyes, the wife and her husband.
[Fourteen mother]-wombs were assembled.
[... ] Nintu,
[Co]unts the months.
In the tenth month8 they called [the mistress of] destinies,
\[N\]jnishubar came,
With the ... she opened the womb,
Her face brightened10 with joy,
Her head was covered,
[... ] made an opening,
That which was in her came forth.11
She blessed (it). She ...
"It is I who created (it),... made (it),
Let the midwives rejoice in the house of the one in travail!
Where the Bearing One12 gives birth and
The mother herself suckles children."

(Assyrian version)

(begging mutilated)

[... they kis]ed her feet,
[Saying: "The creatress of mankind] we call thee; [The mistress of all the gods be thy name!"
[They went] to the House of Fate,
\[N\]inigiku-Ea (and) the wise Mama.
[Fourteen mother]-wombs were assembled
To tread upon the [c]lay before her.18
[... ] Ea says, as he recites the incantation.
Sitting before her, Ea causes her to recite the incantation.
[Mama reci]ted the incantation; when she completed14
[her] incantation,
[... ] she drew upon her clay.
[Fourteen pie]ces she pinched off; seven pieces she placed on the right, [Seven pie]ces she placed on the left; between them she placed a brick.

100 Akkadian Myths and Epics

A Cosmological Incantation:
The Worm and the Toothache

Among the incantations which contain cosmological material, one of the best-known attributes toothache to a worm that had obtained the permission of the gods to dwell among the teeth and gums. The present text, which is designated ideographically as an "Incantation against Toothache," dates from Neo-Babylonian times and was published by R. Campbell Thompson in CT. xvii (1903), Pl. 50. But the colophon indicates that the copy had been made from an ancient text. And indeed, the Man documents of the Old Babylonian period include a tablet with the Akkadian label ii-pa-at tu-dUm "Toothache Incantation."
The text itself, however, is in Hurrian. But although it cites various deities of the Hurrian pantheon—and is thus clearly religious in nature—the context does not correspond to the Neo-Babylonian legend, to judge from the intelligible portions.

Selected translations: B. Meissner, MVAG, 18/3 (1904), 42-45; E. Ebeling, AOT, 133 f.; F. Thureau-Dangin, RA, xxxvi (1939), 3-4; and A. Heidel, BG6, 72-73.

After Anu [had created heaven],
Heaven had created [the earth],
The earth had created the rivers,
The rivers had created the canals,
The canals had created the marsh,
(And) the marsh had created the worm—
The worm went, weeping, before Shamash,
His tears flowing before Ea:
"What wilt thou give for my food?
What wilt thou give me for my sucking?"
"I shall give thee the ripe fig,
(And) the apricot."
"Of what use are they to me, the ripe fig
And the apricot?
Lift me up and among the teeth
And the gums cause me to dwell!
The blood of the tooth I will suck,

15 Of the brick figure?
16 Of the brick figure?
17 One of the names of the mother goddess.
18 von Soden, loc. cit. restores: [ma(?)-ra(?)]-e(i) "the daughter of."
19 Read: el-ra tri(i).
20 Read: [mal-sm-ru-a-ma.
21 Read: i-te-fi-i(i).
22 Apparently a reference to the mother goddess.
24 Var. "had recited."
And of the gum I will gnaw
Its roots!"

*Fix the pin and seize its foot.*²

Because thou hast said this, O worm,
May Ea smite thee with the might
Of his hand!

(There follow details about the treatment, the injunction to recite this incantation three times, the remark that the text had been copied from an ancient tablet, and the name of the scribe.)

Adapa

The story of Adapa² shares with the Epic of Gilgamesh the motif of man's squandered opportunity for gaining immortality. It is extant in four fragmentary accounts. The oldest and longest of these (B) comes from the El-Amarna archives (fourteenth century B.C.), whereas the other three (A, C, and D) derive from the library of Ashurbanipal. The order of presentation is contextual, except that C is roughly parallel to parts of B.

Sources: (A) A. T. Clay, YOS, v, 3 (1922), Pis. iv, vi; (B) o. Schroeder, VS, XII (1915), No. 164; (C) R. Campbell Thompson, The Epic of Gilgamesh (1930), Pi. 31 (K.8743); (D) S. A. Strong, PSBA, xvi (1894), 274 f. Selected translations: P. Jensen, KB, vi, 1 (1900), 92-101; J. A. Knudtzon, Die El-Amarna-Tafeln (1915), 965-60; S. Langdon, UM, x, 1 (1915), 42-43 and 46-48; A. T. clay, op. cit., 40-41; E. Ebeling, AOT, 145-46; and A. Heidel, 86G, 147-153.

A

[Wisjdom...[...].

His command was indeed ...[ ...] like the command of [Ea].

Wide understanding he had perfected for him to disclose the designs of the land.

To him he had given wisdom; eternal life he had not given him.

In those days, in those years, the sage from Eridu, Ea, created him as the model of men.

The sage—his command no one can vitiate—

The capable, the most wise, the ointment priest,

The blameless, the clean of hands, the ointment priest,

Without him the table cannot be cleared.

He steers the ship, he does the prescribed fishing for Eridu.

In those days Adapa, the one of Eridu, While [ ... ] Ea ... upon the couch, ²For lines 19-21 cf. A. Salonen, Die Wasserfahrzeuge in Babylonien (1939). If should be added that Adapa’s purpose was plainly to catch fish for Ea’s temple, hence that god’s primary interest in Adapa. For the importance of fishing to the temple economy cf. the so-called Weidner Chronicle, which employs this motif as a reason for the rise and fall of dynasties (and, incidentally, mentions Adapa). See especially H. G. Guterbock, ZA, 31 (1934), 51 ff.

³This text lacks the normal metric form. For the sake of uniformity, however, line has been treated in the translation as a verse of poetry.

⁴This is the instruction to the dentist, as pointed out by A. David, Operation dentaire en Babylone, RA, xxxv (1928), 95 ff.

⁵According to A. David, Tal und Leben, 27a, an unpublished syllabary equates a-do-up with “man” (hence “Adam?”).

⁶Reading [ui-tu-mu].

⁷In the sense of “something to be followed.” cf. la abiz ṛiddi “unprincipled.”

⁸Abb. atmahashia, applied here as an epithet and not as a proper name.
Thou shalt not eat (it). When they offer thee water of death, (30)
Thou shalt not drink (it). When they offer thee a garment,
Put (it) on. When they offer thee oil, anoint thyself (therewith).
(This) advice that I have given thee, neglect not; the words
That I have spoken to thee, hold fast!” The messenger
Of Anu arrived there (saying as follows): “Adapa the south wind’s Wing has broken, bring him before me!”

He made him take the road to heaven, and to heaven he went up.
When he had ascended to heaven and approached the gate of Anu,
Tammuz and Gizzida were standing at the gate of Anu.
When they saw Adapa, they cried, “Mercy!” (40)
Man, for whom dost thou look thus? Adapa,
For whom art thou clad with mourning garb?”
"Two gods have disappeared from the land, therefore with mourning garb
I am clad.” "Who are the two gods who from the land have disappeared?"
"Tammuz and Gizzida.” They glanced at each other
And smiled.® As Adapa before Anu, the king,
Drew near and Anu saw him, he called:
"Come now, Adapa, wherefore the south wind’s wing
Didst thou break?” Adapa replied to Anu: "My lord,
For the household of my master, in the midst of the sea (50)
I was catching fish. The sea was like a mirror.
But the south wind came blowing and submerged me,
Causing (me) to go down to the home of the fish. In the wrath of my heart
I cursed the [south wind].”® Speaking up at [his] side,
Tammuz
[And] Gizzida to Anu [a good word Addressed. His heart quieted as he was ...
"Why did Ea to a worthless human of the heaven
And of the earth the plan® disclose,
Rendering him distinguished and making a name for him?
As for us, what shall we do about him? Bread of life (60)
Fetch for him and he shall eat (it).” When the bread of life
They brought him, he did not eat; when the water of life
They brought him, he did not drink. When a garment
They brought him, he put (it) on; when oil
They brought him, he anointed himself (therewith).
As Anu looked at him, he laughed at him:
"Come now, Adapa! Why didst thou neither eat nor drink?"

® Apparently pleased because Adapa mourned their loss.
7 For a suggested reading cf. Heidel, ad loc.
8 Lit. "heart."
Nergal and Ereshkigal

This Mesopotamian myth is so far known only from two fragments of a school text dating from the fourteenth century BC and unearthed at Tell El-Amarna, in Egypt. In antiquity the myth was evidently used to train the Egyptian foreign-language student in acquiring a knowledge of Akkadian, at that time the common cultural medium of the whole region. This secondary use, however, did not enhance the reliability of the text. Furthermore, the tablet has suffered badly since then, one fragment (A) now belonging to the British Museum (published by C. Bezold and E. A. Wallis Budge, The Tell El-Amarna Tablets in the British Museum, 1892, No. 82), and the other (B) to the Berlin Museum (published by O. Sch xoeder in VAS, XII [1915], No. 195). The basic study is that of J. A. Knudtzon, Die El-Amarna Tafeln (1915), 969 ff.; Knudtzon’s line count has here been retained. For later translations cf. Ebeling, AOT, 210 ff. and Heidel, GE, 129 ff. See the Supplement, p. 507.

(obverse)

Fragment A

When the gods were preparing a banquet,
To their sister, Ereshkigal,
They sent a messenger:

"Whereas we can go down to thee,
Thou canst not come up to us.
Send up, therefore, that they take thy food-portion."

Hence [Eresh]kigal sent Namtar, her vizier.

N[amt]ar went up to lofty heaven.
He entered the place where the gods were conversing
They [...] and greeted Namtar,
The messenger of their great [sister].

(Several lines mutilated or missing. It is clear, however, from what follows that Nergal, alone among the gods, failed to show the proper respect to the envoy of Ereshkigal. When this has been reported to her, she sends Namtar back.)

Fragment B

Saying: "The god [who] did not rise [before] my messenger,
Bring him to me that I may kill him."
Namtar went forth to speak to the gods.

The gods hailed him to speak to him [...]:
"Look and, as for the god who rose not before thee, Take him to the presence of thy mistress."
When Namtar counted them, a god in the rear was bald.
"The god is not here who did not rise before me."

(Several lines mutilated or missing. In line 41 Ea is introduced into the story. Nergal appears to be in trouble, for the text goes on:)
"Take (him) to Ereshkigal!" Weeping, [he goes]
Before Ea, his father: "When she sees [me],
She will not let me live!" Be not afr[aid]!
I will give thee seven and seven [... ]
To go with thee: [...] Mutabriqu], Sharabdu, [Rabisu, Tirid, Idibtu], Be[nnu, Sidanu, Mqiqt, Beluri*]
Ummu [(and) Libu. They shall go]
With thee." [When Nergal arrives at the gate of Ereshkigal, he calls out:] "Gate[keeper, open] thy gate, Loosen the latchstring! I may enter!
To the presence of thy mistress, Ereshkigal, I have been sent." Forth went the gatekeeper And said to Namtar: "A certain god is standing at the entrance of the gate.
Come and inspect him that he may enter." Out went Namtar.
When he saw him, rejoicing [...] he said
To his [mis]tress: "My lady, [it is the god w]ho months Ago [dis]appeared, not having risen [before] me!"
"Bring (him) in! [When he c]omes in, I will kill [him]!"

Out went Namtar [and said]: "Enter, my lord,
Into the house of thy sister. [...] be thy departure."
[Answered] Nergal: "May thy heart rejoice in me."

(reverse)

Fragment A

[...] at the third, Mutabriqu at the fourth,
[Shar]abdu at the fifth, Rabisu at the sixth, Tirid
At the seventh, Idibtu at the eighth, Bennu
At the ninth, Sidanu at the tenth, Mqiqt
At the eleventh, Beluri at the twelfth,
Ummu at the thirteenth, (and) Libu at the fourteenth Gate he stationed. In the court he cut down her [...] .

1 Highly uncertain. The translation follows Oppenheim, Orientalia, xix (1950), 152 in line 44, but assumes u-lu-ua-ke-ki-an-ni to be a case of crasis for ul-ubal(Dialem).
2 The names of the first three demons are missing. Most of the extant names represent demons of disease; cf. ibid., n. i.
3 Reading here and in line 72 *Ni-em-u-ri, not *Ni-em-ul; see A. Ungnad, ABS, xiv (1944), 208.
4 cf. Heidel, GE, 131, n.100.
5 *Ibid., n.101.
Nergal to his troop he gave (this) order: "The gates Are wide open! Now let me race to you!"

Inside the house he took hold of Ereshkigal,
By her hair he brought her down from the throne
To the ground, to cut off her head.
"Kill me not, my brother! Let me speak a word to thee!"

When Nergal heard her, his hands relaxed. She weeps, humbled:6
"Be thou my husband and I will be thy wife. I will let Dominion over the wide nether world. I will place the tablet Of wisdom in thy hand. That shalt be master,
I will be mistress!" When Nergal heard this her speech,
"Whatever thou hast wished of me since months past,
So be it now!"

Atrahasis

The name Atrahasis (Old Babylonian Atramhasis), i.e. "Exceeding Wise," is associated with more than one hero of the epic literature of Mesopotamia. The Epic of Gilgamesh (XI, 196) applies it to Utu-napishtim, the hero of the Flood. The poems of Etana and Adapa make use of the same epithet. More specifically, however, the name is associated with a large epic cycle dealing with man's sins and his consequent punishment through plagues and the deluge. This cycle, which thus provides a parallel to the biblical motivation for the Flood, bore originally the name Enuma ilu awelum "When God, Man . . . Today it is commonly known as the Atrahasis Epic.

Fragments of this epic have come down to us in separate Old Babylonian and Assyrian recensions—as is also true of Gilgamesh. The Assyrian Version (Fragments C, D) dates from the time of Ashurbanipal. The Old Babylonian Version (Fragments A, B) is approximately a thousand years older, going back to the reign of Ammisaduqa, at which time it was copied from a still earlier text. Unfortunately, the extant material is but a small fraction of the original total. For according to the colophon on B, the Old Babylonian Version consisted of three tablets aggregating 1,245 lines, or about twenty times as many as are now available. The gaps in the Assyrian recension are only relatively less serious. The underlying relationship of all four pieces is assured by the joint evidence of phraseology, subject matter, and principal characters. Fragments of B and C, moreover, establish a direct connection with Gilgamesh, Tablet XI.

For the sake of convenience, a further fragment of an Old Babylonian flood text has been included in the present group. It has been marked as Fragment X and given a place immediately after Fragment B. For the present it cannot be determined whether this fragment ever did form an integral part of the earliest version of the epic; it might well have done so. On the other hand, column iv of Fragment D has been omitted from this context and placed instead at the end of Creation of Man (i.e. at the very end of the Flood).

The whole phrase, which is repeated several times in the present epic, refers to the cessation of growth.

---

104 AKKADIAN MYT

105 BS AND EPICS

3 (1922), Pis. I-II and Babylonian Records in the Morgan Library, iv (1923), 1. (B) A. Boissier, RA, xxviii (1931), 92-95. (X) H. V. Huprechtt, BE, D, V (1910), 1. (C) F. Delitsch, Assyrische Lestessticope (1885), 101. (D) W. King, CT, xv (1902), 40. Recent translations: Clay, op. cit., 58 ff.; Ebeling, AOT, 200 ff.; A. Boissier, op. cit.; Heidel, GE, 105 ff.

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

A (Tablet II)

[i]

...]
The land became wide, the peoples became numerous,
The god! was disturbed by their uproar.*
[Enlil] heard their clamor
(And) said to the great gods:
"Oppressive has become the clamor of mankind.
By their uproar they prevent sleep.3
[Let] the flour [be] cut off for the people,
[In] their [bellies] let the greens be too few. (10)
[Above] let Adad make scarce his [rain],
[Below] let not [flow]
The flood, let it not rise from the source.
[Let] the wind come,
Laying bare the . . .
Let the clouds be blown up"
[That rain from heaven] pour not forth.
[Let] the land [with]draw its yield,
[Let it turn] the breast of Nisaba.7

(ii)

(beginning destroyed)

"In the morning let him cause . . . to pour [down],
Let it extend through the night . . .
Let him cause to rain . . .
Let it come upon the field like a thief, let . . .
Which Adad had created in the city [ . . . ]"
So saying, they called . . .
Raising up a clamor . . .,
They feared not . . .

(vii)

Enki [opened] his mouth,
Saying to En[lit]:
"Why dost thou swear [ . . . ]? I will stretch out my hand at the [ . . . ]

*cf. v. Soden, ZA, XLI (1936), 261.
4 I.e. Enlil, the head of the pantheon.
5 For this noun cf. v. Soden, ZA, XLI (1932)) 168, n.2.
6 cf. Sidney Smith, RA xxx (1925), 67-68. cf. also D iii, 3, 8, 41 and A Vision of the Nether World, rev. 21 (p. 110). It is worth noting that various phrases from this epic recur in the omens, e.g., the failure of the water to rise from its source, or the resort of mankind to cannibalism; for such passages cf. Orientalia, v (1936), 212.
7 For the restorations in this and the following lines cf. Fragment D, iii, 42 ff. 52 ff.
8 For the copyst's notation hi-pi -s-1/4-s/1 "new break," see Heidel, GE, 108, n.19.
9 See J. Laessoe, EA, xi (1956), 92.
10 Nisaba was the goddess of grain. To "turn the breast" is "to repel." The whole phrase, which is repeated several times in the present epic, refers to the cessation of growth.
The flood which thou commandest [—].
Who is he? I [...] If I create [a flood] [...]
(For the translation of a few more lines see the Addenda.)

(viii)

Atramhasis opened his mouth, saying to his lord:
There follows the colophon which states that this is Tablet II of the series Enuma ilu ausclum, that it consists of 439 lines, and that it was written by Ellit-Aya, the "junior" scribe, in the eleventh year of Ammisaduqa.

B (Tablet III)

[Atramhasis] opened his mouth, saying to his lord:
"[...] make known unto me its content [...] that I may see [...]"

[Ea] opened his mouth, saying to his servant:
"Thou sayest 'let me see ...' The task which I am about to tell thee Guard thou well: 'Wall, hearken to me, (10) Reed-hut, guard well all my words! Destroy the house, build a ship, Renounce (worldly) goods, Keep the soul alive! The ship that thou shalt build.'"

(MIDDLE BABYLONIAN VERSION)

X

(For the inclusion of this fragment cf. the introductory remarks. Largely destroyed.)

"[...] I will loosen. [...] he will seize all the people together, [...] before the flood appears. [...] as many as there are, I will cause overthrow, affliction,... [...] build a large ship. [...] of good ... shall be its structure. That [ship] shall be an ark, and its name Shall be 'Preserver of Life.' [...] ceil (it) with a mighty cover. [Into the ship which] thou shalt make, [Thou shalt take] the beasts of the field, The fowl of the heavens."

NEO-ASSYRIAN VERSION I

C

"[...] like the vault of [...] [2] [...] stout above and b[elow], [...] calk [...] [...]. [...] at the stated time of which I will inform thee, Enter [the ship] and close the door of the ship. Aboard her [bring] thy grain, thy possessions, thy goods, Thy [wife], thy family, thy relations, and the craftsmen. Beasts of the field, creatures of the field, as many as eat herbs, I will send to thee and they shall guard thy door." (10) Atra[hasis] opened his mouth to speak, [Saying] to Ea, [his] lord: "I have never built a ship [...] Draw a design [of it on the ground] (saying): "[...] what thou hast commanded [...]"

NEO-ASSYRIAN VERSION II

D

("ii" = vi)

[When the th]ird year [arrived], (26) The people became hostile in their [...]. When the fourth year [arrived], Their places became cramped, Their wide [...] became too narrow. Downcast12 the people wandered in the streets. (30) When the fifth year arrived, The daughter seeks entry to the mother, (But) the mother opens not [her] door to the daughter. The daughter watches the balances of the mother, The mother) watches the balances of the daughter.13 When the sixth year arrived, They prepared [the daughter] for a meal, The child they prepared for food. Filled were [...] One house de[voured] the other. Like ghosts of the dead their faces [were veiled]. The people [lived] with bated [breath]. They received a message [...]. They entered and [...].

(remainder mutilated)

("ii"=v)

(beginning missing)

Above [Adad made scarce his rain], (29) Below [was dammed up the flood], [So that it rose not from the source]. The land withdrew [its yield,] [It turned the breast of] Nisaba. [During the nights the fields turned white]. [The broad plain] brought forth salt crystals,14 [So that no plant came] forth, [no] grain [sprouted].

See J. Laessøe, Bi.Ori., xin (1956), 93.
9 For the following lines cf. the virtually identical passage in Gilgamesh, XI, 21 ff.
11 cf. A. Salonen, Die Wasserfahrzeuge in Babylonien (1939), 51, under eleppu qurquuru.
12 see Heidel, GE, II, n.28.
13 That is, nobody trusted anyone.
14 cf. Sidney Smith, RA, xxx (1925), 63-64.
Fever was placed upon the people.
The womb was bound so that it could not issue offspring.

[... ]
When the second year arrived,
[... ] the stores.
When the third year arrived,
The people became hostile in their... .
[40]
When the fourth year arrived,
Their [places] became cramped,
[Their wide... ] became too narrow.
Downcast the people wandered in the streets.
When the fifth year arrived,
The mother watches [the balances of the daughter].

[... ]
[But] the mother op]ens [not] her door [to the daughter].
The daughter watches [the balances of the mother],
The child they prepared [for food].
Filled were... .
One [house] devoured the other.
[Like ghosts of the dead their faces] were veiled.
The people lived [with bated] breath.
Endowed with wisdom, the man Atrahasis—
His mind alert [to Ea, his lord]—
Converses with his god.
His lord, Ea, converses with him.
[Speak]ing to the gods, his sons:
Because of their uproar sleep cannot seize me.
Above Adad made scarce his rain,
Below was dammed up the flood,
Let it not rise from the source.
Let the land withdraw its yield,
Let it turn the breast of Nisaba.
During the nights let the fields turn white,
Let the earth's womb18 revolt,
That no plant come forth, no grain sprout.
Let fever be placed upon the people,
Let [the womb] be bound that it issue not offspring!
They c[u]t off the fig tree for the people,
In their bellies the greens became too few.
Above Adad made scarce his rain,
Below was dammed up the flood,
So that it rose not from its source.
The land withdrew its yield,
It turned the breast of Nisaba.
During the nights the fields turned white,
(As) the broad plain brought forth potash,
The Earth's womb18 revolted,
So that no plant came forth, no grain sprouted.
Upon the people was placed fever,
The womb was bound and issued not offspring.

(For column iv, which has been treated with another myth, see the introductory remarks.)

Descent of Ishtar to the Nether World

[1] At this point the tablet contains the scribal notation la-iau "there is not," indicating a blank space in the original. The context, however, is not interrupted. cf. Heidel, GÉ, 113, n.37.
[16] Atrahasis evidently sought to obtain rain for his fellow men by means of some magic practices. Evidently he succeeded, but mankind presently reverted to its earlier ways.
of the dead and her eventual return to the land of the living. The cuneiform material is extant in Sumerian and Akkadian formulations. The Sumerian version is obviously primary. But although the Semitic version has various points of contact with the older source, it is by no means a mere translation from the Sumerian, for which cf. Kramer, pp. 52-57.

The Semitic version has come down to us in two recensions. The older of these (A) comes from Ashur. (For a fragment of a still older recension—which comes from Ashur and dates from the end of the second millennium B.C.—cf. the eleven initial lines published by Ebeling in Orientcdia, xv [1949], 32-37. To judge from this small piece, this older version represented an independent formulation.) Its text has been published in KAR, No. 1 (Pis. 1-4), and p. 321. The other recension (N) comes from the library of Ashurbanipal at Nineveh. Its text is found in CT, 15, Pis. 45-48. The translations include those by Jensen, KB, vi, 80 S. (N only); S. Geller, in OLZ, xx (1917), cols. 41 ff. (the first translation of recension A); Ebeling, in AOT, 206 ff.; and Heidel, GE, 121 ff. The present translation is a composite one in that it makes use, in common with all the renderings subsequent to the publication of A, of both the Nineveh and the Ashur version. Where the difference between the two is more than stylistic, the recension here followed will be explicitly indicated.

The gatekeeper entered, saying to Ereshkigal:
"Enter, my lady, that Cutha may rejoice over thee, That the palace of the Land of No Return may be glad at thy presence."

When the first door he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the great crown on her head.

"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the great crown on my head?"

"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."

When the second gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the pendants on her ears.

"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the pendants on my ears?"

"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."

When the third gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the chains round her neck.

"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the chains round my neck?"

"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."

When the fourth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the ornaments on her breast.

"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the ornaments on my breast?"

"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."

When the fifth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the girdle of birthstones on her hips.

1 Lit. "ear."
2 Ereshkigal, Queen of the Nether World.
4 A addc: ['...'] stillness is poured out."
5 A reads: "So that the living will outnumber the dead."
6 The door.
7 This meaning of annu in N is indicated by A's annu.
8 A reads: mut-ki-il-ta.
9 This half of the verse in A only.

Her face turned pale like a cut-down tamarisk,
While her lips turned dark like a bruised
"...se-reed."

"What drove her heart to me? What impelled her spirit hither?"

Lo, should I drink water with the Anunnaki?
Should I eat clay for bread, drink muddied water for beer?

Should I bemoan the men who left their wives behind?
Should I bemoan the maidens who were wrenched from the laps of their lovers?

(Or) should I bemoan the tender little one who was sent off before his time?

Go, gatekeeper, open the gate for her, Treat her in accordance with the ancient rules." Forth went the gatekeeper (to) open the door for her:

"Enter, my lady, that Cutha may rejoice over thee, That the palace of the Land of No Return may be glad at thy presence."
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the girdle of birthstones on my hips?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the clasps round her hands and feet.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round my hands and feet?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
When the seventh gate he had made her enter, (60)
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
Ereshkigal saw her and burst out at her presence.
Ishtar, unreflecting, flew at her.
Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
Saying (these) words to Namtar, her vizier:
"Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
She stripped and took away the clasps round her whole body!
Go, Namtar, lock her up in my palace!
Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the clasps round her [ ... ]!
When the sixth gate he had made her enter,
He stripped and took away the breechcloth round her body.
"Why, O gatekeeper, didst thou take the breechcloth on my body?"
"Enter, my lady, thus are the rules of the Mistress of the NetherWorld."
As soon as Ishtar had descended to the Land of no Return,
When through the fourth gate he had made her go out, he returned to her the ornaments for her breasts.

When through the fifth gate he had made her go out, he returned to her the chains for her neck.

When through the sixth gate he had made her go out, he returned to her the pendants for her ears.

When through the seventh gate he had made her go out, he returned to her the great crown for her head.

"If she does not give thee her ransom price, bring her back."

As for Tammuz, the lover of her youth, he returned to her the ornaments for her breasts.

When with him the lapis flute (and) the carnelian ring come up to me, when with him the wailing men and the wailing women come up to me, may the dead rise and smell the incense."

A Vision of the Nether World

Among the thirty-seven texts which E. Ebeling collected in his Tod und Leben (1931) there are several that bear on the subject of myths and epics. For the most part, however, the pertinent material is introduced indirectly, in connection with specific ritual processes. Only Nos. 1 and 37—the first and last in the book—are directly relevant to the present section and hence have been utilized.

Such understanding of No. 1 as we now enjoy is due primarily to W. v. Soden, who in ZA, XLIII (1936) produced a thoroughly revised transliteration, accompanied by photographs, translation, introduction, and brief commentary (pp. 1-31). Ebeling came back with a new transliteration in MAOG, x, 2 (1937) 5 which adds a few further improvements. A translation of the reverse of the text (v. Soden's lines 41-75) is given also by Heidel, GE, 132-136.

31 This continuation of Ereshkigal's instructions appears to be out of place here, as regards the N version. A speaks of the ransom before Ishtar is led away (see the preceding note). The mention of Tammuz is likewise startling in this context, as there is no indication in the Sumerian version—that Tammuz had gone down to the nether world. The concluding part of the myth, therefore, will remain obscure in its allusions so long as additional material is not available.

3 This seems required by the context. It is by no means certain, however, that the final [ ... ] is not of A goes with Ishtar.

35 Cf. Oppenheim, op. cit., 142, 8,7.

36 Interpreted as "beads" by R. Campbell Thompson, A Dictionary of Assyrian Chemistry and Geology (1936), xl.

37 This is the true also of the large text (KAR, 1, 1915, No. 143) which deals with the passion and eventual triumph of Bel-Marduk; cf. the study by H. Zimmern, Berichte der sächsischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, phil.-hist. Klasse, LXX (1918), v, 1-52; see also S. Langdon, Babylonian Epic of Creation , 33-59, and the discussion by S. A. Pallis, The Babylonian Akk. Festival (1926), pp. 221-34.

38 For No. 37 cf. Creation of Man by the Mother Goddess, pp. 99-100.

The text is inscribed on a large tablet from Ashur, dating from the middle of the seventh century B.C. It is in the form of a prose poem whose lines average over fifty signs each. The background of the story is politcal, but its mundane allusions are enigmatic and are further obscured by the mutilated character of the obverse. What does emerge is that an Assyrian prince, who is called Kumma—a strongly suggested is so presumptuous as to desire a view of the nether world. His desire is at last granted and the realm of Nergal and Ereshkigal is revealed to him in a dream, as recorded on the reverse of the tablet. In the following translation each line of the original is presented as a brief paragraph. The line count follows the count of the reverse; line 1 corresponds to v. Soden's 41, and so on.

(reverse)

[Ku]-mana lay down and beheld a night vision in his dream: "[. . . ] held and I saw his awe-inspiring splendor [...]."

[N]ntar, the vizier of the nether world, who creates the decrees, I beheld; a man stood before him; the hair of his head he held in his left, while in his right [he held] a sword [...].

[N]ntartu, (his) concubine, was provided with the head of a kjurbu (her) hands (and) feet were human. The death-god was provided with the head of a serpent-dragon, his hands were human, his feet were [...].

The evil [...] (had) the head (and) hands of men; his headgear was a crown; the feet were (those of) a [...].bird; with his left foot he trod on a crocodile. Alluhappu (had) the head (of) a lion, four human hands (and) feet.

"The Upholder of Evil" (had) the head of a bird; his wings were open as he flew to and fro, (his) hands (and) feet were human. "Remove Hastily," the boatman of the nether world, (had) the head (of the) Zu-bird; his four hands (and) feet [...].

[ ... ] (had) the head (of) an ox, four human hands (and) feet. The evil Utukku (had) the head (of) a lion, hands (and) feet (of) the Zu-bird. Shulak was a normal lion stand[ing] on his hind legs.

[Ma]mitu (had) the head (of) a goat, human hands (and) feet. Nedu, the gatekeeper of the nether world, (had) the head (of) a lion, human hands, feet (of) a bird. "All that is Evil" (had) two heads; one head was (that of) a lion, the other head [...].

[ ... ]. (had) three feet; the two in front were (those of) a bird, the hind one was (that of) an ox; he was possessed of an awesome brilliance. Two gods—I know not their names—one (had) the head, hands (and) feet (of) the Zu-bird; in his left [...].

The other was provided with a human head; the headgear was a crown; in his right he carried a Mace; in his left [...]./» all, fifteen gods were present. When I saw them, I prayed [to them].

8 The full form of the name is given in obverse, 27 as Ku-um-ma-a. This is normalized by v. Soden as "Kumma," and by Heidel as "Kum-maya." Either view would seem tenable.

9 A demon pictured as a sphinx.

10 The term itself (a loan word from the Sumerian) means a "hunting net."

13 Akk. *Mimnu-lemu.
(10) A man (also), his body was black as pitch; his face was like that of Zu; he was clad in a red cloak; in his left he carried a bow, in his right he [Id] a sword; with the left he trod on a serpent[ent].

When I moved mine eyes, valiant Nergal was seated on a royal throne; his headgear was the crown of royalty; in his two hands he held two wrathful Macesf two heads [...].

[...] they were cast down; from [...] of his arms lightning was flashing; the Anunnaki, the great gods, stood bowed to the right (and) to the left [...].

The netherworld was filled with terror; before the prince lay utter tf [...] took me by the locks of my forehead and drew me before him.

And they, thy begetter, the élminent, the one experienced in matters, of wide understanding, broad and wise in spirit, who ponders the designs of the earth mass,

(Who), nevertheless, sealed his mind to his speech, who partook of the forbidden and trampled on the consecrated—you (two) will the fearsome brilliance of his majesty overwhelm speedily everywhere.

May this word be laid on your hearts like unto a thorn! Go (back) to the upper regions, until I bethink of thee! As he spoke to me, I awoke. And like a man who has shed blood, who wanders alone in the marshes, (and) whom a catchpole has overcome, while his heart pounded,

(30) Or like a young boar just matured, who has mounted on his mate—his insides constantly tumescing—he ejected dirt from his mouth and behind. He emitted a lamentation, saying, "Woe, my heart!" Flying into the street like an arrow, he scooped up the dust of the road (and) market place into his mouth, as he kept sounding the fearsome cry, "Woe! Ah me! Why hast thou decreed this for me (Thus) calling, he poignantly praised, before the subjects of Ashur the valor of Nergal (and) Ereshkigal, who had helpfully stood by this prince.

And as for that scribe who had previously accepted bribe(s) as he occupied the post of his father, owing to the clever understanding which Ea had imparted to him, he heeded in his heart the words of praise, speaking thus inside him: "In order that the pacts for evil draw not close to me nor press upon me,

I will carry out the deeds [that Nergal] has commanded!" He went forth and repeated it to the palace, saying: "This shall be my expiation."

9 Reading meš-is-fal
10 "Akk. annuš (a Sumerian loan word), in stylistic contrast to enjatum, lit. "earth," which was used in the preceding lines.
11 Reading highly uncertain. On the photograph (ZA, XLI, PI. 111) the sign is damaged and ambiguous. Ebeling reads hick-ba.
12 Reading sūdib-ba-šu-ka-ma (root edebu), with v. Soden, ZA, XLI, 30.
13 For the verbal root cf. Gilgamesh, V (Bogazkoy fragment, KUB iv, No. 12, 6): littu nubat mui.
14 Reading meš-is-fal
15 "Akkav, annuš (a Sumerian loan word), in stylistic contrast to enjatum, lit. "earth," which was used in the preceding lines.
16 Reading highly uncertain. On the photograph (ZA, XLI, PI. 111) the sign is damaged and ambiguous. Ebeling reads hick-ba.
17 Reading sūdib-ba-šu-ka-ma (root edebu), with v. Soden, ZA, XLI, 30.
The Myth of Zu

This myth deals, in its Akkadian formulation, with the theft of the Tablet of Destinies and the arrogation of the supreme authority of the gods by the bird-god, Zu, who is eventually vanquished by one of the benign deities. It is probable that Zu belongs to the realm of the nether world.1 The extant Sumerian material does not connect him with the episode that constitutes the core of the Akkadian myth. The Semitic versions are fragmentary, so that an adequate comparative study is as yet impossible. Until 1938 there was available only a portion of the Ashurbanipal recension (B). In that year, however, Father V. Scheil published two incomplete tablets of a Susa recension, which dates from Old Babylonian times and presents the two middle tablets—now largely mutilated—of what appears to have been originally a four-tablet composition. Recendy collated and re-edited by J. Nougayrol, the Susa text has lately been supplemented by a close congener discovered among the Ashur tablets; it has been published in transliteration and translation by E. Ebeling. This combined new material (OB Version) helps to fill gaps in the Assyrian Version and carries the story farther. Since the conclusion, however, is still missing, the identity of the god who succeeded eventually in taming Zu remains uncertain. It may have been Ningirsu at the start (with Nougayrol), becoming supplanted by Ninurta (Ebeling) and eventually replaced by Marduk or the given local chief of the pantheon.

The translation of the OB Version, which precedes that of the Assyrian recension, has been pieced together from the Scheil-Nougayrol and Ebeling publications.

The Myth of Zu is of outstanding importance in that it links supreme cosmic authority (Enlilship) to the control of the Tablet of Destinies (cf. Epic of Creation, 1, 156).

OB VERSION

(Tablet 1 missing)

Tablet 2

He took away the Enlilship; suspended were the norms.8

Father Enlil, their counselor, was speechless. Blinding brightness spilled out, silence prevailed. The Igigi, one and all, were upset; The sanctuary took off its brilliance. The gods of the land gathered one by one at the news. Anu opened his mouth, Saying to the gods, his sons:

"Which of the gods shall slay Zu?

His name shall be the greatest of all!"

They called the Irrigator, the son of Anu;

He who gives the orders addressed him:

"[In] thy resolute onslaught bring lightning upon Zu with thy weapons!

[Thy name shall be the greatest] among the great gods, 10"

8 Of below, n.16. 9 Reading [^BIL.G] I with Nougayrol, ad loc.

A form of Idtarr.

The Assyrian version repeats with each god the same speech that is attributed to Adad. The OB version avoids this redundancy.

Namely, Ea.

Nougayrol’s revised reading shows that the goddess in question is Mah, a synonym of Mammi; the latter is indeed cited in line 48. And just as Mammi is described as a n i n m e "Lady of the Norms," (cf. Tallqvist, Ahijadische Gotterepitheta, 193, 414), our Mah-Mammi is glossed here as belet u/suratî "mistress of designs, decrees." Note also the mention of Ma(m)mî in the fragmentary introduction to the Assyrian version (CT, 106, 29, 22. 2. 4; cf. Nougayrol, RA, xlvi, 87; n. 11.

10 For this god cf. Nougayrol, loc. cit. The Assyrian text, which comes in at line 52, substitutes Ninurta consistently.
[ ... ] their regulations\textsuperscript{18} they had proclaimed in the Assembly,

[With shrieks of pain I gave birth to them all.
[ ... ] equal of the gods? I, Mammi!\textsuperscript{12b}
[Who] ascertained for my brother and for Anu the kingship of heaven?
[The ... ] of the kingship which I ascertained am I!
[ ... ] thy father I formed. \textsuperscript{(51)}

Let the winds carry his wings to places undisclosed.

When the hero had heard the speech of his mother,
His battle courage grew firmer (and) he repaired to the mountain.\textsuperscript{14}

She who hitches the Seven[-of-the-Battle],
The seven whirlwinds that cause the dust to dance,

She who hitches the Seven-of-the-Battle,
[Ordered the furious struggle, incited] his battle.

Let the gods ... the mountains.

On the slope of Zu's mountain the god appeared. \textsuperscript{(80)}

(After) ends Tablet II of the Susa version, the corresponding point in Tablet II of the late recension being line 35. The fragmentary text of Susa III has not been included because it is duplicated by the better preserved Tablet II of the late recension which has been translated in the Addenda. The only exception is the last four lines of Susa III on which see the Addenda.)

\begin{flushright}
ASSYRIAN VERSION
\end{flushright}

(For column i see Supplement, p. 514.)

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{(ii)}
\end{itemize}

And all the decrees of the gods he directed.\textsuperscript{15}
To convey them he dispatched Zu, Enlil entrusted to him the ... of the entrance to his shrine.

The [...] [ing of pure water before him.
The exercise of his Enlilship his eyes view.
The crown of his sovereignty, the robe of his godhead, His divine Tablet of Destinies Zu views constantly.
As he views constantly the father of the gods, the god of Duranki,\textsuperscript{16}
The removal\textsuperscript{17} of Enlilship he conceives in his heart.
As Zu views constantly the father of the gods, the god of Duranki,
The removal of Enlilship he conceives in his heart "I will take the divine Tablet of Destinies, I, And the decrees of all the gods I will rule!"

\textsuperscript{18} Here \textit{parzu} has its alternative sense of "rite, regulation," cf. \textit{AOF}, n. 67.

\textsuperscript{12b} I have followed Nougayrol in his interpretation of lines 47-51.

\textsuperscript{13} Read perhaps \textit{il-ir-ta-ft-ca}—which form is unambiguous in the Assyrian version II, 7; for the meaning cf. Creation Epic, VII, 119.

\textsuperscript{14} For the same phrase in omens cf. A. Goetze, \textit{JCS}, 1 (1947), 75*.

\textsuperscript{15} Reading \textit{u-ma-[‘-ir]}. For the restoration of lines 2-3 cf. Nougayrol, \textit{Rd. xi-vi} (1922), 87, n.3.

\textsuperscript{16} Here and in A (2, 21; 3, 8) the Temple Tower at Nippur rather than the city of Der.

\textsuperscript{17} Reading \textit{M}-\textit{W}.

\textsuperscript{18} cf. N., 97, n. 72 (after v. Soden).
I will make firm my throne and be the master of the norms.
I will direct the totality of all the Igigi." His heart having thus plotted aggression, at the entrance of the sanctuary, which he had been viewing, he awaits the start of day. As Enlil was washing with pure water, his crown having been removed and deposited on the throne, he seized the Tablet of Destinies in his hands, (20) Taking away the Enlilship; suspended were the norms. When Zu had flown away and repaired to his mountain, stillness spread abroad. He had been removed and deposited on the sanctuary, which he had been entering. Zu has flown away repairing to his mountain. At the entrance of  the sanctuary, which he  had been viewing, he awaits the start of day. As Enlil was washing with pure water, his crown having been removed and deposited on the throne, he seized the Tablet of Destinies in his hands, (20) Taking away the Enlilship; suspended were the norms. When Zu had flown away and repaired to his mountain, stillness spread abroad. He had been removed and deposited on the sanctuary, which he had been entering.

Father Enlil, their counselor, was speechless. The sanctuary took off its brilliance. [The gods of the land rallied at the news. Anu op[ened] his mouth to speak, saying to the gods, his sons: "[Wh]o pot]ent one, all-conquering Shara—immovable thy onslaught—[Bring] lightning upon Zu with thy weapons! Thy name] shall be the greatest in the Assembly of the great gods, [Among the gods], thy brothers, thou shalt have no equal! [Let] built shrines appear, [In the] four quarters establish thy cult sites, (40) Let thy [cult s]ites re-enter Ekur! [Glorified before the gods and potent shall be thy name!"

Ada[d] replied to the command, saying (these) words to A[nu], his father: "My father, to the trackless [mountain] who will hasten? Who is like Zu among the gods, thy sons? (90) The Tablet of Destinies he has seized in his hands, the Enlilship he has taken away; suspended are the norms.

[The Enlilship] he has taken away; suspended are the norms. [Zu] has flown away repairing to his mountain. His [utterance] has become like that of the god of Duranki. (50) [He who opposes] him will become like clay, [At] his [ . . . the gods waste away]."

[Anu bade him to forego the journey.]

(The first twenty-three lines of this column [54-76 in consecutive line count] are almost totally destroyed, except for portions of the last five lines. These correspond to lines 49-53 above. Apparently another deity had been called in, but declined to go against Zu. It should be noted that in the Susa Version the first-born of Ishtar is the second god to be called [the third in the Assyrian Version]. Moreover, he appears to have accepted the challenge, unlike his counterpart in the present instance.)

[They] called [Shara], the first-born of Ishtar. (77) [He who gives the orders addressed him:] "[Thou potent] one, all-conquering Shara—immovable thy onslaught—Bring lightning upon Zu with thy weapons! Thy name] shall be the greatest in the Assembly of the great gods, [Am]ong the gods, thy brothers, thou shalt have no equal! Let built shrine appear, In the four quarters establish thy cult sites, Let thy cult sites re-enter Ekur! Glorified before the gods and potent shall be thy name!"

Shara replied to the command, saying (these) words to Anu, his father: "My father, to the trackless [mountain] who will hasten? Who is like Zu among the gods, thy sons? (90) The Tablet of Destinies he has seized in his hands, the Enlilship he has taken away; suspended are the norms. Zu has flown away repairing to his mountain. [His utterance] has become like that of the god of Duranki.

[He who opposes him will become like clay], [At his . . . the gods waste away]."

[Anu bade Shara to forego the journey.]

For the remainder of the tablet see the Supplement. Another incomplete tablet [CT, xv, Pis. 41-42] belongs to the Lugalbanda cycle—represented primarily in Sumerian—which tells us that Lugalbanda set out to conquer Zu by first plying him with intoxicants. In a hymn of Ashurbanipal it is Marduk who is celebrated as "the one who crushed the skull of Zu." And we have seen that the Susa text features Ningirsu, and the new text from Ashur has Ninurta, but the ultimate conqueror remains in doubt.)
Etana

The legendary dynasty of Kish which followed the Flood lists among its rulers "Etana, a shepherd, the one who to heaven ascended." Cylinder seals of the Old Akkadian period depict a shepherd rising heavenwards on the wings of an eagle. And a figure by the name of Etana—a mortal in all respects, except lists among its rulers "Etana, a shepherd, the one who to heaven...

The subject matter is thus clearly one of great antiquity. Its popularity, moreover, is attested by the fact that the legend has come down to us in fragments of three recensions: The Old Babylonian (A); the Middle Assyrian (B); and the Neo-Assyrian—from the library of Ashurbanipal (C). With the aid of these three versions, of which the latest is by far the best-preserved, the outlines of the story may be reconstructed as follows:

Etana had been designated to bring to mankind the security that kingship affords. But his life was blighted so long as he remained childless. The one known remedy appeared to be the plant of birth, which Etana must bring down in person from heaven. The difficult problem of the flight to heaven was eventually solved by Etana's enlisting the aid of an eagle. The eagle had betrayed his friend, the serpent, and was languishing in a pit as a result of his perfidy. Etana rescues the bird and, as a reward, is carried by the eagle on a spectacular and fitful flight. His text fails us at the critical juncture. But the fact that the king list records the name of Etana's son and heir, and the further fact that myths depicted on seals do not normally commemorate disaster, permit the conclusion that the ending was a happy one after all.

The various texts which represent the Old Babylonian and the Neo-Assyrian recensions (A and C) have been republished by S. Langdon in Babylonica, XII (1931), Pis. i-xiv, and have been discussed by him, ibid., pp. 1-53. Our text references will be limited in the main to Langdon's copies, which furnish also an adequate guide to the respective sources. But Langdon's attempt to piece together a consecutive story from documents separated by more than a millennium has not been followed in this translation. Instead, the material has been grouped according to periods. Thirteen years after Langdon's publication, E. Ebeling was able to add to the Etana material by publishing fragments of a Middle Assyrian version, AF0, xiv (1944), Pis. i-x, and pp. 298-303, together with new Neo-Assyrian fragments, ibid., Pis. XI-XII, and pp. 303-07. Older translations include those of P. Jensen, KB, vi, 1 (1900), 100-15, and 381-88; and of E. Ebeling, AOT, 235-40. Detailed references will be given with each of the headings in the translation which follows.

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

A-i5

(o)

The great Anunnaki, who decree the fate,
Sat down, taking counsel about the land.

They who created the regions, who set up the establishments,

The Igigi were too lofty for mankind,
A stated time for mankind they decreed.

2 H. Frankfort, Cylinder Seals (1939), 138-39, and Pi. xxiv-A.
3 cf. also, P. Dhorme, Choix de textes religieux assyro-babyloniens (1907), 162-81.
4 Babylonica, xii (1931), Pl. xx and p. 10 ff.; KB, vi, v (1900), 582 ff.

The beclouded people, in all, had not set up a king. At that time, no tiara had been tied on, nor crown, And no scepter had been inlaid with lapis; The shrines had not been built altogether. The Seven had barred the gates against the settlers.

Scepter, crown, tiara, and (shepherd's) crook Lay deposited before Anu in heaven, There being no counseling for its people. (Then) kingship descended from heaven.

(The remaining lines of this column, and nearly all of the following four columns, are missing. When the text becomes connected again, the eagle had appeared in the account:)

(v)

"O Shamash, ta[ke] my hand [...],
Me [...] ."

Shamash op[ened] his mouth, [saying to the eagle]:
"Thou hast dealt wickedly [...].

The detested of the gods and the forbidden thou didst eat."

(vi)

By his [h]and he seized him [...] [...].
In the eighth month he caused (him) to pass by his pit. The eagle, having received the food like a howling lion, Gained strength.

The eagle opened his [mouth], saying to Etana:
"My friend, verily we are joined in friendship, I and thou!
Say but to me what thou wishest of me, and I will grant it to thee."

Etana opened his mouth, saying to the eagle: "...[...]. a hidden thing."

(tablet ends)

A-210

(obverse)

"May the path be lost for him that he find not the way! May the mountain withhold from him its passage. May the darting weapon head straight for him!"

They swore (this) oath to each other.

All were conceived, all were born.

In the shade of the styrax-tic begets the serpent; On its crown begets the eagle.

6 A metaphor for "mankind."
7 Not "the seven gates were locked" (Langdon, Babylonica, xx, 11), but "the divine Seven (barred the gates)," cf., below, C-i, line 17, where these deities are equated with the Igigi.
8 Reading da-ad-ni, cf. da-ad-ro in the parallel passage, C-i, 18; the word means "settlements" and, by extension, "setters," cf. B. Meissner, Beiträge zum assyrischen Wörterbuch, 1 (1931), 35-37. For the interchange m/n cf. kalmu "dual combat," W. v. Soden, ZA, XLI (1933), 166, and 166 n.1.
9 Evidently, the earth's. The term mitlu/u "counseling, consultation" refers here to the function of the mahku, a cognate of the Hebrew word for "king." It is a significant commentary on the nature of kingship in Mesopotamian civilization.
10 Babylonica, xx, PIs. xiii-xvii and pp. 14 ff.
11 This is the concluding part of the oath taken by the eagle and the serpent; cf. the Middle Assyrian Version (B), 4-7; and the Neo-Assyrian passage, C-2, lines 11-16.
12 For this identification cf. R. Campbell Thompson, A Dictionary of Assyrian Chemistry and Geology (1936), xxvi.
When the serpent has caught a wild ox (or) a wild sheep, 13
The eagle feeds, his young feed.
When the serpent has caught a leopard (or) a tiger; 14
The eagle feeds, his young feed.

After his young had grown in age [and size], 15
{Their} wings had acquired... 16
The eagle {plotted evil} in his heart:
"My young [have grown in age and size];
They will go forth to seek [ ... ],
They will seek the plant(s) [ ... ],
Then I will devour the young of the serpent [ ... ]!
I will go up and in [heaven]
I will dwell [ ... ]!

Who is there that [ ... ]?"

I will devour the young of the serpent [ ... ]!

After his young had grown in age [and size],
The eagle feeds, withdraws, his young feed.

"My father, [ ... ]!"

To the eagle, his father (these) words addressed:
I will go up and in [heaven]
I will dwell [ ... ]!

Who is there that [ ... ]?"

The [little] fledgling, [exceeding wise],
{His fledglings are whole, my young are not there!}
To the eagle I extended goodwill.
I revered and honored thine oath,
I upheld not evil against my friend.
Yet he, his nest is whole, but [my] nest is shattered,
The nest of the serpent has become a dirge;
How thou, O Shamash, that he pursues evil.
Thy net is the faraway sky.
May he place the wicked demon upon his plain!"

MIDDLE ASSYRIAN VERSION 18

(i)

(beginning mutilated)

"May the da[rt]ing [weapon] head straight for him,
May Shamash single him out 20 from among the killers,

May Shamash hand over the wicked one to the executioner!
May he place the wicked demon upon his plain!" 21

On the crown of the tree the eagle begets,
At the base of the styrrax-tree begets the serpent.
In the shade of that styrrax-ticc
The eagle and the serpent formed a friendship,
Taking the oath to remain companions.
The desire of their hearts
They expounded to each other.
The serpent goes forth to hunt;
When wild sheep and wild goats 22
The serpent has caught,
The eagle feeds, withdraws, 28
His young feed.
When the serpent has caught mountain goats, gazelles of the steppe,
The [eagle] feeds, withdraws, his young feed.
When the serpent has caught [the leopard] of the steppe,
[The eagles] feeds, withdraws, his young feed.
[After the young of the eagle]
[Had grown in age and size,
Had acquired [stature],
[The eagle] feeds, withdraws, his young feed.
To devour set [his] mind.

(remainder of the column destroyed. Column ii too fragmentary for translation. The context corresponds to our C-3, 39 if.)

NEO-ASSYRIAN VERSION

C-I-74

(beginning mutilated)
The great Anunnaki [who decree the fate],
[Sat] exchanging their counsels [about the land].  10
They who created the four 25 regions [ ... ],
The command of all the Igigi the people [neglected].
The [ ... ] had not set up [a king].
In those days, [no tiara had been tied on, nor crown],
[no] scepter had been [inlaid] with lapis.

The regions had not been created altogether.
The divine Seven against the people barred [the gates],
Against the settlers they barred [ ... ].
Ishtar a shepherd [for the people ... ], (20)
And a king she seeks [for the city].

Enlil inspects the quarters of heaven [ ... ],
Enlil a shepherd for the people [ ... ],
In the land a king [ ... ],
Kingship [ ... ].

Then [his heart] prompted Enlil [ ... ].
The gods [ ... ].

A KKADIAN MYTH

H suspense and epics

13 cf. B. Landsberger, Fauna (1934), 10, 144.
14 ibid., 84.
15 cf. the new fragment, AFO, xiv (1944), Pl. xii (K 5299) and pp. 304 T
16 ibid., 305, line p.
18 Reading di-[qal-qal]. cf. ibid, 13 and n.52.
19 E. Ebeling, AFO, xiv, Pl. ix and pp. 299-303; LKA, 14.
20 Lit. "lift up his head," in the sense of "call to account"; cf. The Myth of Zu, p. HI, n.5.
21 Oath sworn by the eagle and the serpent, cf. above, A-2, 1-3, and below C-2, 11-16.
22 cf. Ebeling, loc. cit., 300 f., n.15.
23 See Langdon, Babyloniana, XII, 15, n.5.
25 Reading q-im in place of Langdon's id im.
"Come, let us arise [...],"
(8)
We have sworn by the nether world [...])!"
The oath that they swore before valiant Shamash:
"[He who has transgressed] the bounds of Shamash,
May Shamash [hand him over] for evil to the executioner!
He who [has transgressed] the bounds of Shamash,
May [the mountain] remove from him [its] passage!
When they had sworn the oath by the mountain.
They arose and went up to the mountain.
Each day they watch [...]·
When the eagle has caught wild sheep (or) gazelles,
The eagle feeds, withdraws, his young feed.
When the eagle has caught [leopards (or)] ground tigers,
The eagle feeds, withdraws, [his] young feed.
The eagle received the food; his young grew in age and size.
When his young had grown in age and size,
The eagle's heart plotted evil.
And as his heart plotted evil,
He set his mind upon devouring the young of his friend.
The eagle opened his mouth, saying to his young:
"I will eat the young of the serpent; the serpent [...]·
I will ascend to heaven that I may dwell there,
And I will descend to the crown of the tree to eat the fruit."
The little fledgling, exceeding wise, (These) words to his father [addressed]:
"Eat not, my father! The net of Shamash may catch thee.
The snare, the curse of Shamash, may overtake thee and catch thee!
He who has transgressed the bounds of Shamash, (40)
[He] Shamash [will hand over] for evil to the executioner!"
But he heard them not, he hearkened not [to the words of his son].
He descended and devoured the young [of the serpent]. [...], in the middle of the day the [serpent came].

Carrying his load (of flesh); at the entrance to the nest
H[e cast it down for his young].
As the serpent [glanced round], his nest was not there;
When he bent low, [he saw] (it) not.
With his claws he [scrapes] the ground;
The dust [of the nest] covers the sky!

The serpent [lies down and weeps],
[His tears flowing] before Shamash;
"I put my trust in thee, [valiant Shamash],
To the eagle [I extended goodwill].
Now my nest [...],
My nest is destroyed [...],
Shattered are my young [...].
He came down and devoured [my offspring].
[Know thou], O Shamash, the evil which he has done to me.
Verily, O Shamash, thy net is the [wide] earth,
Thy snare is the [faraway] sky.
May [the eagle] not escape from thy net,
That evildoer, Zu, who upholds [evil against his friend]!

When Shamash heard] the plea of the serpent, Shamash opened his mouth, [saying] to [the serpent]:
"Go on (thy) way, cross [the mountain]!
I will bind[82] for thee a wild ox.
Open his inside, [rend his belly],
Pitch (thy) dwelling [in his belly]!
[Every kind] of bird of heaven [will descend to devour the flesh];
(20)
The eagle [will descend] with them [to devour the flesh].

[Since] he knows not [his ill fortune].

Looking for the succulent flesh, he will proceed cautiously,
Groping to the recesses of the interior.
When he enters the interior, seize thou him by his wings;
Tear off his wings, his pinions, and his [talons];
Pluck him and cast him into a pit [...].
Let him die the death of hunger and thirst!"
At the command of valiant Shamash, The serpent went and crossed the mountain.
When the serpent reached the wild ox, He opened his inside, rent his belly.
He pitched (his) dwelling in his belly.
Every kind of bird of heaven descended to devour the flesh.

For this episode cf. the Middle Assyrian fragment, AF, xiv, Pl. ix, ii, and pp. 301 ff.; also the Neo-Assyrian fragment, ibid., Pl. xn, and pp. 304 ff.

[82] In the sense of "charm, cast a spell upon."
If the eagle but feared his ill fortune,"
He would not eat the flesh with the (other) birds!
The eagle opened his mouth saying to his young:
"Come ye, let us go down and devour the flesh of this wild ox!"
The little fledgling, exceeding wise,
To the eagle, his father,36 (these) words addressed:
"Go [not] down, my father! Perchance Inside this wild ox lurks the serpent?"
The eagle [consulting not] with [his heart]"37 [Said] (these) [wor]ds:
"[I will g]o down [and eat the flesh of the wild ox]!
How could [the serpent] devour me?"38
He heard them not, he heeded not the words of his son,
He came down and lighted upon the wild ox.
The eagle inspected the flesh,
He examined its front and its hind parts.
Again he inspected the flesh, examining its front and its hind parts.
Proceeding cautiously, he groped to the recesses of the interior.
When he entered the interior, the serpent seized him by his wings: "Thou hast entered (and) altered my nest, Thou hast entered (and) altered my nest!"86
The eagle opened his mouth, saying to the serpent:
"Have mercy upon me, and I will bestow upon thee
A marriage gift, like unto a bridegroom!"
(50)
The serpent opened his mouth, saying to the eagle:
"If I release thee, how shall I answer Shamash on high?
Thy punishment would be turned against me,
Who should impose punishment upon thee?"
He tore off his wings, his pinions, and his talons,
[He plucked him and cast him] into a pit, [Saying]: "He shall die a death of hunger [and thirst]!
[
] the eagle daily beseeches Shamash:
"Am I to perish in the pit ?
Who knows how thy punishment was imposed upon me?
Save the life of me, the eagle,
And I will sound thy name unto eternity!"
Shamash opened his mouth, saying to the eagle:
"Thou hast evil and hast grieved me grievously!
The detested of the gods (and) the forbidden thou didst eat
Though thou hast sown, I will not come to thee I
(But) lo, a man that I will send to thee,
He will take thy hand!"
Etana daily beseeches Shamash:
"Thou hast consumed, O Shamash, my fattest sheep,
The earth drinking up the blood of my lambs.
I have honored the gods and revered the spirits;
The oracle priestesses have done the needful to my offerings,
The lambs, by their slaughter, have done the needful to
the gods.
O lord, may it issue from thy mouth;
Grant thou me the plant of birth!
Show me the plant of birth,
Remove my burden and produce for me a name!"40
Shamash opened his mouth, saying to Etana:
"Go on (thy) way, cross the mountain.
On seeing a pit, examine its inside!
Inside it lies an eagle;
He will give thee the plant of birth!"
At the command of valiant Shamash,
Etana went on (his) way, crossed the mountain.
When he saw the pit, he examined its inside;
Inside [it lay an eagle],
Inasmuch as [Shamash] had there caused him to await

The eagle opened his mouth,
[Saying] (these) words to Shamash, his lord:
[
] .
"The young of a bird [],
[Le]jad him hither [...].
[Wh]atever he says [],
[Wh]atever I say [...]."
At the command of valiant Shamash [],
The young of a bird []
The eagle opened his mouth, saying [to] Etana:
"Why thou didst come [tell me thou]!"
(10)
Etana opened his mouth, saying [to] the eagle:
"My friend, give me the plant of birth,
Show thou to me the plant of birth!
[Remove my burden and] produce for me a name!"
(At approximately this point comes in the Neo-Assyrian fragment, AfO, xiv, Pl. xi, and pp. 306-07. The text is badly damaged and Ebeling’s suggested additions have been offered by him with all due reserve. The line count is that of Ebeling.)

(remainder broken away)

33 Here begins the parallel text, Marsh Reverse, Baby lonicia, XII, Pl. II-M.
34 These words are supplied from AfO, xiv, Pl. ix, ii, 4.
35 Ebeling, ibid., 305, line 3, would read it-ti  [ib-bi-bi ul im-lik-.,ma], which yields excellent sense; it should be noted, however, that the copy (Langdon’s Pl. ii, 7) does not altogether favor these additions.
36 This reading by Ebeling (ibid., line 4), accords well with the traces on the Marsh Fragment (Baby lonicia, xii, Pl. ii, line 8) and the new Ebeling text.
38 Meaning "son."
39 Baby lonicia, xn, Pl. viii, pp. 39 ff.; K&I, vi, 1, 108-11 (Jensen n);
AOT, 238 (Ebeling C).
The sea has turned into the water [of a stream]!"
When he had borne [him] aloft a second league,
The eagle says to [him], to Etana:
"See, my friend, how the land appears!"
(30)
"The land [ ... ]!"
When he had borne him aloft a third league,
The eagle [says] to him, to Etana:
"See, my friend, how the land appears!"
"The land has turned into a gardener's ditch!"
After they had ascended to the heaven of Anu,
Had come to the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
The eagle (and) E[tana] together did obeisance.
[ ... ] the eagle (and) Etana.

"The burden [ ... ].
Leave [ ... ]
[ ... ]."
The eagle thus [speaks to him]:
"I will bear thee [ ... ]."

The eagle [says] to him, to Etana:
"As I glanced round, the land has indeed become a hill!"
When he had borne [him] aloft one league,
The eagle says to [him], to Etana:
"See, my friend, how the land appears!"
(30)
"The land has turned into a furrow [ ... ],
And the wide sea is just like a bread basket."
When he had borne him aloft a second league:
"My friend, cast a glance at how the land appears!"
"The land has turned into a furrow [ ... ],
And the wide sea is just like a bread basket.
When he had borne him aloft a third league:
"My friend, cast a glance at how the land appears."
"As I glanced round, the land [had disappeared],
And upon the wide sea [mine eyes] could not feast!
My friend, I will not ascend to heaven!
Halt in (thy) tracks that [ ... ]!"
(30)
One league he plunged down:
The eagle went down, and he abreast of him [ ... ].
A second league he plunged down:
The eagle went down, and he abreast [of him ... ].
A third league he plunged down:
The eagle went down, and he abreast [of him ... ].
[To within three cubits] of the ground [of Anu],
The eagle had fallen, and he abreast of him [ ... ].
[ ... ] the eagle has been bruised; of Etana [ ... ].

---

"Upon me [ ... ]"
From sunrise until [ ... ],
When he comes out of [ ... ]
I will give thee [the plant] of birth!"

When Etana [heard] this,
He filled the front of the pit with [ ... ],
Next he put down two [ ... ],
[ ... ] jing down before him [ ... ].
The eagle [was unable] to rise from die pit;
He [ ... ].
[ ... ] and [ ... ]
Again [he was unable] to rise from the pit;
He flaps [his] w[ings ...].
[For the third time from the p]it [he was unable] to rise.
[He] flaps [his] w[ings ...].

The eagle [opened] his mouth, [saying to Etana]:
[ ... ]
At the entrance of the gate of Anu, Enlil, [and Ea],
We did obeisance.
At the entrance of the gate of Sin, Shamash, Adad, and [Ishtar]
I opened the ...[ ... ].
I loos round as I go down [ ... ].
She was sitting in the midst of brilliance [ ... ],
[ ... ] she was laden [ ... ]."
A throne was placed and [ ... ].

The sea has turned into the water [of a stream]!"
When he had borne [him] aloft a second league,
The eagle says to [him], to Etana:
"See, my friend, how the land appears!"
(30)
"The land [ ... ]!"
When he had borne him aloft a third league,
The eagle [says] to him, to Etana:
"See, my friend, how the land appears!"
"The land has turned into a gardener's ditch!"
After they had ascended to the heaven of Anu,
Had come to the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
The eagle (and) E[tana] together did obeisance.
[ ... ] the eagle (and) Etana.
The Legend of Sargon

The legend concerning the birth of Sargon of Agade is available in two incomplete Neo-Assyrian copies (A and B) and in a Neo-Babylonian fragment (C). All three were published in CT, XIII (1901): A—PI. 42; B and C—PI. 43. Text B alone contains incomplete lines of a second column; it is uncertain whether this column bore any relation to the Sargon legend. A composite text of the actual legend, with variant readings, transliteration, and translation was published by L. W. King in his Chronicles Concerning Early Babylonian Kings, n (1907), 85-96. Latest (partial) translation and discussion: H. G. Gitterbock, ZA xi (1934), 62-64.* (See Addenda.)

Sargon, the mighty king, king of Agade, am I. My mother was a high priestess, my father I knew not. The brother(s) of my father loved the hills. My city is Azupiranu, which is situated on the banks of the Euphrates. My mother, the high priestess, conceived me, in secret she bore me. She set me in a basket of rushes, with bitumen she sealed my lid.³

loc. cit., has even suggested i-haJ-Ial "he grinds" as a possible reading. In view, however, of the points made in the Introduction, it is improbable that the adventure ended in death. Langdon would fill part of the break with the small fragment K 8963 rev. (Babyloniaca, xn, PI. ix, and p. 52). It is too slight and inconclusive for a connected translation. But mention is made in it of Etana’s wife, his kingship, and his ghost. Do we have here a speech addressed to Etana’s son, BaliJ, whom the king list places immediately after Etana (Th. Jaks bsen, The Sumerian King List, 1939, 80-81)? At all events, the prevailing view that Etana’s flight resulted in misfortune would seem to stand in need of confirmation.

Langdon would fill part of the break with the small fragment K 8963 rev. (Babyloniaca, xn, PI. ix, and p. 52). It is too slight and inconclusive for a connected translation. But mention is made in it of Etana’s wife, his kingship, and his ghost. Do we have here a speech addressed to Etana’s son, BaliJ, whom the king list places immediately after Etana (Th. Jacob sen, The Sumerian King List, 1939, 80-81)? At all events, the prevailing view that Etana’s flight resulted in misfortune would seem to stand in need of confirmation.

She cast me into the river which rose not (over) me.⁴ The river bore me up and carried me to Akki, the drawer of water.

Akki, the drawer of water lifted me out as he dipped his e[w]er.⁵ Akki, the drawer of water, [took me] as his son (and) reared me. (10)

Akki, the drawer of water, appointed me as his gardener. While I was a gardener, Ishtar granted me (her) love, And for four and [ ... ] years I exercised kingship. The black-headed [people] I ruled, I gov[erned]; Mighty [moun]tains with chip-axes of bronze I con quered,
The upper ranges I scaled, The lower ranges I [trav]ersed, The sea [lan]ds three times I circled. Dilmun my [hand] cap[tured], [To] the great Der I [went up], I [ ... ], (20) [K]azallu I destroyed and [ ... ].* Whatever king may come up after me,

Let him r[u]le, let him govern] the black-headed [peo]ple; [Let him conquer] mighty [mountains] with chip-axe[s of bronze], [Let] him scale the upper ranges, [Let him traverse the lower ranges], Let him circle the sea [lan]ds three times! [Dilmun let his hand capture], Let him go up [to] the great Der and [ ... ]! (30) [ ... ] from my city, Aga[de... ] [ ... ... ...].

(Remainder broken away. The remains of column ii, as extant in Text B, and CT 46, 46 are too fragmentary for translation.)

⁴ cf. Gitterbock, loc. cit., 63.
⁵ Reading i-na fi-ib da-li-[!u], with Landsberger, ZA, xi.11, 63, n.2.
The Moon that Fell from Heaven

(10) The Moon-god (Hattic: KaZ\(u\)) fell down from heaven. He fell upon the hjalammar. But no one saw him. The Storm-god (Hattic: Taru) sent rain after him, he sent rainstorms after him so that fear seized him (and) fright seized him.

(15) Hapantalliyas (Hattic: Hapantdl) went and took his place at his side so as to bespeak him. Kaurushes (Hattic: Katalziwuri) saw what had fallen from heaven speaking as follows: "The Moon-god (Hattic: Ka[l]lu) has fallen from heaven. He fell upon the hjalammar.

(20) "The Storm-god (Hattic: Taru) saw him and he sent rain after him, he sent rainstorms after him, he sent the winds after him so that fear seized him (and) fright seized him."

Hapantalliyas (Hattic: Hapantdl) went and took his place at his side (25) so as to bespeak him: "What art thou going to do? ..."

Kingship in Heaven

(1) [Let there listen the gods who are in heaven] and those who are in the dark earth! Let there listen the mighty [o]lden gods, Naras, [Napsaras, Mink[is (and) Ammunkis! Let there listen Ammerekus [and the gods of the olden days, the god(s)'] fathers (and) mothers!

(5) Let there listen [Anus, Ant[us (and) Isharas, the fathers (and) mothers!] Let there listen Ellilas, [Ninlillas and] also those who are mighty (and) firmly established gods! .. . —Once in the olden days Alalus was king in heaven. (As long as) Alalus was seated on the throne, the mighty Anus, first among the gods, (10) was standing before him. He would sink at his feet and set the drinking cup in his hand.

Nine in number were the years that Alalus was king in heaven. In the ninth year Anus gave batde to Alalus and he vanquished Alalus. He fled before him and went down to the dark earth. (15) Down he went to the dark earth, but Anus took his seat upon the throne. (As long as) Anus was seated upon the throne, the mighty Kumarbis would give him his food. He would sink at his feet and set the drinking cup in his hand.

Nine in number were the years that Anus was king in heaven. In the ninth year Anus gave batde to Kumarbis and li[e Alalus Kumarbis gave batde (20) to Anus. (When) he could no longer withstand Kumarbis' eyes, (he) Anus, he struggled forth from the hands of Kumarbis. He fled, (he) Anus; (like) a bird he moved in the sky. After him rushed Kumarbis, seized (him) Anus, by his feet and dragged him down from the sky.

(25) He (Kumarbis) bit his "knees" and his manhood went down into his inside. When it lodged there, (and) when Kumarbis had swallowed Anus' manhood, he rejoiced and laughed. Anus turned back to him, to Kumarbis he began to speak: "Thou rejoicest over thine inside, because thou hast swallowed my manhood.

(30) "Rejoice not over thine inside! In thine inside I have planted a heavy burden. Firsdy I have impregnated thee with the noble Storm-god. Secondly I have impregnated thee with the river Aramazahas, not to be endured. Thirdly I have impregnated thee with the noble Tas-mius. Three dreadful gods have I planted in thy belly as seed. Thou shalt go (35) and end by striking the rocks of thine own mountain with thy head!"

When Anus had finished speaking, he went up to heaven and hid himself. Out of his mouth spat Kumarbis, the wise king. Out of his mouth he spat .. . . . . . (40) mixed with . . . . That which Kumarbis spat out, [fell on] Mount Kanzuras; [ . . . ] an awesome god therein.

Filled with fury Kumarbis went to Nipp[ur, . . . . At the lordly .. . . . . . . he setded down. Kumarbis did not .. . . . (while) he counts [the months]. The seventh month ca[me . . . .

(lower third of column i missing)

(COLUMNS II AND HI ARE IN THE WORSE POSSIBLE STATE OF PRESERVATION. THIS MAKES IT VERY DIFFICULT TO FOLLOW THE COURSE OF EVENTS. WHAT IS OFFERED HERE, IS FAR FROM CERTAIN. FOR THE MOST PART I HAVE TO LIMIT MYSELF TO A PARAPHRASE

1 The nature of this publication has made it necessary to be liberal with restorations and to adopt sometimes rather free translations. Some scholars may feel that on occasion I have gone beyond the justifiable in this respect. It gives me great pleasure to express here my thanks to Prof. R. A. Crossland, who has greatly assisted me in putting my translations in adequate English. For a general discussion of Hittite texts see Introductio, pp. xvii-xviii.

2 These translations are a makeshift. The real names of the gods are not known to us since they are always written with the respective ideograms.

3 This is a euphemism for “male parts.”

4 The Hurrian name of the Tigris.

5 Later (see below, The Song of Ullikummis) Tasmisus is the attendant of the Storm-god.

6 The Mesopotamian city which was the center of the Sumero-Akkadian cult of Ellil.

7 The nature of this publication has made it necessary to be liberal with restorations and to adopt sometimes rather free translations. Some scholars may feel that on occasion I have gone beyond the justifiable in this respect. It gives me great pleasure to express here my thanks to Prof. R. A. Crossland, who has greatly assisted me in putting my translations in adequate English. For a general discussion of Hittite texts see Introductio, pp. xvii-xviii.
of such sections as seem intelligible. The main theme of column it is the birth of the Storm-god.)

(Anus addresses the Storm-god who is still unborn inside Kumarbis and advises him of the various parts of Kumarbis' body through which he may come forth [i.i.i-3]:

(The Storm-god answers from within Kumarbis: "Long live to thee! lord of the well-spring of wisdom! ... The earth will give me its strength, the sky will give me its valor, Anus will give me his manliness, Kumarbis will give me his wisdom, Naras will give me his ... Naepasras will give me his... The giving of the bull Sersi, a wagon or chariot and of other objects is also mentioned. It seems as though the Storm-god speaks of his future greatness and promises Anus to revenge him [ii 4-22].

(Anus repeats his advice as to the places from which the Storm-god may come forth, among them Kumarbis' mouth and the 'good place' [ii 23-28].

(The Storm-god replies: "... If I come forth from his ... it will derange (my) mind. If I come forth from his ... it will defile me at that spot, ... it will defile me at the ear.... If I come forth from the 'good place,' a woman will... me." In the following the Storm-god, it seems, is forewarned of what will happen, if he should come forth by rending asunder Kumarbis' tarnassas [ii 29-38].

(As he walked along and took his place before Ay as7 Kumarbis became [dizzy] and collapsed.... Kumarbis began to speak to Ayas: 'Give me my son, I want to devour [my son]!' Indeed it seems that Kumarbis received something to eat. However it hurts his mouth and he begins to moan [ii 39-54].

(On Kumarbis' complaint Ayas advises him to call in certain experts: 'Let them go (and) summon the poor! Let the poor' work magic on the heroes, the lords (and) the bulls for thee! Let the poor' bring sacrifices of meal for thee!' This then is done [ii 55-70].

("They began to work magic [on him] with [......], they kept bringing sacrifices of meal to him, they kept [......]. From the tarnassas [he wanted to come forth, but] they made Kumarbis' [tarnassas] secure. [Thus from the 'good place'] came forth the valiant Storm-god" [ii 71-75].

(The birth of the Storm-god is completed and reported to Anus [i 76-87].

(gap)

(Anus plots to destroy Kumarbis with the help of the Storm-god [iii 2-18].

(The Storm-god prepares for battle [iii 19-29].

(The outcome of the battle is not narrated on the preserved part of the tablet. Apparently the two other children that developed from Anus' "manhood" that Kumarbis' had spat out upon the earth also played a role therein [their birth being narrated in col. iv]. At any event, we have to assume that the Storm-god defeated Kumarbis and took over the kingship in heaven.)

The Song of Ullikummis

The texts are mentioned under the respective sections. Literature: H. G. Gitterbock, Kumarbi Efsanesi (Ankara, 1945); the same, Kumarbi, Mythen vom churritischen Kronos (Zurich-New York, 1946); the same, AJA, LII (1948), 125-130; also A. Goetze, JAOS, 69 (1949), 178-183; H. Otten, Mythen vom Gotte Kumarbi, Neue Fragmente (Berlin, 1950); H. G. Gitterbock offers a full reconstruction of the preserved parts of the composition.

(i-a) KUB, xxxii, 96 i -f- Otten, No. 8.

[Of the god who ...], in whose mind there are wise thoughts, and who thinks them out in his mind [...], of the father of all gods, of Kumarbis let me sing!

Kumarbis thinks out wise thoughts in his mind. He nurses the thought of (creating) misfortune (and) an evil being. He plots evil against the Storm-god. He nurses the thought of (raising up) a rival for the Storm-god.

Kumarbis thinks out wise thoughts in his mind and strings them together like beads.

When Kumarbis had thought out the wise thoughts in his mind, he instantly rose from his seat. He took his staff in his hand, put swift shoes on his feet. He set forth from Urkis, his city, and betook himself to the ... .

In the ... a great rock lies. Her[2] length is three double-hours, her width is [. . . double-hours] and a half... His desire was aroused and he slept with the rock. His manhood [flowed] into her; five times he took her, [...]; ten times he took her.

(i-b) KUB, xvii, 7 + xxxiiii, 93 ii

(Imbaluris, Kumarbis' messenger, is being instructed:) ["Go to the Sea and tell her:'... ] Kumarbis must remain father of the gods!" [When Imbaluris] saw (that) Kumarbis [had finished (?)], he walked on to the Sea.

[Imbaluris] began [to] repeat the words to the Sea: "The words which my lord has [told me to say, I want to pass on] to the Sea. I have [them] committed to memory: '... ; Kumarbis must remain father of the gods!'"

[When the Sea] heard [Imbaluris'] words, [the Sea] began to reply to [Imbaluris:] ["Listen, O Imbaluris! and to the wojrds which [I am speaking] to thee, [give] ear! [Go (and)] speak firm [words to Kumarbis: 'Why hast thou come in anger], Kumarbis? [Turn in favor back to my house! Fear [has seized the house...."

(i-c) KUB, xxxiii, 98 ii 1-30 and duplicate KUB, xxxiii, 102 ii 1-37

Imbaluris began to answer the Sea: "Kumarbis shall

---

6 One of the two bulls sacred to the Storm-god.
7 A city in Hurrian territory probably east of the Tigris.
8 The rock is imagined as a woman.
forever remain the father of the gods." The Sea answers Imbaluris: "Listen to these my words, and go to impress them upon Kumarbis!

"Go and speak to Kumarbis: 'Why hast thou come in anger toward (my) house? Fear has seized the house, and fright the house-slaves. For thee cedared oak is already split, food is already prepared. The musicians hold their instruments in readiness for thee day and night. So arise and come to my house!'" He arose, (he) Kumarbis, and Imbaluris walked before him. Kumarbis [came forth from his] house; he journeyed, (he) Kumarbis, and betook himself to the house of the Sea.

The Sea said: "For Kumarbis let them set up a seat to sit upon! Let them set up a table before him! Let them bring him food! Let them bring him beer to drink! The cooks brought dishes, the cupbearers brought sweet drinks, the musicians brought instruments in readiness for thee day and night; food is already prepared. The musicians betook themselves to the Waters! [These words speak in the presence of the Waters:'[...]']"

(i-d) KUB, xvi., 7 + KUB, xxxm, 93 + 95 + 96 + Otten, Kumarbi, No. 7a and duplicates

... When night [... ; when night] stood in the [...] vigil [... ; when night] stood [in the [... vigil] [...] stone [moved] stone. [... ,] they attended her when she gave birth [... ,] the Rock [... forth [...] and] Kumarbis' son [made his] appea[rance].

The [...] women brought him into the world; the Good-women and the Mother-goddesses lifted the child and placed [him upon Kumarbis'] knees. [Kumar]bis began to fonde his son [and] let him dance up and down. He proceeded to give [the child] a propitious name!

Kumarbis began to say to his soul: "What name [shall I give] him? The child which the Good-women and the Mother-goddesses presented me, [for the reason that he] shot forth from (her) body (as) a shaft, let him go and [his] name be Ubellikumis! Let him ascend to heaven for kingship! Let him vanquish Kummiya, the strong god [of Heaven and the . . .]-god must not see him! Not must he see the fierce batdes of the great gods."

(i-e) KUB, xxxm, 98 iii and duplicate 102 iii (immediate continuation)

[When] Imbaluris [heard these words, he took] (his) staff in (his) hand, put [(his) shoes on (his) feet] and journeyed. Imbaluris betook himself [to the . . .] Irsirra deities.

[Imbaluris] began to [speak these words] to the Irsirra deities: "Come ye here! Kumarbis, the father of the gods, [is calling] you. But the errand on which [he is calling] you, [ye are not to know]! Hasten and come!" When [the Irsirra deities heard the words, they hastened] (and) hurried. [They set forth and journeyed and they covered the distance without stopping a single time. They betook themselves to Kumarbis and Kumarbis began [to speak] to the Irsirra deities:

"[Tal]ke ye [this child] and treat him caringly! Bring him to the dark earth! [Hast]en and hurry! Place him—a shaft—upon Ubelluris' right shoulder. In one day he shall increase a cubit, in one month he shall grow. In one day he increases one cubit, in one month he shall present an amazing spectacle. . . ."

(i-f and i-g) KUB, xxxm, 93 + 95 + 96 iv and duplicate 92 iii (immediate continuation)

When the Irsirra deities heard [the] words, they took [the] child from Kumarbis' knees. The Irsirra deities lifted the child and pressed it to their breast like a cloth. They lifted him and placed him upon Ellil's knees. Ellil lifted his eyes and b[eheld] the child as it stood in his divine presence. His body was made of diorite.

Ellil began to speak to his[son]d: "Who is that child whom the Good-women (and) the Mother-goddesses reared? No one among the great gods will see mightier battles. No one's vileness equals Kumarbis'. Just as Kumarbis raised the Storm-god, he has [now raised] this awesome diorite man as his rival."

When Ellil [had finished] his words, [the Irsirra deities took the child] and placed it—a shaft—upon Ubelluris' right shoulder. The diorite grows, the strong [waters] make him grow. In one day he increases one cubit, in one month . . .

3 A kind of giant carrying the world on his shoulders, like Atlas.
he increases one acre. The stone which is added to his stature presents an amazing spectacle.

When the 15th day came, the stone had grown high.
He [was standing] in the sea with his knees (as) a shaft. It stood out above the water, the stone, and in height it (was) like [a pillar]. The sea reached up to its belt like a (loin)cloth. Like a tower the stone is raised up and reaches up to the temples and the untarra house in heaven.

The Sun-god looked down from the sky and caught sight of Ullikummis. Ullikummis saw the Sun-god.
The Sun-god [said]: "What vigorous god is standing there in the sea? His body is not like (that of) the [other] gods."

The Sun-god of Heaven [descended(?)] and went out into the sea. [ . . . ] The Sun-god laid his hand to his forehead [ . . . ]. In wrath he shook his fists.

[When these words] the Storm-god heard, in wrath he dared not go and battle [against the monster] ? Who can bear seeing his terrifying ... s?" Ishtar replies to the Storm-god, her brother: "My brother! Is there really not a single ... to whom sufficient courage [has been] given? Dost thou really not know the son whom [ . . . ] [have] begotten? [ . . . ]"

(11-b) Otten, Kumbari, No. 12 ii

Ishtar is singing and a . . . pebble from the sea she puts on. Out of the sea a great wave (rises) and the great wave speaks to Ishtar: "For whom wasteth thou singing, for whom wastest thou filling your mouth with song? The man is deaf and hears not; in his eyes he is blind and sees not. He has no willing heart Go away, O Ishtar, thy brother find while he has not yet become bold, while the skull of his head has not yet become dreadful!"

When Ishtar thus heard, she quenched [her song], harp and galgaltur? she threw away; the gold (en jewelry) [she discarded] and wailing she went [to . . . ].
(Ishtar reports to the Storm-god.)

(11-c) Otten, Kumbari, No. 12 iii

(The Storm-god instructs Tasmius:)

" . . . Let them mix fodder, let them bring fine oil!
Let them anoint Serisu's horns, let them plate with gold Telia's tail! Let them turn ... , and let them provide them with strong ... inside, but outside let them attach strong stones as a head-piece. Let them call out the thunder-storms which scatter the rocks for ninety furlongs . . . ! Let them call the rains (and) the winds!
The lightning which flashes frightfully let them bring from the sleeping-chamber. Let them bring out the wagon and make it ready! Word bring me back!"

When Tasmius the words heard, he hurried (and) hastened. Serisu [he drove up] from Mount Imgarra.
In the outer portal [he hitched] them. He brought fine oil and Serisu's [horns he anointed], Telia's tail he [plated with gold]. The . . . [he . . . Jed, on the outside he drank. He mounted [his chariot] and ascended to heaven.

After [the Sun-god's departure] the Storm-god thinks out wise thoughts in his mind. The Storm-god and Tasmius took each other by the hands and [they set] forth from the kunterra the house of the gods. But Ishtar set out from heaven with . . . , and Ishtar spoke in her own mind: "where are they running to, the two brethren?" She . . . stopped, she Ishtar, and before the two brethren she stood up. They took one another by the hands and ascended Mount Hazzi8 while the king of Kummiya set his eye, his eye he set on the awesome diorite man. He looked at the awesome diorite man and in wrath he shook his fists.

The Storm-god sat down on the ground, while tears streamed [from his eyes] as in water courses. With tears streaming from his eyes the Storm-god speaks the word:
"Who can bear to look upon so vexatious a sight? Who will dare go and battle [against the monster]? Who can bear seeing his terrifying . . . . s?"

(11-a) KUB, xxxm, 87 → 113

[When these words] the Storm-god heard, in wrath
[he sh]ook [his fists].3 [To the Sun-god of Heaven] the Storm-god began to speak: "[On the table the bread] shall become pleasant, so eat thou! In [the cup the wine] shall become pleasant, so drink thou! Eat and satisfy thy hunger, drink and quench thy thirst! [Then mount [thy chariot] and ascend to heaven!" [When these words] the Sun-god of Heaven heard, [he] rejoiced in [his soul]. [The bread on the table] became pleasant, so he ate. [The wine in the cup] became * Apparently the dwelling of the gods.

10 Literally "his arms became lowered (to the side)."
2 The Storm-god’s personal attendant.
5 Differently Friedrich, KC, i, 288.
7 Mount Casius near ancient Ugarit on the Mediterranean coast.
8 A musical instrument.
he attached strong stones as a head-piece. [The thunder storms he called out which scatter the rocks] for ninety furlongs.

(11-d) KUB, XXXII, 113 iv ← Otten, Kumarbi, Nos. 12 + 14 iv

... to fight he took a stand. Furthermore, his battle-gear he took, his wagon he took. From heaven he brought the clouds and the Storm-god set his face upon the diorite man. He visualized him and in height he was ... , his height turned (out to be) — [···].

The Storm-god began to speak to Tasmisus: ... (The continuation shows that the battle was undecided.)

(m-a) KUB, XXXIII, 106 i

When the gods heard the word, [they ...]. They made ready their wagons and handed ... . Astabis jumped [upon his wagon like a ...] and [drove] the wagon to [ ...]. He gathered the chariots together [ ...] and thundered the while, he Astabis. Amid thunder Astabis let [ ...] down into the sea. [With] the [ ...] they drew [up the water]. Astabis [ ...] and the seventy gods held [the ...]. Yet he could not [ ...]. Astabis ... and the seventy gods [tumbled] down into the sea. The diorite man [stayed unchanged], his body [even grew taller]. He made the heaven tremble and made [the earth shake]. He [pushed upward] the sky like an empty garment. The diorite man increased in height [ ...]. Before [ ... his height was] 1900 leagues as he stood [upon the dark earth]. Like a tower he was lifted up, (he) the diorite man, so that he reached up to the kuntarra house. Altogether his height was 9,000 leagues, that diorite man, and his girth 9,000 leagues. He stood [over] the gate of Kummiya like [a ...]. He, the diorite man, made Hebat leave her temple. Hence Hebat could no longer hear the message of the gods, nor could she see with her eyes the Storm-god and Suwaliyattas.

Hebat began to speak this word to Takitis: "I cannot hear the mighty word of the Storm-god. Nor can I hear the message of Suwaliyattas and of all the gods. Should that being whom they call Ullukimmis, the diorite man, have vanquished my [husband] the mighty [Storm-god]?

Hebat began to speak this word to Takitis: "O Takitis, listen! Take thy staff in thy hand, put swift shoes on thy feet! Go and [call] the gods into an assembly! The word [which I am telling thee give ear! Come! Let us go before Ea to Apsu, let us ask for the old tablets with the words [of fate]! [When] we arrive at the door of Ea's house [we shall bow] to Ea's doors [five times, and] we shall bow to Ea's ... five times. [But when] we arrive [before Ea (himself)], we shall bow down to Ea (himself) fifteen times. [By then] Ea's [heart] will perhaps have been softened and Ea [will] perhaps [listen] and do us a favor. He will hand over to us the old ... tablets."

When the Storm-god heard [Tasmisus'] words, he hastened (and) hurried. Instantly he rose from his seat. [The Storm-god] and [Tasmisus] took each other by hand, covered the distance without stopping a single time and [arrived] in Apsu. [When the Storm-god] came [to the entrance of] Ea's house, [he bowed at] the front [door five times], [and at] their [ ...] he bowed five times. [But before Ea (himself) he] bowed [fifteen] times.

(III-C) KUB, XXXIII, 106 iii

[ ... , further [more ...]. They [took each other] by the hand [and ...] until [they ...]. From the assembly [he went to Ellil]. [As he] began to lament, [Ellil began to speak to Ea:] "Long life to thee, Ea! [He] who worships [the gods, brings sacrifices to the gods, lavishes the fine and] soothing [cedarwood] on the gods—why hast thou [come to persecute] him?"

Ea [began to speak] to Ellil: ["Listen, Ellil!] To the word [which I am telling thee give ear! Kumbarbis has created] a rival to the Storm-god. [ ...] he has thrived and in height he is like a pillar, like [a tower] he is raised up [ ...]. [A rival] to thee [ ...] the olden [ ... Doeest thou know that vigorous [god]?” [ ... , but Ellil [did not know him].

13 Seris and Telara are the Storm-god's two bulls.
14 The Hurrian Warrior-god who was identified with Zamama or Ninurta.
15 This seems to be an attempt at preventing the monster's growth by depriving it of the water in which it is standing.
16 The Storm-god's wife.
17 A warrior-god, probably brother of the Storm-god.
18 Hebat's messenger.
19 Apus, the watery deep where Ea is living, has become here a city.
20 Ea and who? Perhaps the Storm-god.
[... ,] Ea [began to speak to Ellil: "What can I say to thee?] He who [... , will block off heaven and the gods'] holy houses."

When Ea [had ended his] words, he set forth and betook himself] to Ubelluris.\textsuperscript{18} [... ,] Ubelluris [lifted] (his) eyes [and beheld him]. Ubelluris [began to speak] to Ea: "Long life to thee, Ea! [What makes thee come] up [here?]" Ea wished] life to Ubelluris [... ,] and [... ] Ubelluris [was standing on] the dark earth, he upon whom [... ,] was built.

Ea began to speak [these words] to Ubelluris: "Knowest thou not, O Ubelluris? Did no one bring thee the news? Doest thou not know him, that \textit{vigorous god} whom Kumarbis has fashioned to oppose the gods? or the \textit{frightful death} which Kumarbis is plotting for the Storm-god? He is fashioning for him a rival who has thriven in the sea as a diorite stone. Doest thou not know him? Like a tower he is lifted up and has blocked off heaven, the holy houses of the gods, and Hebat. (Is it) because thou art far away from the dark earth, Ubelluris, whom Kumarbis has fashioned to oppose the gods? or upon whom [... ,] was built.

When they came and severed the heaven from the earth that thou dost not know of that god?

Ubelluris began to speak to Ea: "When they built heaven and earth upon me I did not know anything. When they came and severed the heaven from the earth with a cleaver, I did not know that either. Now my right shoulder is a little sore. But I do not know who that god is."

When Ea heard these words, he turned Ubelluris' shoulder as the diorite man stood upon Ubelluris' right shoulder like a shaft.

Ea began to speak to the olden gods the words: "Listen ye, olden gods, ye who know the olden words! Open ye the ancient storehouses of the fathers and fore-fathers! Let them bring the olden seals of the fathers and let them seal them up again with them afterward! Let them bring [for] the olden copper \textit{knife} with which they severed heaven from earth. Let them cut through the feet of Ullikummis, the diorite man, whom Kumarbis has fashioned as a rival to oppose the gods!"

\textit{(M-d) KUB, XXXIII, 106 iv}

Tasmisus [...] was on his knees, [... ] he began to speak [:"...] In his body [(is) [... ,] His fists are thrust up, upon his head the hair [stands on end].

Ea began to speak to Tasmisus: "Move on! Thou wast assigned to my son\textsuperscript{19} as [a [... ,] My soul is sad. I have seen with mine own eyes the dead [people] on the [dark] earth; they (are) strewn about as [dust while [... ,] stand (around)."

[... ,] Tasmisus [took courage] and began to [re]joice. He clapped his hands three times and up [to the gods he shouted and] they heard (him). He clapped again, and the Storm-god, the valiant king of Kumniya, [heard (him)]. They came to the place of assembly.

The Storm-god jumped upon his chariot like a ... With thunder he went down to the sea and engaged him in battle, the Storm-god the diorite man.

The diorite man began to speak to [the Storm-god]: "What shall I say to thee, O Storm-god? Keep fighting!" Of his mind [... ,] while he stands (there).in.

"What shall I say to thee, O Storm-god! [Keep fighting!] Before [...] string together (thy) wise thoughts like pearls! [Up to heaven] I shall go to assume the kingship. Kumniya (I shall destroy) and the \textit{kunarra} house I shall take over. The gods I shall [drive out from] heaven."

(The closing lines are almost completely destroyed. They must have told how Ullikummis, despite his boasting, was defeated by the Storm-god.)

\textbf{The Myth of Illuyankas}

\textbf{OLDER VERSION}

(i) These are the words of Kellas, the "anointed"\textsuperscript{1} of the Storm-god of Nerik. What follows is the cult legend of the \textit{Purulli Festival}\textsuperscript{2} of the Storm-god of Heaven, (the version which) they no longer tell:

(5) May the land flourish (and) prosper! May the land be (well) protected! If it flourishes (and) prospers, they will celebrate the \textit{Purulli Festival}.

When the Storm-god and the Dragon Illuyankas (10) came to grips in Kiskilussa, the Dragon Illuyankas vanquished the Storm-god.

The Storm-god besought all the gods: "Come ye to my aid! Let Inaras prepare a celebration!"

(15) He made everything ready on a grand scale: amphorae of wine, amphorae of \textit{marnuwan}, (and) amphorae of \textit{walhi}.* The amphorae he had filled to the brim.

Inaras went to Zigaratta (and) encountered Hupasiyas, a mortal.

Thus spoke Inaras: "See, Hupasiyas! Such and such I want to do. I would have thee aid me!"

Thus spoke Hupasiyas to Inaras: (25) "So be it! Let me sleep with thee, and I will come (and) fulfill thy wishes!" And he slept with her.

Inaras took Hupasiyas to the place and hid him. Inaras (ii 58) put on her finery and lured the Dragon Illuyankas up from his lair: "See! I am holding a celebration. Come thou to eat and to drink!"

The Dragon Illuyankas came up with [his children]

\textsuperscript{1} A priest.

\textsuperscript{2} Probably the New Year's festival.

\textsuperscript{3} Alcoholic beverages.

\textsuperscript{* Lit: this and this.

\textsuperscript{4} From here on KUR, XVII, 5 offers the best text.

\textsuperscript{19} i.e. the Storm-god.
by which the rank and the order of the gods were established. The most significant verb in the text is pu-ut-ul(-)itiyanzi; it may contain an etymology of the name of the Purulli Festival. Unfortunately its meaning is not clear; the context suggests "compete" or "race" as a possibility.

All the gods arrive (15) and they compete. Of all the gods Zashapunas of Kastama was the greatest. Because Zalaniuwas is his wife, and Tazzuwasis his concubine, (20) they made these three live in Tanipiyas.

(An estate is endowed for them there.)

The Telepinus Myth

Texts: The main text is KUB, xvn, 10. Numerous additional fragments of a similar character have been edited and classified by H. Otten in KUB, xxxxi. The same author has dealt with the whole material in great detail in his book Die Überlieferungen des Telepinus-Mythos (MVAG, XLVI/1 [1942]). He assigns the surviving material to four different versions. A similar tale is also associated with the Storm-god. Literature: Besides the book just quoted, the translation of the main text by A. Götte in Kulturgeschichte Kleinasiens (1933), 194 ff.; 2nd ed. (1957). 143 f. is still of interest; Otten's book does not deal with the main text.

a. The God's Anger, His Disappearance and Its Consequences

(The upper third of the tablet, about 20 lines, is broken off. It probably told the reasons for the god's anger.)

(i) Telepinus [flew into a rage and shouted:] "There must be no interference!" In his agitation he tried to put [his right shoe] on his left foot and his left [shoe on his right foot]. . . .

(5) Mist seized the windows, smoke seized the house. In the fireplace the logs were stifled, at the altars the vegetation was stifled, in the fold the sheep were stifled, in the stable the cattle were stifled. The sheep neglected its lamb, the cow neglected its calf.

(10) Telepinus walked away and took grain, (fertile) breeze, . . . . . and satiation to the country, the meadow, the steppes. Telepinus went and lost himself in the steppe; fatigue overcame him. So grain (and) spelt thrive no longer. So cattle, sheep and man no longer (15) bred. And even those with young cannot bring them forth.

The vegetation dried up; the trees dried up and would bring forth no fresh shoots. The pastures dried up, the springs dried up. In the land famine arose so that man and gods perished from hunger. The great Sun-god arranged for a feast and invited the thousand gods. They ate, (20) but they did not satisfy their hunger; they drank, but they did not quench their thirst.

b. The Search for the Vanished God

The Storm-god became anxious about Telepinus, his son: "Telepinus, my son, (he said) is not here. He has flown into a rage and taken (with him) every good thing." The great gods and the lesser gods began to search for Telepinus. The Sun-god sent out the swift Eagle (saying): "Go! Search every high (25) mountain!"

"Search the deep valleys! Search the watery depth!" The Eagle went, but he could not find him. Back to the Sun-god he brought his message: "I could not find him, him, Telepinus, the noble god." The Storm-god said to Hannahannas: "What shall we do? (30) We shall die of hunger." Hannahannas said to the Storm-god: "Do something, O Storm-god! Go! Search for Telepinus thyself!"

The Storm-god began to search for Telepinus. In his city he [knocks] at the gate, but he is not there and opens not. He broke open his bolt and his lock, [but he has no luck], the Storm-god. So he gave up and sat down to rest. Hannahannas (35) sent [out the Bee]: "Go! Search thou for Telepinus!"

[The Storm-god s]aid [to Hannahannas]: "The great gods (and) the lesser gods have searched for him, but [did not find] him. Shall then this [Bee] go out [and find him]? Its wings are small, it is small itself. Shall they admit that it is greater than they?"

'Hannahannas said to the Storm-god: "Enough! It will go (and) find him." Hannahannas sent out the little Bee: "Go! Search thou for Telepinus! When thou findest him, sting him on his hands (and) his feet! Bring him to his feet! Take wax and wipe his eyes and his feet, purify him and bring him before me!"

The Bee went away and searched . . . streams ing rivers, and searched the murmuring springs. The honey within it gave out, [the wax within it] gave out. Then [it found] him in a meadow in the grove at Lihzina. It stung him on his hands and his feet. It brought him to his feet, it took wax and wiped his eyes (and) his feet, [it purified him] and [. . .].

[Telepinus . . . ] declares: "For my part I had flown into a rage [and walked away. How dare ye arouse me] from my sleep? How dare ye force me to talk when enraged?" He grew [still more infuriated]. He stopped the murmuring springs, he diverted the flowing rivers, and made them flow over their banks. He [blocked off] the clay pits, he shattered [the windo]ws, he shattered the houses.

He had men perish, he had sheep and cattle perish. [It came to] pass that the gods [despair]d (asking): "Wh[y] has Telepinus become so infuriated? [Wh]at shall we do? [What] shall we do?"

[The great Sun-god?] declares: "[Fetch ye] man! Let him [take the spring Hattara on mount Ammuna [as . . . !] Let him (man) make him move! With the eagle's wing let him make him move! Let man make him move! With the eagle's wing [let man make him move]]"

(A gap follows in which Kamrusepas, the goddess of magic and healing, is commissioned to pacify Telepinus and to bring him back.)

c. The Ritual

ENTREATY

(The beginning is mutilated.)

(ii) "O Telepinus! [Here lies] sweet and soothing [cedar essence. Just as it is . . . ], [even so let] the stilled [be set right] again!

"Here [I have] upthrusting sap [with which to purify thee]. (10) Let it [invigorate] thy heart and thy soul, O Telepinus! Toward the king [turn] in favor!

"Here lies chaff. [Let his heart (and soul) be segregated [like it!] Here lies an ear [of grain]. Let it attract his heart [(and) his soul]!

"(15) Here lies sesame. [Let his heart (and) his soul] be comforted by it. Here [lie] figs. Just as [figs] are sweet, even so let Telepinus' heart (and soul) become sweet!

"Just as the olive [holds] oil within it, [as the grape] holds wine within it, so hold thou, Telepinus, in (thy) heart (and) thy soul good feelings [toward the king]!

"Here lies ointment. Let it anoint Telepinus' heart (and soul)! Just as malt (and) malt-leaves are harmoniously fused, even so let thy soul be in harmony with the affairs of mankind! [Just as spelt] (25) is clean, even so let Telepinus' soul become clean! [Just as honey is sweet, as cream is smooth, even so let Telepinus' soul become sweet and even so let him become smooth!]

"See, O Telepinus! I have now sprinkled thy ways with fine oil. So walk thou, Telepinus, over these ways that are sprinkled with fine oil! (30) Let lahil wood and happurialal wood be at hand! Let us set thee right, O Telepinus, into whatever state of mind is the right one!"

Telepinus came in his fury. Lightning flashed, it thundered while the dark earth was in turmoil. (35) Kamrusepas saw him. The eagle's wing made him move out there. It took off him (iii) the rage, it took off him the anger, it took off [the ire], it took off him the fury.

KAMRUSEPAS' RITUAL OF PURIFICATION

Kamrusepas tells the gods: "Come ye, O gods! See! Hapantallis is shepherding the Sun-god's sheep. (5) Select ye twelve rams! I want to fix long days for Telepinus. I have taken death, one thousand eyes.6 I have abjured on the selected sheep of Kamrusepas.

"Over Telepinus I have swung them this way and that. (10) From Telepinus' body I have taken the evil,
I have taken the malice. I have taken the rage, I have taken the anger, I have taken the ire, I have taken the fury.

“When Telepinus was angry, his heart (and) his soul were stifled (like) firebrands. (15) Just as they burned these brands, even so let Telepinus’ rage, anger, malice (and) fury burn themselves out! Just as [malt] is barren, (as) people do not bring it to the field to use it for seed, (as) people do not make it into bread (or) put it in the storehouse, even so let Telepinus’ rage, [anger], (20) malice (and) fury become barren!

“When Telepinus was angry, [his heart (and) his soul] were a burning fire. Just as this fire [is quenched], even so let (his) rage, anger (and) fury [be quenched] too!

“O Telepinus, give up thy rage, [give up] thine anger, (25) give up thy fury! Just as (water in) a pipe flows not upward, even so let Telepinus’ [rage, anger (and)] fury not [come] back!

“The gods [were gathered] in assembly under the hatal\elna\l tree. For the hatal\elna\l tree I have fixed long [years]. (30) All gods are now present, (including) the [Is\ustayas, the Good-women (and) the Mother-goddesses, the Grain-god; Miyatanzipas, Telepinus, Inaras, Hapantaliyas (and) the Patron of the field. For these gods I have fixed long years; I have purified him, O Telepinus!

(35) “[···]! have taken the evil [from] Telepinus’ body, I have taken away his [rage], [I have taken away] his anger, [I have taken away] his fury, I have taken away his malice, [I have taken away his] evil."

(small gap)

MAN’S RITUAL

(The beginning is lost, but Telepinus is addressed:)①

. . (When) thou [departedst] from the hat\dek\esnas tree on a summer day, the crop got smutted. (When) the ox departed [with thee], (iv)② thou wastedst its shape. (When) the sheep departed with thee, thou wastedst its form. O Telepinus, stop rage, anger, malice (and) fury!

① Text for the first few lines is taken from KUR, xx.xni, 54 13-15.
② Here the fourth column of KUR, xvn, 10 begins.

“(When) the Storm-god comes in his wrath, the Storm-god’s priest (5) stops him. (When) a pot of food boils over, the (stirring) spoon stops it. Even so let the word of me, the mortal, stop Telepinus’ rage, anger, and fury!

“Let Telepinus’ rage, anger, malice, (and) fury depart! Let the house let them go, let the interior . . . let them go, (10) let the window let them go! In the . . . let the interior courtyard let them go, let the gate let them go, let the gateway let them go, let the road of the king let them go! Let it not go to the thriving field, garden (or) grove! Let it go the way of the Sun-god of the nether world!

“The doorkeeper has opened the seven doors, has unlocked the seven bolts. (15) Down in the dark earth there stand bronze cauldrons, their lids are of abaru-metal, their handles of iron. Whatever goes in there comes not out again; it perishes therein. Let them also receive Telepinus’ rage, anger, malice (and) fury! Let them not come back!”

d. The God’s Home-Coming

(20) Telepinus came home to his house and cared (again) for his land. The mist let go of the windows, the smoke let go of the house. The altars were set right for the gods, the hearth let go of the log. He let the sheep go to the fold, he let the cattle go to the pen. The mother tended her child, the ewe tended her lamb, (25) the cow tended her calf. Also Telepinus tended the king and the queen and provided them with enduring life and vigor.

Telepinus cared for the king. A pole was erected before Telepinus and from this pole the fleece of a sheep was suspended. It signifies fat of the sheep, it signifies grains of corn . . . (and) (30) wine, it signifies cattle (and) sheep, it signifies long years of progeny.

It signifies the lamb’s favorable message.③ It signifies fruitful breeze. It signifies . . . satisfaction. . . . ④

(end of the text lost)

③ I.e. favorable omens when the intestines of the sacrificial lamb are inspected.
④ Compare KUR, xxxm, 12 iv 15 ff. and 24 iv 19 ff.
Ugaritic Myths, Epics, and Legends

TRANSLATOR: H. L. GINSBERG

Ugaritic poetry falls into distinct metrical units, but these were not indicated outwardly by the scribes. In the following translation, every colon is printed on a separate line. Isolated cola are not common. As a rule there are two, and sometimes there are three, to a stitch. In the translation, the second and third cola in each stitch are indented. The numbers in the right margin are those of the lines in the Ugaritic tablet, which, as has been explained, do not coincide with the cola.

Poems about Baal and Anath

Both large and small fragments of tablets containing poetic mythological texts in which the leading role is played by the rain- and fertility-god Baal and the next in importance by the warrior-goddess Anath came to light in the French excavations of Ras Shamra-Ugarit in the years 1930, 1931, and 1933, and at least one small fragment (which may be a duplicate of one of the others) in 1929. Because so many letters, words, lines, columns, and probably some whole tablets are missing, not all of the tablets can be declared, with certainty, to be parts of the great epic of Baal and arranged in their proper order within it. However, in the following translations, even small fragments whose pertinence to the larger epic is probable have, for the most part, been included (if only, in a few desperate cases, in the form of sketchy summaries) and assigned tentative positions within it. Tablets whose pertinence to the larger poem is doubtful have been added at the end by way of an appendix.

In view of all these uncertainties, the tablets will not be designated as B'L A, B'L B, etc., but by the original sigla of the first editor, Ch. Virolleaud. They are all studied together by C. H. Gordon, Ugaritic Literature, Rome (1949), pp. 9-55 (567?). Other literature will be given separately for each tablet.

a. VI AB

Editions: Ch. Virolleaud, La dieasse 'Anat (Paris, 1938), pp. 91-102 and the last photograph; C. H. Gordon, Ugaritic Hand- book, xi, pp. 189-190, 'nt, is-x (transliteration only). Studies: A. Herdner, Syria, xxm (1942-43), 283-285. Owing to the very poor state of preservation, connected translation is possible only for groups of lines which, because they are stereotyped, can be completed with the help of parallels; while just the crucial passages are very doubtful. It seems, however, that El, die head of the pantheon, (1) instructs the craftsman-god Kothar wa-Khasis to build a palace on his (El's) grounds, the name of the latter being Khurshan-zur-kas (col. iii), (2) announces that his (eldest? favorite?) son is to be known as El's Beloved Yamm (= Sea) and as Master (cf. iv 15, 20 with II AB ii 34-35, and iv 17 with III AB B 17, 33-34), and (3) perhaps authorizes Yamm to banish Baal from his throne (iii 22-25).

b. III AB C

Editions: Ch. Virolleaud, Syria, xxiv (1944-45), 1-12; C. H. Gordon, Ugaritic Handbook p. Text 129. This fragment comprises 24 very mutilated lines from the right-hand column on one of the sides of a tablet with two very broad columns on each side. Such a tablet is the one of whose col. i. III AB B is the lower part, and of whose col. iv, III AB A is the upper part; Virolleaud therefore surmises that III AB C is part of (the lower half of) col. iii of the same tablet. For its content, however, a position between III AB B and III AB A seems strange; so, perhaps, it belongs to a tablet which preceded, and in outward disposition resembled, the tablet of which III AB B-A is a remnant.

In it, El instructs Kothar to build a palace for Yamm. Ashtar complains of not being accorded the like favor.

[... There] he is off on his way
To El of the Sources [of the Floods,
In the midst of the headwaters of the Two Oceans.
He penetrates] El[I]'s field and enters
The [pal]yion of King [Father Shunem.]
At El's feet he bows] and falls down,
Prostrates himself, doing [him] homage.
(... "... O) Kothar wa-Kha[sis!
Quicly]ly bu[ild the h]ouse of Yamm,
[ERE]ct the palace of Judge Nahar.

Build the house of Prince Yamm,
[ERE]ct the pala[ce of Judge] Nahar,
In the midst of [
Quickly] his [hou]se shalt thou build,
Quickly erec[t his palace].

(... All that can be made out is that Ashtar is displeased.)
Quoth the Gods' Torch Shapsh,
Raising her voice and [crying:
"Heark]en, I pray thee!
Thy father Bull El favors
Prince Yamm ... [— ] ...
[SH]ould thy father Bull [El] hear thee,
He will pull out [the pillars of thy dwelling!
Yea, overt[jurn [the throne of thy] kingship!
Yea, break the sce[pter] of thy dominion!"
Quoth [Ashtar] of the [...].:
"Oh, my father Bull El!
I have no house [like] the gods,
"[Nor] court like [the holy on]es.
... (the rest obscure)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)

(20)
(1) III ABB

...[... Quoth] Puissant Baal:
"[May'st thou be driven from thy throne of kingship,
From thy seat of dominion!
* ...]

Ayamur* upon thy head, [Prince Yamm;
Upon thy back Yagrush,]5 Judge Nahar.
May [Horon] break, [O Yamm,
May Horon break] thy head,
Ashtoreth [Name of Baal thy pate.
... ] down may'st thou fall in...[... ] (10)

[Me]ssengers Yamm doth send.
(Two lines defective and unintelligible.)

"Depart ye, lad[s, don't tarry.
There now, be off ] on your way
Towards the Assembled Body®
In the midst of the Mount of Lala.
At the feet of El] fall not down,
Prostrate you not to the Assembled [Body.
Proudly standing] say ye your speech.
And say unto Bull [my] father [El,
Declare unto the Assembled] Body:
'Message of Yamm your lord,
Of your master Ju[dge Nahar].
Surrender the god with a following,
Him whom the multitudes worship'.
Give Baal [to me to lord over],
Dagon's son whose spoil I'll possess."
—
The lads depart, they delay not.
[There, they are off] on their way
To the midst of the Mount of Lala,
Towards the Assembled Body.
Now, the gods were sitting to eat>
The holy ones for to dine,
Baal attending upon El.
As soon as the gods espy them,
Espy the messengers of Yamm,
The envoys of Judge Nahar,
The gods do drop their heads
Down upon their knees
And on their thrones of princeship.
Them doth Baal rebuke:
"Why, O gods, have ye dropt
Your head[s] down upon your knees
And on your thrones of princeship ?
I see the gods are cowed
With terror of the messengers of Yamm,
Of the envos of Judge Naha[r.
Lift up, O gods, your heads
From upon your knees,
From upon your thrones of princeship,
And I'll answer* the messengers of Yamm,
The envos of Judge Nahar".*

The gods lift up their heads
From upon their knees,
From upon [their] thrones of prin[ceship].
Then come the messengers of Yamm,
The envos of Judge Nahar.
At El's feet they do [not] fall down,
Prostrate them not to the Assembled Body.
Proud[dy]y standing., [they] say their speech.
Fire, burning fire, doth flash; v
A whetted sword [are their e-]yes.
They say to Bull his father El:
"Message of Yamm your lord,
Of your master Judge Nahar.
Surrender the god with a following,
Etc." (see 18-19)

[Quoth] Bull, his father, El:
"Thy slave is Baal, O Yamm,
Thy slave is Baal [for ever],
Dagon's Son is thy captive;
He shall be brought as thy tribute.
For the gods bring [thy gift],
The holy ones are thy tributaries."—
Now, Prince Baa[l] was wroth.
[Seizing a cudgel] in his hand,
A bludgeon in his right hand,
He r[each]ed to strike the lads.
[His right hand Ashtoreth]st seize,
Ashtoreth seizes his left hand.
"How [canst thou strike the messengers of Yamm,
The en]voys of Judge Nahar ?
A messenger...[... ] a messenger [bears];
Upon his shoulders the words of his lord,
A nd [... ] ."
But Prince Baal was wroth.
The cudgel in ha[n]d he...[He confronts the messengers of Yamm,
The [en]voys of Judge Naha[r.
... ]... "I say unto Yamm your lord,
[Your] ma[ster Judge Nahar]:
... (lines 46-47 too defective for understanding)

(2) III ABA

(defective and obscure) (1-4)

"... [ho]uses.
To the earth shall fall the strong,
To the dust the mighty."—
Scarce had the word lef [t] her mouth,
Her speech left her lips,
As she uttered her... voice
Under the throne of Prince Yamm,
Quoth Kothar wa-Khasis:
"I tell thee, O Prince Baal,
I declare, O Rider of the Clouds.

* Name of a bludgeon, meaning something like "Driver"; see episode (2).
4 Name of a bludgeon, meaning "Chaser"; see episode (2).
5 Evidently Kothar has already promised Baal the two cudgels which he wields so effectively in episode (2).
6 The assembly of the gods. 7 Or, perhaps, humble.
8 Ana[th] or As[hera]h are also possible restorations.
Now thine enemy, O Baal,
Now thine enemy wilt thou smite,
Now wilt thou cut off thine adversary.

Thou'lt take thine eternal kingdom,
Thine everlasting dominion."
Kothar brings down two clubs
And gives them names.

"Thou, thy name is Yagrush ('Chaser').
Yagrush, chase Yamm!
Chase Yamm from his throne,
Do thou swoop in the hand of Baal,
The club swoops in the hand of Baal,
Strike the back of Prince Yamm,
Yamm is firm, he is not bowed;
It strikes the back of Prince Yamm,
Yamm collapses,
His joints bend,
Baal would rend, would smash Yamm,
By name
For our captive is Prince Yamm,
"For shame, O Puissant Baal;
As [the word] left [her mouth], tracted, except that Yamm seems to say twice "I am dying, but is only confined to his proper sphere, the seas.

Hence there is still talk of him, e.g. at the end of coL ii of episode e.)

d. Fragment b

This is the current designation of a piece—representing the top of the middle column of the obverse or reverse of a tablet with three columns on each side—of which a copy was published by Ch. Virolleaud, Syria, xiii (1932), 158; and transliterated by H. Bauer, AKTRSchp., 57, and C. H. Gordon, Ugaritic Handbook 11, p. 144 a, middle. Here Baal apparently sends his messengers to Anath to tell her to join him in a demarche before Asherah with a view to procuring a palace.

"... Homage to Lady Asherah of [the Sea],
Obedience to the Progenitress of the Gods,
(So) [she] will give a house to Baal like the [g]ods',
And a court like [A]sherah's sons'.—
Loudly to his lads Baal cries:
"Look ye, Gapn and Ugar sons of Ghulumat,11
'Tamamis twain, sons of Zulumat (E/>s*)11
The stately, win[g]-spreading,...;
Winged ones twain, flock of clouds,
'Neath [...] ;
Birdlyke ones twain, fj[oc] of f... snow].

(obscure beginnings of 5 more lines)

e. IIAB

(some 20 lines missing, 3 obliterated)

But alas!
He cries unto Bull El [his father,
To El] the King [his begetter;
He cries] unto Ashe[rah and her children],
To [El]ath [and the band of] her [kindred:
Look, no house has Baal like the gods, (10)
Nor court like the children of Ashe[rah].
The abode of El is the shelter of his son.
The abode of Lady Asherah of the Sea
Is the abode of the perfect brides:
Tis the dwelling of Padrifa daughter of Ar,
The shelter of Talliya(/y) the daughter of Rabb,
(And) the abode of Arsiya (arsey) the daughter of Ya‘badar.12

11 Means "darkness." Ghulumat is also known as the name of a goddess from RSh 1929, 1:19; 3:23.
12 The three names mean "Flashie (or Lightningette) daughter of Light, Dewic daughter of Distillation, Earthe daughter of . . . ." They are Baal’s wives or daughters, and Baal is the god of rain and dew and "the Prince, Lord of the Earth."
And here's something more I would tell thee: (20)

Just try doing homage to Lady Asherah of the Sea,
Obeisance to the Progenitress of the Gods.

Hayyin would go up to the bellows,
In Khasis' hands would be the tongs,
To melt silver,
To beat out gold.

He'd melt silver by the thousands (of shekels),
Gold he'd melt by the myriads.

A gorgeous dais weighing twice ten thousand (shekels),
A gorgeous dais cast in silver,
Coated with a film of gold;
A gorgeous throne resting above
A gorgeous footstool o'erspread with a mat;
A gorgeous couch having a . . .,
He pours it over with gold;
A gorgeous table which is filled
With all manner of game from the foundations of the earth; (40)

Gorgeous bowls shaped like small beasts like those of Amurru,
Stelae shaped like the wild beasts of Yam'an,
Wherein are wild oxen by the myriads.

(The first lines of the following scene perhaps show Asherah, "Lady Asherah of the Sea," presenting an offering of fish to El.)

(»)

(Some 16 lines entirely missing, then 4 defective and obscure.)

Its sin, the covering of its flesh.
She flings its vestment into the sea,
Both its sins into the deeps.
She puts fire on the brazier,
A pot upon the coals,
(And) propitiates Bull El Benign,
Lifting up her eyes she beholds.
The advance of Baal Asherah doth espy,
The advance of the Maiden Anath,
The onrush of Yabamat [Liimmim].

Thereat her feet [do stumble];
Her loins [do crack be]hind her,
Her [face breaks out in] sweat [above her].
Bent are the [joints of her loins],
Weakened those of [her] back.

She lifts up her voice and cries:
"Why is Puissant [Baal] come?
And why the Maiden Anath?

Have my children slain [each other],
o[r the b]and of my kinsmen [destroyed, one another]?

[The wor(l) of silver Asherah doth espy,
The work of silver and [ . . . ] of gold.
Lady A[sherah] of the Sea rejoices;
Loudly unto her lad [she] doth [cry]:
"Look thou, Deft One, yea [give heed].
O fisherman of Lady Asher[ah of the Sea],
Take a net in thy hand,
A large [seine] on thy two hands.
[Cast it] into El's Beloved [Yamm] 14
Into the Sea of El Bef[nigny]
Into the De[je]p of El . . . [ . . . ].

... (Only the beginnings of 37-47 preserved, and no connected sense recoverable.)

(Hi)

(about 12 lines missing, 9 lines defective)

C[ome]s Puissant Baal,
Advances the Rider of the Clouds.
Lo, he takes his stand and cries defiance,
He stands erect and spits
In the midst of the as[sem]bly of the divine beings:
"Ab[omination] has been placed upon my table,
Filth in the cup I drink.
For two [kinds of] banquets Baal hates,
Three the Rider of the Clouds:
A banquet of shamefulness,
A banquet {banquet} 20 of baseness,
And a banquet of handmaids' lewdness.
Yet herein is flagrant shamefulness,
And herein is handmaids' lewdness."—
After this goes Puissant Baal,
Also goes the Maiden Anath.
As they do homage to Lady Asherah of the Sea,
Obeisance to the Progenitress of the Gods,
Quoth Lady Asherah of the Sea:
"Why do ye homage to Lady Asherah of the Sea,
Obeisance to the Progenitress of the Gods? (30)
Have ye done homage to Bull El Benign,
Or obeisance to the Creator of Creatures?"
Quoth the Maiden Anath:
"We do homage to [th]ee> Lady Asherah of the Sea,

... (Rest of column badly damaged. It is clear that Asherah makes a feast for her visitors, and it may be inferred that they urge her to intercede for Baal with El, as she does in the next column.)

(iv-v)

(Some 10 lines missing; lines i-2a too fragmentary to be restored.)

[Loudly unto her lad] Ashe [rah doth cry:

Yamm (=Sea) is apparently still El's Beloved, despite what he went through above, in episode in AB A.

Dittography.

---

"Deft," another name of the craftsman-god.
If the translation is correct: rhytons, or vessels having the shape of animals.
Uncertain rendering.
Of some beast or fish.
Because she fears the unexpected visitors bring bad news (cf. Ezek. 21:11-12). This is the standard reaction of a female character to an unexpected visit.
"Look thou, Qadesh wa-Amrur,
Fisherman of Lady[ ] Asherah of the Sea!
[Saddle a donkey].
Harness a jackass.
[Attach trappings of] silver,
[A housing] of gol[d],
Put on the trappings of [thy] she-asses."
Qad[esh] wa-Amrur obeys.
He saddles a donkey,
Harnesses a jackass.
He attaches trappings of silver,
A housing of gold,
Puts on the trappings of his she-asses.
Qadesh wi-Amrur embraces
And places Asherah on the donkey's back,
On the beautiful back of the jackass.
Qadesh proceeds to lead,
Amrur is like a star in front;
The Maiden Anath follows,
While Baal leaves for Zaphon's summit.—
There, she is off on her way
Towards El of the Sources of the Two Floods
In the midst of the headwaters of the Two Oceans.
She penetrates El's field and enters
The pavilion of King Father Shunem.
At El's feet she bows and falls down,
Prostrates her and does him reverence.
As soon as El espies her,
He parts his jaws and laughs.
His feet upon the footstool he puts
And doth twiddle his fingers.
He lifts up his voice and [cri]es:
"Why is come Lady Asherah of the Sea?
Why hither the Progenitress of the Gods?
Art thou become hungry and faint,
Or art become thirsty and parched?
Eat, pray, yea drink.
Eat thou from the tables bread;
Drink from the flagons wine,
From the golden gob(lets) blood of vines.
See, El the King's love stirs thee,
Bull's affection arouses thee."
Quoth Lady Asherah of the Sea:
"Thy decree, O El, is wise:
Wisdom with ever-life thy portion.
Thy decree is: our king's Puissant Baal,
Our sovereign second to none;
All of us must bear his gift,
All of us [must b]ear his purse.
But alas!
He cries unto Bull El his father,
To [El] the King he begetter;
He cries unto Asherah and her children,
Elath and the band of her kin[dred];
Look, no house has Baal like the gods,
Nor court like the children of Asherah.

21 Asherah.
22 Myst be tributary to him. But the translation is uncertain.

The abode of El is the shelter of his son.
The abode of Lady Asherah of the Sea
Is the abode of the perfect brides:
The abode of Padiya daughter of Ar,
The shelter of Talliya daughter of Rabb,
(And) the abode of Arsiya daughter of Ya'abdar."
Quoth the Kindly One El Ben[jgn]:
"Am I a slave, an attendant of Asherah?
Am I a slave, to handle . . . ?
Or is Asherah a handmaid, to make bricks?

(v)
Let a house be built for Baal like the gods',
And a court like the children of Asherah's!"
Quoth Lady Asherah of the Sea:
"Art great indeed, O El, and wise,
Thy beard's gray hair instructs thee,
. . . , [ . . . ] to thy breast.
Now, too, the seasons of his rains will Baal observe,
The seasons of . . . with snow;
And (he will) peal his thunder in the clouds,
Flashing his lightnings to the earth.
The house of cedar—let him burn it;
Yea, the house of brick—remove it.
Be it told to Puissant Baal:
Summon weeds into thy house,
Herbs into the midst of thy palace.
The mountains shall bring thee much silver,
The hills a treasure of gold;
They'll bring thee god's grandeur aplenty.
So build thou a silver and gold house,
A house of most pure lapis lazuli."
The Maiden Anath rejoices,
Stamps with her foot so the earth quakes.
There, she is off on her way
Unto Baal upon Zaphon's summit,
O'er a thousand fields, ten thousand acres.
Laughing, the Maiden Anath
Lifts up her voice and cries:
"Receive, Baal, the glad tidings I bring thee.
They will build thee a house like thy brethren's
And a court like unto thy kindred's.
Summon weeds into thy house,
Herbs into the midst of thy palace.
The mountains shall bring thee much silver,
The hills a treasure of gold;
They'll bring thee god's grandeur aplenty.
So build thou a silver and gold house,
A house of most pure lapis lazuli."
Puissant Baal rejoiced.
He summoned weeds into his house,
Herbs into the midst of his palace.
The mountains did bring him much silver,
The hills a treasure of gold;
The mountains of Baal did bring him much silver;
They brought him god's grandeur aplenty.
Then he (se)nt unto Kothar wa-Khasis.

28 This seems—if the sense is correctly guessed—to imply that Baal had some sort of habitation before, but that it was not one worthy of a "ranking" god, such as Baal had become by vanquishing Yamm.
(Direction to the reciter):

Now turn to the account of the sending of the lads.24

After this comes Kothar wa-Khasis. Before him an ox is set,
A fatted one at his disposal.
A throne is placed and he's seated
To the right of Puissant Baal.
So ate [the gods] and drank.

Then answered Puissant Baal,

Responded the Rider of the Clouds:

"Quickly, a house, O K’other! Quickly raise up a palace.

Quickly shalt thou build,
A thousand fields the house shall cover,
A myriad of acres the palace."

Quoth Kothar wa-Khasis: (120)

"Hearken, O Puissant Baal:
Give heed, O rider of the Clouds.
A window I’ll make in the house,
A casement within the palace."

But Puissant Baal replied:

"Make not a window in the house,
A casement within the palace."

Quoth Kothar wa-Khasis:

"Thou’lt heed my words, O Baal."

Again spake Kothar wa-Khasis:

"Hark, pray, Puissant Baal!
A window I’ll make in the house,
A casement within the palace."

But Puissant Baal replied:

"Make not a window in the house,
A casement within the palace."

Let not [Padriya] daughter of Ar [be seen]
Or T[alliya] daughter of Rabb be espied
By [...] El’s Beloved Yamm!"

[...] cried defiance
And spat [...]...

Quoth Kothar [wa-Khasis]:

"Thou’lt heed my words, O Baal."

[As for Baal] his house is built,
[As for Hadd] his palace is raised.
They [...] from Lebanon and its trees,
From [Sir]ion its precious cedars.
...[Le]banon and its trees,
[Si]rion its precious cedars.
Fire is set to the house,
Flame to the palace.

Lo, a [d]ay and a second,
Fire feeds on the house,
Flame upon the palace:
A third, a fourth day,
Fire feeds on the house,
Flame upon the palace.
A fifth, a s[ix]th day,
Fire feeds on the house,
Flame upon the palace.

There, on the seventh day,
The fire dying down in the house,
The fire dying down in the palace.
The silver turns into bricks,
The gold is turned into bricks.

Puissant Baal exults:

"My house have I builded of silver;
My palace, indeed, of gold."

For (his) house preparations [Baal] makes,
[Preparations] makes Hadd for his palace.

He slaughters both neat [and] small cattle,
Fells bulls [...] together with fadings;
Rams (and) one-year-old calves;
Lambs [...] k[i]ds.
He summons his brethren to his house,
His k[i]ndred within his palace:
Summons Asherah’s seventy children.

He sates the ewe-lamb gods with [wine],
He sates the cow-goddesses [... ?]
He sates the throne-gods with [wine],
He sates the chair-goddesses [...]?
He sates the gods with jars of wine,
He sates the goddesses with pitchers.

So eat the gods and drink.
They sate them with fatness abundant,
With tender fatling by bounteous knife;26
While drinking the [wine] from flag[ons,
From gold cups the blood of vines].

(pseudo) (vii)

(The first 8 lines are very defective. El’s Beloved Yamm—see above vi 12—figures in lines 3-4. Since Baal’s misgivings about a window are thereupon dispelled—15 ff.—perhaps Yamm is here given his quietus.)

Sixty-six towns he took,
Seventy-seven hamlets; (10)
Eighty (took) Baal of [Zaphon’s] summit,
Ninety Baal of the sum[mit].

Baal] dwells in his house,
Baal in the midst of the house.

Quoth Puissant Baal:

"I will make (one), Kothar, this day;
Kothar, this very hour.

24 No doubt refers to an earlier passage, lost to us, in which Baal dispatched Gapn and Ugar to Kothar. The reciter is directed simply to repeat that passage verbatim here.
25 Another name of Baal.
A casement shall be opened in the house,
A window within the palace.
Yea, I'll open rifts in the clouds
At thy word, O Kothar wa-Khasis!"  (20)
Kothar wa-Khasis laughs,
He lifts up his voice and cries:
"Said I not to thee, Puissant Baal,
Thou'lt heed my words, O Baal?"—
He opens a casement in the house,
A window within the palface.
Baal op[ens] rifts in [the cloud]s.
Baal discharges the ut[erance of his l]tps.  (30)
His h[oly] voice [convulses] the earth,. . . the mountains quake,
A-tremble are . . .
East and west, earth's high places reel.
Baal's enemies take to the woods,
Hadd's foes to the sides of the mountain.
Quoth Puissant Baal:
"Baal's enemies, why do you quake?
Why do you quake...?"
Baal's eye seeks out for his hand
When the yew-club swings in his right hand.
So Baal dwells in his house.
"Nor king nor commoner
The earth my dominion shall..."
Tribute I'll send not to Divine Mot, 27
Not dispatch to El's Darling Ghazir.
Mot calls out in his soul,
The Beloved thinks in his heart,
'I alone will have sway o'er the gods
So that gods and men may feed,
Who satisfies the multitudes of the earth.'"
Aloud unto [his l]ads Baal doth cry:
"Look ye, [Gapn and] Ugar so(ns) of Ghulumat,
[AMani]s twain, sons of Zulumat
[The stately, wing]-spreading,... ;
Winged ones twain, flock of clouds,
[Neath ... ;
Birdlike ones twain, flock of ... snow].
(viii)
There now, be off on your way
Unto the Mount of Targhuzizza,
Unto the Mount of Tharumegei,
Unto the Ridge of the Loam of the Earth.
Lift the mount on your hands,
The elevation upon your palms,
And descend to the depth of the earth,
Be of those who descend into earth.
There now, be off on your way
Into his city Pit,
Low the throne that he sits on,
Filth the land of his inheritance.

Yet beware, divine messengers.
Approach not Divine Mot,
Lest he make you like a lamb in his mouth,
Ye be crushed like a kid in his gullet.  (20)
Even the Gods' Torch Shapsh,
Who wings over heaven's expanse,
Is in Mot El's Beloved's hand! 28
From a thousand fields, ten thousand acres, 29
To Mot's feet bow and fall down,
Prostrate you and show him honor.
And say unto Divine Mot, Declare unto El's Darling Ghazir:
Message of Puissant Baal,
Work of the Mighty Wa[rrior]:
'My house I have builded [of silver,
>My palace, indeed, of gold.]

(Ten lines of which only the ends are preserved, and approximately another 15 lines missing altogether.)
(Broken colophon in margin:)
[Written by Elimelech(?)] Do[nated by Niqmadd, King of Ugarit.

f. V AB

Only about one-half of this tablet is preserved, essentially the half containing the bottom of the obverse (cols, i-iii) and the top of the reverse (cols, iv-vi). Since the top of the first column on the reverse is always continuous with the bottom of the last column on the obverse, there are not six but only five pieces of continuous text. However, the first editor found it convenient to divide one of these into two episodes, making a total of six episodes designated as V AB A-F.

The position assigned to V AB in this translation of the Baal epic was determined by E 25-26; from which it appears that El's favorite-and-bully is now Mot, whereas he is still Yamm in II AB (our e) vi 12. But final judgment must be reserved.

Studies: U. Cassuto, Bulletin of the Jewish Palestine Exploration Society, x, 2-3 (1943), 47-54; XII (1945-6), 40-42; T. H. Gaster, Iraq, vi (1939), 131-143; H. L. Ginsberg, BASOR, 84 (Dec. 1941), 14-17; C. H. Gordon, The Loves and Wars of Baal and Anat (1943), pp. 21-27; A. Goetze, BASOR, 93 (Feb. 1944), 17-20; J. Obermann, Ugaritic Mythology (1948), passim (see Index); J. Aideitner, ZAW, 57 (1939), 193-211; A. Herdner, ReS-Babyloniaca, 1 (1942-45), 33-49.

A
He stands, serves liquor, and gives him drink.
He places a cup in his hand, a flagon in the grasp of his hand;
A vessel large and conspicuous,
A jar to dumbfound a mortal;
A holy cup of woman ne'er seen,
Only Asherah beholds such a flagon.
He takes a thousand pots of wine,
Mixes ten thousand in his mixture.
He rises, plays, and sings,
The musician plays the cymbals;
The sweet-voiced youth doth sing
Of Baal in the Fastness of Zaphon.—
Baal regards his lasses,
Looks at Padriya daughter of Ar,
Also at Talliya [daughter of Ra]bb.

Henna of seven maids,
Smell of coriander and ambergris.
She locked the gates of Anath's house
And met the picked fighters in...
Now Anath doth battle in the plain,
Fighting between the two towns;
Smiting the Westland's peoples,
Smashing the folk of the Sunrise.
Under her, head[s] like sheaves;
Over her, hands like locusts,
Like a grassho mass heroes' hands.
She binds the heads to her back,
Fastens the hands in her girdle.
With darts she drives..., With the... of her bow...
Now Anath goes to her house,
The goddess proceeds to her palace.
Not sated with battling in the plain,
With her fighting between the two towns,
She pictures the chairs as heroes,
Pretending a table is warriors,
And that the footstools are troops.
Much battle she does and beholds,
Her fighting contemplates Anath:
Her liver swells with laughter,
Her heart fills up with joy,
Anath's liver exults;
For she plunges knee-deep in knights' blood,
Hip-deep in the gore of heroes.
Then, sated with battling in the house,
Fighting between the two tables,
...[... ] the knights' blood,
Pours the fatness of [de]w in a bowl.
Ma[di]en Anath washes her hands,
Yabamat Liimmim her fingers;
[She w]ashes her hands of knights' blood,
Her [fi]ngers of gore of heroes.
...[... ] to chairs,
Table also to table;
Footstools turn back into footstools.
[She] draws some water and bathes;
Sky-[d]ew, fatness of earth,
Spray of the Rider of Clouds;
Dew that the heavens do shed,
[Spray] that is shed by the stars.
She rubs herself in with ambergris
[From a sperm-whale] whose home's in the sea.

For the friendship of Puissant Baal,
Affection of Padriya daughter of Ar,
Love of Talliya daughter of Rabb,
Friendship of Arsiya daughter of Ya'badar.
So then, O lads, enter ye;
At Anath's feet bow and fall down,
Prostrate you, do her honor.
And say unto Maiden Anath,
Declare unto Yamamat Liimmim:
'Message of Puissant Baal,
Word of the Powerful Hero:
Take war [away] from the earth,
Banish (all) strife from the soil;
Pour peace into earth's very bowels.
Much amity into earth's bosom.
Hasten! Hurry! Rush!
To me thy feet shall trot,
To me shall sprint thy legs.
For
I've a word I fain would tell thee,
A speech I would utter to thee:
Speech of tree and whisper of stone,
Converse of heaven with earth,
E'en of the deeps with the stars;
Yea, a thunderbolt unknown to heaven,
A word not known to men,
Nor sensed by the masses on earth.
Come, pray, and I will reveal it
In the midst of my mount Godly Zaphon:
In the sanctuary, mount of my portion,
In the pleasance, the hill I possess.'"
Behind, her loins do break;
Above, her face doth sweat:
Bent are the joints of her loins,
Weakened those of her back."
She lifts up her voice and cries:
"Why come Gapn and Ugar?
What enemy's risen 'gainst Baal,
What foe 'gainst the Rider of Clouds?
Crushed I not El's Belov'd Yamm?
Destroyed I not El's Flood Rabbim?
Did I not, pray, muzzle the Dragon ?
I did crush the crooked serpent,
Shalyat Uyt the seven-headed.
I did crush El's Belov'd Ar[... ?],
Cut off El's Bullock 'Atak.
I did crush the Godly Bitch Hasat,
Destroy the house of El-Dhubub.
I did crush the Godly Bitch Hasat,
Destroy the house of El-Dhubub,
Who fought thee (and) seized the gold;
Who drave Baal from the Heights of Zaphon,
Sans frontlet his ear piercid through ;
Chas'd him from his throne of kingship,
From the dais, the seat of his dominion.

What enemy's risen 'gainst Baal,
What foe 'gainst the Rider of Clouds?"—

[An]swer the lads twain make:
"No enemy's risen 'gainst Baal,
No foe 'gainst the Rider of Clouds! (50)
Message of Puissant Baal,
Word of the Powerful Hero:
Ta\e war away from the earth,
Banish (all) strife from the soil, etc. etc."
(see above, lines 10 ff.)

[An]swers the Maiden [An]jath,
Replies [Yabamat] Limmim:
"I'll take war away [from the earth,
Banish] (all) strife from the soil,
Pour [peace] into earth's very bowels,
Mu[ch amity into] earth's bos[om].

Let Baal [. . .] . . .
Let hi m[. . .] . . .
I'll take war away from the earth, etc.
Yet another word will I say:
Go, go, attendants divine.
Ye are slow and I am swift.
From (my) Mount to the godhead afar,
Enibaba to the distant divinity,
Is two mathpads under earth's furrows,
Three underneath the hollows.—

There, she is off on her way
To Baal of the Summit of Zaphon.
From a thousand fields, ten thousand acres,
1 The standard reaction of a female character to an unexpected visit: it must mean bad news!
10 His proper name is Lotan = Leviathan (Isa. 27:1); see g, beginning.
11 If tf=Heb. f1f, Exod. 28:36.
13 i.e. Baal, the sender of the messengers.
14 Name of Anath's abode. Could it be Hurrian, meaning "god's mountain"?
15 Measure of time or length?

His sister's approach Baal sees,
The advance of his own father's-daughter.
He dismisses (his) wives from her presence.
He places an ox before her,
A fatted one in front of her.
She draws some water and bathes
Sky-dew, fatness of earth;
Dew that the heavens do [sh]ed,
Spray that is shed by the stars.
She rubs herself in with ambergiris
From a sperm-whale

E

No house hath Baal like the gods',
Nor court like Asherah's children's. Etc. etc."—
Quoth [the Maiden Anath]:
"He'll heed me, will Bull E[1 my father],
He'll heed me for his own good!
For I'll fell him like a lamb to the ground,
Make his gray hair [flow with] blood,
The gray hair of his beard [with gore];

Unless he give
A house unto Baal like the gods',
[And a cour]t like Asherah's children's."—
[She stamps] her foot [and the ea]rth [trembles].
[There, she is off on] her way
[Towards El of the S]ources of the Flo[ods,
In the m]idst of [the Headwaters of the Two De]eps.

She penetrates El's Field and enters
[The pavi]lion of K[ing Father Shunem].

(duet too damaged for sense)

Even the God's Torch Shapsh,
[Who wings] the expanse of heav[en],
Is in El's Beloved Mot's hand."—

Quoth the Maiden Anath:
"[...] O El,
Rejoice not [...]>
...[ . . . ]
^ . . . J . . .

My long hand will [smash] thy skull.
I'll make thy gray hair flow [with blood],
The gray hair of thy beard with gore."—
El replies in the seven chambers,
Inside the eight enclosures:
"[I w]eened, daughter mine, thou wa[st gentle],
And contumely 'mong goddesses was not.
In this speech Baal is explaining to Anath why he summoned her.
See e, beginning.
What wouldst thou, O Maiden Anath?—
And the Maiden Anath replied:
"Thy decree, O El, is wise:
Wisdom with ever-life thy portion.
Thy decree: 'Our king's Puissant Baal,
Our ruler, second to none. Etc., Etc."

(see above, e, iv-v 41 ff.)

To Kaphtor the throne that he sits on,
There now, be off on thy way
And say unto Kothar wa-Khasis,
Some 30 lines missing.)

Proceed, O Fisherman of Asherah,
Go, O Qadesh wa-Amurr, 18
Ten thousand [acres] in the floods.
Ten thousand [fields] in the sea, 4
[O'er] thousand ['fields' in the] sea,
[Traverse Gabal, traverse Qa'āl,
Traverse Ihat-nop-shamem.
Proverse Gabal, traverse Qa'al,

There now, be off on thy way
To the midst of Hiqpat-El, all of it, 19
To Kaphtor the throne that he sits on,
Hiqpat the land of his portion.
From a thousand fields, ten thousand acres, 20
At Kotha[r]'s feet bow and fall down,
Prostrate thee and do him honor.
And say unto Kothar wa-Khasis,
Repeat unto Hayyin of the Handicrafts:
'Message of Puissant Baal,
Word of the Powerful Hero:
..."

Word of the Powerful Hero:
..."

One hop to earth and one to heaven, 4
[He stretches his tongue to the stars.
Baal enters his mouth,
Descends into him like an olive-cake, 5
Like the yield of the earth and trees' fruit.
Sore afraid is Puissant Baal,
Filled with dread is the Rider of Clouds:
"Begone! Say unto Godly Mot,
Word of the Powerful Hero:
Be gracious, O Godly Mot;
Thy slave I, thy bondman for ever."—
The gods depart, tarry not.
There, they are off on their way
Unto Godly Mot,
Into his city Hamriya,
Down to the throne that heel sits on
His filthy land of inher'tance.
They lift up their voice and cry:
'Message of Puissant Son Baal,
Word of the Powerful Hero:
Be gracious, O Godly Mot;
Thy slave I, thy bondman for ever."—

If thou smite Lotan, the serpent slant,
Destroy the serpent tortuous,
Shalyat (Hyp) of the seven heads, 3
(two couplets very obscure)

From the tomb of the Godly Mot,
From the pit of El's Belov'd Ghazir,
The gods twain  depart, tarry not.
There, they are off on their way
To Baal of the Summit of Zaphon.
Then Gapn and Ugar declare:
'Message of Godly Mot,
Word of the God-Belov'd Ghazir:
(even the gist of 14-27 still eludes savants)
If thou smite Lotan, the serpent slant,
Destroy the serpent tortuous,
Shalyat of the seven heads,
..."

(Traces of the two obscure couplets mentioned above.
Some 30 lines missing.)

("

(12 lines missing at the top)

18 Attendant of Asherah, but on this occasion, it seems, he for some reason acts as messenger for Baal (see end).
19 Hb.Pt 'l khl, home of Kothar.
20 It is curious that this precaution (cf. e, viii 25 ff.) should be necessary with Kothar, who is otherwise an obliging deity and a friend of Baal.
The Godly Mot rejoices
[And lifting] his [vo]ice he cries:
"How humbled is [ ... ]."
(Several ends of lines, then about 20-25 lines missing.
Cols, iii-iv too damaged for connected sense.)

(v)
(About 25 lines missing at the top. Then 1-5 defective.)

But thou, take thy cloud, thy wind,
Thy..., thy rains;
With thee thy seven lads,
Thine eight boars.
With thee Padriya, daughter of Ar;
With thee Tatalliya daughter of Rabb.

There now, be off on thy way
Unto the Mount of Kankaniya.

Lift the mount upon thy hands,
The elevation upon thy palms,
And descend to the depth of the earth,
Be of those who descend into earth,
And..."—
Puissant Baal complies.
He desires a cow-calf in Dubr,
A heifer in Shihlmemat-field (id Ilhmmt);
Lies with her times seventy-seven,
... times eighty-eight.
She conceives and gives birth to Math.

(fragments of 3 more lines; another 11 missing)

(vi)

[They® penetrate El's Field and enter
The pavilion of King El Father] Shunem.

[And lifting their voice they cry:
"Wewent [...],
We [ca]me to the pleasance of Dabr-land,
To the beauty of Shihlmemat-field.
We came upon Baal Fallen on the ground:
Puissant Baal is dead,
The Prince, Lord of Earth, is perished."

Straightly Kindly El Benign
Descends from the throne,
Sits on the footstool;
From the footstool,
And sits on the ground;
Pours dust of mourning on his head,
Earth of mortification on his pate;
And puts on sackcloth and loincloth.

He cuts a gash with a stone,
Incisions with... etc.

(Pertaining to "Baal")
She cuts a gash with a stone,
Incisions with... etc.

Then weeps she her fill of weeping;
Deep she drinks tears, like wine.
Loudly she calls
Unto the Gods' Torch Shapsh.
"Lift Puissant Baal, I pray, Onto me."

Hearkening, Gods' Torch Shapsh
Picks up Puissant Baal,
Sets him on Anath's shoulder.
Up to Zaphon's Fastness she brings him,
Bewails him and buries him too,
Lays him in the hollows of the earth-ghosts.
She slaughters seventy buffaloes
As tribute to Puissant Baal;
She slaughters seventy neat (20)
As tribute to Puissant Baal;
She slaughters seventy small cattle
As tribute to Puissant Baal;
She slaughters seventy deer
As tribute to Puissant Baal;
[She slaughters] seventy mountain-goats
As tribute to Puissant Baal;
[She slaughters] seventy roebucks
As tribute to Puissant Baal.
[... ] A[nath],
... Yabama[t] Liimmim.—

1 Addressed (by Mot?) to Baal.
2 A variant of Thy. For some reason if also occurs as a variant of the appellative fi (‘dew’).
3 Probably Gapn and Ugar.
[The]re, she is off on her way
To [E]l of the Sources of the Floods,
In the midst of [the Head]waters of the Two Deeps.
She penetrates El's Field and enters
The pavilion of King Father Shunem.
At El's feet she bows and falls down,
Prostrates her and does him honor.
She lifts up her voice and cries:
"Now let Asherah rejoice and her sons,
Elath and the band of her kinsmen;
For dead is Puissant Baal,
Perished the Prince, Lord of Earth."
Loudly El doth cry
To Lady Asherah of the Sea:
"Hark, Lady Asherah of the Sea,
Give one of thy sons I'll make king."
Quoth Lady Asherah of the Sea:
"Why, let's make Yadi' Yalhan {y<? ylhn)
king."
Answered Kindly One El Benign:
"Too weakly. He can't race with Baal,
Throw jav'lin with Dagon's Son
Glory-CrownV
Replied Lady Asherah of the Sea:
"Well, let's make it Ashtar the Tyrant;
Let Ashtar the Tyrant be king."—
Straightway Ashtar the Tyrant
Goes up to the Fastness
(And) sits on Baal Puissant's throne.
(But) his feet reach not down to the footstool,
Nor his head reaches up to the top.
So Ashtar the Tyrant declares:
"I'll not reign in Zaphon's Fastness"
Down goes Ashtar the Tyrant,
Down from the throne of Baal Puissant,
And reigns in El's Earth, all of it.

<ii)

(some 30 lines missing on top)

[. . .] A day, days go by,
[And Anath the Lass] draws nigh him.
Like the heart of a cow for her calf,
Like the heart of a ewe for her lamb,
So's the heart of Anath for Baal.
She grabs Mot by the fold of his garment,
Seizes [him] by the hem of his robe.
She lifts up her voice and [cries]:
"Now, Mot! Deliver my brother."
Responds the Godly Mot:
"What wouldst thou, O Maiden Anath?
I indeed have gone and have wander'd
Every mount to the heart of the earth,
Every hill to the earth's very bowels.
Lifebreath was wanting 'mong men,
Lifebreath among earth's masses.
I came to the pleasantness of Dabr-land,
The beauty of Shihlmemat-field.
I did masticate Puissant Baal.
I made him like a lamb in my mouth;
Like a kid in my gullet he's crushed.
Even the Gods' Torch Shapsh,
Who wings over heaven's expanse,
Is in Mot the Godly's hand."
A day, even days pass by,
From days unto months.
Then Anath the Lass draws nigh him.
Like the heart of a cow for her calf,
Like the heart of a ewe for her lamb,
So's the heart of Anath for Baal.
She seizes the Godly Mot—
With sword she doth cleave him.
With fan she doth winnow him—
With fire she doth burn him.2
With hand-mill she grinds him—
In the field she doth sow him.
Birds eat his remnants,
Consuming his portions,
Flitting from remnant to remnant.*

(iii-iv)

(some 40 lines missing on top of col iii)

(4)

[That Puissant Baal had died],
That the Prince [Lord of Earth] had perished.
And behold, alive is [Puissant Baal]!
And behold, existent the Prince, Lo[rd of Earth]!
In a dream, O Kindly El Benign,
In a vision, Creator of Creatures,
The heavens fat did rain,
The wadies flow with honey.
So I knew
That alive was Puissant Baal!
Existant the Prince, Lord of Earth!
In a dream, Kindly El Benign,
In a vision, Creator of Creatures,
The heavens fat did rain,
The wadies flow with honey!"—
The Kindly One El Benign's glad.
His feet on the footstool he sets,
And parts his jaus and laughs.
He lifts up his voice and cries:
"Now will I sit and rest
And my soul be at ease in my breast.
For alive is Puissant Baal, (20)
Existant the Prince, Lord of Earth!" (edge)
Loudly El doth cry
Unto the Maiden Anath.
"Hearken, O Maiden Anath!
Say to the Gods' Torch Shapsh:

* That is to say, the parts of him corresponding to chaff and straw in cereals.
3 But somehow Mot comes to life entire in col. vi, and Baal even earlier.
4 Who the speaker is is not known.
'Parch'd is the furrow of Soil, O Shapsh;
Parched is El's Soil's furrow;
Baal neglects the furrow of his tillage.
Where is Puissant Baal?
Where is the Prince, Lord of Earth?'—
The Maiden Anath departs.
There, she is off on her way
Unto the Gods' Torch Shapsh.
She lifts up her voice and cries:
"Message of Bull El thy father,
Word of the Kindly, thy begetter:
Parch'd is the furrow of Soil, O [Shapsh];
Parched is El's Soil's furrow:
Baal ne [gleets] the furrow of his tillage.
Where is Puissant Baal?
Where is the Prince, Lord of Earth?"—
Answer'd the Gods' Torch Shapsh:
"... in the ... [of thy brother],
In the ... of thy sibling,
And I'll look for Puissant Baal."—
Quoth the Maiden Anath:
"... o Shapsh;
May...[...] guard thee,
... £. . . J

(some 35 lines missing)

Baal seizes the sons of Asherah.
Rabbim® he strikes in the back.
Dokyamm he strikes with a bludgeon,
... he fells to the earth.
Baal [mounts] his throne of kingship,
[Dagon's Son] his seat of dominion.
[From] days to months, from months to years.
Lo, after seven years,
The Godly Mot [...] Unto Puissant Baal.
He lifts up his voice and says:
"Upon thee ... may I see,"
Downfall upon thee may I see.
Winnowing (with fan
Upon thee may I see.
Cleaving) with sword
Upon thee may I see.
Burning with fire
Upon thee [may I see.
Grinding with hand-mill
Up[on thee] may I see.
Sifting with sieve
Upon thee [may I see.
... ] [..] in the soil

Upon thee may I see.
Sowing on the sea
[... j... i... t]

(Lines 20-28 defective and obscure. Some further 35 lines missing.)

Returning to Baal of Zaphon's Fastness,
He lifts up his voice and cries:
"My brothers hast thou given, Baal, my ... [s?];
My mother's sons, my ..."
They... like camels:
Mot's firm, Baal's firm.
They gore like buffaloes:
Mot's firm. Baal's firm.
They bite like snakes:
Mot's firm. Baal's firm.
They...[ic] like chargers:
Mot falls. Baal falls.
Above Shapsh cries to Mot:
"Hearken, now, Godly Mot!
Why striv'st thou with Puissant Baal? Why?
Should Bull El thy father hear thee,
He'll pull out thy dwelling's pillars.
Overturn thy throne of kingship,
Break thy staff of dominion!"
Sore afraid was Godly Mot,
Filled with dread El's Beloved Ghazir.
Mot...

Baal seats him [on] his kingdom's [throne],
Upon his dominion's [seat].
(36-42 missing, defective, or unintelligible)

Thou't? eat the bread of honor,
Thou't7 drink the wine of favor.
Shapsh shall govern the gathered ones,8
Shapsh shall govern the divine ones.
... gods ... mortals,
... Kothar thy fellow,
Even Khasis thine intimate."
On the sea of monster and dragon,
Proceedeth Kothar wa-Khasis,
Kothar wa-Khasis doth journey.89

(colophon)

Written by Elimelech the Shabnite.
Dictated by Attani-puruleni, Chief of Priests, Chief of (Temple)-herdsman.
Donated by Niqmadd, King of Ugarit, Master of Yargub, Lord of Tharumeni.

APPENDIX. IV AB - F R§ 319 (and B H)

There exist a large (IV AB) and a very small piece (R§ 319) of a tablet with three columns of writing on only one side. That they both belong to the same tablet is not certain but very 1 According to f (between lines 30 and 40), Anath has already destroyed Rabbim once.

2 Or, "Because of thee ... have I seen." So also in the following.
probable. That only one side of the tablet is written on is probably due to the fact that it contained the whole of the composition in question, which was quite short. It has no colophon. It is distinct from the Baal epic which we have been following in the preceding pieces. R§ 319, which is apparently the missing top right-hand corner of IV AB, contains a graphic account of sexual intercourse between Baal and Anath; and IV AB itself is suggestive of something more than platonic relations between the two. This is entirely at variance with the epic, as everyone will realize who has read the former without reading into it.

[An short episode about Baal, likewise covering only one side of a tablet is BH, which, however, is so defective that a translation here would be of little use.]

Editions: Virolleaud, Syria, xvi (1936), 150-173; xxv, fasc. 1-2 (1944-45), 14-17; Ugaritic Handbook, xi, Nos. 76 (pp. 152 f.) and 132 (pp. 166 f.); Ginsberg, Orientalia NS, VII (1938), 1-11 (main portion only).

(coL i too fragmentary for use)

(... some 20 lines missing on top?)

"... Baal in his house,
   The God Hadd in the midst of his palace?"

The lads of Baal make answer:
"Baal is not in his house,
   [The God] Hadd in the midst of his palace."

His bow he has ta'en in his hand,
Also his darts in his right hand.

There he is off on his way
To Shimak Canebrake; the [buf]falo-/i//<. —
The Maiden Anath lifts her wing,
Lifts her wing and speeds in flight,
To Shimak Canebrake, the [buf]falo-/z//<rrf —
Puissant Baal lifts up his eyes,
Lifts up his eyes and beholds,
Beholds the Maiden Anath,
Fairest among Baal's sisters.
Before her he rises, he stands,
At her feet he kneels and falls down.
And he lifts up his voice and cries:
"Hail, sister, and ... ! (20)
The horns of thy ..., O Maiden Anath,
The horns of thy ... Baal will anoint,
Baal will anoint them in flight.
We'll thrust my foes into the earth,
To the ground them that rise 'gainst thy brother!" —
The Maiden Anath lifts up her eyes,
Lifts up her eyes and beholds,
Beholds a cow and proceeds a-walking,
Proceeds a-walking and proceeds a-dancing,
In the pleasant spots, in the lovely places.

(8 or 9 badly damaged lines at the bottom)

He seizes and holds [her] womb;
[She] seizes and holds [his] stones.
Baal... to an ox.
[... the Maid]den Anath
 [...] to conceive and bear.

1 The inquirer is evidently Anath.
2 Semachonitis, the modern Lake H'Ghleh in Galilee.

(another 14 lines very fragmentary)

(IV AB iii)

[Calve]s the cows dr[op]:
   An ox for Maiden Anath
   And a heifer for Yahamat Liimmim.
Quoth Puissant [Baal]:
"... that our progenitor is eternal,
   To all generations our begetter.
Baal scoops [his hands] full,
   ... the mouth of Maiden An[ath],
   E'en the mouth of [his] fairest sister.
Baal goes up in the mou[ntain],
   Dagon's Son in the s[ky].
Baal sits upon [his th]rone,
   Dagon's Son upon [his se]at.
   (In lines 16-29, which are poorly preserved, there is again talk of a buffalo being born to Baal, it being still not absolutely clear that his bovine mother was Anath herself.)
   And so she goes up to Arar,
   Up to Arar and Zaphon.
   In the pleasance, the Mount of Possession,
   She cries aloud to Baal:
   "Receive, Baal, godly tidings,
   Baal sits upon [his th]rone,
   A wild-ox is [born] to Baal,
   A buffalo to Rider of Clouds."
Puissant Baal rejoices.

The Legend of King Keret

In the campaigns of 1930 and 1931 the French excavators of ancient Ugarit recovered fragments belonging to three day tablets of an epic about a king designated by a name whose consonants are i-r-t and whose vowels are unknown; it is conventionally transcribed Keret.

There are six columns of writing (three on each side) on each tablet. According to the order in which they were published, they are designated as I K, II K, and III K, but according to their organic sequence as KRT A (= I K), KRT B (= III K), KRT C (= II K). KRT A was probably preceded, and KRT C was certainly followed, by one or more lost tablets. There may also be one or more missing between B and C.

Our text was copied in the reign of a certain king of Ugarit by the name of Niqmadd (see the colophon at the end of KRT C), who is known to have reigned in the second quarter of the fourteenth century B.C. That it contains a certain core of history is probable.

First publication: Of KRT A (with copies and photographs of the original), Ch. Virolleaud, La ligende de Keret, rox des Sidoniens (Mission de Ras Shamra II), 1936. Of KRT B (with copies of the original), Ch. Virolleaud, Le mariage du roi Keret (III K), Syria, xxiv/3-4 (1942-43, actual date of publication 1945), 137-172. Of KRT C (with copies of the original), Ch. Virolleaud, Le roi Keret et son fils (II K), Syria, xxii (1941), 105-136,197-217; Syria, xxiii/1-2 (1942-43), 1-20. Other editions: H. L. Ginsberg, The Legend of King Keret (BASOR SS, 2-5), 1946 (includes bibliography). C. H. Gordon, Ugaritic Handbook (Analecta Orientalia, xxv), 1947, ii, pp. 162-166, 184-187; Texts 125-128, Krt (transliterations only). Other bibli-KRT A

(i)

(Pertaining to "Kejret." )

... The house of a king is destroyed,
Who had seven brethren
Eight mother's sons.

Keret in offsprings is ruined,
Keret is undermined of establishment.

His lawful wife he did find,
His legitimate spouse.

He married the woman, and she "departed."

Flesh of J{inship had he:
One-third died in healthy
One-fourth of sickness;
One-fifth pestilence gathered unto itself,
One-sixth calamity;
One-seventh thereof fell by the sword.

He sees his offsprings, doth Keret;
He sees his offspring ruined,
Wholly undermined his seat,
And in its entirety a posterity perishing,
And in its totality a succession.

(So) he enters his cubicle (and) weeps,
A kid in the grasp of thy hand,

Sleep prevails over him, and he lies;
Slumber, and he reclines.

In his vision the Father of Man.
He is soaked by his weeping.
And he falls asleep as he cries.
Sleep prevails over him, and he lies;
Slumber, and he reclines.
And in his dream El descends,
In his vision the Father of Man.
And he approaches asking Keret:
"What ails Keret that he weeps,
The Beloved, Lad of El," that he cries ?

Is it a kingship like Bull his father's he desires,
Or authority like the Father of Man's ?

(At the bottom of col. i, lines 44-53 are abraded. They doubtless contained an offer by El of "silver and gold ... and perpetual slaves" etc. [cf. lines 53 ff., 126 ff., 37 ff., 259 ff., 269 ff., 282 ff.] and the beginning of Keret's reply, as follows: "What need have I of silver and yellow-glittering—")

(")

[Grant] I may beget [c]hildren;
[Grant that] I multiply [k]insmen."—
And Bull, his father El, [replied]:
"E[nough] for thee of weeping, Keret;
Of crying, Beloved, Lad of El.

Do thou wash and rouge thee.
Wash from hand to elbow,
From [thy] fingers up to the shoulder.

Take a lamb in thy hand,
A lamb of sacrifice in thy right hand;
A kid in the grasp of thy hand,

All thy most tempting food.

Take a turtle[dove],
Bird of sacrifice.

[In a bowl] of silver pour wine,
Honey in a bowl of g[gold].

{Go up to the top of a [to]wer.}8
And go up to the top of a [t]ower;
Bestride the top of the wall;
Lift up thy hands to heaven,
Sacrifice to Bull, thy father El;

Honor Baal with thy sacrifice,
Dagon's Sen@ with thine oblation.

Then descend, Keret, from the housetops.
Prepare thou corn for the city,
Wheat for Bet Khubur."

Let bread be baked for a fifth,
Food for a sixth month.
Muster the people and let it come forth,
The host of the troops of the people.
Yea, let come forth the assembled multitude,
Thy troops, a mighty force:

Three hundred myriads;

Serfs without number,
Peasants beyond counting.
They march in thousands serried,
And in myriads massed.

After two, two march;
After three, all of them.

The solitary man closes his house,
The widow locks herself in;10

The sick man is carried in bed,
The blind man gropes his way.

E'en the new-wed groom11 goes forth.

1 The first line in each tablet of a series indicates (where preserved) the series to which it belongs.
2 A euphemism for "died."
3 The poet either did not know or did not care if his fractions added up to more than unity.
4 cf. Ps. 6:7.
5 The word for "man" is identical with the proper name "Adam," and "Father (i.e. Creator) of the First Man" may be the meaning intended. El is also frequently called "Creator of Creatures."
6 This epithet, like "Servant of El" (below, n. 153, 155, 299), has the connotations of "favorite" and "intimate." cf. Num. 12:6-9; Deut. 34:5-10; Isa 41:8; etc.
7 cf. Ps. 86:16; 116:16; Wisd. 9:5.
8 A dittography of the next line; cf. n. 165 ff.
9 = Baal. xx In KRT B iv it is called simply Khubur.
10 This sense is strongly indicated by the parallelism, though hard to confirm etymologically.
11 Who was sometimes exempted, Deut. 24:5 (cf. 20:7).
He drives\textsuperscript{12} to another his wife,
   To a stranger his well-beloved.
(They are)
Like the locusts that dwell on the steppe,

(iii)
Like grasshoppers on the borders of the desert\textsuperscript{18}—
March a day and a second;
   A third, a fourth day;
   A fifth, a sixth day—
Lo! at the sun\textsuperscript{11} on the seventh:
   Thou arrivest at Udum the Great,
   Even at Udum the Grand.
—Now do thou attack the villages, (no)
   Harass the towns.
Sweep from the fields the wood-cutting ‘wives’,
From the threshing floors the straw-picking ones;
Sweep from the fountain those that fill,\textsuperscript{15}
Tarry a day and a second;
   A third, a fourth day;
   A fifth, a sixth day.
Thine arrows shoot not into the city,
   (Nor) thy hand-stones flung headlong.
And behold, at the sun on the seventh,
King Pabel will sleep
   Till the noise of the neighing of his stallion,
   Till the sound of the braying of his he-ass,
   Until the lowing of the plow ox,
   (Until) the howling of the watchdog.
Then will he send two messengers unto thee,
   Unto Keret, to the camp’.
‘Message of King Pabel:—
Take silver and yellow-glittering gold;
   Friendship by covenant and vassalage for ever;
One-third of the chariot-steeds
   In the stable of a handmaid’s son.
Take it, Keret, (130)
   In peace, in peace.
And flee, O king, from my house;
   Withdraw, O Keret, from my court.
Vex not Udum the Great,
   Even Udum the Grand.
Udum is a gift of El,
   Even a present of the Father of Man.’—
Then send thou the two messengers back to him:—
   ‘What need have I of silver and yellow-glittering gold;
   Friendship by covenant and vassalage for ever;
One-third of the chariot-steeds
   In the stables of a handmaid’s son?
Nay, what’s not in my house shalt thou give!
Give me Lady Hurriya (hry),

The fair, thy first-begotten;
Whose fairness is like Anath’s fairness,
   [Whose] beau[t]y like Ashtoreth’s beauty;
Whose eyeballs are the pureness of lapis,
   Whose pupil[ils] the gleam of jet;
   — Let me bas\ in the brightness of her eyes;
Whom in my dream El bestowed,
   In my vision the Father of Man.
And let her bear offspring to Keret,
   And a lad to the Servant of El.‘—
Keret awoke, and (lo, it was) a dream;
   The Servant of El, and (lo, it was) a fantasy.—
Then washed he and roug’d him:
   He washed from hand to elbow,
   From his fingers up to the shoulder.
He entered the shade of a pavilion, (edge)
   Took a lamb of sacrifice in his hand,
   A kid in the grasp of his hand,
   All his most tempting food.
He took a turtledove,
   Bird of sacrifice].

(iv)
In a bowl of silver he poured wine,
   Honey in a bowl of gold.
He went up to the top of a tower,
   Bestrode the top of the wall;
Lifted up his [han]ds to heaven,
   Sacrificed to Bull, his father El;
Honored Baal with his sacrifice,
   Dagon’s Son with his [ob]lation.
Keret descended [from the house]top]s.
He prepared corn for the city,
   Wheat for Bet Khubur.
Bread [was ba]ked for a fifth,
   [Food] for a sixth mon[th].
He mu[st]ered the people and [it came forth,
   The host] of the troops of the peopfle.
And forth came the assembled] multitude,
   His troops, [a mighty force]:
Thr[ee] hundred myriads.
   They march in thousands se[r]ried,
   And in myriads massed.
After two, two march;
   After three, all of them.
The solitary man closes his house,
   The widow lockj herself in;
Hie sick man is carried in his bed,
   The blind man grope[s] his way.
Forth comes,\textsuperscript{16} too, the new-wed groom.
He drives to another his wife,
   And to a stranger his well-beloved.
(They are) like the locusts that dwell on the steppe,
   Like grasshoppers on the border of the desert.—
They march a day and a second;
   Then, at the sun[n] on the third,

\textsuperscript{12} Or “leaves”?
\textsuperscript{13} A stock simile for a vast multitude, Jud. 6:5; 7:12; Jer. 46:23; 51:27; Nah. 3:16, 17.
\textsuperscript{14} Probably “sunrise.”
\textsuperscript{15} Evidently these, the most menial, tasks—cf. Deut. 29:10b; Josh. 9:20, 23, 27—devolved upon women in this society.
\textsuperscript{16} The text has wybl, but this is probably miswritten for uyfu cf. above, line 100.
UGARITIC MYTHS,  PICS, AND LEGENDS

They came to the shrine of Asherah of Tyre,
Even that of Elath of Sidon.
If Hurriya to my house I take,
Bring the lass into my court,
Her double I’ll give in silver,
And her treble in gold."

He marches a day and a second;
A third, a fourth day.
Then at the sun on the fourth,
He arrives at Udum the Great,
He did attack the villages,
Harassed the towns.
He swept from the fields the wood-cutting (wives),
And from the threshing floors the straw-picking ones;
He swept from the spring the women that drew,
And from the fountain those that filled.
He tarried a day and a second,
A third, a fourth day;
A fifth, a sixth day. (220)
And behold, at the sun on the seventh,
King Pabel slept
Till the noise of the neighing of his stallion,
Till the sound of the braying of his he-ass,
Until the lowing of the plow ox,
(Until the howling of the [walt]chdog.
Straightway [King Pabel]
Loudly unto [his] wife doth cry:
"Hearken, I pray thee, [O... ] my wife,
(lines 231-5 too fragmentary for rendering)
[To Keret] I will surely send [... ]."
(Loudly unto... he doth cry:)
(236)
[O..., mount ye an ass
(lines 240-5 destroyed except for a few letters)
[There now, be off on your way]
Towards [Keret the Noble].
And [say unto Keret the Noble]:
"Message of (King Pabel):—
Take [silver and yellow-glittering gold];
[Friendship by covenant], vass[alage for ever;
Etc.] etc."
(see above, lines 125-136)

(vi)

(Lines 262-264, wanting, related how the two messengers did what Pabel had commanded in lines 239-245)
(There, they are off on their way (265)

17 Perhaps better "the Tyrians," "the Sidonians." In either case, the shrine will have been situated not too far from Tyre and Sidon.
18 Or, "two parte (i.e. thirds) of her... and the third... ."
19 Apparently a mistake for "fifth."
20 Perhaps better "the Udumians" (cf. n.17).
made new ones, referred to below, iii 23 ff. The defective lines tell that some of the leading gods are about to visit Keret and that Keret makes some obscure preparations.)

[Thejn came the companies of the gods. (n)

And Puissant Baal spake up:

"[Now] come, O Kindly One El Be[nign]! Wilt thou not bless [Keret] the Noble, Not beatify the Beloved, Lad of El?"—

A cup [El] takes [in] (his) hand, A flagon in (his) [right hand].

Indeed he blesses [his servant].

El blesses Keret, [Beatifi]es the Beloved, Lad of El: (20)

'The wo[man thou ta]k'st, O Keret, The woman thou tak'st into thy house, Hie maid thou bring'st into thy court, Shall bear seven sons unto thee; Yea, eight she'll produce for thee. She shall bear Yassib (ysb) the Lad, Who shall draw the milk of A[she] rah, Suck the breasts of the maiden Anath, The two wet nurses of the gods].21*

(iii)

(10-13 broken and unintelligible)

Lady [Hu]rriya obeys. (14)

She prepares the fattest of [her] stall-fed ones; She opens a jar of wine. Into the dwelling... (6)

[She prepares the fat[est of [her] stall-fed ones; She opens a ja[r of wi]ne]. 24

(3 lines too damaged for translation)

[Into] the dwelling... [ ... And into the pavilion ... they advance.]

Hand to the bowl she stretches forth, Knife to the flesh she doth apply. [And] Lady Hurriya [declared]:

"[To ea]t, to drink have I summoned you: Your lord Keret [hath a sacrifice]."

(10-13 broken and unintelligible)

For Keret they do weep, [Even as] spoke the peers. They weep [as one weeps] for the dead. [ ... ] and in (their) heart they ... (lines 16-17 unintelligible)

"At the setting of the sun Keret will come, As the sun goes down our lord;" (20)

(Lines 21-29 10° broken for coherent sense; then 10 lines missing.)

21 i.e. the son who ministers personally to his father (cf. AQHT A i 26 ff., 43 ff., etc.); Mai. 3:17; also above, n.6.

22 Does the child thereby become a demi-god by adoption, or acquire godlike qualities?

21 One of the girls was called Thitmanet, KRT C iii 29, 39, which may mean "the eighth"; 2 boys + 6 girls = 8 children.
Hearken...

That they might eat and drink.
And Lady Hurriya declared:
"To eat, to drink have I summoned you:
Your sire [Keret hath a sacrifice]."
Into Keret's presence they enter.

"To a woman's dirge, O father, my song?
Present [thy petitions] with thy music,
And he will consent to all."

Straightway the youth Elhau
His [l]ance in his hand doth take,
And setteth out on a run.

(Or, "[his] sister approaches.")

As soon as she sees her brother,
Her [loins] to the ground do break;
[Upon] her brother's need she weeps:
"Is, [then,] the king sick,
[Or] thy sire Keret [ill] ?"
[And] the youth Elhau [replied]:
"The king is [not] sick,
Thy sire Keret [is not ill]."
Keret is making a [sacrifice;]
The king is preparing a banquet.

(And the youth Elhau replied):
"How many moons hath he been sick,
[Or] how many hath Keret been ill?"

And the youth [Elhau] replies:
"Three moons hath he been sick,
Four hath Keret been ill."

(lines 86-96 defective and obscure)
She weeps bitt[er tears];
She gives forth her voice in weeping:
"In thy life, our father, we rejoiced,
Exulted in thy not dying.
(But) like a dog thine aspect is changed,
Like a cur thy joyous countenance.
Wilt thou die then, father, like the mortals,
Or thy joy change to mourning.
To a woman's dirge, O father, my song?
For thee, father, weeps the mount of Baal,
Zaphon, the sacred circuit.
The mighty circuit laments,
Like a cur thy joyous countenance.
Wilt thou die then, father, like the mortals,
(But) like a dog thine aspect is changed,
Like a cur thy joyous countenance.
Wilt thou die then, father, like the mortals,
Or thy joy change to mourning.
To a woman's dirge, O father, my song?
For thee, father, weeps the mount of Baal,
Zaphon, the sacred circuit.
The mighty circuit laments,
Like a dog thine aspect is changed,
Like a cur thy joyous countenance.
Wilt thou die then, father, like the mortals,
(But) like a dog thine aspect is changed,
Like a cur thy joyous countenance.
Wilt thou die then, father, like the mortals,
Or thy joy change to mourning.
To a woman's dirge, O father, my song?
Shall, then, a god die,

This time she uses a word which means both "master" and "father;" so probably the third banquet is for her own children. The point of all these banquets remains obscure owing to the great gaps in the text.
An offspring of the Kindly One not live?
For thee, father, weeps the mount of Baal,
Zapho, the sacred circuit.
Hie mighty [circujit laments,
The circuit broad of span:
'Is, then, Keret a son [of El], (110)
An offspring of the Kindly One [and a holy being]? "—
And so she comes in [to her father's presence],
She enters the chamber of Keret.
(Of lines 114-120 only the beginnings preserved; 2-3 more lines entirely abraded.)

(iii)

(about 30 lines missing at the top)
They pour fat [...] earth and sky;
Turn to the... of the earth,
To the... of the plowland.
Unto the earth Baal rains,
And unto the field rains 'Aliyy.40
Sweet to the earth is Baal's rain,
And to the field the rain of 'Aliyy.
Tis sweet to the wheat in the plowland,
In the tilth to the emmer. (10)

• · ·

Hie plowmen raise their heads,
Upward the growers of corn.
Spent is the bread corn [from] their jars,
Spent the wine from their skin-bottles,
Spent the oil from [their] jugs.
Keret's house... (abraded) (1)

(iv)

(about 18 lines missing at the top)
(1)
El hath heard thy ...
(Thou) hast insight like El,
Art wise as Bull the Kindly One.
Call the carpenter-god Ilish,
Ilish and his wives the carpenter-goddesses,

He calls the carpenter-god Ilish—
Ilish, carpenter of the house of Baal—
And his wives the carpenter-goddesses.
And the Kindly One, El Benign, spake:
"Hearken, O carpenter-god Ilish—
Ilish, carpenter of the house of Baal—
And thy wives the carpenter-goddesses.

An offspring of the Kindly One not live?
For thee, father, weeps the mount of Baal,
Zapho, the sacred circuit.
Hie mighty [circujit laments,
The circuit broad of span:
'Is, then, Keret a son [of El], (110)
An offspring of the Kindly One [and a holy being]? "—
And so she comes in [to her father's presence],
She enters the chamber of Keret.
(Of lines 114-120 only the beginnings preserved; 2-3 more lines entirely abraded.)

(iii)

(about 30 lines missing at the top)
They pour fat [...] earth and sky;
Turn to the... of the earth,
To the... of the plowland.
Unto the earth Baal rains,
And unto the field rains 'Aliyy.40
Sweet to the earth is Baal's rain,
And to the field the rain of 'Aliyy.
Tis sweet to the wheat in the plowland,
In the tilth to the emmer. (10)

• · ·

Hie plowmen raise their heads,
Upward the growers of corn.
Spent is the bread corn [from] their jars,
Spent the wine from their skin-bottles,
Spent the oil from [their] jugs.
Keret's house... (abraded) (1)

(iv)

(about 18 lines missing at the top)
(1)
El hath heard thy ...
(Thou) hast insight like El,
Art wise as Bull the Kindly One.
Call the carpenter-god Ilish,
Ilish and his wives the carpenter-goddesses,

He calls the carpenter-god Ilish—
Ilish, carpenter of the house of Baal—
And his wives the carpenter-goddesses.
And the Kindly One, El Benign, spake:
"Hearken, O carpenter-god Ilish—
Ilish, carpenter of the house of Baal—
And thy wives the carpenter-goddesses.

40 If the reading is correct, the fat, or oil, is either literal, in which case we have a description of an act of sympathetic magic meant to induce precipitation; or figurative, in which case actual rain (cf. p. 136) is described.
40 Evidently identical with Baal. Baal is the god of rain; cf. p. 153.
40 All this certainly sounds more like the end of a drought (or dry season) than the beginning or middle of one, yet Keret is still ill. It is therefore anything but obvious that the drought is considered to be a consequence of the king's illness.
82 Or, "daughter."
His desire for bread she opens,
His appetite for food.
Death, on the one hand, is broken;
Sha’taqat, on the other, has prevailed.—

Then Keret the Noble commands,
Raising his voice and crying:
"Hearken, O Lady Hurriya.
Prepare a lamb that I may eat,
A yeanling that I may dine."

Lady Hurriya hearkens.
She prepares a lamb and he eats,
A yeanling and he dines.
Behold a day and a second,
Keret returns to his former estate;
He sits upon the throne of kingship;
Upon the dais, the seat of authority.
Now, Yassib sits in the palace,
And his inward parts do instruct him:
"Go unto thy father, Yassib;
Go unto thy [father] and speak,
Repeat unto Ke[ret the Noble]:
List and incline [thine ear]."—

Yassib the Lad departs,
Enter's his father's presence,
And lifts up his voice and cries:
"Hearken, I pray thee, Keret the Noble!
List and incline thine ear.
(here again the unintelligible couplet)
Thou hast let thy hand fall into mischief.

Thou judgest not the case of the widow,
Nor adjudicat'st the case of the wretched.
Having become a brother of the sickbed,
A companion of the bed of suffering,
Descend from the kingship—I'll reign;
From thine authority—I'll sit enthroned."

Yassib the Lad departs,
Enter's his father's presence,
And lifts up his voice and cries:
"Hearken, I pray thee, Keret the Noble!
List and incline thine ear.
(here again the unintelligible couplet)
Thou hast let thy hand fall into mischief.

Thou judgest not the case of the widow,
Nor adjudicat'st the case of the wretched;
Driv' st not out them that prey on the poor;
Gives oblation to the gods to eat,
Feed'st not the fatherless before thee;
Thou judgest not the cause of the widow,
Nor adjudicat'st the case of the wretched;
Feed'st not the fatherless before thee,
The widow behind thy back.
Having become a brother of the sickbed,
A companion of the bed of suffering,
Ascend from the kingship—I'll reign;
From thine authority—I'll sit enthroned."

And [K]eret the Noble makes answer:
"May Horon break, O my son,
May Horon break thy head,
Ashtoreth name of Baal thy pate.
May'st thou fall into...
(last line unintelligible)
(colophon)
(Lengthwise of the left margin of col. vi is inscribed the following colophon:)

34 Or possibly, "raised thy hand in mischief."
35 cf. n.20.
36 "before thee... behind thy back" is probably a merism.
37 God of the nether world.
A couch of sackcloth he mounts and lies,

A couch of [loincloth] and 'passes the night'.

Behold a day and a second,

Oblation to the gods gives Daniel,

A third, a fourth day,

Oblation to the gods gives Daniel,

A fifth, a sixth, a seventh day,

So shall there be a son in his house, (10)

He gives oblation to the gods to eat,

Oblation to the gods to eat,

Oblation to drink to the holy ones.

Wilt thou not bless him, O Bull El, my father,

Beatify him, O Creator of Creatures? (20)

From the dust guards his footsteps;

Nor scion hath like his kindred.

Surely there's a son for him 'like' his brethren's,

And a scion like unto his kindred's!

He gives oblation to the gods to eat,

Oblation to drink to the holy ones.

Wilt thou not bless him, O Bull El, my father,

Beatify him, O Creator of Creatures? (20)

Who smother the life-force of his detractor, (30)

Who sets up the stelae of his ancestral spirits,

Who smother the life-force of his detractor,

Who sets up the stelae of his ancestral spirits,

Who frees [his spirit from the earth], (1)

From the dust etc., etc." (2-80)

(Another 10 lines, approximately, missing here. The messenger obeyed instructions and addressed Daniel as follows: "... A son shall be borne thee like thy brethren's,

» A scion like unto thy kindred's:

Who sets up the stelae of thine ancestral spirits,

In the holy place the projectors of thy clan;

Who frees thy spirit from the earth], (1)

From the dust etc., etc." (2-80)

Daniel's face lights up, (8d)

While above his forehead shines.

He parts his jaus and laughs,

Places his foot on the footstool,

And lifts up his voice and cries:

Now will I sit and rest

And my soul be at ease in my breast.

For a son's born to me like my brethren's

A scion like unto my kindred's

Etc., etc.

Daniel goes to his house,

To his palace Daniel betakes him. (25)

Into his house come skillful ones, (11)

Daughters of joyful noise, swallows.

Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,

Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,

Prepares an ox for the skillful ones,

Gives food to the [skillful ones and gives drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows.

Behold a day and a second,

He gives [to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

A third, a fourth day,

He gives food to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

A fifth, a sixth day,

He gives food to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

Lo, on the seventh day,

(Another 10 lines, approximately, missing here. The messenger obeyed instructions and addressed Daniel as follows: "... A son shall be borne thee like thy brethren's,

» A scion like unto thy kindred's:

Who sets up the stelae of thine ancestral spirits,

In the holy place the projectors of thy clan;

Who frees thy spirit from the earth], (1)

From the dust etc., etc." (2-80)

Daniel's face lights up, (8d)

While above his forehead shines.

He parts his jaus and laughs,

Places his foot on the footstool,

And lifts up his voice and cries:

Now will I sit and rest

And my soul be at ease in my breast.

For a son's born to me like my brethren's

A scion like unto my kindred's

Etc., etc.

Daniel goes to his house,

To his palace Daniel betakes him. (25)

Into his house come skillful ones, (11)

Daughters of joyful noise, swallows.

Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,

Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,

Prepares an ox for the skillful ones,

Gives food to the [skillful ones and gives drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows.

Behold a day and a second,

He gives [to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

A third, a fourth day,

He gives food to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

A fifth, a sixth day,

He gives food to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

Lo, on the seventh day,

(Another 10 lines, approximately, missing here. The messenger obeyed instructions and addressed Daniel as follows: "... A son shall be borne thee like thy brethren's,

» A scion like unto thy kindred's:

Who sets up the stelae of thine ancestral spirits,

In the holy place the projectors of thy clan;

Who frees thy spirit from the earth], (1)

From the dust etc., etc." (2-80)

Daniel's face lights up, (8d)

While above his forehead shines.

He parts his jaus and laughs,

Places his foot on the footstool,

And lifts up his voice and cries:

Now will I sit and rest

And my soul be at ease in my breast.

For a son's born to me like my brethren's

A scion like unto my kindred's

Etc., etc.

Daniel goes to his house,

To his palace Daniel betakes him. (25)

Into his house come skillful ones, (11)

Daughters of joyful noise, swallows.

Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,

Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,

Prepares an ox for the skillful ones,

Gives food to the [skillful ones and gives drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows.

Behold a day and a second,

He gives [to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

A third, a fourth day,

He gives food to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

A fifth, a sixth day,

He gives food to the skillful ones and drink

To the daughters of joyful noise, the swallows;

Lo, on the seventh day,
A month follows a month; Daniel sits and counts her months. But in the fifth (sixth?) month, the fairness of the bed...

I myself will bring the bow,
Even I will convey the darts."
And behold, on the seventh day—
Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,
Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,
Is upright, sitting before the gate,
Beneath a mighty tree on the threshing floor,
Judging the cause of the widow,
Adjudicating the case of the fatherless.

I myself will bring the bow,
Even I will convey the darts."
And behold, on the seventh day—
Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,
Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,
Is upright, sitting before the gate,
Beneath a mighty tree on the threshing floor,
Judging the cause of the widow,
Adjudicating the case of the fatherless.

... I myself will bring the bow,
Even I will convey the darts."
And behold, on the seventh day—
Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,
Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,
Is upright, sitting before the gate,
Beneath a mighty tree on the threshing floor,
Judging the cause of the widow,
Adjudicating the case of the fatherless.

(v)

(continued)

(vi)

(Kothar departs for his tent,
Hayyin departs for his tabernacle.
Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man,
Forthwith Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man,
The bow doth [ ... ] ... upon Aqhat he doth ... [ ... ]:
"Hie first of thy game, O my son,
The first of thy ...[ ... ],
The game of thy ...[ ... ]."

(Some 19 lines missing. Then come 15 broken lines which tell about a feast and about the warrior-goddess Anath coveting Aqhat’s bow: Aqhat will have been entertaining her tete-a-tete.)

[She lifts up her voice and] cries:
"Hearken, I pray thee, [Aqhat the Youth!]
Ask for silver, and I’ll give it thee;
[For gold, and I’ll bejustom’t on thee;
But give thy bow [to me;
Lot] Yabamat-Liimmim21 take thy darts"
But Aqhat the Youth answers:
"/ vow yew trees of Lebanon,
I vow sinews from wild oxen;
I vow horns from mountain goats,
Tendons from the hocks of a bull;
I vow from a cane-forest reeds:
Give (these) to Kothar wa-Khasis.
He’ll make a bow for thee,
Darts for Yabamat-Liimmim."
Then quoth the Maiden Anath:
"Ask for life, O Aqhat the Youth.
Ask for life and I’ll give it thee,
For deathlessness, and I’ll bestow’t on thee.
I’ll make thee count years with Baal,
With the sons of El shalt thou count months.24
And Baal when he gives life gives a feast,
Gives a feast to the life-given and bids him drink;
Sings and chants over him,
Sweetly serenades] him:
So give I life to Aqhat the Youth.”
But Aqhat the Youth answers:
"Fib not to me, O Maiden;
For to a Youth thy fibbing is loathsome.
Further life—how can mortal attain it?
How can mortal attain life enduring?
Glaze will be poured [on] my head,
Plaster upon my pate;24
And I’ll die as everyone dies,
I too shall assuredly die.
Moreover, this will I say:

12 i.e. in the distance.
13 "Skilful,” the commonest name of the craftsman-god.
14 "Clever,” another of his names.
15 See n.1.
16 "Skilful and Clever”; see nn.13 and 14.
17 "Deft,” still another of his monickers.
18 bKH.t 6, the name of the craftsman-god’s “estate.”
19 Or “from,” if Daniel’s tent is meant rather than Kothar’s.
20 Perhaps Daniel here impresses upon his son the duty of offering some of his game to the gods. "First" may mean "choicest" here.
21 An alternative designation of the Maiden Anath; meaning doubtful.
22 Yew-wood, horn, sinew, and tendon go into the making of a composite bow; reed into that of arrows.
23 i.e. shalt be immortal like them.
24 My hair will turn white.
My bow is [a weapon for] warriors.   (40)
Shall now females [with it] to the chase?"
—[Loudly] Anath doth laugh,
While forging (a plot) in her heart:
"Give heed to me, Aqhat the Youth,
Give heed to me for thine own good.
[... ] I'll meet thee in the path of arrogance,
[Encounter thee] in the path of presumption,
Hurl thee down at [my feet and trample] thee,
My darling great big he-man!"
—
[She stamps with her feet and traverses the earth.]
There, [she is off on her way]
Towards El of the Source of the Floods
[In the midst of the headwaters] of the Two Oceans.
She penetrates El's field [and enters]
The pavilion of King Father Shunem.25
[At El's feet she] bows and falls down,
Prostrates herself, doing him reverence.
She denounces Aqhat the Youth,
[Damn the child of Daniel to the Rapha-man.]
Quoth [the Maiden Anath,
Lifting up] her [voice] and crying:
(In 54-55 only the word "Aqhat" can be made out. A further 10 lines or so are missing. In them Anath may well have told a cock-and-bull story about the unac nomodating youth. In any case, El declared he could, or would, do nothing against Aqhat.)
(colophon on edge of tablet)
[Dictated by Attani]-puruleni.26

AQHTB

(The preserved fragment of this four-column tablet bears the top of col. i on the obverse and the bottom of col. iv on the reverse, the surface of the obverse being largely abraded.)

(o)
[... But the Maiden Anath] [replied]:
"[... ], O El!
[... rejoice not.
Rejoice not [... .
Exult] not [... .
With] the might [of my] long hand,
I'll verily smash thy [pa]te,
Make [thy gray hair] flow [with blood,
The gray hair of] thy [beard] with gore.
And [call] Aqhat and let him save thee,
The son of Daniel] and let him deliver thee,
From the hand of the Maiden [Anath]!"
—
Answered the Kindly One El Be[nign]:
"I ween'd, daughter mine, thou wast gentle,
And goddesses fr[ee from] contumely.
On, then, perverse daughter;
[Thou'lt ta]ke whatsoever thou wilt.

Thou'lt compass [whatever thou] list:
Who hinder's thee will be crushed."—
[The Maiden] Anath [rejoices].
There, [she is off on her way]
Towards A[qhat the Youth,
O'er thousand f[i]elds, ten thousand a]cres.
Now laughs the Maiden [Anath,
And lifts up] her voice and cries:
"Oh, hearken but, Aqhat the Youth,
Thou'rt my brother, and I [thy sister]___" (Lines 25-35 108 damaged to yield anything but the probable general sense that Anath offers to show Aqhat a particularly good place to hunt in, namely, the en viron's of the home-town of Yatpan [ytpn], on whom see further on. Probably in the additional 20 lines of this column and in the whole of cols, ii-iii, which are missing altogether, the twain betook them thither; Aqhat had good luck, and Anath left him for a white.)

(iv)
(some 20 lines missing, 4 lines fragmentary)
The Maiden Anath [depart]ts.
[There, she is off on her way]
Towards Yatpan [the Drunken Soldier].
[She lifts up her voice and cries:
(The sense of her imperfection preserved utterance has not yet been determined, except that it shows that Yatpan dwelt in "the city of Abelim, Abelim the city of Prince Yarikh [ = Moon."])]
Quoth Yatpan [the Drunken Soldier]:
"Hearken, O Maiden Anath.
Wouldst thou slay him27 fo[r his bow],
Slay him for his darts,
Him ma[ke live again]?
The daring Youth has set meat and [drinl(1).
He is left in the fields and [... ... ]."
Quoth the Maiden Anath:
"Give heed, Yatp,28 and [I'll tell] thee.
I'll make thee like a vulture in my girdle,
Like a swift flier in my pouch.
[As] Aqhat [sits] to eat,
The son of Daniel to [dine],
[Over him] vultures will soar,
[A flock of swift fliers] will coast.
'Mong the vultures will I be soaring;
Above Aqhat will I pose thee.
Strike him twice on the crown,
Thrice above the ear;
Pour out his blood like sap,
Like juice29 to his knees.
Let his breath escape like wind,
His soul like vapor,
Like smoke from his nostrils [from nostrils].30
'His vigor! I will revive."

25 ‘Dictated by Attani’-puruleni.
26 One of El’s names; vocalization uncertain.
27 Known from the colophon at the end of the Baal epic to have been chief of priests in the reign of Niqmadd, king of Ugarit, second quarter of the 14th century B.C.
28 Hypocoristicon of, or mistake for, Yatpan.
29 Shf, perhaps connected with Heb. shf “to press out (liquid).”
30 Apparently ditography.
—She takes Yatpan the Drunken Soldiery
  Makes him like a vulture in her girdle,
  Like a swift flier in her pouch.

As Aqhat sits to eat,
Over him vultures soar,
[Among] the vultures soars Anath;
Above [Aqhat] she poses him.
He smites him twice [on the crown],
Thrice above the ear;
Poured out his blood [like]
He smites him twice [on the crown],
Like smoke [from his nostrils].
Anath, [seeing] his vigor extinguished—
Twas but for thy bow I slew thee.
Woe...
...
...
.
Is only clear that Anath figures there. She is apparently
I smote him
But thou wouldst live.

Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man, (20)
Judging the cause of the widow,
For rent
Is the garment of Daniel the Rapha-man,
The vestment of Ghazir [the Harnamiyy-man].—
Loudly to his daughter he doth cry:

AQHTC

(o)
(In the first 13 lines, defective in various degrees, it is only clear that Anath figures there. She is apparently speaking; it is not known to whom.)

... I smote him but for his bow,
1 smote him for his darts.
So his bow has been given to me.
But through his death...,
The fruits of summer are withered,
The ear [in] its husk."

Straightway Daniel the Rapha-man, (20)
Forthwith Ghazir [the Harnamiyy-[man],
Is »wright, [sitting before the gate,
[... ] on the threshing floors dries up;
[...] droops;
Blasted are the buds [...].
O'er her father's house vultures are soaring
A flock of swift fliers is coasting.
Paghat weeps in her heart,
Cries in her inward parts.
She rends the garment of Daniel the Rapha-man,
The vestment of Ghazir the Harnamiyy-man.”

35 Daniel's daughter Paghat.
36 Because she realizes the blight upon the land must be due to the murder of some innocent person. She has the gift of divination; see further on.
of them is that somebody finds out what has happened to Aqhat; either because Paghat sees two supernatural beings act it out in dumb show, or because two attendants of Daniel hear the tale from the dying boy.) [ ... ] they come.

They lift up [their] voice, [and cry]:
"Hearken, O Daniel the [Rapha]-man!
Aqhat the Youth is dead.
The Maiden Anath [has caused
His breath to escape] like [wind],
His soul like vapor."

[Daniel's legs] tremble.
Above, his face sweats;
Behind, he is broken in the loins.
The joints of his loins are bent
Weakened [those of his back].

He lifts up his voice and cries:
"Cursed be [the slayer of my son].
(... missing)

Lifting his eyes he sees:
Beholds Hargab (sml), the vultures' father.
He lifts up his voice and cries:
"The wings of Hargab may Baal break,
May Baal break the pinions of him.
Let him fall down at my feet.
I'll split his belly and gaze.
If there be fat,
If there be [bone],
I'll weep and inter it,
Lay't in the hollows of the earth-ghosts."

Scarce hath the word left his mouth,
[His] speech left his lips,
Hargab's wings Baal doth break,
Baal doth break the pinions of them.
They do fall down at his feet,
He splits their bellies and gazes:
No fat is there,
No bone.

He lifts up [his] voice and cries:
"The wings of Samal may Baal break,
May Baal break the [pin]nions of her.
Let her fall down at my feet.
I'll split her belly and gaze.
If there be fat,
If there be bone,
I'll weep and inter it.
Lay't in the hollows of the earth-ghosts."

Scarce hath the word [left] his mouth,
His speech left his lips,
Samal's wings [Ba][a]l doth break,
Baal doth break the pinions of her.
She doth fall down at his feet.
So he splits her belly and gazes.
There is fat,
There is bone.
Taking them for Aqhat he (we)eps,
Weeps and inter him.
He inter[s him in ...], in ...,
Then lifts up his voice and cries:
"The wings of the vultures may Baal break,
May Baal break the pinions of them.
An they fly over the grave of my son,
Rousing him from his sleep."—

Qiru-mayim the king doth curse:
"Woe to thee, O Qiru-mayim,
On which rests the blood-guilt of Aqhat the Youth!
... the dwellers of the house of El;
Now, tomorrow, and for evermore,
From now unto all generations!"

Again he waves the staff of his hand,
And comes to Marurat-taghullal-banir.
He lifts up his voice and cries:
"Woe to thee, Marurat-taghullal-banir,
On which rests the blood-guilt of Aqhat the Youth!
Thy root grow not in the earth;
In uprooter's hand droop thy head—
Now, tomorrow, and for evermore,
From now unto all generations!"

Again he waves the staff of his hand,

—Perhaps "Water-Sources." In any case a locality near the scene of the murder.
—Perhaps "Blessed One Harnessed with a Yoke." See preceding note.
And comes to the city of Abelim, Abelim the city of Prince Yarikh. He lifts up his voice and cries: "Woe to thee, city of Abelim, On which rests the blood-guilt of Aqhat the Youth! May Baal make thee blind From now for evermore, From now unto all generations!"

Again he waves the staff of his hand.

Daniel goes to his house, To his palace Daniel betakes him.

Into his palace come weeping-women, Wailing-women into his court. He weeps for Aqhat the Youth, Cries for the child, does Daniel the Rapha-man.

From days to months, from months to years, Until seven years, He weeps for Aqhat the Youth, Cries for the child, does Daniel the [Rapha]-man. But after seven years, [Daniel] the Rapha-[man] speaks up, Ghazir [the Harnamiyy-m man] makes answer. [He] lifts up his voice and cries: "De[part], weeping-women, from my pala[ce]; Wailing-women, from my court Pzgm gr."

He takes a sacrifice for the gods, Offers up a clan-offering to heaven, The clan-offering of Harnamiyy to the stars, (three and one-half lines mutilated) Quoth Paghat who observes the flowing water: "Father has sacrificed to the gods, Has offered up a clan-offering to heaven, The clan-offering of Harnamiyy to the stars."

Do thou bless me, so I'll go blessed; Beatify me, so I'll go beatified.

I'll slay the slayer of my brother, [Destroy] the [destroyer of my sibling].—[Daniel] the Rapha-[man] makes answer: "With life-breath shall be quickened [Paghat], She who observes the water, Who studies the dew from the drip,"—

Who knows the courses of the stars. With life-breath she is invigorated. She'll slay the slayer [of her brother], Destroy the destroyer of [her] sibling."

In the sea she bat[hes], And stains herself red with murex, She emerges, dons a youth's raiment, Puts a [nife] in her sheath, A sword she puts in her scabbard, And o'er all dons woman's garb.

At the rising of Gods' Torch Shapshe, Paghat... At the set[ting] of Gods' Torch Shapshe, Paghat arrives at the tents. Word [is b]rought to Yat[pan]: "Our hired woman has entered thy fields, [...] has entered the t(e)nts."

And Yatpan the Drunken Soldier makes answer: "Take her and let her give me wine to drink. [Let her place] the cup in my hand, The goblet in my right hand."

Paghat [t]akes and gives him drink: P[aces the cup] in his hand, The goblet in his right hand. Then spake Yat[pa]n the Drun[ken] [Soldier]: (one and one-half lines partly defective and obscure) "The hand that slew [Aqha]t the Youth Can slay thousands of foes."

(A second time she gives the mixture to him to drink, Gives the mixture to drink (224) (Direction to the reciter, along the edge to the left of 172-186:)

Here one proceeds to tell about the daughter. (The story, continuing on one or more missing tablets, no doubt went on to relate that [a] Paghat killed Yatpan while he lay unconscious in the arms of Bacchus, and [b] between El's pity and Anath's remorse some modus was found for restoring Aqhat to his father, perhaps only for half—the fertile half—of the year. The familiar Adonis-Tammuz theme.)

41 The sun-goddess.
II. Legal Texts
Collections of Laws from Mesopotamia and Asia Minor

Lipit-Ishtar Lawcode

(Translator: S. N. Kramer)

Like the Hammurabi Code, that of Lipit-Ishtar consists of three main sections: a Prologue; the legal text proper consisting of a large number of laws introduced by a Sumerian complex which is roughly the equivalent of the English word "if": an Epilogue. The Prologue begins with a statement by King Lipit-Ishtar, the fifth ruler of the Dynasty of Isin, that after the leading Sumero-Babylonian deities Anu and Enlil had given the goddess Ninisinna, a favorable reign in her city Isin, and after they had called him, Lipit-Ishtar, "to the princeship of the land" in order "to bring well-being to the Sumerians and the Akkadians," he established justice in Sumer and Akkad. He then cites some of his achievements in regard to the welfare of his subjects: he freed "the sons and daughters of Sumer and Akkad" from slavery which had been imposed upon them; he re-established equitable family practices. The end of the Prologue unfortunately is destroyed; so, too, is the beginning of the legal text proper.

As for the legal body of the Lipit-Ishtar Code, the available text permits the restoration, wholly or in part, of some thirty-eight laws; practically all belong to the second half of the code, the first half being almost entirely destroyed. The subject matter treated in these laws is as follows: hiring of boats (laws 4 and 5); real estate, particularly orchards (laws 7-11); slaves and perhaps servants (laws 12-17); defaulting of taxes (law 18 and probably 19); inheritance and marriage (laws 20-33); rented oxen (34-37). Immediately following the last of the thirty-eight laws extant wholly or in part, follows the Epilogue: because of the numerous breaks in the text, the latter is only partially intelligible. It begins with a reiteration by Lipit-Ishtar that he established justice in the land, and that he brought well-being to its people. He then states that he had set up "this stela," that is the stela on which the original code was inscribed, and proceeds to bless those who will not damage it in any way, and to curse those who will.

The text of the code is reconstructed from seven clay tablets and fragments. Four of these are "excerpt tablets," that is, they are one- or two-column tablets which did not contain the entire code, but only small parts of it excerpted for scribal purposes. The remaining three pieces are all parts of a large, probably twenty-column tablet, which in its original state had contained the entire law code, including Prologue and Epilogue. Six of the seven tablets and fragments were excavated at Nippur and are now in the University Museum; one, of unknown provenience, is in the Louvre. All seven pieces date from the Early Post-Sumerian period, that is, they were actually inscribed sometime in the first half of the second millennium B.C. As for the first compilation of the code, it must have taken place sometime during the eleven-year reign of Lipit-Ishtar, who ruled probably during the first half of the nineteenth century B.C.; it thus antedates the Hammurabi Code by more than a century and a half. A scientific edition of the available text of the code, including copies of the unpublished material in the University Museum, was published by Francis R. Steele in A.J.A. 52 (1948), pp. 425-450; there, too, the relevant earlier studies are cited.* The present translation follows the Steele publication throughout.

Prologue

[When] the great [Anu, the father of the gods, (and) [En]lil, [the king of all the land],s, [the lord who determines destin]ies, had . . . d to [Nini]sinna, [the daughter of A]nu the . . . for her . . . (and) the rejoicing . . . for her bright [forehead]; when they had giv[en h]er the kingship of Sumer (and) Akkad (and) a favora-ble reign in her (city) Isin, the . . . established by Anu; when Anu (and) Enlil had called Lipit-Ishtar—Lipit-Ishtar, the wise shepherd whose name had been pronounced by Nunamnir—to the princeship of the land in order to establish justice in the land, to banish complaints, to turn back enmity and rebellion by the force of arms, (and) to bring well-being to the Sumerians and Akkadians, then I, Lipit-Ishtar, the humble shepherd of Nippur, the stalwart farmer of Ur, who aban-dons not Eridu, the suitable lord of Erech, [king] of [I]sin, [kin]g of Sum[er and Akkad], who am f[it] for the heart of Inanna, [established [just]tice in [Su]mer and Akkad in accordance with the word of Enil. Verily, in those [days] I procured . . . the [free-dom of the] [so]ns and daughters of [Nippur], the [so]ns and daughters of Ur, the sons and daughters of [I]sin, the [so]ns and daughters of [Sum]er (and) Akkad upon whom . . . slaveship . . . had been imposed. Verily, in accordance with . . . I made the father sup-port his children (and) I made the children [support] their [father]; I made the father sta\nd by his childre[n] and I made the children stand by their father; in the father's house (and) in the brother's house I . . . Verily, I, Lipit-Ishtar, the son of Enil, brought seventy into the father's house (and) the brother's house; into the bachelor's house I brought . . . for ten months. . . . the wife of a man, . . . the child of a man . . . /

The Laws

1: . . . which had been set up

*cf. also Steele's preliminary announcement in A.J.A. 52 (1947), 158-164.
* Nunamnir is another name for the god Enil; Lipit-Ishtar is frequently called "son of Enil" in the relevant hymnal literature.
* cf. preceding note.
* A break of more than two columns of text follows; at some point in this break the prologue ended and the laws began.
* Remainder of the column destroyed.
2: ... the property of the father's house from its...
3: ... the son of the state official, the son of the palace official, the son of the supervisor
4: ... a boat... a boat he shall....
5: If a man hired a boat (and) set it on a... journey for him
6: ... the gift... he shall....
7: If he gave his orchard to a gardener to raise... (and) the gardener... to the owner of the garden
8: If a man gave bare ground to (another) man to set out an orchard (and the latter) did not complete setting out that bare ground as an orchard, he shall give to the man who set out the orchard the bare ground which he neglected, as part of his share.
9: If a man entered the orchard of (another) man (and) was seized there for stealing, he shall pay ten shekels of silver.
10: If a man cut down a tree in the garden of (another) man, he shall pay one-half mina of silver.
11: If adjacent to the house of a man the bare ground of (another) man has been neglected and the owner of the house has said to the owner of the bare ground, "Because your ground has been neglected someone may break into my house; strengthen your house," this agreement has been confirmed by him, the owner of the bare ground shall restore to the owner of the house any of his property that is lost.
12: If a slave-girl or slave of a man has fled into the heart of the city (and) it has been confirmed that he (or she) dwelt in the house of (another) man for one month, he shall give slave for slave.
13: If he has no slave, he shall pay fifteen shekels of silver.
14: If a man's slave has compensated his slaveship to his master (and) it is confirmed (that he has compensated) his master twofold, that slave shall be freed.
15: If a miqtum* is a grant of the king, he shall not be taken away.
16: If a miqtum went to a man of his own free will, that man shall not hold him; he (the miqtum) may go where he desires.
17: If a man without authorization bound (another) man to a matter to which he (the latter) had no knowledge, that man is not affirmed; he (the first man) shall bear the penalty in regard to the matter to which he has bound him.*
18: If the master of an estate or the mistress of an estate has defaulted on the tax of the estate (and) a stranger has borne it, for three years he (the owner) may not be evicted. (Afterwards) the man who bore the tax of the estate shall possess that estate and the (former) owner of the estate shall not raise any claim.
19: If the master of an estate...
20: If a man from the heir(s) seized. . .
21: the house of the father . . . he [married], the gift of the house of her father which was presented to her as her heir he shall take.
22: If the father (is) living, his daughter whether she be an entu* a naqritu,* or a hierodule, shall dwell in his house like an heir.
23: If the daughter in the house of (her) living father
24: [If the second wife] whom [he had] married bore him [child]ren, the dowry which she brought from her father's house belongs to children, (but) the children of (his) first wife and the children of (his) second wife shall divide equally the property of their father.
25: If a man married a wife (and) she bore him children and those children are living, and a slave also bore children for her master (but) the father granted freedom to the slave and her children, the children of the slave shall not divide the estate with the children of their (former) master.
26: [If his first wife di]ed (and) [after] her (death) he takes his [slave] as a wife, the [children] of [his first] wife [are his heirs]; the children which [the slave] bore for her master shall be like . . . , his house they shall...
27: If a man's wife has not borne him children (but) a harlot (from) the public square has borne him children, he shall provide grain, oil, and clothing for that harlot; the children which the harlot has borne him shall be his heirs, and as long as his wife lives the harlot shall not live in the house with his wife.
28: If a man has turned his face away from his first wife . . . (but) she has not gone out of the [house], his wife which he married as his favorite is a second wife; he shall continue to support his first wife.
29: If a son-in-law has entered the house of his (prospective) father-in-law (and) he made his betrothal (but) afterwards they made him go out (of the house) and gave his wife to his companion, they shall present to him the betrothal-gifts which he brought (and) that wife may not marry his companion.
30: If a young married man married a harlot (from) the public square (and) the judges have ordered him not to visit her, (but) afterwards he divorced his wife, money
31: . . . he has given him, after their father's death the heirs shall divide the estate of their father (but) the inheritance of the estate they shall not divide; they shall not "cook their father's word in water."*
The Laws of Eshnunna

(Translator: Albrecht Goetze)

Texts: Iraq Museum 51059 and 52614 excavated at Tell Abu Harmal1 near Baghdad by the Iraq Directorate of Antiquities in Pre-Hammurabi layers.

1: i kor of barley is (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 3 qa of "best oil" are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 1 seah (and) 2 qa of sesame oil are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 1 seah (and) 5 qa of lard are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 4 seah of "river oil" are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 6 minas of wool are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 2 kor of salt are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 1 kor . . . is (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 3 minas of copper are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver; 2 minas of refined copper are (priced) at 1 shekel of silver.

2: 1 qa of sesame oil la nishâtim—its (value in) barley is 3 seah; 1 qa of lard la nishâtim—its (value in) barley is 2 seah and 5 qa of "river oil" la nishâtim—its (value in) barley is 8 qa.

3: The hire for a wagon together with its oxen and its driver is 1 pan (and) 4 seah of barley. If it is (paid in) silver, the hire is one third of a shekel. He shall drive it the whole day.

4: The hire for a boat is 2 qa per kor (of capacity), 1 seah 1 qa is the hire for the boatman. He shall drive it the whole day.

5: If the boatman is negligent and causes the sinking of the boat, he shall pay in full for everything the sinking of which he caused.

6: If a man . . . takes possession of a boat (which is) not his, he shall pay 10 shekels of silver.

7: The wages of a harvester are 2 seah of barley; if they are (paid in) silver, his wages are 12 grain.

8: The wages of winnowers are 1 seah of barley.

Epilogue

Verily in accordance with the t[ru]e word of Utu, I caused [Su]mer and Akkad to hold to true justice. Verily in accordance with the pronouncement of Enlil, I, Lipit-Ishtar, the son of Enlil,26 abolished enmity and rebellion; made weeping, lamentations, outri[es . . .

1: Eldest son" is expressed here by the words "son, big brother." 22: About 17 lines destroyed.

23: About 10 lines missing.

24: Enlil’s main temple in Nippur.

25: About 7 lines destroyed.

26: Ashnan is the goddess of grain and Sumugan is the god of the "plain." 27: In more exact language "the lords" should read "the lady and the lord." 28: About 22 lines destroyed.

29: Ninurta, the son of Enlil, is the god of the South Wind; for some of the heroic feats ascribed to him, cf. SM, 79-82.

30: Probably only a few lines missing.
9: Should a man pay 1 shekel of silver to a hired man for harvesting—if he (the hired man) does not place himself at his disposal and does not complete for him the harvest work everywhere, he shall pay 10 shekels of silver. Should he have received 1 seah (and) 5 qa (of barley) as wages and leave the rations of [barley], oil (and) cloth* shall also be refunded.

10: The hire for a donkey is 1 seah of barley, and the wages for its driver are 1 seah of barley. He shall drive it the whole day.

11: The wages of a hired man are 1 shekel of silver; his provender is 1 pan of barley. He shall work for one month.

12: A man who is caught in the field of a mul*enum* in the crop during daytime, shall pay 10 shekels of silver. He who is caught in the crop [at night], shall die, he shall not get away alive.

13: A man who is caught in the house of a mul*enum*, in the house, during daytime, shall pay 10 shekels of silver. He who is caught in the house at night, shall die, he shall not get away alive.

14: The fee of a . . —should he bring 5 shekels of silver the fee is 1 shekel of silver; should he bring 10 shekels of silver the fee is 2 shekels of silver.

15: The tam*enum* and the sabitum* shall not receive silver, barley, wool (or) sesame oil from a slave or a slave-girl as an investment.

16: To a coparcener or a slave a mortgage cannot be furnished.

17: Should the son of a man bring bride-money to the house of (his) father-in-law—, if one of the two deceases, the money shall revert to its owner.

18: If he takes her (the girl) and she enters his house, but afterward the young woman should decease, he (the husband) can not obtain refunded that which he brought (to his father-in-law), but will retain the excess (in his hand).

18A: Per 1 shekel (of silver) there will accrue 1/6 shekel and 6 grain as interest; per 1 kor (of barley) there will accrue 1 pan and 4 seah as interest.

19: The man who gives (a loan) in terms of his retake shall make (the debtor) pay on the threshing floor.

20: If a man gives a loan . . expressing the value of the silver in barley, he shall at harvest time receive the barley and its interest, 1 pan (and) 4 (?) seah per kor.

21: If a man gives silver (as a loan) at face value, he shall receive the silver and its interest, one sixth (of a shekel) and [6 grain] per shekel.

22: If a man has no claim against a(nother) man, but (nevertheless) distrains the (other) man's slave-girl, the owner of the slave-girl shall [decla]re under oath: "Thou hast no claim against me" and he shall pay (him) silver in full compensation for the slave-girl.

23: If a man has no claim against a(nother) man, but (nevertheless) distrains the (other) man’s slave-girl, detains the distrainee in his house and causes (her) death, he shall give two slave-girls to the owner of the slave-girl as a replacement.

24: If he has no claim against him, but (nevertheless) distrains the wife of a mul*enum* or the child of a mul*enum* and causes (their) death, it is a capital offence. The distrainer who distrained shall die.

25: If a man calls at the house of (his) father-in-law, and his father-in-law accepts him in servitude, but (nevertheless) gives his daughter to [another man], the father of the girl shall refund the bride-money which he received twofold.

26: If a man gives bride-money for a(nother) man's daughter, but another man seizes her forcibly without asking the permission of her father and her mother and deprives her of her virginity, it is a capital offence and he shall die.

27: If a man takes a(nother) man's daughter without asking the permission of her father and her mother and concludes no formal marriage contract with her father and her mother, even though she may live in his house for a year, she is not a housewife.

28: On the other handy if he concludes a formal contract with her father and her mother and cohabits with her, she is a housewife. When she is caught with a(nother) man, she shall die, she shall not get away alive.

29: If a man has been made prisoner during a raid or an invasion or (if) he has been carried off forcibly and [stayed in] a foreign [count]ry for a [long] time, (and) if another man has taken his wife and she has born him a son—when he returns, he shall [get] his wife back.

30: If a man hates his town and his lord and becomes a fugitive, (and if) another man takes his wife—when he returns, he shall have no right to claim his wife.

31: If a man deprives another man's slave-girl of her virginity, he shall pay one-third of a mina of silver; the slave-girl remains the property of her owner.

32: If a man gives his son (away) for having (him) nursed and brought up, but does not give (the nurse) rations of barley, oil (and) wool for three years, he shall pay (her) 10 minas (of silver) for bringing up his son and shall take back his son.

33: If a slave-girl by subterfuge gives her child to a(nother) man's daughter, (if) its lord sees it when he returns, he shall provide for it.

34: If a slave-girl of the palace gives her son or her daughter to a mul*enum* for bringing (him/her) up, the palace may take back the son or the daughter whom she gave.

35: Also the adoptant of the child of a slave-girl of the palace shall recompense the palace with its equivalent.

* The last sentence is contained only in IM 51059.
36: If a man gives property of his as a deposit to... and if the property he gives disappears without that the house was burglarized, the sippu broken down (or) the window forced, he (the depositary) will replace his (the depositor's) property.

37: If the man's (the depositary's) house either collapses or is burglarized and together with the (property of the) deposit (or) which he gave him loss on the part was lost; I have done nothing.

38: If one of several brothers wants to sell his share (in a property common to them) and his brother wants to buy it, he shall pay 12

39: If a man is hard up and sells his house, the owner of the house shall swear him an oath in the gate of Tishpak: "Together with your property my property was lost; I have done nothing improper or fraudulent." If he swears him (such an oath), he shall have no claim against him.

40: If a man buys a slave, a slave-girl, an ox or any other valuable good but cannot (legally) establish the seller, he is a thief.

41: If an ubarum, a naptarum or a mud urur wants to sell his beer, the sabtium wants to sell the beer for him at the current price.

42: If a man bites the nose of a(nother) man and severs it, he shall pay 1 mina of silver. (For) an eye (he shall pay) 1 mina of silver; (for) a tooth 1/2 mina; (for) an ear 1/2 mina; (for) a slap in the face 10 shekels of silver.

43: If a man severs a(nother) man's finger, he shall pay two-thirds of a mina of silver.

44: If a man throws a(nother) man to the floor in an altercation and breaks his hand, he shall pay 1/2 mina of silver.

45: If he breaks his foot, he shall pay 1/2 mina of silver.

46: If a man assaults a(nother) man and breaks his... he shall pay two-thirds of a mina of silver.

47: If a man hits a(nother) man accidentally, he shall pay 10 shekels of silver.

48: And in addition, (in cases involving penalties) from two-thirds of a mina to 1 mina, they shall formally try the man. A capital offence comes before the king.

49: If a man is caught with a stolen slave (or) a stolen slave-girl, he shall surrender slave by slave (and) slave-girl by slave-girl.

50: If the governor, the river commissioner (or) another official whoever it may be seizes a lost slave, a lost slave-girl, a lost ox, a lost donkey belonging to the palace or a mulšum and does not surrender it to Eshnunna but keeps it in his house, even though he may let pass only seven days, the palace shall prosecute him for theft.

51: A slave or a slave-girl of Eshnunna which is marked with a kannum, a malšum or an abbuttum shall not leave the gate of Eshnunna without its owner's permission.

52: A slave or a slave-girl which has entered the gate of Eshnunna in the custody of a (foreign) envoy shall be marked with a kannum, a malšum or an abbuttum but remains in the custody of its master.

53: If an ox.gores an (other) ox and causes (its) death, both ox owners shall divide (among themselves) the price of the live ox and also the meat of the dead ox.

54: If an ox is known to gore habitually and the authorities have brought the fact to the knowledge of its owner, but he does not have his ox dehorned, it gores a man and causes (his) death, then the owner of the ox shall pay two-thirds of a mina of silver.

55: If it gores a slave and causes (his) death, he shall pay 15 shekels of silver.

56: If a dog is vicious and the authorities have brought the fact to the knowledge of its owner, (if nevertheless) he does not keep it in, it bites a man and causes (his) death, then the owner of the dog shall pay two-thirds of a mina of silver.

57: If it bites a slave and causes (its) death, he shall pay 15 shekels of silver.

58: If a wall is threatening to fall and the authorities have brought the fact to the knowledge of its owner, (if nevertheless) he does not strengthen his wall, the wall collapses and causes a free man's death, then it is a capital offence; jurisdiction of the king.

59: If a man divorces his wife after having made her bear children and takes [ano]ther wife, he shall be driven from his house and from whatever he owns and may go after him who will accept him.

(60 and 61 badly mutilated and therefore incomprehensible)

The Code of Hammurabi

(Translator: Theophile J. Meek)

Hammurabi (also spelled Hammurapi) was the sixth of eleven kings in the Old Babylonian (Amorite) Dynasty. He ruled for 43 years, from 1728 to 1686 according to the most recent calculations. The date-formula for his second year, "The year he enacted the law of the land," indicates that he promulgated his famous lawcode at the very beginning of his reign, but the copy which we have could not have been written so early because the Prologue refers to events much later than this. Our copy was written on a diorite stela, topped by a bas-relief showing Hammurabi in the act of receiving the commission to write the lawbook from the god of justice, the sun-god Shamash. The stela

10 A part of the house at or near the door.
11 The main god of Eshnunna.
12 This expression, not yet fully understood, seems to imply a preferential treatment.
13 Social classes who seem to be entided to a ration of beer.
14 See n.8.
15 See n.5.
16 Markings that can easily be removed.
17 For the most recent discussion, fully documented, see R. P. R. de Vaux, RB, LIX (1949), 328 ff.; also P. van der Meer, The Ancient Chronology of Western Asia and Egypt (1947). F. Cornelius, Klio, xxxv (1942), 1 ff.; B. L. van der Waerden, JBO, x (1946), 414 ff. was carried off to the old Elamite capital, Susa (the Shushan of Esther and Daniel), by some Elamite raider (apparently Shutruk-Nahhunte, about 1207-1171 B.C.) as a trophy of war. It was discovered there by French archaeologists in the winter of 1901-1902 and was carried off by them to the Louvre in Paris as a trophy of archaeology. All the laws from col. xvi 77 to the end of the obverse (from the end of §65 to the beginning of §100) were chiseled off by the Elamites, but these have been preserved in large part on other copies of the Code. The Prologue and Epilogue are written in semi-poetic style, marked by parallelism but not by regular metrical structure.

The Prologue

(i)

When lofty Anum,² king of the Anunnaki,⁸ (and) Enlil,⁴ lord of heaven and earth, the determiner of the destinies of the land, determined for Marduk,® the first-born of Enki,* (10) the Enlil functions over all mankind, made him great among the Igigi,³ called Babylon by its exalted name, made it supreme in the world, established for him in its midst an enduring kingship, (20) whose foundations are as firm as heaven and earth—at that time Anum and Enlil named me to promote the welfare of the people/me, Hammurabi, the devout, god-fearing prince, (30) to cause justice to prevail in the land, to destroy the wicked and the evil, that the strong might not oppress the weak, to rise like the sun over the black-headed (people),⁸ (40) and to light up the land.

² The sky-god, the leader of the pantheon, worshiped especially in the temple of Eanna in Uruk along with the goddess Isnanna.
³ In this inscription the Anunnaki are the lesser gods attendant upon Anum and the Igigi are the lesser gods attendant on Enlil.
⁴ The storm-god, the chief executive of the pantheon, worshiped especially in the temple of Ekar in Nippur in central Babylonia, modern Niffer.
⁵ The son of Enki and consort of Sarpanit; the god of Babylon and in Hammurabi’s time the god of the Babylonian Empire with the functions of Enlil delegated to him; worshiped especially in the temple of Esagila in Babylon.
⁶ Lord of the earth and the mass of life-giving waters within it, issuing in streams and fountains; the father of Marduk; worshiped especially in the temple of Eabazu in Eridu, in southern Babylonia, modern Abu Shahrein.
⁷ Lit., “to make good the flesh of the people.”
⁸ The late-Sumerian expression for men in general.

Hammurabi, the shepherd, called by Enlil, aami; (50) the one who makes affluence and plenty abound; who provides in abundance all sorts of things for Nippur-Duranki,⁹ the devout patron of Ekur; (60) the efficient king, who restored Eridu⁸ to its place; (’) who purified the cult of Eabzu; who the one who strides through the four quarters of the world; who makes the name of Babylon great; who rejoices the heart of Marduk, his lord; the one who throughout his lifetime stands responsible for Esagila; (10) the descendant of royalty, whom Sin¹⁰ begat; the one who made Ur prosper; the pious, suppliant one, who brought abundance to Egishnugal; (20) the wise king, obedient to mighty Shamash;¹¹ the one who relaid the foundations of Sippar; who decked with green the chapels of Aya; the designer of the temple of Eabbar, which is like a heavenly dwelling; (30) the warrior, he who spared Larsa;¹² the one who rebuilt Eabbar for Shamash, his helper; the lord, who revived Uruk;¹³ who supplied water in abundance to its people; who raised aloft the head of Eanna; who made riches abound for Anum and Isnanna; the shelter of the land, who collected the scattered people of Isin;¹⁴ who makes the temple of Egalma abundant with affluence; the monarch of kings, full brother of Zababa;¹⁵ the refounder of the settlement of Kish, who has surrounded Emete-ursag with splendor; (60) the one who has put the great shrines of Inanna in perfect condition;

⁹ Duranki “bond of heaven and earth,” was a time-honored Sumerian name of Nippur, the cult-center of Enlil, whose temple was Ekur.
¹⁰ The moon-god, the son of Enli, father of Shamash, and consort of Ningal; worshiped especially in the temple of Egishnugal in Ur in southern Babylonia, modern Muqayyar.
¹¹ The sun-god and the god of justice, the consort of Aya, worshiped especially in the temple of Eabbar in Sippar in northern Babylonia, modern Abu Shabha.
¹² Another cult-center of Shamash, situated in southern Babylonia, modern Senkereh, with a temple also called Eabbar. The city was captured by Hammurabi in the 30th year of his reign and its powerful dynasty brought to an end with the dethronement of its king, Rim-Sin. This event is set down as the formula for Hammurabi’s 31st year, but the formula for the year always comes from an event in the preceding year; hence our year-numbers will be one less than those generally given.
¹³ An ancient and important city in southern Babylonia, the biblical Erech (Gen. 10:10), modern Warka, conquered by Hammurabi in the 6th year of his reign. It was the cult-center of Anum and Isnanna, with its temple Eanna.
¹⁴ A city south of Nippur in southern Babylonia, conquered by Rim-Sin of Larsa in his 29th year, and then by Hammurabi in the 4th year of his reign. It was the cult-center of Ninkarrak, with its temple Egalmah.
¹⁵ A form of Ninurta, worshiped especially in the temple of Emete-ursag in Kish, northeast of Babylon, modern Tell eT-Oheimir.
the patron of the temple of Hursag-kalamma;¹⁶
the terror of the enemy;
the one whom Erra,"⁷ his comrade, caused to attain his desire; (70)

(iii) who made Kutha preeminent;
who expanded every kind of facility for Meslam;
the fiery wild-bull who gores the foe;
the beloved of Tutu;¹⁸ the one who brings joy to Borsippa;
the devout one, never neglecting Ezida;
god among kings, acquainted with wisdom;
the one who extended the cultivated land belonging to Dilbat;¹⁹
who stores up grain for mighty Urash;
the lord, adorned with scepter and crown;
who laid out the plans for Kesh; (60)
who makes sumptuous the splendid banquets for Ninazu;
the solicitous, the perfect one,
who fixes the pastures and watering places for Lagash and Girsu,²¹ who provides bountiful sacrifices for Eninnu;
the one who seizes the foe; the favorite of Telitum;²² who fulfils the oracles of Hallab;²³ the one who makes the heart of Ishtar glad;
the illustrious prince, whose prayers²⁴ Adad²⁶ recognizes;
who pacifies the heart of Adad, the warrior, in Bet-karkar;
the king, who granted life to Adab;²⁷
the director of the temple of Emah;
the chief of kings, a fighter without peer; (70)

(iv) the one who granted life to Mashkan-shabrim;²⁸ who provides abundance for Meslam;
the wise one, the administrator;
the one who plumbed the depths of wisdom; (10)
the rescuer of the people of Mera and the devout prince, who brightens up the face of Tishpak;
the founder of dwelling places for them in abundance;
the one who prescribed for all time splendid sacrifices for Enki and Damgalnunna, (20) who made his kingdom great;
the first of kings;
the subduer of the settlements along the Euphrates with the help of Dagan,³⁰ his creator;
the one who spared the people of Mera and Tutul;³¹ the devout prince, who brightens up the face of Tishpak;
the provider of splendid banquets for Ninazu;³²
the savior of his people from distress, who establishes in security their portion in the midst of Babylon;
the shepherd of the people, whose deeds are pleasing to Ishtar;
who installed Ishtar in Eulmash in the midst of Akkad³³ square;
who makes law prevail; who guides the people aright;
who returned to Ashur³⁴ its kindly protecting genius;
who silences the growlers;
the king, who made the name of Inanna glorious in Nineveh³⁸ in Emishshum;
the devout one, who prays fervently to the great gods;
the descendant of Sumi-la-el;³⁶
the powerful son and heir³⁷ of Sin-muballit, (70)

(v) the ancient seed of royalty, the powerful king, the sun
of Babylon,
who causes light to go forth over the lands of Sumer and Akkad;³⁸
the king who has made the four quarters of the world subservient;
the favorite of Inanna am I.
When Marduk commissioned me to guide the people aright,
to direct the land,
I established law and justice in the language of the land,
thereby promoting the welfare of the people.
At that time (I decreed):

¹⁶ The temple of Inanna in Kish, where she was the consort of Zababa.
¹⁷ The god of pestilence and war, often identified with Nergal. His temple, Meslam, was in Kutha in northern Babylonia, modern Tell Ibrahim.
¹⁸ Strictly a title of Marduk, but here applied to his son Nabum, the god of writing. His cult-center was Borsippa, near Babylon, with its temple Ezida.
¹⁹ A city not far from Borsippa, the cult-center of the god Urash.
²⁰ A goddess worshiped in Kesh, near Lagash, in central Babylonia; also known as Nintu.
²¹ Lagash, modern Tello, and Girsu were twin cities in central Babylonia.
²² A title of Inanna.
²³ A city in Babylonia as yet unidentified; a cult-center of Ishtar.
²⁴ The Semitic name of Inanna.
²⁵ Lit., "the lifting up of whose hands."
²⁶ The weather-god, whose temple was Eudgalgal in Bet-karkar, a city as yet unidentified.
²⁷ A city on the Euphrates in central Babylonia, modern Bismaya. Its deity was Mah and her temple was Emah.
²⁸ A city not far from Adad, modern Dshahr.
²⁹ A city apparently on the middle Euphrates, conquered by Hammurabi in the 9th year of his reign and punished for a revolt in his 34th year. It was the seat of Enki and his consort Damgalnunna, also known as Damkina, the mother of Marduk.
³⁰ The Dagon of the Bible; a west Semitic grain-god, early imported into Mesopotamia and worshiped chiefly along the middle Euphrates.
³¹ Two cities on the middle Euphrates. Mera may possibly be Mari, morden Tell Hariri, conquered by Hammurabi in his 32nd year.
³² The god of medicine, worshiped particularly at Eshnunna in his temple
Eukil. Tishpak was the chief god of Eshnunna.
³³ An ancient city of northern Babylonia, founded by Sargon the Great as his capital; a seat of Ishtar, with her temple Eulmash.
³⁴ The name of Assyria, of its ancient capital, modern Qal`at Shergat, on the upper Tigris, and of its national god. It is manifestly the city that is intended here.
³⁵ The later capital of Assyria on the upper Tigris, modern Kouyunjik, an important seat of Inanna, with her temple Emishshum.
³⁶ The second king of the Old Babylonian Dynasty.
³⁷ "Son and heir," a single word in Babylonian.
³⁸ Sumer was the ancient name of southern Babylonia and Akkad of northern Babylonia, the two together constituting a common name of the country as a whole.
The Laws

1: If a seignior accused a(nother) seignior and brought a charge of murder against him, but has not proved it, his accuser shall be put to death.43

2: If a seignior brought a charge of sorcery against a(nother) seignior, but has not proved it, the one against whom the charge of sorcery was brought, upon going to the river,44 shall throw himself into the river, and if the river has then overpowered him, his accuser shall take over his estate; if the river has shown that seignior to be innocent and he has accordingly come forth safe, the one who brought the charge of sorcery against him shall be put to death, while the one who threw himself into the river shall take over the estate of his accuser.

3: If a seignior came forward with false testimony in a case, and has not proved the word which he spoke, if that case was a case involving life, that seignior shall be put to death.

4: If he came forward with (false) testimony concerning grain or money, he shall bear the penalty of that case.

5: If a judge gave a judgment, rendered a decision, deposited a sealed document, but later has altered his judgment, they shall prove that that judge altered the judgment which he gave and he shall pay twelvefold the claim which holds in that case; furthermore, they shall expel him in the assembly from his seat of judgment and he shall never again sit with the judges in a case.

6: If a seignior stole the property of church or state,45 that seignior shall be put to death; also the one who received the stolen goods from his hand shall be put to death.

7: If a seignior has purchased or he received for safekeeping either silver or gold or a male slave or a female slave or an ox or a sheep or an ass or any sort of thing from the hand of a seignior's son or a seignior's slave without witnesses and contracts, since that seignior is a thief, he shall be put to death.

8: If a seignior stole either an ox or a sheep or an ass or a pig or a boat, if it belonged to the church (or) if it belonged to the state, he shall make thirtyfold restitution; if it belonged to a private citizen,46 he shall make good tenfold. If the thief does not have sufficient to make restitution, he shall be put to death.47

9: When a seignior, (some of) whose property was lost, has found his lost property in the possession of a(nother) seignior, if the seignior in whose possession the lost (property) was found has declared, "A seller sold (it) to me; I made the purchase in the presence of witnesses," and the owner of the lost (property) in turn has declared, "I will produce witnesses attesting to my lost (property)"; the purchaser having then produced the seller who made the sale to him and the witnesses in whose presence he made the purchase, and the owner of the lost (property) having also produced the witnesses attesting to his lost (property), the judges shall consider their evidence, and the witnesses in whose presence the purchase was made, along with the witnesses attesting to the lost (property), shall declare what they know in the presence of god, and since the seller was the thief, he shall be put to death, while the owner of the lost (property) shall take his lost property.

10: If the (professed) purchaser has not produced the seller who made the sale to him and the witnesses in whose presence he made the purchase, but the owner of the lost property has produced witnesses attesting to his lost property, since the (professed) purchaser was the thief, he shall be put to death, while the owner of the lost property shall take his lost property.

11: If the (professed) owner of the lost property has not produced witnesses attesting to his lost property, since he was a cheat and started a false report, he shall be put to death.

12: If the seller has gone to (his) fate, the purchaser shall take from the estate of the seller fivefold the claim for that case.

13: If the witnesses of that seignior were not at hand, the judges shall set a time-limit of six months for him, and if he did not produce his witnesses within six months, since that seignior was a cheat, he shall bear the penalty of that case.

14: If a seignior has stolen the young son of a(nother) seignior, he shall be put to death.47

15: If a seignior has helped either a male slave of the state or a female slave of the state or a male slave of a private citizen or a female slave of a private citizen to escape through the city-gate, he shall be put to death.

16: If a seignior has harbored in his house either a fugitive male or female slave belonging to the state or to a private citizen and has not brought him forth at the summons of the police, that householder shall be put to death.

17: If a seignior caught a fugitive male or female slave in the open and has taken him to his owner, the owner of the slave shall pay him two shekels of silver.

18: If that slave has not named his owner, he shall take him to the palace in order that his record may be investigated, and they shall return him to his owner.

19: If he has kept that slave in his house (and) later the slave has been found in his possession, that seignior shall be put to death.

20: If the slave has escaped from the hand of his captor, that seignior shall (so) affirm by god to the owner of the slave and he shall then go free.

21: If a seignior made a breach in a house, they shall put him to death in front of that breach and wall him in.

22: If a seignior committed robbery and has been caught, that seignior shall be put to death.

23: If the robber has not been caught, the robbed seignior shall set forth the particulars regarding his lost property in the presence of god and the city and governor, in whose territory and district the robbery was committed, shall make good to him his lost property.

24: If it was a life (that was lost), the city and governor shall pay one mina of silver to his people.

25: If fire broke out in a seignior’s house and a seignior, who went to extinguish (it), cast his eye on the goods of the owner of the house and has appropriated the goods of the owner of the house, that seignior shall be thrown into that fire.

26: If either a private soldier or a commissary, whose despatch on a campaign of the king was ordered, did not go or he hired a substitute and has sent (him) in his place, that soldier or commissary shall be put to death, while the one who was hired by him shall take over his estate.

27: In the case of either a private soldier or a commissary who was carried off while in the armed service of the king, if after his (disappearance) they gave his field and orchard to another and he has looked after his feudal obligations—if he has returned and reached his city, they shall restore his field and orchard to him and he shall himself look after his feudal obligations.

28: In the case of either a private soldier or a commissary, who was carried off while in the armed service of the king, if his son is able to look after the feudal obligations, the field and orchard shall be given to him and he shall look after the feudal obligations of his father.

29: If his son is so young that he is not able to look after the feudal obligations of his father, one-third of the field and orchard shall be given to his mother in order that his mother may rear him.

30: If either a private soldier or a commissary gave up his field, orchard and house on account of the feudal obligations and has then absented himself, (and) after his (departure) another took over his field, orchard and house and has looked after the feudal obligations for three years—if he has returned and demands his field, orchard and house, they shall not be given to him; the one who has taken over and looked after his feudal obligations shall himself become the feudatory.

31: If he has absented himself for only one year and has returned, his field, orchard and house shall be given back to him and he shall look after his feudal obligations himself.

32: If a merchant has ransomed either a private soldier or a commissary, who was carried off in a campaign of the king, and has enabled him to reach his city, if there is sufficient to ransom (him) in his house, he himself shall ransom himself; if there is not sufficient to ransom him in his house, he shall be ransomed from the estate of his city-god; if there is not sufficient to ransom him in the estate of his city-god, the state shall ransom him, since his own field, orchard and house may not be ceded for his ransom.

33: If either a sergeant or a captain has obtained a soldier by conscription or he accepted and has sent a hired substitute for a campaign of the king, that sergeant or captain shall be put to death.

34: If either a sergeant or a captain has appropriated the household goods of a soldier, has wronged a soldier, has let a soldier for hire, has abandoned a soldier to a superior in a lawsuit, has appropriated the grant which the king gave to a soldier, that sergeant or captain shall be put to death.

35: If a seignior has bought from the hand of a soldier the cattle or sheep which the king gave to the soldier, he shall forfeit his money.

36: In no case is the field, orchard, or house belonging to a soldier, a commissary, or a feudatory salable.

37: If a seignior has purchased the field, orchard, or house belonging to a soldier, a commissary, or a feudatory, his contract-tablet shall be broken and he shall also forfeit his money, with the field, orchard, or house reverting to its owner.

38: In no case may a soldier, a commissary, or a feudatory deed any of his field, orchard, or house belonging

49 A weight of about 8 gr.
51 A weight of about 300 gr., divided into 60 shekels.
52 With §§23 and 24 cf. Deut. 21:1 ff.
53 The exact meaning of these two military terms, fidum and bairum, is uncertain. The former means literally “follower” and is regularly used for the ordinary foot-soldier; the latter means literally “fisher, hunter,” hence “commissary” here.
54 Lit., “hireling.”
to his fief to his wife or daughter, and in no case may he assign (them) for an obligation of his.

39: He may deed to his wife or daughter any of the field, orchard, or house which he purchases and accordingly owns, and he may assign (them) for an obligation of his.

40: A hierodule, a merchant, and a feudatory extraordinary may sell his field, orchard and house, with the purchaser assuming the feudal obligations of the field, orchard and house which he purchases.

41: If a seignior acquired by barter the field, orchard, or house belonging to a soldier, a commissary, or a feudatory, and also made an additional payment, the soldier, commissary, or feudatory shall repossess his field, orchard, or house, and he shall also keep the additional payment that was made to him.

42: If a seignior rented a field for cultivation, but has not produced grain in the field, they shall prove that he did no work on the field and he shall give grain to the owner of the field on the basis of those adjoining it.

43: If he did not cultivate the field, but has neglected (it), he shall give grain to the owner of the field on the basis of those adjoining it; furthermore, the field which he neglected he shall break up with mattocks, harrow and return to the owner of the field.

44: If a seignior rented a fallow field for three years for development, but became so lazy that he has not developed the field, in the fourth year he shall break up the field with mattocks, plow and harrow (it), and he shall return (it) to the owner of the field; furthermore, he shall measure out ten \( \text{annu} \) of grain per eighteen

45: If a seignior let his field to a tenant and has already received the rent of his field, (and) later Adad has inundated the field or a flood has ravaged (it), the loss shall be the tenant's.

46: If he has not received the rent of the field, whether he let the field for one-half or one-third (the crop), the tenant and the owner of the field shall divide proportionately the grain which is produced in the field.

47: If the tenant has asked (another) to cultivate the field because he did not get back his investment in the previous year, the owner of the field shall not object; his (new) tenant shall cultivate his field and at harvest-time he shall take grain in accordance with his contracts.

48: If a debt is outstanding against a seignior and Adad has inundated his field or a flood has ravaged (it) or through lack of water grain has not been produced in the field, he shall not make any return of grain to his creditor in that year; he shall cancel his contract-tablet and he shall pay no interest for that year.

49: When a seignior borrowed money from a merchant and pledged to the merchant a field prepared for grain or sesame, if he said to him, " Cultivate the field, then harvest (and) take the grain or sesame that is produced," if the tenant has produced grain or sesame in the field, the owner of the field at harvest-time shall himself take the grain or sesame that was produced in the field and he shall give to the merchant grain for his money, which he borrowed from the merchant, together with its interest, and also for the cost of cultivation.

50: If he pledged a field planted with (grain) or a field planted with sesame, the owner of the field shall himself take the grain or sesame that was produced in the field and he shall pay back the money with its interest to the merchant.

51: If he does not have the money to pay back, (grain or) sesame at their market value in accordance with the ratio fixed by the king he shall give to the merchant for his money, which he borrowed from the merchant, together with its interest.

52: If the tenant has not produced grain or sesame in the field, he may not change his contract.

53: If a seignior was too lazy to make the dike of his field strong and did not make his dike strong and a break has opened up in his dike and he has accordingly let the water ravage the farmland, the seignior in whose dike the break was opened shall make good the grain that he let get destroyed.

54: If he is not able to make good the grain, they shall sell him and his goods, and the farmers whose grain the water carried off shall divide (the proceeds).

55: If a seignior, upon opening his canal for irrigation, became so lazy that he has let the water ravage a field adjoining his, he shall measure out grain on the basis of those adjoining his.

56: If a seignior opened up the water and then has let the water carry off the work done on a field adjoining his, he shall measure out ten \( |ur| \) of grain per eighteen \( |lu| \).

57: If a shepherd has not come to an agreement with the owner of a field to pasture sheep on the grass, but has pastured sheep on the field without the consent of the owner of the field, when the owner of the field harvests his field, the shepherd who pastured the sheep on the field without the consent of the owner of the field shall give in addition twenty \( |ur| \) of grain per eighteen \( |lu| \) to the owner of the field.

58: If after the sheep have gone up from the meadow, when the whole flock has been shut up within the city-gate, the shepherd drove the sheep into a field and has then pastured the sheep on the field, the shepherd shall look after the field on which he pastured and at harvest-time he shall measure out sixty ı̂ ur of grain per eighteen î ur to the owner of the field.

59: If a seignior cut down a tree in an orchard without the consent of the owner of the orchard, he shall pay one-half mina of silver.

60: If, when a seignior gave a field to a gardener to set out an orchard, the gardener set out the orchard, he shall develop the orchard for four years; in the fifth year the owner of the orchard and the gardener shall divide equally, with the owner of the orchard receiving his preferential share.

61: If the gardener did not set out the whole field, but left a portion bare, they shall assign the bare portion to him as his share.

62: If he did not set out the field that was given to him as an orchard, if it was a cultivated field, the gardener shall pay ı̂ ur to the owner of the field rent for the field for the years that it was neglected on the basis of those adjoining it; also he shall do the necessary work on the field and return (it) to the owner of the field.

63: If it was fallow land, he shall do the necessary work on the field and return (it) to the owner of the field; also he shall measure out ten ı̂ ur of grain per eighteen ı̂ ur for each year.

64: If a seignior gave his orchard to a gardener to pollinate, the gardener shall give to the owner of the orchard two-thirds of the produce of the orchard as rent of the orchard as long as the orchard is held, with himself taking one-third.

65: If the gardener did not pollinate the orchard and so has let the yield decline, the gardener shall give to the owner of the orchard two-thirds of the produce of the orchard as rent of the orchard as long as the orchard is held, with himself taking one-third.

66: When a seignior borrowed money from a merchant and his merchant foreclosed on him and he has nothing to pay (it) back, if he gave his orchard after pollination to the merchant and said to him, "Take for your money as many dates as there are produced in the orchard," that merchant shall not be allowed; the owner of the orchard shall himself take the dates that were produced in the orchard and repay the merchant for the money and its interest in accordance with the wording of his tablet and the owner of the orchard shall in turn take the remaining dates that were produced in the orchard.

67: If a seignior built a house, his neighbor shall give to him.

68: f.: (not preserved)

70: ... he shall give to him.

71: If he is giving grain, money, or goods for a fief estate belonging to an estate adjoining his, which he wishes to purchase, he shall forfeit whatever he paid, while the estate shall revert to its owner. If that estate does not carry feudal obligations, he may purchase (it), since he may give grain, money, or goods for such an estate.

72-77: (Only a few words preserved, having to do with house building.)

78: [If a seignior let a house to an orchard] the seignior (who was) the tenant paid his rental money in full for the year to the owner of the house, and the owner of the house has then said to the tenant while his term was (still) incomplete, "Move out," the owner of the house [shall forfeit] the money which the tenant paid to him [because] he made the tenant [move out] of his house while his term was (still) incomplete.

79-87: (not preserved)

88: If a merchant [lent] grain at interest, he shall receive sixty qu of grain per ı̂ ur as interest. If he lent money at interest, he shall receive one-sixth (shekel) six le (i.e. one-fifth shekel) per shekel of silver as interest.

89: If a seignior, who [incurred] a debt, does not have the money to pay (it) back, but has the grain, [the merchant] shall take grain for his money [with its interest] in accordance with the ratio fixed by the king.

90: If the merchant increased the interest beyond sixty qu per kur of grain (or) one-sixth (shekel) six le [per shekel of money] and has collected (it), he shall forfeit whatever he lent.

91: If a merchant [lent] grain at interest and has collected money [for the full interest] on the grain, the grain along with the money may not [be charged to the account].

92: (not preserved)

93: [If the merchant] ... or he has not had the full amount of grain [which he received] deducted and did not write a new contract, or he has added the interest to the principal, that merchant shall pay back double the full amount of grain that he received.

94: If a merchant lent grain or money at interest and when he lent (it) at interest he paid out the money by the small weight and the grain by the small measure, but when he got (it) back he got the money by the [large] weight (and) the grain by the large measure, [that merchant shall forfeit] whatever he lent.

95: If a [merchant lent grain or money] at interest and gave____, he shall forfeit whatever he lent.

96: If a seignior borrowed grain or money from a merchant and does not have the grain or money to pay (it) back, but has (other) goods, he shall give to his merchant whatever there is in his possession, (affirming) before witnesses that he will bring (it), while the merchant shall accept (it) without making any objections.

97: . . . he shall be put to death.

98: If a seignior gave money to a (nother) seignior for a partnership, they shall divide equally in the presence of god the profit or loss which was incurred.

99: If a merchant lent money at interest to a trader for the purpose of trading [and making purchases] and sent him out on the road, the trader shall . . . on the road [the money which was entrustted] to him.

100: If he has realized a profit where he went, he shall write down the interest on the full amount of money that he borrowed and they shall count up the days against him and he shall repay his merchant.

101: If he has not realized a profit where he went, the trader shall repay to the merchant double the money that he borrowed.

102: If a merchant has lent money to a trader as a favor and he has experienced a loss where he went, he shall pay back the principal of the money to the merchant.

103: If, when he went on the road, an enemy has made him give up whatever he was carrying, the trader shall (so) affirm by god and then he shall go free.

104: If a merchant lent grain, wool, oil, or any goods at all to a trader to retail, the trader shall write down the value and pay (it) back to the merchant, with the trader obtaining a sealed receipt for the money which he pays to the merchant.

105: If the trader has been careless and so has not obtained a sealed receipt for the money which he paid to the merchant, the money with no sealed receipt may not be credited to the account.

106: If a trader borrowed money from a merchant and has then disputed (the fact) with his merchant, that merchant in the presence of god and witnesses shall prove that the trader borrowed the money and the trader shall pay to the merchant threefold the full amount of money that he borrowed.

107: When a merchant entrusted (something) to a trader and the trader has returned to his merchant whatever the merchant gave him, if the merchant has then disputed with him whatever the trader gave him, that trader shall prove it against the merchant in the presence of god and witnesses and the merchant shall pay to the trader sixfold whatever he received because he had a dispute with his trader.

108: If a woman wine seller, instead of receiving grain for the price of a drink, has received money by the large weight and so has made the value of the drink less than the value of the grain, they shall prove it against that wine seller and throw her into the water.

109: If outlaws have congregated in the establishment of a woman wine seller and she has not arrested those oudaws and did not take them to the palace, that wine seller shall be put to death.

no: If a hierodule, a nun, who is not living in a convent, has opened (the door of) a wineshop or has entered a wineshop for a drink, they shall burn that woman.

111: If a woman wine seller gave one (flask) of pihum-drink on credit, she shall receive fifty qu of grain at harvest-time.

112: When a seignior was engaged in a (trading) journey and gave silver, gold, (precious) stones, or (other) goods in his possession to (another) seignior and consigned (them) to him for transport, if that seignior did not deliver whatever was to be transported where it was to be transported, but has appropriated (it), the owner of the goods to be transported shall prove the charge against that seignior in the matter of whatever was to be transported, but which he did not deliver, and that seignior shall pay to the owner of the goods to be transported fivefold whatever was given to him.

113: If a seignior held (a debt of) grain or money against a (nother) seignior and he has then taken grain from the granary or threshing floor without the consent of the owner of the grain, they shall prove that that seignior took grain from the granary or threshing floor without the consent of the owner of the grain and he shall return the full amount of grain that he took and he shall also forfeit everything else that he lent.

114: If a seignior did not hold (a debt of) grain or money against a (nother) seignior, but has distrained (someone as) his pledge, he shall pay one-third mina of silver for each distraint.

115: If a seignior held (a debt of) grain or money against a (nother) seignior and distrained (someone as) his pledge and the pledge has then died a natural death in the house of his distrainer, that case is not subject to claim.

116: If the pledge has died from beating or abuse in the house of his distrainer, the owner of the pledge shall prove it against his merchant, and if it was the seignior's son, they shall put his son to death; if it was the seignior's slave, he shall pay one-third mina of silver and also forfeit everything else that he lent.

117: If an obligation came due against a seignior and he sold (the services of) his wife, his son, or his daughter, or he has been bound over to service, they shall work (in) the house of their purchaser or obligee for 88 i.e. a traveling salesman peddling his wares wherever he could find a buyer.

89 Lit., "shall double and give to the merchant."

90 i.e. without interest.

91 A variant, DM v, No. 93, col. iv, lines 37-8, reads, "they shall bind that wine seller."
three years, with their freedom reestablished in the fourth year.\textsuperscript{91}

118: When a male slave or a female slave has been bound over to service, if the merchant foreclosed,\textsuperscript{92} he may sell (him), with no possibility of his being reclaimed.

119: If an obligation came due against a seignior and he has accordingly sold (the services of) his female slave who bore him children, the owner of the female slave may sell (him), with no possibility of his being redeemed.

120: If a seignior deposited his grain in (another) seignior's house for storage and a loss has then occurred at the granary or the owner of the house opened the storage-room and took grain or he has denied completely\textsuperscript{93} (the receipt of) the grain which was stored in his house, the owner of the grain shall set forth the particulars regarding his grain in the presence of god and the owner of the house shall give to the owner of the grain double the grain that he took.\textsuperscript{94}

121: If a seignior stored grain in (another) seignior's house, he shall pay five qu of grain per |ur of grain\textsuperscript{95} as the storage-charge per year.

122: If a seignior wishes to give silver, gold, or any sort of thing to (another) seignior for safekeeping, he shall show to witnesses the full amount that he wishes to give, arrange the contracts, and then commit (it) to safekeeping.

123: If he gave (it) for safekeeping without witnesses and contracts and they have denied (its receipt) to him at the place where he made the deposit, that case is not subject to claim.

124: If a seignior gave silver, gold, or any sort of thing for safekeeping to (another) seignior in the presence of witnesses and he has denied (the fact) to him, they shall prove it against that seignior and he shall pay double whatever he denied.

125: If a seignior deposited property of his for safekeeping and at the place where he made the deposit his property has disappeared along with the property of the owner of the house, either through breaking in or through scaling (the wall), the owner of the house, who was so careless that he let whatever was given to him for safekeeping get lost, shall make (it) good and make restitution to the owner of the goods, while the owner of the house shall make a thorough search for his lost property and take (it) from its thief.

126: If the seignior's property was not lost, but he has declared, "My property is lost," thus deceiving his city council,\textsuperscript{96} his city council shall set forth the facts regarding him in the presence of god, that his property was not lost, and he shall give to his city council double whatever he laid claim to.

127: If a seignior pointed the finger at a nun or the wife of (another) seignior, but has proved nothing, they shall drag that seignior into the presence of the judges and also cut off half his (hair).

128: If a seignior acquired a wife, but did not draw up the contracts for her, that woman is no wife.

129: If the wife of a seignior has been caught while lying with another man, they shall bind them and throw them into the water. If the husband\textsuperscript{97} of the woman wishes to spare his wife, then the king in turn may spare his subject.\textsuperscript{98}

130: If a seignior bound the (betrothed) wife of (another) seignior, who had had no intercourse with\textsuperscript{99} a male and was still living in her father's house, and he has lain in her bosom and they have caught him, that seignior shall be put to death, while that woman shall go free.\textsuperscript{100}

131: If a seignior's wife was accused by her husband,\textsuperscript{101} but she was not caught while lying with another man, she shall make affirmation by god and return to her house.

132: If the finger was pointed at the wife of a seignior because of another man, but she has not been caught while lying with the other man, she shall throw herself into the river\textsuperscript{102} for the sake of her husband.\textsuperscript{103}

133: If a seignior was taken captive, but there was sufficient to live on in his house, his wife [shall not leave her house, but she shall take care of her person by not] entering [the house of another].\textsuperscript{104}

133a: If that woman did not take care of her person, but has entered the house of another, they shall prove it against that woman and throw her into the water.\textsuperscript{105}

134: If the seignior was taken captive and there was not sufficient to live on in his house, his wife may enter the house of another, with that woman incurring no blame at all.

135: If, when a seignior was taken captive and there was not sufficient to live on in his house, his wife has then entered the house of another before his (return) and has borne children, (and) later her husband has returned and has reached his city, that woman shall return to her first husband, while the children shall go with their father.

136: If, when a seignior deserted his city and then ran away, his wife has entered the house of another after his (departure), if that seignior has returned and wishes to take back his wife, the wife of the fugitive shall not return to her husband because he scorned his city and ran away.

\textsuperscript{91} cf. Exod. 21:2-11; Deut 15:12-18.

\textsuperscript{92} Lit., "he caused (the time-limit) to expire."

\textsuperscript{93} Lit., "denied unto completeness."

\textsuperscript{94} cf. Exod. 22:7-9.

\textsuperscript{95} i.e. 1 2/3% since there were 300 qu in a |ur.

\textsuperscript{96} Lit. "owner, master."

\textsuperscript{97} Lit., "his slave." With this law cf. Deut 22:22.

\textsuperscript{98} Lit., "had not known."

\textsuperscript{100} Lit, "If with respect to a seignior's wife (casus pendens) her husband accused her."

\textsuperscript{101} i.e. to submit to the water ordeal, with the river as divine judge; cf. \textsuperscript{102}§2 above and note 41.

\textsuperscript{102} cf. Num. 5:11-31.

\textsuperscript{103} i.e. in order to live there as another man's wife.

\textsuperscript{104} i.e. to be drowned.
137: If a seignior has made up his mind to divorce a lay priestess, who bore him children, or a hierodule who provided him with children, they shall return her dowry to that woman and also give her half of the field, orchard and goods in order that she may rear her children; after she has brought up her children, from whatever was given to her children they shall give her a portion corresponding to (that of) an individual heir in order that the man of her choice may marry her.

138: If a seignior wishes to divorce his wife who did not bear him children, he shall give her money to the full amount of her marriage-price and he shall also make good to her the dowry which she brought from her father's house and then he may divorce her.

139: If there was no marriage-price, he shall give her one mina of silver as the divorce-settlement.

140: If he is a peasant, he shall give her one-third mina of silver.

141: If a seignior's wife, who was living in the house of the seignior, has made up her mind to leave in order that she may engage in business, thus neglecting her house (and) humiliating her husband, they shall prove it against her; and if her husband has then decided on her divorce, he may divorce her, with nothing to be given her as her divorce-settlement upon her departure. If her husband has not decided on her divorce, her husband may marry another woman, with the former woman living in the house of her husband like a maidservant.

142: If a woman so hated her husband that she has declared, "You may not have me," her record shall be investigated at her city council, and if she was careful and was not at fault, even though her husband has been going out and disparaging her greatly, that woman, without incurring any blame at all, may take her dowry and go off to her father's house.

143: If she was not careful, but was a gadabout, thus neglecting her house (and) humiliating her husband, they shall throw that woman into the water.

144: When a seignior married a hierodule and that hierodule gave a female slave to her husband and she has then produced children, if that seignior has made up his mind to marry a lay priestess, they may not allow that seignior, since he may not marry the lay priestess.

145: If a seignior married a hierodule and she did not provide him with children and he has made up his mind to marry a lay priestess, that seignior may marry the lay priestess, thus bringing her into his house, (but) with that lay priestess ranking in no way with the hierodule.

146: When a seignior married a hierodule and she gave a female slave to her husband and she has then borne children, if later that female slave has claimed equality with her mistress because she bore children, her mistress may not sell her; she may mark her with the slave-mark and count her among the slaves.

147: If she did not bear children, her mistress may sell her.

148: When a seignior married a woman and a fever has then seized her, if he has made up his mind to marry another, he may marry (her), without divorcing his wife whom the fever seized; she shall live in the house which he built and he shall continue to support her as long as she lives.

149: If that woman has refused to live in her husband's house, he shall make good her dowry to which she brought from her father's house and then she may leave.

150: If a seignior, upon presenting a field, orchard, house, or goods to his wife, left a sealed document with her, her children may not enter a claim against her after (the death of) her husband, since the mother may give her inheritance to that son of hers whom she likes, (but) she may not give (it) to an outsider.

151: If a woman, who was living in a seignior's house, having made a contract with her husband that a creditor of her husband may not distrain her, has then had (him) deliver a written statement; if there was a debt against that seignior before he married that woman, his creditors may not distrain his wife; also, if there was a debt against that woman before she entered the seignior's house, her creditors may not distrain her husband.

152: If a debt has developed against them after that woman entered the seignior's house, both of them shall be answerable to the merchant.

153: If a seignior's wife has brought about the death of her husband because of another man, they shall impale that woman on stakes.

154: If a seignior has had intercourse with his daughter, they shall make that seignior leave the city.

155: If a seignior chose a bride for his son and his son had intercourse with her, but later he himself has lain in her bosom and they have caught him, they shall bind that seignior and throw him into the water.

156: If a seignior chose a bride for his son and his son did not have intercourse with her, but he himself has lain in her bosom, he shall pay to her one-half mina of silver and he shall also make good to her whatever she has then seized, if he has made up his mind to marry another, he may marry (her), without divorcing his wife whom the fever seized; she shall live in the house which he built and he shall continue to support her as long as she lives.

157: If a seignior has lain in the bosom of his mother after (the death of) his father, they shall burn both of them.

158: If a seignior after (the death of) his fadier has

---

108 Lit., "has set his face."
109 The exact meaning of the word used here, SU.GE-tum, is unknown, but it indicates some kind of priestess.
109 Lit., "the man of her heart," mutt<sup>a</sup> h<sup>bu</sup>tu, where the suffix -<sup>a</sup>u may be interpreted as objective, "the man who chooses her," but is probably better interpreted in the usual manner as subjective, "the man of her choice."
110 Lit., "that woman."
111 Lit., "a tablet."
112 Lit., "the owner of a debt," here to be construed as singular, but elsewhere in this paragraph as plural because of the plural verbs to which they belong.
113 Lit., "the money-lender who made the loan.
114 Through a scribal error the original has "her."
been caught in the bosom of his foster mother, who was the bearer of children, that seignior shall be cut off from the parental home.

159: If a seignior, who had the betrothal-gift brought to the house of his (prospective) father-in-law (and) paid the marriage-price, has then fallen in love with another woman and has said to his (prospective) father-in-law, "I will not marry your daughter," the father of the daughter shall keep whatever was brought to him.

160: If a seignior had the betrothal-gift brought to the house of the (prospective) father-in-law (and) paid the marriage-price, and the father of the daughter has then said, "I will not give my daughter to you," he shall pay back double the full amount that was brought to him.

161: If a seignior had the betrothal-gift brought to the house of his (prospective) father-in-law (and) paid the marriage-price, and then a friend of his has so maligned him that his (prospective) father-in-law has said to the (prospective) husband, "You may not marry my daughter," he shall pay back double the full amount that was brought to him, but his friend may not marry his (intended) wife.

162: If, when a seignior acquired a wife, she bore him children and that woman has then gone to (her) fate, her father may not lay claim to her dowry, since her dowry belongs to her children.

163: If a seignior acquired a wife and that woman has gone to (her) fate without providing him with children, if his father-in-law has then returned to him the marriage-price which that seignior brought to the house of his father-in-law, his husband may not lay claim to the dowry of that woman, since her dowry belongs to her father's house.

164: If his father-in-law has not returned the marriage-price to him, he shall deduct the full amount of her marriage-price from her dowry and return (the rest of) her dowry to her father's house.

165: If a seignior, upon presenting a field, orchard, or house to his first-born, who is the favorite in his eye, wrote a sealed document for him, when the brothers divide after the father has gone to (his) fate, he shall keep the present which the father gave him, but otherwise they shall share equally in the goods of the paternal estate.

166: If a seignior, upon acquiring wives for the sons that he got, did not acquire a wife for his youngest son, when the brothers divide after the father has gone to (his) fate, to their youngest brother who did not acquire a wife, to him in addition to his share they shall assign money (enough) for the marriage-price from the goods of the paternal estate and thus enable him to acquire a wife.

167: If, when a seignior acquired a wife and she bore him children, that woman has gone to (her) fate (and) after her (death) he has then married another woman and she has borne children, when later the father has gone to (his) fate, the children shall not divide according to mothers; they shall take the dowries of their (respective) mothers and then divide equally the goods of the paternal estate.

168: If a seignior, having made up his mind to disinherit his son, has said to the judges, "I wish to disinherit my son," the judges shall investigate his record, and if the son did not incur wrong grave (enough) to be disinherit, the father may not disinherit his son.

169: If he has incurred wrong against his father grave (enough) to be disinherit, they shall let him off the first time; if he has incurred grave wrong a second time, the father may disinherit his son.

170: When a seignior's first wife bore him children and his female slave also bore him children, if the father during his lifetime has ever said "My children!" to the children whom the slave bore him, thus having counted them with the children of the first wife, after the father has gone to (his) fate, the children of the first wife and the children of the slave shall share equally in the goods of the paternal estate, with the first-born, the son of the first wife, receiving a preferential share.

171: However, if the father during his lifetime has never said "My children!" to the children whom the slave bore him, after the father has gone to (his) fate, the children of the slave may not share in the goods of the paternal estate along with the children of the first wife; freedom for the slave and her children shall be effected, with the children of the first wife having no claim at all against the children of the slave for service; the first wife shall take her dowry and the marriage-gift which her husband, upon giving (it) to her, wrote down on a tablet for her, and living in the home of her husband, she shall have the usufruct (of it) as long as she lives, without ever selling (it), since her heritage belongs to her children.

172: If her husband did not give her a marriage-gift, they shall make good her dowry to her and she shall obtain from the goods of her husband's estate a portion corresponding to (that of) an individual heir; if her children keep plaguing her in order to make her leave the house, the judges shall investigate her record and place the blame on the children, so that woman need never leave her husband's house; if that woman has made up her mind to leave, she shall leave to her children the marriage-gift which her husband gave her (but) take the dowry from her father's house in order that the man of her choice may marry her.

173: If that woman has borne children to her later husband in the place that she entered, and afterwards that woman has died, the earlier with the later children shall divide the dowry.

174: If she has not borne children to her later husband, only the children of her first husband shall receive her dowry.

175: If either a palace slave or a private citizen's slave married the daughter of a seignior and she has borne children, the owner of the slave may not lay claim to the children of the seignior's daughter for service.

176: Furthermore, if a palace slave or a private citizen's slave married the daughter of a seignior and when he married her she entered the house of the palace slave or the private citizen's slave with the dowry from her father's house and after they were joined together they set up a household and so acquired goods, but later either the palace slave or the private citizen's slave has gone to (his) fate, the seignior's daughter shall take her dowry, but they shall divide into two parts whatever her husband and she acquired after they were joined together and the owner of the slave shall take one-half, with the seignior's daughter taking one-half for her children.

176A: If the seignior's daughter has no dowry, they shall divide into two parts whatever her husband and she acquired after they were joined together and the owner of the slave shall take one-half, with the seignior's daughter taking one-half for her children.

177: If a widow, whose children are minors, has made up her mind to enter the house of another, she may not enter without the consent of the judges; when she wishes to enter the house of another, the judges shall investigate the condition of her former husband's estate and they shall entrust her former husband's estate to her later husband and that woman and they shall have them deposit a tablet (to the effect that) they will look after the estate and also rear the young (children), without ever selling the household goods, since the purchaser who purchases the household goods of a widow's children shall forfeit his money, with the goods reverting to their owner.

178: In the case of a nun, a hierodule, or a votary, whose father, upon presenting a dowry to her, wrote a sealed document for her, if he did not write for her on the tablet which he wrote for her (permission) to give her heritage to whomever she pleased and has granted her full discretion, after her father has gone to (his) fate, she may give her heritage to whomever she pleases, with her brothers having no claim against her.

180: If a father did not present a dowry to his daughter, a hierodule in a convent or a votary, after the father has gone to (his) fate, she shall receive as her share in the goods of the paternal estate a portion like (that of) an individual heir, but she shall have only the usufruct of (it) as long as she lives, since her heritage belongs to her brothers.

181: If a father dedicated (his daughter) to deity as a hierodule, a sacred prostitute, or a devotee and did not present a dowry to her, after the father has gone to (his) fate, she shall receive as her share in the goods of the paternal estate her one-third patrimony, but she shall have only the usufruct of (it) as long as she lives, since her heritage belongs to her brothers.

182: If a father, since he did not present a dowry to his daughter, a hierodule of Marduk of Babylon, did not write a sealed document for her, after the father has gone to (his) fate, she shall share along with her brothers in the goods of the paternal estate to the extent of her one-third patrimony, but she shall not assume any feudal obligations, since a hierodule of Marduk may give her heritage to whomever she pleases.

183: If a father, upon presenting a dowry to his daughter, a lay priestess, when he gave her to a husband, wrote a sealed document for her, after the father has gone to (his) fate, she may not share in the goods of the paternal estate.

184: If a seignior did not present a dowry to his daughter, a lay priestess, since he did not give her to a husband, after the father has gone to (his) fate, her brothers shall present her with a dowry proportionate to the value of the father's estate and they shall give her to a husband.

185: If a seignior adopted a boy in his own name and has reared him, that foster child may never be reclaimed.

186: If a seignior, upon adopting a boy, seeks out his father and mother when he had taken him, that foster child may return to his father's house.

187: The (adopted) son of a chamberlain, a palace servant, or the (adopted) son of a votary, may never be reclaimed.

188: If a member of the artisan class took a son as a foster child and has taught him his handicraft, he may never be reclaimed.

189: If he has not taught him his handicraft, that foster child may return to his father's house.

190: If a seignior has not counted among his sons the boy that he adopted and reared, that foster child may return to his father's house.

191: If a seignior, who adopted a boy and reared him, set up a family of his own, has later acquired children and so has made up (his) mind to cut off the foster child, that son shall not go off empty-handed; his foster father shall give him from his goods his one-third patrimony and then he shall go off, since he may not give him any of the field, orchard, or house.

192: If the (adopted) son of a chamberlain or the (adopted) son of a votary has said to his foster father or his foster mother, "You are not my father," "You are not my mother," they shall cut out his tongue.

193: If the (adopted) son of a chamberlain or the (adopted) son of a votary found out his parentage and came to hate his foster father and his foster mother and so has gone off to his paternal home, they shall pluck out his eye.

194: When a seignior gave his son to a nurse and that son has died in the care of the nurse, if the nurse has then made a contract for another son without the knowledge of his father and mother, they shall prove it against her and they shall cut off her breast because she made (his) death, he shall make good slave for slave.

195: If a son has struck his father, they shall cut off his hand.

196: If a seignior has destroyed the eye of a member of the aristocracy, they shall destroy his eye.

197: If he has broken a (another) seignior's bone, they shall break his bone.

198: If he has destroyed the eye of a commoner or broken the bone of a commoner, he shall pay one mina of silver.

199: If he has destroyed the eye of a seignior's slave or broken the bone of a seignior's slave, he shall pay half his value.

200: If a seignior has knocked out a tooth of a seignior of his own rank, they shall knock out his tooth.

201: If he has knocked out a commoner's tooth, he shall pay one-third mina of silver.

202: If a seignior has struck the cheek of a seignior who is superior to him, he shall be beaten sixty (times) with an oxtail whip in the assembly.

203: If a member of the aristocracy has struck the cheek of a (another) member of the aristocracy who is of the same rank as himself, he shall pay one mina of silver.

204: If a commoner has struck the cheek of a (another) commoner, he shall pay ten shekels of silver.

205: If a seignior's slave has struck the cheek of a member of the aristocracy, they shall cut off his ear.

206: If a seignior has struck a (another) seignior in a brawl and has inflicted an injury on him, that seignior shall swear, "I did not strike him deliberately," and he shall also pay for the physician.

207: If he has died because of his blow, he shall swear (as before), and if it was a member of the aristocracy, he shall pay one-half mina of silver.

208: If it was a member of the commonalty, he shall pay one-third mina of silver.

209: If a seignior struck a (another) seignior's daughter and has caused her to have a miscarriage, he shall pay ten shekels of silver for her fetus.

210: If that woman has died, they shall put his daughter to death.

211: If by a blow he has caused a commoner's daughter to have a miscarriage, he shall pay five shekels of silver.

212: If that woman has died, he shall pay one-half mina of silver.

213: If he struck a seignior's female slave and has caused her to have a miscarriage, he shall pay two shekels of silver.

214: If that female slave has died, he shall pay one-third mina of silver.

215: If a physician performed a major operation on a seignior with a bronze lancet and has saved the seignior's life, or he opened up the eye-socket of a seignior with a bronze lancet and has saved the seignior's eye, he shall receive ten shekels of silver.

216: If it was a member of the commonalty, he shall receive five shekels.

217: If it was a seignior's slave, the owner of the slave shall give two shekels of silver to the physician.

218: If a physician performed a major operation on a seignior with a bronze lancet and has caused the seignior's death, or he opened up the eye-socket of a seignior and has destroyed the seignior's eye, they shall cut off his hand.

219: If a physician performed a major operation on a commoner's slave with a bronze lancet and has caused (his) death, he shall make good slave for slave.

220: If he opened up his eye-socket with a bronze lancet and has destroyed his eye, he shall pay one-half his value in silver.

221: If a physician has set a seignior's broken bone, or has healed a sprained tendon, the patient shall give five shekels of silver to the physician.
222: If it was a member of the commonalty, he shall give three shekels of silver.

223: If it was a seignior’s slave, the owner of the slave shall give two shekels of silver to the physician.

224: If a veterinary surgeon performed a major operation on either an ox or an ass and has saved its life, the owner of the ox or ass shall give to the surgeon one-sixth (shekel) of silver as his fee.

225: If he performed a major operation on an ox or an ass and has caused its death, he shall give to the owner of the ox or ass one-fourth its value.

226: If a brander cut off the slave-mark of a slave not his own without the consent of the owner of the slave, they shall cut off the hand of that brander.

227: If a seignior deceived a brander so that he has cut off the slave-mark of a slave not his own, they shall put that seignior to death and immure him at his gate; the brander shall swear, “I did not cut (it) off knowingly,” and then he shall go free.

228: If a builder constructed a house for a seignior and finished it for him, he shall give him two shekels of silver per sar of house as his remuneration.

229: If a builder constructed a house for a seignior, but did not make his work strong, with the result that the house which he built collapsed and so has caused the death of the owner of the house, that builder shall be put to death.

230: If it has caused the death of a son of the owner of the house, they shall put the son of that builder to death.

231: If it has caused the death of a slave of the owner of the house, he shall give slave for slave to the owner of the house.

232: If it has destroyed goods, he shall make good whatever it destroyed; also, because he did not make the house strong which he built and it collapsed, he shall reconstruct the house which collapsed at his own expense.

233: If a builder constructed a house for a seignior and has not done his work properly so that a wall has become unsafe, that builder shall strengthen that wall at his own expense.

234: If a boatman calked a boat of sixty kur for a seignior, he shall give him two shekels of silver as his remuneration.

235: If a boatman calked a boat for a seignior and did not do his work well with the result that that boat has sprung a leak in that very year, since it has developed a defect, the boatman shall dismantle that boat and strengthen it at his own expense and give the strengthened boat back to the owner of the boat.

236: If a seignior let his boat for hire to a boatman and the boatman was so careless that he has sunk or wrecked the boat, the boatman shall make good the boat to the owner of the boat.

237: When a seignior hired a boatman and a boat and loaded it with grain, wool, oil, dates, or any kind of freight, if that boatman was so careless that he has sunk the boat and lost what was in it as well, the boatman shall make good the boat which he sank and whatever he lost that was in it.

238: If a boatman sank the boat of a seignior and has then refloated it, he shall give one-half its value in silver.

239: If a seignior hired a boatman, he shall give him six kur of grain per year.

240: If a rowboat rammed a sailboat and has sunk it, the owner of the boat whose boat was sunk shall in the presence of god set forth the particulars regarding whatever was lost in his boat and the one in charge of the rowboat which sank the sailboat shall make good to him his boat and his lost property.

241: If a seignior has distrained an ox as a pledge, he shall pay one-third mina of silver.

242, 243: If a seignior hired (it) for one year, he shall give to its owner four kur of grain as the hire of an ox in tandem, three kur of grain as the hire of a young lead-

244: If a seignior hired an ox or an ass and a lion has killed it in the open, (the loss) shall be its owner’s.

245: If a seignior hired an ox and has caused its death through carelessness or through beating, he shall make good ox for ox to the owner of the ox.

246: If a seignior hired an ox and has broken its foot or has cut its neck tendon, he shall make good ox for ox to the owner of the ox.

247: If a seignior hired an ox and has destroyed its eye, he shall give one-half its value in silver to the owner of the ox.

248: If a seignior hired an ox and has broken its horn, cut off its tail, or injured the flesh of its back, he shall give one-quarter its value in silver.

249: If a seignior hired an ox and god struck it and it has died, the seignior who hired the ox shall affirm by god and then he shall go free.

250: If an ox, when it was walking along the street, gored a seignior to death, that case is not subject to claim.

251: If a seignior’s ox was a gorer and his city council made it known to him that it was a gorer, but he did not pad its horns (or) tie up his ox, and that ox gored to death a member of the aristocracy, he shall give one-half mina of silver.

252: If it was a seignior’s slave, he shall give one-third mina of silver.

253: If a seignior hired a (nother) seignior to oversee his field, and lending him feed-grain, entrusting him with oxen, contracted with him to cultivate the field, if that seignior stole the seed or fodder and it has been found in his possession, they shall cut off his hand.

254: If he appropriated the feed-grain and thus has

140 Lit. “physician of an ox or an ass.”
141 Lit. “physician of an ox or an ass.”
142 Lit. “out of his own money.”
143 Lit. “out of his own goods.”
144 Lit. “he of the rowboat.”
145 Lit. “and has caused his death.”
146 Lit. “of grain per year.”
147 Lit. “of grain as the hire of a young lead-starved the oxen, he shall make good twofold the grain which he received.

255: If he has let the seignior's oxen out on hire or he stole the seed-grain and so has raised nothing in the field, they shall prove it against that seignior and at harvest-time he shall measure out sixty \( \text{\textmu} \) of grain per eighteen \( \text{i} \).

256: If he was not able to meet his obligation, they shall drag him through that field with the oxen.

257: If a seignior hired a cultivator, he shall give him eight \( \text{\textmu} \) of grain per year.

258: If a seignior hired a cattle-herder, he shall pay him six \( \text{\textmu} \) of grain per year.

259: If a seignior stole a plow from a field, he shall give five shekels of silver to the owner of the plow.

260: If he has stolen a seeder or a harrow, he shall give three shekels of silver.

261: If a seignior hired a shepherd to pasture cattle or sheep, he shall give him eight \( \text{\textmu} \) of grain per year.

262: If a seignior... and ox or a sheep to 263: If he has lost [the ox] or sheep which was committed to him, he shall make good ox for [ox], sheep for [sheep] to their owner.

264: If [a shepherd], to whom cattle or sheep were given to pasture, being in receipt of his wages in full, to his satisfaction, has then let the cattle decrease, has let the sheep decrease, thus lessening the birth rate, he shall give increase and profit in accordance with the terms of his contract.

265: If a shepherd, to whom cattle or sheep were given to pasture, became unfaithful and hence has altered the cattlemark or has sold (them), they shall prove it against him and he shall make good in cattle and sheep to their owner tenfold what he stole.

266: If a visitation of god has occurred in a sheepfold or a lion has made a kill, the shepherd shall prove himself innocent in the presence of god, but the owner of the sheepfold shall receive from him the animal stricken in the fold.

267: If the shepherd was careless and has let lameness develop in the fold, the shepherd shall make good in cattle and sheep the loss through the lameness which he let develop in the fold and give (them) to their owner.

268: If a seignior hired an ox to thresh, twenty \( qu \) of grain shall be its hire.

269: If he hired an ass to thresh, ten \( qu \) of grain shall be its hire.

270: If he hired a goat to thresh, one \( qu \) of grain shall be its hire.

271: If a seignior hired oxen, a wagon and a driver for it, he shall give 180 \( qu \) of grain per day.

272: If a seignior hired simply a wagon by itself, he shall give forty \( qu \) of grain per day.

273: If a seignior hired a laborer, he shall give six \( le \) of silver per day from the beginning of the year till the fifth month; from the sixth month till the end of the year he shall give five \( le \) of silver per day.

274: If a seignior wishes to hire an artisan, he shall pay per day as the wage of a ... five \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a bric\ma\er five \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a linen-weaver ... \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a seal-cutter... \[ Jr \] of silver; as the wage of a jeweller — \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a smith ... \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a carpenter four \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a leatherworker ... \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a basketmaker ... \( le \) of silver; as the wage of a builder ...\( le \) of silver.

275: If a seignior hired a long-booty its hire shall be three \( le \) of silver per day.

276: If a seignior hired a rowboat, he shall give two and one-half \( le \) of silver per day as its hire.

277: If a seignior hired a boat of sixty \( \text{\textmu} \), he shall give one-sixth (shekel) of silver per day as its hire.

278: If a seignior purchased a male (or) female slave and when his month was not yet complete, epilepsy attacked him, he shall return (him) to his seller and the purchaser shall get back the money which he paid out.

279: If a seignior purchased a male (or) female slave and he has then received a claim (against him), his seller shall be responsible for the claim.

280: If a seignior has purchased in a foreign land the male (or) female slave of a(nother) seignior and when he has arrived home the owner of the male or female slave has identified either his male or his female slave, if that male and female slave are natives of the land, their freedom shall be effected without any money (payment).

281: If they are natives of another land, the purchaser shall state in the presence of god what money he paid out and the owner of the male or female slave shall give to the merchant the money he paid out and thus redeem his male or female slave.

282: If a male slave has said to his master, "You are not my master," his master shall prove him to be his slave and cut off his ear.

THE EPILOGUE
(reverse xxiv)
The laws of justice, which Hammurabi, the efficient king, set up, and by which he caused the land to take the right way and have good government.

I, Hammurabi, the perfect king, was not careless (or) neglectful of the black-headed (people), whom Enlil had presented to me,
(and) whose shepherding Marduk had committed to me;
I sought out peaceful regions for them;
I overcame grievous difficulties;

\cite{Reading ta-[a]-[a] for ta-a-na and im-ffu-ru for im-ri-ru.}

\cite{Reading ta-[a]-[a] for ta-a-na and im-ffu-ru for im-ri-ru.}

\cite{Reading i-pa-far for i-pa-al(\text{a})}
I caused light to rise on them.
With the mighty weapon which Zababa and Inanna entrusted to me, with the insight that Enki allotted to me,
with the ability that Marduk gave me,
I rooted out the enemy above and below; (30)
I made an end of war;
I promoted the welfare of the land;
I made the peoples rest in friendly habitations;
I did not let them have anyone to terrify them.
The great gods called me, (40)
so I became the beneficent shepherd whose scepter is righteous;
my benign shadow is spread over my city.
In my bosom I carried the peoples of the land of Sumer and Akkad; (50)
they prospered under my protection;
I always governed them in peace;
I sheltered them in my wisdom.
In order that the strong might not oppress
the weak, (60)
that justice might be dealt the orphan (and) the widow, in Babylon, the city whose head Anum and Enlil raised aloft, in Esagila, the temple whose foundations stand firm like heaven and earth,
I wrote my precious words on my stela, and in the presence of the statue of me, the king of justice,
I set (it) up in order to administer the law of the land, (70) to prescribe the ordinances of the land, to give justice to the oppressed.

I am the king who is preeminent among kings; (80)
my words are choice; my ability has no equal.
By the order of Shamash, the great judge of heaven and earth, may my justice prevail in the land;
by the word of Marduk, my lord, (90)
may my statutes have no one to rescind them;

(reverse xxv)
in Esagila, which I love, may my name be spoken in reverence forever!

Let any oppressed man who has a cause come into the presence of the statue of me, the king of justice, and then read carefully my inscribed stela, (10)
and give heed to my precious words, and may my stela make the case clear to him;
may he understand his cause;
may he set his mind at ease!
"Hammurabi, the lord, (20)
who is like a real father to the people, bestirred himself for the word of Marduk, his lord, and secured the triumph of Marduk above and below, (30)
thus making glad the heart of Marduk, his lord, and he also ensured prosperity for the people forever, and led the land aright"— let him proclaim this, (40) and let him pray with his whole heart for me in the presence of Marduk, my lord, and Sarpanit, my lady!
May the guardian spirit, the protecting genius, the gods who enter Esagila, (and) Lebetum" of Esagila, (50) prosper the wishes (made) daily
in the presence of Marduk, my lord, (and) Sarpanit, my lady!

In the days to come, for all time, let the king who appears in the land observe the words of justice which I wrote on my stela;
let him not alter the law of the land which I enacted, the ordinances of the land which I prescribed; (70) let him not rescind my statutes!
If that man has intelligence and is able to guide his land aright, let him heed the words which I wrote on my stela, and may this stela show him the road (and) the way, (80)
the law of the land which I enacted, the ordinances of the land which I prescribed;
and let him guide aright his black-headed (people)!
Let him enact the law for them; (90)
let him prescribe the ordinances for them!
Let him root out the wicked and the evil from his land;
let him promote the welfare of his people!

I, Hammurabi, am the king of justice, to whom Shamash committed law.
My words are choice; my deeds have no equal; (100)
it is only to the fool that they are empty;

(reverse xxvii)
to the wise they stand forth as an object of wonder.
If that man heeded my words which I wrote on my stela, and did not rescind my law,
has not distorted my words, did not alter my statutes, (10)
may Shamash make that man reign as long as I, the king of justice; may he shepherd his people in justice!

If that man did not heed my words which I wrote on my stela, (20) and disregarded my curses, and did not fear the curses of the gods, but has abolished the law which I enacted, (30)
has distorted my words,
has altered my statutes,

162 The consort of Marduk.
163 The god of brickmaking.
effaced my name inscribed (thereon),
and has written his own name,
(or) he has commissioned another (to do so) because of these curses—as for that man, whether king or lord, or governor or person of any rank,\textsuperscript{154} may mighty Anum, the father of the gods, who proclaimed my reign, deprive him of the glory of sovereignty, may he break his scepter, may he curse his fate! \(50\)

May Enlil, the lord, the determiner of destinies, whose orders cannot be altered,
who made my kingdom great,
incite revolts against him in his abode which cannot be suppressed, the dispersion of his people, the transfer of his kingdom, the disappearance of his name and memory from the land! \(80\)

May Ninlil,\textsuperscript{155} the mighty mother, whose orders carry weight in Ekur,
the lady who prospers my wishes, vitiates his word at the place of judgment and decision in the presence of Enlil! \(90\)

May Adad, the lord of abundance, the irrigator of heaven and earth, my helper, deprive him of the rains from heaven (and) the floodwaters from the springs! \(70\)

May Zababa, the mighty warrior, the first-born son of Ekur,\textsuperscript{158} who marches at my right hand, shatter his weapons on the field of battle!
May he turn day into night for him,
and let his enemy trample upon him! \(90\)

May Inanna, the lady of battle and conflict, who bares my weapons, my gracious protecting genius, the admirer of my reign, curse his rule with her great fury in her wrathful heart! \(100\)

May she turn his good into evil;

May she throw up a heap of his warriors’ bodies on the plain;
may she show his warriors no mercy!
As for himself, may she deliver him into the hands of his enemies, may she shatter his weapons on the field of battle and conflict;
may she create confusion (and) revolt for him!
May she strike down his warriors, (and) water the earth with their blood! \(10\)

May she strike down his warriors’ bodies on the plain;
may she show his warriors no mercy!

\textsuperscript{154} Lit. "person who is called a name."
\textsuperscript{155} The consort of Enlil.
\textsuperscript{156} Lit. "may she put in the mouth of Enlil, the king."
\textsuperscript{157} Lit. "of."
\textsuperscript{158} i.e. "of Enlil," since Ekur was Enlil’s temple in Nippur.
and may they carry him away in bonds to a land hostile to him!

May Nergal,\(^{189}\) the strong one among the gods, the fighter without peer, who achieves victory for me, burn his people in his great power, (30) like the raging fire of swamp-reeds!

May he cut him off with his powerful weapons, and break his body in pieces like an earthen image!

May Nintu, the exalted mistress of the lands, (40) the mother who bore me, deny him an heir; may she not let him receive a name or beget a male descendant in the midst of his people!

May Ninkarrak,\(^{190}\) the daughter of Anum, my advocate in Ekur, (50) inflict upon him in his body a grievous malady, an evil disease, a serious injury which never heals, whose nature no physician knows, (60) which he cannot allay with bandages, which like a deadly bite cannot be rooted out, and may he continue to lament (the loss of) his vigor until his life comes to an end!

May the mighty gods of heaven and earth, (70) the Annunaki in their totality, the guardian spirit of the temple, (and) Lebettum of Ebabbar, curse him, his descendants, his land, his warriors, his people, and his nation, with a foul curse! (80)

May Enlil, by his word which cannot be altered, curse him with these\(^{191}\) curses, and may they come upon him quickly! (90)

The Middle Assyrian Laws

(Translator: Theophile J. Meek)

The Middle Assyrian Laws are preserved to us, not on a stela as in the case of Hammurabi’s laws, but on clay tablets, some of which are unfortunately badly broken, and the lacunae have not as yet been filled. The tablets were unearthed by German archaeologists in the course of their extensive excavation of ancient Ashur, modern Qal’at Shergat, from 1903 to the spring of 1914. The tablets themselves date from the time of Tiglath-pileser I in the 12th century B.C., but the laws on them may go back to the 15th century.

The texts were published by Otto Schroeder, \(\text{KAV}\), supplemented later by five fragments published and translated by Ernst F. Weidner in \(\text{AFO} \; \text{xn}\) (1937). The most elaborate treatment of the former texts is G. R. Driver and John C. Miles, \textit{The Assyro-Akkadian Laws, Edited with Translation and Commentary} (1935), where the extensive literature is cited in full. Driver’s translation is one of the best and is far superior to that by D. D. Luckenbill and F. W. Geers in \textit{The Origin and History of Hebrew Law} (1931). In the present translation Tablets C and G of the Driver-Miles edition are joined and Tablets D, H, and J are omitted altogether since it is now recognized that they do not belong here. The restoration of parts of Tablets C, \(-\text{f}\), G, M, and F follows closely that of M. David in \textit{Symbolae ad iura orientis antiqui pertinentes Paulo Koschatzer dedicatæ} (1939), pp. 121 & EE Tablet K and the first part of Tablet L are hortatory in character and hence probably constituted the introduction to the laws, like the hortatory introduction to the laws in Deuteronomy,

\[\text{The Laws}\]

\textit{Tablet A}:

1: If a woman, [whether] the wife of a seignior or the daughter of a seignior, has entered the temple of a god, has stolen something belonging to the sanctuary [from] the temple of the god, (and) it has been found [in her possession], when they have prosecuted [her] or convicted [her], [they shall take] the indictment and make inquiry of the god; as he orders [the woman to be treated], they shall treat her.

2: If a woman, whether the wife of a seignior or the daughter of a seignior, has uttered blasphemy or indulged in loose talk, that woman shall bear the penalty due her; they shall not touch her husband, her sons, (or) her daughters.

3: If, when a seignior was either sick or dead, his wife has stolen something from his house (and) has given (it) either to a seignior or to a lady or to anyone else, they shall put the seignior’s wife to death along with the receivers as well. Also, if the wife of a seignior, whose husband is alive, has stolen (something) from her husband’s house (and) has given (it) either to a seignior or to a lady or to anyone else, the seignior shall prosecute his wife and inflict the (proper) punishment; also the receiver who received (it) from the hand of the seignior’s wife shall give up the stolen (property) and they shall inflict on the receiver the same punishment that the seignior inflicted on his wife.

4: If either a male slave or a female slave has received something (stolen) from the hand of a seignior’s wife, they shall cut off the nose (and) ears of the male or female slave, thus compensating for the stolen (property), while the seignior shall cut off his wife’s ears. However, if he lets his wife go free, without cutting off her ears, they shall not cut off those of the male or female slave and so they shall not compensate for the stolen (property).

5: If a seignior’s wife has stolen something from another seignior’s house, exceeding the value of five minas of lead, the owner of the stolen (property) shall swear, “I never let her take (it); there was a theft from my house,” if her husband (so) desires, he may give up the stolen (property) and ransom her (but) cut off her ears. If her husband does not wish to ransom her, the owner of the stolen (property) shall take her and cut off her nose.

\(^{189}\) The god of the underworld, whose cult-center was Kutha in northern Babylonia.

\(^{190}\) A form of Gula, a goddess of healing, worshiped particularly at Isin.

\(^{191}\) Reading \textit{d-ni-a-tim}.

\textsuperscript{1} Schroeder, \textit{KAV}. No. 1, pp. 1-14.
6: If a seignior's wife has made a deposit abroad, the receiver shall be liable for the stolen (property).
7: If a woman has laid hands on a seignior, when they have prosecuted her, she shall pay thirty minas of lead (and) they shall flog her twenty (times) with staves.
8: If a woman has crushed a seignior's testicle in a brawl, they shall cut off one finger of hers, and if the other testicle has become affected along with it by catching the infection even though a physician has bound (it) up, or she has crushed the other testicle in the brawl, they shall tear out both her [eyes].
9: [If] a seignior laid hands on the wife of a(nother) seignior, thereby treating her like a young child, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, they shall cut off [one] finger of his. If he has kissed her, they shall draw his lower lip along the edge of the blade of an ax (and) cut (it) off.
10: [If] either a seignior or a lady entered a(nother) seignior's [house] and killed [either a man] or a woman, [they shall give] the murderers [to the next-of-kin], and if he chooses he may put them to death, or [if he chooses] he may spare (them but) take [their property]. [However, if] the murderers have nothing at home [to give], either a son or [a daughter] ... in the house ... belonging to....
11: (not preserved)
12: If, as a seignior's wife passed along the street, a(nother) seignior has seized her, saying to her, "Let me lie with you," since she would not consent (and) kept defending herself, but he has taken her by force (and) lain with her, whether they found him on the seignior's wife or witnesses have charged him that he lay with the woman, they shall put the seignior to death, with no blame: attaching to the woman.
13: When a seignior's wife has left her own house and has visited a(nother) seignior where he is living, if he has lain with her, knowing that she was a seignior's wife, they shall put the seignior to death and the woman as well.
14: If a seignior has lain with the wife of a(nother) seignior either in a temple-brothel or in the street, knowing that she was a seignior's wife, they shall treat the adulterer as the seignior orders his wife to be treated. If he has lain with her without knowing that she was a seignior's wife, the adulterer is guiltless; the seignior shall prosecute his wife, treating her as he thinks fit.
15: If a seignior has caught a(nother) seignior with his wife, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, they shall put both of them to death, with no liability attaching to him. If, upon catching (him), he has brought him either into the presence of the king or into the presence of the judges, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, if the woman's husband puts his wife to death, he shall also put the seignior to death, but if he cuts off his wife's nose, he shall turn the seignior into a eunuch and they shall mutilate his whole face. However, if he let his wife go free, they shall let the seignior go free.
16: If a seignior [has lain with a(nother) seignior's] wife at her invitation, no blame attaches to the seignior; the (married) seignior shall inflict such punishment on his wife as he thinks fit. If he has lain with her by force, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, his punishment shall be like that of the seignior's wife.
17: If a seignior has said to a(nother) seignior, "People have lain repeatedly with your wife," since there were no witnesses, they shall make an agreement (and) go to the river (for the water ordeal).
18: If a seignior said to his neighbor either irf private or in a brawl, "People have lain repeatedly with your wife; I will prosecute (her) myself," since he is not able to prosecute (her and) did not prosecute (her), they shall flog that seignior forty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month; they shall castrate him and he shall also pay one talent® of lead.
19: If a seignior started a rumor against his neighbor in private, saying, "People have lain repeatedly with him," or he said to him in a brawl in the presence of (other) people, "People have lain repeatedly with you; I will prosecute you," since he is not able to prosecute (him) (and) did not prosecute (him), they shall flog that seignior fifty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month; they shall castrate him and he shall also pay one talent of lead.
20: If a seignior lay with his neighbor, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, they shall lie with him (and) turn him into a eunuch.
21: If a seignior struck a(nother) seignior's daughter and has caused her to have a miscarriage, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall pay two talents thirty minas of lead; they shall flog him fifty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month.
22: If in the case of a seignior's wife one not her father, nor her brother, nor her son, but another person, has caused her to take to the road, but he did not know that she was a seignior's wife, he shall (so) swear and he shall also pay two talents of lead to the woman's husband. If [he knew that she was a seignior's wife], he shall pay the damages [and swear], "I never lay with her." However, if the [seignior's] wife [has declared], "He did lie with me," when the man has paid the damages to the seignior, he shall go [to the] river, although he had no (such) agreement; if he has turned back from the river, they shall treat him as the woman's husband treated his wife.

9 cf. Deut. 25:11 f.
10 Restoring t’-4-1 pi-ila, lit., "in accordance with her mouth."
11 Lit. "one month of days."
12 A talent contained 60 minas.
14 Other laws on the same topic are §§50-52 below, with all of which cf. Exod. 21:22-25; f. "Lit., "in accordance with her mouth."
15 Lit. "in accordance with his heart."
17 cf. Deut. 25:11 f.
18 Lit. "to the master of the life."
20 Lit. "in accordance with his heart."
21 Lit., "in accordance with her mouth."
23: If a seignior's wife, having taken another seignior's wife into her house, has given her to a man to lie with and the man knew that she was a seignior's wife, they shall treat him like one who has lain with a married woman and they shall treat the procuress as the woman's husband treats his adulterous wife. However, if the woman's husband does nothing to his adulterous wife, they shall do nothing to the adulterer or the procuress; they shall let them go free. However, if the seignior's wife did not know the situation, but the woman who brought her into her house brought the wife, they shall do nothing to the adulterer or the procuress. However, if the woman has not (so) declared, the seignior shall inflict on his wife such punishment as he sees fit (and) they shall put the adulterer and the procuress to death.

24: If a seignior's wife, having deserted her husband, has entered the house of an Assyrian, whether it was in the same city or in some neighboring city, where he set her up in a house, (and) she stayed with the mistress of the house (and) spent the night (there) three (or) four times, without the master of the house knowing that the seignior's wife was staying in his house, (and) later that woman has been caught, the master of the house whose wife deserted him shall cut off (the ears of) his wife but take her back; they shall cut off the ears of the man's wife with whom his wife stayed; if he wishes, her husband may pay three talents thirty minas of lead as the redemption price for her, or if he wishes, they may take his wife away. However, if the master of the house knew that the seignior's wife was staying in his house with his wife, he shall pay the extra third. However, if he has denied (it) by declaring, "I did not know (it)," they shall go to the river for the water ordeal. However, if the man in whose house the (other) man's wife was staying has turned back from the river, he shall pay the (extra) third; if the seignior whose wife deserted him has turned back from the river, he is guiltless; they shall put the adulterer and procuress to death. However, if the woman has not (so) declared, the seignior shall inflict on his wife such punishment as he sees fit (and) they shall put the adulterer and the procuress to death.

25: If a woman is living in her father's house and her husband is dead, since the brothers of her husband have as yet made no division (of the estate) and she has no son, the brothers of her husband, having made no division, shall take whatever ornaments her husband bestowed on her (and) are not lost; they shall have whatever remains submitted to the gods (and then) make claim (and) take (it); they shall not be forced to take the river (ordeal) or the oath.

26: If a woman is living in her father's house and her husband is dead, if her husband has sons, they shall take whatever ornaments her husband bestowed on her; if her husband has no sons, she shall take (them) herself.

27: If a woman is living in her father's house and her husband has been coming in frequently, any marriage-gift, which her husband gave her, he may take back as his own, (but) he may not touch what belongs to her father's house.

28: When a widow has entered a seignior's house (as wife) and she has her infant son with her, if he has grown up in her (second) husband's house but no deed of adoption for him was written, he shall not receive a portion from the estate of his foster father (and) he shall not be liable for debts; he shall receive a portion according to his title from the estate of his real father.

29: If a woman has entered her husband's house, her dowry and whatever she brought from her father's house or what her father-in-law gave her on her entry are vested in her sons, with her father-in-law's sons having no claim to (them); however, if her husband cut her off, he may give what he chooses to his sons.

30: If a father has conveyed (or) brought the betrothal-gift to the house of his son's (prospective) father-in-law, with the woman not yet married to his son and another son of his, whose wife is living in her father's house, died, he shall give his dead son's wife in marriage to his other son to whose father-in-law's house he brought (the gift); if the girl's master, who has received the gift, is not willing to give up his daughter, if he wishes, the father who brought the gift may take his (prospective) daughter-in-law (and) marry (her) to his son; however, if he wishes, he may take back in full as much as he brought: lead, silver, gold, (and) what is not edible, (but) with no claim to what is edible.

31: If a seignior brought the betrothal-gift to his (prospective) father-in-law's house and his (prospective) wife died, with his (prospective) father-in-law having (other) daughters, if the father-in-law wishes, he may marry a(nother) daughter of his father-in-law in place of his dead wife; or, if he wishes, he may take back the money which he gave, (but) they shall not give back to him either grain or sheep or anything edible; he shall receive only the money.

32: If a woman is still living in her father's house and her marriage-gift has been given (to her), whether she is taken or is not taken to her father-in-law's house, she shall be liable for the debts, misdemeanors, and crimes of her husband.

33: If, while a woman is still living in her father's house, her husband died and she has sons, [she shall live where she chooses in] a house of theirs. If she has no [son, her father-in-law shall marry her to the son] of his choice . . . or if he wishes, he may give her in marriage to her father-in-law. If her husband and her father-in-law are both dead and she has no son, she becomes a widow; she may go where she wishes.
34: If a seignior has married a widow, without sealing (it) with a contract, (and) she has lived in his house for two years, she becomes a wife; she need not leave.

35: If a widow has entered a seignior’s house (as wife), anything at all that she brings becomes wholly her husband’s; however, if the seignior has come in with the woman, anything at all that he brings becomes wholly the woman’s.

36: If a woman is still living in her father’s house or her husband made her live apart and her husband has gone off to the fields, without leaving her either oil or wool or clothing or food or anything at all (and) without having even an ear of grain brought to her from the field, that woman shall remain true to her husband for five years (and) not go to live with another husband. If she has sons (and) they hire themselves out and earn their living, the woman shall wait for her husband (and) not go to live with another husband. If she has no sons, she shall wait for her husband for five years; on the advent of the sixth year she may go live with the man of her choice; her husband if he may give her something; if it is not his will, he may not give her anything; she shall go out empty.

37: If a seignior wishes to divorce his wife, if it is his will, he may give her something; if it is not his will, he need not give her anything; she shall go out empty.

38: If a woman is still living in her father’s house and her husband has divorced her, he may take back the ornaments which he himself bestowed on her; he may not take her anything; he may not claim her; she is free for her later husband. If upon coming back he can prove that he was delayed beyond the period of five years (and) did not keep himself away of his own accord, since either an adversary seized him and he had to flee or he was seized as a miscreant and so has been delayed, he shall give a woman equivalent to his wife and take back his wife. However, if the king has sent him to another country (and) he has been delayed beyond the period of five years, his wife shall wait for him (and) not go to live with another husband. However, if she has gone to live with another husband before the five years and has also borne children, her husband upon coming back shall get her back and her children as well because she did not respect the marriage-contract but got married.

39: If a seignior has given one not his daughter to a husband, if, her father being previously in debt (and) she made to live as a pledge, the earlier creditor has come forward, he shall be reimbursed for the value of the woman by the one who gave the woman (in marriage); if he has nothing to give, the seignior shall take the one who gave (her in marriage); but, if she was treated with cruelty, she is quit of the one who gave her; however, if the seignior who became the husband of the woman, whether they have induced him to write a tablet or they have received a guarantee from him, makes restitution for the value of the woman, then the one who gave (her in marriage) is quit.

40: Neither wives of seigniors nor [widows] nor [Assyrian women], who go out on the street [may have] their heads [uncovered]. The daughters of a seignior... whether it is a shawl or a robe or [a mantle] must veil themselves; [they must not have] their heads [uncovered]. Whether... or... or... they must not veil themselves, but] when they go out on the street alone, they must veil themselves. A concubine who goes out on the street with her mistress must veil herself. A sacred prostitute whom a man married must veil herself on the street, but one whom a man did not marry must have her head uncovered on the street; she must not veil herself. A harlot must not veil herself; her head must be uncovered; he who has seen a harlot veiled must arrest her, produce witnesses, (and) bring her to the palace tribunal; they shall not take her jewelry away, (but) the one who arrested her may take her clothing; they shall flog her fifty (times) with staves (and) pour pitch on her head. However, if a seignior has seen a harlot veiled and has let (her) go without bringing her to the palace tribunal, they shall flog that seignior fifty (times) with staves; his prosecutor shall take his clothing; they shall pierce his ears, thread (them) with a cord, (and) tie (it) at his back, (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month. Female slaves must not veil themselves and he who has seen a female slave veiled must arrest her (and) bring her to the palace tribunal; they shall cut off her ears (and) the one who arrested her may take her clothing; if a seignior has seen a female slave veiled and has let her go without arresting her (and) bringing her to the palace tribunal, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, they shall fling him fifty (times) with staves; they shall pierce his ears, thread (them) with a cord, (and) tie (it) at his back; his prosecutor shall take his clothes (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month.

41: If a seignior wishes to veil his concubine, he shall have five (or) six of his neighbors present (and) veil her in their presence (and) say, “She is my wife,” (and so) she becomes his wife. A concubine who was not veiled in the presence of the men, whose husband did not say, “She is my wife,” is not a wife; she is still a concubine. If a seignior died (and) his veiled wife has no sons, the sons by concubines become (legitimate) sons; they shall receive a share (of the estate).

42: If a seignior poured oil on the head of a(nother) seignior’s daughter on a holiday or brought betrothalpresents on a festival, they shall not make any return (of the gifts).

43: If the seignior either poured oil on (her) head or brought betrothal-presents (and) the son to whom he assigned the wife either died or fled, he may give (her) to whichever he wishes of his remaining sons from the oldest son to the youngest son who is at least ten years old. If the father died and the son to whom he assigned the wife also died, but the dead son has a son who is at least ten years old, he shall marry (her), but if the grandsons are younger than ten years, the girl's father, if he wishes, may give his daughter (to one of them); or if he wishes, he may make an equitable return (of the gifts). If there is no son, he shall return in full as much as he received, precious stones and whatever is not edible, but he need not return what is edible.

44: If there is an Assyrian man or if there is an Assyrian woman who is living in a seignior's house as a pledge for as much as his value (or) he was taken for the total value, when he deserves it, he (the seignior) may pull out (his hair); he may mutilate his ears by piercing (them).

45: When a woman has been given (in marriage) and the enemy has captured her husband, if she has no father-in-law and no son, she shall remain true to her husband for two years. During those two years, if she has not sufficient to live on, she shall come forward and (so) declare; she shall become a ward of the palace; her... shall support her (and) she shall do his work. If (she is the wife) of a peasant... [shall support her (and) she shall do her work]. However, [if her husband held] a field and [a house as a fief in his city], she shall come forward [and say to the judges], ["I have nothing] to live on"; the judges shall inquire of the mayor (and) elders of the city (and) since he held a field in that city as a fief, they shall acquire the field and house for two years for her support (and) give (them) to her; she shall live (there) and they shall draw up her lease; she shall complete two years (and then) she may go to live with the husband of her choice, (and) they shall write a tablet for her as a widow. If in later days her missing husband has returned home, he may take back his wife who was married to an outsider; he may not claim the sons whom she bore to her later husband, but her later husband shall take (them). The field and house which were leased to an outsider at the total value as her support, if he did not re-enter the armed service of the king, he shall pay for and take over (on the same terms) as they were leased. However, if he has not returned (but) died in another land, the king shall allocate his field and house where he wishes to allocate (them).

46: If a woman whose husband died does not wish to leave her house on her husband's death, if her husband assigned her nothing in writing, she shall live in a house of her sons where she chooses; her husband's sons shall support her; they shall make a contract with her for her food and drink as for a bride whom they love. If she is a later (wife and) has no sons, she shall live with one (of her husband's sons, and) they shall support her in common; if she has sons (and) the sons of the earlier (wife) are not willing to support her, she shall live in a house of her own sons where she chooses; it is her own sons who shall support her and she shall do their work. However, if there was actually one among her husband's sons who married her, it is the one who married her [that shall support her]; her own sons need not support her.

47: If either a man or a woman made up magical preparations and they were found in their possession, when they have prosecuted them (and) convicted them, they shall put the maker of the magical preparations to death. The man who saw the making of the magical preparations (or) heard (of it) from the mouth of an eyewitness who declared to him, "I myself have seen (it)," shall come forward as an earwitness (and) so declare to the king; if the eyewitness has denied to the king what he said, he shall declare in the presence of the Bull-god, the son of Shamash, "He did indeed say (it)," (and then) he is quit. As for the eyewitness who made a statement and then denied (it), the king shall interrogate him as he is able (and) investigate his past; when the exorcist is brought, he shall make the man speak and he himself shall say, "He (the king) will not absolve you from the oath which you were made to swear to the king and his son; it is in accordance with the wording of the tablet which you were made to swear to the king and his son that you are sworn."

48: If a seignior, whose debtor's daughter is living in his house as (pledge for) a debt, asks her father, he may give her to a husband, (but) if her father is not willing, he may not give (her). If her father is dead, he shall ask one of her brothers and the latter shall speak to her (other) brothers; if a brother says, "I will redeem my sister within one full month," if he does not redeem her within one full month, the creditor, if he wishes, may declare her quit (of all claim and) give her to a husband, [However, if he wishes, he may] sell her [in accordance with] the terms [of his contract]... her... them... them... him.

49: as a brother... However, if the harlot died, because her brothers (so) declare, her... shall divide a share as a brother with the brothers of their mother.

50: If a seignior] struck a(nother) seignior's [wife] and caused her to have [a miscarriage], they shall treat [the wife of the seignior], who caused the (other) seignior's wife to [have a miscarriage], as he treated her; he shall compensate for her fetus with a life. However, if that woman died, they shall put the seignior to death; he shall compensate for her fetus with a life. But, when that woman's husband has no son, if someone struck her so that she had a miscarriage, they shall put the striker to death; even if her fetus is a girl, he shall compensate with a life.
51: If a seignior struck a(nother) seignior's wife who does not rear her children and caused her to have a miscarriage, this punishment (shall hold): he shall pay two talents of lead.

52: If a seignior struck a harlot and caused her to have a miscarriage, they shall inflict blow for blow upon him; he shall compensate with a life.

53: If a woman has had a miscarriage by her own act, when they have prosecuted her (and) convicted her, they shall impale her on stakes without burying her. If she died in having the miscarriage, they shall impale her on stakes without burying her. If someone hid that woman when she had the miscarriage [without informing [the king]]....

54: (only a few signs preserved)

55: In the case of a seignior's daughter, a virgin who was living in her father's house, whose [father] had not been asked (for her in marriage), whose hymen had not been opened since she was not married, and no one had a claim against her father's house, if a seignior took the virgin by force and ravished her, either in the midst of the city or in the open country or at night in the street or in a granary or at a city festival, the father of the virgin shall take the wife of the virgin's ravisher and give her to be ravished; he shall not return her to her husband (but) take her; the father may give his daughter to her ravisher in marriage. If he has no wife, the ravisher shall give the (extra) third in silver to her father as the value of a virgin (and) give his daughter to her father as whom he wishes.

56: If the virgin has given herself to the seignior, the seignior shall (so) swear and they shall not touch his wife; the seducer shall give the (extra) third in silver to her father as the value of a virgin (and) the father shall treat his daughter as he wishes.

57: Whether it is flogging or . . . [of] a seignior's wife [that] is prescribed [on] the tablet, [let it be done in the presence of the judges].

58. In all penalties, [whether tearing out (the eyes) or] cutting off (the ears) of [a seignior's wife], let the official be informed [and let him come] (and do) as [it is prescribed on the tablet].

59. Apart from the penalties for [a seignior's wife] which [are prescribed] on the tablet, [when she deserves it], a seignior may pull out (the hair of) his wife, mutilate (or) twist her ears, with no liability attaching to him.

The month of Sha-sarat, the 2nd day, the eponymy of Sagitu.

---

185
tables containing the herald's proclamation belonging to the judges they shall write; one [tablet] the registrars. . . .

7: [If a seignior destroyed the house of his neighbor,] . . . as much as [the owner of the house] claims . . . for . . . and the value of the house . . . which he destroyed . . . twofold on the value of the house — he shall give to the owner of the house . . .; for the one talent of lead they shall flog him five (times) [with staves] (and) he shall do the work of the king for one [full] month.

8: If a seignior has encroached on the more important bounded property86 of his neighbor, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall give up one-third as much field as he encroached on; they shall cut off one finger of his; they shall flog him fifty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month.

9: If a seignior infringed upon the less important bounded property from allotment,87 when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall pay one talent of lead (and) give up one-third as much field as he encroached on; they shall flog him fifty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king for one full month.

10: If a seignior dug a well (or) constructed a dike in a field not his, he lost title to his well (or) his dike; they shall flog him thirty (times) [with staves] (and) give up one-third as much field as he dug, and made bricks, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall give up one-third as much field (and) one-third as much field as he destroyed.

11: And . . . a creditor . . . to do . . . or . . . the creditor . . . the tablets . . . (the produce of) the labors . . . to do . . . the field . . . to the creditor . . . he shall give.

12: If a seignior set out an orchard, [dug] a well, (or) grew trees in [his neighbor's] field, with the owner of the field looking on (and) not [objecting], the orchard is free to the one who set it out, (but) he shall give field for field to the owner of the orchard-ground.

13: If a seignior either set out an orchard or dug a well or grew vegetables or trees on ground not his, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, as soon as the owner of the field comes forward, he shall take the orchard together with (the produce of) his labors.

14: If a seignior set up brick-molds on ground not his and made bricks, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall give up one-third as much ground (and) they shall appropriate his bricks; they shall flog him fifty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king [for one full month].

15: [If a seignior] . . . on ground not his (and) made bricks, they shall appropriate [his bricks]; they shall . . .

86 This was property that came as the preferred share to the eldest son; cf. Tablet B, §1.
87 This was property that came as the secondary share, selected by lot; cf. Tablet B, §1.
88 Lit. "can come."
89 Lit. "tablet."
90 Lit. "water of Adad (the god of rain)."
91 Schroeder, KAT. No. 6, pp. 20 f., plus No. 143, p. 89. The two tablets are combined by Weidner, op. cit., Tafel 111, No. 1.
92 Lit. "the son of a seignior or the daughter of a seignior," where "son" and "daughter" are used in a technical sense, meaning one who belongs to the class of seigniors.
93 Lit. "his hand shall go up from."
property; they shall flog him ... (times) [with staves] (and) he shall do the work of the king for twenty days.

3: [If a seignior] sold into another country [either a man of the aristocracy] or a woman of the aristocracy who [was living in his house] as (security for) money or as a pledge, [when they have prosecuted him] (and) convicted him, he shall forfeit his money; he shall give [his equivalent in accordance with his value to] the owner of the property; they shall flog him____(times) [with staves] (and) he shall do the work of the king for forty days. [If the man that he sold] died in the other country, he shall [compensate with a life]. An Assyrian man or an Assyrian woman [who] was taken [at the total value] may be sold into another country.

4: [If a seignior] sold [either an ox or] an ass or a horse or any beast not [his own which] was stabled in his house [as a pledge], he shall give [a beast like it in value], (but) he need not return the money. If [he did not give] a beast, he shall forfeit [his money]; the owner of the property whose [beast] was stabled [in the seignior's house] shall seize his beast, while the receiver [of] the beast [shall be reimbursed] for his money by the seller.

5: [If a seignior], upon stealing either an ox or an ass or a horse [or any other beast] from the pasture, [sold it] to a(nother) seignior at the proper price and the purchaser [paid the proper] price without knowing [that it was stolen], should it be found [in his possession], the seller shall compensate [in full] for the thing stolen, as much as it turned out to be.

6: [When a seignior found either a] ... or a beast or anything else [that was lost] and witnesses [saw it, if the seignior sold it and] the owner of that property recognized [his property] in the possession of [the purchaser] (and) seized (it), but the seignior [declared, "I purchased it," the owner of the property shall [not] take his property [from his hand; he shall give it back] and get (it) from the hand of the seller and [Furthermore, the seignior] who bought the property and from whose hand [the owner of the property did take his property shall be reimbursed] by the seignior who sold (it) to him. [If] the seller declares, "I did not [know] that his property was lost," [the witnesses who] saw (it) shall prosecute [him];

6a: ... he shall take and ... which for money ... two goats to the owner of the silver ... has come forward and whatever ... he shall not take from him

7: [If there was a] ... or anyone who was living [in the house of] an Assyrian as a pledge [or as (security for) money] and the time expired ... if he ... the money for as much as his value, he shall take ... ; if he did not ... his money value ... he shall acquire and take ... he shall make known; the principal of the money ... there is not

8: [If a seignior stole a] ... or a beast or anything else, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall pay ... [minas of lead; they shall flog him fifty (times) with staves (and) he shall do [the work of the king for___days]. The judges of the land [shall give] this judgment [If the stolen] (property) has reached (the value of) ... [minas of lead] and [he has sold] the stolen (property), as much as he stole, [for the full price], small or great, the king shall inflict on him such [punishment] as he thinks fit

9: [If, when a seignior] entrusted everything of every sort [either to his wife] or to a slave, [something from the house] was placed in deposit elsewhere [and the receiver], in whose house the deposit was made, did not report [the deposit to the seignior], who entrusted his house, [and the property] was found [in] his possession, [the owner of the property shall take his property], while that seignior shall be liable for the stolen (property).

10: [If a seignior] has overvalued [a trust] from his neighbor (and) has put (it) in writing, when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, since he is a thief, (he shall bear) the punishment which the king, [as he thinks fit], inflicts on him.

11: [If a seignior] has overvalued ... (and) has put (it) in writing [so as to] make the creditors lose [their money], when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, [because] he wrote down [too large an amount], they shall flog him... (times) with staves ... the hand of the creditors ... the clerk a n . . .

TABLET E

1: ... [when they have prosecuted him] (and) convicted him ... which he paid back ... they shall flog him; from ... thirty minas of lead ... and the rest of the fifteen minas ... the sons of the king (and) the judges... which he paid back in accordance with what which outside to the son ... the king....

2: [If] ... he struck ... to the head ... which ... one mina ... h i m ....

3: [If]... everything, as much as ... let him receive. However, if from ... he seized and the work ... he will not turn ... his hire he shall not ... the employer, ...

4: [If] ... the doer ... shall deposit... of the former creditor ... of the creditor ... a n ....

TABLET Y

1: ... to ... the sheep which... ... However, if [the seignior , .. and carried off] a sheep from the herd of his neighbor and changed [its ownership mark] and substituted his own ownership mark, [they shall flog] the seignior who carried off the sheep one hundred (times) with [staves] (and) they shall pull out (his hair); [he shall do] the work [of the king] for one full month and he shall also be liable for the theft of the sheep.

2: The herdsman of a herd of horses must not sell [a beast] either for money [or for] ... without asking its owner; he must n o t ... out of his hands; the herdsman of the herd and the receiver [of the beast] ... the

 Schroeder, KAV, No. 4, p. 19.

 Schroeder, KAV, No. 5, p. 19.
beast which he sold... [since he is a thief], they shall mutilate his face; they shall...

TABLET K 46

1: ... and he himself....
2: ... of the king you must not [take... bail... you must not take; bail....
3: ... silver let him produce, any falling off before... let him pass over, let him... these... of silver and his quota

TABLET L 48

1: ... from him... you must not take.
2: ... to the burgler... which was established....
3: [If] ... bribed a citizen of his land and..., when they have prosecuted him (and) convicted him, he shall complete it a d....
4: [If] ... of the judge his debtor to his house... the debtor need not repay the... of the judge; if... which his plaintiff
5: ... which he keeps... the bribe... to....

TABLET M 46

1: ... on his own initiative... "Sell (it) to me;"... it sank... whether it sank or was altered... they must make good the boat with its cargo... or they shall compensate that person who has laid claim to the boat...; the boatman who... did not swear by the king shall not be reinstated.47
2: [If]... a boat whether it was drifting downstream48 or crossing from one bank to the other, with the current... carelessly rammed a loaded boat and has sunk (it) [or]... rammed an empty boat and [has sunk it], as much cargo as was lost...
3: [If a seignior], while [he was making] a journey, gave clothing to a clothier to wash [and when he returned the clothier] declared, "It is lost," [he shall make good] in full to the owner of the clothing whatever clothing was lost. However, if he sold (it) and it has been heard of [in the city, when he have prosecuted him] and convicted him, [or] it was found [in the possession of the purchaser], the seignior’s... shall make]... fourfold [restitution] for the stolen (property).

TABLET N 49

1: If a seignior [said] to a(nother) seignior... in a brawl, "You uttered blasphemy... and you have profaned the temple of god,"... they shall flog him forty (times) with staves....
2: If a seignior [said] to a(nother) seignior... in a brawl, "[You uttered] blasphemy... and you have profaned the temple of god,"... since he is not able to prosecute (him and) did not prosecute (him), they shall flog that seignior [forty (times) with staves (and) he shall do the work of the king] for one [full] month.49

TABLET O 51

1: [If]... prescribed... for his sons, they shall do....
2: ... his mind was changed... his house he does not determine... which they did....
3: ... on the days... the houses which... the male slaves... and the orchards... after this... the tablets which... and the witnesses as many as....
4: If brothers [divide] the estate of [their] father... the orchards and the wells [on the land, the oldest son shall choose (and) take two] portions [and then his brothers one] after the other shall choose (and) [take (theirs). The youngest son shall divide up any] cultivated land [along with all] the (produce of their) labors; [the oldest son shall choose (and) take one portion and then cast lots with his brothers for his second portion].52

5: If the owner... their (fem.) water... they shall make claim and give....
6: If there is water on the land in [the wells which can be brought on to the irrigated land in order to prepare (it)], the owners [of the fields shall assist one another]; each shall do the work [to the extent of his field] (and) irrigate his field. [However, if there is no cooperation among them, the cooperative one among them] shall apply to [the judges] (and) procure the [judges’] written order, [and then he may do the work, take] that water for [himself (and) irrigate his field, with no one else irrigating (from it)].58

7: ... his freedom... he cut off, he shall pay one mina of silver... he shall pay... minas of silver... he shall pay four qu... by proper reckoning... they shall take.

The Hittite Laws

(Translator: Albrecht Goetze)

The laws, as they have come down to us, represent two tablets of a series called "If anyone." A label which is accidentally preserved (ABoT, 52) proves that—possibly in a different arrangement—there existed a third tablet.

Other independent translations were presented by the following authors: F. Hrozný, Code Hittite provenant de Vasie Mineure (1922); A. Wallhier in J.M.P. Smith, The Origin and History of Hebrew Law (1931), 246-79; E. Neufeld, The Hittite laws (1951) (with photos of almost all cuneiform texts);

50 §1 and 2 are similar to Tablet A, Ss18 and 19, and have been restored in part from them.
51 Weidner, op. cit., Tafel v, No. 2.
52 Weidner, op. cit., Tafel vi, No. 2.
53 Weidner, op. cit., Tafel vi, No. 2.
54 Weidner, op. cit., Tafel vi, No. 2.
55 Weidner, op. cit., Tafel vi, No. 2.
56 Weidner, op. cit., Tafel vi, No. 2.
1. If anyone kills a man or a woman in a quarrel, he shall be declared liable for him/her. He shall give four persons, man or woman, and pledge his estate as security.

2. If anyone kills a male or a female slave in a quarrel, he shall be declared liable for him/her. He shall give two persons, man or woman, and pledge his estate as security.

3. If anyone strikes a free man or woman and he/she dies, (only) his hand doing wrong, he shall be liable for him/her. He shall give one person and pledge his estate as security.

4. If anyone strikes a male or a female slave and he/she dies, (only) his hand doing wrong, he shall be liable for him/her. He shall give two minas of silver.

5. If anyone kills a Hittite merchant, he shall give 100 minas of silver and pledge his estate as security. If (it happens) in the country of Luwia or in the country of Pala, he shall give 100 minas of silver and replace his goods; if (it happens) in the Hatti land, he shall be declared liable for the merchant himself.

6. If a person, man or woman, dies in another town, he on whose property he/she dies shall set aside 100 gippellar of his property and he² shall receive it.

7. If anyone blinds a free man or knocks out his teeth, they would formerly give 1 mina of silver, now he shall give 20 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

8. If anyone blinds a male or female slave or knocks out his/her teeth, he shall give 10 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

A measure, probably a cubit.

i.e. the heir.
Later version of 16: If anyone tears off a slave’s ear, he shall give 6 shekels of silver.

17: If anyone causes a free woman to miscarry—if (it is) the 10th month, he shall give 10 shekels of silver, if (it is) the 5th month, he shall give 5 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

Later version of 17: If anyone causes a free woman to miscarry, he shall give 20 shekels of silver.

18: If anyone causes a slave-woman to miscarry, if (it is) the 10th month, he shall give 5 shekels of silver.

Later version of 18: If anyone causes a slave-girl to miscarry, he shall give 10 shekels of silver.

19 (A): If any Luwian steals a person—man or woman—from Hattusa and carries him to the country of Arzawa, but his master traces him out, he shall be declared liable for his estate. (B): If in Hattusa any Hittite steals a Luwian and carries him to the country of Luwiya, they would formerly give 12 persons, now he shall give 6 persons and pledge his estate as security.

20: If any Hittite steals a slave from the country of Luwiya and carries him to the Hatti land, but his master traces him out, he shall give him 12 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

21: If anyone steals the slave of a Luwian from the country of Luwiya and carries him to the Hatti land, but his master traces him out, he shall receive just the slave; there will be no compensation.

22: If a slave runs away and anyone brings him back—if he seizes him in the vicinity, he shall give him shoes; if on this side of the river, he shall give him 2 shekels of silver; if on the other side of the river, he shall give him 3 shekels of silver.

23: If a slave runs away and goes to the country of Luwiya, he shall give to him who brings him back 6 shekels of silver. If a slave runs away and goes to an enemy country, whoever brings him nevertheless back, shall receive him (the slave) himself.

24: If a male or female slave runs away, the man at whose hearth his master finds him/her, shall give a man’s wages for 1 year, (namely) x shekels of silver, but a woman’s wages for 1 year, (namely) x^2 shekels of silver.

25: If a man fouls a storage vessel or a cistern, they would formerly give 6 shekels of silver; he who fouled would give 3 shekels of silver and for the palace they would take at random 3 shekels of silver. The king has now abandoned the (share) of the palace, and only the one who fouled gives 3 shekels of silver and pledges his estate as security.

26: (preserved only in traces)

26 (A).*: If a woman send away a man, she shall give him ... and ... The man shall get his children.

26 (B): If a man divorces a woman, and she ... , he may sell her; whoever [buys her] shall give 12 shekels of silver.

27: If a man takes a wife and carries her to his house, he takes her dowry with her. If the woman dies, they turn her property into (property) of the man, and the man also receives her dowry. But if she dies in the house of her father, and there are children, the man will not receive her dowry.

28: If a girl is promised to a man, but another (man) elopes with her, as soon as he elopes, he shall compensate the first man for whatever he [has given]; her parents will not make any compensation. But if the parents give her to another man, the parents will make compensation. If the parents refuse (to make compensation), they shall withhold her from him.

29: If a girl is betrothed to a man and he has given the bride-price for her, but the parents subsequently abrogate it (i.e. the contract) and withhold her from the man, they (i.e. the parents) shall make double compensation.

30: If the man has not yet taken the girl and refuses her, he forfeits the bride-price which he has brought.

31: If a free man and a slave-girl (are) lovers and they cohabit, he takes her for his wife, they found a family and have children, but subsequently, either (as) they quarrel or (as) they reach a friendly agreement, they break up the family, the man receives the children, but the woman receives one child.

32: If a slave takes a free woman, the provision of the law is the same for them.

33: If a slave takes a slave-girl, the provision of the law is the same for them.

34: If a slave brings the bride-price for a woman and takes her for his wife, no one shall change her social status.

35: If an overseer or a shepherd elopes with a free woman and does not bring the bride-price for her, she becomes a slave for three years.

36: If a slave brings the bride-price to the son of a free man and takes him as antiyanza, no one shall change her(?) social status.

37: If anyone elopes with a woman and an avenger goes after them, if two men or three men die, there be no compensation (the reason being) "Thou hast become a wolf."

38: If men are implicated in a lawsuit and an avenger comes for them, (if) then the defendants get enraged and (one of them) strikes the avenger so that he dies, there will be no compensation.

39: If the inhabitant of a town has possession of another (inhabitant)’s fields, he shall also perform (the respective) service to the liege lord. If he refuses the socage, he (thereby) gives up the fields, but he must not sell them.

40: If a craftsman disappears (and) a socman is assigned (in his stead), (if) the socman says: "This is my craftsman’s fee, but this (other one) is my socage," he shall secure for himself a sealed deed concerning the fields; then he has (legal) possession of the craftsman’s fee and shall also perform the socage. If he refuses the craftsman's service, they will declare the fields of the craftsman vacant and the people of the town shall work them. If the king gives deportees, they shall give him the fields and he shall become a (landed) craftsman.

* This and the following section are taken from KUR xxvi. 56.

41: If a socman disappears (and) a craftsman is assigned (in his stead), (if) the craftsman says: "This is my craftsman's fee, but this (other one) is my socage," he shall secure for himself a sealed deed concerning the fields; then he has (legal) possession of the craftsman's fee and shall also perform the socage. If he refuses the socage, they take the fields of the socman for the palace, and the socage expires.

42: If anyone hires a man and he goes to war and dies, if the hire has been given, there will be no compensation. If his hire has not been given, he shall give one person and as hire he will give 12 shekels of silver, and as the hire of a woman he will give 6 shekels of silver.

43: If a man customarily fords a river with his ox, another (man) pushes him aside, seizes the tail of the ox and crosses the river, but the river carries the owner away, they shall receive that very man.

44: If anyone pushes a man into a fire so that he dies, he will give his son. If anyone has performed a rite of purification on a man and disposes of the remnants of the offerings, if he disposes of them in anyone's field or house, it is sorcery and (a case for the) court of the king.

Later version of 44: [ ... ] he shall purify him again. If anything in the house goes wrong, he shall purify him again. For whatever perishes in it, he shall make compensation once.

45: If anyone finds implements, he shall return them to their owner; he shall reward him. If he does not give them (back), he becomes a thief.

Later version of 45: If anyone finds implements or an ox, a sheep, a horse (or) an ass, he shall drive it back to its owner and he shall reward him. If he does not find the owner, but secures witnesses for himself, and (if) afterward its owner finds it out, he shall replace for him whatever was destroyed of the respective (property). But if he does not secure witnesses for himself, and afterward its owner finds it out, he shall be considered a thief and shall make treble compensation.

46: If in a village anyone holds fields under socage as inheritance—if the fields have all been given to him, he shall render the services; if the fields have been given to him only to a small part, he shall not render the services, they shall render them from his father's house. If he usurps fields of the estate-leaver or the people of the village give a field (to him), he shall render the services.

Later version of 46: (The first part is almost identical with the earlier version. The second part is as follows:) If the field (and) fallow of the testator are vacant or the people of the village give him field (and) fallow, he shall render the services.

47: If anyone holds fields as a gift from the king, he shall not render the services. The king will take a loaf from (his) table and give it to him.—If anyone buys all the fields of a craftsman, he shall render the services. If he buys a great (part of) the fields, he shall not render the services. If he usurps the fields or the people of the village give them (to him), he shall render the services.

Later version of 47: 10 If anyone holds field (and) fallow as a gift from the king and if the king exempts him, he shall not render the services.—If anyone buys all the field (and) fallow of a craftsman and the owner of the field (and) fallow perishes, he shall perform the socage which the king imposes upon him. But if the owner of field (and) fallow is alive or the house of the owner of field (and) fallow is continued either in this country or in another country, he shall not perform the socage.—"If anyone holds field (and) fallow as a gift from the king, he shall render the services connected with the fields. If he is exempted by order of the palace, he shall not render the services. If anyone buys all the fields of a craftsman, they shall ask the king, and he shall render those services which the king orders. If there remain fields in the hands of the man from whom he buys, he shall not render the services. If field (and) fallow are vacant or the people of the village give it to him, he shall render the services.

48: A hipparas man renders the services, but no one shall transact business with a hipparas man. No one shall buy his son, his field (or) his vineyard. Whoever transacts business with a hipparas man, shall forfeit the purchasing-price. Whatever the hipparas man sold, he shall receive back.

Later version of 48: (It is virtually identical with the older version.)

49: If a hipparas man steals, there will be no compensation. If he is considered a felon, the community to which he belongs will make compensation. If one would indict them for theft, all of them were criminals or would have to be considered as thieves. Whether this (man) seize one (of them), or that (man) another, they would . . . (a penalty).

50: The people who live in Nerik, in Arinna (and) in Zipplanta, (and) the priests in every town—their houses (shall be) exempt. But their associates shall render the services. The house of a man who stays in Arinna for 11 months, and he at whose gate an eyan12 is erected, (shall be) free.

51: Formerly the house of a man who had become a weaver in Arinna (was) exempt, also his associates and his relations (were) exempt. Now (only) his own house (is) exempt, but his associates and his relations perform socage and render the services. In Zippalantiya it is just the same.

52: The slave of the seal-house, the slave of a royal prince (and) the master of a . . . who hold a field among craftsmen, render the services.

---

9 i.e. the authorities of the respective village or town.

10 The following precedes §46 of the later version.

11 The following has its place after §46 of the later version.

12 Otherwise translated by "pole."
53: If a craftsman and his associate live together, but decide when quarreling to divide their household, if there are on their land ten heads (of slaves), the craftsman receives 7 and his associate receives 3. The cattle (and) sheep on their land they shall divide in the same ratio. If anyone holds a royal gift with (special) deed, in case they divide an old estate, the craftsman receives 2 parts of the gift and his associate receives one part.

54: Previously the Manda people, the Sala people, the people of the cities Tamalki, Hatra, Zalpa, Tashiniya, Hemuwa, the archers, the carpenters, the grooms and their ktruhhda men did not render any services and did not perform socage.

55: When the Hittites, socmen, came (to) petition the father of the king and announce: "No one pays any wage and they refuse us (with the words): 'You are (only) socmen,'" the father of the king [rose] in the assembly and declared under his seal: "Go ye! Ye shall be just as your comrades!"

56: No one of the metal workers shall be freed from participating in a royal campaign in a fortress, (and) from cutting a vineyard. The gardeners shall render the full services.

57: If anyone steals a bull—if it is a weanling, it is not a bull; if it is a yearling, it is not a bull; if it is a two-year-old, that is a bull—they would formerly give 30 (head of) cattle. Now he shall give 15 (head of) cattle, (specifically) 5 two-year-olds, 5 yearlings (and) 5 weanlings and he shall pledge his estate as security.

58: If anyone steals a stallion—if it is a weanling, it is not a stallion; if it is a yearling, it is not a stallion; if it is a two-year-old, that is a stallion—they would formerly give 30 horses. Now they shall give 15 horses, (specifically) 5 two-year-old horses, 5 yearlings (and) 5 weanlings and he shall pledge his estate as security.

59: If anyone steals a ram, they used to give formerly 30 sheep. Now he shall give 15 sheep, (specifically) 5 ewes, 5 rams (and) 5 lambs.

60: If anyone finds a bull and removes the brand, (if) its owner traces it out, he shall give 7 (head of) cattle; he shall give (specifically) 2 two-year-olds, 3 yearlings (and) 2 weanlings and he shall pledge his estate as security.

61: If anyone finds a stallion and removes the brand, (if) its owner traces it out, he shall give 7 horses; he shall give (specifically) 2 two-year-olds, 3 yearlings (and) 2 weanlings and he shall pledge his estate as security.

62: If anyone finds a ram and removes the brand, (if) its owner traces it out, he shall give 7 sheep; he shall give (specifically) 2 ewes, 3 rams, (and) 2 lambs and he shall pledge his estate as security.

63: If anyone steals a plow-ox, they would formerly give 15 (head of) cattle. Now he shall give 10 (head of) cattle; he shall give (specifically) 3 two-year-olds, 3 yearlings (and) 4 weanlings and he shall pledge his estate as security.

64: If anyone steals a draft horse, its treatment is the same.

65: If anyone steals a tamegoat or a trained mountain sheep, the compensation is as for a buck; and the compensation for it is the same.

66: If a plow-ox or a draft horse or a (milk-giving) cow or a brood ass-mare attaches itself to the corral, or if a tamed buck or a ewe or a ram attaches itself to the fold (and) its owner finds it, he shall receive the respective (animal); there shall be no question of a thief.

67: If anyone steals a cow, they would formerly give 12 (head of) cattle; now he shall give 6 (head of) cattle; he shall give (specifically) 2 two-year-olds, 2 yearlings (and) 2 weanlings and he shall pledge his estate as security.

68: If anyone steals a brood mare, its treatment is the same.

69: If anyone steals a ewe or a ram, they used to give formerly 12 sheep. Now he shall give 6 sheep; he shall give (specifically) 2 ewes, 2 rams (and) 2 lambs and he shall pledge his estate as security.

70: If anyone steals a horse, a mule or an ass and its owner traces it out, he shall receive the respective (animal). In addition he (the thief) shall give it a second time and he shall pledge his estate as security.

71: If anyone finds an ox, a horse (or) a mule, he shall drive it to the king’s court. If he finds it in the country, the elders may assign it to him and he may harness it. When its owner finds it, he shall receive the respective animal; there shall be no question of a thief. If the elders do not assign it (to him), he becomes a thief.

72: If an ox dies in anyone’s field, the owner of the field shall give 2 oxen and pledge his estate as security.

73: If anyone disposes of a living ox (found on his property), he is as if he had committed theft.

74: If anyone breaks the horn or the foot of an ox, he shall receive that (animal) and give one in good condition to the owner of the ox. If the owner of the ox says: "I want to have my own ox," he shall receive his ox and he (i.e. the offender) shall give him 2 shekels of silver.

75: If anyone yokes an ox, a horse, a mule (or) an ass and it dies, or a wolf devours it or it gets lost, he shall give (the value of) the respective animal. But if he contends: "It died by the hand of god," he shall take an oath.

76: If anyone appropriates an ox, a horse, a mule (or) an ass and it dies at his place, he is declared liable for it and he shall pay its hire.

77 (A): If anyone hits a bearing cow and causes it to miscarry, he shall give 2 shekels of silver. If anyone hits a bearing mare and causes it to miscarry, he shall give 2 shekels of silver.

77 (B): If anyone blinds the eye of an ox or a horse, he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

78: If anyone hires an ox, applies to him the lash or the whip and its owner finds him out, he shall give 1 parisu of grain.

79: If oxen go upon a field and the owner of the field finds them, he may yoke them for one day till the stars come out, and shall (then) drive them back to their owner.

80: If anyone throws a sheep to the wolves, its owner shall receive the meat and he himself shall keep the hide.

81: If anyone steals a fattened pig, they would formerly give 1 mina of silver. Now he shall give 12 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

82: If anyone steals an ordinary pig, he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

83: If anyone steals a bearing pig, he shall give 6 shekels of silver. They shall also count the little pigs, and he shall give 1 parisu of grain" for each 2 little pigs.

84: If anyone strikes a bearing pig so that it dies, its treatment is the same.

85: If anyone separates a little pig and steals (it), he shall give 1 parisu of grain.

86: If a pig goes to a threshing floor, or a field (or) a garden, and the owner of the threshing floor, the field (or) the garden strikes it so that it dies, he shall return it to its owner. If he does not return it, he becomes a thief.

87: If anyone strikes the dog of a herdsman so that it dies, he shall give 20 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

88: If anyone strikes the dog of a fancier so that it dies, he shall give 12 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

89: If anyone strikes an ordinary dog so that it dies, he shall give 1 shekel of silver.

90: If a dog devours pig’s lard and the owner of the lard finds him out, he may kill it and recover the lard from its stomach. There will be no compensation.

91: If anyone steals bees from a swarm, they would formerly give 1 mina of silver. Now he shall give 5 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

92: If anyone steals two beehives or three beehives, formerly (it meant exposure to) bee-sting; now he shall give 6 shekels of silver. If anyone steals a beehive while no bees are therein, he shall give 3 shekels of silver.

93: If they seize a free man in (side) an enclosure before he has entered the house, he shall give 12 shekels of silver. If they seize a slave in (side) an enclosure before he has entered the house, he shall give 6 shekels of silver.

94: If a free man steals in a house, he shall give (back) the respective goods; they would formerly give for the theft 1 mina of silver, now he shall give 12 shekels of silver. If he has stolen much, they shall impose a heavy fine upon him; if he has stolen little, they shall impose a small fine upon him and he shall pledge his estate as security.

95: If a slave steals in a house, he shall give (back) the respective goods. For the theft he shall give 6 shekels of silver. They shall also cut off the slave’s nose and ears and give him back to his master. If he has stolen much, they shall impose a heavy fine upon him; if he has stolen little, they shall impose a small fine upon him. If his master says: “I will make compensation in his stead,” he may do so; but if he refuses, he will lose the slave.

96: If a free man steals in a granary and obtains grain in the granary, he shall fill the granary with grain and give 12 shekels of silver and he shall pledge his estate as security.

97: If a slave steals in a granary and obtains grain in the granary, he shall fill the granary with grain and give 6 shekels of silver and he shall pledge his estate as security.

98: If a free man sets a house on fire, he shall rebuild the house. Whatever was lost in the house, whether it is man, cattle or sheep, he shall replace as a matter of course.

99: If a slave sets a house on fire, his master shall make compensation in his stead. They shall cut off the slave’s nose (and) ears and shall give him back to his master. But if he does not make compensation, he will lose that (slave).

100: If anyone sets a shed on fire, he shall feed his cattle and be declared liable till spring, he shall (also) give back the shed. If there was no straw therein, he shall just rebuild the shed.

TABLET II

101: If anyone steals vine or fruit branch, or ... s, or onions, they would formerly give for 1 vine χ shekels of silver, for 1 fruit branch 1 shekel of silver, for 1 ... χ shekel of silver, for 1 bunch of onions 1 shekel of silver, and they would strike him with the spear in the palace. Formerly they proceeded like this. Now he shall give, if a free man, 6 shekels of silver, and if a slave, 3 shekels of silver.

102: If anyone steals timber from a pond—if (it is) 1 talent of wood, (he shall give) 3 shekels of silver; if (it is) 2 talents of wood, he shall give 6 shekels of silver; if (it is) 3 talents of wood, (it is a case for) the court of the king.

103: If anyone steals freshly planted things—if (it is) 1 gipessar of planting, he shall replant it and give one shekel of silver; if (it is) 2 gipessar of planting, he shall replant it and give 2 shekels of silver.

104: If anyone cuts down pomegranate trees or medlar trees, he shall give χ shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

105: If anyone makes fire in ... and (the fire) spreads to a fruit bearing orchard—if vines, fruit trees, pomegranate trees (or) medlar trees get burnt up, he shall give 6 shekels of silver for each tree; the planting he shall replant and he shall pledge his estate as security. If he is a slave, he shall give 3 shekels of silver.

106: If anyone makes fire on his field and sets another man’s bearing field on fire, he who set the fire shall take the burnt-over field for himself and give a good field to the owner of the (burnt-over) field and (that man) shall reap it.

10 A measure of capacity.

See fi.ii.
107: If a man turns (his) sheep into a vineyard under cultivation and they ruin it—if (it is) fruit bearing, he shall give 10 shekels of silver for each acre, but if (it is) bare, he shall give 3 shekels of silver.

108: If anyone steals tendrils from a fenced-in vineyard—if (there are) 100 trees, he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security. But if they (are) not fenced-in and he steals tendrils, he shall pay 3 shekels of silver.

109: If anyone disposes of fruit from an irrigated (orchard)—if (there are) 100 trees, he shall give 6 shekels of silver.

110: If anyone steals plaster from a bin—however much he steals, he shall give the same amount a second time over.

111: If anyone ... s plaster (mud) in [a ... ], it is sorcery (and a case for) the court of the king.

112: If they give [for ...] the field of a craftsman (which produces) grain, for 3 years he shall not perform socage, he will begin to perform socage from the fourth year on, and shall rank with the craftsmen.

113: If anyone cuts down ... vine, that (man) shall receive the cut-down vine and give a good one to the owner of the vine and he will vindicate. [Until] that man's vine [recovers, he keeps the offender's vine. Afterward] he takes [his own back].

(some sections mutilated or missing)

119: If anyone steals a bird from a pond or a trained ... , they would formerly give x shekels of silver. Now he shall give 12 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

120: If anyone steals ... birds — ,—if (they are) ten birds, he shall give 1 shekel of silver.

121: If anyone, a free man, steals a plow and its owner finds it out, he shall put him upon the ... and ... . Formerly they proceeded in this way. Now he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security. If he is a slave, he will give 3 shekels of silver.

122: If anyone steals a cart with all its accessories, they would formerly give 1 shekel of silver. Now he gives x shekel of silver and pledges his estate as security.

123: If anyone steals a ... , it was formerly considered] a capital crime. [Now ... ], he shall give three shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

124: If anyone steals a Jilayama, he shall give 3 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security. If anyone loads a cart, leaves it in the fields and (if) anyone steals it, he shall give 3 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

125: If anyone steals a water trough, he shall give x shekels of silver. If anyone steals a lash or a whip, he shall give 1 shekel of silver.

126: If anyone steals a zahraii(-emblem) in the gate of the palace, he shall give 6 shekels of silver. If anyone steals a bronze spear in the gate of the palace, he shall die. If anyone steals a copper nail, he will give one-half parisu of grain. If anyone steals curtains (to the amount) of 1 (bolt of) cloth, he shall give 1 bolt of wool cloth.

127: If anyone steals a door in a quarrel, he shall replace everything that may get lost in the house. He will also give 1 mina of silver and pledge his estate as security.

128: If anyone steals bricks—however much he steals, he shall give the same amount a second time over. If anyone steals stones out of a foundation, for two (such) stones he shall give 10 stones. If anyone steals a stone — - [ ... ] or a stone harmiyalli, he shall give 2 shekels of silver.

129: If anyone steals the reins, the (leather) annanu ..., the (leather) gazzimuel (or) the bronze patrol of a horse (or) a mule, they would formerly give 1 mina of silver. Now he shall give 12 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

130: If anybody steals the [ ... ] of an ox or a horse, he shall give x shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

131: If anyone steals a (leather) kapput [ ... ], he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security.

132: If anyone, a free man, steals [a ... ], he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security. If he is a slave, he shall give 3 shekels of silver.

133: If anyone, a free man, steals [a ... ], he shall give x shekels of silver. If he is a slave, he shall give x shekels of silver.

(several sections missing)

142: [If a free man] drives [a chariot, leaves it in ... , and (if) anybody steals] the wheels thereof—he shall give one-half parisu of grain for one wheel. If he (is) a slave, he shall give [ ... ] of grain for one wheel.

143: If a free man steals a (copper) knife [, a ... ], (or) a (copper) sanlit(uwall), he shall give 6 shekels of silver and pledge his estate as security. If he (is) a slave, he shall give 3 shekels of silver.

144: If a barber [cuts ... ] with a (copper) knife and ruins them, he shall give the respective [ ... ]. If anyone cuts fine cloth with a ... , he shall give 10 shekels of silver. If anyone cuts [ ... with ... ] he shall give 5 shekels of silver.

145: If anyone builds a stable, [the ... ] shall give [him] 6 shekels of silver. If he leaves out [ ... ], he shall forfeit his wages.

146: If anyone buys a horse or a ... or a garden or a pasture and another man goes and bids more and offers a purchasing price over and above the (first) price, he is a felon and he shall give 1 mina of silver. [The purchaser] will pay the first price.

147: If anyone buys an unskilled man, and another (man) bids more, he is a felon and he shall give 5 shekels of silver.

148: If anyone buys a horse, a mule (or) an ass, and another (man) bids more, he is a felon and he shall give x shekels of silver.

15 See n.13.
149: If anyone has sold a trained man and (afterward) says: "He has died," but his owner traces him out, he shall receive him. In addition he shall give him 2 persons and pledge his estate as security.

150: If a man hires himself out for wages, his wages for 1 month shall be x shekels of silver. If (it is) a woman, her wages for one month shall be x shekels of silver.

151: If anyone hires a plow-ox, its hire for 1 month shall be 1 shekel of silver. If anyone hires a [...] its hire for 1 month shall be one-half shekel of silver.

152: If anyone hires a horse, a mule (or) an ass, he shall give (as its hire) 1 month 1 shekel of silver.

(There is no gap between 152 and 157.)

157: If a bronze axe weighs 3(?) mina, its rent for 1 month is 1 shekel of silver. If an axe weighs 1 mina of silver, its rent for 1 month is one-half shekel of silver. If a bronze tapulli weighs 1 mina, its rent for 1 month is one-half shekel of silver.

158: If a man hires himself out for the harvest (on the understanding) that he will bind the sheaves, (that) the bound (sheaves) will get on the wagon, (that) he will bring it into the barn and (that) they will clear the threshing floor, his wages for three months shall be 30 parisu\(^\text{18}\) of grain. If a woman hires herself out for the harvest, her wages for 2 months shall be 12 parisu of grain.

159: If anyone yokes a team of oxen for 1 day, its hire shall be one-half parisu of grain.

160: If a smith makes a box weighing one-half mina, his wages are one and a half parisu of grain. If he makes an axe of two mina weight, his wages are 1 parisu of spelt.

161: If he makes an axe of one mina weight, his wages are 1 parisu of grain.

162: If anyone diverts a watering ditch, he shall give 1 shekel of silver. . . .

•163: If anyone's animals are branded and (anyone) else removes the brand and drives them away, (if) he puts them in (as his share) in a company, does not tell his partner and the partner unknowingly drives his (the other man's) animals away and they perish, there shall be compensation.

164: If anyone goes (to a place) to get a pawn, starts a quarrel and spoils either the sacrificial loaf or the wine destined for libations, (165\(^\text{19}\)) he shall give 1 sheep, 10 loaves (and) 1 jug of strong beer and shall make his house holy again. Until a year has elapsed, he shall keep away from his house.

166: If anyone sows seed upon seed, his neck shall be put upon the plow. They shall harness two yokes of oxen and direct the face of one (of them) this way, and the face of the other one that way; the man shall die, and the oxen shall die too. He who sowed the field first, shall take it for himself. Formerly they proceeded thus.

167: Now a sheep is substituted for the man, and two sheep are substituted for the oxen. He shall give 30 loaves of bread (and) 3 jugs of strong beer and shall resanctify it.\(^\text{1a}\) He who sowed the field first, shall reap it.

168: If anyone violates the boundary of a field and takes 1 furrow off (the neighbor's field), the owner of the field shall cut 1 gipellar\(^\text{20}\) of field (from the other's field) and take it for himself. He who violated the boundary, shall give 1 sheep, 10 loaves (and) 1 jug of strong beer and resanctify the field.

169: If anyone buys a field and then violates the boundary, he shall take a sacrificial loaf, break it for the Sun-god and say: "Thou hast planted my balance in the ground."\(^\text{21}\) Thus he shall say; (whether it is) the Sun-god (or) the Storm-god, does not make any difference.

170: If a free man kills a snake while pronouncing another man's name, he will give 1 mina of silver. If he (the offender) is a slave, he shall die.

171: If a mother draws her garment away from a son of hers, she is repudiating her sons. If her son enters (her house) again, and (if) she takes the door and moves it, takes his ill(illana) (and) his huppulli and moves it, then she accepts them again. She makes her son her son again.

172: If a man saves a free man's life in a year of famine, he shall give (a person) like himself. If he is a slave, he shall give 10 shekels of silver.

173: If anyone rejects the judgment of the king, his house shall be made a shambles. If anyone rejects the judgment of a dignitary, they shall cut off his head. If a slave rises against his master, he shall go into the pit.\(^\text{21}\)

174: If men fight one another and one of them is killed, he (who killed) shall give one person.

175: If a shepherd or an overseer takes a free woman in marriage, she shall be a slave either for two years or for four years.

176 (A): If anyone keeps a bull outside the pen, it is (a case for) the court of the king. They shall put (it) up for sale.—It breeds in the third year; the plow-ox, the wether (and) the he-goat breed in the third year.

176 (B): If anyone buys a craftsman, either a potter, a smith, a carpenter, a leatherworker, a fuller, a weaver or he buys a maker of apdli garments, he shall give 10 shekels of silver.

177: If anyone buys a trained bird-fancier, he shall give 25 shekels of silver. If he buys a man or a woman who are not fully trained (therein), he shall give 20 shekels of silver.

178: The price of a plow-ox is 12 shekels of silver. The price of a bull is 10 shekels of silver. The price of a full-grown cow is 7 shekels of silver. The price of a one-year-old plow-ox (or) cow is 5 shekels of silver. The price of a weaned calf is 4 shekels of silver. If the cow is with calf, the price is 8 shekels of silver. The price of a calf is 3 shekels of silver. The prices for a stallion

---

\(^{14}\) See n.13.

\(^{15}\) A variant offers "spelt" instead of "grain."

\(^{16}\) The dividing line found here in our text should be disregarded.

\(^{18}\) See n.i.

\(^{20}\) The implications of this formula are obscure.

\(^{21}\) A kind of punishment.
(and) a brood mare, of an ass (and) a brood ass-mare is analogous.

179: If it is a sheep, its price is 1 shekel of silver. The price for 3 goats is 2 shekels of silver. The price for 1 lambs shall give 1 shekel of silver. The price for 2 kids is one-half shekel of silver.

180: If it is a draft-horse, its price is 20 shekels of silver. The price for 1 mule is 1 mina of silver. The price for a horse in the pasture is 15 shekels of silver.
The price of a one-year-old colt is 10 shekels of silver.
The price of a one-year-old filly is 15 shekels of silver.

181: The price of a weaned colt and of a weaned filly is 4 shekels of silver. The price of 4 minas of copper is 1 shekel of silver. The price of 1 tub of fine oil is 2 shekels of silver, of 1 tub of lard 1 shekel of silver, of 1 tub of butter 1 shekel of silver, of 1 tub of honey 1 shekel of silver, of 2 cheeses 1 shekel of silver, of 3 (pieces) of yeast 1 shekel of silver.

182: The price of a happulanza garment is 12 shekels of silver. The price of a fine garment is 30 shekels of silver. The price for a blue woolen garment is 20 shekels of silver. The price of an adupli garment is 10 shekels of silver. The price of an ilkallassar garment is 3 shekels of silver. The price of an . . . is 4 shekels of silver. . .
The price of 1 fine shirt is 3 shekels of silver. [The price] of 1 (ordinary) sh[irt] is x shekels of silver].
The price of 1 (bolt of) cloth of 7 mina weight is x [shekels of silver]. The price of 1 great (bolt of) linen is 5 shekels of silver.

183: The price of 3 parisu of spelt is 1 shekel of silver.
[The price] of 4 par[isu] of . . . is x shekels of silver]. The price of 1 parisu of wine is one-half shekel of silver, of a parisu [of . . . x shekels of silver]. The price of 1 acre of . . . field is 3 [shekels of silver]. The price of 1 acre of "partition" field is 2 shekels of silver. If the field is farther out, he [shall give] 1 shekel of silver.

184: This is the tariff. As it is (valid) in a village, [it is also valid in the capital].

185 (A): The price of 1 acre of vineyard is 1 mina of silver. The price of the hide of a full-grown ox is 1 shekel of silver. The price of 5 hides of weanlings is 1 shekel of silver, of 10 calf-hides is 1 mina of silver, of a shaggy sheepskin is 1 shekel of silver, of 10 plucked sheepskins is 1 shekel of silver, of 4 goatskins is 1 shekel of silver, of 15 sheared goatskins is 1 shekel of silver, of 20 lambskins is 1 shekel of silver, of 20 kidskins is 1 shekel of silver.

185 (B): Whoever buys the meat of 2 full-grown cattle shall give 1 sheep.

186: Whoever buys the meat of 2 one-year-old cattle shall give 1 sheep. Whoever buys the meat of 5 weanlings shall give 1 sheep. Whoever buys the meat of 10 calves shall give 1 sheep. Whoever buys the meat of 10 sheep shall give a sheep, the meat of 20 lambs shall give 1 sheep, the meat of 20 goats shall give 1 sheep.

187: If a man does evil with a head of cattle, it is a capital crime and he shall be killed. They bring him to the king's court Whether the king orders him killed, or whether the king spares his life, he must not appeal to the king.

188: If a man does evil with a sheep, it is a capital crime and he shall be killed. They bring him to the king's court. Whether the king orders him killed, or whether the king spares his life, he must not appeal to the king.

189: If a man violates his own mother, it is a capital crime. If a man violates his daughter, it is a capital crime. If a man violates his son, it is a capital crime.

190: . . . If a man violates his stepmother, there shall be no punishment. (But) if his father is living, it is a capital crime.

191: If a free man cohabits with (several) free women, sisters and their mother, with this one in one country and that one in another country, there shall be no punishment. But if (it happens) in one and the same place knowing (of their relationship), it is a capital crime.

192: If a man's wife dies (and) he marries his wife's sister, there shall be no punishment.

193: If a man has a wife and then the man dies, his brother shall take his wife, then his father shall take her.
If in turn also his father dies, one of his brother's sons shall take the wife whom he had. There shall be no punishment.

194: If a free man cohabits with (several) slave-girls, sisters and their mother, there shall be no punishment.
If blood-relations sleep with (the same) free woman, there shall be no punishment. If father and son sleep with (the same) slave-girl or harlot, there shall be no punishment.

195: If however a man sleeps with the wife of his brother while his brother is living, it is a capital crime.
If a man has a free woman (in marriage) and then touches also her daughter, it is a capital crime. If a man has the daughter in marriage and then touches also her mother or her sister, it is a capital crime.

196: If his slave (or) his slave-girl commit a capital crime, they move them away and have them settled the one in this town, the other in that town; a sheep will be proffered in this one's stead and a sheep in that one's stead.

197: If a man seizes a woman in the mountains, it is the man's crime and he will be killed. But if he seizes her in (her) house, it is the woman's crime and the woman shall be killed. If the husband finds them, he may kill them, there shall be no punishment for him.

198: If he brings them to the gate of the palace and declares: "My wife shall not be killed" and thereby spares his wife's life, he shall also spare the life of the adulterer and shall mark his head. If he says, "Let them die both of them!" . . . The king may order them gone, the king may spare their lives.

199: If anyone does evil with a pig, (or) a dog, he shall die. They will bring them to the gate of the palace and the king may order them killed, the king may spare their lives; but he must not appeal to the king. If an ox leaps at a man, the ox shall die, but the man shall not die. A sheep may be proffered in the man's stead and they shall kill that If a pig leaps at a man, there shall be no punishment.

200 (A): If a man does evil with a horse or a mule, there shall be no punishment. He must not appeal to the king nor shall he become a case for the priest.—
If anyone sleeps with a foreign (woman) and (also) the king nor shall he become a case for the priest.—
there shall be no punishment. He must not appeal to an expert, he shall give him one person.

200 (B): If anyone gives his son to be trained either as a carpenter, or as a smith, [or as a potter,] or as a leather-worker, or as a fuller, he shall give (as a fee) for the training 6 shekels of silver. If he has made him an expert, he shall give him one person.

The Neo-Babylonian Laws
(Translator: Theophile J. Meek)

These laws are found on a tablet in the British Museum, published and translated by F. E. Peiser, SPAW, 1889, pp. 823-
8 and Tafel vn. They have been translated by B. Meissner, ibid.,
1918, pp. 280-97, and the better preserved portions of the tablet have been most recently translated by E. Ebeling in AOT, pp.
422-3. The tablet originally contained some sixteen paragraphs, of which only nine are well preserved. Peiser suggests a date in the time of Ashurbanipal, but what he regards as the remnants of a date is unquestionably a part of the legislation in §1. However, the script, orthography, and wording, all clearly indicate a date in the Neo-Babylonian Period.

1: (only a few words preserved)
2: .. when they bring about his conviction, he shall give [rent in] one amount for the field [to] the owner of the field on the basis of those adjoining [and for the field which he did not] look after he shall give grain on the basis of] those adjoining.
3: [The seignior, who opened] his well for irrigation purposes, but did not make [his d]l[e] strong and hence casted a flood and inundated [a field] adjoining his, shall give [grain to the owner of the field on the basis of] those adjoining.
4: (only a few signs preserved)
5: In the case of a seignior, who sealed a tablet and deed for the owner of a field [or house] with the name of another and did not conclude an agreement in accordance with the terms thereon and also did not obtain a duplicate of the tablet—the seignior with whose name the tablet and deed were inscribed shall take that field or house.
6: In the case of a seignior, who sold a female slave when there was a claim outstanding against (her) and she was taken away—the seller shall give money to the purchaser in accordance with the terms of the deed in its full amount; if she bore children, he shall give her one-half shekel of silver for each.
7: The woman, who was guilty of using or of cutting (wood) from the field of a seignior or who cut off (wood) from [a boat] or from an oven or from any sort of thing, shall give to the owner of the field three times the amount of wood that she cut from there; if she cut off (wood) from a boat (or) cut off (wood) from an oven or from any sort of thing, she shall give three times the reduction that she caused in the field.
When in the month Its (i.e. the paragraph's) law is not completed and so is not written.¹

8: (not preserved)
9: In the case of a seignior, who gave his daughter
(in marriage) to a(nother) seignior's son and the father set down a certain amount on the document and gave (it) to his son and the seignior set the dowry² for his daughter and they wrote a contract with one another—they may not contest their contract; the father may not make a deduction from anything that he wrote down for his son on the contract and indicated to his (son's) father-in-law. If, when fate carried off the father's wife, he has acquired another wife and she has borne him children, the children of the later (wife) shall take one-third of the remainder of his property.
10: The seignior, who promised a dowry to his daughter or wrote a deed for her, but whose property later dwindled, shall give his daughter a dowry commen-surate with his property that is left; the father-in-law and son-in-law may not join together to contest (it).
11: In the case of a seignior, who gave his daughter a dowry and she had no son or daughter when fate carried her off—her dowry shall revert to her father's house . . . toward the son . . . she may give her dowry to her husband or to anyone that she chooses.
12: In the case of a wife, whose dowry her husband took, who had no son (or) daughter and whose husband fate carried off—a dowry shall be given her from her husband's property as large as the dowry should be.
If her husband has presented her with a marriage-gift,² she shall take her husband's marriage-gift along with her dowry and then she is quit. If she has no dowry, the judges shall appraise her husband's property (and) something commensurate with her husband's property shall be given her.
13: When a seignior acquired a wife and she bore him children, when fate later carried off that seignior and that woman has made up her mind to enter the house of another—she may take the dowry which she brought from her father's house and whatever her husband presented her with and the husband that chooses her may marry [her]. As long as she lives, she shall have the usufruct thereof along with. . . . If she has borne children to her (later) husband, after her (death) the children of the [later (husband)] and the children of the earlier (husband) [shall share] equally her dowry
[and her marriage-gift]
14: (not preserved)

¹ This is a notation by the scribe, indicating that the tablet from which he was copying had this paragraph only partly preserved.
² In these laws nudammu is "dowry" and serequtu is "marriage-gift," which represents an interchange of meanings between the two words from the earlier laws.
15: In the case of a seignior, who acquired a wife and she bore him children and, when fate carried off his wife, he acquired another wife and she bore him children—after the father has gone to (his) fate, the sons of the earlier (wife) shall take two-thirds of the property of the paternal estate and the sons of the later (wife) one-third; their sisters who are living in the paternal home and

16: (Not preserved. At the end of the colophon the one word "Babylon" is preserved.)
Egyptian and Hittite Treaties

Egyptian Treaty
(Translator: John A. Wilson)

TREATY BETWEEN THE HITTITES AND EGYPT

The reign of Ramses II began in hostility against the Hittite state. However, by this pharaoh’s twenty-first year (about 1280 B.C.), both powers were ready to conclude a treaty, so that they might turn their attention to other problems, such as the encroachments of the “Sea Peoples.” The offensive and defensive alliance set forth in the following document mentions no effective frontier between the two empires. Perhaps there was no one firm line, but Egyptian hegemony was recognized in Palestine and southern Phoenicia, Hittite hegemony in Syria and northern Phoenicia.

Since Akkadian was the diplomatic language of the day, the Egyptian text was a translation, edited to give greater prominence to the role of Egypt in granting peace. The Hittite version (pp. 201-203) was probably much closer to the text formally agreed upon, and the two versions should be read together.

The Egyptian version was carved upon the walls of the Temple of Amon at Karnak and of the Ramesseum. The most satisfactory copy is by W. M. Müller in MVAG, vn (1902), No. 5. The standard study, with a comparison of the cuneiform and hieroglyphic texts, was made by S. Langdon and A. H. Gardiner, in JEA, vi (1920), 179-205. There is also a translation of the Egyptian in Breasted, AR, hi, §§367-391* (See Addenda).

Year 21, 1st month of the second season, day 21, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: User-maat-Re; Son of Re: Ramses Meri-Amon, given life forever, beloved of Amon-Re; Har-akhti; Ptah, South-of-His-Wall, Lord of Life of the Two Lands; Mut, the Lady of Ishru; and Khonsu Nefer-hotep; appearing on the Horus-Throne of the Living, like his father Har-akhti forever and ever.

On this day, while his majesty was in the town of Per-Ramesis Meri-Amon, doing the pleasure of his father Amon-Re; Har-akhti; Atum, Lord of the Two Lands, the Heliopolitan; Amon of Ramses Meri-Amon; Ptah of Ramses Meri-Amon; and [Seth], the Great of Strength, the Son of Nut, according as they give him an eternity of jubilees and an infinity of years of peace, while all lands and all foreign countries are prostrate under his soles forever—there came the Royal Envoy and his envoy Ra-mose, in order to beg peace from the majesty of [User-maat-Re], Son of Re: Ramses Meri-Amon, the bull of rulers, who has made his frontier where he wished in very land.

Preamble

The regulations which the Great Prince of Hatti, Hattusilis, the powerful, the son of Mursilis, the Great Prince of Hatti, the powerful, the son of the son of Suppi[luliumas], the Great Prince of Hatti, the] powerful, made upon a tablet of silver for User-maat-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, the powerful, the son of Men-maat-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, the powerful, the son of Men-peht-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, the powerful; the good regulations of peace and of brotherhood, giving peace ... forever.

Former Relations

Now from the beginning of the limits of eternity, as for the situation of the great ruler of Egypt with the Great Prince of Hatti, the god did not permit hostility to occur between them, through a regulation. But in the time of Muwatallis, the Great Prince of Hatti, my brother/ he fought with [Ramses Meri-Amon], the great ruler of Egypt. But hereafter, from this day, behold Hattusilis, the Great Prince of Hatti, [is under] a regulation for making permanent the situation which the Re and Seth made for the land of Egypt with the land of Hatti, in order not to permit hostility to occur between them forever.

The Present Treaty

Behold, Hattusilis, the Great Prince of Hatti, has set himself in a regulation with User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, beginning from this day, to cause that good peace and brotherhood occur between us forever, (10) while he is in brotherhood with me and he is at peace with me, and I am in brotherhood with him and I am at peace with him forever.

Now since Muwatallis, the Great Prince of Hatti, my brother, went in pursuit of his fate, and Hattusilis sat as Great Prince of Hatti upon the throne of his father,

Copy of the tablet of silver which the Great Prince of Hatti, Hattusilis, caused to be brought to Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—by the hand of his envoy (5) Tar-Teshub, and his envoy Ra-mose, in order to beg peace from the majesty of [User-maat-Re], Son of Re: Ramses Meri-Amon, the bull of rulers, who has made his frontier where he wished in very land.

1 Year 21, 1st month of the second season, day 21, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt:
2 Per-Ramesis Meri-Amon, doing the pleasure of his father Amon-Re; Har-akhti; Atum, Lord of the Two Lands, the Heliopolitan; Amon of Ramses Meri-Amon; Ptah of Ramses Meri-Amon; and [Seth], the Great of Strength, the Son of Nut, according as they give him an eternity of jubilees and an infinity of years of peace, while all lands and all foreign countries are prostrate under his soles forever—there came the Royal Envoy and his envoy Ra-mose, in order to beg peace from the majesty of User-maat-Re, Son of Re: Ramses Meri-Amon, the bull of rulers, who has made his frontier where he wished in very land.
3 Tar-Teshub bears a Hittite name, Ra-mose in Egyptian name. However, in the broken context above, two Hittite names appear. See E. Edel in JNES, VII (1948), 17-18.
4 The “prescribed form,” used throughout this inscription for the treaty.
5 Ramses II, the son of Seti I, the son of Ramses I.
6 Reference to a previous treaty (in the reign of Hor-em-heb?).
7 Whose best-known encounter with Ramses II was at the Battle of Kadesh, 16 years earlier; cf. pp. 255-256 below.
8 Cuneiform version: “the Sun-god and the Storm-god.” See n.15 below.
9 This is an example of the non-Egyptian language resulting from a translation of the cuneiform.
behold, I have come to be with Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, for we are [together in] our peace and our brotherhood. It is better than the peace or the brotherhood which was formerly in the land.

Behold, I, as the Great Prince of Hatti, am with [Ramses Meri-Amon], in good peace and in good brotherhood. The children of the children of the Great Prince of Hatti are in brotherhood and peace with the children of the children of [Ramses Meri-Amon], the great ruler of Egypt, for they are in our situation of brotherhood and our situation of peace. The land of Hatti, [shall be] at peace and in brotherhood like unto us forever. Hostilities shall not occur between them forever.

Mutual Renunciation of Invasion

The Great Prince of Hatti shall not trespass against the land of Egypt forever, to take anything from it. And User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, shall not trespass against the land [of Hatti, to take] from it forever.

Reaffirmation of Former Treaties

As to the traditional regulation which had been here in the time of Suppiluliumas, the Great Prince of Hatti, as well as the traditional regulation which had been in the time of Muwatallis, the Great Prince of Hatti, my father, I seize hold of it. Behold, Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, seizes hold of it together with us, beginning from this day. We seize hold of it, and we act in this traditional situation.

A Defensive Alliance—for Egypt

If another enemy come against the lands of User-maat-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, and he send to the Great Prince of Hatti, saying: "Come with me as reinforcement against him," the Great Prince of Hatti shall [come to him] and] the Great Prince of Hatti shall slay his enemy. However, if it is not the desire of the Great Prince of Hatti to go (himself), he shall send his infantry and his chariots, and he shall slay his enemy. Or, if Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, is enraged against servants belonging to him, and they commit another offence against him, and he go to slay them, the Great Prince of Hatti shall act with him [to slay] everyone [against whom] they shall be enraged.

A Defensive Alliance—for Hatti

But [if] another enemy [come] against the Great Prince [of Hatti, User]-maat-[Re] Setep-en-Re, [the great ruler of Egypt, shall] come to him as reinforcement to slay his enemy. If it is (not) the desire of Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, to come, he shall... Hatti, [and he shall send his infantry and his] chariots, besides returning answer to the land of Hatti. Now if the servants of the Great Prince of Hatti trespass against him, and Ramses Meri-Amon...

The Contingency of Death?

... the [land] of Hatti and the land [of Egypt]... the life. Should it be that I shall go [in] pursuit of my fate, then Ramses Meri-[Amon], the great ruler of Egypt, living forever, shall go and come [to] the [land of] Hatti... to cause... to make him lord for them, to make User-maat-Re Setep-en-[Re], the great ruler of Egypt, silent with his mouth forever. Now after he... the land of Hatti, and he returns... the Great Prince of Hatti, as well as the...

Extradition of Refugees to Egypt

[If a great man flee from the land of Egypt and come to] the Great Prince of Hatti, or a town belonging to the lands of Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, and they come to the Great Prince of Hatti, the Great Prince of Hatti shall not receive them. The Great Prince of Hatti shall cause them to be brought to User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, their lord, [because] of it. Or if a man or two men—no matter who—flee, and they come to the land of Hatti to be servants of someone else, they shall not be left in the land of Hatti; they shall be brought to Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt.

Extradition of Refugees to Hatti

Or if a great man flee from the land of Hatti and [come to User]-maat-[Re] Setep-en-Re, the [great] ruler of Egypt, or a town or a district or a... belonging to the land of Hatti, and they come to Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, (then) User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, shall not receive them. Ramses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, shall cause them to be brought to the Prince [of Hatti]. They shall not be left. Similarly, if a man or two men—(25) no matter who—flee, and they come to the land of Egypt to be servants of other people, User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, shall not leave them. He shall cause them to be brought to the Great Prince of Hatti.

The Divine Witnesses to the Treaty

As for these words of the regulation [which] the Great Prince of Hatti [made] with Ramses [Meri-Amon], the great ruler [of Egypt], in writing upon this tablet of silver—as for these words, a thousand gods of the male gods and of the female gods of them of the land of Hatti, together with a thousand gods of the male gods and of the female gods of them of the land of...
Egypt, are with me as witnesses [hearing] these words: the Re, the lord of the sky; the Re of the town of Arinna; Seth, the lord of the sky; Seth of Hatti; Seth of the town of Arinna; Seth of the town of Zippalanda; Seth of the town of Pe(t)t iarik; Seth of the town of Hissas(h)a; Seth of the town of Sarissa; Seth of the town of Aleppo; Seth of the town of Lihzina; Seth of the town of Saiapan; Antarep of the land of Hatti; the god of Zithari(as); the god of Karaz; the god of Hapantaliyas; the goddess of the town of Karahna; the goddess of of...;...; the Queen of the Sky; the gods, the lords of oaths; this goddess, the Lady of the Ground; the Lady of the Oath, Ishara; the Lady (30) (of the) mountains and the rivers of the land of Hatti; the gods of the land of Kizuwadna; Amon; the Re; Seth; the male gods; the female gods; the mountains; and the rivers of the land of Egypt; the sky; the earth; the great sea; the winds; and the clouds.

Curses and Blessings for this Treaty

As for these words which are on this tablet of silver of the land of Hatti and of the land of Egypt—as for him who shall not keep them, a thousand gods of the land of Hatti, together with a thousand gods of the land of Egypt, shall destroy his house, his land, and his servants. But, as for him who shall keep these words which are on this tablet of silver, whether they are Hatti or whether they are Egyptians, and they are not neglectful of them, a thousand gods of the land of Hatti, together with a thousand gods of the land of Egypt, shall cause that he be well, shall cause that he live, together with his houses and his (land) and his servants.

Extradition of Egyptians from Hatti

If a man flee from the land of Egypt—or two or three—and they come to the Great Prince of Hatti, the Great Prince of Hatti shall lay hold of them, and he shall cause that they be brought back to User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt. But, as for the man who shall be brought to Rameses Meri-Amon, the great ruler of Egypt, do not cause that his crime be raised against him; do not cause that his house or his wives or his children be destroyed; [do not cause that] he be [slain]; do not cause that injury be done to his eyes, to his ears, to his mouth, or to his legs; do not let any [crime be raised] against him.

Extradition of Hittites from Egypt

Similarly, if men flee from the land of Hatti—whether he be one or two or three—and they come to User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re, the great ruler of Egypt, let Rameses Meri-Amon, the [great] ruler [of Egypt], lay hold [of them and cause] that they be brought to the Great Prince of Hatti, and the Great Prince of Hatti shall not raise their crime against them, and they shall not destroy his house or his wives or his children, and they shall not slay him, and they shall not do injury to his ears, to his eyes, to his mouth, or to his legs, and they shall not raise any crime against him.

Description of the Tablet

What is in the middle of the tablet of silver. On its front side: figures consisting of an image of Seth embracing an image of the Great Prince of Hatti, surrounded by a border with the words: "the seal of Seth, the ruler of the sky; the seal of the regulation which Hattusilis made, the Great Prince of Hatti, the powerful, the son of Mursilis, the Great Prince of Hatti, the powerful." What is within that which surrounds the figures: the seal of Seth. What is on it] its other side: figures consisting of a female image of [the] goddess of Hatti embracing a female image of the Princess of Hatti, surrounded by a border with the words: "the seal of the Re of the town of Arinna, the lord of the land; the seal of Putu-hepa, the Princess of the land of Hatti, the daughter of the land of Kizuwadna, the [priestess] of the town off Arinna, the Lady of the Land, the servant of the goddess." What is within the surrounding (frame) of the figures: the seal of the Re of Arinna, the lord of every land.

Hittite Treaties

(Translator: Albrecht Goetze)

Treaties, rare in other parts of the ancient Near East, are relatively frequent among the Hittite texts. Most of the surviving examples of this type have been translated previously. The most important publications are the following two: E. F. Weidner, Politische Dokumente aus Kleinasien (Boghazköy Studien, VIII and ix, 1923). J. Friedrich, Staatsvertrage des Hatti-Reiches in hethitischer Sprache (MVAG, xxxi/1, 1926 and xxxiv/1, 1930). From the legal point of view the treaties have been dealt with in the following book: V. Korosec, Hethitische Staatsverträge. Ein Beitrag zu ihrer juristischen Wertung (Leipziger Rechtswissenschaftliche Studien, IX, 1931).

TREATY BETWEEN HATTUSILIS AND RAMSES II

Texts: KBo, 1, 7 + KUB, 111,121 and its duplicates KBo, 1, 25, KUB, III, 11-f-Fragm. Likhachev (Zapis'st Vostoinago Otdeleniya Russ'ago Ar'heologiches'ago Obshchestva, xxxv [1918], p. 78) and KUB, vi, 120. Literature: B. Meissner, ZDMG, xi-xii (1918), 46-57; A. H. Gardiner and S. Langdon, JEA, vi (1920), 179-205; H. Zimmer in Lehmann-Haas, Textbuch zur Religionsgeschichte (2nd ed., 1922), 332; E. F. Weidner, Politische
Title

Treaty of Rea-mashesha mai Amana,¹ the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, the valiant, with Hattusilis, the great king of the Hatti land, his brother, for establishing [good] peace [and] good brotherhood [worthy of] great [kind]ship between them forever.

Preamble

These are the words of Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king of the land of Egypt, the valiant of all lands, the son (5) of Min-mua-re,² the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, the valiant, the grandson of Minpakhata-re,³ the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, the valiant, (spoken) to Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant, the son of Mursilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant, the grandson of Suppilliumas, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant.

Relations up to the Conclusion of the Treaty

Now I have established good brotherhood (and) good peace between us forever. In order to establish good peace (and) good brotherhood in [the relationship] of the land of Egypt with the Hatti land forever (I speak) thus: Behold, as for the relationship between the land of Egypt (10) and the Hatti land, since eternity the god does not permit the making of hostility between them because of a treaty (valid) forever. Behold, Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, in order to bring about the relationship that the Sun-god⁴ and the Storm-god⁵ have effected for the land of Egypt with the Hatti land finds himself in a relationship valid since eternity which [does not permit] the making of hostility between [them] until all and everlasting time.

The Present Treaty

Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, has entered into a treaty (written) upon a silver tablet (15) with Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, [his] brother, [from] this [day] on to establish good peace (and) good brotherhood between us forever. He is a brother [to me] and I am a brother to him and at peace with him forever. And as for us, our brotherhood and our peace is being brought about and it will be better than the brotherhood and the peace which existed formerly for the land of Egypt with the Hatti land.

Future Relations of the Two Countries

Behold, Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the king of the land of Egypt, is in good peace (and) in good brotherhood with [Hattusilis], the great king, the king of the Hatti land.

Behold the sons of Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the king of the land of Egypt, (20) are in peace with (and) brothers of the sons of Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, forever. They are in the same relationship of brotherhood and peace as we.

And as for (the relationship of) the land of Egypt with the Hatti land, they are at peace and brothers like us forever.

Mutual Renunciation of Aggression

Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, shall not trespass into the Hatti land to take anything therefrom in the future. And Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, shall not trespass into the land of Egypt to take anything therefrom in the future.

Behold, the holy ordinance (valid) forever which the Sun-god and the Storm-god had brought about (25) for the land of Egypt with the Hatti land (calls for) peace and brotherhood so as not to make hostility between them. Behold, Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, has seized hold of it in order to bring about well-being from this day on. Behold, the land of Egypt (in its relation) with the Hatti land—they are at peace and brothers forever.

Defensive Alliance

If an enemy from abroad comes against the Hatti land, and Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, sends to me saying: "Come to me to help me against him," Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, (30) shall send his foot soldiers (and) his charioteers and they shall slay [his enemy and] take revenge upon him for the sake of the Hatti land.

And if Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, is angry with servants belonging to him (and if) they have failed against him and sends to Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, on their account—lo! Rea-mashesha mai Amana shall send his foot soldiers (and) his charioteers and they shall destroy all those with whom he is angry.

If an enemy from abroad comes against the land of Egypt and Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the king of the land of Egypt, your brother, sends to Hattusilis, (35) the king of the Hatti land, his brother, saying: "Come here to help me against him"—lo! Hattusilis, the king of the Hatti land, shall send his foot soldiers (and) his charioteers and they shall slay my enemies.

And if Rea-mashesha mai Amana, the king of the land of Egypt, is angry with servants belonging to him (and if) they have committed sin again [of him and I send] to Hattusilis, the king of the Hatti land, my

¹ This is Egyptian in cuneiform characters meaning "Ramses beloved of Amon."
² This is the "throne name" of Seti I in cuneiform transliteration.
³ This is the "throne name" of Ramses I in cuneiform transliteration.
⁴ Rea (Re), the chief god of the Egyptians.
⁵ The chief god of the Hittites. His name cannot be put in the text because it is always written ideographically and his real name therefore unknown.
Succession to the Throne

(40) Behold, the son of Hattusilis, the king of the Hatti land, shall be made king of the Hatti land in place of Hattusilis, his father, after the many years of Hattusilis, the king of the Hatti land. If the noblemen of the Hatti land commit sin against him—lo! [Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the king of Egypt, shall send foot soldiers (and) charioteers to take revenge upon them for the sake of the Hatti land. And after they have re-established order] in the country of the king of the Hatti land, [they shall return] to the country [of Egypt].

(41) [Corresponding provision concerning Egypt lost in a gap.]

Extradition of Fugitives

(reverse 7) [If a nobleman flees from the Hatti land and if] one (such) man comes to Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, in order to enter his services—[be it a . . . belonging to Ha-ttusilis, the king of the Hatti land, (10) [be it a . . .] or a single town—[Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, shall seize them and] shall have them brought back to the king of the Hatti land.]

(several badly broken lines)

(18) [If a nobleman] flees from Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, and if one (such) man comes to the [Hatti] land, [Ha-ttusilis, (20) [the great king, the king of the Hatti land, shall seize him and] shall have him brought back to Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of Egypt, his brother.

If one man flees from the [Hatti land or] two men, [or three men and come to] Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt;[Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of the land of Egypt, shall seize them and have them brought back to] Ha-ttusilis, his brother. [Rea-mashesa mai Amanu and Hattusilis are verily] brothers; hence [let them not exact punishment for their sins, [let them not] tear out [their eyes; (25) let them not take revenge upon] their people . . . together with] their [wives and] their children.

If [one man flees from Egypt] or two men or three men [and come to Hattusilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, Hattusilis, the great king], the king of the Hatti land, his brother, shall send them and have them brought [back to Rea-mashesa mai Amanu, the great king, the king of] the land of Egypt. [Hattusilis, the king of the Hatti land], and Rea-mashesa, the great king, the king [of the land of Egypt, are verily] brothers; hence [let them not exact punishment for their sins,] (30) [_____] let them not tear out their eyes; [let them} not take revenge upon their people . . . together with] their wives (and) with their children.

(After some fragmentary lines the text breaks off altogether. With the end of the treaty the list of the gods who were invoked as witnesses is missing.)

TREATY BETWEEN MURSILIS AND DUPPI-TESSUB OF AMURRU

Preamble

1. These are the words of the Sun! Mursilis, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant, the favorite of the Storm-god, the son of Suppiluliumas, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant.

Historical Introduction

2. Aziras* was the grandfather of you, Duppi-Tessub. He rebelled against my father, but submitted again to my father. When the kings of Nuhasse land6 and the kings of Kinza rebelled against my father, Aziras did not rebel. As he was bound by treaty, he remained bound by treaty. As my father fought against his enemies, in the same manner fought Aziras. Aziras remained loyal toward my father [as his overlord] and did not incite my father's anger. My father was loyal toward Aziras and his country; he did not undertake any unjust action against him or incite his or his country's anger in any way. 300 (shekels of) refined and first-class gold, the tribute which my father had imposed upon your father, he brought year for year; he never refused it.

3. When my father became god5 and I seated myself on the throne of my father, Aziras behaved toward me just as he had behaved toward my father. It happened that the Nuhasse kings and the king of Kinza rebelled a second time against me. But Aziras, your grandfather, and Du-Tessub, your father, [did not take their side]; they remained loyal to me as their lord. [When he grew too old] and could no longer go to war and fight, Du-Tessub fought against the enemy with the foot soldiers and the charioteers of the Amurru land just as he had fought with foot soldiers and charioteers against the enemy. And the Sun destroyed them.

(gap in which the reign of Du-Tessub was dealt with)

6*. (Du-Tessub recommends his son as his successor;)

"[. . . When I die, accept my son] Duppi-Tessub as your vassal."

7*. When your father died, in accordance with your

---

* This restoration is suggested by the Egyptian parallel.
father’s word I did not drop you. Since your father had mentioned to me your name with great praise, I sought after you. To be sure, you were sick and ailing, but although you were ailing, I, the Sun, put you in the place of your father and took your brothers (and) sisters and the Amurru land in oath for you.

Future Relations of the Two Countries

8°. When I, the Sun, sought after you in accordance with your father’s word and put you in your father’s place, I took you in oath for the king of the Hatti land, the Hatti land, and for my sons and grandsons. So honor the oath (of loyalty) to the king and the king’s kin! And I, the king, will be loyal toward you, Duppi-Tessub. When you take a wife, and when you beget an heir, he shall be king in the Amurru land likewise. And just as I shall be loyal toward you, even so shall I be loyal toward your son. But you, Duppi-Tessub, remain loyal toward the king of the Hatti land, the Hatti land, my sons (and) my grandsons forever! The tribute which was imposed upon your grandfather and your father—they presented 300 shekels of good, refined first-class gold weighed with standard weights—you shall present them likewise. Do not turn your eyes to anyone else! Your fathers presented tribute to Egypt; you [shall not do that!]

(gap)

Military Clauses

9°. [With my friend you shall be friend, and with my enemy you shall be enemy. If the king of the Hatti land is either in the Hurri land, or in the land of Egypt, or in the country of Astar, or in the country of Alse—any country contiguous to the territory of your country that is friendly with the king of the Hatti land—(or in) any country contiguous to the territory of your country that is friendly with the king of the Hatti land—as the country of Mukis, the country of Halba, the country of Kinza—but turns around and becomes inimical toward the king of the Hatti land while the king of the Hatti land is on a marauding campaign—if then you, Duppi-Tessub, do not remain loyal together with your foot soldiers and your charioteers and if you do not fight wholeheartedly; or if I should send out a prince (or) a high officer with foot soldiers and charioteers to re-enforce you, Duppi-Tessub, (for the purpose of) going out to maraud in another country—if then you, Duppi-Tessub, do not fight wholeheartedly (that) enemy with [your army and your charioteers] and speak as follows: "I am under an oath of loyalty, but [how am I to know] whether they will beat the enemy, or the enemy will beat them?"; or if you even send a man to that enemy and inform him as follows: "An army and charioteers of the Hatti land are on their way; be on your guard!"—(if you do such things) you act in disregard of your oath.

10°. As I, the Sun, am loyal toward you, do you extend military help to the Sun and the Hatti land. If an evil rumor originates in the Hatti land that someone is to rise in revolt against the Sun and you hear it, leave with your foot soldiers and your charioteers and go immediately to the aid of the king of the Hatti land! But if you are not able to leave yourself, dispatch either your son or your brother together with your foot soldiers (and) your charioteers to the aid of the king of the Hatti land! If you do not dispatch your son (or) your brother with your foot soldiers (and) your charioteers to the aid of the king of the Hatti land, you act in disregard of the gods of the oath.

11°. If anyone should press you hard, Duppi-Tessub, or (if) anyone should revolt against you, (if) you then write to the king of the Hatti land, and the king of the Hatti land dispatches foot soldiers and charioteers to your aid—(if you treat them in an unfair manner)—, you act in disregard of the gods of the oath.

12°. If they take Hittites—foot soldiers and charioteers—through Duppi-Tessub’s territory and Duppi-Tessub provides them while passing through (his) towns with food and drink—(if that army) engages in any misconduct—pillaging in his country or his towns or in an attempt at deposing Duppi-Tessub from his kingship—it acts in disregard of the oath.

Deals with Foreigners etc.

13°. If anyone of the deportees from the Nuhasse land or of the deportees from the country of Kinza whom my father removed and myself removed escapes and comes to you, (if) you do not seize him and turn him back to the king of the Hatti land, and even tell him as follows: "Go! Where you are going to, I do not want to know," you act in disregard of your oath.

14°. If anyone utters words unfriendly toward the king or the Hatti land before you, Duppi-Tessub, you shall not withhold his name from the king. Or if the Sun (iii) gives you an order in secrecy (saying): "Do this or that!" (if) that order cannot be executed, petition about it on the spot (stating): "This order I cannot execute and will not execute" and the king will reconsider it then and there. But if you do not execute an order which can (well) be executed and deceive the king, or (if) you do not keep to yourself the word which the king told you in secrecy, you act in disregard of the oath.

15°. If a country or a fugitive takes to the road and while betaking themselves to the Hatti land pass through your territory, put them on the right way, show them the way to the Hatti land and speak friendly words

1 The bracketed first part cf the section is here restored from the treaty between Mursilis and Tette of Nuhasse (KBo, 1, 4 etc. in Akkadian, translated by Weidner, loc. cit., 58 ff.). It is possible that not all the geographical names were the same here.
2 Upper Mesopotamia between the Euphrates and Assyria.
3 The region at the bend of the Euphrates south of Jeraðlus.
4 The region on the upper Tigris.
5 Its capital is Alalha, the ancient name of Atchana (Tell Afana) east of Antakya.
6 Aleppo.
7 Qadesh on the Orontes, today Tell Nebi Mendo.
8 Inadvertently omitted by the scribe.
to them! Do not send them to anyone else! If you do not put them on the right way, (if) you do not guide them on the right way to the Hatti land, but direct them into the mountains or speak unfriendly words before them, you act in disregard of the oath.

16. Or if the king of the Hatti land is getting the better of a country and puts them to flight, and they come to your country, if then you desire to take anything from them, ask the king of the Hatti land for it! You shall not take it on your own! If you lay hand on it by yourself or conceal it, (you act in disregard of the oath).

17. Furthermore, if a fugitive comes to your country, seize him!

Invocation of the Gods

18. [The Sun-god of Heaven, the Sun-goddess of Arinna, the Storm-god of Heaven, the Hattian Storm-god, Seris (and) Hurris, Mount Nanni (and) Mount Hazzi, the Storm-god of Halab, the Storm-god of Zippalanda, the Storm-god of Nerik, the Storm-god of Lihzina, the Storm-god of Hissashapa, the Storm-god of Sabina, the Storm-god of Tahaya, the Storm-god of Bettiyarik, the Storm-god of Samuha, the Storm-god of Hurma, the Storm-god of Saressa, the Storm-god of . . . , the Storm-god of Uda, the Storm-god of Kizzuwatna, the Storm-god of Ishupitta, the Storm-god of Nuhasse, the Patron-god, the Hattian Patron-god, Zithariyas, Hapantaliyas, the Patron-god of Karahna, the Patron-god of the shield, Ea, Allatum, Telepinus of Durmitta, Telepinus of Tawiniya, Telepinus of Hanhana, Ishtar the Mighty, Askaspeas; Sin, lord of the oath, Ishara, queen of the oath, Hebat, queen of heaven, Ishtar, Ishtar of the battlefield, Ishtar of Nineveh, Ishtar of Hattarina, Ninatta (and) Kulitta, the Hattian Warrior-god, the Warrior-god of Ellaya, the Warrior-god of Arziya, Yarris, Zampanas; Hantidassus of Hurma, Abaras of Samuhas, Katahhas of Ankuwa, the Queen of Katapa, Ammammas of Tahurpa, Hallaras of Dunna, Huwassanas of Hupisna, Tapisuwa of Ishupitta, the "Lady" of Landa, Kunniyawannis of Landa, NIN.PISAN.PISAN of Kinza, Mount Lablana, Mount Sariyana, Mount Pisaisa, the Lulahhi gods (and) the Hapiri gods, Ereskigal, the gods and goddessess of the Hatti land, the gods and goddessess of Amurru land, all the olden gods, Naras, Napsaras, Minki, Tuhusi, Ammunki, Ammizadu, Allalu, Anu, Antu, Apantu, Ellil, Ninilil, the mountains, the rivers, the springs, the great Sea, heaven and earth, the winds (and) the clouds—let these be witnesses to this treaty and to the oath.

Curses and Blessings

20. The words of the treaty and the oath that are inscribed on this tablet—should Duppi-Tessub not honor these words of the treaty and the oath, may these gods of the oath destroy Duppi-Tessub together with his person, his wife, his son, his grandson, his house, his land and together with everything that he owns.

21. But if Duppi-Tessub honors these words of the treaty and the oath that are inscribed on this tablet, may these gods of the oath protect him together with his person, his wife, his son, his grandson, his house (and) his country.

GOD LIST, BLESSINGS AND CURSES OF THE TREATY BETWEEN SUPPILULIAMUS AND KURTIWAZA

Text: KBo. 1,1 (and duplicates) reverse 35 ff. (in Akkadian).

A duplicate of this tablet has been deposited before the Sun-goddess of Arinna, because the Sun-goddess of Arinna regulates kingship and queenship.

In the Mitanni land (a duplicate) has been deposited before Tessub, the lord of the šurimmū of Kahat. At regular intervals shall they read it in the presence of the king of the Mitanni land and in the presence of the sons of the Hurri country. Whoever will remove this tablet from before Tessub, the lord of the šurimmū of Kahat, and put it in a hidden place, if he breaks it or causes anyone else to change the wording of the tablet—at the conclusion of this treaty we have called the gods to be assembled and the gods of the contracting parties to be present, to listen and to serve as witnesses: The Sun-goddess of Arinna who regulates kingship and queenship in the Hatti land, the Sun-god, the lord of heaven, the Storm-god, the lord of the Hatti land, Seris (and) Hurris, the mountains Nanni (and) Hazzi, the Storm-god, the lord of the KILLAM, the Storm-god, the lord of the encampment, the Storm-god, the lord of aid, the Storm-god of Bettiyarik, the Storm-god of Nerik, the Storm-god, the lord of the mounds, the Storm-god of Halab, the Storm-god of Lihzina, the Storm-god of Samuha, the Storm-god of Hurma, the Storm-god of Saressa, the Storm-god of Sapinuwa, the Storm-god of Hissashapa, the Storm-god of Tahaya, the Storm-god of . . . , the Storm-god of Kizzuwatna, the Storm-god of Uda, the Hattian Patron-god of Karahna, Zithariyas, Karzis, Hapantaliyas, the Patron-god of the field, the Patron-god of the shield, Leilwanis, Ea and Damkina, Telepinus of Tawiniya, Telepinus of Durmitta, Telepinus of Hanhana, the warlike Ishtar, Askasipa, Halkis, the 15 The bracketed part is again taken from the treaty with Tette of Nuhassi, see n.7.

16 The two bulls of the Storm-god.
17 Mons Casius near Ugarit.
18 The Lebanon.
19 The Hermon.
20 Much discussed in connection with the question as to whether the Hapiri (widely quoted as Habirü), who are ubiquitous in cuneiform texts, and to be equated with the Hebrews.
21 A kind of sanctuary or shrine.
22 The two bulls sacred to the Storm-god.
23 Mons Casius on the Mediterranean shore near Ugarit.
Moon-god lord of the oath, Ishara queen of the oath, Hebat queen of heaven, Hebat of Halba, Hebat of Uda, Hebat of Kizzuwatna, the Warrior-god, the Hattian Warrior-god, the Warrior-god of Ellaya, the Warrior-god of Arziya, Yarris, Zappanas, Hasamnelis, Hantidas-sus of Hurma, Abaras of Samuha, Katahhas of Ankuwa, Katahhas of Katapa, Mammias of Tahirupa, Hallaras of Dunna, Hwassanan of Hupisna, the "Lady" of Landa, Kunniyawannis of Landa, the Lulahhi gods (and) the Hapiri gods, all the gods and goddesses of the Hatti land, the gods and goddesses of the country of Kizzuwatna, Ereskigal, Nara, Namsara, Minku, Amminku, Tussi, Amminadu, Alalu, Anu, Antu, Elil, Ninil, Belat-Ekilli, the mountains, the rivers, the Tigris (and) the Euphrates, heaven and earth, the winds (and) the clouds;

Tessub, the lord of heaven and earth, Kusuh, the Harranian Moon-god of heaven and earth, Tessub lord of the urinu of Kahat, the . . . of Gurta, Tessub lord of Uhusuman, Ea-sarru lord of wisdom, Anu and Antu, Ellil and Ninil, the twin gods Mitra and Uruwana, Indar, the Nassatiyana gods, ELLAT, Samaminuhi, Tessub lord of Wasuukanni, Tessub lord of the amar, T of Irrite, Partahi of Suta, Nabarbi, Suruhi, Ashur star, Sala, Belat-Ekilli, Damkina, Ishara, the mountains and the rivers, the gods of heaven and the gods of the earth; at the conclusion of the words of this treaty let them be present, let them listen and let them serve as witnesses. If you, Kurtiwaza, the prince, and (you) the sons of the Hurri country do not fulfill the words of this treaty, may the gods, the lords of the oath, blot you out, (you) Kurtiwaza and (you) the Hurri men together with your country, your wives and all that you have. May they draw you like malt from its hull. Just as one does not obtain a plant from bubuwahi, even so may you Kurtiwaza with a second wife that you may take, and (you) the Hurri men with your wives, your sons and your country have no seed. These gods of the contracting parties may bring misery and poverty over you. May they overturn your throne, (yours), of Kurtiwaza. May the oaths sworn in the presence of these gods break you like reeds, you, Kurtiwaza, together with your country. May they exterminate from the earth your name and your seed (born) from a second wife that you may take. Much as you may seek uninterrupted peace for your country, from the midst of the Hurrians may that be banned. May the earth be coldness so that you fall down slipping. May the soil of your country be a hardened quagmire so that you break in, but never get across. May you, Kurtiwaza, and (you), the Hurrians, be hateful to the thousand gods, may they pursue you.

If (on the other hand) you, Kurtiwaza, the prince, and (you), the Hurrians, fulfill this treaty and (this) oath, may these gods protect you, Kurtiwaza, together with your wife, the daughter of the Hatti land, her children and her children’s children, and also (you), the Hurrians, together with your wives, your children, and your children’s children and together with your country. May the Mitanni country return to the place which it occupied before, may it thrive and expand. May you, Kurtiwaza, your sons and your sons’ sons (descended) from the daughter of the Great King of the Hatti land, and (you), the Hurrians, exercise kingship forever. May the throne of your father persist, may the Mitanni country persist.

---

4 Much discussed in connection with the question as to whether the Hapiri, ubiquitous in cuneiform texts of the times, are to be equated with the Hebrews.
5 The Hurrian form of the Storm-god.
6 The Hurrian Moon-god.
7 The Hurrian Sun-god.
8 Mitra and Varuna, the Indian gods, appear here among the Hurrian pantheon.
9 Indra, also an Indian god.
10 The Nasatyas of the Indians.
11 A kind of sanctuary or shrine.
12 Kurtiwaza’s main wife was a daughter of Suppiluliumas, his overlord.
13 Lit.: to its place.
Hittite Instructions
TRANSLATOR: ALBRECHT GOETZE

Instructions for Palace Personnel to Insure the King's Purity

(Less than half of the tablet—parts of the columns ii and iii—yields an intelligible text.)

(ii) [If] anyone does something [in an unclean way (or if)] anyone arouses [the king's displeasure], (but) you say as follows: "[The king] is not seeing us," (be aware of the fact that) the king's gods will certainly observe you. They will treat you as a goat and pursue you over the mountains, they will treat you as a sheep and pursue you over the rocks.

When some day the king's anger is aroused and I (the king) summon you, all the kitchen personnel, and hand you over to the River (for an ordeal)—whoever will be proven innocent, will remain the king's servant. But whoever will be proven guilty, I, the king, would not wish (to retain) him. Together with his wife and his children they shall put him to death.

Further: You, all the kitchen personnel—the cup-bearer, the table-man, the cook, the baker, the tawed man, the walhi man, the cellarius, the palandaldi, the dairy man, the kipliyalal, the surralai, the tappalal, the keeper of the loaves, the zuppalas—you will have to swear an oath of loyalty to the king every month. Fill a bitumen cup with water and pour it out toward the Sun-god and speak as follows: "Whoever does something in an unclean way and offers to the king polluted water! Strain the water with a strainer! At some time I, the king, found a hair in the water pitcher in Sanahuitta. The king became angry and I expressed my anger to the water carriers (saying): "This is scandalous." Then Arnilis (said): "Zuliyas was careless." The king said: "Let Zuliyas go to the . . .!" If he proves innocent, let him clean himself! If he is found guilty, he shall be killed!"

Zuliyas went to the . . . and was found guilty. They placed Zuliyas [ . . . ] in Sures[ . . . ], the king [ . . . ] him and he died.

Instructions for Temple Officials

Texts: KUB, xiii. 4 and its duplicates KUB, xiii. 5 -(KUB, xxxi, 95, KUB, xiii. 6 + 19 and furthermore KUB, xiii. 17, 18; KUB, xxvi, 31; KUB, xxxi, 92, 93 and 94, several of which may be remnants of the same tablet or belong to one of the duplicates. Literature: E. H. Sturtevant, JAOS, liv (1934), 363-406, also separately as Publications of the American Oriental Society, Offprint Series, No. 4 (1934). Text, transliteration and translation are also found in Sturtevant-Bechtel, A Hittite Chrestomathy (1935), 127-174.

(The beginning of column i has not been recovered as yet.)

2. Furthermore, let those who prepare the daily loaves be clean. (15) Let them be bathed (and) groomed, let their (body) hair and nails be removed. Let them be clothed in clean dresses. [While unclean], let them not prepare (the loaves); let those who are [agreeable] to the gods' soul and person prepare them. The bakers' house in which they prepare them—let that be swept (and) scrubbed. (20) Furthermore, let a pig or a dog not stay at the door of the place where the loaves are broken. Are the minds of men and of the gods generally different? No! With regard to the matter with which we are dealing? No! Their minds are exactly alike. When a servant is to stand before his master, he is bathed and clothed in clean (garments); he either gives him his food, or he gives him his beverage. (25) And because he, his master, eats (and) drinks, he is relaxed in spirit and feels one with him. But if he (the servant) is ever remiss, (if) he is inattentive, his mind is alien to him. And if a slave causes his master's anger, they will either kill him or they will injure him at his nose, his eyes (or) (30) his ears; or [they will seize] him, his wife, his children, his brother, his sister, his in-laws, his kin whether it be a male slave or a slave-girl. They may (either) impose the extreme penalty, (or) they may do to him nothing at all. If ever he is to die, he will not die alone; his kin will accompany him.

* A kind of ordeal.

3. If then, on the other hand, anyone arouses the anger of a god, (35) does the god take revenge on him alone? Does he not take revenge on his wife, his children, his descendants, his kin, his slaves, and slave-girls, his cattle (and) sheep together with his crop and will utterly destroy him? Be very reverent indeed to the word of a god!

4. Further: The festival of the month, the festival of the year, the festival of the stag, the festival of autumn, (40) the festival of spring, the festival of thunder, the festival of hiyara, the festival of pudahal, the festival of iluwaf, the festival of [ ... ]ylulajad, the festival of the rhyton, the festivals of the Old Men, the festivals of the mothers-of-god, the festivals of dahiyai, the festivals of the upati men, the festivals of pulad, the festivals of hahratar, (45) or whatever festival else (will be celebrated) in Hattusa—if you do not celebrate them with all the cattle, sheep, loaves, beer (and) wine set (before the gods), and if you, the god’s priests, make a deal with those who give all that, you can be sure that the gods will notice what is amiss.

5. (50) Or if you ever take (sacrifices that have been) set (before the gods) and do not notify them right to them, do not serve them, (if) you withhold (it) from them, keep (it) in your houses, and your wives, children (or) servants consume it, (if) you give it to a relative or some ubaru befriended with you who happens to visit (you), if you give it to him (55) and take it away from the god and do not carry it to him, (or) if you give it (to him) in several portions—you will be held responsible for that matter of dividing. Do not divide it. He who divides it, shall be killed; there shall be no recourse for him.

6. (60) Every bit of the loaves, the beer (and) the wine keep in the temple. Let no one appropriate for yourselves either a fattened ox or a fattened sheep and substitute a lean one which you have slaughtered, (15) and (if) you either consume that or put it into your pen, or put it under the yoke, or (if) you put the sheep into your fold (20) or kill it for yourselves, and (if) you see fit [to give it away] or to turn it over to another man, or (if) you accept a price for it and thus [take it away from] the god and withhold it from (his) mouth, (if) you take it for yourselves or give it to another man (25) and speak as follows: "Since he is a god, he will not say anything, and will not do anything to us"—just think how the man reacts who sees his (choice) morsel snatched away from before his eyes! The will of the gods is strong. It does not make haste to seize, (30) but when it seizes, it does not let go (again). Now be very reverent of the will of the gods.

8. Further: Whatever silver, gold, garments or bronze implements of the gods you hold, you are (merely) (their) caretakers. You have no right to the silver, gold, garments (and) bronze implements of the gods, and none whatsoever to the things that are in the gods' houses. (35) They belong to the god alone. Be very careful and let no temple official have silver (or) gold. Let him not carry it on his own body, and let him not make it into an ornament for his wife (or) his children. But if they give him (40) silver, gold, garments (and) bronze implements as a gift from the palace, let them be specified: "So-and-so, the king has given it to him." How much its weight is, let also be set down. Furthermore let it be set down thus: "At such-and-such a festival have they given it to him." Let also the witnesses be set down at the end: "When they gave it to him, so-and-so (45) and so-and-so were present." Furthermore let him not leave it in his house; let him offer it for sale. But when he sells it, let him not sell it in a secret place; let the Hittite lords be present and look on. Let that which (anyone) buys be listed on a tablet and let them seal it. (50) And when the king comes up to Hattusa, let him take it (the tablet) up to the palace and let them seal it. If he puts them up for sale on his own, he is liable to the death penalty. He who does not put up for sale silver, gold, garments (or) implements of bronze in the same way (as here described),* (55) also he who receives it and hides it and does not bring it to the king’s court, both of them are liable to the death penalty, they shall both be killed. They are [disagreeable] to the gods. There shall in no circumstances be recourse for them.

9. Further: You who are temple officials, if you do not celebrate the festivals (60) at the time proper for the festivals and (if) you celebrate the festival of spring in the autumn, or (if)*—when in the course of time a festival is about to be celebrated—he who is to perform it comes to you, the priests, the "anointed,” the mothers-of-god, and to the temple officials (65) and embraces your knees (saying): "The harvest is before me, or arranging for (my) marriage, or a journey, or some other business. Do me a favor and let me finish that business first. But when that business of mine is finished, (70) I shall perform the festival as prescribed"—do not yield to a man’s whim, let him not take precedence (of the gods). You must not make a deal of the gods’ pleasure. Should with you a man take precedence (of the gods) and should you make a deal for yourselves, the gods will seek to take revenge on you in the future.

---

1 The beginning of the second column is preserved only on KUR. xvm. 5.

10. (80) Further: You who are temple officials, be very careful with respect to the precinct. At nightfall promptly go to be in (the temple); eat (and) drink, and if the desire for a woman overcomes anyone, let him sleep with a woman. (iii) But as long as [ . . . ] let him stay and let every one promptly come up to spend the night in the temple. Whoever is a temple official, all high priests, minor priests, "anointed" or whoever else (5) is allowed to cross the threshold of the gods, let (them) not fail to spend the night in the temple one by one. Furthermore, there shall be watchmen employed by night who shall patrol all night through. Outside the enclosure guards shall watch, inside the temples shall the temple officials patrol all night through and they shall not sleep. Night by night one of the high priests shall be in charge of the patrols. Furthermore, someone of those who are priests shall be in charge of the gate of the temple and guard the temple. (15)

In his own house no one (of these) shall spend the night with his wife. Whomsoever they will find down in his house, it will be a capital offence for him. Guard the temple very carefully and do not sleep. (Responsibility for) the precinct shall be divided among yourselves. He who commits an offense with respect to the precinct (20) shall be killed; he shall not be pardoned.

11. If anyone has some (official) duty to perform in Hattusa, and (either) a priest (or) an "anointed" is to admit people who are accompanied by guards, he will admit those too. If a guard is assigned to anyone, he may also enter the enclosure. (25) He must not speak thus: "I am guarding the house of my god, but I shall not go in there."—If there is some talk of enmity, (namely) that someone will undertake to defile Hattusa and (the guards) at the outer wall do not recognize him, but the temple officials recognize him inside, the guard shall definitely go after him. (30) (In) such (situation the) guard must not fail to spend the night with his god. If he fails however, in case they do not kill him, they shall humiliate him. Naked—there shall be no garment on his body—he shall bring three times water from the Labarnas’ cistern to the house of his god. Such shall be his humiliation.

12. (35) Further: O priests, "anointed," mothers-of-god (and) temple officials! Some troublemaker may rise in the temple or another sacred building. If he rises in the temple and causes a quarrel and thereby interferes with a festival, they shall interfere with him. Let him celebrate that festival with the usual expenditure of sheep, bread (and) beer, (40) he must not even omit the thin loaf. Whoever fails (to provide) it and does not celebrate a fully set festival, it shall be a great offense for him and he shall make up for the festival. So be very careful with a quarrel.

13. Further: Be very careful with the matter of fire. (45) If there is a festival in the temple, guard the fire carefully. When night falls, quench well with water whatever fire remains on the hearth. But if there is any flame in isolated spots and (also) dry wood, (if) he who is to quench it (50) becomes criminally negligent in the temple—even if only the temple is destroyed, but Hattusa and the king’s property is not destroyed—he who commits the crime will perish together with his descendants. Of those who are in the temple not one is to be spared; together with their descendants they shall perish. So for your own good be very careful in the matter of fire.

14. (55) Further: You who are kitchen servants of all the gods, cupbearers, table-men, cooks, bakers (or) vinters, be very careful with respect to the gods’ mood. Spend much reverent care upon the gods’ sacrificial loaves (and) libation bowls. The place where the bread is broken (60) shall be swept (and) scrubbed; (the regulations concerning) the threshold shall be enforced for pigs and dogs. As to yourselves, you shall be bathed and dressed in clean garments. Furthermore, your {body} hair and your nails shall be removed. Let the mood of the gods not befall you. (65) If a pig (or) a dog somehow approaches the implements of wood or bitumen which you have, and the kitchen servant does not discard it, but gives the god to eat from an unclean (vessel), to such a man the gods will give dung (and) urine to eat (and) to drink. Whoever is going to sleep with a woman, (70) he shall go to that woman in the same condition in which he performs a rite for the gods and gives the god his portion to eat and to drink. Furthermore, [at____], as soon as the sun is up, he shall at once take a bath; and in the morning, at the time when the gods eat, he shall promptly be present. But, if he omits (to do so), it will be a sin for him. Whoever sleeps with a woman, (75) if his superior (or) his chief constrains (him), he shall say so. If he himself does not dare tell him, he shall tell his fellow servant and shall bathe anyway. But if he knowingly postpones it and without having bathed approaches the gods’ sacrificial loaves (80) (and) libation bowl in an unclean condition, or (if) his fellow servant knows about him—namely that he placed himself first—but nevertheless conceals it, (if) afterward it becomes known, they are liable to the capital penalty; both of them shall be killed.
15. (iv) [Further: You who are the plowmen of the gods, . . .]. The young animals which you, the plowmen, are supposed to have ready, have them promptly ready at the correct time. (5) Before a man has eaten from them, carry them promptly to the presence of the gods; let the gods not wait for them. If you delay them, you commit a sin. They will consult the oracles about you, and just as the gods, your lords, direct, so they will do to you. (10) They will fine you an ox and ten sheep and will pacify the mind of the gods.

16. Further: If you plant grain, and if the priest does not send you a man to plant the seed, you shall manage by yourselves. Should you plant much, (15) but tell the priest (that) it was little, or should the gods' field be thriving, but the field of the plowmen be barren and you call the gods' field yours, but your field that of the god, or should you when you store the grain declare one half, but conceal the other half (20) and should you proceed to divide it afterward among yourselves and should it(!) afterward become known—you may get whatever time you will bring them, you will bring them promptly to the presence of the gods; ready at the correct time. (5) Before a man has eaten from them, carry them promptly to the presence of the gods; let the gods not wait for them. If you delay them, you commit a sin. They will consult the oracles about you, and just as the gods, your lords, direct, so they will do to you. (10) They will fine you an ox and ten sheep and will pacify the mind of the gods.

17. (25) Further: You who hold the plow-oxen of the gods, if you sell a plow-ox, or kill it and consume it, (if) you appropriate it for yourselves (while it belongs) to the god (saying): "It died from emaciation, or it broke (its legs), or it ran away, or the bull gored it" (39) and consume it yourselves, and it afterwards becomes known, you will replace that ox. If however it does not become known, you will go before the god. If you are acquitted, (it is due to) your patron god; if you are convicted, it is considered a capital sin for you.

18. Further: You who are the gods' cowherds (and) the gods' shepherds, (35) if there is a rite for any god at the time of bearing young and you are supposed to have ready for him either a calf, a lamb, a kid or choice animals, do not delay them! Have them ready at the right time; do not let the gods wait for them. Before a man eats of the young animals, (40) bring it promptly to the gods. Or if there is a "festival of the cup" for any god, (even) while they repair the cup, do not allow it to lapse; celebrate it for him. If you do not bring the young animals promptly to the gods, but eat first of them yourselves (45) or send them to your superiors, but it afterward becomes known, it is considered a capital sin for you. If it does not become known—at whatever time you will bring them, you will bring them before the god with these words: "If we have given this young animal to ourselves first, (50) or if you have given it to our superiors, or to our wives, our children or to anyone else, we have offended the gods' feelings." Then you will drink dry the rhyton of the god of life. If you are found innocent, (it is due to) your patron god; but if you are found guilty, you will perish together with your wives and your children.

19. Further: If you ever make a selection (of animals) and they drive them up to the gods, your lords, the cowherd and the shepherd shall go with that selection. In the same condition in which they are selected from the pen (and) the fold, (60) shall they bring them to the gods. On the road they must not exchange them. But if any cowherd or shepherd does wrong on the road, exchanges either a fattened ox or a fattened sheep, or makes a deal or kills it and (65) they eat it up, and put in its place an emaciated (animal), and it becomes known, it is considered a capital sin for them; they have taken the gods' choice morsel. But if it does not become known, whenever they arrive they shall take the rhyton of the god of life from the cult stand, (70) and while doing so they shall declare as follows: "If we have for ourselves withheld from the mouth of the gods their (choice) morsel, and have given it to ourselves, or (if) we have sold it for ourselves, or if we have exchanged it, made a deal (75) and substituted in its place an emaciated (animal), then do thou, O god, pursue us, and just as the gods, your lords, direct, so they will pacify the mind of the gods.

From the Instructions for the Commander of the Border Guards

Text: KUB, xii, 2 ii 26-iii 35 and its duplicates KUB, xxxi, 90 ii 7 ff. and KUB, xxxi, 86 iv 1 ff. (+) 88 iii 1 ff. Literature: V. KoroSec, Zborni znanstvenih razprav juriditne fakultete, vm (1942), 199-170 (with a summary in Italian).

In the town through which the commander of the border guards passes on his tour of inspection he shall attend to the necessary provisions for town-elders, priests, "anointed" (and) mothers-of-god. He shall speak to them as follows: "The sanctuary which exists in this town, whether it is of the Storm-god or of other gods, (30) is now collapsed and in disrepair. It is not provided with priests, mothers-of-god (and) 'anointed.' So provide it again with such (functionaries)! They shall restore it. As it was built previously, (35) so shall they rebuild it."

Furthermore, due reverence shall be shown to the gods, but to the Storm-god special reverence shall be shown. If some temple has a leading roof, the commander of the border guards and the town commandant shall put it right, or (if) any rhyton of the Storm-god (40) or any implement of any other god is in disrepair, the priests, the "anointed" (and) the mothers-of-god shall restore it.

Furthermore, the commander of the border guards shall make an inventory of the god's utensils and send it before the Sun. Furthermore, they shall worship the border guards have a leading roof, the commander of the border guards and the town commandant shall put it right, or (if) any rhyton of the Storm-god (40) or any implement of any other god is in disrepair, the priests, the "anointed" (and) the mothers-of-god shall restore it.
Hittite Instructions

gods on the right dates. If a certain date is set for some god, they shall worship him on that date. (45) If some god has no priest, mother-of-god (or) "anointed," they shall promptly appoint one.

(iii) [If] no provisions have been made [for sacrifices to the gods'] stone pillars, provide for them now! They shall arrange for them, and furthermore they shall present whatever sacrifices have long been customary.

The rites which are established for the springs that are in the town, (5) they shall go to them and celebrate their rites. And those springs for which rites have not been established, they shall go to them all the same. In no circumstances shall they omit them. They shall regularly give sacrifices to the mountains (and) to the rivers for which such are established.

Furthermore, the commander of the border guards, the town commandant and the elders shall judge and decide legal cases (10) in accordance with the law. As it has been from olden days—in a town in which they have been accustomed to imposing the death penalty, they shall continue to do so. But in a town where they have been accustomed to imposing exile, they shall continue that (custom). (15) Furthermore, the citizens shall bathe afterward and there shall be a public announcement. No one shall let (the exiled) return. He who lets him return, shall be put in prison.

And when they worship the gods, let no one start a disturbance in the presence of the gods, let no one start a disturbance in the house of festival. Furthermore let reverence be paid to the priests, the lay brothers, the "anointed" (20) (and) the mothers-of-god. Reverence toward the gods shall be the duty of the priests, the "anointed" and the mothers-of-god. If anyone brings suit by means of a sealed brief, the commander of the border guards shall judge it according to the law and set it right. If the case is too much, he shall send it before the Sun.¹

(25) He must not decide it in favor of his superior, he must not decide it in favor of his brother, his wife or his friend; no one shall be shown any favor. He must not make a just case unjust; he must not make an unjust case just. Whatever is right, that shall he do.

Whenever you arrive at a town, call all the people of the town (30) together. For him who has a complaint, judge it and set him right If a man's slave or a man's slave-girl or a widowed woman has a complaint (against some one) judge it for them and set them right. Should Kassiya people, Himmuwa people, Tagaramma people and Isuwa people² be there, (35) attend to them in every way.

¹ i.e., the Hittite king.
² These are privileged classes of people, cf. §54 of the Hittite Laws.
Documents from the Practice of Law

Egyptian Documents

(Translator: John A. Wilson)

A ROYAL DECREES OF TEMPLE PRIVILEGE

No codes of laws have been found for ancient Egypt. This means either that such collections of laws were written on papyrus and leather and so have not survived or that pharaonic Egypt did not codify law, but rather operated on the basis of topical justice originating in the word of the god-king. We do possess royal decrees, framed to meet particular situations. Most common are the charters of immortality, granting a temple exemption from civil obligation. The following decree of the Fifth Dynasty pharaoh Nefer-iri-ka-Re (26th century B.C.) freed the personnel of the Temple of Osiris at Abydos from forced labor for the state.

The stela was found at Abydos and is now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts (05,1896). The text was published by W. M. F. Petrie, Abydos II (London, 1903), PIs. xiv, xvii, and by K. Sethe, Urundem des alten Reichs (Ur, 1, Leipzig, 1933), 170-79. It was studied by Sethe in GGA (1912), 733 ff., and by A. Moret in JA (1917), 428 ff. Other royal decrees or references thereto will be found at pp. 31-32; 252, n.9; 327; 329. (See Addenda).

Royal decree (to) the Chief Prophet Hem-ur.

I

(I do not permit that any man have the right to)—take away any prophets who are in the District in which thou art, for the corvee, as well as any (other) work of the District, except to do service for the god himself in the temple in which he is and to conserve the temples (10) in which they are. They are exempt in the length of eternity by the decree of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nefer-iri-ka-Re. There is no title to them in any (other) service.

II

*(I do not permit that any man have the right to)—carry (off) the necessary [equipment] for any work to any (other) God's Field on which there is priestly service by any prophets. (They are exempt in the length of eternity by the decree of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nefer-iri-ka-Re. There is no tide to them in any service.)

III

*(I do not permit that any man have the right to)—take away any serfs who are on (any God's Field on which there is priestly service by any prophets), for the corvee, as well as any (other) work of the District. (They are exempt in the length of eternity by the decree of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nefer-iri-ka-Re. There is no title to them in any service.)

IV

As for any man of the District who shall take away—(20) any prophets who are on the God's Field on which they do priestly service in this District, for the corvee, as well as any (other) work of the District, thou shalt consent him to the temple workhouse, he [himself] being put on [any] corvee, or to (the) place of plowing...

V

*(As for any man of the District who shall take away) any serfs who are on the God's Field, (for the corvee, as well as any work of the District, thou shalt consent him to the temple workhouse, he [himself] being put on [any] corvee, the place of plowing... *)

VI

Any official or royal intimate or agricultural officer who shall act contrary to these things which I have decreed shall [be removed] and turned over to the law court, while the house, fields, people, and everything in his possession shall be forfeited, he being put on any corvee.

(30) The Royal Person was present at the sealing. Second month of the third season, day 11 (+ ).'*

THE VIZIER OF EGYPT

By dogma the pharaoh of Egypt was the state, but in actual practice he had to delegate authority to others. The most important civil official was the vizier, who was directly responsible to the pharaoh and to whom most of the other officials were responsible. We possess a fair amount of material with regard to the vizier under the Egyptian Empire. The following texts relate to Rekh-mi-Re, the Vizier of Upper Egypt under the reign of Thut-mose III (about 1490-1436 B.C.).

The texts are from the tomb of Rekh-mi-Re, No. 100 at Thebes. They have been published by N. de G. Davies, The Tomb of Rekh-mi-Re at Thebes (Publications of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, xi, New York, 1943), two volumes, including translations. The texts were earlier presented in K.

* The decrees of the Old Kingdom were published together by R. Weill, Les decrets royaux de Vancien empire egytien (Paris, 1912); see also W. C. Hayes in JEA, XXXII (1946), 3-23. The decree of Hor-em-heb, following the Amarna Revolution, was studied by K. Pfluger in JNES, v (1946), 200-76. A decree of Seti I was studied by W. F. Edgerton in JNES, vi (1947), 299-30.
* The physical arrangement of the inscription permitted certain elements—here given in the long parenthetical sections—to be used in repetition. The present introductory words serve also as the introductory words for sections II and III below.
* This is understood to mean a temple estate, including property within and without the temple precincts.
A. FROM THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF REKH-MI-RE

In a lengthy statement about his worldly position and success, the vizier tells about his appointment to that office. Davies, opcit., 79-83, PIs. st-xii.

I was a noble, the second of the king and the fourth of him who judged the Pair. ... It was the first occasion of my being summoned. All my brothers were in the outer office. I went (5) forth ... clad in fine linen. ... I reached the doorway of the palace gate. The courtiers bent their backs, and I found the masters of ceremonies clearing the way [before me] .... My abilities were not as they had been: my yesterday's nature had altered itself, since I had come forth in the accoutrements of the god Thoth in judging Horus and Seth—thus making a fourth to these three gods.

I was [summoned] again into the presence of the good god (Thut-mose III). His majesty opened his mouth and spoke his words veritably (10) in my presence: "Now behold, I see a face which I send to my heart, [for my majesty knows] that decisions are many, without limit to them, and the judging of cases never falls off. Would that thou mightest act in conformance with what I may say! Then Maat will rest in her place." He charged me very much: "Gather thyself together; be strong in action; do not flag...

[... acted] in conformance with that which he had ordained. He gave me a tribunal under my authority, and there was none therein who could oppose me. ... I raised justice to the height of heaven; I made its beauty circulate to the width of earth, so that it rested in what I may say! Then Maat will rest in her place.” He charged me very much: "Gather thyself together; be strong in action; do not flag...

B. THE INSTALLATION OF THE VIZIER

Another long text gives the charge which Thut-mose III laid upon his newly appointed vizier. Davies, opcit., 84-88, Pins. xiv-xv, with Pins. xxvi-xxviii adding the same text from the toms of two other viziers of the Eighteenth Dynasty.

The regulations laid upon the Vizier Re[kh-mi-Re], when the tribunal was ushered into audience hall of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—and it was caused that the newly appointed Vizier [Rekh-mi-Re] be brought in.

(1) Then his majesty said to him: "Look thou to this office of vizier. Be vigilant over [everything that] is done in it. Behold, it is the support of the entire land. Behold, as to thevizierate, behold, it is not sweet at all, behold, it is as bitter as gall.... Behold, it does not mean giving attention (only) to himself and to his officials and councillors, nor (yet) making [dependents] out of everybody. ... Therefore, see to it for thyself that all [things] are done according to that which conforms to law and that all things are done in conformance to the precedent thereof in [setting every man in his just deserts. Behold, as for the official who is in public view, the (very) winds and waters report all that he does; so, behold, his deeds cannot be unknown. ... Behold, it is the official's place of refuge to act in conformance with the regulations. ... The (12) abomination of the god is partiality. This is the instruction, and thus shalt thou act: 'Thou shalt look upon him whom thou knowest like him whom thou knowest not, upon him who has access to thee like him who is far away.' ... (17) ... Behold, thou shouldst attach to thy carrying out of this office thy carrying out of justice. Behold, what is desired is that the carrying out of justice be the produce of the vizier?..."".

C. THE JUDICIAL SITTING OF THE VIZIER

In a long and detailed text, Rekh-mi-Re tells of the several functions of his office. This translation deals only with the rules for the judicial hearings of the vizier in his hall of justice. Davies, opcit., 88-94; xxv-xviii, with Pins. xxvi-xxix giving parallels from the toms of two other viziers of the Eighteenth Dynasty, and Pins. xxxiv-xxv a scene showing the hall of justice, with the vizier enthroned, his supporting magistrates and clerks, court bailiffs, and humbly bowing appellants to the court.

(1) The regulations for the sitting of the Mayor and Vizier of the Southern City and of the Residence in the Hall of the Vizier.

As for everything which this official, the Vizier, shall do while holding hearings in the Hall of the Vizier—he shall sit upon a judgment-chair, with a matting over him, a cushion under his back and a cushion under his feet, a [cape] upon him, a sceptre at his hand, and the forty leather straps spread out in front of him, the Chiefs of Southern Ten[... on two sides in front of him, the Overseer of the Cabinet on his right hand, the Supervisor of Clients on his left hand,

1 He was the immediate assistant of the king, just as if he were a partner of the god Thoth in judging Horus and Seth—thus making a fourth to these three gods.
2 The goddess Maat was "Truth" or "Justice." In his capacity as the highest magistrate, Rekh-mi-Re was the priest of Maat.
3 Translation uncertain, assumed to mean: I see someone with whom I have sympathy because of his arduous duties. Davies: "My eyes send me to my heart"—grammatically impeccable, but unintelligible.
4 The same word must as that of n.2 above, but not here determined with the picture of a godess.
5 The north wind was Egypt's refreshing wind.
6 The word means "normal." Davies: "due regularity."
7 The execution of justice is the "outcome" or "output" of the vizier.
8 Shesmu, a critical word in the understanding of Egyptian law. The scene of hearing shows forty oblong or tubular things lying on mats in front of the vizier. The present word has a skin determinative. These have been assumed to be the scrolls of the law, written on leather, our only indication of codified law at this time. Unfortunately, Davies (pp. 31-32) shows evidence that they were used for maintaining authority or for punishment, citing a passage in which a man was "beaten with fifty sheems"—He concludes that the forty which were spread out were symbols of authority.
9 A body of magistrates.
and the Scribe of the Vizier beside him, one confronting another, with every man opposite him.10

Let one be heard after his fellow, not permitting the last to be heard before an earlier. If one who is earier should say: "There is no one hearing near me," then he is to be taken in charge by the messengers of the Vizier.11...

RESULTS OF A TRIAL FOR CONSPIRACY

The Twentieth Dynasty has provided us with a mass of legal material, particularly on the proceedings occasioned by the plundering of Theban tombs.1 We shall present here extracts from a document of different nature, dealing with a harem conspiracy and the plot to supplant Ramses III upon his throne by one of his sons.2 It is uncertain whether the conspiracy was successful to the point of taking the life of Ramses III. In that case, the court of inquiry and punishment will have been constituted by Ramses IV in the name of his dead father. Alternatively, Ramses III survived the plot and himself constituted the court.

The manuscript is the Judicial Papyrus of Turin, dated to the end of the reign of Ramses III (about 1164 b.c.). The hieratic text was facsimiled by T. Deveria in Bibliotheca egyptologica (ed. by G. Maspero), v (Paris, 1897), Pis. v-vi, 97-251. It was translated by Breasted, AR, iv, §§416-53. Its most recent study was by A. de Buck in JEA, xxiii (1937), 152-64. The lost beginning of the manuscript probably gave the setting of the conspiracy.

Two other texts have a juridical setting: the story of the Eloquent Peasant (pp. 407-410) and the story of the contendings of Horus and Seth (pp. 14-17), although the latter is a burlesque on court procedure. For advice on conduct in court, see the Instruction of Amen-em-Opet (p. 424). For a prayer that the poor man may be protected against avarice in court, see p. 380.

... they are (ii 1) the abomination of the land. I laid the charge upon:8 the Overseer of the Treasury Montu-em-tawi; the Overseer of the Treasury Paif-ru; the Standard-Bearer Kar; the Butler Pai-Bes; the Butler Qedendenen; the Butler Baal-mahar; the Butler Pa-ir-sun; the Butler Thut-rekh-nefer; the Royal Herald Pen-renenut; the Scribe May; the Scribe of the Archives Pa-Re-em-keh; and the Standard-Bearer of the Garrison Hori, (5) saying: "As for the matters which the people—I do not know who—have said, go and examine them."

And they went and examined them, and they caused to die by their own hands those whom they caused to die—[I] do not know who—and they inflicted punishment upon the others—[I] do not know who. Also, But [I] charged them [strictly], saying: "Be careful, guard against having punishment inflicted (upon) a [person] irregularly [by an official] who is not over him" So I said to them repeatedly, (iii 1) As for all that they have done, it is they who have done it. Let all that they have done come upon their (own) heads, whereas I am privileged and immune unto eternity, since I am among the righteous kings who are in the presence of Amon-Re, King of the Gods, and in the presence of Osiris, Ruler of Eternity.5

1 (iv 1) PERSONS brought in because of the great crimes which they had committed, and turned over to the Place of Examination, in the presence of the great officials of the Place of Examination, in order to be examined by: the Overseer of the Treasury Montu-em-tawi; the Overseer of the Treasury Paif-ru; the Standard-Bearer Kar; the Butler Pai-Bes; the Scribe of the Archives May; and the Standard-Bearer Hori. They examined them. They found them guilty. They caused their sentences to overtake them. Their crimes seized them.7

The great enemy Pai-bak-kamen,8 who had been Chief of the Chamber. He was brought in because he had been in collusion with Tyie and the women of the harem. He had made common cause with them. He had begun to take their words outside to their mothers and their brothers who were there, saying: "Gather people and stir up enemies to make rebellion against their lord!" He was placed in the presence of the great officials of the Place of Examination. They examined his crimes.

As de Buck suggests, the insistence of the pharaoh that he does not know who were the criminals against his throne and who was punished for conspiracy probably means that he accepts no personal responsibility for the fate of individuals. See the next note.

The pharaoh states explicitly that responsibility falls upon the heads of the judges and that he is "sheltered and protected" forever from any responsibility. In connection with the final clauses, one may argue that the pharaoh was already dead and was refusing to take into the presence of the gods any responsibility for taking the lives of others.

Although these are the "great officials" (cf. n.3 above), the criminals whom they try and sentence are not of such caliber that they are permitted to take their own lives, contrasting with those in sections II and III.

The sentences which were imposed are not stated.

This Blind Slave. It has frequently been pointed out that some of these criminals have fictitious names. To be sure, the name Pa-tjau-em-di-arnon, "The Breath (of Life) is With Amon," is a perfectly good Egyptian name. However, Mesed-su-Re, "Re Hates Him," Pen-Huy-bin-hin, "He of the Wicked Huy," Bin-em-Waset, "The Wicked One in Thebes," and probably Pa-re-kamenef, "The Re Will Blind (Him)," are all names of oppressors, given either to degrade the criminals or to conceal their true and formerly honored names. See n.18 below.

1 See T. E. Peet, The Great Tomb-Robberies of the Twentieth Egyptian Dynasty (Oxford, 1930), J. Capart et al. in JEA, xxi (1936), 189-93.
2 One conspiracy within the royal palace is indicated in the Instruction of King Amen-em-het I (pp. 418-419 below). Another, of the 6th dynasty, is in the text of Breasted, AR, I, §310:—"When a case was examined in secret in the royal harem against the King's Wife and Great Overseer of the Treasury Montu-em-tawi; the Overseer of the Treasury Paif-ru; the Standard-Bearer Kar; the Butler Pai-Bes; the Scribe of the Archives May; and the Standard-Bearer Hori. They examined them. They found them guilty. They caused their sentences to overtake them. Their crimes seized them.7
They found that he had committed them. His crimes laid hold upon him. The officials who examined him caused his sentence to overtake him.

The great enemy Mesed-su-Re, who had been butler. He was brought in because he had been in collusion with Pai-bak-kamen, who had been Chief of the Chamber, and with the women, to gather enemies and to make rebellion against their lord. He was placed in the presence of the great officials of the Place of Examination. They examined his crimes. They found him guilty. They caused his sentence to overtake him.

(6) The great enemy Pa-tjay-em-di-Amon, who had been Agent of the Harem in the Retinue. He was brought in because he had heard the words which the men had plotted with the women of the harem, without reporting them. He was placed in the presence of the great officials of the Place of Examination. They examined his crimes. They found him guilty. They caused his sentence to overtake him.

(v 1) The wives of the men of the gate of the harem, who had joined the men who plotted the matters, who were placed in the presence of the officials of the Place of Examination. They found them guilty. They caused their sentences to overtake them. Six women.

The great enemy Pa-iry, son of Rem, who had been Overseer of the Treasury. He was brought in because he had been in collusion with the great enemy Pen-Huy-bin. He had made common cause with him to stir up enemies and to make rebellion against their lord. He was placed in the presence of the officials of the Place of Examination. They found him guilty. They caused his sentence to overtake him.

The great enemy Bin-em-Waset, who had been Troop Commander of Ethiopia. He was brought in because he had been in the harem in the retinue, had written to him, saying: "Gather people, make enemies, and come back to make rebellion against your lord!" He was placed in the presence of Qedendenen, Baal-mahar, Pa-ir-sun, and Thut-rekh-nefer. They examined him. They found him guilty. They caused his sentence to overtake him.

The great enemy Henuten-Amon, who had been butler. He was brought in because of the crimes of the women of the harem, among whom he had been, which he had heard, without making report of them. He was placed in the presence of the butlers in order to examine him. They found him guilty. They left him where they were. He took his own life.

The great enemy Mesed-su-Re, who had been butler. He was brought in because of their crimes, in to the Place of Examination, in the presence of Qedendenen, Baal-mahar, Pa-ir-sun, Thut-rekh-nefer, and Mer-usi-Amon. They examined them concerning their crimes. They found them guilty. They left them where they were. They took their own lives.

Pen-ta-Urt, he who had been called by that other name. He was brought in because he had been in collusion with Tiye, his mother, when she had plotted matters with the women of the harem about making rebellion against his lord. He was placed in the presence of the butlers in order to examine him. They found him guilty. They left him where he was. He took his own life.

The great enemy Henuten-Amon, who had been butler. He was brought in because of the crimes of the women of the harem, among whom he had been, which he had heard, without making report of them. He was placed in the presence of the butlers in order to examine him. They found him guilty. They left him where he was. He took his own life.

IV

Persons brought in because of their crimes, because they had been in collusion with Pai-bak-kamen, Pai-is, and Pen-ta-Uret. They were placed in the presence of the officials of the Place of Examination, in order to examine them. They found them guilty. They left them in their (own) hands in the Place of Examination. They took their own lives; no penalty was carried out against them.

(5) The great enemy Pai-is, who had been Commander of the Army; the great enemy Messui, who had been Scribe of the House of Life; the great enemy Pa-Re-kamenef, who had been Chief (Lector Priest); the great enemy Li-roi, who had been Overseer of the Priests of Sekhmet; the great enemy Neb-djefa, who had been butler; and the great enemy Shad-mesdjer, who had been Scribe of the House of Life. Total: six.

Persons brought, because of their crimes, in to the Place of Examination, in the presence of Qedendenen, Baal-mahar, Pa-ir-sun, Thut-rekh-nefer, and Mer-usi-Amon. They examined them concerning their crimes. They found them guilty. They left them where they were. They took their own lives.

The translation omits the cases of two more officials of the royal harem, treated in the same terms as Pai-bak-kamen and Mesed-su-Re.

The translation omits the cases of nine more officials of the harem or of the palace, also guilty of withholding knowledge of the conspiracy and treated in the same terms as Pa-tjay-em-di-Amon. One is named Pa-Luka, "The Lycian," and one is a Libyan.

In another document Pen-Huy-bin was guilty of securing a magic scroll to be used for witchcraft against Ramses III (Breasted, op. cit., Rv, §455). It is ""h'c stated whether Pa-iry's guilt was collusion in this witchcraft.

This soldier had apparently been on duty in Ethiopia, and his sister had tried to get him to stir up a revolt in the provinces.

It seems that these three names correspond to the three groups of criminals in sections I, II, and III.

9 The translation omits the cases of two more officials of the royal harem, treated in the same terms as Pai-bak-kamen and Mesed-su-Re.

10 The translation omits the cases of nine more officials of the harem or of the palace, also guilty of withholding knowledge of the conspiracy and treated in the same terms as Pa-tjay-em-di-Amon. One is named Pa-Luka, "The Lycian," and one is a Libyan.

11 In another document Pen-Huy-bin was guilty of securing a magic scroll to be used for witchcraft against Ramses III (Breasted, op. cit., Rv, §455). It is ""h'c stated whether Pa-iry's guilt was collusion in this witchcraft.

12 It seems that these three names correspond to the three groups of criminals in sections I, II, and III.

13 The criminals in sections I, II, and III.

14 Either the particular crimes of which these persons were guilty called for suicide, or the criminals were of such a nature that they were permitted to take their own lives, cf. n.17.

15 The archives in which were kept the sacred and magical writings. The present group includes two clerks from those archives; a priest of Sekhmet, which means priest, physician, and magician; and a lector priest, versed in the magical writings. The present group was apparently guilty of using magical texts for the conspiracy.

16 It has been pointed out that this tide gave rise to the word used (e.g. Gen. 41:8) for the Egyptian magicians; cf. de Buck, op. cit., 163.

17 Here, if Pen-ta-Urt was truly the pretender to the throne, the reason for permitting suicide is obvious. The prince was of too high a birth to incur a capital punishment.

18 Apparently the prince who was the pretender to the throne, the reason for permitting suicide is obvious. The prince was of too high a birth to incur a capital punishment.

19 Apparently the prince who was the pretender to the throne, the reason for permitting suicide is obvious. The prince was of too high a birth to incur a capital punishment.

20 Two of the following four had been judges in the court of examination, two were of the military or police, perhaps attached to that court. The instructions which they had "abandoned" were those of the pharaoh in constituting the court.
The great enemy Pai-Bes, who had been butler. This sentence was carried out on him: he was left, and he took his own life.

The great enemy May, who had been Scribe of the Archives.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.

The great enemy Tai-nakhtet, who had been Lieutenant of the Garrison.

(5) The great enemy Nanai, who had been Chief of Bailiffs.

V

PERSON who had been in common with them. He was rebuked severely with wicked words.22 He was left, and no penalty was carried out against him.

The great enemy Hori, who had been Standard-Bearer of the Garrison.

FROM THE RECORD OF A LAWSUIT

The following text has lost its beginning and its end, but it gives an adequate impression of legal proceedings under the Egyptian Empire. A merchant Raia offered the woman Iri-nofret a female slave from Palestine or Syria. Iri-nofret bought the slave for a price calculated in silver, but paid in goods, some of which she already had, but some of which she had to buy from other persons. Some time later, a soldier named Nekhy laid the legal charge that some of the payment for the slave had consisted of goods properly belonging to a woman named Bake-Mut. The court is examining this charge.

The papyrus was discovered by the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Thebes and is now Cairo Museum 65739. It dates to the Nineteenth Dynasty (13th century B.C.E.). It was published by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxi (1935), 140-46, Pis. xiii-xvi.
woman Bake-Mut—TOTAL: three men and three women; total: six. And they stood in the presence of the tribunal, and they took the oath of the Lord—life, prospersity, health!—as well as the oath of the god, with the words: "We shall speak truthfully; we shall not speak falsely. Should we speak falsely, the servants shall be taken away from us."

said by die tribunal of judges to the Priest Huy: "Tell us the matter of the Syrian slave.

Mesopotamian
Legal Documents
(Translator: Theophile J. Meek)

Out of the thousands of tablets that have been published in this field it was difficult to make a selection. The following were chosen because (1) they represent different periods and different types, (2) most of them are short and hence permit the inclusion of a considerable variety, (3) they are quite well preserved, and
(4) they are not too complex or involved so that their translation is fairly certain.

A. SUMERIAN

Notation re Laborers

Uru-ki-erima, En-udana, Lugal-nanga-ra-na, Ki-bi-batila, Shesh-tur, Ur-Enki, Ur-Ninsig, Lugal-mu, Nesag,
(and) Lugal-sha-la-tuk, the overseer, have gone ahead;
as for UdA, A-lu-lila, (and) En-tu, Lugal-sha-la-tuk, the fisherman, brought about their dispatch. A total of 12 men, who arc sea-fishermen (in the employ) of the goddess Baba, have gone to the sea, with Lugal-sha-latuk as their overseer.

The fifth year.

B. OLD AKKADIAN

(1) Amortization

94 copper utensils the recorder, Zuzu, received. 21 copper utensils in the case of Iisma-ih, the son of Shu-Dada, (and) 5 copper utensils in the case of Name, are still outstanding as a balance against them.

(2) Receipt of Balance Due no qu of barley, the balance of the barley for rations, Ire-Shamas received. The month of Zalul.

(3) Receipt of Barley to be Sold

From two of these—the Priest Huy Phinehas and the woman Kafy—
Iri-nofret had purchased some of the goods which she used to make up the price of the slave. There is a heavy weight of testimony against her, in the Chief of Police and the Mayor of the West side of Thebes, not to mention her brother-in-law.

They were testifying under oath about the legal possession of a slave.
If they perjured themselves, the penalty would take its similarity to the case:
they would lose their own slaves.

Published and translated by Thorkild Jacobsen, Cuneiform Texts in the National Museum, Copenhagen (1939), No. 2.

Some scholars still prefer the older reading Bau for this name. Baba was the consort of Ningirsu, the city-god of Lagash.

* i.e. the fifth year of Urukagina, king of Lagash.

* Published by T. J. Meek, Old Akkadian, Sumerian, and Cappadocian Texts from Nuzi (1935), No. 59.

* Published by T. J. Meek, op. cit., No. 65.

* Published by T. J. Meek, op. cit., No. 99.

Akkadian kur of barley. Ate, the merchant, received from Zuzu to be sold in Lulubum.

(4) Receipt of Barley for Rations

A certain Buzi at 120 qu, 4 workmen at 60 qu, 2 female slaves at 30 qu, 2 sons at 30 qu, 2 sons at 20 qu, 2 daughters at 20 qu, (making) 1 kur 260 qu of barley for rations per month: a total of 7 kur 140 qu of barley for rations for 4 months, the son of Absham of the city of Kinakum received.

C. NEW SUMERIAN

(1) Divorce Settlement

Final judgment: Lu-Utu, the son of Nig-Baba, divorced Gême-Enlil. Dugidu, an officer and official, took oath that Gême-Enlil had taken her stand (2) and said, "By the king! Give me 10 shekels of silver (and) I will not enter claim against you," (and) that she made him forfeit 10 shekels of silver. Ur-... (was) the deputy;
Ur-Lama (was) the governor.

The year Harshii and Humurti were sacked.

(2) Receipt of Votive-gift

180 gur of barley, the votive-gift of Lu-Nanna, the governor of Zimudar, Ur-Gal-alim has received on behalf of the divine Shulgi-Nanna, on the bank of the canal Dur-ul.

The month of Shegurkud, the year the divine Shu-Sin became king.

(3) Loan at Interest

60 shekels, Adda-kala has borrowed from Ur-dul-azaga.
In the month of Sig he shall return it. By the king he sware.

(4) Receipt of Barley for Rations

9
2 sons at 30 qu

(5) Loan at Interest

120 shekels of silver, with its interest at 5 shekels per 60 shekels, Adda-kala has borrowed from Ur-dul-azaga.
In the month of Sig he shall return it. By the king he sware.

(6) Loan at Interest

(7) Receipt of Barley for Rations

(8) Divorce Settlement

(9) Local Court Decision

D. OLD ASSYRIAN

(1) Local Court Decision

The council of Kanish gave judgment having to do with...
with Ashur-ammarum, the son of Enum-Ashur: Zibe-zibe, the daughter of Ashur-beli, (was) his wife; he divorced her and Ashur-ammarum gave Zibe-zibe, his wife, i mina of silver as her divorce-settlement; so his three sons shall revert to Ashur-ammarum; Zibe-zibe has no further claim against Ashur-ammarum or his three sons.

The month of Sin; the eponymy of Aweliya.

(2) Supreme (Ashur) Court Decision

(The names of nine persons, the last four being three sons and a daughter, Ahaha, of Pushu-ken, each preceded by "The seal of.")

As for the 40 minas of silver, with which Ikuppyia, the son of Ata’a, became indebted to Pushu-ken, in Kanish, and which money Ashur-muttabil and Belanum, the bailiff, got—for this money neither the (other) sons of Pushu-ken nor the daughter of Pushu-ken, the nun, may file claim against their brother, Ashur-muttabil. On his arrival the sons of Pushu-ken and the daughter of Pushu-ken, the nun, shall give to Ashur-muttabil in Kanish the tablet having to do with the debt of Ikuppyia, the son of Ata’a.

In conformity with the judgment of the city (i.e. Ashur) the sons of Pushu-ken and the daughter of Pushu-ken are content in the matter of the money. Idi-abum, the son of Ashur-malik, represented Ahaha.

(3) Divorce

(The seals of six persons, each preceded by "The seal of.")

Hashusharna, the son of Gudgariya, divorced his wife, Taliya. If Taliya tries to reclaim her (former) husband Hashusharna, she shall pay 2 minas of silver and shall they put her to death in the open. If Gudgariya* and Hashusharna try to reclaim Taliya, they shall pay 2 minas of silver and they shall put them to death in the open.

E. Old Babylonian

(j) Lawsuit

(legal) Document: For a house in Durum-eshshum belonging to Manutum, the daughter of Abdirah, Hamazirum, the daughter of Abihar, filed claim against Manutum, the daughter of Abdirah, whereupon the judges in the temple of Shamash put Manutum under oath to god. When Manutum swore by Aya, her lady, she (i.e. the plaintiff Hamazirum) renounced her claim. On no account shall Hamazirum ever again file claim for the house, patrimony, possessions, or heritage of Manutum, whatever it may be; by Shamash and Aya, Marduk and Sumu-la-el she swore.

The judgment of the temple of Shamash. (The names of the two judges.) (The names of two persons and the scribe, a woman, as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(2) Receipt of Sheep to Pasture

183 ewes, 178 rams, 30 female lambs, 35 male lambs, 20 large lambs, (a total of) 446 sheep belonging to Belitiya, Ahushunu, the shepherd, received from Sinishmeni to pasture. Should a sheep be lost, he shall make it good. By the king he swore.

(The names of seven persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

The seal of Ahushunu.

The month of Nisan, the year the great wall was built.

(Sealed in six places with the seal of Ahushunu, the son of Imgr-Sin.)

(3) Division of Estate

Nur-Shamash, Illima-ahi, Palatum, and Humurum have divided the property of their father. On no account will they file claim against one another. By Shamash, Aya, Marduk, and Humurabi they swore.

(The names of four persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

The year the Hammurabi-canal."

(4) Rent of House

The house of Ribatum, a hierodule of Shamash, Mashqum, the son of Rim-Adad, has rented for one year from Ribatum, a hierodule of Shamash. As the rent per year he shall pay 12 shekels of silver, with % shekel of silver received as the initial payment on his rent.

(The names of two persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

The month of Iyyar, the 10th day, the year a shining weapon-emblem.

(5) Purchase of Slave

One female slave, Ina-Eulsha-banat by name, from the city of Ursum, the slave of Damig-Marduk, the son of Lipit-Ishtar, Ursiya, the son of Waraza, bought from Damig-Marduk, the son of Lipit-Ishtar, her owner. As her full price he weighed out % mina 1 shekel of silver and he also delivered % shekel of silver as additional payment. Three days are allowed for investigation (and) one month for epilepsy in order to clear her, in accordance with the ordinances of the king."
(The names of five persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)
The month of Kislim, the 15th day, the year Ammi-ditana, the king, brought in his statue (representing him as) offering prayer, scepter in hand.88

F. LATE SUMERIAN

(1) Hire of Laborer90
Shep-Sin hired Sin-ishmeanni from his foreman, Ahum; his hire per year (is to be) 6 shekels of silver, of which Ahum has received 4 shekels of silver.
(The names of three persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)
The month of Ab, the 30th day, the 30th year (after) Isin was conquered.91
(Sealed in two places.)

(2) Marriage Contract
Ama-sukkal, the daughter of Ninurta-mansum, has been taken in marriage by Enlil-izzu, the high priest of Enlil, the son of Lugal-azida; Ama-sukkal has brought 19 shekels of silver to Enlil-izzu, her husband (as dowry).

If Enlil-izzu ever says to Ama-sukkal, his wife, "You are no longer my wife," he shall return the 19 shekels of silver and he shall also weigh out γ2 mina as her divorce-settlement. On the other hand, if Ama-sukkal ever says to Enlil-izzu, her husband, "You are no longer my husband," she shall forfeit the 19 shekels of silver and she shall also weigh out γ2 mina of silver. In mutual agreement they have sworn together by the king.
(The names of eight men, two women, the scribe, and the notary as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)
(Sealed with two seals, twice each.)
The month of Nisan, the 28th day, the year Samsu-iluna, the king, by the command of Enlil brought Kisu-rara and Sabum to obedience.42

a MIDDLE BABYLONIAN

(1) Court Decision48
One ox from pasture Iqisha-Enlil, the son of Hashma-Harbe, received from the hand of Belanu, the son of Urash-amela-uballit, to draw (water), and he broke its leg, whereupon Belanu spoke thus to Iqisha-Enlil, "Bring me an ox that I may plow in the field so that you may not hinder me from plowing." Iqisha-Enlil spoke thus to Belanu, "I will give you an ox in the month of Ab." Since Iqisha-Enlil has not given the ox to Belanu in the month of Ab, Iqisha-Enlil shall make good to Belanu the crop of the field.
(The names of two persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)
(Three thumbnail impressions on the left edge.)
The month of Sivan, the first year of Nazi-Maruttash, the all-powerful king.44

(2) Release on Bail45
As for Mina-egu-ana-Shamash, the son of Salli-lumur, the governor—Awel-Marduk, his lord, shut him up in prison, but Arkat-Nergal, the son of Ardu-nubatti, went bail for him and got him released. So he (Le. Arkat-Nergal) shall take 13 1/3 shekels of gold and give it to Marduk-risua, and then Mina-egu-ana-Shamash and his wife, . . . shall take (it) and give (it) to Awel-Marduk.
The month of Tarn mus, the 9th day, the 8th year of Shagarakti-Shuriash, the king.48
The thumbnail impression of Arkat-Nergal as his seal. (Six thumbnail impressions on the left edge.)

H. NUZI AKKADIAN

(1) Sale-Adoption47
The tablet of adoption belonging to Kuzu, the son of Karmishe: he adopted Tehip-tilla, the son of Puhisshenni. As his share (of the estate) Kuzu gave Tehip-tilla 40 imers49 of land in the district of Iphushshi. If the land should have a claimant, Kuzu shall clear (it) and give (it) back to Tehip-tilla. Tehip-tilla in turn gave 1 mina of silver to Kuzu as his honorarium. Whoever defaults shall pay 2 minas of silver (and) 2 minas of gold.
(The names of fourteen persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)
(The names of two of the witnesses, one other person, and the scribe, each preceded by "The seal of.")

(2) Sale-Adoption™
The tablet of adoption belonging to Nashwi, the son of Ar-shenni: he adopted Wullu, the son of Puhisshenni. As long as Nashwi is alive, Wullu shall provide food and clothing; when Nashwi dies, Wullu shall become the heir. If Nashwi has a son of his own, he shall divide (the estate) equally with Wullu, but the son of Nashwi shall take the gods of Nashwi. However, if Nashwi does 88 i.e. in the Code of Hammurabi, particularly §§8278 f.

---

89 The date formula for the 7th year of Ammi-ditana, king of Babylon, about 1510-1502 B.C.
"Published in VS, xm (1914), No. 92; translated by P. Koschaker und A. Ungnad, op. cit., No. 1676.
91 The date formula for the 59th year of Rim-Sin, king of Larsa, about 1759-1768 B.C.
92 Published and translated by A. Pooebel, Babylonian Business and Legal Documents (1909), No. 40; most recently translated by M. Schorr, op. cit., No. 1.
93 The date formula for the 13th year of Samsu-iluna, king of Babylon, about 1655-1647 B.C.
94 Published and translated by Albert T. Clay, Documents from the Temple Archives of Nippur Dated in the Reigns of Cassite Rulers (1906), No. 41.
95 One of the kings of the Cassite dynasty in Babylonia who ruled about 1300 B.C.
96 Published and translated by Albert T. Clay, op. cit., No. 135.
97 One of the kings of the Cassite dynasty in Babylonia who ruled about 1240 B.C.
98 Published by E. Chiera, Iraq Expedition with the Iraq Museum at Nuzi (1927), No. 1; translated by E. Chiera and E. A. Speiser, JAOS, XLVII (1927), 3 f. Sale-adoption was a legal device used in Nuzi whereby a landowner could circumvent the law prohibiting the sale of land outside the family by going through the form of adopting the purchaser. The Nuzi tablets come from the middle of the 2nd millennium B.C.
99 The word used here, zittu, means the double share of the first-born son.
100 An inner was approximately 4 1/2 acres.
101 Published and translated by C. J. Gadd, RA, xxx (1926), 49-161, No. 51. not have a son of his own, then Wullu shall take the gods of Nashwi. Furthermore, he gave his daughter Nuhuya in marriage to Wullu, and if Wullu takes another wife he shall forfeit the lands and buildings of Nashwi. Whoever defaults shall make compensation with 1 mina of silver and 1 mina of gold.

(The names of five persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(The names of four of the witnesses and the scribe, each preceded by "The seal of."

(3) Real Adoption

The tablet of adoption belonging to [Zike], the son of Akkuya: he gave his son Shennima in adoption to Shurira-ilu, and Shurira-ilu, with reference to Shennima, (from) all the lands . . . (and) his earnings of every sort gave to Shennima one (portion) of his property. If Shurira-ilu should have a son of his own, as the principal (son) he shall take a double share; Shennima shall then be next in order (and) take his proper share. As long as Shurira-ilu is alive, Shennima shall revere him. When Shurira-ilu [dies], Shennima shall become the heir. Furthermore, Kelim-ninu has been given in marriage to Shennima. If Kelim-ninu bears (children), Shennima shall not take another wife; but if Kelim-ninu does not bear, Kelim-ninu shall acquire a woman of the land of Lullu as wife for Shennima, and Kelim-ninu may not send the offspring away. Any sons that may be born to Shennima from the womb of Kelim-ninu, to (these) sons shall be given [all] the lands (and) buildings of every sort. [However], if she does not bear a son, [then] the daughter of Kelim-ninu from the lands (and) buildings shall take one (portion) of the property. Furthermore, Shurira-ilu shall not adopt another son in addition to Shennima. Whoever among them defaults shall compensate with 1 mina of silver (and) 1 mina of gold.

Furthermore, Yalampa is given as a handmaid to Kelim-ninu and Shatim-ninu has been made co-parent. As long as she is alive, Shennima shall revere her and Shatim-ninu shall not annul the [agreement]. If Kelim-ninu bears (children) and Shennima takes another wife, she may take her dowry and leave.

(The names of nine persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

The remaining sons of Zike may not lay claim to the lands (and) buildings belonging to the (above) one (portion) of the property. The tablet was written after the proclamation.

(Sealed by eight persons, seven of whom were already named as witnesses.)

(4) Lawsuit

Tarmiya, the son of Huya, appeared with Shukriya and Kula-hupi, with (these) two brothers of his, the sons of Huya, in a lawsuit before the judges of Nuzi with reference to the female slave [Sululi-Ishtar], whereupon Tarmiya spoke thus before the judges, "My father, Huya, was sick and lay on a couch; then my father seized my hand and spoke thus to me, 'My other sons, being older, have acquired wives, but you have not acquired a wife; so I give you herewith Sululi-Ishtar as your wife."

Then the judges demanded the witnesses of Tarmiya [and Tarmiya] had his witnesses appear [before the judges]: . . ., the son of Hurshaya, . . ., the son of Ikiya, . . ., the son of Itrusha, (and) . . ., the son of Hamanna. [These] witnesses of [Tarmiya] were examined before the judges, whereupon the judges spoke to Shukriya and Kula-hupi, "Go and take the oath of the gods against the witnesses of Tarmiya." Shukriya and Kula-hupi shrank from the gods so that Tarmiya prevailed in the lawsuit and the judges assigned the female slave, Sululi-Ishtar, to Tarmiya.

(The names of three persons, each preceded by "The seal of.")

The signature of Iliya.

(5) Hebrew Slave Document

Mar-Idiglat, a Hebrew from the land of Assyria, on his own initiative has entered (the house of) Tehip-tilla, the son of Puhi-shenni, as a slave.

(The names of eleven persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(The names of two of the witnesses and the scribe, each preceded by "The seal of.")

(6) Hebrew Slave Document

Sin-balti, a Hebrew woman, on her own initiative has entered the house of Tehip-tilla as a slave. Now if Sin-balti defaults and goes into the house of another, Tehip-tilla shall pluck out the eyes of Sin-balti and sell her.

(The names of nine persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(The names of two of the witnesses and the scribe, each preceded by "The seal of.")

I. MIDDLE ASSYRIAN

(i) Deed of Gift

The (first-born’s) share of the palace together with its grain, belonging to the estate of Mushtepish-ilu, the son of Mar-Idigla, Ashur-uballit, the sovereign, has entered the house of Tehip-tilla as a slave. Now if Sin-balti defaults and goes into the house of another, Tehip-tilla shall pluck out the eyes of Sin-balti and sell her.

(The names of nine persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(The names of two of the witnesses and the scribe, each preceded by "The seal of.")

Note: The document is a collection of legal texts from ancient Mesopotamia, describing various legal transactions, real adoption, and lawsuits. The names and dates are provided for each transaction, and the texts are translated from cuneiform tablets into modern English. The references at the bottom indicate the sources and translations used.
(2) Sale of House

The sale of Ashur-apla-eresh.

As for the 5 talents 30 minas of lead due Zer-iqisha, the son of Yakiya, debited to Ashur-apla-eresh, the son of Nusku-aha-iddina, the son of Ea-iddina, the goldsmith, of the inner city (i.e. Ashur)—he is in receipt of this lead as the price of his house in the inner city.

(The names of two persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(Two persons, each preceded by “The seal of.”)

(Sealed in two places.)

(3) Loan

The seal of Shamash-tukulti.

He borrowed 12 homers of barley by the old measure belonging to Sin-apla-eresh, the son of Ashur-kashid, the son of Bel-garrad, debited to Shamash-tukulti, the son of Shamash-sharru, the son of Bel-garrad. He shall [measure] out the principal of the barley at the threshing floor. When the time-limit has expired, the barley shall bear interest. As countervalue for this barley Sin-apla-eresh shall seize as security (and) have the usufruct of the unencumbered property of Shamash-tukulti.

(The names of three persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

The month of Allanatu, the 16th day, the eponymy of Mushibshi-Sibita.

J. NEO-ASSYRIAN

(j) Loan at Interest

Three minas of silver according to (the mina) of Carchemish, belonging to Apilya (are) at the disposition of Sukaya; they shall increase 6 shekels per month.

(The names of five persons as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

(2) Sentence for Murder

(The names of eleven persons, each preceded by “The seal of.”)

Siri (is) the murderer who murdered Silim-ili. In their presence he shall compensate for that murder with either his wife or his brother or his son, which is forthcomimg.

Published by E. Ebeling, KAI, No. 144; translated by E. Ebeling, MAOG, VII (1933) 74-6.

60 Tukulti-Ninurta became king of Assyria in 1243 B.C.

62 A homor or donkey-load contained a little more than 2% bushels.

63 The date formula for a year in the reign of Shalmaneser I, king of Assyria about 1260 B.C.

64 Published by C. H. W. Johns, Assyrian Deeds and Documents, i (1892). No. 28; translated by J. Kohler and A. Ungnad, Assyrische Rechtsurkunden (1914). No. 228.

65 The date is 685 B.C., in the reign of Sennacherib, king of Assyria, 704-681 B.C.

67 In the presence of the eleven witnesses just named.
(The names of seven persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

Nippur, the month of Tebet, the 9th day, the 33rd year of Artaxerxes, the king of the lands.

The thumbnail impression of Enlil-aha-iddina, the son of Gaha.

(8) Receipt of Provisions (Late Babylonian)

27 qu of barley as provisions, which Nabu-belshunu, the son of Bel-ahhe-iddina, the expiation priest, and Marduk-criba, the son of Iddina-Bel, the brewer, have received.

The month of Sivan, the 4th day, the 6th year of Alexander

The signet-ring impression of Nabu-belshunu and the signet-ring impression of Marduk-eriba.

(Sealed in one place.)

(6) Rent of House (Late Babylonian)

A kurru-buhom belonging to Nana-iddina, the son of Tanittum-[Anu], the descendant of Ah'utu, which (is) in the district of the great grove which (is) in Erech, which (is) alongside the (uru)bbu-house of Mushe-zibitum, the daughter of Ištahara-iddina, and alongside the center of the field, (is) at the disposal of Anu-uballit, the son of Kidin-Anu, for 4 shekels of silver as the rent of the house per year. Half the money he shall pay at the beginning of the year (and) the rest of the money in the middle of the year. The barreness (of the walls) he shall rectify; the cracks of the walls he shall close up. The work, the bricks, the reeds, and the beams, as much as he uses therefor, he shall reckon as a credit. He shall furnish 3 baskets of dates per year. From the 10th day of the month of Tammuz, the 8th year of Seleucus, the king, that (uru)bbu-house (is) at the disposal of Anu-uballit, the son of Kidin-Anu, for rent at 4 shekels of silver per year.

(The names of five persons and the scribe as witnesses, each preceded by the witness-sign.)

The month of Tammuz, the 5th day, the 8th year of Seleucus, the king.

(The names of the five witnesses, each preceded by "The signet-ring impression of.")

The thumbnail impression of Anu-uballit.

Aramaic Papyri from Elephantine

Translator: H. L. Ginsberg

MIBTAHIAH'S FIRST MARRIAGE

Deed of 459 b.c., relating to reversion of property. Text: Sayce-Cowley, C; Cowley, 9.

On the 21st of Chisleu, that is the 1st of Mesore, year 6 of King Artaxerxes, Mahseiah b. Yedoniah, a Jew of Elephantine, of the detachment of Haumadata, said to Jezaniah b. Uriah of the said detachment as follows: There is the site of a house belonging to me, west of the house belonging to you, which I have given to your wife, my daughter Mibtahiah (Mbfhyh), and in respect of which I have written her a deed. The measurements of the house in question are 8 cubits and a handbreadth (5) by 11, by the measuring-rod. Now do I, Mahseiah, say to you, Build and equip that site . . . and dwell thereon with your wife. But you may not sell that house or give it as a present to others; only your children by my daughter Mibtahiah shall have power over it after you two. If tomorrow or some other day you build upon this land, and then my daughter divorces you and leaves you, she shall have no power to take it or give it to others; only your children by (10) Mibtahiah shall have power over it, in return for the work which you shall have done. If, on the other hand, she recovers from you, she may take half of the house, and [the] other half shall be at your disposal in return for the building which you will have done on that house. And again as to that half, your children by Mibtahiah shall have power over it after you. If tomorrow or another day I should institute suit or process against you and say I did not give you this land to build on and did not draw up this deed for you, I (15) shall give you a sum of 10 karshin by royal weight, at the rate of 2 R to the ten, and no suit or process shall lie. This deed was written by ‘Athashuri b. Nabuzeribni in the fortress of Syene at the dictation of Mahseiah. Witnesses hereeto (signatures).

IN LIQUIDATION

OF MIBTAHIAH'S SECOND MARRIAGE

CONTRACT OF MIBTAHIAH’S THIRD MARRIAGE

Text: Sayce-Cowley, G; Cowley, 15. Date: about 440 b.c.

On the 2[5]th of Tishri, that is the 6th day of the month Epiphi, [year . . . of] Kin[g Artaxerxes]es, said Ashor b. [Seho], builder to the king, to Mah[seiah, A]ramean of Syene, of the detachment of Varizata, as follows: I have [co]me to your house that you might give me your daughter Mibht(ah)iah in marriage. She is my wife and I am her husband from this day for ever. I have given you as the bride-price (5) of your daughter

1 Egyptian month-name.
2 This must mean, "In the event of your divorcing her, in which case she does not forfeit all rights as when she divorces you." Perhaps there is a lacuna in the text.
3 Probably stands for rubin "quarters" (of a shekel). Does 2/4X10 (−1/5) indicate the proportion of alloy?
* See n.i.
5 The name of Ashor's father (sh) is preserved in another document. Both it and his own are Egyptian, but he eventually adopted the Hebrew one of Nathan.
Miphtahiah (a sum of) 5 shekels, royal weight. It has been received by you and your heart is content there-with." (Lines 6-16, Miphtahiah's dowry.) (17) Should Ashor die tomorrow or another day having no child, male or female, by his wife Miphtahiah, Miphtahiah shall be entitled to the house, chattels and all worldly goods of Ashor. (20) Should Miphtahiah die tomorrow or another day having no child, male or female, by her husband Ashor, Ashor shall inherit her property and chattels. Should Miphtahiah, tomorrow [or] another day stand up in a congregation and say, I divorce my husband Ashor, the price of divorce shall be upon her head: she shall sit by the balance and weigh out to Ashor a sum of 7 shekels 2 R. But all that which she has brought in with her she shall take out, shred and thread, and go whither she will, without suit or process. Should Ashor tomorrow or another day stand up in a congregation and say, I divorce my wife Miphtahiah, [he shall] forfeit her bride-price, and all that she has brought in with her she shall take out, shred and thread, on one day at one stroke, and shall go whither she will, without suit or process. And whoever arises against Miphtahiah (30) to drive her away from the house, possessions, and chattels of Ashor shall give her the sum of 20 arash and the law of this deed shall [ . . . ] for her. And I shall have no right to say I have another wife besides Miphtahiah or other children besides any Miphtahiah may bear to me. If I say I have children and wife other than Miphtahiah and her children, I shall give to Miphtahiah a sum of 20 arash, royal weight. [This deed] was written by Nathan b. Ananiah [at the dictation of Ashor]. Witnesses: (signatures).

* The bride-price was regularly added to the bride's dowry. In the following lines the value of each item of the dowry is given, and so is the total value; but the latter exceeds the value of the items by exactly the amount of the bride-price.

1 In the light of n.3, this sum is exactly 1 1/2 times the bride-price Ashor paid for her (line 5).

2 A kprash is 10 heavy shekels or 20 light ones.
III. Historical Texts
Egyptian Historical Texts

TRANSLATOR: JOHN A. WILSON

Brief Texts of the Old Kingdom

Inscriptional evidence on the relations of Egypt and Asia under the Old Kingdom is slight. For the most part, we rely upon the uninscribed materials coming out of excavations in both areas for evidence on the strength of such contacts. The following are samples of texts playing on the problem of Egyptian interest in Asia* (See Addenda).

a

The jar-sealing of a Second Dynasty king, who lived about 2850 or 2800 B.C., may be read as the record of military activity in Asia. Such sealings have been found at Abydos: W. M. F. Petrie, The Royal Tombs of the Earliest Dynasties, 11 (London, 1901), Pl. xxii; E. Naville et al., The Cemeteries of Abydos, 1 (London, 1914), Pl. x.

The Seth: Per-ibsen, the tribute of Asia.

b

Three notations from the "Annals" of the Old Kingdom on the reign of Snefru of the Fourth Dynasty (about 2650 or 2600 B.C.) show trade relations between Egypt and Phoenicia and the use to which the timber brought from Asia was put. These items are extracted from the records of three successive years. The Palermo Stone, recto vi 2-4, was published by H. Schäfer, Ein Bruchstück altägyptischer Annalen (APAW, 1902), and the present extracts by K. Sethe, Urkunden des alten Reichs (Urv., 1, Leipzig, 1933), 236-37. Translated by Breasted, AR, i, §§146-48. On the interpretation of the text see K. Sethe, in ZAsE, XLV (1908), 7-14.

Bringing forty ships filled (with) cedar logs. Shipbuilding (of) cedarwood, one "Praise-of-the-Two-Lands" ship, 100 cubits (long), and (of) meru-wood, two ships, 100 cubits (long).

Making the doors of the royal palace (of) cedarwood.

We have somewhat more information about the Egyptians’ activity in Sinai, because of their interest in the turquoise and copper mines there. However, under the Old Kingdom the records in the mining area normally give little more than a depiction of the pharaoh smiting a nomad, with the pharaoh’s name accompanying the scene. Such are the records of Semer-khet of the First Dynasty (about 2950 or 2900 B.C.), and of Djoser and Za-nakht of the Third Dynasty (about 2750 or 2700 B.C.), published in Gardiner and Peet, The Inscriptions of Sinai, 1 (2nd ed. by J. Cerny, London, 1952), PIs. 1, iv, §§1-4. The same publication (Pl. ii, Nos. 5, 7) also shows scenes of Snefru and Khufu of the Fourth Dynasty (2650 or 2600 B.C.)

c

While we have somewhat more information about the Egyptians’ activity in Sinai, because of their interest in the turquoise and copper mines there. However, under the Old Kingdom the records in the mining area normally give little more than a depiction of the pharaoh smiting a nomad, with the pharaoh’s name accompanying the scene. Such are the records of Semer-khet of the First Dynasty (about 2950 or 2900 B.C.), and of Djoser and Za-nakht of the Third Dynasty (about 2750 or 2700 B.C.), published in Gardiner and Peet, The Inscriptions of Sinai, 1 (2nd ed. by J. Cerny, London, 1952), PIs. 1, iv, §§1-4. The same publication (Pl. ii, Nos. 5, 7) also shows scenes of Snefru and Khufu of the Fourth Dynasty (2650 or 2600 B.C.)

Asiatic Campaigns Under Pepi I

For the most part, it is an argument from silence to assume that military contact between Egypt and Asia was slight under the Old Kingdom. Rare bits of evidence indicate that a certain amount of aggressive activity was normal on the part of Egypt. We need to interpret the significance of the "prisoners" in Egyptian ships returning from Asia in the time of Sahu-Re of the Fifth Dynasty (about 2550 B.C.). There is a tomb scene of the late Fifth or early Sixth Dynasty (2500-2350 B.C.) showing the Egyptians making a successful attack on a fortress peopled with Asiatics. Finally, there is the text which follows, which may apply to a particularly aggravated situation or which may represent a normal situation of fighting, not otherwise stated to us. A certain career official of the Sixth Dynasty, named Uni, left an inscription in his cenotaph at Abydos, giving us the chief stages of his career under various pharaohs. Under Pepi I (about 2375 or 2350 B.C.), Uni was particularly active as a military commander against the Asiatics.

For the presence of Asiatics in the Egyptian Delta between the Old and Middle Kingdoms, see the Instruction for King Meri-ka-Re (pp. 414-418 below), the Prophecy of Nefer-rohu (pp. 444-446 below), and the Admonitions of Ipu-wer (pp. 441-444 below). For conditions at the beginning of the Middle Kingdom, see the Instruction of King Amen-em-het (pp. 418-419 below) and the Story of Si-nuhe (pp. 18-22 above).

When his majesty imposed punishment upon the Asiatics Who-are-Upon-the-Sands, his majesty made an

---

3. This should mean desert nomads, and probably did mean that in the first instance. It came to be a term of scorn for all Asiatics. As will appear later in this inscription, these “Sand-Dwellers” were agriculturists who built buildings.
army of many ten-thousands, in the entire Upper Egypt, the south being Elephantine and the north being Aphrodisopolis, and in Lower Egypt: in both of the (administrative) sides of the realm, in the (frontier) fortress, and in the midst of the (frontier) fortresses; among the Nubians of Irtjet, the Nubians of Madjoi, the Nubians of Yam, among the Nubians of Wawat, among the Nubians of Kaau, and from the land of the Temeh-Libyans. His majesty sent me at the head of this army, while the counts, while the Seal-Bearers of the King of Lower Egypt, while the Sole Companions of the Palace, while the nomarchs and mayors of Upper and Lower Egypt, the companions and chief dragomans, the chief prophets of Upper and Lower Egypt, and the chief bureaucrats were (each) at the head of a troop of Upper or Lower Egypt, or of the villages and towns which they might rule, or of the Nubians of these foreign countries. I was the one who used to make the plan for them, although my office was (only that of) Chief Domain Supervisor of the Palace, because I was (so) fitted for the post that not one of them (so much as) laid a hand upon his fellow, that not one of them appropriated (so much as) a lump of dough or a pair of sandals from a wayfarer, that not one of them carried off (so much as) a cloth from any town, that not one of them carried off any goat from anybody.

I led them to Northern Island, Doorway of li-hotep, and the District of Horus: Neb-maat, while I was in this office. . . . All these troops explored for me; never had there been (such) exploration for any other servant.

This army returned in safety, After it had hacked up the land of the [Sand]-Dwellers. This army returned in safety, After it had crushed the land of the Sand-Dwellers. This army returned in safety, After it had thrown down its enclosures. This army returned in safety, After it had cut down its fig trees and its vines. (25) This army returned in safety, After it had cast fire into all its dwellings. This army returned in safety, After it had killed troops in it by many ten-thousands. This army returned in safety, [After it had taken troops] in it, a great multitude as living captives.

*The figure is flamboyant, not to be taken literally.

*There were levies on all parts of Egypt, and soldiers were recruited or drafted from the lands to the south and west of Egypt.

*These three places cannot be located. One may argue that "Northern Island" might apply to one of the watered parts of the Delta, that a "Doorway" might be a frontier post, and that the pharaoh Snefru ("Horus: Neb-maat") was a patron of the Sinai area. This would provide three successive stages of exit from Egypt, but it would be based on three guesses.

*Or, "I opened the number of these troops; never had there been opened for any servant," in the sense of finding the number of soldiers?

*The land's. "This hymn of a victoriously returning army shows that the "Sand-Dwellers" had orchards and vineyards, fortified enclosures, and troops in His majesty praised me for it more than anything. His majesty sent me to lead [this] army five times, in order to repel the land of the Sand-Dwellers each time that they rebelled, with these troops. I acted with regard to that [for which his] majesty would show me favor [more than anything].

When it was said that backsliders because of something were among these foreigners in Antelope-Nose, I crossed over (30) in transports with these troops. I made a landing at the rear of the heights of the mountain range on the north of the land of the Sand-Dwellers. While a full half of this army was (still) on the road, I arrived, I caught them all, and every backslider among them was slain.

Middle Kingdom Egyptian Contacts with Asia

The Egyptian Middle Kingdom saw a number of contacts with Asia, even though these do not loom large in inscriptive records? There was exceptionally vigorous activity in the area of the Sinai mines. Objects bearing the names of Twelfth Dynasty pharaohs or of members of their families have been found at Byblos, Beirut, and Ugarit on the Phoenician coast, and at Qatna in north central Syria. At the minimum, these may have been royal gifts from Egyptian pharaohs to friendly but independent princes in Asia. At the maximum, they may show some kind of Egyptian hegemony in the area. Of a number of monuments found in Asia and bearing the names of Egyptian officials, two examples will suffice.

At Megiddo in Palestine there was found the statue base of Thut-hotep, son of Kay and Sit-Kheper-ka, a High Priest of Thoth at Hermopolis and Nomarch of the Hare Nome, in which Hermopolis lay. This was an official whose career, somewhere between 1900 and 1850 B.C., was well known from his tomb in Egypt.

At Ugarit (Ras Shamra) on the Phoenician coast there was found the statue group of the Mayor of the Pyramid City, Vizier, and Chief Justice, Sen-Usert-onenkh,... [to] whom [was given] the Gold of Honor in the presence of the courtiers. (The award of the "Gold of Honor" was normally considerable number. Sinai probably would not fit the case. Uni's army must have moved into Palestine.

The word translated "backsliders" seems to come from a root meaning "slip, be slippery." In Egyptian propaganda these expeditions into other countries were always punitive against rebellion. The place "Antelope-Nose" cannot be located. The beast in question is not a gazelle; it is either a bubalis or a fallow deer. The place may have been a mountain range on the north of the land of the Sand-Dwellers. For a more northerly expedition his army travelled by boat. Where would a range come to the water so clearly as the Carmel Range?

While a full half of this army was (still) on the road, I arrived, I caught them all, and every backslider among them was slain.

* The word translated "backsliders" seems to come from a root meaning "slip, be slippery." In Egyptian propaganda these expeditions into other countries were always punitive against rebellion. The place "Antelope-Nose" cannot be located. The beast in question is not a gazelle; it is either a bubalis or a fallow deer. The place may have been a mountain range on the north of the land of the Sand-Dwellers.

(25) The translation understands that Uni landed, marched inland, and won a victory while the rear half of his army was still on the march.

* The translation understands that Uni landed, marched inland, and won a victory while the rear half of his army was still on the march.

* The translation understands that Uni landed, marched inland, and won a victory while the rear half of his army was still on the march.

* The translation understands that Uni landed, marched inland, and won a victory while the rear half of his army was still on the march.
made for service outside of Egypt. The presence of the statues of such important officials in Palestine and Syria shows fairly intimate relations between Egypt and Asia. It is possible that they saw service as diplomatic agents or as resident Egyptian commissioners in areas of strong commercial and cultural interest.

(The ties between Egypt and Byblos [Gebal] on the Phoenician coast were particularly close. By the end of the Middle Kingdom princes of Byblos, bearing Asiatic names, used Egyptian hieroglyphic inscriptions showing that they boasted the Egyptian title hapy-a a Count, which in Egypt was a title conferred by the pharaoh. Even though we cannot be sure that the same applied in Phoenicia, the evidence of cultural leadership is clear.

Two of these Byblic princes were:

The Count of Byblos, Yep-shemu-ih, who repeats life, son of the Count, Ib-shemu, the triumphant.

The Count of Byblos, Inten, who repeats life, son of the Count Reyen, the triumphant.

(Our evidence on Asians in Egypt is disappointingly slight. A testamentary enactment, probably of the time of Amen-em-her III [end of the 19th century B.C.], indicates the presence of Asiatic slaves or serfs in Egypt.)

I give to her the four Asians which my brother X gave to me.

(Further, Asians seem to have been in some demand as dancers at Egyptian festivals.

The Count of Byblos, Yep-shemu-ib, who repeats life, son of the Count, Ib-shemu, the triumphant.

The Count of Byblos, Inten, who repeats life, son of the Count Reyen, the triumphant.

(Our evidence on Asians in Egypt is disappointingly slight. A testamentary enactment, probably of the time of Amen-em-her III [end of the 19th century B.C.], indicates the presence of Asiatic slaves or serfs in Egypt.)

Two of these Byblic princes were:

The Count of Byblos, Yep-shemu-ib, who repeats life, son of the Count, Ib-shemu, the triumphant.

The Count of Byblos, Inten, who repeats life, son of the Count Reyen, the triumphant.

(The general label for the scene runs:)

The Royal Documents Scribe Nefer-hotep.

The Overseer of Hunters Khety.

(The sheikh of the Asiatic group is labeled:)

The Ruler of a Foreign Country Ibsha.

(The general label for the scene runs:)

The arrival, bringing stibium, which thirty-seven Asians brought to him.

(The occasion was significant enough for a rather formal record. The Egyptian scribe holds a docket with the following inscription:)

The Egyptian Mines in Sinai

Mines in the southern part of the Sinai peninsula provided Egypt with copper, which was an important material for the advancement of her culture, and with turquoise, which she prized for adornment. The Sinai mines were worked by Egypt from predynastic times down into the Twentieth Dynasty. The necessity for securing the ore provided a reason for external conquest and the beginnings of empire. One of the Egyptian records of mining activity is here given as an example:

The majesty of this god despatched the Seal-Bearer of the God, the Overseer of the Cabinet, and Director of Lances, Hor-ur-Re, to this mining area. This land was reached in the 3rd month of the second season, although it was not at all the season for coming to this mining area. This Seal-Bearer of the God says to the officials who may come to this mining area at this season:

Let not your faces flag because of it. Behold ye, Hat-Hor turns it (5) to good (6) I have seen (it) so with regard to myself; I have experienced the like in myself. I came from Egypt with my face flagging? It was difficult, in my experience, to find the (proper) skin for it, when the land was burning hot, the highland was in summer, and the mountains branded an (already) blistered skin. When day broke for my leading to the camp* I kept on addressing the craftsmen about it: "How fortunate is he who is in this mining area!" But they said: "Turquoise is (10) always in the mountain, (but) it is the (proper) skin which has to be sought at this season. We used to hear the like, that ore is forthcoming at this season, but, really, it is the skin that is lacking for it in this difficult season of summer!"

All the time that I was leading (the men) to this mining area, the glory of the king was directing me.

Then I reached this land, and I began the work under... good auspices. (15) My entire army returned complete; no loss had ever occurred in it. My face did not flag at the prospect of the work. I succeeded in grasping the best auspices. I left oil in the 1st month of the 3rd season,7 and brought away this noble stone. I had surpassed anyone (else) who had come or anything demanded. There was no: "Oh for a good skin!", (but) eyes were in festivity. It was better than at its normal season. Oiler (20) offerings to the Lady of Heaven; pray, satisfy ye Hat-Hor. If you do it, it will profit you. Ye shall surpass because of it; prosperity will be among you. I made my expedition very successfully. There (need be) no loudness of voice about my work: what I accomplished was the success of the expedition....

The Inscription of Khu-Sebek, Called Djaa

The pharaohs of the Middle Kingdom have left us no direct record of their activities in Asia. Therefore we prize any indirect records, such as the following reference to an Asiatic campaign by Sen-Usert III (about 1880-1840 B.C.).

A stela found at Abydos, now No. 3306 in the Manchester Museum, England. Published by J. Garstang, El Arabah (London, 1901), PIs. r-v, by T. E. Peet, The Stela of Sebe\- §§676-87.

8

§§676-87.

For the real and potential enemies of Egypt at the end of the Middle Kingdom or shortly thereafter, see the Execration of Asiatic Princes (pp. 328-329 below).

(6) The Hereditary Prince and Count, firm of sandal, confident of stride, treading the path of his benefactor, whose good repute the Lord of the Two Lands has granted, whose position his love has advanced, the Chief District Supervisor of the Town, Djaa. He says: I made for myself this cenotaph,1 beatified, with its place established at the stairway of the great god, the Lord of Life, that I might smell for myself the incense coming forth therefrom and might be provided with the god’s vapor.

The Chief District Supervisor of the Town, [Khu-Sebek]. (11) He says: I was born in the [year] 27, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nub-kau-Re, the triumphant,4 appeared in the crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt upon the Horus-Throne of the Living, his majesty had me work as a fighter behind and beside his majesty, with seven men of the Residence.5 Thereupon I showed keenness in his presence, and his majesty had me made an Attendant of the Ruler, and sixty persons were given to me. His majesty proceeded [south]ward, to overthrow (16) the nomads of Nubia. Then I smote a Nubian in Ken\[ef in the presence of my town.8 Then I sailed north, following (the king) with six (men) of the Residence. Then he made (me) Deputy of Attendants, and a hundred persons were given to me as a reward.

(1) His majesty proceeded northward to overthrow the Asiatics. His majesty reached a foreign country of which the name was Sekmem.7 His majesty too\ the right direction in proceeding to the Residence of life, prosperity, and health.8 Then Sekmem fell, together with the wretched Retenu.9

While I was acting as rear guard, then I rallied together the individuals of the army to fight with the Asiatics. Then I had his weapons taken by two individuals of the army, without deviating from the fight, for my face was forward and I did not turn my back to the Asiatic.10

As Se(n)-Usert lives for me, I have spoken in truth! Then he gave me a throw-stick of fine gold for my hand, a seabbard and a dagger worked with fine gold, together with accessories.

The Hyksos in Egypt

The greatest indignity suffered by the ancient Egyptians was the conquest and rule of their land by foreigners out of Asia, the so-called “Shepherd Kings,” or Hyksos (ca. 1725-1575 B.C.). There is surprisingly little in Egyptian literature, in view of the real change which this foreign domination made in the national psychology: the change from a confident sense of domestic security to an aggressive sense of national peril. To be sure, it was not in character for an ancient people to enlarge on defeat and subjection at the hands of others. Only the victorious elimination of peril would enter the literature. Josephus has given us something of the tradition of a harsh foreign rule.11

---

1 Egyptians were normally buried in their home districts, but those who could afford it might have a cenotaph at the Osiris shrine in Abydos.
2 Amen-em-het II (about 1830-1805 B.C.). Thus under Sen-Usert III (about 1880-1840 B.C.), Khu-Sebek, probably over 70, led a frontier patrol at the Second Cataract, where he left an inscription recording the height of the Nile at Semneh (cf. Pect, op.cit., 13, bottom of pl. 11; Breasted, op.cit., 1, §679).
3 Sen-Usert III.
4 Apparently he headed the personal bodyguard of the pharaoh.
5 His home contingent witnessed the fear.
6 "His majesty gave the good beginning in." This expression is usually employed for the beginning of an enterprise. Here it seems that the pharaoh decided to leave the attack on Sekmem and return to Egypt. Then the Asiatic city fell after his departure. The only alternative is to assume that this sentence has been misplaced in the context, cf. n.3 above, and note the necessity of reading this stela with lines 6-17 preceding lines 1-5.
7 Syria-Palestine in general. The implication is that Sekmem was a focal center of an Asiatic “rebellion” against Egypt.
8 Unless these lines are misplaced, they imply that the Egyptian army was under pressure on its return from the victory over Sekmem.
9 A. M. Blackman, in JEA. 8 (1919), 13-14, claims “an indirect reference to Sesostris III’s Syrian campaign” in a tomb scene showing “cattle of Retenu” in Egypt. Unfortunately, Blackman’s “the cattle of Retenu during the counting(?)” might equally be translated “the cattle at every counting, thus removing the assumed Asiatic country name.
10 Josephus, Contra Apionem, 1, 14, in H. St. J. Thackeray’s translation for the Loeb Library, Josephus, i (New York, 1926), 190-201.
In an inscription written almost a century after the expulsion of the Hyksos from Egypt, the queen Hat-shepsut (about 1486-1469 B.C.) gives some of the national sense of indignation. This inscription was carved on the facade of a temple of hers at Speos Artemidos (Istabl Antar) in Middle Egypt. A new edition by A. H. Gardiner, based on a copy by N. de G. Davies, of the text by W. Golenischeff, in Recueil de travaux ... vi (1885), PL. oppp. p. 20, and by K. Sethe, Tfr/unden der 18. Dynastie (Urn-), iv, Leipzig, 1906), 11, 383-91, and the translation by Breasted, AR, 11, §§896-903. The extract below comes from lines 35-42 of this inscription.

Hear ye, all people and the folk as many as they may be, I have done these things through the counsel of my heart. I have not slept forgettfully, (but) I have restored that which had been ruined. I have raised up that which had gone to pieces formerly, since the Asiaties were in the midst of Avaris of the Northland, and they were in the midst of them, overthrowing that which had been made. They ruled without Re, and he did not act by divine command down to (the reign of) my majesty. (Now) I am established upon the thrones of Re. I was foretold for the limits of the years as a born conqueror. I am come as the uraeus-serpent of Horus, flaming against my enemies. I have made distant those whom the gods abominate, and earth has carried off their footprints. This is the precept of the father of my [fathers, who comes at his (appointed) times, Re, and there shall not occur damage to what Amon has commanded. My own] command endures like the mountains, (while) the sun disc shines forth and spreads rays over the formal titles of my majesty and my falcon is high above (my) name-standard for the duration of eternity.

Another document on the Hyksos rule might perhaps be among folk tales treated above. It is a legend of later date, carrying the story of a contest between two rulers in Egypt. The Hyksos King Apophis in the Delta held suzerainty over the Hyksos King Seqnen-Re in the Delta. Then King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—made him Seth as lord, and he would not serve any god who was in the land [except] Seth. And [he] built a temple of good and eternal work beside the House of [King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—(and)] he appeared [every] day to have sacrifices made . . . daily to Seth. And the officials [of the King]—life, prosperity, health!—carried wreaths, just exactly as is done (in) the temple of the Re-Har-akhti. Now then, as for (5) [King] Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—he wanted to [send] an irritating message (to) King Seqnen-Re—life, prosperity, health!—the Prince of the Southern City.

Now [AFTER] MANY DAYS FOLLOWING THIS, then King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—had summoned.

(Here the papyrus is badly broken. Apophis appears to be in consultation with his "scribes and wise men," and they seem to suggest the arrogant demand about the hippopotamus pool at Thebes. If Seqnen-Re should accede to this demand he would lose face, but he was in no position to ignore it. His only recourse would be to devise a logical but equally absurd riposte.)

"[So we shall see the power of the god who] (ii 1) is with him as protector. He relies upon no god who is in the [entire land] except Amon-Re, King of the Gods." 8

Now after many days following this, then King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—sent to the Prince of the Southern City (with) the message which his scribes and wise men had told him. Now when the messenger of King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—reached the Prince of the Southern City, THEN HE WAS TAKEN INTO the presence of the Prince of the Southern City. THEN they said to the messenger of King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!: "Why were you sent to the Southern City? How did you come to (make) this trip?"

THEN the messenger (5) said to him: "King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—sends to you as follows: 'Have the hippopotamus pool which is in the orient of the City

---

1 The Hyksos capital, Avaris, has been located, with some probability, at the same site as Tanis, San el-Hagar, in the northeast Delta, cf. pp. 232, 252 below.
2 "Wanderers, nomads, strangers."
3 Re. Gardiner, op.cit., 55, explains that the pharaoh "ascribed all his official acts to obedience to orders given him by the deity."
4 "As a she-becomes-(her)-sirens," a compound expression.
5 The gods have blessed Hat-shepsut's rule, confirming the names under which she ruled.
6 For example, the 2nd person singular is translated "you," rather than "thou."
7 Thebes.
8 The Egyptian god Seth served also as their equivalent for various Asian gods. cf. pp. 201, 249, 252, 257.
9 This is taken to be the end of the advice of Apophis' wise men. It pits their god Seth against the Theban god Amon-Re.
done [away] with! For they do not let sleep come to me by day or by night,' and the noise is (in) the ears of his city." Then the Prince of the Southern City was dumbfounded for a long time, for it happened that he did not know how to return [answer] to the messenger of King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!

Then the Prince of the Southern City said to him: "Well, your lord—life, prosperity, health!—should hear something about [this pool which is in] the orient of the Southern City here? Then [the messenger said: 'The] matter about which he sent me [must be carried out?' ] Then the Prince of the Southern City had [the] messenger of King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—taken care of, [with] good [things]: meat, cakes, ... taken care of, [with] good [things]: meat, cakes, ... [Then the Prince of the Southern City said to him: 'Tell your lord': As for everything which you say to him," I will do it. Tell [him] so." ... Then the messenger of King] Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—started out to travel to the place where (iii i) his lord—life, prosperity, health!—was.

Then the Prince of the Southern City had his chief officials summoned, as well as every superior soldier that he had, and he repeated to them every message about which King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—had sent to him. Then they were one and all silent for a long time, (for) they did not know how to answer him, whether good or bad.

Then King Apophis—life, prosperity, health!—sent to...

The War Against the Hyksos

The expulsion of the Hyksos from Egypt was not accomplished in a single generation. The Egyptians had to find their strength in a series of campaigns. The account of one such revolt against the foreign rule is found in a characteristic setting: the record of a pharaoh's superior judgment and prowess. Ka-mose, who reigned just before the Eighteenth Dynasty (before 1570 B.C.), rebelled against a truce which divided Egypt between his Theban rule and the rule of the Hyksos at Avaris, rejected the cautious advice of his officials, and set out to win back a larger dominion. Although the end of the inscription is lost, it may be assumed that Ka-mose was recording some measure of success.

The Carnarvon Tablet I, found in western Thebes, is a schoolboy exercise almost contemporary with the events it relates. As will be indicated below, it may have been copied from Ka-mose's own stela. The tablet was published by Lord Carnarvon and H. Carter, Five Years' Exploration at Thebes (London, 1921), 36-37, PIs. xxvii-xxviii, and by A. H. Gardiner, in JEA, III (1916), 95-110, PIs. xii-xiii. It was translated by B. Gunn and A. H. Gardiner, in JEA, v (1918), 45-47, and by Erman, LAE, 52-54.

That this schoolboy's tablet derived from a genuine historical inscription was demonstrated by the discovery of fragments of a stela found at Karnak, noted in ASAE, xxxv (1935), III, and published by P. Lacau, in ASAE, xxxix (1939), 245-71, PIs. xxxvii-xxxviii. After one allows for the schoolboy's mistakes, the congruence of the two texts is marked.

Year 3 of Horus: Appearing upon His Throne; the Two Goddesses: Repeating Monuments; Horus of Gold: Making the Two Lands Content; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt ... : [Wadj]-kheper-Re; the Son of Re ... : Ka-mose, given life, beloved of Amon- Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, like Re forever and ever.

The mighty king in Thebes, Ka-mose, given life forever, was the beneficent king. It was [Re] himself [who made him] king and who assigned him strength in truth.

His majesty spoke in his palace to the council of nobles who were in his retinue: "Let me understand what this strength of mine is for! (One) prince is in Avaris, another is in Ethiopia, and (here) I sit associated with an Asiatic and a Negro! Each man has his slice of this Egypt, dividing up the land with me. I cannot pass by him as far as Memphis, the waters of Egypt, (but), behold, he has Hermopolis. No man can settle down, being despoiled by the impostors of the Asiatics. I will grapple with him, that I may cut open his belly! My wish is to save Egypt and to smile (5) the Asiatics!"

The great men of his council spoke: 'Behold, it is Asiatic water as far as Cusae, and they have pulled out their tongues that they might speak all together, (whereas) we are at ease in our (part of) Egypt. Elephantine is strong, and the middle (of the land) is with us as far as Cusae. The sleekest of their fields are plowed for us, and our cattle are pastured in the Delta. Emmer is sent for our pigs. Our cattle have not been taken away. ... He holds the land of the Asiatics; we hold Egypt. Should someone come and act [against us], then we shall act against him!"

Then they were hurtful to the heart of his majesty: "As for this plan of yours, ... He who divides the land with me will not respect me. [Shall I respect these Asiatics who ... from him?] I [shall] sail north to reach Lower Egypt. [If I fight with] the Asiatics, success will come. If he things to be content with ... with weeping, the entire land ... (10) ... ruler in the midst of Thebes, Ka-mose, the protector of Egypt!"

I went north because I was strong (enough) to attack the Asiatics through the command of Amon, the just of counsels. My valiant army was in front of me like a blast of fire. The troops of the Madjoi were on

---

1 Avaris was the Hyksos capital in the Delta. The word translated "Ethiopia" is the same as the biblical Cush. In contexts of earlier times, the word Nebsi was rendered "Nubian," but is here rendered "Negro." See the article by H. Junker, "The First Appearance of the Negroes in History," in JEA, vn (1921), 121-32.

2 "He" was the Hyksos ruler, holding as far south as Hermopolis in Middle Egypt, about 150 miles south of Memphis.

3 Cusae lay about 25 miles south of Hermopolis.

4 Perhaps a colloquialism for: They have over-extended themselves, since the following clause contrasts the ease of the Egyptians. The Karnak stela adds the words 'that they might speak,' lacking in the tablet.

5 The word "pastured" is in this place on the stela, is misplaced on the tablet. Upper Egypt commonly had herds at pasture in the Delta, a practice permitted by the present truce. Emmer wheat, used largely for fodder, was grown chiefly in the Delta.

6 In this section of the text both tablet and stela are broken, making the sense uncertain.

7 Since this ends the argument, pharaoh's bolder counsel prevailed.
The Expulsion of the Hyksos

It is an irony of history that our best contemporaneous source on the expulsion of the Hyksos from Egypt comes from the biographical record of a relatively modest citizen of Upper Egypt, the captain of a Nile vessel. In relating his participation in the campaigns of Ah-mose I (about 1570-1545 B.C.) and of Thutmose I (about 1525-1495), Ah-mose, son of the woman Eben, tells of the successive attacks on the Hyksos in Egypt and then of the follow-up campaigns into Asia.

The inscriptions in Ah-mose’s tomb in el-Kab of Upper Egypt were copied in C. R. Lepsius, Denkmaler aus Aegypten und Aethiopien (Berlin, 1849-59), 10, b, c, d, and are also set forth in K. Sethe, Tjefunden der 18. Dynastie (Urk., iv, Leipzig, 1905), 1, i-ii, accompanied by a translation (Leipzig, 1914). The text was studied by V. Loret, L’inscription d’Ahmes fils d’Ahmose (Bibliothèque d’étude, III, Cairo, 1910). There are translations by Breasted, AR, 11, §§1-13, 81-82, and by B. Gunn and A. H. Gardiner, in JEA, v (1918), 48-54.

The commander of a crew, Ah-mose, son of Eben, the triumphant, says:

I speak to you, all mankind, that I may let you know the favors which have come to me. I have been awarded gold seven times in the presence of the entire land, and male and female slaves in like manner, and I have been vested with very many fields. The reputation of a valiant man is from what he has done, not being destroyed in this land forever.

He speaks thus:

I had my upbringing in the town of el-Kab, my father being a soldier of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Seqnen-Re, the triumphant, his name being Bebe, (5) the son of (the woman) Ro-onet. Then I served as soldier in his place in the ship, "The Wild Bull," in the time of the Lord of the Two Lands: Neb-pehti-Re, the triumphant, when I was (still) a boy, before I had taken a wife, (but) while I was (still) sleeping in a net hammock.

But after I had set up a household, then I was taken on the ship, "Northern," because I was valiant. Thus I used to accompany the Sovereign—life, prosperity, health!—on foot, following his excursions in his chariot. When the town of Avaris was besieged, then I showed valor on foot in the presence of his majesty. Thereupon I was appointed to the ship, "Appearing in Memphis." Then there was fighting on the water in the canal Pa-Djedku of Avaris. Thereupon I made a capture, (10) and I carried away a hand. It was reported to the king’s herald. Then the Gold of Valor was given to me. Thereupon there was fighting again in this place. Then I made a capture again there and brought away a hand. Then the Gold of Valor was given to me over again.

Then there was fighting in the Egypt which is south of this town. Thereupon I carried off a man (as) living prisoner. I went down into the water—now he was taken captive on the side of the town—and crossed over the water carrying him. Report was made to the king’s herald. Thereupon I was awarded gold another time.

Then Avaris was despoiled. Then I carried off spoil from there: one man, three women, a total of four persons. Then his majesty gave them to me to be slaves.

Then (15) Sharuhanet was besieged for three years. Then his majesty despoiled it. Thereupon I carried off spoil from there: two women and a hand. Then the...
Gold of Valor was given to me, and my spoil was given to me to be slaves.

Now after his majesty had killed the Asiatics, then he sailed southward to Khenti-hen-nefer, to destroy the prosperity, health!—found that enemy while he was marshaling the battle array. Then his majesty made a great slaughter among them. There was no number to the living prisoners whom his majesty carried off by his victory. Now I was in the van of our army, and his majesty saw how valiant I was. I carried off a chariot, its horse, and him who was in it as a living prisoner. They were presented to his majesty. Then I was awarded another time.

The Asiatic Campaigns of Thut-mose III

THE FIRST CAMPAIGN: THE BATTLE OF MEGIDDO

Thut-mose III (about 1490-1436 B.C.) was the conquering pharaoh who set the Egyptian Empire on a foundation firm for almost a century. For twenty years he led campaigns into Asia almost every year. Some of these campaigns involved serious fighting, others were parades of strength. We have detailed information on his first campaign (perhaps 1468 B.C.), which attacked the focus of Asiatic resistance in the Canaanite city of Keshesh. The campaigns of subsequent years may have been just as fully recorded, but that detail has been condensed in the texts deriving from those years.

A. THE ARMANST STELA

A red granite stela, broken and reused in later constructions, was found at Armanst in Upper Egypt and published in R. Mond and O. H. Myers, The Temples of Armanst. A Preliminary Survey (London, 1940), Pls. xi, No. 5; xxxviii, No. 8; and Text Volume, 182-84, with a translation and commentary by M. S. Drower. Like the Barkal Stela, treated below, this stela does not deal with events in chronological order. Those elements which belong to other campaigns will be noted in relation to those campaigns. Here only the material of the first campaign is translated.

Live the Horus: Mighty Bull, Appearing in Thebes; the Two Goddesses: Enduring of Kingship, like Re in Heaven; the Horus of Gold: Majestic of Appearances, Mighty of Strength; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands, Lord of Making Offerings: Men-kheper-Re; the Son of Re, of his Body: Thutmose Heqa-Maat, beloved of Montu, Lord of Thebes, Residing in Hermonthis, Living forever.

Year 22, 2nd month of the second season, day io.1 Summary of the deeds of valor and victory which this good god performed, being every effective deed of heroism, beginning from the first generation; that which the Lord of the Gods, the Lord of Hermonthis, did for him: the magnification of his victories, to cause that his deeds of valor be related for millions of years to come, apart from the deeds of heroism which his majesty did at all times. If (they) were to be related all together by their names, they would be (too) numerous to put them into writing.

His majesty made no delay in proceeding to the land of (10) Dja, to kill the treacherous ones who were in it and to give things to those who were loyal to him; witness, indeed, each country according to its time. His majesty returned on each occasion, when his attack had been effected in valor and victory, so that he caused Egypt to be in its condition as (it was) when Re was in it as king. [Year 22, 4th month of the second season, day . . . Proceeding] from Memphis, to slay the countries of the wretched Retenu, on the first occasion of victory. It was his majesty who opened its roads and forced its every way for his army, after it had made rebellion, gathered in Megidido. His majesty entered upon that road which becomes very narrow, as the first of his entire army, while every country had gathered, standing prepared at its mouth. . . . The enemy quailed, fleeing headlong to their town, together with the prince who was in . . . (15) . . . to them, beseeching [breath], their goods upon their backs. His majesty returned in gladness of heart, with this entire land as vassal . . . [Asiaticics, coming at one time, bearing [their] tribute . . .

B. THE ANNALS IN KARNAK

The "Annals" of Thutmose III's military campaigns are carved on the walls of the Temple of Karnak, in recognition of 1 Hermonthis is modern Armanst.

2 For the first twenty-two years of his reign, Thutmose III had been overshadowed by the queen Hat-shepst. Then he seized power with some show of violence and indulged his desire for military activity almost immediately. The present date is two and a half months earlier than Thutmose's departure from the Egyptian frontier (n.9 below). Drower, op. cit., 183, n. 1, suggests that the present date may be the beginning of his sole reign.
3 Centrally Phoenicia, but here Syria-Palestine.
4 The formal departure from Memphis must have preceded the passing of the Egyptian frontier (n.9 below).
5 The pass through the Carmel range leading to Megiddo; cf. n.20 below.
the fact that the god Amon-Re had given victory. The text appears in C. R. Lepsius, Denkmäler aus Aegypten und Aethiopien (Berlin, 1849-99), H. lii, 312-32; and in K. Sethe, Urkunden der i8. Dynastie (U r l v), in, 647-77. Translations and commentary will be found in Breasted, AR, n., §§S391-443; H. H. Nelson, The Battle of Megiddo (Chicago, 1919), with topographical study; and R. Faulkner, in JEA, xxv (1945), 2-15.

The Horus: Mighty Bull, Appearing in Thebes; . . . (Thut-mose III).7

His majesty commanded that [the victories which his father Amon had given to him] should be established [upon] a monument in the temple which his majesty had made for [his father Amon, in order to set down] (5) each individual campaign, together with the booty which [his majesty] carried [off from it, and the dues of every foreign country] which his father Re had given to him.

Year 22, 4th month of the second season, day 25.8 [His majesty passed the fortress of] Sile,9 on the first campaign of victory [which his majesty made to extend] the frontiers of Egypt, in valor, [in victory, in power, and in justification]. Now this was a [long] time in years . . . (10) plunder, while every man was [tributary] before . . . B u t it happened in later times10 that the garrison which was there was in the town of Sharuhen,11 while from lursa to the outer ends of the earth12 had become rebellious against his majesty.13

Year 23, 1st month of the third season, day 4, the day of the feast of the king's coronation—as far as the town of "That-Which-the-Ruler-Seized," [of which the Syrian name is] Gaza.14

[Year 23.15] (15) 1st month of the third season, day 5—departure from this place, in valor, [in victory,] in power, and in justification, in order to overthrow that wretched enemy,16 and to extend the frontiers of Egypt, according to the command of his father Amon-Re, the [valiant] and victorious, that he should capture.

Year 23, 1st month of the third season, day 16—as far as the town of Yhem. [His majesty] ordered a conference with his victorious army, speaking as follows: "That [wretched] enemy (20) of Kadesh has come and has entered into Megiddo. He is [there] at this moment. He has gathered to him the princes of [every] foreign country [which had been] loyal to Egypt, as well as (those) as far as Naharin and Mitanni, them of Hurru, them of Kode, their horses, their armies, [and their people], for he says—so it is reported—'I shall wait [here] (25) in Megiddo [to fight against his majesty]. Will ye tell me [what is in your hearts] ?"17

They said in the presence of his majesty: 'What is it like to go [on] this [road] which becomes (so) narrow? It is [reported] that the foe is there, waiting on [the outside, while they are] becoming (more) numerous. Will not horse (have to) go after [horse, and the army] (30) and the people similarly? Will the vanguard of us be fighting while the [rear guard] is waiting here in Aruna, unable to fight?18 Now two (other) roads are here. One of the roads—behold, it is [to the east of us], so that it comes out at Taanach. The other—behold, it is to the (35) north side of Djefti, and we will come out to the north of Megiddo.19 Let our victorious lord proceed on the one of [them] which is [satisfactory to] his heart, (but) do not make us go on that difficult road!"

Then messages [were brought in] about that wretched enemy, and discussion was continued of [that] problem on which they had previously spoken. That which was said in the majesty of the Court—life, prosperity, health!20—'I [swear], (40) as Re loves me, as my father Amon favors me, as my [nostrils] are rejuvenated with life and satisfaction, my majesty shall proceed upon this Aruna road! Let him of you who wishes go upon these roads of which you speak, and let him of you who wishes come in the following of my majesty! Behold,' they will say, these (45) enemies whom Re abominates, 'has

7 Not yet specified by name or title. The Prince of Kadesh—probably Kadesh on the Orontes—was the leader of the coalition against Egypt. See n.19 below.

8 May 7, 1468 (Borchardt). After leaving the Egyptian-held city of Gaza, the army's rate was notably slower through territory which was actually or potentially rebellious. Perhaps 80 miles were covered in 11 or 12 days. Yehem (possibly Jaimai or similar) is tentatively located by Nelson at Yemma on the south side of the Carmel ridge.

9 It is probable from the nature of this coalition and from Thut-mose's subsequent campaigns that this Kadesh was the city on the Orontes. The Barkal Stela (p. 238) gives the coalition as 330 princes, i.e. rulers of city states. Naharin and Mitanni (restoration not certain) were at the bend of the Euphrates. Hurru (or Kharoo) was generally Syria-Palestine, and Kode the coast of north Syria and of Cilicia.

10 Nelson's topographic reconstruction gives the situation confronting the Egyptians. If they went straight ahead on the narrow track debouching just south of Megiddo, they had to go in single file and would be particularly vulnerable. Aruna, perhaps modern Tell 'Ara in the pass, was not 'here' at Yhem, since it was a few miles further north. It was 'here' on the southern side of the mountain range.

11 Two safer mountain tracks were offered as alternatives, one debouching at Taanach, 4 or 5 miles southeast of Megiddo, and one debouching at an unknown point north (west) of Megiddo.
his majesty set out on another road because he has become afraid of us?—so they will speak."

They said in the presence of his majesty: "May thy father Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands,

Presiding over Karnak, act [according to thy desire]!
Behold, we are following thy majesty everywhere that thy majesty goes, for a servant will be after [his] lord."

[Then his majesty laid a charge] (50) upon the entire army: "[Ye] shall [hold fast to the stride of your victorious lord on] that road which becomes (so) narrow. Behold, his majesty has taken] an oath, saying:
'I will not let [my victorious army] go forth ahead of my majesty in [this place]!" Now his majesty had laid it in his heart that he himself should go forth at the head of his army. [Every man] was made aware (55) of his order of march, horse following horse, while [his majesty] was at the head of his army.

Year 23, 1st month of the third season, day 19— the awakening in [life] in the tent of life, prosperity, and health, at the town of Aruna.24 Proceeding northward by my majesty, carrying my father Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, [that he might open the ways] before me,25 while Har-akhti established [the heart of my victorious army] (60) and my father
Amon strengthened the arm [of my majesty]

Then [his] majesty issued forth26 at the head of his army, which was [prepared] in many ranks. [He had not met] a single [enemy]. Their [southern wing] was in Taanach, [while their] nothern wing was on the south side of [the Qina Valley].26 Then (65) his majesty rallied them saying:...! They are fallen!29 While that [wretched] enemy . . . [May] ye [give praise] to (70) him; may ye extol the might of [his] majesty, because his arm is greater than (that of) [any] [ing. It has indeed protected the rear of] his majesty's army in Aruna!"

Now while the rear of his majesty's victorious army was [still] at [the town] of Aruna, the vanguard had come out into the [Qina] Valley, and they filled the mouth of this valley.

Then they said to his majesty—life, prosperity, health!
—(75) "Behold, his majesty has come forth with his victorious army, and they have filled the valley. Let our victorious lord listen to us this time, and let our lord await for us the rear of his army and his people. When the rear of the army comes forth for us into the open, then we shall fight against these foreigners, then we shall not trouble our hearts [about] the rear of (80) our army."

A halt was made by his majesty outside, [seated] there and awaiting the rear of his victorious army. Now the [leaders] had just finished coming forth on this road when the shadow turned.30 His majesty reached the south of Megiddo on the bank of the Qina brook, when the seventh hour was in (its) course in the day.31

Then a camp was pitched there for his majesty, and a charge was laid upon the entire army, [saying]: "Prepare ye! Make your weapons ready, since one will engage in combat with that wretched enemy in the morning, because one is ...!"

Resting in the enclosure of life, prosperity, and health.32 Providing for the officials. Issuing rations to the retinue. Posting the sentries of the army. Saying to them: "Be steadfast, be steadfast! Be vigilant, be vigilant!" Awakening in life in the tent of life, prosperity, and health. They came to tell his majesty: "The desert is well,33 and the garrisons of the south and north also!"

Year 23, 1st month of the third season, day 21, the day of the feast of the true new moon.34 Appearance of the king at dawn. Now a charge was laid upon the entire army to pass by . . . (85) His majesty set forth in a chariot of fine gold, adorned with his accoutrements of combat, like Horus, the Mighty of Arm, a lord of action like Montu, the Theban, while his father Amon made strong his arms. The southern wing of his majesty's army was at a hill south of [the] Qina [brook] and the northern wing was to the northwest of Megiddo, while his majesty was in their center, Amon being the protection of his person (in) the melee and the strength of [Seth pervading] his members.

Thereupon his majesty prevailed over them at the head of his army. Then they saw his majesty prevailing over them, and they fled headlong [to] Megiddo with faces of fear. They abandoned their horses and their chariots of gold and silver, so that someone might draw them into their town, for the fear of his majesty entered them: "Be steadfast, be steadfast! Be vigilant, be vigilant!"" Await for us the rear of his army and his people. When he said: "They are fallen!" he was anticipating the fall of the Asiatics, because they had failed to guard the pass.

Then the entire army rejoiced and gave praise to Amon because of the victory which he had given to his son on [this day. They lauded] his majesty and extolled his victories. Then they presented the plunder which they had taken: hands, living prisoners, horses, and chariots of gold and silver and of painted wor.

Then his majesty commanded his army with the words: "Capture ye [effectively, my] victorious [army]! Behold, [all foreign countries] have been put [in this town by the command] of Re on this day, inasmuch as every prince of every [northern] country is shut up within it, for the capturing of Megiddo is the capturing of a thousand towns! Capture ye firmly, firmly!...

Orders were issued to the commanders of the troops to provide for their divisions and to inform each [man] of his place. They measured [this] city, which was corralled with a moat and enclosed with fresh timbers of all their pleasant trees, while his majesty himself was in a fortress east of this town, [being] watchful [enclosed] with a girdle wall... by its girdle wall. Its name was called "Men-kheper-Re-is-the-Corraler-of-the-Asiatics." People were appointed as sentries at the enclosure of his majesty, and they were told: "Be steadfast, be steadfast! Be vigilant, [be vigilant]!... . . . They [are] set down on a roll of leather in the temple of Amon today.

Now the princes of this foreign country came on their bellies to kiss the ground to the glory of his majesty and to beg breath for their nostrils, because his arm was (so) great, because the prowess of Amon was (so) great [over 95] every [foreign] country... [all] the princes whom the prowess of his majesty carried off, bearing their tribute of silver, gold, lapis lazuli, and turquoise, and carrying grain, wine, and large and small cattle for the army of his majesty, with one gang of them bearing tribute southward. Then his majesty appointed princes anew for [every town]...

List of the booty which his majesty's army carried off from the town of Megiddo: 340 living prisoners and 83 hands; 2,041 horses, 191 foals, 6 stallions, and... colts; 1 chariot worked with gold, with a body of gold, belonging to that enemy, [1] fine chariot worked with gold belonging to the Prince of Megiddo... and 892 chariots of his wretched army—total: 924; 1 fine bronze coat of mail belonging to that enemy, [1] fine bronze coat of mail belonging to the Prince of Megiddo, and 200 [leather] coats of mail belonging to his wretched army; 502 bows and 7 poles of meru-wood, worked with silver, of the tent of that enemy.

Now the army [of his majesty] carried off [cattle]... : 387... , 1,929 cows, 2,000 goats, and 20,500 sheep.

List of what was carried off afterward by the king from the household goods of that enemy, who [was in] Yanoam, Nuges, and Herenkeru, together with the property of those towns which had made themselves subject to him... ; 38 [maryanu] belonging to them, 84 children of that enemy and of the princes who were with him, 5 maryanu belonging to them, 1,796 male and female slaves, as well as their children, and 103 pardoned persons, who had come out from that enemy because of hunger—total: 2,503—apart from bowls of cosdy stone and gold, various vessels, (100) ... , a large aunu-yax in Syrian work, jars, bowls, plates, various drinking vessels, large kettles, [*-j-] 17 knives—making 1,784 deben; gold in discs, found in the process of being worked, as well as abundant silver in discs—966 deben and 1 [ide a silver statue in the form of... [a statue] — , with head of gold; 3 walking sticks with human heads; 6 carrying-chairs of that enemy, of ivory, ebony, and carob-wood, worked with gold, and the 6 footstools belonging to them; 6 large tables of

On the surrender, see also the Barkal Stela (p. 238).
---
Elsewhere in the Temple of Karnak (Sethe, op.cit., 744). Thut-mose III states that he presented to Amon "three towns in Upper Retenu—Nuges the name of one, Yanoam the name of another, and Herenkeru the name of another—taxed with annual dues for the divine offerings of my father Amon." "Upper Retenu" properly stands for the mountain territory of north Palestine and southern Syria, and Yanoam seems to have been in the Lake Huleh area. The three towns would then be somewhere in that area.

---
About 435 lb. Troy of metal value (probably reckoned in silver) in the listed pieces.

---
About 235 lb. Troy. Uncertain whether of silver only, or of the combined value of gold and silver.
ivory and carob-wood; i bed belonging to that enemy, of carob-wood, worked with gold and with every (kind of) cosdy stone, in the manner of a |er|er completely worked in gold; a statue of that enemy which was there, of ebony worked with gold, its head of lapis lazuli ... bronze vessels, and much clothing of that enemy.

Now the fields were made into arable plots and assigned to inspectors of the palace—life, prosperity, health!—in order to reap their harvest. List of the harvest which his majesty carried off from the Megiddo acres: 207,300 [ + x] sacks of wheat,67 apart from what was cut as forage by his majesty’s army, . . .

C. THE BARKAL STELA

In his 47th year, Thut-mose III erected at Gebel Barkal near the Fourth Cataract a granite stela summarizing some of the achievements of his reign. It was published, with photograph, transcription, and translation, by G. A. and M. B. Reisner in ZtsS, LXIX (1933), 24-39. Ph. innsx. Only that part of the text which deals with the first campaign is translated below. Another extract will be found below under the eighth campaign.

I repeat further to you—hear, O people! (19) He68 entrusted to me the foreign countries of Retenu on the first campaign, when they had come to engage with my majesty, being millions and hundred-thousands of men, the individuals of every foreign country, waiting in their chariots—330 princes, every one of them having his own army.

When they were in the Qina Valley and away from it, in a tight spot, good fortune befell me among them, when my majesty attacked them. Then they fled immediately or fell prostrate. When they entered into Megiddo, my majesty shut them up for a period up to seven months, before they came out into the open, pleading to my majesty and saying: "Give us thy breath, our lord! The countries of Retenu will never repeat rebellion another time!"

Then that enemy and the princes who were with him sent out to my majesty, with all their children carrying abundant tribute: gold and silver, all their horses which were with them, their great chariots of gold and silver, as well as those which were plain, all their coats of mail, their bows, their arrows, and all their weapons of warfare. It was these with which they had come from afar to fight against my majesty, and now they were bringing them as tribute to my majesty, while they were standing on their walls, giving praise to my majesty, seeking that the breath of life might be given to them.

(24) Then my majesty had administered to them an oath of fealty with the words: "We will not repeat evil against Men-kheper-Re, who lives forever, our good lord, in our time of life, inasmuch as we have seen his power, and he has given us breath as he wishes! It was his father who did it—[Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands]—it was not the hand of man!"

Then my majesty had them given leave to (go to) their cities. They all went on donkey (back), so that I might take their cities. I took captive the townspeople thereof for Egypt, and their possessions likewise.

D. FROM A DEDICATORY INSCRIPTION

In the Temple of Karnak Thut-mose III recorded the offerings and feasts which he established for the god Amon-Re in return for his victories. An extract from the beginning of this text gives further information on the first campaign. Perhaps during the seven months’ siege of Megiddo, the pharaoh had been able to send a detachment north and establish a fortress outpost somewhere in the Lebanon. The text appears in Lepsius, op. cit., 30b, and in Sethe, op. cit., 739-40. It is translated in Breasted, op. cit., §§8548-49.

... in the country of Retenu, in a fortress which my majesty built through his victories, a central point of the princes of Lebanon, of which the name shall be "Men-kheper-Re-is-the-Binder-of-the-Vagabonds."

Now when he landed at Thebes, his father Amon was [in joy]My majesty established for him a Feast of Victory anew, at the time when my majesty returned from the first victorious campaign, overthrowing the wretched Retenu and extending the frontiers of Egypt, in the year 23, as the first of the victories which he decreed to me.

SUBSEQUENT CAMPAIGNS

Thut-mose III conducted at least sixteen campaigns into Asia in a period of twenty years. Some campaigns involved difficult fighting, some were mere parades of strength to organize the new empire. The records of some campaigns consist simply of statements of "tribute" to Egypt—from Retenu, Djahi, and Cyprus; from Nubia, Ethiopia, and Punt; and from Naharin, Hatti, Assyria, and Babylonia. Obviously, some of this was truly tribute from conquered countries, but some of it consisted of gifts from distant and sovereign lands. This translation includes only those campaigns having greater interest.

For Thut-mose III’s Hymn of Victory, see pp. 373-375 below. For a legend about the capture of Joppa under Thut-mose III, see pp. 22-23 above.

A. FIFTH CAMPAIGN

By his fifth campaign, in his 29th year, Thut-mose was moving as far north as the towns of Tunip and Ardata, somewhere in north Syria. From the "Annals" in Karnak: Sethe, op. cit., 685-88; bibliography on 680. Translation in Breasted, op. cit., §§454-62.

(3) Year 29. Now [his] majesty [was in Dja]hi, destroying the countries which had been rebellious to him, on the fifth victorious campaign. Now his majesty captured the town of Wartet. . . . List of the plunder which was taken from this town, from the garrison of that enemy of Tunip: 1 prince of this town; 329 teher-

68 An unknown object of wood.
67 Something like 450,000 bushels.
66 Amon-Re.
warriors; 100 deben of silver; 100 deben of gold; lapis lazuli, turquoise, and vessels of bronze and copper.

Now there was a seizing of two ships, ... loaded with everything, with male and female slaves, copper, lead, emery, and every good thing, after his majesty proceeded southward to Egypt, to his father Amon-Re, with joy of heart. 3

Now his majesty destroyed the town of Adata, with its grain. All its pleasant trees were cut down. Now his majesty found the entire land of Djahi, with its goods being an easy prey.

Now his majesty’s army was as drunk and anointed with oil every day as if at feasts in Egypt.

B. SIXTH CAMPAIGN

In his 30th year, Thut-mose moved against the focal center of opposition to Egypt, Kadesh on the Orontes. The word “destroy,” used with reference to this town, is not to be taken literally; Thut-mose may have done no more than destroy its food supplies. The record of the year is notable for the statement of the policy of holding the heirs of Syrian princes in Egypt. From the “Annals” in Karnak: Sethe, op. cit., 689-90. Translation by Breasted, op. cit., §§463-67.

Year 30. Now his majesty was in the country of Retenu on his majesty’s sixth victorious campaign. Arrival at the town of Kadesh. Destroying it. Felling its trees. Cutting down its grain. Proceeding by passing Reyet and reaching the town of Simyra. 7 Reaching the town of Adata. Doing the same to it.

List of the tribute (10) brought to the glory of his majesty by the princes of Retenu in this year. Now the children of the princes and their brothers were brought to be hostages in Egypt. Now, whoever of these princes died, his majesty was accustomed to make his son go to stand in his place. 9 List of the children of princes carried off in this year: 36 men; 181 male and female slaves; 188 horses: and 40 chariots, worked with gold equipment of all (kinds of) weapons of warfare. Then his majesty captured this town within a short hour, all its goods being an easy prey. "... Now every port town which his majesty reached was supplied with good bread and with various (kinds of) bread, with olive oil, incense, wine, honey, fruit, ... They were more abundant than anything, beyond the experience of his majesty’s army, without equivocation. (15) They are set down in the daybook of the palace—life, prosperity, health! That the list of them has not been put upon this monument is in order not to multiply words and in order to put their content in that place [in which] I made [them] 33 ... D. EIGHTH CAMPAIGN

In his 33rd year, Thut-mose achieved one of his most ambitious campaigns, crossing the bend of the Euphrates and fighting against “that enemy of the wretched Naharin.” It is not certain whether this opponent was the King of Naharin or was a lesser prince. We have four sources for the events of this campaign. On the campaign in general, see the discussion by R. Faulkner, in JEA, xxxii (1946), 39-42.

D-A THE ANNALS IN KARNAK

The references are as above: Sethe, op. cit., 696-703; Breasted, op. cit., §§476-87.

Year 33. Now his majesty was in the country of Retenu. Reach [ing the district of Qatna on the eighth victorious campaign. Crossing the Great Bend of Naharin by his majesty at the head of his army, to the] east of this water. 14 He set up beside the stela of his father, (20) the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Aa-kheper-ka-Re, another (stela). Now his majesty went north, plunder-

14 This would be the last day of Thut-mose III’s 33rd year. See n.16 on the first campaign above.
15 Reading and location uncertain. Ullaza was a north Phoenician coast town. The Egyptians located a garrison here; cf. against n.28 below. 16 "Being a go-and-take." 17 On the army daybook, cf. against n.39 of the first campaign.
18 Sethe’s restoration, used above, depends upon several other contexts. In a broken Karnak inscription (Sethe, op. cit., 188), there is reference to "... [the district of Qatna on the 8th victorious campaign.] Qatna lay northeast of modern Homs. Part of the restoration depends upon the Hymn of Victory (p. 374 below): "Thou hast crossed the waters of the Great Bend of Naharin," and on an inscription on the obelisk now in Istanbul (Sethe, op. cit., 587): "He who crossed the Great Bend of Naharin in valor and victory at the head of his army and made a great slaughter." The general sense of the restoration is probably correct. On Naharin, see A. H. Gardiner, Ancient Egyptian Onomastica, 1, 171* ff.
19 Thut-mose I (ca. 1525-1495 B.C.) Thut-mose III’s 33rd year should be about 1458 B.C.
20 In Egypt this word would mean both “go north” and “go downstream.” Since the Egyptians flows south, the direction is uncertain in the present context. See A. H. Gardiner, Ancient Egyptian Onomastica (London, 1947), 1, 160* ff.
ing towns and laying waste encampments of that enemy of the wretched Naharin....

[Then] he [pursued] after them an iter of sailing. Not one (of them) looked behind him, but was fleeing continually like a herd of desert beasts. [Now] there were galloping horses....

His majesty reached the town (23) of Ni, going south, when his majesty returned, after he had set up his stela in Naharin, (thus) extending the frontiers of Egypt.

D-B THE ARMANT STELA

See the reference, Mond and Myers, as the first text translated under the first campaign, p. 234 above.

He finished off 120 elephants in the country of Ni, on his return from Naharin. He crossed the river Great Bend, and he crushed the towns of its two sides, consumed by fire forever. He set up a stela of victory on its [west] side. . . .

D-C THE BARKAL STELA

For the reference, G. A. and M. B. Reisner, see under the first campaign, p. 238 above.

(6) . . . The many troops (of) Mitanni were overthrown in the completion of an hour, quite gone, as if they had never come into being—His southern frontier is to the horns of the earth, to the southern limit of this land; (his) northern to the marshes of Asia, to the supporting pillars of heaven. They come to him with bowed head, seeking his breath of life. He is a king, valiant like Montu; a taker, from whom no one can take, who crushes all rebellious countries.

There is none who can protect them in that land of Naharin, which its lord abandoned because of fear. I desolated his towns and his tribes and set fire to them. My majesty made them mounds, and their (re)settlement will never take place. I captured all their people, carried off as living prisoners, the (10) cattle thereof without limit, and their goods as well. I took away the trees. . . .

When my majesty crossed over to the marshes of Asia, I had many ships of cedar built on the mountains of God's Land near the Lady of Byblos. When my majesty crossed over to the marshes of Asia, I had many ships of cedar built on the mountains of God's Land near the Lady of Byblos.

When my majesty crossed over to the marshes of Asia, I had many ships of cedar built on the mountains of God's Land near the Lady of Byblos. They were placed on chariots, with cattle drawing (them). They journeyed in [front of] my majesty, in order to cross that great river which lies between this foreign country and Naharin. A king indeed to be boasted of in proportion to (the success of) his arms in the melee, he who crossed the Great Bend in pursuit of him who had attacked him, as the foremost of his army, seeking for that wretched enemy in the countries of Mitanni, when he was a fugitive before my majesty to another land, a distant place, because of fear.

Then my majesty set up on that mountain of Naharin my stela, which was dug out of the mountain on the west side (of) the Great Bend.

When I proceeded (15) south to Egypt, after I had put the sword (to) Naharin, great was the terror in the mouth of the Sand-Dwellers. Their doors were closed because of it; they would not come out into the open for fear of the Bull.....

Still another instance of the victory which Re decreed to me: he repeated for me a great (feat of) valor (at) the water hole of Ni, when he let me make droves of elephants and my majesty fought them in a herd of 120. Never was the like done since (the time of) the god by a king (of) them who took the White Crown. I have said this without boasting therein, and without equivocation therein....

*Every year there is hewed [for me in Dja]hi genuine cedar of Lebanon, which is brought to the Court—life, prosperity, health! Timber comes to Egypt for me, advancing (31) . . . New [wood] of Negau [V brought], the choicest of God's Land . . . . to reach the Residence City, without passing over the seasons thereof, each and every year. When my army which is the garrison in Ullaza comes, [they bring the tribute], which is the cedar of the victories of my majesty, through the plans of my father [Amon-Re], who entrusted to me all foreign countries. I have not given (any) of it to the Asiatics, (for) it is a wood which he loves....

D-D THE BIOGRAPHY OF AMEN-EM-HEB

Amen-em-heb was an Egyptian soldier of moderate military rank, who has left us a lively account of his deeds of valor in following Thut-mose III. His autobiography is painted on the walls of his tomb (No. 85) in Thebes. Although he gives us no chronology, it has been argued that his narrative "almost certainly deals with the events of this one campaign in chronological order, the only exception being the second assault on Kadesh, which is the last battle in which Amenemhab fought" (A. H. Gardiner, on the authority of R. Faulkner, in JEA, xxxi [1946], 39). The text appears in W. M. Miller, Egyptological Researches (Washington, 1906), 1, Pis. xxi-xxxix, and in Sethe, op.cit., 889-97; a translation in Breasted, op.cit., §§574-92. See also A. H. Gardner, Ancient Egyptian Onomastica (London, 1947), h 153* ff.

17 Perhaps ten and a half kilometers.
18 Or "going upstream," which would be north on the Euphrates; cf. n.16 above. Ni (or Niya) may be located south of Carchemish on the Euphrates, and the Amen-em-heb inscription (p. 241) makes the crossing possible in the Carchemish district.
19 On the elephant hunt in Ni, see the three texts which follow. The only other element of interest in the "Annals" of this year is in the tribute of an Asiatic country of which the name is lost: "4 birds of this country—now they [give] birth every day." This, as Sethe has pointed out (Die älteste Erwähnung des Haushuhns in einem ägyptischen Texte [Festschrift für F. K. Andreas, Leipzig, 1916; 109]), b the earliest record of the domestic bird.
20 "God's Land" was the east in general. The goddess of Byblos, whom the Egyptians equated with their Hat-Hor, stands here for the town.
21 Sic, both in word and determinative, although heavier carts must have been used.
I made captives in the country of (5) Negeb.²⁹ took three men, Asiatics, as living prisoners.

When his majesty reached Naharin, I took three men captive there, so that I might put them before thy majesty as living prisoners. Again I made captives within this campaign in the country, the Ridge of Wan, on the west of Aleppo. I took Asiatics as living prisoners: 13 men; 70 live asses; 13 bronze battle-axes; and . . . of bronze, worked with gold. Again I took booty within this campaign in the country of Carchemish. I took (10) . . . as living prisoners, and I crossed over the water of Naharin, while they were in my hand . . . ; I [placed] them before my lord. Then he rewarded me with a great reward; the list thereof: . . .

I saw the victory of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Men-kheper-Re, given life, in the country of Sendjer,³⁰ when he made [a great] slaughter [among] them. I made captives in the king’s presence; I took a hand there, and he gave me the Gold of Favor; the list thereof: . . ., and two rings of silver.

Again I saw how valiant he was, while I was in his retinue, when [he] captured the [city of] (15) Kadesh, without my swerving from the glare where he was. I took two men, maryanut,³¹ as [living prisoners and set them] before the king, the Lord of the Two Lands: Thut-mose-Ruler-of-Thebes, living forever. He gave me gold because of my valor, in the presence of everybody . . . ; the list thereof: a lion, two necklaces, two flies, and four rings of finished gold.³² . . .

(20) Again I saw his victory in the country of the wretched Takhshî,³³ in the town of Meriu . . . I took booty from it in the presence of the king; I took three men, Asiatics, as living prisoners. Then my lord gave to me the Gold of Favor; the list thereof: two necklaces, four rings, two flies, and one lion of gold; a female slave and a male slave.

Again [I saw] another successful deed which the Lord of the Two Lands accomplished in Ni. He hunted 120 elephants at their mud hole.³⁴ Then the biggest elephant which was among them began to fight before the face of his majesty. I was the one who cut off his hand³⁵ while he was (still) alive, (25) in the presence of his majesty, while I was standing in the water between two rocks. Then my lord rewarded me with gold: . . ., and five pieces of clothing.

Then, when the Prince of Kadesh sent out a mare, which [was swift] on her feet and which entered among them, I ran after her on foot, carrying my dagger, and I (ripped) open her belly. I cut off her tail and set it before the king. Praise was given to god for it. He gave joy, and it filled my belly, jubilation, and it imbued my body. (30) His majesty sent forth every valiant man of his army, to breach the new wall which Kadesh had made. I was the one who breached it, being the first of every valiant man, and no other did (it) before me. When I came out, I brought two men, maryanut, as living prisoners. Then my lord again rewarded me for it, with every good thing of heart’s satisfaction.

Now really, I made these captures while I was a soldier of [User-het-A]mon.³⁶ . . .

E. NINTH CAMPAIGN

The success of Thut-mose’s first eight campaigns seems to be reflected in the dull, statistical character of the records of the final campaigns. They consist chiefly of lists of “tribute” from dependent or friendly countries. The 9th campaign, in the 34th year, contains a slightly different statement about pharaoh’s concern for the harbors of Phoenicia. The references are to the “Annals” in Karnak: Sethe, op. cit., 729-34, with antecedent bibliography on 724; Breasted, op. cit., §§528-40.

Now every port town of his majesty was supplied with every good thing which [his] majesty received [in the country of Dja]hi, with Keftiu, Byblos, and Sektu ships of cedar,³⁷ loaded with columns and beams, as well as (37) large timbers for the [major wood]working of his majesty.

F. FINAL CAMPAIGN

In his 42nd year, Thut-mose conducted his 16th or 17th campaign, the last listed. Apparently he met somewhat more resistance than in other late campaigns. The references are to the “Annals” in Karnak; Sethe, op. cit., 729-34, with antecedent bibliography on 724; Breasted, op. cit., §§528-40.

. . . the Fenkhu.⁴⁰ Now his majesty was on the coast road, in order to destroy the town of Iqarta,⁴¹ together with those towns which (n) [were in its district], . . .

Arrival at Tunip. Destruction of the town. Cutting down its grain and felling its trees

Coming (back) successfully. Arrival at the region of Kadesh. Capturing three towns therein.⁴² . . .

[Now his majesty captured the foreigners] of the wretched Naharin, who were auxiliaries among them, together with their horses: 691 individuals; 29 hands; 48 horses . . .

(20) . . . Now his majesty commanded that the victories which he had accomplished from the year 23 to the year 42 should be set down at the time when this monument was established in this chapel, in order that he might achieve “given-life-forever.”

The sacred barge of Amon at Thebes. The implication seems to be that Amen-em-heb was only an official of relatively low rank. The text goes on to record the death of Thut-mose III and Amen-em-heb’s elevation to the rank of “Lieutenant of the Army” under Amen-hotep II.

Keftiu was Crete—or the eastern Mediterranean coast generally—and Byblos was the Phoenician town. For the identification of the Sektu ships with Ugaritic and Hebrew (Isaiah, 2:16) words for ships, see the references given by W. F. Albright in JNES, xxxi (1953), 261. The names of the three vessels indicate the commercial carriers of the time within the eastern Mediterranean. For tentative adjustments in dates see p. xviii.

²⁹ “Phoenicians.”

Modern ‘Arqah, northeast of Tripoli.

These words do not actually claim the capture of Kadesh itself, although that may have been one of the three towns.

²⁷ Apparently the same as the modern Negeb, south of Palestine.

²⁷ Sic, but read “his.”

²⁷ Perhaps modern Sheidar, northwest of Hama.

²⁷ Decorations of gold in various forms. Flies and lions’ heads of gold have been found in Egyptian excavation.

²⁷ “Takhshî lay near Damascus. Meriu . . . is unknown”

²⁷ Their “slime-place”? Less likely: “because of their ivory.”

²⁷ Sic, for “trunk.” See P. E. Newberry, in JEA, xxx (1944), 75.

²⁷ To stampede the stallions of the Egyptian chariotry.
Lists of Asiatic Countries Under the Egyptian Empire

The conqueror Thut-mose III initiated the custom of listing the Asiatic and African countries which he had conquered or over which he claimed dominion. In the Temple of Amon at Karnak three of his lists bear superscriptions. The texts are published in K. Sethe, Urkunden der 18. Dynastie (Urkiv, Leipzig, 1907), 780-81, with translations in Breasted, AR, 11, §402.

(a) Roster of the countries of Upper Retenu which his majesty shut up in the town of the wretched Megiddo, whose children his majesty carried off as living prisoners to the town...in Karnak, on his first victorious campaign, according to the command of his father Amon, who led him to the good ways.

(b) All the mysterious lands of the marshes of Asia which his majesty carried off as living prisoners, while he made a great slaughter among them, (lands) which had not been trodden by other kings except for his majesty. The reputation of a valiant man is from [what he has done], not being destroyed in this land [forever].

(c) Roster of the countries of Upper Retenu which his majesty shut up in the town of the wretched Megiddo, whose children his majesty carried off as living prisoners to the town of Thebes, to fill the workhouse of his father Amon in Karnak, on his first victorious campaign, according to the command of his father Amon, who led him to the good ways.

Subsequent kings followed Thut-mose III in compiling such lists. The result is only a partial historical gain. Identifications are often difficult or impossible, and some of the later lists are suspect as having a strong fictional coloring. Selections from these lists are given below, with attempted identifications. It will be understood that the name is not always the biblical site; it may be a Kadesh, a Hamath, or a Geba. Those names which are checked with numbers derive from the longer lists and—with the exception of Ramses III—may more truly represent historical achievement than those names which occur in briefer lists of strong propagandist force (here checked with x).

The names are taken from J. Simons, Handbook for the Study of Egyptian Topographical Lists Relating to Western Asia (Leiden, 1937), in which antecedent bibliography is given. The numbers used below are those of Simons' lists. Important for the identification of place names are M. Burchardt, Die altländischen Fremdworte und Eigennamen im ägyptischen (Leipzig, 1909), and W. F. Albright, The Vocalization of the Egyptian Syllabic Orthography (New Haven, 1934).}
A Trip to the Lebanon for Cedar

An official of Thut-mose III has left us an inscription—unfortunately badly damaged—on a commission which he undertook to secure cedar from the Lebanon. The inscription appears in the tomb of the Chief Treasurer Sen-nefer (No. 99 at Thebes). The text appears in K. Sethe, Urkunden der 18. Dynastie (Urkunden der 18. Dynastie (Ur iv, Leipzig, 1906), in, 531-36, and was studied by Sethe, Eine

On the historical value of the names Yaa and Qedem, A. H. Gardiner, Notes on the Story of Sinuhe (Paris, 1916), 155, points out that in this one list the two names "occur beside one another, obviously reminiscences of the story of Sinuhe and without further historical value." cf. p. 19 above.

... above the clouds. I entered the forest-[preserve]. . . [I caused] that there be presented to her offerings of millions of things on behalf of {the life, prosperity, and health of thy majesty}. . . . (10) in Byblos, that I might give them to her lord for her [heart's] satisfaction. . . . gave . . . of the choicest thereof. I brought away (timbers of) 60 cubits in [their] length. . . . They were sharper than the beard of grain, the middle thereof as thic[ . . . I [brought] them [down] from the highland of God's Land. They reached as far as the forest-preserve. . . [I sailed on the] Great [Green] Sea with a favorable breeze, land[ing in Egypt] . . .

Pharaoh as a Sportsman

The following texts have place in the record of the Egyptian Empire because they present to us the invincible being who conquered and held foreign countries. As a god-king, he was placed beyond any mortals of his day. Yet he led his armies into battle and arrows were aimed at him. He had to present himself and he had to be presented by the dogma of the state as unsurpassed and unsurpassable in physical prowess. In addition to the accumulating legend of his triumphs in battle, a legend was fostered of his invincibility in competitive sport.

a

The first document deals with Thut-mose III (about 1490-1436 B.C.) and is extracted from his Armant Stela, for which the bibliography was given on p. 234 above.

(4) He shot at an ingot of copper, every shaft being split like a reed. Then his majesty put a sample there in the House of Amon, being a target of worked copper of three fingers in thickness, with his arrow therein. When it had passed through it, he made three palms come out at the back of it, in order to grant the request of those who followed: the success of his arms in valor and victory. I speak to the water of what he did, without lying and without equivocation therein, in the face of his entire army, without a phrase of boasting therein. If he spent a moment of recreation by hunting in any foreign country, the number of that which he carried off is greater than the bag of the entire army. He killed seven lions by shooting in the completion of a moment. He carried off a herd of twelve wild cattle within an hour, when breakfast time had taken place, . . .
the tail thereof for his back.\footnote{1} ... He carried off a rhinoceros by shooting, in the southern country (9) of Nubia,\footnote{2} after he proceeded to Miu\footnote{3} to seek him who had been rebellious to him in that country. He set up his stela there, like that which he had made at the ends [of the earth].\footnote{4}...

The pharaoh who has left us the most numerous records of his physical prowess was Amen-hotep II (about 1447-1421 B.C.).\footnote{5} A stela recently discovered near the Sphinx at Gizeh gives the most telling record of his triumphs at sport. It was published by Selim Hassan in \textit{ASAE, xxxvi} (1937), 129-34, \footnote{6} and by A. Varille in \textit{BIFAO}, XLII (1942), 31-38, PL 1. It was translated by G. Steindorff and K. C. Seele, \textit{When Egypt Ruled the East} (Chicago, 1942), 68-70. The conventional praise of the pharaoh in the first ten and a half lines is here omitted.

Now, further, his majesty appeared as king as a goodly youth.\footnote{7} When he had matured\footnote{8} and completed eighteen years on his thighs in valor, (12) he was one who knew every task of Montu:\footnote{9} there was no one like him on the field of battle. He was one who knew horses: there was not his like in this numerous army. There was not one therein who could draw his bow.\footnote{10} He could not be approached in running.

Strong of arms, one who did not weary when he took the oar, he rowed at the stern of his falcon-boat as the strode for two hundred men.\footnote{11} When there was a pause, after they had attained half an iter's course,\footnote{12} they were weak, their bodies were limp, they could not draw a breath, whereas his majesty was (still) strong under his oar of twenty cubits in its length.\footnote{13} He left off and moored his falcon-boat (only after) he had attained three iters in rowing,\footnote{14} without letting down (15) in pulling. Faces were bright at the sight of him, when he did this.

He drew three hundred stiff bows in comparing the work of the craftsmen of them, in order to distinguish the ignorant from the wise. When he had just come from doing this which I have called to your attention, he entered into his northern garden and found that there had been set up for him four targets of Asiatic copper of one palm in their thickness,\footnote{15} with twenty cubits\footnote{16} between one post and its fellow. Then his majesty appeared in a chariot like Montu in his power. He grasped his bow and gripped four arrows at the same time. So he rode northward, shooting at them like Montu in his regalia. His arrows had come out on the back thereof while he was attacking another post. It was really a deed which had never been done nor heard of by report: shooting at a target of copper an arrow which came out of it and dropped to the ground—except for the king, rich in glory, whom [Amon] made strong, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Aa-khepru-Re, heroically like Montu.

Now when he was (still) a lad,\footnote{17} he loved his horses and rejoiced in them. It was a strengthening of the heart to work them, to learn their natures, to be skilled in training them, and to enter into their ways. When (it) was heard (20) in the palace by his father, the Horus: Mighty Bull, Appearing in Thebes,\footnote{18} the heart of his majesty was glad when he heard it, rejoicing at what was said about his eldest son, while he said in his heart: "He it is who will act as Lord for the entire land, without being attacked, while the heart moves in valor, rejoicing in strength, though he is (only) a goodly, beloved youth. He is not yet sagacious; he is not (yet) at the time of doing the work of Montu. He is (still) unconcerned with carnal desire,\footnote{19} (but) he loves strength. It is a god who puts (it) into his heart to act so that Egypt may be protected for him and so that the land defers to him.\footnote{20} Then his majesty said to those who were at his side: "Let there be given to him the very best horses in my majesty's stable which is in Memphis, and tell him: Take care of them, instil fear into them, make them gallop, and handle them if there be resistance to thee."

Now after it had been entrusted to the King's Son to take care of horses of the king's stable, well then, he did that which had been entrusted to him. Rashap and Astarte\footnote{21} were rejoicing in him for doing all that his heart desired.

He trained horses without their equal: they would not grow tired when he took the reins, nor would they sweat (even) at a high gallop. He would harness with the bit in Memphis and stop at the rest-house of (25) Harmakhis,\footnote{22} (so that) he might spend a moment there, going around and around it and seeing the charm of this rest-house of Khufu and Khaf-Re, the triumphant. His heart desired to perpetuate their names, (but) he still put it into his heart—so he said—until that which

\begin{itemize}
\item [1] The pharaoh wore a bull's tail in ceremonial appearance. There follows the account of the elephant hunt, translated on p. 240 above.
\item [2] Also depicted at the temple of Armant (Mond and Myers, op.cit., Pis. ix, xcli; translation by Drower, pp. 159-60) is a rhinoceros, which may be this same beast, although the dating of the scene is uncertain. The depiction of the animal is accompanied by its dimensions.
\item [3] A Sudanese place name which occurs elsewhere, but which cannot be located.
\item [4] That is, the stela at the Euphrates, p. 239 above. There follows the text about the Battle of Megiddo, p. 234 above.
\item [5] Drower, in Mond and Myers, op.cit., 184, n. e, gives a bibliography of the texts on the pharaoh as a sportsman. They are also treated by B. Van der Walle, \textit{Let roi sportifs de Vancienne Egypte}, in \textit{Chronique d'Egypte}, No. 26 (1938), 234-57. New material to be added to these is in the Memphis Stela of Amen-hotep II, p. 246 below.
\item [6] For an uncertain number of years he was coregent with his father, Thut-mose III.
\item [7] "When he had counted his body," in the sense of developing to maturity.
\item [8] The god of war.
\item [9] The same claim in his Amada inscription, p. 247 below. Breasted, AR, n. p. 310, n. d, calls attention to the legend in Herodotus (i11, 21) that Cambyses could not draw the bow of the king of Ethiopia.
\item [10] The "falcon-boat" was the king's official barge. The word translated "sloop" may come from a root, "to destine, to determine."
\item [11] Probably about a kilometer, five-eighths of a mile.
\item [12] Probably about 18 feet.
\item [13] The word means "puppy," but in no derogatory sense.
\item [14] Thut-mose III.
\item [15] "Thirst of the body."
\item [16] The old warrior king apparently feels that his son's athletic preparation for kingship is god-given.
\item [17] Two Asiatic deities. See pp. 249-50 below.
\item [18] The Sphinx at Gizeh, dominated by the pyramids of Khufu (Cheops) and Khaf-Re (Chephren).
his father Re had decreed to him should have come to pass.

After this, when his majesty was made to appear as king, the uraeus-serpent took her place upon his brow, the image of Re was established at its post, and the land was as in its first state, at peace under their lord, Aa-khepru-Re. He ruled the Two Lands, and every foreign country was bound under his soles. Then his majesty remembered the place where he had enjoyed himself in the vicinity of the pyramids and of Harmakhis, and One ordered that it be caused that a resthouse be made there, in which was set up a stela of limestone, the face of which was engraved with the Great Name of Aa-khepru-Re, beloved of Harmakhis, given life forever.

The Asiatic Campaigning of Amen-hotep II

Amen-hotep II (about 1447-1421 B.C.) gloried in his reputation for personal strength and prowess. His records therefore contrast with those of his predecessor and father, Thut-mose III, in emphasizing individual achievement, cf. the translations immediately preceding.

A. THE MEMPHIS AND KARNAK STELAE

There are two sources, in partial duplicate, for Amen-hotep's first and second campaigns into Asia. The more extensive text was recently discovered at Memphis, having been reused by a prince of the Twenty-second Dynasty as the ceiling of his burial chamber about 875 B.C. It was published by A. M. Badawi, Die neue historische Stele Amenophis II, in ASAE, XLII (1943), 1-23, Pl. 1. The more damaged source is a stela standing at the south of the Eighth Pylon at Karnak. It was translated, with notes on antecedent bibliography, by Breasted, AR, 11, §§91-90. Both stelae were hacked up under the Amarna Revolution and restored in the Nineteenth Dynasty—badly restored, in the case of the Karnak stela. Both stelae were collated in 1946, the Memphis stela being mounted in the Cairo Museum under exhibition No. 6301. The line numbers below follow the Memphis stela 'A' study of both stelas by E. Edel, ZDPV, LXIX (1953), 97-196.

Year 7,1st month of the third season, day 25, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty Bull, Sharp of Horns; the Two Goddesses: Rich in Dred, Made to Appear in Thebes; Horus of Gold: Carrying Off and Gaining Power over All Lands; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Aa-khepru-Re; the Son of Re, Lord of Diadems, Lord of the Strong Arm: Amen-hotep-the God-Ruler-of-Heliopolis, given life forever; the good god, likeness of Re, son of Amon upon His throne, for He built him as strong and powerful in distinction to that which had been. His majesty has trod Naharin, which his bow has crushed, being devastated, carrying off by victory and power, like Montu adorned with his equipment. His heart is at rest when he sees them, (for) he has cut off the heads of the attackers.

His majesty proceeded to Retenu on his first victorious campaign to extend his frontiers, made from the property of them who are not loyal to him, his face terrible like (that of) Bastet, like Seth in his moment of raging. His majesty reached Shamash-Edom. He hacked it up in a short moment, like a lion fierce of face, when he treads the foreign countries. (His) majesty was in his chariot, of which the name was: 'Amon, the valiant . . . ' List of the booty of his arm: living Asiatics: 35; catde: 22J

His majesty crossed the Orontes (5) on dangerous waters, like Rashap. Then he turned about to watch his rear, and he saw a few Asiatics coming furtively, adorned with weapons of warfare, to attack the king's army. His majesty burst after them like the flight of a divine falcon. The confidence of their hearts was slackened, and one after another fell upon his fellow, up to their commander. Not a single one was with his majesty, except for himself with his valiant arm. His majesty killed them by shooting. He returned thence, his heart glad like Montu the valiant, when he had triumphed. List of what his majesty captured within this day: two princes and six maryanu, in addition to . . .

1 God of war. The slaughtering cat-goddess.
2 The Karnak variant, abusively restored (ASAE, iv [1903], 126-32): 'the town of Shamash-Edom.' This town occurs also in the geographical lists of Thut-mose III (p. 243 above), in an association which seems to place it in Palestine.
3 Karnak variant: 'His majesty achieved a happy feat there, (for) his majesty himself took booty. Now he was like a fierce lion, smiting the foreign countries [of Ret-enu].'
4 An argument with regard to this apparently corrupted passage and the consequent name of the pharaoh's horses and chariot was undertaken by E. Drioton in ASAE, XLIX (1949), 57 and B. Grdseloff in ibid., XLV (1952), 107-15. Our translation agrees in part with Grdseloff's rendering.
5 Karnak variant: 'list of the booty of his majesty on this day: 26 (perhaps 18) living Asiatics; 19 cattle.'
6 Karnak variant: '1st month of the third season, day 26. His majesty crossed the ford of the Yercent on this day, (when) he caused to cross . . . the day is the date following the date given at the beginning of the Memphis stela. The writing Yercent for Yercent, "Orontes," is probably a product of ignorant restoration under the 19th dynasty.
7 On the Asiatic god Rashap, see p. 250 below. The Karnak variant: . . . being dangerous, like the strength of Montu, the Theban." Drioton, op.cit., 9-12, tentatively renders our "dangerous" above as "shaking with fury"; Grdseloff, op.cit., 115-20, emends the same to "at a gallop."
8 Karnak variant: 'his majesty turned about to see the ends of the earth. Then his majesty saw a few Asiatics coming in chariots."
9 For once, the Karnak variant is preferable, since it adorns the pharaoh: "Now his majesty was adorned with 116 weapons of warfare, and his majesty became terrible in proportion to the hidden strength of Seth in his hour."
10 Karnak variant: 'They quailed when (they) saw his majesty alone had given to him the earth, when he had triumphed.'
11 Karnak variant: 'They qualified when (they) saw his majesty alone among them. Then his majesty felled their commander himself with his battle-axe." Karnak variant follows this with a text garbled by the restoration under the 19th dynasty.
12 Karnak variant: 'Now he carried off this Asiatic at the side [of his chariot, and also captured] his team, his chariot, and all his weapons of warfare."
13 Karnak variant: 'His majesty returned in joy of heart (like) his father Amon, who had given to him the earth, when he had triumphed.'
14 The torn maryanu (related to the Vedic mrdya "male, noble") was used for Asiatic warriors in this period, cf. p. 22, n.i. Karnak variant: 'list of what his majesty captured on this day: . . . , the 2 horses, 1 chariot, a coat of mail, 2 bows, a quiver filled with arrows, . . . and an inlaid axe.'
their chariots, their teams, and all their weapons of warfare. His majesty, going south, reached Nī.\(^\text{18}\) Its prince and all his people, male as well as female, were at peace with his majesty, (for) their faces had received a be-dazzlement.\(^\text{His majesty reached Ikat.}\(^\text{18}\) He surrounded everyone rebellious to him and killed them, like those who have never existed, put on (their) side, upside down. He returned thence in joy of heart, with this entire country in bondage to him.

Rest in the tent of his majesty\(^\text{19}\) in the neighborhood of Tjerekh on the east of Sheshrem. The settlements of Mendjet\(^\text{20}\) were plundered. His majesty reached Hetjira.\(^\text{21}\) Its prince came out in peace to his majesty, (10) bringing his children and all his goods. Submission was made to his majesty by Unqi.\(^\text{21}\) His majesty reached Kadesh. Its prince came out in peace to his majesty. They were made to take the oath of fealty, and all their children as (well). Thereupon his majesty shot at two targets of copper in hammered woryî, in their presence, on the south side of this town.\(^\text{22}\) “Excursions were made in Rebi\(^\text{23}\) in the forest, and there were brought back gazelles, maset, hares, and wild\(^\text{23}\)\) weasses without their limit.

His majesty proceeded by chariot to Khashabu,\(^\text{24}\) alone, without having a companion. He returned thence in a short moment, and he brought back 16 living maryanu on the two sides of his chariot, 20 hands at the forefront of his horses, and 60 cattle being driven before him. Submission was made to his majesty by this town.

While his majesty was going south in the midst of the Plain of Sharon \(^\text{25}\) he met a messenger of the Prince of Naharin, carrying a letter of clay at his throat.\(^\text{26}\) He took him as a living prisoner at the side of his chariot. His majesty went forth in chariot by a track\(^\text{27}\) to Egypt, (15) with the marya\(^\text{28}\) as a living prisoner in the chariot alone with him.

His majesty reached Memphis, his heart joyful, the Mighty Bull. List of this booty:\(^\text{29}\) marya\(_n\): 550; their wives: 240; Canaanites: 640; princes’ children: 232; princes’ children, female: 323; favorites\(^\text{30}\) of the princes of every foreign country: 270 women, in addition to their paraphernalia for entertaining the heart, of silver and gold, (at) their shoulders; total: 2,214;\(_\text{41}\) horses: 820; chariots: 730, in addition to all their weapons of warfare. Now the God’s Wife, King’s Wife, and King’s [Daughter] beheld the victory of his majesty.\(^\text{32}\)

Year 9, 3rd month of the first season, day 25.\(_\text{33}\) His majesty proceeded to Retenu on his second victorious campaign, against the town of Apheq.\(_\text{34}\) It came out in surrender to the great victory of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health! His majesty went forth by chariot, adorned with weapons of warfare, against the town of Yehem.\(_\text{35}\) Now his majesty captured the settlements of Mepesen, together with the settlements of Khettjen, two towns on the west of Socho.\(_\text{36}\) Now the Ruler was raging like a divine falcon, his horses flying like a star of heaven. His majesty entered, and (20) its princes, its children, and its women were carried off as living prisoners, and all its retainers similarly, all its goods, without their limit, its cattle, its horses, and all the small cattle (which) were before him.

Thereupon his majesty rested. The majesty of this august god, Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, came before his majesty in a dream, to give valor to his son, Aa-khepru-Re. His father Amon-Re was the magical protection of his person, guarding the Ruler.

---

\(^{18}\) An unknown em siby\(_{n}\), with a determinative which looks like two plants. The tentative translation assumes that it is Hebrew shewb “path”—perhaps “two tracks,” not a road, but two traces of chariot wheels across the wilderness—and that the determinative is borrowed from the root which appears in Egyptian shu-bu: “ear (of grain).”

\(^{19}\) This seems to be the only occurrence of the singular marya, for what normally appears in a plural or collective, marya\(_{n}\), n.15 above. Of course, the writing here may be defective.

\(^{20}\) The Karnak variant has a date: “. . . [of the third] season, day 27,” followed by a broken and uncertain context, which seems to apply to the temple of Pha' in Memphis: “His majesty came forth from the House . . . of the Beautiful of Face.” Then, “[his majesty] proceeded [to] Memphis, bearing the booty which he had carried off from the country of Retenu. List of the booty: living marya\(_n\): 550; their wives: 240; [. . . of fine gold: 6,800 deben, copper: 500,000 deben; . . . total: 2 hands, horses: 210; and chariots: 300.” Thus, the Memphite text’s ln\(_{n}\), which can only be understood as Kms\(_{n}\) “Canaanite,” has been turned by the Karnak text into some object related to gold—perhaps “ron/ah ‘baggage, pack,’ of Jer. 10:17. The gold would amount to about 1,700 lb. Troy, the copper to 125,000 lb. Troy.

\(^{21}\) Or “(woman) singers,” particularly in view of their entertainment paraphernalia. However, 270 women minstrels seems a very high number, and the translation assumes that these were simply harem women, who would also have entertainment paraphernalia.

\(^{22}\) Of several Apheqs, the one at Ras el-Ain in Palestine seems to fit the apparent itinerary best.

\(^{23}\) Probably the queen Ti-'aa or the queen Hat-shepsut II. Karnak variant: “His majesty . . . ed the tribe of Khettjen . . . Now the prince . . . .” On Yehem see p. 235, n.18 above. Of course, the writing here may be defective.

\(^{24}\) Emphasizing the pharaoh’s skill at sport (pp. 243-45 above), in order to impress the locals.

\(^{25}\) Territory between the Euphrates and the sea. Thus the Kadesh which follows was Kadesh on the Orontes.

\(^{26}\) Emphasizing the pharaoh’s skill at sport (pp. 243-45 above), in order to impress the locals.

\(^{27}\) Egyptian kh-ab-h, cuneiform Khashabu, temptingly identified by Badawi with Hasheya, west of Mt. Hermon.

\(^{28}\) The stela is broken at this point, but pu im, w su\(_{n}\)-nu-im is probably visible, to be completed to “the Emeg of Sharon.”

\(^{29}\) Although the text shows šar\(_{n}\), there can be little doubt that it is to be corrected to šar sin “a letter of clay.” “At his throat” would mean “hanging around his neck,” probably in a pouch.
His majesty went forth by chariot at dawn, against the town of Iteren, as well as Migdol-yi." Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—prevailed like the prevailing of Sekhmet, like Montu over Thebes. He carried off their princes: 34; meruit 57; living Asiatics: 231; hands: 372; horses: 54; chariots: 54; in addition to all the weapons of warfare, every able-bodied man of Retenu, their children, their wives, and all their property. After his majesty saw the very abundant plunder, they were made into living prisoners, and two ditches were made around all of them. Behold, they were filled with fire, and his majesty kept watch over it until daybreak, while his (25) battle-axe was in his right hand, alone, without a single one with him, while the army was far from him, far from hearing the cry of Pharaoh. Now after daybreak of a second day, his majesty went forth by chariot at dawn, adorned with the equipment of Montu. The day of the Feast of the Royal Coronation was far from him, while his (25) battle-axe was in his right hand, adorned with the equipment of his majesty:

His majesty reached Huai. The Prince of Geba-Shumen, whose name was Qaqa, was brought, his wife, his children, and all his retainers as well. Another prince was appointed in his place. His majesty reached the town of Memphis, his heart appeared over all countries, with all lands beneath his soles. List of the plunder which his majesty carried off: princes of Retenu: 127; brothers of princes: (30) 179; Apiru: 3,600; living Shasu: 15,200; Khara: 36,300; living Neges: 15,070; the adherents thereof: 50,652; total: 89,600 men; similarly their goods, without their limit; all small cattle belonging to them; all (kinds of) cattle, without their limit; chariots of silver and gold: 60; painted chariots of wood: 1,032; in addition to all their weapons of warfare, being 13,050, through the strength of his august father, his beloved, who is thy magical protection, Amon, who decreed to him valor. Now when the Prince of Naharin, the Prince of Hatti, and the Prince of Shanhar heard of the great victory which I had made, each one vied with his fellow in making offering, while they said in their hearts to the father of their fathers, in order to beg peace from his majesty, seeking that there be given to them the breath of life: "We are under thy sway, for thy palace, O Son of Re: Amen-hotep-the-God-Ruler-of-Heliopolis, ruler of rulers, raging like ... this land forever!"

B. THE AMADA AND ELEPHANTINE STELAE

A different treatment of Amen-hotep II's achievements emphasizes the nature of his triumphs in Egypt after his return from Asiatic campaigning. This is also on two monuments, both published in Ch. Kuentz, Deux stèles d'Amenophis II (Bibliothèque d'Etude, x, Cairo, 1923). The stela in the Temple of Amada in Nubia was published by H. Gauthier, Le temple d'Amada (Les temples immerges de la Nubie, xm, Cairo, 1913-1926), 19 ff., Pl. x. The stela from Elephantine is now divided between Cairo (No. 34010: P. Lacau, Steles du nouvel empire [Catalogue general. . . du Musee du Caire, Cairo, 1909], 38-40, Pl. xi) and Vienna (W. Wreszinski, Aegyptische Inschriften aus dem K. K. Hofmuseum in Wien [Leipzig, 1906], No. 141). Translation in Braedt, AR, 11, §§791-97. The fine numbers below follow the Amada Stela.

Year 3,3rd month of the third season, day 15, under the majesty of . . . Amen-hotep-the-God-Ruler-of-Heliopolis. He is a king very weighty of arm: there is none who can draw his bow in his army, among the rulers of foreign countries, or the princes of Retenu, because his strength is so much greater than (that of) any (other) king who has existed. Raging like a panther when he treads the field of battle; there is none who can fight in his vicinity. . . . Prevailing instantly over every foreign country, whether people or horses (though) they have come in millions of men, (for) they knew not that Amon-Re (5) was loyal to him. . . . (15) . . . Then his majesty caused that this stela be made and set up in this temple at the place of the Station of the Lord, 35 engraved with the Great Name of the Lord of the Two Lands, the Son of Re: Amen-hotep-the-God-Ruler-of-Heliopolis, in the house of his fathers, the gods, after his majesty had returned from Upper Retenu, when he had overthrown all his foes, extending the frontiers of Egypt on the first victorious campaign. 36

His majesty returned in joy of heart to his father Amon, when he had slain with his own mace the seven princes who had been in the district of Takhshi, 37 when he had slain with his own mace the seven falcon-boat, of which the name is "Aa-khepru-Re, the Establisher of the Two Lands." Then six men of these enemies were hanged on the face of the wall of Thebes, and the hands as well. 38 Then the other foe was taken upstream to the land of Nubia and hanged to the wall of Napata, 39 to show his majesty's victories forever and ever in all lands and all countries of the Negro land; inasmuch as he had carried off the southerners and bowed down the northerners, the (very) ends of the entire earth upon which Re shines, (so that) he might set his frontier where he wishes without being opposed, according to the decree of his father Re....

A Syrian Captive Colony in Thebes

Little is known of the activities of Thut-mose IV (about 1421-1413 B.C.) in Asia. The energies of Thut-mose III and of Amenhotep II may have left him little need for military prowess. Some of the Asiatic regions which he claimed to have conquered will be found in the lists on pp. 242-43 above. He continued his predecessors' practice of introducing foreign captives into the Egyptian temple estates, as is evidenced by a brief text on a stela found in his mortuary temple in western Egypt: Men-kheper-Re, given life, from all foreign countries, to fill the workshop and to be serfs of the Lord, Mayor and Vizier, Rekh-mi-Re, who receives the tribute of all foreign countries... 40

The settlement of the Fortification of Men-kheper-Re 1 with the Syrians 2 [of] his majesty's capturing in the town of Gzi'er. 3

Scenes of Asiatic Commerce in Theban Tombs

The Egyptian Empire brought an abundance of Asiatic goods into Egypt. The formal Egyptian records called all of this "tribute," whether it was enforced dues, the product of commerce, or came as princely gifts. Scenes in the Theban tombs often show subservient Asiaties humbly offering their produce and begging mercy from the pharaoh.

a

The first instance is from the Theban tomb (No. 109) of Rekh-mi-Re, vizier under Thut-mose III (about 1490-1436 B.C.). In two registers Asiaties are depicted bringing their characteristic goods to the vizier. It is definitively published by N. de G. Davies, The Tomb of Rekh-mi-Re at Thebes (Publications of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Egyptian Expedition, xi, New York, 1943), i, 27-30, ii, Pls. xxi-xxii. Details of the scenes are shown in color by Davies, Paintings from the Tomb of Rekh-mi-Re at Thebes (Publications of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Egyptian Expedition, x, New York, 1935), Pls. ix-xi. The text is also in K. Sethe, Urundend der 18. Dynastie (Urk., iv, Leipzig, 1909), iv, 1101-03.

Coming in peace by the princes of Retenu and all northern countries of the ends of Asia, bowing down in humility, with their tribute upon their backs, seeking that there be given them the breath of life and desiring to be subject to his majesty, for they have seen his very great victories and the terror of him has mastered their hearts. Now it is the Hereditary Prince, Count, Father and Beloved of the God, great trusted man of the Lord of the Two Lands, Mayor and Vizier, Rekh-mi-Re, who receives the tribute of all foreign countries...

Presenting the children of the princes of the southern countries, along with the children of the princes of the northern countries, who were brought as the best of the booty of his majesty, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Men-kheper-Re, given life, from all foreign countries, to fill the workshop and to be serfs of the divine offerings of his father Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, according as there have been given to him all foreign countries together in his grasp, with their princes prostrated under his sandals...

b

Men-kheper-Re-seneb was High Priest of Amon under Thut-mose III. The scenes and texts in his Theban tomb (No. 86) give us a suggestion of the importance of the riches of Asia to the temple of the imperial god Amon. See N. and N. de G. Davies, The Tombs of Men-kheperrasenb, Amenmose, and Another (Theban Tomb Series, v, London, 1939), Pls. iv, vn. Texts in K. Sethe, op. cit., 299-30. Details in color in N. M. Davies and A. H. Gardiner, Ancient Egyptian Paintings (Chicago, 1936), 1, Pls. xxii-xiv.

In the scenes, an individual labeled "the Prince of Keftiu" 4 prostrates himself, "the Prince of Hatti" kneels in adoration, "the Prince of Tunip" 5 presents his infant son, and "the Prince of Kadesh" offers an elaborate vessel. A procession of Asiatics voices their submission in a broken text, of which the final words are legible: "The fear of thee is in all lands. Thou hast annihilated the lands of Mitanni; thou hast laid waste their towns, and their princes are in caves." The general legend for this scene runs:

for the compound of his mortuary temple, including the temple storehouses, workshops, and quarters for the temple serfs.

1. Egyptian Khuru, or Horites.
2. Qedjet . . . probably to be completed Qedjer, Gezer; less likely, to Qedjet, Gaza, which was more often written Qejet in Egyptian.
3. Crete and the Aegean world, probably including the Aegeanized coasts.
Giving praise to the Lord of the Two Lands, kissing the ground to the good god by the princes of every land, as they exalt the victories of his majesty, with their tribute upon their backs, consisting of every substance of God's Land: silver, gold, lapis lazuli, turquoise, and every august costly stone, seeking that there be given them the breath of life.

Two generations later, under Thut-mose IV (about 1421-1413 B.C.), the form of expression remains the same, as in the Theban tomb (No. 74) of Tjanein, an officer of the Egyptian army. The texts were published by Sethe, op. cit., 1007; full publication of the tomb by J. V. Scheil, Le tombeau de Djanni (Mission archéologique française au Caire. Mémoires, v, Paris, 1894).

Presenting the tribute of Retenu and the produce of the northern countries: silver, gold, turquoise, and all cosdy stones of God's Land, by the princes of all foreign countries, when they come to make supplication for the good god and to beg breath for their nostrils, and by the real Scribe of the King, his beloved, the Commander of the Army, and Scribe of Recruits, Tjanein.

The Amarna Revolution drastically altered the direction of empire, but the modes of expression remained much the same—as, for example, in the Memphite tomb of Hor-em-heb, pp. 250-251 below. Huy, the Viceroy of Nubia under Tut-ankh-Amon (about 1361-1352 B.C.), continues the earlier scenes and texts in his Theban tomb (No. 40). The publication is N. de G. Davies and A. H. Gardiner, The Tomb of Huy (Theban Tomb Series, xv, London, 1926), 28-30, Pis. xix-xx. Translated in Breasted, AR, ii, §§1027-33.

Presenting tribute to the Lord of the Two Lands, the produce of the wretched Retenu, by the King's Envoy to Every Foreign Country, the King's Son of Ethiopia, the Overseer of Southern Countries, Amen-hotep, the triumphant.

Vessels of all the choicest and best of their countries: silver, gold, lapis lazuli, turquoise, and every august costly stone.

The princes of Upper Retenu, who knew not Egypt since the time of the god, begging for peace before his majesty. They say: "[Give] us the breath which thou givest! Then we shall relate thy victories. There are none rebellious in thy vicinity, (but) every land is at peace!"

The Egyptians and the Gods of Asia*

In earlier history the Egyptians had identified foreign gods with their own deities, so that the goddess of Byblos was a Hatch hor to them and various Asiatic gods were Seth to them. This 4

1 The orient as the land of the rising sun. Here Syria-Palestine—"the shipping source of the goods, not the native source of those ores listed.
2 Huy was an abbreviated form of the name Amen-hotep.
3 Since the time of the creator, i.e. for a long time.
4 For example, such was still the case in the Egyptian-Hittite treaty at process of extending their own into other countries continued under the Empire. Ramses III built a temple of Amon in Asia, 5 and Ptah had a sanctuary at Ashkelon. 6 There were also two cosmopolitan forces at work: a worship of Asiatic gods as such at their shrines in Asia and a domestication of Asiatic gods in Egypt.

The first of these processes began at least as early as the time of Thut-mose III (15th century B.C.). A stela found at Beisan in Palestine shows the Egyptian architect Amen-em-Opet and his son worshiping the local god Mekal. 7 "Mekal, the god of Beth-Shan," is depicted as unmistakably Asiatic in features and dress, with a pointed beard and a conical headdress with horns and streamers. Amen-em-Opet addresses a perfectly normal Egyptian mortuary prayer to this god. 8

Beisan also yielded a stela of the Ramses III level (12th century B.C.), on which an Egyptian is shown worshiping the goddess "Anath, Lady of Heaven, Mistress of All the Gods." 9

Near Sheikh Sa'ad, east of the Sea of Galilee, a badly worn stela was found depicting Ramses II making offering to a deity with an elaborate headdress. The name of this deity, with some uncertainty, might be read as Adon-Zaphon, "Lord of the North." 10

From about the same period (13th century B.C.) comes a stela found at Ugarit (Ras Shamra) on the north Phoenician coast. Here the "Royal Scribe and Chief Steward of the Palace Memi" addresses his mortuary prayer to "Baal-Zaphon, the great god," with the Asiatic conical cap with streamers. 11

From the end of the Eighteenth Dynasty on (14th century B.C.), there is an abundance of evidence on Asiatic gods worshiped in Egypt. In Egypt. In the most frequently mentioned deity was Baal. 8 As the god of the heavens, the mountain tops, and of thunder—the Semitic Baal-Shamaim—he was the counterpart of the Egyptian god Seth, and his name was used in figures of speech relating to the pharaoh in battle:

His battle cry is like (that of) Baal in the heavens. 9

In this terrorizing capacity the texts equate him with the Egyptian war-gods Montu and Seth. 10 He was used in magical texts to frighten away evil forces:

Baal smites thee with the cedar tree which is in his hand. 11

However, his role might be beneficent, as when a woman musician wrote from Memphis, appealing to various gods on behalf of her correspondent:

... to the Ennead which is in the House of Ptah, to the time of Ramses II (13th century); cf. pp. 200-201 above: Seth of Hatti, equated to the Storm-god of the land of Hatti; Seth of various Hittite towns, equated to the Storm-gods of those towns; Re, lord of the sky, equated to the Hittite Sun-god. Cf. p. 231, n.9.

2 A. Rowe, The Topography and History of Beth-Shan (Philadelphia, 1930), 1, 1:15-17, Pi. 33-34.
3 Ibid., 33-35: Pi. 50, No. 2.
4 So W. F. Albright, in AASOR, vii (1926), 45-46, n.106. This so-called "Job Stone" was originally published by G. Schumacher in an article by A. Erman, in ZDPV, xv (1892), 205-n. Erman, in ZA, xxxi (1893), 199-201, tentatively read the name as Arcana-Zaphon.
6 Most of the occurrences of the name of Baal in Egyptian texts were covered by H. Gressmann in Behelte zur ZAW, xxxvii (1918), 191 ff.
7 The Epigraphic Survey, Later Historical Records of Ramses III (Memling Habu, v, OIP, ix, Chicago, 1932), Pp. 79-22; 87-23. Translated in W. F. Edgerton and J. A. Wilson, Historical Records of Ramses III ii (SAOC, 12, Chicago, 1936), 73, 94.
8 In the Poem on Ramses II's Battle of Kadesh, a Luxor text makes the pharaoh say: "I was like Seth in his time (of might)," where the Athbys texts have "Monstru" and a papyrus text has "Baal." (J. A. Wilson, in JEA, xxxii [1927], 271). The same poem puts into the mouths of the enemy the words: "It is not a man who is in our midst, (but) Seth, the great in strength," (ibid., 272).
9 Papyrus Leyden 345, recto, iv 12-v 2, quoted in Gressmann, op. cit., 201.
Ba'alat, to Qedesh, to Meni, (to) Baali-Zaphon, to Sopdu...

Ba'al had his own priesthood in Egypt from the late Eighteenth Dynasty on.\textsuperscript{19} Toward the end of the Empire, the presence in Egypt of such a personal name as Baal-khepeshef, "Baal-is-(Upon)-His-Sword,"\textsuperscript{20} corresponding to good Egyptian names like Amon-her-khepeshef, Montu-her-khepeshef, and Seth-her-khepeshef, shows the domestication of this immigrating god from Asia.

Also popular in Egypt were the Semitic goddesses Anath and Astarte (Ishtar).\textsuperscript{21} They served as war-goddesses, with a particular interest in horses and chariots. As early as Thutmose IV (late 15th century), the pharaoh was described as "mighty in the chariot like Astarte."\textsuperscript{22} In a poem in praise of the king's war chariot (15th century), a dual part of the chariot is likened to Anath and Astarte.\textsuperscript{23} It was said of Ramses III (12th century):

Montu and Seth are with him in every fray; Anath and Astarte are a shield to him.\textsuperscript{24}

By the Eighteenth Dynasty, Astarte had become a goddess of healing in Egypt, in the name of "Astar of Syria."\textsuperscript{25} Anath, Astarte, and Qedesh each bore the Egyptian name, "Lady of Heaven, Mistress of the Two Lands, and the Mistress of All the Gods," and to "Qedes, the Lady of Heaven and Mistress of All the Gods."\textsuperscript{26} The egyptianization of Anath and Astarte is indicated by the compounding of their names into personal names of normal formation.\textsuperscript{27}

Something has already been said about the goddess Qedesh, "the Holy," and about the god Rashap (cr Resheph or Reshpu).\textsuperscript{28} These two, together with the Egyptian god Min, are associated on a stela in Vienna, where the goddess Qedesh stands on the back of a lion. They also, on a stela in the British Museum, a goddess Kenet stands on the back of a lion, flanked by Min and by "Rashap, the great god, lord of heaven, and ruler of the Ennead."\textsuperscript{29} On a stela in Turin are associated "Qedes, Lady of Heaven, Mistress of All the gods, the Eye of Re, without her peer," and "Rashap, the great god, lord of heaven, ruler of the Ennead, and lord of eternity."\textsuperscript{30} A stela in Aberdeen shows the worship of "Rashap-Shulman."\textsuperscript{31} Rashap, like Ba'al, was a war-god and thunder-god. It was said of Ramses III's army:

The chariot-warriors are as mighty as Rashaps.\textsuperscript{32} Finally, as a forceful and exotic deity, Rashap was used in magical texts, as in this formula against some ailment:

with the poisons of the Upper God and Neker, his wife; the poisons of Rashap and Item, his wife.\textsuperscript{33}

\textbf{Texts from the Tomb of General Hor-em-heb}

History may reach a point where the repetition of old and successful formulae is more important than the recording of contemporary events. The historian often cannot be sure whether he is dealing with truthful records or with stereotyped claims of accomplishment. The following extract constitutes a case in point. Under the Amarna Revolution, Egypt lost the greater part of her Asiatic Empire. A commander of the Egyptian armies at that time was the Hor-em-heb who later became pharaoh (reigning about 1349-1319 B.C.). While still an official, he erected a tomb at Sakkarah, of which the remains are now scattered in three continents. The claims of foreign conquest and tribute may enlarge a limited reality or may be the protestations which covered failure.

The texts of (a) below are in the British Museum, the Cairo Museum, and the Louvre; of (b) in a private collection in Alexandria; of (c) in the Civic Museum in Bologna; of (d) in the Rijksmuseum at Leyden; and of (e) in the Vienna Museum. The bibliography for these pieces is in B. Porter and R. L. B. Moss, Topographical catalogue of Egyptian Hieroglyphic Texts, Reliefs, and Paintings, III. Memphis (Oxford, 1931), 195-97. Translations in Breast, AR, 11, §§21-28.

\textbf{a}

The tides of Hor-em-heb in his tomb show his responsibilities toward Asiatic countries. He was the 'Hereditary Prince, Fan-\textsuperscript{1862}, 1, PL iv, 3, the last being a prophet of the Moon, of the 5th dynasty pharaoh Sahu-\textsuperscript{1}-\textsuperscript{Re}, and of Astarte, "the Lady of the Two Lands."\textsuperscript{34}

\textsuperscript{25} Anath-em-nekhu and Astart-em-heb in H. Ranke, Die ägyptischen Personennamen, I (Glückstadt, 1935), 69-15 and 71-17.

\textsuperscript{26} Notes 12, 18, and 19 above. For the latest statement on Rashap, see W. K. Simpson's note in AJA, 95(1951), 86-90.

\textsuperscript{27} For Qedesh see J. Leibovitch's study, ASAE, XLI (1942), 77-86. This is the British Museum stela showing Anath in war panoply, mentioned in n.18 above.

\textsuperscript{28} E.g., Anath-em-nekhu and Astart-em-heb in H. Ranke, Die ägyptischen Personennamen, I (Glückstadt, 1935), 69-15 and 71-17.

\textsuperscript{29} F. L. Griffith, in JEA, vi (1917), 251.

\textsuperscript{30} W. R. Dawson and T. E. Pect in JEA, xix (1933), 167-74; translated in Erman, LAE, 280-81.

\textsuperscript{31} Edgerton and Wilson, op.cit., 75. For Astarte with shield and spear, see W. F. Petrie, Memphis, i (London, 1906), pl. XIX, no. 57, of the 19th dynasty. For Anath similarly equipped, see British Museum stela 191 (Exhibition No. 0646), in A Guide to the Egyptian Collections of the British Museum (London, 1909), opp. p. 248. Papyrus Bchester Beauty VII, vol. i, p. 89 (Hieratische Papyri in the British Museum, Third Series. Chester Beauty Gift, ed. by A. H. Gardiner [London, 1935, i, 61-63] has a passage in a myth about Anath, in which her warlike nature is taken up in the words: "Anath, the goddess, the victorious, a woman acting (as a) man, clad as a male and girt as a female." For Anath in the name of Seti I's team, see p. 254. For the delight of Astarte and the god Rashap in horsemanship, see p. 344.

\textsuperscript{32} Ranke, op.cit., gives a stela of worship to "Astart of Khur" and a statuette with a prayer for health addressed to "Astart of Khur, the Lady of Heaven, the Mistress of the Two Lands, and the Mistress of All the Gods," and to "Qedes, the Lady of Heaven and Mistress of All the Gods." See n.13 above; also E. von Bergmann in Recueil de travaux ..., XII (1892), 10, and H. Brugsch, Recueil de monuments égyptiens (Leipzig, 1882), 1, PL iv, 3, the last being a prophet of the Moon, of the 5th dynasty pharaoh Sahu-Re, and of Astarte, "the Lady of the Two Lands."
Hor-em-heb was sent by an unnamed pharaoh to bring tribute from countries to the south of Egypt, for the occasion of the formal presentation of tribute of Africa and Asia.

... He was sent as King's Messenger as far as the sun disc shines, returning when he had triumphed, when his [conquest] was effected. No land could stand before him, (but) he [captured] it in the completion of a moment. His name is pronounced in [awe in] the country of... , and he does not [leave] off in going north. Now his majesty appeared upon the throne of the offering of tribute, which the [countries] of the south and the north offered, while the Hereditary Prince Hor-em-heb, the triumphant, was standing beside ...

The following lines probably come from the same scene of the presentation of foreign tribute.

... introducing the tribute into its place and what was selected from it to clothe ..... the army, filling the storehouse of the god, who was satisfied of heart, ... which Syria gave to them.... he was serviceable to the king.

When Hor-em-heb introduced to the unnamed pharaoh Asians, the king was graciously pleased to reward the general with gold.

The princes of all foreign countries come to beg life from him. It is the Hereditary Prince, Sole Companion, and Royal Scribe Hor-em-heb, the triumphant, who will say, when he answers [the king: "The countries] which knew not Egypt—they are under thy feet forever and ever, for Amon has decreed them to thee. They mustered [every] foreign country [into a confederacy] unknown since Re. Their battle cry in their hearts was as one. (But) thy name is flaming [against them, and they become] subject to thee. Thou art the Re [who causes] that they [abandon] their towns ..."

Hor-em-heb issued an order to his subordinate officers on the treatment of restless enemy peoples.

... Now Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—has put

1 The only one of the Amarna pharaohs who has left us visible claim to foreign conquest was Tut-ankh-Amon, whose decorated box (N. M. Davies and A. H. Gardiner, Ancient Egyptian Paintings [Chicago, 1936], n. PL LXXVIII) shows a battle scene of the pharaoh decimating the Asiatic enemy, with the legend: "The good god, son of Amon, hero without his peer, possessor of a strong arm, crushing hundred-thousands and making them prostrate." One may hold some scepticism about the historicity of any such encounter.

2 In view of the following clause and the probable balanced statement of south and north, this unreadable name was probably that of a country to the south of Egypt—perhaps Nepau, which appears in a long list of African regions conquered by Thut-mose III.

3 The pharaoh.

4 Revised since the first edition of this volume, following the demonstration by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xxxix (1953), 6-9, that the inscription was actually written retrograde on the wall. Thus it does not deal with the relocation of transplanted peoples.

5 Although the entire context was inevitably framed with reference to the restoration after the Amarna heresy, these same expressions were used about the accession of any pharaoh, who had a responsibility to restore order (mefat "truth, justice") as order had been given by the gods.

6 A compound expression, senti-men "was passed-by-and-sick."

Tut-ankh-Amon's Restoration after the Amarna Revolution

The Amarna movement barely survived the reign of Akh-en-Aton. His son-in-law Tut-ankh-Amon was forced to make his peace with the older priesthoods and civil officials and return to Thebes. On a stela erected in the Temple of Amon at Karnak, he tells of his pious acts of restoration after the heresy. The stela was later usurped by Hor-em-heb (about 1349-1339 B.C.), who inserted his name in place of the name of Tut-ankh-Amon (about 1361-1352 B.C.), since the latter had been stained by relation to the heresy.

The stela was found by G. Legrain at Karnak, and is now 34183 in the Cairo Museum. It was published by Legrain in Recueil de travaux ... , xxix (1907), 672-73, and by P. Lacau, Stèles du nouvel empire (Catalogue général ... du Musée du Caire; Cairo, 1909), 224 ff., Pl. LXX, with the fragment of a duplicate inscription, Cairo 34184, on p. 230 f. There is a translation and commentary by J. Bennett in JEA, xxv (1939), 8-15. The year date at the beginning of the inscription is unfortunately lost.

... The good ruler, performing benefactions for his father (Amon) and all the gods, for he has made what was ruined to endure as a monument for the ages (5) of eternity and he has expelled deceit throughout the earth; he [was passed-by-and-sick] in being a monument of the land, as (in) its first time."

Now when his majesty appeared as king, the temples of the gods and goddesses from Elephantine [down] to the marshes of the Delta [had... and] gone to pieces. Their shrines had become desolate, had become mounds overgrown with [weeds]. Their sanctuaries were as if they had never been. Their halls were a footpath. The land was topsy-turvy,' and the gods turned their backs upon this land. If [the army was] sent to Djahi to extend the frontiers of Egypt, no success of theirs came at all. If one prayed to a god to seek counsel from him, he would never come [at all]. If one made supplication to a goddess similarly, she would never come at all.
Their hearts were hurt in their bodies, (10) (so that) they did damage to that which had been made.

Now after days had passed by this,3 [his majesty] appeared [upon] the throne of his father. He ruled the regions of Horus; the Black Land and the Red Land4 were under his authority, and every land was bowing down to the glory of him.

Now when his majesty was in his palace which is in the House of Aa-kheper-ka-Re,5 like Re in the heavens, then his majesty was conducting the affairs of this land and the daily needs of the Two Banks. So his majesty deliberated plans with his heart, searching for any beneficial deed, seeking out acts of service for his father Amon, and fashioning his august image of genuine fine gold. He surpassed what had been done previously. He fashioned his father Amon upon thirteen carrying-poles, his holy image being of fine gold, lapis lazuli, [turquoise], and every august costly stone, whereas the majesty of this august god had formerly been upon eleven carrying-poles. He fashioned Ptah, South-of-His-Wall, Lord of Life of the Two Lands, his august image being of fine gold, [upon] eleven [carrying-poles], his holy image being of fine gold, lapis lazuli, turquoise, and every august costly stone, whereas the majesty of (15) this august god had formerly been on ["-]-[\-]3 carrying-poles.6

Then his majesty made monuments for the gods, [fashioning] their cult-statues of genuine fine gold from the highlands, building their sanctuaries anew as monuments for the ages of eternity, established with possessions forever, setting for them divine offerings as a regular daily observance, and provisioning their food-offerings upon earth. He surpassed what had been previously, [he] went beyond what had [been done] since the time of the ancestors. He has inducted priests and prophets from the children of the nobles of their towns, (each) the son of a known man, whose (own) name is known. He has increased their [property] in gold, silver, bronze, and copper, without limit in [any respect].7 He has filled their workhouses with male and female slaves, the product of his majesty’s capturing (in every foreign country). All the [property] of the temples has been doubled, tripled, and quadrupled in silver, [gold], lapis lazuli, turquoise, every (kind of) august costly stone, royal linen, white linen, fine linen, olive oil, gum, fat, (20) . . . incense, benzoin, and myrrh, without limit to any good thing. His majesty—life, prosperity, health!—has built their barques upon the river of new cedar from the terraces, of the choicest (wood) of Negau,8 worked with gold from the highlands. They make the river shine.

His majesty—life, prosperity, health!—has consecrated male and female slaves, women singers and dancers, who had been maidservants in the palace. Their work is charged against the palace and against the . . . of the Lord of the Two Lands. I cause that they be privileged and protected to (the benefit of) my fathers, all the gods, through a desire to satisfy them by doing what their J(a) wishes, so that they may protect Egypt.9

The hearts of the gods and goddesses who are in this land are in joy; the possessors of shrines are rejoicing; the regions are in jubilee and exultation throughout the [entire] land:—the good [times] have come! The Ennead of gods who are in the Great House,” (raise) their arms in praise; their hands are filled with jubilees [for] (25) ever and ever; all life and satisfaction are with them for the nose of the Horus who repeats births,’ the beloved son [of Amon] . . . , for He fashioned him in order that He (Himself) might be fashioned.” —

The Era of the City of Tanis

About the year 1330 B.C., when Hor-em-heb was pharaoh, a vizier of Egypt named Seti came to the city Tanis in the Delta to celebrate a four hundredth anniversary. This anniversary took the form of the worship of the Egyptian god Seth, who is represented in the scene carved on the stela as an Asiatic deity in a distinctively Asiatic dress. Somewhere close to four hundred years before 1330 B.C., the Hyksos had begun their rule in Egypt, and the Hyksos capital Avaris was probably the later Tanis and the later city Ramses, while the god of the Hyksos was equated by the Egyptians with Seth. The celebration therefore commemorated the four hundredth year of the rule of Seth as a king, and apparently also the four hundredth year since the founding of Tanis.10 It was, of course, out of the question that the Egyptians should mention the hated Hyksos in such a commemoration, but Seth held a high position under the Nineteenth Dynasty, with two pharaohs named Seti, “Seth’s Man.”

Later the father of this vizier Seti became the pharaoh Ramses I and founded a dynastic line. Seti himself became the pharaoh Seti I. When his son Ramses II enlarged the city Tanis to be his capital city Ramses,11 he set up a stele to justify Tanis’ claim to rule, on the ground that the god Seth had ruled there for four hundred years.

8 Negau lay in or near the Lebanon, a region of coniferous woods: see Helck, op. cit., 277.
9 The use of the first person singular in this sentence suggests that it was a quotation from a royal decree for the immunity of temples from taxes. The expenses of the slaves and musicians whom the pharaoh gave to the temples were charged against the royal estate and not against the temples.
10 Since this is the home of the Ennead, it is probably the Temple of Heliopolis.
11 Pictorially a god held the hieroglyph of life to the nose of the king, or he might hold strings of “year” or “jubilee” hieroglyphs for the king’s long life.
12 Amon made Tut-anh-Amon the divine king in order that Amon might be advanced.
13 Cf. p. 231, n.9.
14 Numbers (13:22), carries the tradition that Tanis (Zoan) and Hebron in Palestine were founded at approximately the same time.
15 For the argument that Tanis, the Hyksos capital Avaris, and the city Ramses were one and the same, see A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xix (1933), 122-28.
16 This was a phrase from story telling, and is not to be taken literally. It is an example of the vulgarization of the formal language under the influence of the Amarna movement and of empire.
17 Egypt itself was the land of the fertile black soil; the desert was the Red Land.
18 Thut-mose I (about 1525-1495 B.C.). From another inscription, this estate seems to have been at Memphis, a religious center which has unusual prominence in a text located at Karnak.
19 The portable statues of Amon and Ptah seem to have had an “august image” (fit shugnet) and also a “holy image” (fit djjeret), the distinction between which is not clear. These were carried by priests, the number of carrying-poles being a factor in the number of priests and thus in the honor paid to the god.
20 In this sentence and the following, “their” refers to the gods.
The "Stela of the Year 400" was found at Tanis. See the latest publication by P. Montet in Kemi, iv (1933), 191-215. The significance of the stela was stated by K. Sethe in ZabaS, IX (1930), 85-89. There is a translation in Breasted, AR, xi, §§538-42. The scene above the inscription designates the Asiatic-garbed Seth as "Seth of Ramses," thus locating him in the residence city of that name.

(1) Live the Horus: Mighty Bull, Who Loves Truth, . . . (Ramses II). (5) His majesty commanded the making of a great stela of granite bearing the great name of his fathers, in order to set up the name of the father of his fathers (and of) the King Men-maat-Re, the Son of Re: Seti Mer-ne-Ptah, enduring and abiding forever like Re every day:

"Year 400, 4th month of the third season, day 4/ of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Seth-the-Great-of-Strength; the Son of Re, his beloved: The-Obmib, beloved of Re-Har-akhti, so that he exists forever and ever. Now there came the Hereditary Prince; Mayor of the City and Vizier; Fan-Bearer on the Right Hand of the King, Troop Commander; Overseer of Foreign Countries; Overseer of the Fortress of Sile; Chief of Police, Royal Scribe; Master of Horse; Conductor of the Feast of the Ram-the-Lord-of-Mendes; High Priest of Seth; Lector Priest of Uto, She-Who-Opens-the-Two-Lands; and Overseer of the Prophets of All the Gods, Seti, the triumphant, the son of the Hereditary Prince; Mayor of the City and Vizier; (10) Troop Commander; Overseer of Foreign Countries; Overseer of the Fortress of Sile; Royal Scribe; and Master of Horse, Pa-Ramses, the triumphant, and child of the Lady of the House and Singer of the Re, Tiu, the triumphant. He said: 'Hail to thee, O Seth, Son of Nut, the Great of Strength in the Barque of Millions,' felling the enemy at the prow of the barque of Re, great of battle cry . . . ! Mayest thou give me a good lifetime serving [thy] | as while I remain in [thy favor]."

A Campaign of Seti I in Northern Palestine

Internally and externally the Amarna Revolution had dealt a serious blow to Egyptian empire. Domestic reorganization was the first need. Then, when Seti I (about 1318-1301 B.C.) became pharaoh, he returned to campaigning in Asia. This stela from Palestinian soil gives a brief statement of his energy in meeting an attempted coalition of Asiatic princes.

A basalt stela, found by the University of Pennsylvania in the mound of Beisan (Beth-Shan) and now in the Palestine Museum at Jerusalem. Published by A. Rowe in Museum Journal. Uni-

1 A basalt stela, found by the University of Pennsylvania in the mound of Beisan (Beth-Shan) and now in the Palestine Museum at Jerusalem. Published by A. Rowe in Museum Journal. University of Pennsylvania, xx (1929), 88-98, and in The Topography and History of Beth-Shan (Philadelphia, 1930), 1, 24-29, Pl. 41.

Year 1, 3rd month of the third season, day 10. Live the Horus: Mighty Bull, Appearing in Thebes, Making the Two Lands to Live; the Two Goddesses: Repeating Births, Mighty of Arm, Repelling the Nine Bows; the Horus of Gold: Repeating Appearances, Mighty of Bows in All Lands; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Men-maat-Re [Ir]-en-Re; the Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Seth Mer-ne-Ptah, beloved of Re-Har-akhti, the great god. The good god, potent with his arm, heroic and valiant like Montu, rich in captives, (5) knowing (how to) place his hand, alert wherever he is; speaking with his mouth, acting with his hands, valiant leader of his army, valiant warrior in the very heart of the fray, a Bastet formidable in combat, penetrating into a mass of Asiatics and making them prostrate, crushing the princes of Retenu, reaching the (very) ends of (10) him who transgresses against his way. He causes to retreat the princes of Syria, all the boastfulness of whose mouth was (so) great. Every foreign country of the ends of the earth, their princes say: "Where shall we go?" They spend the night giving testimony in his name, saying: "Behold it, behold it!" in their hearts. It is the strength of his father Amon that decreed to him valor and victory.

On this day one came to speak to his majesty, as follows: (15) "The wretched foe who is in the town of Hamath is gathering to himself many people, while he is seizing the town of Beth-Shan. There will be an alliance with them of Pahel. He does not permit the Prince of Rehob to go outside."

Thereupon his majesty sent the first army of Amon, (named) "Mighty of Bows," to the town of Hamath, the first army of the (20) Re, (named) "Plentiful of Valor," to the town of Beth-Shan, and the first army of Seth, (named) "Strong of Bows," to the town of Yanoam. When the space of a day had passed, they were overthrown to the glory of his majesty, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Men-maat-Re; the Son of Re: Seti Mer-ne-Ptah, given life.

Campaigns of Seti I in Asia

On the north exterior wall of the great hypostyle hall at Karnak Seti I (about 1318-1301 B.C.) has left scenes of his military activity with at least four objectives: against the Shasu-Bedouin of Sinai and southern Palestine, against the mountain region of Palestine-Syria, against the Hittites in central and northern Syria, and against the Libyans. Extracts from this material will illustrate the problem which this pharaoh faced in attempting to reconstitute the Egyptian Empire.

Bibliography of the publications and translations of the texts will be found in Breasted, AR, n.s., §§80-156, and bibliography also in B. Porter and R. L. Moss, Topographical Bibliography ...//... Theban Temples (Oxford, 1929), 19-23. A convenient transcription of the texts, but without improvement over the earlier copyists, will be found in C. E. Sander-Hansen, Historische Inschriften der 19. Dynastie (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, RV, Brussels, 1933), 3-12.

In the following (a) is Breasted, scene 8 = Porter and Moss, scene 57 bottom; (b) is Breasted, scenes 8, 2, and 1 = Porter and Moss, scenes 55-57 bottom; (c) is Breasted, scenes 3, 4, and 5 = Porter and Moss, scenes 54, and 55 top; (d) is Breasted, scenes 9-10 = Porter and Moss, scene 59 top and bottom; (e) is Breasted, scenes 16, 17, 19 = Porter and Moss, scenes 62 top, 62 bottom, and 64 bottom.

a

This scene gives Seti’s return from a campaign, but the text states the reasons for his activity. The redness in Palestine was an aftermath of the disturbances in the Amarna period.

Year 1 of the Renaissance, and of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Men-maat-Re, given life. Then one came to say to his majesty: “The foe belonging to the Shasu are plotting (5) rebellion. Their tribal chiefs are gathered in one place, waiting on the mountain ranges of Kharu.” They have taken to clamoring and quarreling, one of them killing his fellow. They have no regard for the laws of the palace.” The heart of his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—was glad at it.

(10) Now as for the good god, he exults at undertaking combat; he delights at an attack on him; his heart is satisfied at the sight of blood. He cuts off the heads of the perverse of heart. He loves (15) an instant of trampling more than a day of jubilation. His majesty kills them all at one time, and leaves no heirs among them. He who is spared by his hand is a living prisoner, carried off to Egypt.

b

Three scenes show the pharaoh on the march and list the stations on the military road through Sinai, running close to the sea between the Egyptian frontier at Sile (near modern Kantarah) and Raphia in Palestine. This was the main avenue of intercourse between Egypt and Palestine. This route has been studied by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, vi (1920), 99-116, in relation to the similar listing in the satirical letter of p. 478 below.

An interesting touch of evidence on the international forces playing upon the imperial religion of the time is the fact that the pharaoh’s team of horses has an alternative name: ‘The great team of his majesty (named) Amon Decrees to Him the Valor,’ which is (also) called ‘Anath is Content.’

Somewhere in Palestine Seti I attacked a fortified place, “the town of the Canaan,” which we cannot locate. As the accompanying text indicates, this was on the same expedition as that of the scenes just mentioned.

Year 1 of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Men-maat-Re. The desolation which the mighty arm of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—made among the foe belonging to the Shasu from the fortress of Sile to the Canaan. His majesty [pre]vailed over them like a fierce lion. They were made into corpses throughout their valleys, stretched out in their (own) blood, like that which has never been.

Another scene shows the pharaoh capturing a town surrounded by a forest, “the town of Yanoam.” This may have been the same thrust as that mentioned in the Beisan stela. A third scene depicts the Asiatics cutting down trees for the pharaoh, at “the town of Qeder in the land of Henem,” which cannot be located. However, the local rulers are “the great princes of Lebanon,” and the descriptive legend runs:

d

The texts of the scenes following Seti’s triumphal return to Egypt link the campaign against the Shasu-Bedouin with the mountain area of Syria-Palestine, called “Upper Retenu.”

The return [of] his majesty from Upper Retenu, having extended the frontiers of Egypt.

The plunder which his majesty carried off from these Shasu, whom his majesty himself captured in the year 1 of the Renaissance.

e

Other scenes show Seti I engaged with the Hittites in Syria. He is shown attacking a mountainous settlement, “the town of Kadesh.” That this was Kadesh on the Orontes seems certain from the fact that the fragment of a monumental stela of this pharaoh was found on that site.7 The legend for the scene at Karnak runs:

The going up which Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—made to desolate the land of Kadesh and the land of Amurru.

Either on this expedition or on a subsequent campaign, the pharaoh came into military competition with the powerful state of Hatti. He is shown in battle, with the legend:

The wretched land of the Hittites, among whom his

---

1 “Repeating Births.” Seti I’s reign inaugurated a new era; see ZdtS, LXXVI (1923), 4.

2 Probably, as in the Beisan stela of this same year (pp. 253-54 above), the mountains of northern Palestine.

3 On this goddess see pp. 249-50 above.

4 cf. pp. 253-54 above.

5 Perhaps a Gedor or Geder in a land of Hinnom.

6 cf. Wen-Amon’s expedition to get cedar for this sacred barque of Amon, pp. 35-39.

7 M. Pezard, in Syria, m (1922), 108-10; G. Loukianoff, in Ancient Egypt? 1924-1925, 101-08.

8 A. H. Gardiner, Ancient Egyptian Onomastica (London, 1947), 1, 140 ff., does not believe this to be Amurru.
majesty—life, prosperity, health!—made a great slaughter.

On his return to Egypt, the pharaoh enjoyed the usual triumph and made the customary gift acknowledgement to the imperial god Amon.

[Presentation of] tribute by the good god to his father Amon-Re, Lord of the [Thrones] of [the Two Lands, at] his return from the country of Hatti, having annihilated the rebellious countries and crushed the Asiatists in their places...

The great princes of the wretched Retenu, whom his majesty carried off by his victories from the country of Hatti, to fill the workhouse of his father Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, according as he had given valor against the south and victory against the north...

Beth-Shan Stelae of Seti I and Ramses II

The excavations at Beth-Shan produced commemorative stelae of Seti I and Ramses II. cf. pp. 253-54 above.

a

A basalt stela, now Jerusalem Museum 885, published by B. Grideloff, Une stele scythopolitaine du roi Sethos Ier (Cairo, 1949); see also W. F. Albright, BASOR, 125 (1952), 24-32. Herewith extracts from lines 9-19 of the stela's 20 lines.

On this day, lo (10) one came to tell his [majesty]: The Apiru of Mount Yarmuta, with Teyer ... [have arisen in attack] upon the Asiatists of Rehem. Then [his majesty] said: How can these wretched Asiatists think [of taking] their [arms] for further disorder? ... (16) ... Then his majesty commanded a certain number of people from his [infantry and his] numerous chariotry that their faces turn back to the foreign country Djahl. The space of two days elapsed, and they returned in triumph from] the country Ye ... , having [their] levy [consisting of] living [captives] as plunder.

b

The basalt stela of Ramses II, now in the University Museum in Philadelphia, is thoroughly conventional. It was published by Rowe, The Topography and History of Beth-Shan (Philadelphia, 1930), I, 33-36, Pl. 46, with a translation also in Museum Journal, The University of Pennsylvania, xx (1929), 94-98. Only the date in line 1 and the passage about the Asiatics coming to the city of Ramses in Egypt are translated here.

Year 9, 4th month of the second season, day 1.5 ... When day had broken; he made to retreat the Asiatics. ... They all come bowing down to him, to his palace of life and satisfaction, Per-Ramses-Meri-Amon-the-Great of Victories.7 ...

1 On a date lost at the beginning of the stela.
2 The Apiru are probably etymologically related to the Habiru. See p. 247f. n. 47.
3 Vf. Josh. 21:29. Identified by Albright as at or near Belvoir (Kokab el-Hawa), a dozen kilometers north of Beth-Shan.
4 Unfortuneately a vague term for Syria-Palestine, and not to be taken for precise location. The military action must have been in the vicinity of Beth-Shan and Yarmuta.
5 Around 1280, this date fell in the month of February.
6 Apparently military action on the date above.
7 "The House of Ramses," the Residence City Ramses or Raamses in the Egyptian Delta. See A. H. Gardiner in JEA, v (1918), 127 ff.

The Asiatic Campaigning of Ramses II

By length of years and sheer self-assertiveness Ramses II (about 1301-1234 B.C.) left his name sprawled across Egyptian history out of all proportion to his personal achievement. In physical content his texts bulk large, but they lack historical relevance or clear applicability to the Old Testament.

A. THE FIRST TWO CAMPAIGNS

At the mouth of the Dog River (Nahr el-Kelb) between Beirut and Byblos, Ramses II left three nearly illegible stelae of triumph, one of which bears the date, "Year 4," and testifies to his consolidation of territory north to that point by that date. In the following year the pharaoh engaged upon the exploit of his life, the battle against the Hittite king Muwatallis at Kadesh on the Orontes. No other text occupies so much wall space in Egypt and Nubia. However, it is clear that Ramses did not win a victory, but succeeded only in extricating himself from a tight spot by his personal valor. The full statement of this campaign is of little immediate concern here, as the action took place north in Syria and the Hittite confederation was almost completely northern. We give here only those extracts which relate to his crossing Palestine and southern Syria on his way to Kadesh.

The texts have been best gathered in Ch. Kuentz, La bataille de Qadesch (Memoires pub. par les membres de l'Institut Francais d'Archéologie Orientale, IV, Cairo, 1923), to which the most recent addition is an extract in Papyrus Bruxelles in (Hieratic Papriy in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty Gift, ed. by A. H. Gardiner [London, 1935], I, 23-24; II, Pls. 9-10). The texts appear also in Selim Hassan, Le poeme dit de Pentauor et le rapport officiel sur la bataille de Qadesch (Cairo, 1929). There are translations in Breasted, AR., in, §§598-351, and by J. A. Wilson in AJSL, xlii (1927), 266-87. The poem is also transcribed by Erman, LAE, 706-707.

The poem on the battle deals briefly with the departure from Egypt, the organization of the Egyptian army, and the approach to Kadesh (Kuentz, op. cit., 220-25, 230-33).

Now then, his majesty had prepared (8) his infantry, his chariotry, and the Sherden of his majesty's capturing, whom he had carried off by the victories of his arm, equipped with all their weapons, to whom the orders of combat had been given. His majesty journeyed northward, his infantry and chariotry with him. He began to march on the good way in the year 5, 2nd month of the third season, day 9, (when) his majesty passed the fortress of Sila. [He] was mighty like Montu4 when he goes forth, (so that) every foreign country was trembling before him, their chiefs were presenting their tribute, and all the rebels were coming, bowing down through fear of the glory of his majesty. His infantry went on the narrow passes as if on the highways of Egypt. Now after days had passed after this, then his majesty was in Ramses Meri-Amon, the town which is in the Valley of the Cedar. His majesty proceeded northward. After his majesty reached the mountain range of Kadesh, then his majesty went forward like his father Montu, Lord of Thebes, and he crossed (12) the ford of the Orontes, with the first division of Amon (named) "He Gives Victory to User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re." His majesty reached the town of Kadesh.

2 One of the Peoples of the Sea who served as Egyptian mercenaries, cf. pp. 260, 262, 476.
3 Or Tjaru, the fortress at the Suez frontier. The date, around 1236 B.C., would fall around the middle of April.
4 The Egyptian god of war.

Now the wretched foe belonging to Hatti, with the numerous foreign countries which were with him, was waiting hidden and ready on the northeast of the town of Kadesh, while his majesty was alone by himself (17) with his retinue. The division of Amon was on the march behind him; the division of Re was crossing the ford in a district south of the town of Shabtuna, at the distance of one iter from the place where his majesty was; the division of Ptah was on the south of the town of Arnaim; and the division of Seth was marching on the road. His majesty had formed the first ranks of battle of all the leaders of his army, while they were (still) on the shore in the land of Amurru.

The briefer account of the battle, called the Record, adds only a few details to the account of the march toward Kadesh (Kuentz, op. cit., 328-30).

Year 5, 3rd month of the third season, day 9, under the majesty of (Ramses II). When his majesty was in the kingdom of Hatti (Ramses II), his majesty proceeded northward, and his majesty arrived at a vicinity south of the town of Shabtuna.

The only other detail from the Battle of Kadesh which need be noted here comes from a legend attached to a scene in which a military detachment of Egyptians is shown coming to the rescue of the hard-pressed pharaoh. It seems that this was a separate unit from the four army divisions named above and came by a separate route, arriving in the nick of time for the pharaoh. Kuentz, op. cit., 366.

The arrival of the Nearin-troops of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health—from the land of Amurru.

The campaigns of Ramses II's subsequent years cannot be arranged in historical sequence and ran from southern Palestine to northern Syria. This is true for the activities of his eighth year, as indicated by the legends attached to four of a number of Asiatic strongholds, shown on the back of the first pylon of the Ramesseum at Thebes. These were published by W. M. Müller, Egyptological Researches (Washington, 1906), ii, Pis. 100-03; W. Wreszinski, Atlas zur altägyptischen Kulturgeschichte, 11 (Leipzig, 1935), 90-91. Translations in Breasted, AR, HI, §§356-62.

The town which his majesty desolated in the year 8, Merom.

The town which his majesty desolated in the year 8, Salem.

The town which his majesty desolated in the year 8, Amurru, Deper.

Here Beth-Anath is probably in Palestine, but Deper (not Tabor!) is to be located in north Syria, in the general region of Tunip.

In one of these campaigns Ramses II took action against Ashkelon in southern Palestine. The scene showing the storming of this town is carved in the Temple of Karnak, was published by Wreszinski, op. cit., 58, and was translated by Breasted, AR, §§353-55.

The wretched town which his majesty took when it was wicked, Ashkelon. It says: "Happy is he who acts in fidelity to thee, (but) woe (to) him who transgresses thy frontier! Leave over a heritage, so that we may relate thy strength to every ignorant foreign country!"

The Egyptians related all this disturbance to the machinations of the Hittites, even down into Palestine. A scene in a Karnak (Müller, op. cit., Pis. 37-38; Wreszinski, op. cit., 55a) shows an attack upon the "town which his majesty desolated, Acre," and has a broken text in which one may read the words: "when the princes of Kadesh see him, the [terror] of him is in their hearts." The Hittite confraternity of the Battle of Kadesh was still considered the main foe of Ramses II.

The same general attitude are the references to the excursions into the region of Tunip and Deper in north Syria, as shown in scenes in the Temple of Luxor and the Ramesseum (Müller, op. cit., Pis. 44-45; Wreszinski, op. cit., 77-80; 107-09; Breasted, op. cit., §§364-66). There the claim of Ramses II that he fought "the fallen ones of Hatti" shows this larger resdessness, covering all of the empire which he claimed in Asia.

C. PEACE BETWEEN EGYPT AND HATTI

Ultimately, both the Egyptians and the Hittites found the war expensive of energies which had to be saved against the encroachments of the Peoples of the Sea. In the 21st year of Ramses II (perhaps 1280 B.C.), a treaty was concluded between Egypt and Hatti, providing for an offensive and defensive alliance; see pp. 199-201.

By Ramses II's 34th year (perhaps 1267 B.C.), the alliance between Egypt and Hatti was given visible expression through a royal marriage between the pharaoh and the eldest daughter of the Hittite king. This was not the first international marriage, as the pharaohs preceding the Amarna period had taken royal... wives from the Mitannian princesses. Egyptian texts treated such a marriage as a surrender of the Hittites, on the theme that the princess was the chief element of "tribute" sent to Egypt, after Hatti had been defeated by the pharaoh. The "Marriage Stela" is a document which mingles bombast with genuine relief at a successful peace after years of fighting.

... Then the (21) great princes of every land heard of the mysterious, qualities of his majesty. Then they were dismayed and afraid, and the terror of his majesty was in their hearts, while they lauded his glory and gave praise to his beautiful face. . . . [making offering] to him with their children, namely the great lords of Retenu and of strange countries—no matter which—in order to appease the heart of the Bull and to beg peace from him. "Ramses II." They despoiled themselves of their own goods, being charged with their annual dues, with their children at the head of their tribute, in praise and homage to his [name]. "Ramses II. So every foreign country was in humility under the feet of this good god, for he made his frontiers [so that] they were held in [cheeq]—except for that land of Hatti. It did not do the same as these princes.

Words spoken by his majesty: "As my father Re favors me forever as Ruler of the Two Lands, as I rise like the sun disc and shine like Re, as the heaven is firm upon its supports, I will attain the (25) limits of the land of Hatti, and they shall be prostrate under (my) feet forever! "Ramses II. I will make them turn back from fighting at the pass and stop the boasting in their land, for I know that my father Seth has made victory to flourish against every land, since he has made my arm mighty to the height of heaven and my strength to the width of earth! "Ramses II."

Then his majesty prepared his infantry and his chariotry, and they were launched in the land of Hatti. He despoiled them alone by himself9 . . . entirely, so that he [made] himself a name forever in the midst of it. "Ramses II. They have memory of the victories of his arm. He makes the survivors of his hand curse, for his prowess among them is like a blazing torch. No prince(s) remain upon their thrones, or their brothers [either]. "Ramses II.

They fulfilled many years while they were destroyed and . . . from year to year through the prowess of the great living god, "Ramses II. Then the Great Prince of Hatti sent [to] his majesty, magnifying his prowess and extolling... saying: . . . We are charged with [dues], and we [carry] them to thy august palace. Behold, we (30) are under thy feet, O victorious king! May we act according to all that thou hast commanded! "Ramses II."

So the Great Prince of Hatti sent and appeased his majesty year by year. "Ramses II. (But) he never listened to them.

Now after they saw their land in this destroyed state under the great prowess of the Lord of the Two Lands, "Ramses II, then the Great Prince of Hatti said to his army and his officials: "What is this? Our land is desolated; our lord Seth is angry with us, and the skies do not give water over against us. . . . Let us despoil ourselves of all our goods, with my eldest daughter at the head of them, and let us carry gifts of fealty to the good god, so that he may give us peace, that we may live! "Ramses II." Then he caused to be brought [his] eldest daughter, with noble tribute before her: gold, silver, many great ores, horses without limit to them, cattle, goats, and sheep by the ten-thousands, without limit to the products of their [land.] "Ramses II.

[Then one] came to make communication to his majesty, saying: "Behold, even the Great Prince of Hatti! His eldest daughter is being brought, carrying abundant tribute of everything. They cover the [valleys with] their [numbers], the daughter of the Prince of Hatti and the [daughter of the] Great Prince of Hatti among them. They have passed difficult mountains and wicked ravines. "Ramses II. They have reached the frontier of his majesty. Let (35) our [army] and the officials [come] to receive them. "Ramses II." Then his majesty received [great] joy, and the palace was in happiness, when he heard these mysterious matters, which were completely unknown in Egypt. So he despatched the army and the officials hastily, in order to make the reception before them. "Ramses II.

Then his majesty took deliberate counsel with his heart, saying: "How will it be with those whom I have sent, going on a mission to Djahi, in these days of rain and snow which come in winter?" Then he offered a great obligation to his father Seth, appealing to him about [i/] with the words: "Heaven is in thy hands, and earth is under thy feet. What happens is what thou commandest. Mayest thou [delay] to make the rain, the cold wind, and the snow, until the marvels which thou hast assigned to me shall reach me." "Ramses II."

Then his father Seth heard all that he had said. So the skies were peaceful, and days of summer fell to [him], while his army went, being gay, their bodies free-striding, their hearts in joy. "Ramses II. So the daughter of the Great Prince of Hatti marched to Egypt, while the infantry, chariotry, and officials of his majesty accompanied her, mingling with the infantry and chariographies...
The Journal of a Frontier Official

On the verso of a papyrus devoted to texts for school use, there are records of an official of the eastern frontier post of the Egyptian Delta. They illustrate the traffic between Egypt and Asia at the time of the pharaoh Mer-ne-Ptah.

I

Year 3, 1ST MONTH OF THE 3RD SEASON, DAY 15. The Guardsman Baal-roy, son of Zipper, of Gaza, went up,* who had two different despatches for Syria:† the Commander of the Garrison Khay, one despatch; the Prince of Tyre Baal-termeg, another despatch.

II

(4) Year 3, 1ST MONTH OF THE 3RD SEASON, DAY 17. The Chief of Bowmen of the Wells of Mer-ne- Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat—life, prosperity, health—which is (on) the mountain range,§ arrived for a (judicial) investigation in the fortress which is in Sile.¶

III

(6) Year 3, 1ST MONTH OF THE 3RD SEASON, DAY 22. The Guardsman Thuti, son of Tjekrem, of Gaza, came, in company with Tjedet, son of Shemu-Baal, of ditto, and Seth-mose, son of Apar-dagal, of ditto, who had with him, for the place where One was, (for) the Commander of the Garrison Khay, gifts and one despatch.¶

(V 1) THERE WENT UP the Guardsman Nakht-Amon, son of Tjer, of the Castle of Mer-ne- Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat—life, prosperity, health,‖ which is near Sar-ram, who had with him two different despatches for Syria: the Commander of the Garrison Pen-Amon, one despatch; the Steward (of) this town Ramses-nakht, one despatch.

(4) THERE CAME the Overseer of the Stable of the town Mer-ne- Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat—life, prosperity, health!—which is in the district of the Arem,²² Pa-mer-khetem, son of Ani, who had with him two different despatches for the place where One was: the Commander of the Garrison Pa-Re-em-heb, one despatch; the Deputy Pa-Re-em-heb, one despatch.²³

IV

The Report of a Frontier Official

In a group of letters which served as models for schoolboys, one communication presents the form in which an official on the eastern frontier of Egypt might report the passage of Asiatic tribes into the better pasturage of the Delta.

Papyrus Anastasi VI (British Museum 10245), lines 51-61 (= iv 11-v 5), of the late Nineteenth Dynasty (end of the 13th century B.C.) and presumably from Memphis. Facsimiled in Select Papyri in the Hieratic Character from the Collections of the British Museum, in (London, 1844), Pls. cxxv-cxxvi. Transcription into hieroglyphic by A. H. Gardiner, Late Egyptian Miscellanies (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, VII, Brussels, 1937), 66-67. Translated by Erman, LÆ, 198-99, and an extract by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, vi (1920), 109-10.

The Chief of Bowmen of Tjeku,³ Ka-Kem-wer, to the Chief of Bowmen Ani and the Chief of Bowmen Bak-en-Pth:

In life, prosperity, health! In the favor of Amon-Re, King of the Gods, and of the of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: User-kheperu-Re Setep-en-Re—life, prosperity, health!—our good lord—life, prosperity, health! I say to (ix 5) the Re-Har-akhti: "Keep Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—our good lord—life, prosperity, health!—in health! Let him celebrate millions of jubilees, while we are in his favor daily!"

Another matter, to wit: I was sent forth from the broad-halls of the palace—life, prosperity, health!—in the 3rd month of the third season, day 9, at the time of evening, following after these two slaves. Now when I reached the enclosure-wall of Tjeku on the 3rd month of the third season, day 10, they told [me] they were saying to the south that they had passed by on the 3rd month of the third season, day 10.³⁹ (xx 1) [Now] when [I] reached the fortress, they told me that the scorf had come from the desert [saying that] they had passed the walled place north of the Migdol of Seti Mer-ne-Pth—life, prosperity, health!—Beloved like Seth.

When my letter reaches you, write to me about all that has happened to [them]. Who found their tracks? What people are after them? Write to me about all that has happened to them and how many people you send out after them.³⁰ [May your health] be good!

¹ Or Teks. Probably not Succoth. Gardiner (JEA vi [1920], 109) locates it at Tell el-Maskhuteh in the Wadi Tumilat. It seems more likely that it is not yet identifiable, and it may be generally equivalent to the Wadi Tumilat.
² Seti II (about 1222-1212 B.C.).
³ About 1220 B.C., this date would fall in the month of May.
⁴ For the Egyptian word bêt as "slave," rather than "servant," cf. JEA, xxiv (1939), 26, n.1; 73-74.
⁵ The slaves. The two preceding uses of "they" are impersonal.
⁶ Thus on the same day, but, on rumor, further south.
⁷ Perhaps the frontier fortress of Sile, near modern Kantarah.
⁸ This word maskur or may be read as "maur". In the present context it might be emended to a noun based on the Hebrew word shamar "watch, guard."
⁹ For the location of this Migdol at Tell el-Her in Sinai and about a dozen miles northeast of Sile, see Gardiner in JEA, vi (1920), 109-10.
¹⁰ Since Ani and Bak-en-Pth seem to be still in pursuit of the slaves, these officers may have been located in Asia.
A Syrian Interregnum

For an unknown number of years between the Nineteenth and Twentieth Dynasties Egypt was in a chaotic state and for a part of the time was under the rule of a Syrian. All that we know of this episode comes from the following text.

The Great Papyrus Harris comes from Thebes and dates to the end of the reign of Ramses III (about 1164 B.C.), forming a kind of last will and testament for him. The troubles which he here describes lay between the reign of the last king of the Nineteenth Dynasty (about 1205 B.C.) and the beginning of the reign of Ramses III’s father, Set-nakht (about 1197 B.C.).

SAID King User-maat-Re Meri-Amon—life, prosperity, health!—the great god, to the officials and leaders of the land, the infantry, the chariotry, the Sherden, the many bowmen, and all the souls of Egypt:

Hear ye, that I may make you aware of my benevolence which I have accomplished while I was king of the people. The land of Egypt had been cast aside, with every man being his own standard of right. They had no chief spokesman for many years previously up to other times. The land of Egypt was officials and mayors, one slaying his fellow, both exalted and lowly. Other times came afterwards in the empty years, and . . . a Syrian (5) with them, made himself prince. He set the entire land as tributary before him. One joined his companion that their property might be plundered. They treated the gods like the people, and no offerings were presented in the temples.

But when the gods reversed themselves to show mercy and to set the land right as was its normal state, they established their son, who had come forth from their body, to be Ruler—life, prosperity, health!—of every land, upon their great throne: User-kha-Re Setep-en-Re Meri-Amon—life, prosperity, health!—the Son of Re: Set-nakht Merer-Re Meri-Amon—life, prosperity, health! He was Khepri-Seth when he was enraged. He brought to order the entire land, which had been rebellious. He slew the disaffected of heart who had been in Egypt. He cleansed the great throne of Egypt. 1

1 Ramses III (about 1195-1164 B.C.).
2 The epithet normally means that the king is already dead. For the thesis that Papyrus Harris was actually promulgated by Ramses IV in the name of his father Ramses III, see W. Struve, in Aegyptus, vn (1926), 5.
3 Egyptian captives or mercenary troops, coming from the Mediterranean area. cf. p. 255, n.2.
4 That is, broken down under local rule only, without king or other central government.
5 Either years void of orderly rule, or years of emptiness, i.e. of economic distress.
6 This translation treats the text on the assumption that the actual name of the Syrian has dropped out, leaving only the determinatives which show a foreigner. Alternatively, instead of translating "made himself," one may treat these elements as a proper name and read: "and Issu, a Syrian, was with them as prince." In either case, the rule of an otherwise unknown Syrian ("Horite") is certain.

From the Lists of Ramses III

The course of the Egyptian Empire was marked by a rapid increase in the wealth and power of the Egyptian temples. We have a kind of testamentary enactment of Ramses III (about 1195-1164 B.C.) of the Twentieth Dynasty stating the accumulated properties of the temples through his benefactions. One authority has estimated that at the close of this pharaoh’s reign the temples owned about 20% of the population of Egypt as serfs and about 30% of the arable land. Our interest in the long document will be confined to the indications of Egyptian contacts with Asia.

Papyrus Harris I (British Museum 10053), edited by S. Birch in Facsimile of an Egyptian Hieratic Papyrus of the Reign of Rameses III, now in the British Museum (London, 1876). Transcribed into hieroglyphic by W. Erichsen, Papyrus Harris I (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, v, Brussels, 1933). Translated by Birch, AR, iv, §§151-412. The extracts given below, with the §§ of Birch’s translation are: (a) activity on the Mediterranean: Papyrus Harris vii 8—Birch, §§211; xxix 1—§270; (b) temple in Asia: ix 1-3—§219; (c) towns of Amon’s estate: xi 10-11—§226; lxviii iv 1-2—§384; (d) serfs of the temples: viii 9—§217; x 15—§225; xxx 2—§278; xxxi 8—§281; xlvii 6—§322; lia 9—§338; (e) temple cattle: xvb 8—§299; ix 10—§387; (f) temple grain: xxxva 10—§387; lii 7—§344; lxix 1—§391; (g) temple oil: xva 4-6—§233; lixic 11-12—§376; (h) temple cedar: xvb 12-13—§234; liia 12—§345; lxva 14—§379; lxix 11—§391; (ii) summary of northern wars: lxvii 6-11—§403-04.

A. ACTIVITY ON THE MEDITERRANEAN

Section for Amon of Thebes (xxix 1) I made for thee qerer-ships and menesh-ships, outfitted with men, in order to transport the goods of God’s Land to thy treasury and thy storehouse.

Section for Ptah of Memphis (xlvi 6) I made for thee qerer-ships and menesh-ships in the midst of the Great Green Sea, outfitted with crews of menesh-ships in abundant number, in order to transport the goods of God’s Land and the dues of the land of Djahi to thy great treasuries of thy city Memphis.

B. TEMPLE OF AMON IN ASIA

(ix 1) I built for thee a mysterious house in the land of Djahi, like the horizon of heaven which is in the

1 Ramses III (about 1195-1164 B.C.).
2 The epithet normally means that the king is already dead. For the thesis that Papyrus Harris was actually promulgated by Ramses IV in the name of his father Ramses III, see W. Struve, in Aegyptus, vn (1926), 57. However, the true meaning of the lists is still in debate, and the number of unknown factors is large. Birch, op.cit., §§166-67, estimated that the temples owned 2% of the people and 15% of the land.
3 Three separate types of ships, perhaps all cargo vessels capable of sea travel.
4 Djahi here clearly includes “the Canaan” and is an area to which the people of Retenu (the Syrian-Palestinian highland) normally would come. One may point to a settlement of Ramses III at Beth-Shan in Palestine, but this may have been of several such settlements; see A. Rowe, The Topography and History of Beth-Shan (Philadelphia, 1930), 38 ff.
sky, (named) "the House of Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis—life, prosperity, health!—in the Canaan," as the vested property of thy name. I fashioned thy great cult image which rests in it, (named) "Amon of Ramses-Ruler-of-Heliopolis—life, prosperity, health!" The foreigners of Retenu come to it, bearing their tribute before it, according as it is divine.

C. TOWNS OF AMON'S ESTATE

Theban Section
(xii 10) Towns of Egypt 56

Towns of Syria and Ethiopia 9

TOTAL 65

Summarizing Section
(xiiiia 1) Towns of Egypt 160

Towns of Syria 9

TOTAL 169

D. SERFS OF THE TEMPLES

Theban Section
(viii 9) I fashioned thy august cult image I filled its house with male and female slaves whom I had carried off from the lands of the Asians.

(x 15) Syrians and Negroes of the captivity of his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—whom he gave to the House of Amon-Re, King of the Gods, the House of Mut, and the House of Khonsu: 2,607 cases.7

Heliopolitan Section

(xxi 2) I made for thee a fresh foundation from the many classes whose sons I carried off to thy house, (named) "Taking the Others."8

(xxi 8) Warriors, sons of (foreign) princes, mary-anu, apiru? and people settled who are in this place: 2,093 persons.7

Memphite Section

(xlivii 10) I made for thee workshops for the Feasts of Epiphany in thy divine house. They were built upon a ground effected with labor. I filled them with slaves whom I had carried off in captivity, in order to serve thy divine offerings, full and pure, in order to provision the House of Ptah with food and supplies, and in order to double what was before thee, O South-of-His-Wall! Thy Ennead is content of heart and gay over them.

(lia 0) Syrians and Negroes of the captivity of his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—whom he gave to the House of Ptah: 205 cases.7

E. TEMPLE CATTLE

Theban Section

(xiib 8) Oxen, steers, various long-horns, short-horns, and cattle from the dues of the lands of Syria: 19.9

Memphite Section

(liia 7) Syrian grain: 40 hekat.12

Small Temples Section

(liii 10) Oxen, steers, various long-horns, short-horns, and cattle from the dues of the lands of Syria: 19.

F. TEMPLE GRAIN

Heliopolitan Section

(xxxiva 10) Syrian grain: 5 hekat.12

Memphite Section

(liixa 7) Syrian grain: 40 hekat.12

G. TEMPLE OIL

Theban Section

(xva 4) Oil of Egypt: 2,743 \textit{w\textsuperscript{2}}-measures.14

Oil of Syria: 53 mesekji-measures.14

Oil of Syria: 1,757 \textit{w\textsuperscript{2}}-measures.

Small Temples Section

(liixic 11) Oil of Egypt: 513 \textit{w\textsuperscript{2}}-measures.

Oil of Syria: 542 \textit{w\textsuperscript{2}}-measures.

H. TEMPLE CEDAR

Theban Section

(xvb 12) Slabs of cedar: 6.15

A mast of cedar: 1.16

Memphite Section

(liia 12) Beams of cedar: 8.16
Summarizing Section

(Ixxa 14) Various logs of cedar: 351.

1. SUMMARY OF NORTHERN WARS

I extended all the frontiers of Egypt and overthrew those who had attacked them from their (lxvi17) lands. I slew the Denyen in their islands, while the Tjeker and the Philistines were made ashes. The Sherden and the Weshesh of the Sea were made nonexistent, captured all together and brought in captivity to Egypt like the sands of the shore.28 I settled them in strongholds, bound in my name.19 Their military classes were as numerous as hundred-thousands. I assigned portions to them all with clothing and provisions from the treasuries and granaries every year.20

I destroyed the people of Seir among the Bedouin tribes.21 I razed their tents: their people, their property, and their cattle as well, without number, pinioned and carried away in captivity, as the tribute of Egypt. I gave them to the Ennead of the gods, as slaves for their lands, displacing or merging with the older populations. These followed accounts of this war come from Ramses Ill’s temple of Medinet Habu at Thebes.

The texts were published by the Epigraphic Expedition,3 (1946) 251-62. The reference is to Ramses III’s war against the Sea Peoples in his eighth year; cf. pp. 262-263 below. For the Tjeker, cf. the Wen-Amon story (p. 26, n.5 above). The Denyen (Danaoi), the Sherden (Sardiants?), and the Weshesh (Wasasa?) were also participants in this great restlessness on the eastern Mediterranean in the latter half of the 2nd millennium B.C.

21 Foreign captives were branded with the name of pharaoh. cf. Breasted, op.cit., §409; The Epigraphic Survey, Earlier Historical Records of Ramses III (Medinet Habu, 1, OIP, vm, Chicago, 1930), Pl. 4.4

Not: “I taxed diem all with,” etc. Foreign captives were not tax-worthy, but did need food and clothing from the state stores.

22 It is interesting that Ramses III’s only statement here of a campaign against Semitic peoples deals with the nomads of the region to the south of the Dead Sea. His scenes depicting campaigns into Syria-Palestine on the walls of his temple of Medinet Habu may all be pious or propagandistic forgeries—The Epigraphic Survey, Later Historical Records of Ramses III (Medinet Habu, n. OIP, ix, Chicago, 1932), Pis. 87-90; cf. Edgerton and J. A. Wilson, Historical Records of Ramses III (SAOC, 12, Chicago, 1936); 94. n.3b. Ramses III did have a temple at Beth-Shan and did have relations with Megiddo (p. 165 below), but he may have been unable to campaign north of Palestine, and he may have held garrison posts in Palestine without fighting. The complete collapse of the Egyptian Empire in Asia seems to have come shortly after his reign.

The War Against the Peoples of the Sea

In the latter half of the second millennium B.C. there were extensive movements in the eastern Mediterranean area. Masses of homeless peoples moved slowly across the sea and its coastlands, displacing or merging with the older populations. These migrations ended the Minoan civilization in Crete, contributed to the historical populations of Greece and Italy, wiped out the Hittite Empire, thrust the Philistines into Canaan, and washed up on the shores of Egypt. In Ramses III’s eighth year (about 1288 B.C.) the pharaoh met and checked their attempt to push into the rich lands of the Nile. The victory was only a check, but served to set up in one place in Amor.1 They desolated its people, and its land was like that which has never come into being. They were coming forward toward Egypt, while the flame was prepared before them. Their confederation was the Philistines, Tjeker, Shekelesh, Denye(n), and Weshesh,2 lands united. They laid their hands upon the lands as far as the circuit of the earth, their hearts confident and trusting: “Our plans will succeed!”

Now the heart of this god, the Lord of the Gods, was prepared and ready to ensnare them like birds—organized my frontier in Djahi,3 prepared before them:—princes, commanders of garrisons, (20) and meryanu.4 I have the river-mouths5 prepared like a strong wall, with warships, galleys and coasters, (fully) equipped, for they were manned completely from bow to stern with valiant warriors carrying their weapons. The troops consisted of every picked man of Egypt. They were like lions roaming upon the mountain tops. The chariots consisted of runners, of picked men, of every good and capable chariot-wrrior. The horses were quivering in every part of their bodies, prepared to crush the foreign countries under their hoofs. I was the valiant Montu,7 standing fast at their head, so that they might gaze upon the capturing of my hands....

Those who reached my frontier, their seed is not, their heart and their soul are finished forever and ever. Those who came forward together on the sea, the full

(1) Year 8 under the majesty of (Ramses III) (16) ... The foreign countries made a conspiracy in their islands. All at once the lands were removed and scattered in the fray. No land could stand before their arms, from Hatti, Kode, Carchemish, Arzawa, and Alashiya on, being cut off at [one time]. A camp [was set up] in one place in Amor.1 They desolated its people, and its land was like that which has never come into being. They were coming forward toward Egypt, while the flame was prepared before them. Their confederation was the Philistines, Tjeker, Shekelesh, Denye(n), and Weshesh,2 lands united. They laid their hands upon the lands as far as the circuit of the earth, their hearts confident and trusting: “Our plans will succeed!”

1 Hatti was the Hittite Empire, Kode the coast of Cilicia and northern Syria, Carchemish the city on the Euphrates, Arzawa somewhere in or near Cilicia, and Alashiya probably Cyprus.

2 Perhaps in the north Syrian plain or in Coele-Syria.

3 Except for the Philistines (Peleetes), these names are rendered close to the Egyptian writings. For the Tjeker, cf. the Wen-Amon story (pp. 25-29 above). The Shekelesh might be the Siculi, the Denyen (cuneiform Danausa) might be the Danaoi. The Weshesh cannot easily be related to any other people, cf. G. Bonfante, Who were the Philistines?, in AJA, L (1946) 251-62.

4 The Phoenician coast, running down into Palestine. From what little we know of Ramses III’s sway, his defensive frontier was not north of Palestine. It is possible that the land battle against the Peoples of the Sea was in Asia, whereas the sea battle was on the coast of Egypt; cf. n.6 below.

5 From its pictured determinative, the word “princes” meant Asians. The meryanu were Asiatic warriors; see p. 22, n.2.

6 Normally used for the mouths of the branches of the Nile in the Delta. Hence probably the line of defense in Egypt. Just possibly, the word might have been extended to harbories on the Asiatic coast.

7 The Egyptian god of war.
flame was in front of them at the river-mouths, while a stockade of lances surrounded them on the shore. They were dragged in, enclosed, and prostrated on the head. Their ships and their goods were as if fallen into the water.

I have made the lands turn back from (even) mentioning Egypt; for when they pronounce my name in their land, then (25) they are burned up. Since I sat upon the throne of Har-akhti and the Great-of-Magic was fixed upon my head like Re, I have not let foreign countries behold the frontier of Egypt, to boast thereof to the Nine Bows. I have taken away their land, their frontiers being added to mine. Their princes and their tribespeople are mine with praise, for I am on the ways of the plans of the All-Lord, my august, divine father, the Lord of the Gods.

b

(51) . . . The northern countries quivered in their bodies, the Philistines, Tjekker, and . . . . They cut off their own land and were coming, their soul finished. They were warriors on land; another (group) was on the sea. Those who came on land were overthrown and filled . . . . Amon-Re was after them, destroying them. Those who entered the river-mouths were like birds ensnared in the net . . . . Their leaders were carried off and slain. They were cast down and pinioned....

c

This is a scene showing Ramses III and his troops on the march against the Peoples of the Sea. It moves forward into a scene (Pl. 32 of the publication), in which the pharaoh is engaged in a land battle with the invaders. The logic of this arrangement is that the land battle was in Djahi.

His majesty sets out for Djahi, like unto Montu, to crush every foreign country that violates his frontier. His troops are like bulls ready upon the field of battle; his horses are like falcons in the midst of small birds

d

This scene shows a naval battle, in which the Egyptian ships grapple with the vessels of the Sea Peoples, while the pharaoh and his land troops fight from the shore.

Now then, the northern countries which were in their islands were quivering in their bodies. They penetrated the channels of the river-mouths. Their nostrils have ceased (to function, so) their desire is to breathe the breath. His majesty has gone forth like a whirlwind against them, fighting on the battlefield like a runner. The dread of him and the terror of him have entered into their bodies. They are capsized and overwhelmed where they are. Their heart is taken away, their soul is flown away. Their weapons are scattered upon the sea. His arrow pierces whom of them he may have wished, and the fugitive is become one fallen into the water. His majesty is like an enraged lion, attacking his assailant with his arms: plundering on his right hand and powerful on his left hand, like Seth destroying the serpent "Evil of Character." It is Amon-Re who has overthrown for him the lands and has crushed for him every land under his feet

The Megiddo Ivories

A large collection of Phoenician ivories was found by excavation in a palace at Megiddo in Palestine. The carved designs were cosmopolitanly derived from various culture areas of the ancient Near East. The excavator tentatively dates the manufacture of the pieces between 1350 and 1150 B.C. Among the ivories are five bearing Egyptian hieroglyphs. A model pen case of an Egyptian envoy to foreign countries bears the name of Ramses III (about 1195-1164 B.C.), setting the terminus ad quem for the collection. The ivories were published by G. Loud, The Megiddo Ivories (OIP, III, Chicago, 1939), with a translation of the hieroglyphic inscriptions by J. A. Wilson on pp. 11-13. Photographs of the Egyptian pieces appear on Pls. 62-63. Three plaques, which may have been used for inlay in furniture, bear the name of the Singer of Ptah, South-of-His-Wall, Lord of the Life of the Two Lands, and Great Prince of Ashkelon, Kerker.

Kerker (or Kurkur or Kulkul) seems to have been a woman priestess at the court of Byblos in the Wen-Amon story (pp. 28, n.39: 246, n.30, above). The first two of Ptah's titles apply to his cult-home at Memphis in Egypt, the third—"Great Prince of Ashkelon"—implies a cult-seat at that Palestinian city.* For the relations of Egypt and Asia about 1100 B.C., see the Journey of Wen-Amon to Phoenicia (pp. 25-29 above).

The Campaign of Sheshonk I

Sheshonk I (about 945-924 B.C.) is the Shishak of the Old Testament. It is disappointing to find that the Egyptian texts do not enlarge our understanding of his campaign in Palestine in a sense which constitutes a real addition to the biblical account. To be sure, he has left us a listing of the Palestinian and Syrian towns which he claimed to have conquered, and this list may be reconstructed into a kind of itinerary. There is, however, no narrative account of the campaign by the pharaoh. The references in his inscriptions to "tribute of the land of Syria" or to his victories over the "Asiatics of distant foreign countries" are vague and generalized. How unhistorical his large claims were is clear from a statement to the pharaoh by the god Amon: "I have subjugated [for] thee the Asiatics of the armies of

---

* See pp. 242-243 above. For the reconstruction of a possible itinerary, see A. T. Olmstead, History of Palestine and Syria (New York, 1931), 354-56. See also S. Yeivin, JEAL (1962), 75-80.
Mitanni. Mitanni as a nation had ceased to exist at least four centuries earlier.

In addition to the list of towns, we do possess two documents attesting the name of Sheshonk on Asiatic soil. At Megiddo in Palestine was found a fragment of a monumental stela bearing the name of Sheshonk I and permitting the conclusion that the pharaoh had set up a triumphal monument there. At Byblos in Phoenicia another fragment, this time the chair of a seated statue, bears his name, although this monument may well be a princely gift, rather than a symbol of conquest.

Finally, the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore has a basalt statuette of an Egyptian, the "Envoy of the Canaan and of Palestine, Pa-di-Eset, the son of Apy," which may date to the Twenty-second Dynasty. This piece does not involve conquest, but rather diplomatic relations.

1 J. Lammeyer, Das Siegessedkmal des Königs Scheschonk (*= Karna) (Neuss a. Rhein, 1907), 29. This text and the list noted above are treated by Breasted, AR, iv, 709-22, where additional bibliography will be found.
2 R. S. Lamon and G. M. Shipton, Megiddo 1 (OIP, xlii, Chicago, 1939), 60-61.
3 R. Dussaud in Syria, v (1924), 145-47.
4 G. Steindorff in JEA, xxv (1939), 30-33, pl. vn. Steindorff points out that the father's name may be Canaanite in origin.
Texts from the Beginnings to the First Dynasty of Babylon

For this section, two documents have been selected to illustrate the content and the stylistic features of early Mesopotamian historiography, while two groups of texts have been translated to represent the historical source material, which is rather rare in this period.

The texts of the first part are: (1) an excerpt of the Sumerian King List, and (2) the Sargon Chronicle. The second part contains: (1) two inscriptions from statues of Sargon IV. Agade, (2) an excerpt from an inscription of Naram-Sin, and (3) excerpts from three inscriptions of the well-known Gudea of Lagash.

HISTORIOGRAPHIC DOCUMENTS

I. THE SUMERIAN KING LIST

In his book The Sumerian King List (AS, No. 11), Thorkild Jacobsen offers not only a critical edition of the entire text material¹ and an excellent translation,² but also critical examination of all textual, stylistic, and historical problems involved. On the basis of a systematic study of the numerous variant readings, Jacobsen has shown that all extant "manuscripts" go back to one single original written at the time of Utu-hegal, king of Uruk, the liberator of Sumer from the yoke of the Gutian domination. To demonstrate that his country had always been united under one king—though these kings were ruling successively in different capitals—the learned and patriotic author compiled this interesting document from two types of literary sources: from lists containing the names of the kings, the places and the lengths of their rules (established originally for practical chronological purposes), and from epical texts, legendary stories, local anecdotic traditions, etc., dealing with the biography and the marvelous deeds of some of these primeval kings. This literary material is referred to in very succinct sentences scattered throughout the monotonous enumeration of royal names, figures, and place names. To this opus has later been added a section dealing with the events before the Flood. This "preamble" has an entirely different literary background³ and does not appear in all manuscripts.

The entire text material has been utilized by Thorkild Jacobsen (The Sumerian King List) to establish a "standard version" of this document on the basis of the most extensive "manuscript" published by S. Langdon from the Weld-Blundell Collection (= Oxford Edition of Cuneiform Texts, Vol. 11 [Oxford, 1923]), No. 1923, 444, pp. 13 S. and Pis. I-IV.

The following translation contains lines i—iv 5 with the "ante-diluvian" preamble (cf. above) and the historical survey from the beginnings to the end of the First Dynasty of Ur. This section has been selected because it contains the names of the kings who ruled for an excessive length of time as well as nearly all the passages of mythological and literary interest.

When kingship was lowered from heaven, kingship was (first) in Eridu. (In) Eridu, A-lulim⁴ (became) king and ruled 28,800 years. Alalgar ruled 36,000 years. Two kings (thus) ruled it for 64,800 years.

I drop (the topic) Eridu (because) its kingship was brought to Bad-tibira. (In) Bad-tibira, En-men-Lu-Anna ruled 42,200 years; En-men-gal-Anna ruled 28,800 years; the god Dumu-zi, a shepherd, ruled 36,000 years. Three kings (thus) ruled it for 108,000 years.

I drop (the topic) Bad-tibira (because) its kingship was brought to Larak. (In) Larak, En-sipa-zí-Anna ruled 28,800 years. One king (thus) ruled it for 28,800 years.

I drop (the topic) Larak (because) its kingship was brought to Sippar. (In) Sippar, En-men-dur-Anna became king and ruled 21,000 years. One king (thus) ruled it for 21,000 years.

I drop (the topic) Sippar (because) its kingship was brought to Shuruppak. (In) Shuruppak, Ubar-Tutu became king and ruled 18,600 years. One king (thus) ruled it for 18,600 years.

These are five cities, eight kings ruled them for 241,000 years. (Then) the Flood swept over (the earth).

After the Flood had swept over (the earth) (and) when kingship was lowered (again) from heaven, kingship was (first) in Kish. In Kish, Ga[ . . . ] ur became king and ruled 1,200 years (original) destroyed! legible (only) to heavenly Nidaba (the goddess of writing) —ruled 960 years. [Pala-]kinatim ruled 900 years; Nan-gish-lshma ruled . . . years;⁵ Bah[i]na ruled . . . years; BU.AN. . . . [um] ruled [8,40] ye[ars]; Kalibum ruled 960 years; Qalumum ruled 840 years; Zuqripp ruled 900 years; Atab ruled 600 years; [Mas]hda, son⁶ of Atab ruled 840 years; Arwi'um, son of Mashda, ruled 720 years; Etana, a shepherd, he who ascended to heaven (and) who consolidated all countries, became king and ruled 1,560 (var.: 1,500) years; Balih, son of Etana, ruled 400 (var.: 410) years; En-me-nunna ruled 660 years; Melam-Kishi, son of En-me-nunna ruled 900 years; Bar-sal-nunna, son of En-me-nunna, ruled 1,200 years; Samug, son of Bar-sal-nunna, ruled 140 years; Tizkar, son of Samug, ruled 350 years; Ilku' ruled 900 years; Illa-sadum ruled 1,200 years; En-men-barage-si, he who carried away as spoil the "weapon" of Elam, became king and ruled 900 years; Aka, son of En-men-barage-si, ruled 620 years. Twenty-three kings (thus) ruled it for 24,510 years, 3 months, and 7 days.

¹ An additional text has been published since by V. Scheil, Liste susienne des dynasties de Sumer-Accad, in Mémoires, irrat. franc. d'archiol. orientale . . . du Caire, LXII (1934), (=Melanges Maspero, 1), 393-400.
² My translation differs only slightly and in minor points from that of T. Jacobsen.
⁵ For a late (Neo-Assyrian) reference to this first king of Mesopotamia, cf. my note in BASOR, 97 (1944), 16-27.
⁶ The passage in square brackets does not appear in the Weld-Blundell text.
Kish was defeated in battle (lit.: was smitten with weapons), its kingship was removed to Eanna (sacred precinct of Uruk).

In Eanna, Mes-kiaq-gasher, the son of the (sun) god Utu, became high priest as well as king, and ruled 324 years. Mes-kiaq-gasher went (daily) into the (Western) Sea and came forth toward the (Sunrise) Mountains; En-me-ker, son of Mes-kiaq-gasher, who built Uruk, became king and ruled 420 years; the god Lugalbanda, a shepherd, ruled 1,200 years; the god Dumu-zi, a su.PES-fisherman—his (native) city was Ku'a(r)a,—ruled 100 years; the divine Gilgamesh, his father was a ///,8 a high priest of Kullab, ruled 126 years; Ur-Nungal (var.: Ur-lugal), son of Gilgamesh, ruled 30 years; Utul-kalamma, son of Ur-nun-gal (var.: Ur-lugal), ruled 15 years; Labafh ... jir ruled 9 years; En-nun-dara-Anna ruled 8 years; MES(?)HE, a smith, ruled 36 years; Melam-Anna ruled 6 years; Lugal-ki-tun(P) ruled 36 years. Twelve kings (thus) ruled it for 2,310 years.

Uruk was defeated in battle, its kingship was removed to Ur.

In Ur, Mes-Anne-pada became king, ruled 869 years; Mes-kiaq-Nanna9 became king, ruled 36 years; Elulu ruled 25 years; Balulu ruled 36 years. Four kings (thus) ruled it for 177 years. Ur was defeated in battle.

2. THE "SARGON CHRONICLE"

While in the Sumerian King List the references to legendary, pseudo-historical, and historical traditions occur only sporadically and are subordinated to the chronological framework elaborated by the author, here they have overgrown the basically annalistic structure in a type of chronicle to be represented by two tablets of the same series. This literary work centers its attention around the most interesting of the historical figures and reports their outstanding achievements in peace and war with special regard to the unique and the memorable. Important events in neighboring countries as well as foreign invasions are recorded from time to time. For a literary evaluation of this document, cf. H. G. Guterbock, ZA, XLII (NF VIII), 1 ff.

a

Sargon (Sarru^-en), king of Agade, rose (to power) in the era of Ishtar10 and had neither rival nor opponent. He spread his terror-inspiring glamor over all the countries. He crossed the Sea in the East and he, himself, conquered the country of the West, in its full extent, in the nth year (of his rule). He established there a central government (lit.: he made its mouth be one). He erected his stelae in the West. Their booty (i.e. the booty of the countries in the Eastern and Western Seas) he ferried over on rafts. He made his court officials live (around his residence, thus covering an area) of five double-miles, and held sway over the totality of the countries, without exception.

He marched against the country of Kazalla8 and turned Kazalla into ruin-hills and heaps (of rubble).9 He (even) destroyed (there every possible) perching place for a bird.

Afterwards, in his old age, all the countries revolted against him and they besieged him in Agade. (But) Sargon made an armed sortie and defeated them, knocked them over, and crushed their vast army.

Later on, Subartu9 rose with its multitudes, but it bowed to his military might. Sargon made sedentary this nomadic society.2 Their possessions he brought into Agade. He took away from the (foundation-) pits8 of Babylon and he built upon it a(nother) Babylon beside the town of Agade. On account of the sacrilege he (thus) committed, the great lord Marduk became enraged and destroyed his people by hunger. From the East to the West he alienated them (from him) as (punishment) that he could not rest (in his grave).8

Naram-Sin, son of Sargon, marched against the town of Apishal2 and made a breach (in its wall to conquer it). He personally caught Rish-Adad, king of Apishal, and the su^-al of Apishal. He (also) marched against the country Magan and personally caught Mannu-dannu, king of Magan.9

Shulgi,10 son of Ur-Nammu, took very good care of the town of Eridu which is on the seashore (but) he had evil intentions and he removed the property of the 8 The British Museum text K 2130, a collection of hebtopsistic omen referring to historical events and personalities (first published in Rawlinson, Vol. iv, Pl. 34, No. 1), gives the name of the king of Kazalla, to wit: Kashubila.

9 For this translation of the well-known nouns tillu u ụruru cf. E. F. Weidner in Melanges syriens, ii, 924, n.5.

5 My translation differs from the usual by emending the vertical wedge before =Su-bi=,4. The use of the verbs tebu u ụruru fits much better into the thus corrected phrase, and so does the word gipiu, which normally describes an unorganized army and therefore seems more likely to refer to the army of Subartu than to that of Sargon. The lines 15-16 (obitra-iru im-has ụmar-la-ru ku-em) have been omitted as an erroneous repetition of lines 12-13.

7 Conjunctural translation, text in disorder.

8 This translation (and its parallel in the so-called “Weidner-Chronicle,” cf. H. G. Guterbock, ZA, XLII (NF vrn.), 47 ff., rev. 17) has been lately elucidated by Guterbock, in AFO, xii (1940-41), 50, who connected it with isšāk “pit.” The passage seems therefore to suggest that the contents (clean earth and sand) of the well-known deep pits under the emplacements of the images were considered endowed with the very essence of the “holiness” which pervaded the image, its temple, and its sacred city.

9 The subject of all three verbs is necessarily MARDUK.

10 For this punishment, cf. lately E. F. Weidner, AFO, xm (1940-41), 236, n.26.

13 For the still uncertain reading of this name of the second king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, formerly often read Dungi, cf. T. Jacobsen, in BASOR, 102 (1947), 16 ff., where the transliteration ŠÁ.G is proposed.
temple Esagila and of Babylon sacrilegiously. Bel became angry and his corpse (i.e. of Shulgi) he (illegible) him.

Irra-imitti, the king, installed Bel-ibni, the gardener, on his throne as a "substitute king" and he (Irra-imitti) (even) placed his own royal crown on his (Le. Bel-ibni's) head. (During the ceremonial rule of Bel-ibni) Irra-imitti died in his palace while sip[ping] hot porridge, and Bel-ibni who was (still) sitting on the throne did not rise (any more), he (thus) was elevated to (real) kingship.

Catchline: Ilishuma was king of Assyria in the time of Su(mu)abu (king of Babylon) 10

Continuation of the preceding text on tablet British Museum 96,152, published by King, opcit., pp. 121-127; transliteration and translation: opcit., pp. 17 if. and Ebeling, AOT, 337.

(obverse 8—reverse 17) Hammurabi, king of Babylon, called up his army and marched against Rim-Sin, king of Ur. He personally conquered Ur and Larsa, he took their possessions to Babylon. The ... of ... he threw down, the [booty of ...] he carried away.

[Samsuiluna, son of Hammurabi,] king of Babylon, son of Ha[mmurabi], the king, [did ...], his army he called up and ... Rim-Sin ... he marched. He personally conquered [Ur and Larsa]; [he caught] him alive in the palace. ... He marched [against ...] and laid siege ... its inhabitants. ... (end of obverse and beginning of reverse destroyed) [Ili-ima-ilum ... water, he built... and made an attack (end of obverse and beginning of reverse destroyed) on the Tigris; [he actually dammed up the Tigris, but he ...]

Sargon, king of Agade, called up his army and marched against Ilima-ilum. [Ilima-ilum ...] water, he built... and made an attack (end of obverse and beginning of reverse destroyed).

Abishi ( = Abieshuh), son of Samsuiluna, did — to defeat Ilima-ilum and he had the idea of damming up the Tigris; he actually dammed up the Tigris, but he did not [catch] Ilima-ilum.

In the time of Samsuditana, the country of Hatti [marched] against Akkad. 14 Ea-gamil, king of the Sea-Country, [marched] against Elam.

After him, Ulamburiash, brother of Kashtiliash, of the country of the Kassites, called up his army and conquered the Sea-Country. He held (thus) sway over the (entire) country.

Agum, son of Kashtiliash, called up his army and marched against the Sea-Country. He conquered the town Dur-Ea. He demolished the temple e. e.g a r a. u r u n a 16 of Ea in Dur-Ea.

HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS

I. SARGON OF AGADE

The tablet is large, with 14 columns on either side, containing copies of inscriptions on votive objects and statues set up in the temple Ekur in Nippur. According to its paleographic features, the tablet was written soon after the rule of the Dynasty of Agade. The inscriptions are those of Lugalzaggesi, king of Ur. and of Sargon, Rimush, Mankindus, kings of Agade. Two fragments of this tablet have been successively published by A. Poebel in Historical and Grammatical Texts (Philadelphia, 1914, UM, v), Pl. xx, No. 34, and by G. L. Legrain, The Museum Journal (University of Pennsylvania), xiv (1923), 203 ff. Figs. 42-44. Transliterations and translations: Poebel (UM, iv), 173 ff., Legrain (UM, xiv), 12 ff.; G. A. Barton, The Royal Inscriptions of Sumer and A(l) (New Haven, 1929), pp. 101 ff. (Inscription AB). Latest translation of v-vi 5-52, Ebeling, AOT, 338.

(ii-i 1—iii-iv 44)

Sargon, king of Agade, overseer of Ishtar, king of Kish, 14 anointed priest of Anu, king of the country, great en si' of Enlil; he defeated Uruk and tore down its wall; in the battle with the inhabitants of Uruk he was victorious. Lugalzaggesi, king of Ur, he captured in (this) battle, he brought him in a (dog) collar to the gate of Enlil. Sargon, king of Agade, was victorious in the battle with the inhabitants of Ur, the(ir) town he defeated and tore down its wall. He defeated (the town) E-Ninmar and tore down its wall and defeated (also) its (entire) territory from Lagash as far as the sea. His weapon (then) he washed in the sea. In the battle with the inhabitants of Umma he was victorious, the(ir) town he defeated and tore down its wall.

Enlil did not let anybody oppose Sargon, the king of the country. Enlil gave him (the region from) the Upper Sea (to) the Lower Sea. From the Lower Sea onwards, natives of Agade are holding the governorships. Mari and Elam are standing (in obedience) before Sargon, king of the country. Sargon, king of the country, restored Kish, he ordered them to take (again) possession of the(ir) city.

May Shamash destroy the potency 8 and make perish every offspring of whosoever damages this inscription. Inscription on the pedestal of (a statue of) Sargon, king of every country.

14 Not in Deimel, sl. For the sign a.g a r a, cf. R. T. Hallock, The Chicago Syllabary and the Louvre Syllabary AO 766 (AS, No. 7 [1940]), line 244, = bit ku-mu-ri-e "store house." The name e.g a r a, u r i i, n a could therefore mean "temple . . . with an uru”'na" (cf. Deimel, Sl, 331/20, for this building [?]).

1 Formerly read pur-puzur, the new reading has been proposed by A. Falkenstein in ZA, xiii (NF vm), 152 ff., and has been generally accepted (cf. F. M. Th. Boehl, MAOG, xi 1937), p. 37, n.1, but contrast A. Deimel in sl, Sumerisch-alltägliches Glossar (Rome, 1934), p. 944.

267
Sargon, king of Kish, was victorious in 34 campaigns and dismantled (all) the cities, as far as the shore of the sea. At the wharf of Agade he made moor ships from Meluhha, ships from Magan, and ships from Tilmun. Sargon, the king, prostrated (himself) in prayer before the god Dagan in Tutul and he gave (him) the Upper Region (i.e.) Mari, Iarmutu (and) Ibla as far as the Cedar Forest and the Silver Mountain. Enlil did not let anybody oppose Sargon, the king, 5,400 soldiers ate daily in his palace (lit.: presence).

May Anu destroy the name and Enlil finish off the offspring, Inanna do ... to whosoever destroys this inscription.

Inscription on a statue the pedestal of which is not inscribed.

2. NARAM-SIN IN THE CEDAR MOUNTAIN

The text, published, transliterated, and translated by C. J. Gadd and L. Legrain in UET, as No. 275 (Vol. 1, pp. 74 ff; Vol. n, Pl. LVI) is taken from a collection of late copies (approximately, Dynasty of Isin or First Babylonian Dynasty) made on a clay tablet from inscriptions of the kings of the dynasty of Agade. The copies are negligently made and offer therefore many difficulties.

(i I—ii 28)

Although since the era of the si-k|i-t? of man(kind) none of the kings has ever destroyed (the towns) Arman and Ibla, now the god Nergal did open up the path for the mighty Naram-Sin, and gave him Arman and Ibla, and he presented him (also) with the Amanus, the Cedar Mountain and (with) the Upper Sea. And mighty Naram-Sin slew Arman and Ibla with the "weapon" of the god Dagan who aggrandizes his king. And he ... all the peoples with which Dagan had presented him for the first time, from the Euphrates frontier as far as Ulisum and .. the corvee-basket for his god Amal. And he overpowered the Amanus, the Cedar Mountain.

3. GUEDEA, ENSI OF LAGASH

(xv I—xvi 24)

... from Elam came the Elamite(s), from Susa the Susian(s). Magan and Meluhha collected timber from their mountains, and—in order to build the temple of Ningirsu—Gudea brought (these materials) together in his town Girsu.

After the god Ninzaggad had given him a (pertinent) order, they brought copper for Gudea, the temple-builder as if it be NL s e. m a h ; after the god Ninsikila had given him a (pertinent) order, they brought great willow-logs, ebony-logs, together with ab ba -logs to the ensi, the temple-builder. Gudea, the en -priest of Ningirsu, made a path in(to) the Cedar Mountain which nobody had entered (before); he cut its cedars with great axes. With axes he fashioned (them) for the SAR.UR, the "Right Arm of Lagash," the "Floodstorm-Weapon" of his king. (Like) giant snakes, cedar rafts were floating down the water (of the river) from the Cedar Mountain, pine rafts from the Pine Mountain, za b a 1 u m -wood rafts from the za b a 1 u m -wood Mountain, and with them were floating down (stream) large rafts with great logs of u -wood, t u b u m -wood and of e r a l u m -wood, in the main quay of Kasurra.

In the quarries which nobody had entered (before), Gudea, the en -priest of Ningirsu, ma [de] a path and (thus) the stones were delivered in large blocks. Boats (loaded) with h a i n -stone, boats (loaded) with n a i u -stone, they brought to Gudea, en -priest of Ningirsu, also bitumen (filled) in buckets, i g i. e n g u r -bi-tumen and gypsum from the mountains of Madga as (if they be) boats bringing in barley from the fields. Many other precious materials were carried to the ensi, the builder of the Ninnu-temple: from the copper mountains of Kimash—(after) the soil had been prospected (for copper ore)—its copper was mined in clusters; gold was delivered from its mine (lit.: mountain) as dust for the ensi who wanted to build a house for his king, for Gudea they mined silver from its mine (lit.: mountain), delivered red stone from Meluhha in great amounts. In the I i r -quarry, they mined I i r -stone (alabaster) for him.

b

(v 21—40, v 53—vi 63)

When he (Gudea) was building the temple of Nin-girsu, Ningirsu, his beloved king, opened up for him (all) the (trade) routes from the Upper to the Lower Sea. In (lit.: from) the Amanus, the Cedar Mountain, he formed into rafts cedar logs 60 cubits long, cedar logs 50 cubits long (and) KU-wood logs 25 cubits long, and brought them (thus) out of the mountain. He fashioned (from this wood) for him (i.e. Ningirsu) the SARKUR, his Floodstorm-Weapon for the battle, and he made for him the SARGAZ-mace with seven copper knobs (lit.: eyes). In the town URSU in the mountains of Ibla, he formed into rafts the timber of the mountain region: zabalum -logs, great IJ.KU-wood logs and TUBUM -logs. He made them into roof beams (for lit.: in) the town UrSU in the mountains of Menua, in the mountains of Martu (i.e. the Westland). He made stelae of them and arranged them in the sequence indicated by the official lists of abbreviated year-names. Such a list, compiled for obvious practical purposes, is given in the next text (2) which covers the thirty-eight years of the rule of Samsuiluna, son of Hammurabi. The so-called Babylonian King List B, translated here under (3), shows a further step of this development It contains the names of all the kings of the First Dynasty of Babylon with the lengths of their reigns and—as a rule—their relation to their predecessors. The last line sums up the number of kings and indicates the name of the dynasty. The reverse of the same tablet lists the kings of another dynasty in exactly the same way. The unfortunately damaged tablet known as Babylonian King List A (4) lists first the kings of the Hammurabi Dynasty and continues the sequence of dynasties to the domination of Babylon by Assyrian kings, Kandalanu, the Babylonian successor of Shamashshumukin, being the last name before a break. From this “raw material” the historiographers of later periods compiled such lists as are exemplified in the famous Assyrian King List of Khorsabad, for which I refer— provisionally—to the articles of A. Poebel in the JNES, 1, 247 ff., 460 ff., and 11, 56 ff. (cf., also, E. F. Weidner, AFO, xrv [1944], 362 ff.).

The Synchronistic Chronicle (5) deals with the period covered by the preceding text; its author, however, is not interested in dynasties and lengths of rule, but in relating chronologically, or synchronizing, the kings of Assyria (left column) with those of Babylonia (right column). The basic principle of arrangement is to mention within the same paragraph the names of the kings of one country who ascended the throne during the reign of the king of the other country. As an interesting innovation, the name of the vizier is mentioned in certain cases beside that of the ruling king.

The Excerpts from the Lists of Assyrian Eponyms (6) illustrate these Assyrian historiographic documents as a source of historic information.

Texts from Hammurabi to the Downfall of the Assyrian Empire

The six texts of the first part (Historiographic Documents) illustrate the development of official historiography in Mesopotamia; at the same time, they give the chronological framework (in terms of the sequence of dynasties) and most of the royal names from the First Babylonian Dynasty to the end of the Assyrian domination in Babylonia.

The first text (1) contains the full wording of the names of the forty-three years during which Hammurabi was king of Babylon. The present list is based upon the compilation of A. Ungnad in his article, Datenlisten, in the ReaUexn[1] der Assyriologie, x, 187 f., in which he collected the names and arranged them in the sequence indicated by the official lists of abbreviated year-names. Such a list, compiled for obvious practical purposes, is given in the next text (2) which covers the thirty-eight years of the rule of Samsuiluna, son of Hammurabi. The Synchronistic Chronicle (3) deals with the period covered by the preceding text; its author, however, is not interested in dynasties and lengths of rule, but in relating chronologically, or synchronizing, the kings of Assyria (left column) with those of Babylonia (right column). The basic principle of arrangement is to mention within the same paragraph the names of the kings of one country who ascended the throne during the reign of the king of the other country. As an interesting innovation, the name of the vizier is mentioned in certain cases beside that of the ruling king.

The Excerpts from the Lists of Assyrian Eponyms (6) illustrate these Assyrian historiographic documents as a source of historic information.

---

1. Hammurabi (became) king.
2. He established justice in the country.

This list has been compiled by A. Ungnad, in ReaUexn[1] der Assyriologie, 11, 178-182. For the official lists containing the abbreviated names of the years of the kings of the First Dynasty of Babylon, cf. the text material collected by Ungnad, op. cit., pp. 164 ff.

---

For his king Ningirsu, the powerful hero of Enlil, Gudea, the ensi of Lagash, had quarried and imported (this) I I R G A I -stone (marble) from the Uringiraz-mountains of the Upper Sea (Mediterranean Sea) and fashioned (it) into a macehead with three lion-heads, and dedicated it to him for (the preservation of) his life.

---

For the location of this country, cf. A. Poebel, JNES, 1 (1942), 237 ff.

3. If the location of this country, cf. A. Poebel, JNES, 1 (1942), 237 ff.

4. For the location of this country, cf. F. Thureau-Dangin, Recherches sur l’origine de Vecriture cunéiforme (Paris, 1898), No. 214.

---

The six texts of the first part (Historiographic Documents) illustrate the development of official historiography in Mesopotamia; at the same time, they give the chronological framework (in terms of the sequence of dynasties) and most of the royal names from the First Babylonian Dynasty to the end of the Assyrian domination in Babylonia.

The first text (1) contains the full wording of the names of the forty-three years during which Hammurabi was king of Babylon. The present list is based upon the compilation of A. Ungnad in his article, Datenlisten, in the ReaUexn[1] der Assyriologie, x, 187 f., in which he collected the names and arranged them in the sequence indicated by the official lists of abbreviated year-names. Such a list, compiled for obvious practical purposes, is given in the next text (2) which covers the thirty-eight years of the rule of Samsuiluna, son of Hammurabi. The so-called Babylonian King List B, translated here under (3), shows a further step of this development It contains the names of all the kings of the First Dynasty of Babylon with the lengths of their reigns and—as a rule—their relation to their predecessors. The last line sums up the number of kings and indicates the name of the dynasty. The reverse of the same tablet lists the kings of another dynasty in exactly the same way. The unfortunately damaged tablet known as Babylonian King List A (4) lists first the kings of the Hammurabi Dynasty and continues the sequence of dynasties to the domination of Babylon by Assyrian kings, Kandalanu, the Babylonian successor of Shamashshumukin, being the last name before a break. From this “raw material” the historiographers of later periods compiled such lists as are exemplified in the famous Assyrian King List of Khorsabad, for which I refer— provisionally—to the articles of A. Poebel in the JNES, 1, 247 ff., 460 ff., and 11, 56 ff. (cf., also, E. F. Weidner, AFO, xrv [1944], 362 ff.).

The Synchronistic Chronicle (5) deals with the period covered by the preceding text; its author, however, is not interested in dynasties and lengths of rule, but in relating chronologically, or synchronizing, the kings of Assyria (left column) with those of Babylonia (right column). The basic principle of arrangement is to mention within the same paragraph the names of the kings of one country who ascended the throne during the reign of the king of the other country. As an interesting innovation, the name of the vizier is mentioned in certain cases beside that of the ruling king.

The Excerpts from the Lists of Assyrian Eponyms (6) illustrate these Assyrian historiographic documents as a source of historic information.

---

1. This refers to a royal act aiming at the restoration of the social equity whenever economic or other changes created a discrepancy between the social status established and protected by law (termed šiku “correct/normal [status]”) and the needs, or claims, of certain groups of the population. Under such circumstances, it is the official duty of the king to “make (Akk.: šikamu, Sum.: gar) mišuru (Sum.: níg.sí.lí₄) i.e., to readjust the law to the necessities of an ever changing world. In practice, however, mišuru la/múnum refers probably always to a remission of (certain) debts or to a moratory, cf. also B. Landsberger, Die bab-
3. He constructed a throne for the main dais of the god Nanna (var. adds: in the temple e. k i l. li r₃, g a t) in Babylon.

4. The wall of (the sacred precinct) Gagia was built.

5. He constructed the en k a a³ b a r r a₄.

6. He constructed the s i r s of the goddess Laz.

7. Uruk and Isin were conquered.

8. The country Emtubal (var.: the land on the embankment of the Shumundar-canal).²

9. The canal (called) Hammurabi-hegal (was ⁴ u g).

10. Army (var.: City) (and) inhabitants of Malgia were crushed.

11. He conquered Rapiqum and Shalibi (var.: Rapiqum and Ibiq-Adad).

12. He constructed a throne for the goddess Sarpanit.

13. A copper stand for a royal statue (and) the pertinent d u₃ m a₄.

14. He constructed a throne for the goddess Innanna of Babylon.

15. The seven statues.

16. He constructed the throne of the god Nabium (Nebo).

17. He made the image of the goddess Innanna of Kibalbarru "as high as the sky."

18. He constructed the main dais for Enlil in Babylon.

19. The big wall of Igi-hursag.

20. The year following: "The wall of Igi-hursag." Also: The throne of Meri (i.e., Adad).

21. The wall of the town Bazu⁴ was built.

22. The statue of Hammurabi (as) king (granting) justice.

23. The APIN⁶ of the wall of Sippur.

24. He redug the tilida'-ca-na₆ for (the benefit of the temple of) Enlil, and (also the bed of) the Euphrates.

25. The great wall of Sippur⁶ was built (var.: for the gods Shamash and Shenirda).

26. The great dais of gold.

27. He constructed the main emblem of reddish gold which is carried in front of the army, for the great gods, his helpers.

28. The temple 6. n a m ₇ b e ("House of Abundance") of Adad in Babylon was built.

29. He constructed the image of the goddess Shala.

30. The year following, "He constructed the image of Shala."

Also: The leader, beloved of Marduk, after having defeated the army which Elam—(counting³)—from the frontier of Marhashi, also Subartu, Gutium, Eshnunna, and Malgi—had raised in masses, through the mighty power of the great gods, re-established/consolidated the foundations of (the empire of) Sumer and Akkad.

31. (Encouraged) by an oracle (given) by Anu and Enlil who are advancing in front of his army, (and) through the mighty power which the great gods had given to him, he was a match⁶ for the country (var.: army) of Emtubal and its king Rim-Sin, and ... and (thus) forced Sumer and Akkad to (obey) his orders.

32. The hero who proclaims the triumphs of Marduk, overthrew in battle with his powerful weapon the army of Eshnunna, Subartu (and) Gutium and was a match (also) for the country Mankizum and the country along the bank of the Tigris as far as (the frontier of) the country Subartu.

33. He redug the canal (called) "Hammurabi-(spells)-abundance-for-the-people, the Beloved-of-Anu-and-Enlil," (thus) he provided Nippur, Eridu, Ur, Larsa, Uruk (and) Isin with a permanent and plentiful water supply, and reorganized Sumer and Akkad from (its) confusion (lit.: scattering). Mari and Malgi he overthrew in battle and made Mari, and ... and also several other cities of Subartu, by a friendly agreement, (listen) to his orders.

34. He built the temple e. t u r. k a l a m ₇ m a ("Fold of the Country") for Anu, Innanna and Nana.

35. Upon the command of Anu and Enlil he destroyed the wall(s) of Mari and Malgia.

36. He restored the temple e. m e. t e. u r. s a g ("The Pride of the Hero") and built the temple tower, the mighty abode of Zababa⁹ (and) Innanna, whose top is sky-high and (thus) he greatly increased the glamor of Zababa as well as of Innanna in a pious manner.

37. Through the great power of Marduk he overthrew the army of (var.: Sutium), Turukku, Kakmu and of the country Subartu.

38. Upon the command of Anu and Enlil—and with the splendid wisdom with which Marduk has endowed him—he . . . Eshnunna which a flood had destroyed¹⁰...

39. With the mighty power which Anu (and) Enlil have given him, he defeated all his enemies as far as the country of Subartu.

"The translation of this year name follows T. Jacobsen, Philological Notes on Eshnunna and Its Inscriptions (AS, No. 9 (1934)), p. 7. The text uses the verb s i ... s & which, in legal texts, means "to correspond in value." The reading Ilbaba (cf. R. Labat, in Revue des études semitiques 1942-45/1, pp. 1-8) has to be abandoned (cf. E. F. Weidner, ZA, xvi, 1925, p. 13 n. x, 7. AFO, xiii, 1939-40, p. 318). The reference to the wisdom which inspired this warlike exploit seems to suggest an attack made by Hammurabi upon the stricken city. This would offer an interesting parallel to the incident reported by the Pharaoh Pi-ankhi at the conquest of Memphis."
40. He made the temple e.mes.lam ("Temple of the spreading m es-trees") as high as a mountain.
41. The goddess Tashmetum (who listens) to his supplication.
42. After the year "Tashmetum."
Also: He made the great wall at the embankment of the Tigris high as a mountain, called its name "Pier of Shamash," and built also the wall of Rapiqu at the embankment of the Euphrates.
43. (As to) Sippar, the primeval city of the sun-god Utu, he provided (it) with a wall made of piled-up earth.\(^5\)

2. LIST OF YEAR NAMES:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Action</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>E. babbar (the temple of the sun-god) Utu in Sippar.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Year: The two golden thrones for the dais.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Year: The rebellious (lit.: not obedient) foreign countries.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Year: The throne for the great dais.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Year: The temple tower, the mighty abode.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Year: (Throughout) the terrible power.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Year: The wall of Kish.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

\(^a\) cf. w. F. Albright in BASOR, 88 (1942), 33, for this date formula; also, A. Poebel in AJFO, ix (1937-4), 283 f.

\(^1\) The figures of this list, cf. A. Poebel, The Use of Mathematical Mean Values in Babylonian King List B (Study v, Miscellaneous Studies=AS, No. 14 [1947]).
4. THE BABYLONIAN KING LIST A

(i)

([... ] (years), 11 kings, dynasty of Babylon)

60 (years) Ilim\(\text{\textsuperscript{1}}\)
56 Itili
36 Damqiili
15 Ishki
26 Shushshi, brother
55 Gulki...\(\text{\textsuperscript{2}}\)
50 Peshgal
28 Aiadara
26 Ekurul
7 Melamma
9 Ega

368 (\textit{sic}) (years), 11 kings, dynasty of Uruku(g)

16 Gandash
12 Agum the First, his son
22 Kashtilashi
8 Ushshi, his son
[... ] Abirattash [... ] Tazzigurumash

(ii)

6 x + 22 (years) [ ... ]
26 [ ... ]
18 [ ... ]

[... ] Kadash [ ____ ]
6 Kudur-[Enlil], his [so]n
13 Shagarak[ti], his [so]n
8 Kashtil, his son
1 year 6 months Ellilnadinhumi
1 year 6 months Kadashman-Harbe
6 Adadnadinhumi
30 Adadshumnasir
15 Melishipak
13 Mardukaplaiddin, his son
1 year Zababa[shumiddin]
3 Ellilnadin[ahhe]

576 (years) 9 months, 36 kings, dynasty of ...

17 (years) Marduk[shapikzeri]
6 ... (destroyed)
(iii)

22 (years) [ ... ]
1 year 6 months Marduka[hheriba]

8 Nabushum[libur]

132 (years) 6 months, 11 kings, dynasty of Isin.
18 (years) Simmashshi
5 months Eamukin
3 (years) Kashshunadinahhe
21 (years) 5 months, 3 kings, dynasty of the Sea Country.

17 (years) Eulmashshakinshumi
3 Ninurtakudurra
3 months Shi[riqti]-Shuqamu
20 (years) 3 months, 3 kings, dynasty of Bas[u].
6 (?) (years) ![ ... ]
8 (?) (years) ![ ... ]
8 months 12 [days... ]
(destroyed)

(iv)

[... ] Nabushumishkun [his] s[on] [... ] Nabun[asir]
2 (years) Nabunadinzeri, his son,
1 month 12 days Nabushumukin, his son,
22 (years or kings?), dynasty of E.
3 (years) Ukinzer, dynasty of Shashi
2 Pulu\(\text{\textsuperscript{3}}\)
5 Ululaia,\(\text{\textsuperscript{4}}\) dynasty of Bal-til\(\text{\textsuperscript{5}}\)
12 Mardukaplaiddin, dynasty of the Sea Country,
5 Sargon
2 Sennach[ebi], dynasty of Habigal,
1 month Mardukakirshumi, son of Ardu,
9 months Mardukaplaiddin, a native of Habi,
3 (years) Belibi, dynasty of E,
6 Ashurnadinhumi, dynasty of Habigal,
1 Nergal[ushezib]
5 Ushezib-Marduk, dynasty of E,
8 Sennacherib
[... ] U[ ... ] Esarhadd[on] [... ] Shamashshum\(\text{\textsuperscript{6}}\)
[ ... ] Kandal\(\text{\textsuperscript{T}}\)
(destroyed)

5. THE SYNCHRONISTIC CHRONICLE

(0)
(destroyed)

Ad[asi, same (Le., king of [Damiqilishu, same (i.e., Assyria)] [king of Babylon])]

\(\text{\textsuperscript{a}}\) Tiglath-pileser III of Assyria (744-727).

\(\text{\textsuperscript{b}}\) Shalmaneser V of Assyria (726-722).

\(\text{\textsuperscript{c}}\) *The name of this town (BAL.BAD or BAL.TIL) was discussed recently by J. Lewy in HUCA, xix (1946), 467 ff. (especially, n.305), who considered it as denoting the "innermost, and, hence, oldest part of the city of Assur."*

\(\text{\textsuperscript{d}}\) Short for Shamashshumukin, son of Esarhaddon and brother of Ashurbanipal.

\(\text{\textsuperscript{T}}\) *Short for Kandalana (formerly identified with Ashurbanipal), a Babylonian successor of Shamashshumukin ruling in Babylon for 22 years, cf. W. H. Dubberstein, JNES, iii (1944), 38 ff.*

---

\(\text{\textsuperscript{1}}\) The names of the kings of this dynasty appear here in abbreviated forms; cf. King List B for the full names.

\(\text{\textsuperscript{2}}\) Follows one horizontal wedge (as between lines 5 and 6) of obscure meaning.
Belbani, same
Lubaia, same
Sharma-Adad, same
LJKU-D Shamash, same
Bazaia, same
Lulla, same
Shininua, same
Sharma-Adad, same
Erishu
Shamshi-Adad, same
Ashurbelkala, same [Mardukahheriba, same] same same [Mardukzer-... ] same same [Nabushumilil, same]
(iii)
Eriba Adad, king [NN his vizier ... ]
Shamshi-Adad, same
Ashurnasirpal, same
Ashurnasirpal, same
Ulmash [shakshumini, same]
Shulmanuasharidu, same
Ashurnirari, same
Ashurrabi, same
Marbitti[aplaiddin, same]
Tukulti[apilesharra, same] same same [Nabumukin]apli, same
Shulmanuasharidu, same
Ashurdan, same
Adad-nirari
Qalia [his vizier]
Nabuaplaiddin
Gabbani[eresh]
Nabuaplaiddin
Gabbani[eresh]
Shulmanuasharidu, same
[Me]luhhaia [his] vizier (destroyed)
Tukulti-Ninurta, same
Nabuaplaiddin [his] vizier (anepigraph)
Sennacherib ([Sin]ahheriba), king of Assyria Nabuaplaiddin [his] vizier (for two years Sennacher-ib was king of Akkad; then the inhabitants of Akkad revolted and Ashurnadinshumi, the father [ceded] him the throne,]
Sennacherib
Nergalushzebib, son of Gahul,
Mushezib-Marduk, a native of Bit-Dakkuri
weren kings of [Akkad].
Sennacherib
Sennacherib, king of Assyria
Belupahir (and) Kalbu, his viziers;

1 First of the royal names of the present list to be mentioned (as No. 33)
2 cf. for this passage E. F. Weidner in O, HI (1926), 75 f.
3 cf. below p. 308, n.9 for a possible different interpretation of the phrase mar Bit Datyuri.
Esarhaddon, son of Sennacherib, king of Assyria and of Babylonia

Nabuzerlishir (and) Ishtarshumeresh, his viziers, Ashurbanipal, same Shamashshumukin, same Ashurbanipal, same Kandalanu, same Ishtarshumeresh, his vizier.

82 kings of Assyria from (the time of) Erishu, son of Ilushuma, to Ashurbanipal, son of Esarhaddon (correspond to)

98 kings of Akkad from (the time of) Sumulail to Kandalanu.

6. EXCERPTS FROM THE LISTS OF ASSYRIAN EPONYMS

In contradistinction to the Babylonian custom (attested from the time of the kings of Agade to that of the Kassite rulers) of naming each year after an important event, the Assyrians used the names of certain high officials for the same purpose. The first (full) year of the reign of a king is always named after himself, the following years have originally been named after that official who won when lots were thrown to determine the eponym. Later on, the position of the official within the hierarchy was decisive for the sequence, the highest official (tartanu) following the king immediately, while important palace officials (such as, e.g., the nagir e[ali] “overseer of the royal property,” the chief cupbearer, etc.) and the governors of the foremost provinces took their turn in well-established order. After the exhaustion of all eligible candidates for the office of the limu, within the reach of one and the same king, the sequence of officials started anew, beginning with the king.

For the throwing of lots (done by means of a “die” called puru thrown into a bowl), cf. E. F. Weidner, AFo, XIII (1941), 308 f.,2 for the sequence of officials, cf. E. Forrer, Die Provinzenteilung des assyriscchen Reiches (Leipzig, 1921), after p. 6, with an instructive diagram.

For practical and chronological purposes, the Assyrian scribes made elaborate lists3 of the names of the limu-officials which either contain only name and rank (termed by Delitzsch: C[anon])4 or additional short notices referring to historical events (C’).5 These lists have been studied and edited repeatedly, the most recent studies being those of A. Ungnad in Reallexikon der Assyriologie, 11, sub Eponym, 412-457, and E. F. Weidner, AFo, XIII (1941), 308-318.

The following excerpts utilize A. Ungnad’s transliteration and restoration of C on pp. 428 ff., to the arrangement of which the numbering of lines refers.

(Reign of Adad-nirari II) (obverse)

15 [In the eponymat of Ashurbaltinishe, (governor) of Arrajpha:

(campaign) against the sea, a plague.

(Reign of Shalmaneser IV)

43 [In the eponymat of] Pali[lerish, (governor) of Ras]appa:

1 For literature on puru, cf. J. Lewy, Revue Hiittte et Asiatique, v (1939), 117 ff. (especially p. 117, n.2); also, A. Ungnad, in Redleksikon, II, 412, n.2; E. F. Weidner, AFo, XII (1941), 308.

2 Such a “die” has been preserved—as Weidner has ingeniously established—and is published in J. F. Stephens, Votive and Historical Texts from Babylonia and Assyria (YOS, Vol. i, No. 73, and Pl. XLIV.

3 The possibility that the rows of stelae found in Ashur are meant to serve as a sort of monumental “index” of limu-officials, has been discussed by A. Ungnad, op.cit., p. 412. These officials would then have had two essentially royal prerogatives: to give their name to the year and to set up stelae.

4 Various other types of such lists (rarely attested, however) are mentioned by Ungnad, op.cit., p. 414.

5 In the title lugal ka.la.g.a (Akk.: lurrø damnu), the adjective ka.la.g.a or damnu has a definite meaning which is difficult to render exactly. From such references as e.g. nàlpatu damnu (cf. below p. 300, n.4), nák.kullu damnu (“regular suk.K”) “official”, etc., the meaning “legitimate, orderly, correct” results (cf. also Deimel, BL, 322/18 for the Sum. verb ka.la.g.g (g) “to deliver regularly”), while other references point towards damnu in the meaning “potent, full-grown, powerful.” With regard to the ancient Near Eastern concept of kingship, it seems possible that the title is meant to express both aspects: the legitimacy of the ruler and his personal vigor, both being equally essential prerequisites for the exercise of kingship.

(Reign of Tiglath-pileser III)

(reverse)

40 [In the eponymat of Beldan], (governor) of Kalha:

(campaign) against Palestine Pi-tíl-ta.

41 [In the eponymat of Ashurddinninni], (governor) of Mazzamatau:

(campaign) against Damascus (Di-mal-qā).

42 [In the eponymat of Nabubelušur], (governor) of Si’me:

(campaign) against Damascus (Di-mal-qā).

HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS

This part contains the records which ten kings of Assyria have left us—on stone slabs, clay foundation documents, inscribed stelae, etc.—of their campaigns for the conquest of Syria, Palestine, the island of Cyprus, Arabia, and, eventually, of Egypt.

1. SHAMSHI-ADAD I (ABOUT 1726-1694) R1

FIRST CONTACT WITH THE WEST

(iv 4 – 17)

At that time, I received in my town Ashur the tribute of the kings of Tukrish and of the kings of the Upper Country.6 I erected a stela (inscribed) with my great name in the country Lab’an (La-ab-a-an7) on the shore of the Great Sea.

2. TIGLATH-PILESER I (1143-1076): EXPEDITIONS TO SYRIA, THE LEBANON, AND THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA

a Foundation document (clay) of the Anu-Adad temple in Ashur. Published by O. Schroeder, in KAH, ii, No. 68. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, i, §§300-303. cf. also Schroeder, JSOR, x, 298.

(1-29)

Tiglath-pileser, the ‘legitimate’ king, king of the world, king of Assyria, king of (all) the four rims of 6 The dates given after the names of Assyrian kings are those of A. Poebel in JNES, xi (1942), pp. 85-88.

7 For the various terms appearing in the historical texts with the approximate meaning “tribute” or the like—such as bili, mandattu, mihirtu, etc. —cf. W. J. Martin, Tribut und Tribustheilungen bei den Assyrrn, Studien zur orientalischen Ethnographie, vi (1936), 20 ff. The bēniši bili mandattu is, in the present pages, translated by one English term (to wit, “tribute”), because it is not admissible to render literally the well-known stylistic feature of the Akkadian (cf. H. Ebeloth, Ein Wortfolgeprinzip im Assyrisch-Babylonischen, LSS, vi/3 [1916]) to use two nearly synonymous nouns to express one concept on the level of a solemn and dignified definition. Therefore I translate, e.g., qabb (a) tilam “simply with ‘battle,” bili (a) mu[juru with “possessions,” bili (a) miliaru with “justice,” etc.

8 cf. B. Maisler, Untersuchungen zur alten Geschichte und Ethnographie Syriens und Palästinas (Giessen, 1930), p. 10.

9 In the title lugal kal.gal (Akk.: luggal damnu), the adjective kal.gal (g) or damnu has a definite meaning which is difficult to render exactly. From such references as e.g. nàlpatu damnu (cf. below p. 300, n.4), nák.kullu damnu (“regular suk.K”) “official”, etc., the meaning “legitimate, orderly, correct” results (cf. also Deimel, BL, 322/18 for the Sum. verb ka.la.g.g (g) “to deliver regularly”), while other references point towards damnu in the meaning “potent, full-grown, powerful.” With regard to the ancient Near Eastern concept of kingship, it seems possible that the title is meant to express both aspects: the legitimacy of the ruler and his personal vigor, both being equally essential prerequisites for the exercise of kingship.

For the history of this age-old royal title, cf. p. 267, n.1. The rendering the earth), the courageous hero who lives (guided) by the trust-inspiring oracles given (to him) by Ashur and Ninurta, the great gods and his lords, (and who thus) overthrew (all) his enemies; son of Ashurrelishishi, king of the world, king of Assyria, (grand)son of Mutakkil-Nusku, also king of the world, king of Assyria.

At the command of my lord Ashur I was a conqueror (lit.: my hand conquered) from beyond the Lower Zab River to the Upper Sea which (lies towards) the West. Three times I did march against the Nairi countries. The widespread Nairi countries I conquered from the country Tumme as far as Daiaeni, Himua, and even as far as Paiterri and Habhi. I made bow to my feet 30 kings of the Nairi countries, I took hostages from them. I received as their tribute horses, broken to the yoke. I imposed upon them (regular) tribute and tdmariu-gihs.

I went to the Lebanon (Lab-na-a-ni). I cut (there) timber of cedars for the temple of Anu and Adad, the great gods, my lords, and carried (them to Ashur). I conquered (lit.: my hand conquered) towards the country of Amurrum. I conquered the entire country of Amurrum. I received tribute from Byblos (Gu-bcd), Sidon (Si-du-ni), and Arvad (Ar-ma-da). I crossed over in ships (belonging) to Arvad, from Arvad which is on the seashore, to the town Samuri which (lies) in Amurrum (a distance of) 3 double-miles overland. I killed a narwhal® which they call "sea horse," on high sea.

And (afterwards) on my return march (towards Ashur) I subjected the entire country of Great-Hatti, I imposed upon Ili-Teshup, king of Great-Hatti a tribute of [ .. . ] talents [of .. . ] and of cedar beams.

b

Two excerpts from a fragmented octagonal prism (perhaps the foundation document of the royal palace). Published by O. Schroeder, in KAH, ii, No. 63. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, i, §§286 and 287. (w 10 — 16)

Upon the command of Anu and Adad, the great gods, my lords, I went to the Lebanon mountains (Jad? Lab-na-ni), I cut cedar beams for the temple of Anu and Adad.

(iii 3—14 = KAIH, ii, 71 [tablet] 19—23

Twenty-eight times (I fought) the Ahlamu peoples and the Arameans, (once) I even crossed the Euphrates twice in one year. I defeated them from Tadmar (Palmyra) which (lies) in the country Amurrum, Anat' which (lies) in the country Suhu as far as the town Rapiqu which (lies) in Kar-Dunia sh (i.e. Babylonia). I brought their possessions as spoils to my town Ashur.

c

Rock Inscription from Sebeneh-Su. Published first by Rawlinson, Vol. m, Pl. 4, No. 6, and again by F. Lehmann-Haupt, in Materialien zur aelteren Geschichte Armeniens und Mesopotamiens (Abh. Kgl. Ges. d. Wiss. Gottingen NF 1x/3, 1907), "king of the world" does not do justice to the complex political and emotional implications involved.

No. 7 (cf. also King, AKA, p. 127, n.1). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, i, §271.

With the help of Ashur (and) Shamash, the great gods, my lords, I, Tukulti-pileasara, king of Assyria, son of Ashurrelishishi, king of Assyria, son of Mutakkil-Nusku, likewise king of Assyria, am a conqueror (of the regions) from the Great Sea which is in the country Amurrum as far as the Great Sea which is in the Nairi country. I have marched three times against the Nairi country.

3. ASHURNASIRPAL II (883-859)

Expedition to Carchemish and the Lebanon

From the annals inscribed on the large pavement slabs of the temple of Ninurta in Calah, the new royal residence built by Ashurnasirpal II. Published by Rawlinson, Vol. i, Pjs. 17—26; also, by King, AKA, p. 254 ff. (with transliteration and translation) and I. V. Le Gac, Les inscriptions de Assur-nasir-aplu III (Paris, 1907), p. 3 ff. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, i, §§875—479.

(iii 64—90)

I departed from the country Bit-Adini and crossed the Euphrates at the peak of its flood by means of (rafts made buoyant with inflated) goatskin (bottles). I advanced towards Carchemish. (There) I received from him (self) the tribute of Sangara, the king of the Hitites (amounting to): 20 talents of silver, a saaru object of gold, a ring of gold, golden daggers, 100 talents of copper, 250 talents of iron, (furthermore) bull-images of copper, copper basin-and-ewer sets, for washing, a copper brazier (all) his own furniture, the weights of which were not taken (separately),—(furthermore) beds of boxwood, a t i -chairs of boxwood, tables of boxwood, (all) inlaid with ivory, also 200 young females (clad in) linen garments with multicolored trimmings made of dark and reddish purple (dyed) wool, (also) alabaster, elephants' tusks (and even) a shining chariot (and) a golden nimattu -chair—I.8 with panels—his (own) royal insignia. I took over the chariot (-corps), the cavalry (and) the infantry of Carchemish. The kings of all (surrounding) countries came to me, embraced my feet and I took hostages from them and they marched (with me) towards the Lebanon (Lab-na-na) forming my vanguard.

1 This translation is based upon the variants a m "wild bull," and d i n g i r ("image of a god," describing the very same object, cf. for these variants, L. W. King, AKA, i, 366, n.3.

2 The words harrtu and naramûtu refer to the two containers needed in the Orient for washing and taking a bath: a spouted vessel to pour the water and a recipient with wide opening to collect it. The corresponding Egyptian word hamm.

3 Literally: "furniture of his palace"; the term kallu denotes in Mesopotamia the personal property of the king.

4 The reading našír-timnu (instead of urār-timnu) was indicated to me by Dr. B. Landsberger, who made reference to syllabic spellings in Old-Assyrian and texts from Nuzi as well as to Aram, "fîrd (boxwood)."

5 The Sumerian words a št ior at ge denote a special type of chair, often a royal throne.

6 This refers to linen garments decorated with sewn-on narrow woven bands or tresses made of wool thread in various colors (termed birmu). This typically Syrian technique is often depicted on Egyptian murals and reliefs. The Assyrian kings mention these garments always in their reports on booty or tribute received from Upper Mesopotamia, Syria, and Palestine. A certain type of easy chair.
I departed from Carchemish, taking the road between the mountains Munzigani and the Hamurga, leaving the country Ahanu on my left. I advanced towards the mountains Munzigani and the Hamurga, leaving 276 passed the night. From the banks of the Apre I departed tin, 100 talents of iron, 1,000 (heads of big) cattle, 10,000 sheep, 1,000 linen garments with multicolored trimmings, easy chairs of boxwood with insets (and) mountings, beds of boxwood, beds provided with insets, tables with ivory (inlay) (on) boxwood—(all) his own furniture, the weights of which were not taken (separately), also female singers (with) [numerous kan] . . . ], large pagitu -instruments (and) great EN-objects I received from him as his tribute, and himself I pardoned. I took over the chariot (corps), the cavalry (and) the infantry of Hattina and seized hostages from him.

At that time I received (also) the tribute of Gusi from Iahani (consisting of): gold, silver, tin, [iron], large and small cattle, linen garments with multicolored trimmings. From Kunulu, the royal residence of Lubarna from Hattina, I departed; I crossed the river Orontes ([Aran]tu) and passed the night on the banks of the Orontes. From the banks of the Orontes I departed, taking the road between the mountains Iaraqi and Ia'turi, and crossed over the [ . . . ] mountain to pass (the night) on the banks of the Sangura river. From the banks of the Sangura river I departed, taking the road between the mountains Saratini and Duppani, and (passed the night) on the banks of the . . . [a]ke. I entered Aribua, the fortress of Lubarna, and seized (it) as my own (town). I harvested the grain as well as the straw and (then) settled natives of Assyria in it (the town). While I stayed in Aribua, I conquered the (other) towns of Luhati, defeating their (inhabitants) in many bloody battles. I destroyed (them), tore down (the walls) and burned (the towns) with fire; I caught the survivors and im-paled (them) on stakes in front of their towns. At that time I seized the entire extent of the Lebanon mountain and reached the Great Sea of the Amurru country. I cleaned my weapons in the deep sea and performed sheen-offerings to (all) the gods. The tribute of the seacoast—from the inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, Byblos, Mahallata, Maiza, Kaiza, Amuru, and (of) Arvad which is (an island) in the sea, (consisting of): gold, silver, tin, copper, copper containers, linen garments with multicolored trimmings, large and small monk/36, ebony, boxwood, ivory from walrus tusk?—(thus ivory) a product of the sea,—(this) their tribute I received and they embraced my feet.

I ascended the mountains of the Amansus (Hama-nig) and cut down (there) logs of cedars, stone-pines, cypresses (and) pines, and performed sheen-offerings to my gods. I (had) made a sculptured stela (commemorating) my heroic achievements and erected (it) there. The cedar beams from the Amansus mountain I destined/sold? for/to the temple Esarra for (the construction of) a lašma[u]-sanctuary (as a building for festivals serving the temples of Sin and Shamash, the light(giving) gods).

(a) Texts of a General Nature

(1-1 o)

(I am) Shalmaneser, the legitimate king, the king of the world, the king without rival, the "Great Dragon," the (only) power within the (four) (rims of the earth), overlord of all the princes, who has smashed all his enemies as if (they be) earthenware, the strong man, unsparing, who shows no mercy in battle,—the son of Ashurnasirpal, king of the world, king of Assyria, (grand)son of Tukulti-Ninurta, likewise king of the world, king of Assyria, a conqueror from the Upper Sea

4 The adjective rabu, when referring to water, means always "deep, navigable.”

4 Monkeys (here: pagu) appear rarely in lists of tributes, cf. the Black Obelisk of Shalmaneser III (below, p. 340, n. 4) where bazили- and tuddu -monkeys are mentioned and depicted as coming from Mesu. Also, [bazi-], pagu-, and uqupu- monkeys taken from Thebes (cf. n. 4, p. 297). Note in this context W. C. McDermott, The Appe in Antiquity (Baltimore, 1938) and M. F. Ashley Montague, Knowledge of the Appe in Antiquity, in IsA, xxxii (1947), 87 ff. The spelling "tuddu has to be corrected and read uqupu-pal(l) according to Landsberger, Fauna p. 88, n. i.

For this passage, cf. P. Haupt, Der assyrische Name des Potwals, in ApN, xxm (1906/7), 253 ff.

16 For this mountain chain, cf. Julius Lewy, HUCa, XVIII (1944), 454 ff.

18 "Text unintelligible: Jo-ku-DV-kufi]."

19 Is sim.pagti to be connected with simatu (cf. the latter, von Soden, ZA, XLII [NF VIII, 17]?)

10 2 For the historical background, cf. E. G. H Kraeling, Aram and Israel (New York, 1918); A. Jilku, Der Kampf um Syrien-Palästina im orient-

The designation of a ruler as a ša·šuma·g. 3 the "Giant Snake" (attested already in the Prologue of the Code of Hammurabi, then taken up by the Assyrian kings) is borrowed from the vocabulary of hymnical religious texts which reserve this tide to the most important figures of the pantheon (cf. K. Tallquist, Arkadische Götterepitheta [Studia Orientalia vs., Helsinki, "938], p. 34). The terror-inspiring aspect of kingship is the tertium parum: as if (they be) earthenware, the strong man, unsparing, who shows no mercy in battle,—the son of Ashurnasirpal, king of the world, king of Assyria, (grand)son of Tukulti-Ninurta, likewise king of the world, king of Assyria, a conqueror from the Upper Sea

10 This is the river Afrin of today, cf., also, Forrer, Provinzinteilung, p. 5.

11 This interpretation of the frequent phrase "x silver, y gold" yields additional material for the study of the history of the gold-silver ratio in Mesopotamia.

12 For this musical instrument, cf. C. Frank, Studien zur babylonischen Religion (Strassburg, 191]), i, 70, n.175.

13 Omission of the scribe.

14 Since the stalks were cut rather high, it was necessary to cut them again to make use of this product as feed for animals, etc.

15 This seems to have been a ceremonial banquet of inauguration.
to the Lower Sea (to wit) the countries Hatti, Luhuti, Adri, Lebanon (Lab-na-na), Qe, Tabali, Militene (Mc4i-di); who visited the sources of (both) the Tigris and the Euphrates.

I marched against Akkad (= Babylonia) to avenge Mardukshumiddin and inflicted a defeat upon [Mar-]dubelkanu, his younger brother. I entered Kutha, Babylon, and Borsippa, offered sacrifices to the gods of the sacred cities of Akkad. I went (further) downstream to Chaldea and received tribute from all kings of Chaldea.

(b) From the inscription on the bronze gates of Balawat. First publication, T. G. Pinches, in TSE, VII (1880-2), 89 ff.; translation: F. Delitzsch, in BA, VI/1 (1908), 133 ff., and Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§606 ff.

(i 6-ii 5)

At that time [Ashur, the great lord . . . gave me scepter, staff] — necessary (to rule) the people, (and) I was acting (only) upon the trust-inspiring oracles given by Ashur, the great lord, my lord, whose gods I put my trust on . . . . all the countries and mountain regions to their full extent. [I (am) Shalmaneser . . . conqueror from] the sea of the Nairi country and the sea of the Zamua country which is nearer (to Assyria) as far (text: and) the Great Sea of Amurru. I swept over Hatti, in its full extent (making it look) like ruin-hills (left) by the flood (thus) I spread the terror-inspiring glare of my rule over Hatti.

On my (continued) march to the sea, I made a stela (representing) myself as the supreme ruler and set it up beside that of the god Hirbe.' . . . I marched [to the Great] Sea, washed my weapons in the Great Sea; I offered sacrifices (there) to my gods. I received the tribute from all the kings of the seacoast. [I made a stela representing myself as king and warrior] and inscribed upon it [the deeds which] I had performed [in the region of the] sea[coast]; I set it up by the sea.

(b) Annalistic Reports

First Year according to the so-called "Monolith Inscriptions" (from Kurkh), published by Rawlinson, Vol. HI, Pis. 7-8. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§599-600.

(i 29—ii 13)

In the month Aiaru, the 13th day, I departed from Nineveh; I crossed the Tigris, by-passed the countries Hasamnu and Dilmunu and approached the town of La'ali which (belongs to) Ahuni, man of Adini. The terror and the glamour of Ashur, my lord, overwhelmed [them] . . . and they dispersed.1 I destroyed the town, tore down (its wall) and burnt (it) down. From La'ali I departed, I approached the town of Kiqa, man of Adini. Ahuni, man of Adini, [putting his trust] upon his numerous army, rose for a decisive battle I fought with him upon a trust-(inspiring) oracle of Ashur and the (other) great gods, my lords, (and) inflicted a . . . defeat upon him. I shut him up in his town. From the town Kiqa I departed, the town Bur-mar'ana which (belongs to) Ahuni, man of Adini, I approached. I stormed and conquered (it). I slew with the sword 300 of their warriors. Pillars of skulls I erected in front of the town. I received the tribute of Hapini from the town Til-abna, of Ga'uni from the town Sa[l]late, (and) of Giri-Adad (to wit): . . . silver, gold, large and small cattle, wine. From Bur-mar'ana I departed, I crossed the Euphrates on rafts (made buoyant by means of) (inflated) goatskins and received the tribute of Qatazi[I] from Commagen (Kummuh)2 (to wit): silver, gold, large and small cattle, wine. I approached the town of Pakaruhbuni (and) the towns of Ahuni, man of Adini, on the other side of the Euphrates. I defeated (his) country, turning his towns into ruins. I covered the wide plain with the corpses of his warriors: 1,300 of their battle-experienced soldiers I slew with the sword. From Pakaruhbuni I departed. I approached the towns of Mutalli from Gurgume. I received the tribute of Mutalli from Gurgume (to wit): silver, gold, large and small cattle, wine and his daughter with her big dowry. From Gurgume I departed and I approached Lutib, the fortress town of Hani from Sam'al.3 Hani from Sam'al, Sapalulme from Hatta, Ahuni, man of Adini, Sangara from Carchemish put their trust on mutual assistance, prepared for battle and rose against me to resist. I fought with them (assisted) by the mighty power of Nergal, my leader, by the ferocious weapons which Ashur, my lord, has presented to me, (and) I inflicted a defeat upon them. I slew their warriors with the sword, descending upon them like Adad when he makes a rainstorm pour down. In the moat (of the town) I piled them up, I covered the wide plain with the corpses of their fighting men, I dyed the mountains with their blood like red wool. I took away from him many chariots (and) horses broken to the yoke. I erected pillars of skulls in front of his town, destroyed his (other) towns, tore down (their walls) and burnt (them) down.

At that time, I paid homage to the greatness of (all) the great gods (and) extolled for posterity the heroic achievements of Ashur and Shamash by fashioning a (sculptured) stela with myself as king (depicted on it). I wrote thereupon my heroic behavior, my deeds in combat4 and erected it beside the source of the Saluara river which is at the foot of the mountains of the Amanus. From the mountain Amanus I departed, crossed the Orontes river (A-ra-an-tu) and approached Alimush, the fortress town of Sapalulme from Hatta, to save his life, Sapalulme from Hatta [called for] Ahuni, man of Adini, Sangara from Carchemish, Haianu from Sam'al, Kate from Que, Pihirim from Hilukka, Bur-Anate from Isabq, A'da [. . . . .] Assyria. . . .

1 Technical term: elu.

2 For this identification, cf. L. W. King, Kummuh = Commagene, in Manchester Egypt, and Oriental Soc., 11 (1913) = 47 6.

3 Ha(i)ani of Sam'al is the father of Kilamu, whose inscription is translated in AOT, 443.

4 To talnintu, cf. now von Soden in Orientalia, NS xvi (1946), 70 e.
[their/his army] I scattered, I stormed and conquered the town . . . . I carried away as booty . . . . . , his horses, broken to the yoke. . . . Dur-. . . Armanus, I cut there cedar and pine timber. I went to the ing this battle I personally captured Bur-Anate from unopposed... throughout the wide seashore. I fashioned the town ... I carried away as booty . . . , his horses,

278

2,900 of [their] battle-experienced soldiers; 14,600 I

Hirbe is set up and erected (there) a(nother) statue found in Ashur. Published by O. Schroeder, in Lallar mountain, I erected (there) an image (represent-the gods. I ascended the mountains of the Amanus and if. I would like to draw attention, on one hand, to the name of a town Sa-shul-ku. I set up and erected a(n) -i-me-ri-iu, which the people of Hattina call Pitru, on the other side of the Euphrates, on the river Sagur, I received tribute from the kings of the other side of the Euphrates—that is, of Sanagara from Car-first Year according to the Annals inscribed on clay tablets found in Ashur. Published by O. Schroeder, in KAH, 11, Nos. 112-114. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §633.

First Year according to the Black Obelisk from Calah. Published by Layard, Inscriptions, Pies. 87 f. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §18.

(face B, 26—31)

In the first year of my rule, I crossed the Euphrates at its flood and marched towards the Western Sea. I washed my weapons in the sea, offered [sacrifices to] the gods. I ascended the mountains of the Amanus and cut (there) timber of cedar and pine. I ascended the Lallar mountain, I erected (there) an image (represent-king) myself as king.6 The towns of the Hattineans, [those of] Ahuni, man of Adini, those (belonging) to the peoples of Carchemish, (and) to the Margus ... ] [(in short) all the to]ws on the other embankment of the Euphrates, I destroyed, tore down (the walls) and burnt (them) down.

First Year according to the Black Obelisk from Calah. Published by Layard, Inscriptions, Pies. 87 f. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §18.

mountain Lallare (and) there I set up a stela with my image as king.

Sixth Year according to the Monolith-Inscription (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §640.

(ii 78—102)

In the year of (the eponym) Daian-Ashrur, in the month Aiaru, the 14th day, I departed from Nineveh. I crossed the Tigris and approached the towns of Giammu on the river Balih. They became afraid of the terror emanating from my position as overlord, as well as of the splendor of my fierce weapons, and killed their master Giammu with their own weapons. I entered the towns Sahalala and Til-sha-Turahi and brought my gods/images into his palaces. I performed the taltitu -festival in his (own) palaces. I opened (his) treasury, inspected what he had hidden; I carried away as booty his possessions, bringing (them) to my town Ashur. From Sahalala I departed and approached Kar-Shalmaneser. I crossed the Euphrates another time at its flood on rafts (made buoyant by means) of (inflated) goatskins. In Ina-Ashrur-utir-asbat, which the people of Hattina call Pitru, on the other side of the Euphrates, on the river Sagur, I received tribute from the kings of the other side of the Euphrates—that is, of Sanagara from Carchemish, Kushdashi from Commagene, of Arame, man of Gusi, of Lalli from Melitene (Melidi), of Haiani, son of Gabari, of Kalparuda from Hattina, (and) of Kalparuda of Gurgum—(consisting of): silver, gold, tin, copper (or bronze), copper containers. I departed from the banks of the Euphrates and approached Aleppo (Hal-man). They (i.e., the inhabitants of A.) were afraid to fight and seized my feet (in submission). I received silver and gold as their tribute and offered sacrifices before the Adad of Aleppo. I departed from Aleppo and approached the two towns of Irhuleni from Hamath (Amat). I captured the towns Adennu, Barga (and) Argana his royal residence. I removed from them his booty (as well as) his personal (lit.: of his palaces) possessions. I set his palaces afire. I departed from Argana and approached Karkara. I destroyed, tore down and burned down Karkara, his (text: my) royal residence. He brought along to help him 1,200 chariots, 1,200 cavalrymen, 20,000 foot soldiers of Adad-‘idri (i.e. Hadadezer) of Damascus (Inameri),8 1 The use of the Sumerian term es n in this context is rather puzzling. It might indicate a peculiar social set-up which compelled the Assyrian scribes to use this rare word.

6 The problem of the often changing (and apparently interchangeable) Akkadian denominations for Damascus (apart from Dî-ma-qa-ku) is still unsolved; for previous discussions I refer to A. T. Clay in YOS, I (1915), 2, n. 1; Streck, Asurbanipal (= VAR, vii), in, 780, where literature is amply quoted. These denominations are Sa-imeru, Sa-imereh-ku, Sa-imere-la (cf., e.g., C. Bezold, Catalogue, 3, 211) and Inmerlu with innu-spelled either phonetically or respectively as a n e s and d u r . I would like to draw attention, on one hand, to the name of a town Sa-imere-ku on the stela of Shilhak-Inshushinak (V. Scheil, DelопjJation en Perse, Memoires, xi [1911], 42, No. 141), also attested in texts from Nuzi (cf. R. H. Pfeiffer and E. A. Lacckeman, Miscellaneous Texts from Nuzi, HSS, xm [1942], No. 173) [road leading from Nuzi to Sa-imere-la] and, on the other hand, to certain Neo-Assyrian and Neo-Babylonian nouns (of the formation an du ia xxx-xu) denoting traders in commodities (salt, wine, pottery, fruit, etc.) or animals (for the latter, cf. C. H. W. Johns, Assyrian Deals and Documents [London, 1898 F.1- 1976 11:3; 1943] bu-hu); cf. also the name of the town Sa-biresu (Forrer, Provinzenteilung, p. 107).

In the sixth year of my rule, I approached the towns of the region along the Balih river. (Upon this) they (revolted and) killed Giammu, the master of their cities. I entered the town Til-Turahi. I crossed the Euphrates at its flood. I received tribute from [all] the kings of Hatti. At that time Hadadezer [of] Damascus, Irhulina from Hamath, as well as the kings of Hatti and (of) the seashore put their trust on their mutual strength and rose against me to fight a decisive battle. Upon the (oracle-) command of Ashur, the great lord, my lord, I fought with them (and) inflicted a defeat upon them. I took away from them their chariots, their cavalry-horses and their battle equipment, slaying 20,500 of their battle-experienced soldiers.

Tenth Year according to the text Schroeder, KAH, 11, n.o. Translation: Ernst Michel, Die Assur-Texte Salmanassars III in Die Welt des Orients, 1 (1947), pp. 67 ff.

(6-11)

In the tenth year of my rule, I crossed the Euphrates for the eighth time ... [I departed] from the cities (belonging) to the people of Carchemish ... together with one thousand (smaller) cities in its neighborhood. ... At that time Hadadezer of Da[mascus] ... put their trust on their mutual strength ... I inflicted a defeat upon them. [I took] their chariots....

Eleventh Year according to the Bull Inscription (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §653.

(90—96 of the Billerbeck-Delitzsch Edition)

In the eleventh year of my rule, I departed from Nineveh, I crossed for the ninth time the Euphrates at its flood. I conquered 97 towns of Sangar, I conquered 100 towns of Arame, I destroyed (them), tore (their walls down) and burnt (them) down. I seized the region of the mountain Amanus, crossed over the mountain laruqu and descended (then) against the towns (of the inhabitants) of Hamath. I conquered the town Ashtamaku together with 90 (smaller) towns, I made a massacre (among them) and their booty I carried away. At that time, Hadadezer of Damascus, Irhuleni of Hamath together with 12 kings from the seacoast trusting their combined strength set out (to march) against me for a decisive battle. I fought with them and inflicted a defeat upon them. I slew in battle 10,000 of their experienced soldiers and took away from them their chariots, cavalry-horses and their equipment.

On my return march I conquered the town Apparazu, the fortress of Arame. At that time I received the tribute of Karparundi, from Hatta, (to wit): silver, gold, tin, wine, large cattle, sheep, garments, linen. I ascended the Amanus (and) cut (there) cedar logs.

Eleventh Year according to the Black Obelisk (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §568.

(face A [base], 87—89)

In the eleventh year of my rule, I crossed the Euphrates for the ninth time. I conquered countless towns. I descended towards the towns of Hatti (and) of the country of the inhabitants of Hamath; I conquered (there) 89 towns. Hadadezer of Damascus and 12 kings of Hatti stood together (trusting) in their combined strength. I inflicted a defeat upon them.

Fourteenth Year according to the Bull Inscription (Bull B) (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§698—699.

(99—102)

In the fourteenth year of my rule, I called up the innumerable (inhabitants) of my vast country and crossed the Euphrates, at its flood, with my army of 120,000 (men). At the same time, Hadadezer of Damascus, Ithuleni from Hamath as well as 12 (other) kings from the shore of the Upper and Lower Sea, called up the(ir) innumerably large army and rose against me. I fought with them and defeated them. I destroyed their chariots (and) their cavalry-horses, taking away from them their battle equipment. To save their lives they dispersed.

Fourteenth Year according to the Black Obelisk (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §571.

(face A [base], 91—93)

In the fourteenth year of my rule, I called up the country; I crossed the Euphrates. The twelve kings rose against me. I fought (and) defeated them.

Eighteenth Year according to the Black Obelisk (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §575.

(face B [base], 97—99)

In the eighteenth year of my rule, I crossed the Euphrates for the sixteenth time. Hazael (Ha-za'-il) of Damascus rose for battle. I took away from him 1,121 chariots, 470 riding horses as well as his camp.

Eighteenth Year according to the fragment of an annalistic text published in Rawlinson, Vol. II, Pl. 5, No. 6. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §672.

In the eighteenth year of my rule I crossed the Euphrates for the sixteenth time. Hazael of Damascus (Imerihi) put his trust upon his numerous army and called up his troops in great number, making the tain Senir (Sa-ni-ru), a mountain, facing the Lebanon, to his fortress. I fought with him and inflicted a defeat upon him, killing with the sword 16,000 of his experienced soldiers. I took away from him 1,121 chariots, 470 riding horses as well as his camp. He disappeared to save his life. I marched as far as the mountains of Hauran (la-tu mahdzu), destroying, tearing down and burning innumerable towns, carrying booty away from them which was beyond counting. I (also) marched as far as the mountains of Bal'-ra'si which is a promontory (lit.: at the side of the sea) and erected there a stela with my image as king. At that time I received the tribute of the inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and of Jehu, son of Omri (la-ti-a mar Hu-un-ri-i).

Twenty-first Year according to the Black Obelisk (cf. above). Translation; Luckenbill, AR, 1, §578.

(face B [base], 102—104)

In my twenty-first year, I crossed the Euphrates for the twenty-first time. I marched against the towns of Hazacl of Damascus. Four of his larger urban settlements (mahdzu) I conquered. I received tribute from the countries of the inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and Byblos.

(c) Various Inscriptions

(a) On a basalt statue; text published by L. Messerschmidt in KAH, 1, No. 30. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §681. cf. also Ernst Michel, Die Assur-Texte Salmanassars III (858-824), Die Welt des Orientes, 1 (1947), pp. 57 f.

(14—ii 1)

I defeated Hadadezer of Damascus (Imcriz) together with twelve princes, his allies (lit.: helpers). I stretched upon the ground 20,900 of his strong warriors like Su-bi, the remnants of his troops I pushed into the Orontes (Arantu) river and they dispersed to save their lives; Hadadezer (himself) perished. Hazael, a commoner (lit.: son of nobody), seized the throne, called up a numerous army and rose against me. I fought with him and defeated him, taking the chariots of his camp. He disappeared to save his life. I marched as far as Damascus (Di-ma-as-qi), his royal residence and cut down his gardens.

(1 21—27)

Hadadezer, king of Damascus (Su-imeris), Ithuleni from Hamath, together with 150 kings from the towers of the region along [the sea], rose [against me]. I fought with them for the fourth time and inflicted a defeat upon them. [I took away from them their chariots, their cavalry-horses and] their battle equipment, they dispersed to save their lives.

(ii 14—17)

Hadadezer, king of Damascus (ṣa-imerišu), together with 12 kings of Hatti-land, rose against me. For the fourth time I fought with them and inflicted a defeat upon them. I took away from them their chariots, their cavalry-horses and their battle equipment. To save their lives they dispersed.

(c) Inscription from a marble bead published by O. Schroeder, in AJBS, n (1924), 70. Translation: Ebeling in AOT, 344.

Booty (fyHtt?) of the temple of Sheru from the town of Mallaha, the royal residence of Hazael of Damascus (imerilu) which Shalmaneser, son of Ashurnasirpal, has brought into the walls of Libbiali.5

(d) Epigraphs

From the rich iconographic documentation left by Shalmaneser III, five representations fall into the orbit of this book. They are provided with epigraphs which are given below in translation.

(Band III—Phoenicia, Tyre, Sidon, Gaza)

I received the tribute (brought) on ships from the inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon.

(Band XIII—Syria)

I conquered Ashtamaku,1 the royal residence of Irhuleni of Hatti, together with 86 (other towns).

(b) From the Black Obelisk. Epigraphs published in Layard, Inscriptions, PI. 98. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§590, 591, 593.

II

The tribute of Jehu (ia-u-a), son of Omri (Hu-um-ri); I received from him silver, gold, a golden saplu -bowl, a golden vase with pointed bottom, golden tumblers, golden buckets, tin, a staff for a king, (and) wooden paruhtu

III

The tribute of the country Musri; I received from him camels whose backs were doubled,2 a river ox (hippopotamus), a sakea -animal (rhinoceros), a susu -ante-lope, elephants, bazitu - (and) uqupu -monkeys.3

V

The tribute of Karparunda from Hattina; I received from him silver, gold, tin, bronze, copper4 lirihu -pots, ivory, (and) ebony-wood.

5. ADAD-NIRARI III (810-783) : EXPEDITION TO PALESTINE

(a) Stone Slab. From a broken stone slab found at Calah. Published by Rawlinson, Vol. 1, Pl. 35. No. 1. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§739-740.

(1—21)

Property of Adad-nirari, great king, legitimate king, king of the world, king of Assyria—a king whom Ashur, the king of the Igigi (i.e. the dei superi) had chosen (already) when he was a youngster, entrusting him with the position of a prince without rival, (a king) whose shepherding they made as agreeable to the people of Assyria as (is the smell of) the Plant of Life, (a king) whose throne they established firmly; the holy high priest (and) tireless caretaker of the temple e. s a r. r a , who keeps up the rites of the sanctuary, who acts (only) upon the trust-inspiring oracles (given) by Ashur, his lord; who has made submit to his feet the princes within the four rims of the earth; conquering from the Siluna mountain of the Rising Sun, the countries Saban, Ellipi, Harhar, Arazilha, Mesu, the (country of the) Medians, Gizilbunda in its (full) extent, the countries Munna, Persia (Farsua), Allabria, Apadana, Na’iri with all its regions, Andiu which lies far away in the pithu of the mountains with all its regions, as far as the Great Sea of the Rising Sun (and) from the banks of the Euphrates, the country of the Hitites, Amruu-country in its full extent, Tyre, Sidon, Israel (maHu-um-ri), Edom, Palestine (Paqa-as-tu), as far as the shore of the Great Sea of the Setting Sun, I made them submit all to my feet, imposing upon them tribute.

I marched against the country Sa-imerilu: I shut up Mari,5 king of Damascus (imeri) in Damascus (Di-ma-al-qi), his royal residence. The terror-inspiring glamor of Ashur, my (text: his) lord, overwhelmed him and he seized my feet, assuming the position of a slave (of mine). (Then) I received in his (own) palace in Damascus (Di-ma-aZ-qi), his royal residence, 2,300

1 The meaning "cavalry-horse" for pit-hallu is well attested; only rarely this word denotes the chariot-horse, such as, e.g. in Thureau-Dangin, VIII Campagne line 403 "one statue (representing king) Ursa with his two slaves pit-hallu-tu, his (chariot)-driver, together with its scote, made of cast bronze."

2 The name Libbê-diî refers to the central section of the town Ashur, cf. E. Unger in Reallexiínna der Assyriologie, 1, 173.

3 The name Libbibli refers to the central section of the town Ashur, cf. E. Unger in Reallexiínna der Assyriologie, 1, 173.

4 The Assyrians have taken Aram, marî "my lord" to be the name of the king and not his title, cf. my article, Une close hurrite dans les Annates de Teglath-Phalasar I, AHA, v (1935), 112, for this and similar cases of such misunderstandings.

5 The stones are always rather careless in the use of the terms urâdu ("copper") and zabâr ("bronze"), while those of the temple and fiscal administration differentiate very exactly.

Text: pit hu lada, cf. E. Ebeling, MAOG, vii/1-2 (1933), 64 n.h, for this expression.

The meaning "river ox" for pit-hallu is well attested; only rarely this word denotes the chariot-horse, such as, e.g. in Thureau-Dangin, VIII Campagne line 403 "one statue (representing king) Ursa with his two slaves pit-hallu-tu, his (chariot)-driver, together with its scote, made of cast bronze."

The word sâwûrû (usually "bronze") has to be translated here with "copper," because it refers to a container. The learned scribes of Mesopotamia were always rather careless in the use of the terms urâdu ("copper") and zabâr ("bronze"), while those of the temple and fiscal administration differentiate very exactly.

Text: pit hu lada, cf. E. Ebeling, MAOG, vii/1-2 (1933), 64 n.h, for this expression.

The meaning "river ox" for pit-hallu is well attested; only rarely this word denotes the chariot-horse, such as, e.g. in Thureau-Dangin, VIII Campagne line 403 "one statue (representing king) Ursa with his two slaves pit-hallu-tu, his (chariot)-driver, together with its scote, made of cast bronze."

The word sâwûrû (usually "bronze") has to be translated here with "copper," because it refers to a container. The learned scribes of Mesopotamia were always rather careless in the use of the terms urâdu ("copper") and zabâr ("bronze"), while those of the temple and fiscal administration differentiate very exactly.

Text: pit hu lada, cf. E. Ebeling, MAOG, vii/1-2 (1933), 64 n.h, for this expression.
(II—20)

In the fifth year (of my official rule) I sat down solemnly on my royal throne and called up the country (for war). I ordered the numerous army of Assyria to march against Palestine (Pa-la-ūs-tā). I crossed the Euphrates at its flood. As to the numerous hostile kings who had rebelled in the time of my father Shamshi-Adad (i.e., Shamshi-Adad V) and had withheld) their regular (tributes), [the terror-inspiring glam] or overwhelmed them (and) upon the command of Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Adad (and) Ishtar, my trust-inspiring gods, they seized my feet (in submission). I received all the tributes [...] which they brought to Assyria. I (then) ordered [to march] against the country Damascus (Su-ūmeril.ta). I invested Mari' in Damascus (Di-

6. TIGLATH-PILESER III (744-727):
CAMPAIGNS AGAINST SYRIA AND PALESTINE

(a) Building Inscription

From a building inscription on clay preserved in various copies, published by Rawlinson, in Vol. ii, Pi. 67. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, i, §§800-806, 803.

(56-63)

1 installed Idi-bil' as a Warden of Marches on the border of Musur. In all the countries which […] I received] the tribute of Kushtashpi of Commagene (Kummuhu), Urrike of Qe's, Sibitti-be'l of Byblos, […] Enil of Hamath, Panammu of Sam'al, Tarhulara of Gumgum, Sulam of Miletus, [...] Assurnur of Tabal, Ushitti of Tuna, Urballa of Tuhana, Tuhamme of Ishunda, […] [and he surrendered]. One hundred talents of gold (corresponding to) one thousand talents of silver, 60 talents of […] I received as his tribute.

(b) Annalistic Records

From the so-called "Annals" engraved upon slabs found in Calah. Published by P. Rost, Die Keilschrifttexte Tiglat-Pileser III nach den Papierabtyatschen und Originalen des Britischen Museums (Leipzig, 1893). Third Year, Rost, op.cit., Pis. xx-xxi, text, pp. 19-23. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, i, §§770.

(103—133)

[In] the (subsequent) course of my campaign [I received] the tribute of the kings of Gaza (Ha-za-at-a-a), of Iuda (la-ti-da-a-a), like a […] Azri'au from Iuda in countless, (reaching) sky high… eyes, like from heaven… by means of an attack with foot soldiers. […] He heard [about the approach of the] massed [armies of] Ashur and was afraid. […] I tore down, destroyed and burnt [down … for Azri']au they had annexed, they (thus) had reinforced him, […] like vine/trunks was very difficult… was barred and high … was situated and its exit… I made deep […] I surrounded his garrisons [with earthwork], against…], I made them carry [the corvee-basket] and his great… like a pot [I did crush …] (lacuna of three lines) […] Azri'au […] a royal palace of my own [I built in his city …] tribute like that for Assyrian citizens I imposed upon them […] the city Kül[iani]… his ally … the cities' Usnu, Sianna, Si[mirra], Ra[sh]puna which are on the se[a]coast as well as the cities up to the mountain Saue, the mountain which abuts on the Lebanon proper; the mountain Ba'li-Sapuna as far as the Amanus, the Boxwood-tree Mountain (in short) the entire Sau-country; the provinces of Kar-Adad, Hatarikka, the province of Nuqudina, the mountain Hasu as well as the (smaller) cities in its vicinity, the town Ara (and) the cities on

The term abaru (Sumerogram: A.BAK) denotes a rarely used metal, probably magenetic (cf. R. C. Thompson, A Dictionary of Assyrian Chemistry and Geology [Oxford, 1936], p. 116; and J. R. Partington, Origin and Development of Applied Chemistry [London, 1935], index s.v.). For unknown reasons, it has mostly been used for small objects and tools (spoon, game, etc.) prescribed for ritual purposes. For a foundation inscription on abaru, cf. Luckenbill, AR, ii, §§106 f.

For this official, cf. e.g. W. Manius, in ZA, xxxv (1910), 199 f., and B. Meissner, Babylonien und Assyrien (Heidelberg, 1920), i, p. 103.

For this country, cf. J. Lewy, in HUCA, xxvi, 470 f. and furthermore, P. Naster, L'Asie Mineure et l'Asyrie aux VIIIe et VIIe siècles av. J.C., d'après les annales des rois assyriens (Louvain, 1938), index s.v., and B. Landsberger, Sam'al, i, pp. 8 ff.
both sides of them as well as the cities in their Vicinity, the mountain Sarbu'a—the entire mountain, the towns Ashhanni (and) Iadabi, the mountain Iaraq—the entire mountain, the towns Illitarbi, Zitanu as far as Atinni, Bumami—(together) 19 districts belonging to Hamath and the cities in their Vicinity which are (situated) at the coast of the Western Sea and which they had (unlawfully) taken away for Azriau, I restored to the territory of Assyria. An officer of mine I installed as governor over them. [I deported] 30,300 inhabitants from their cities and settled them in the province of the town Ku [ . . . ]; 1,223 inhabitants I settled in the province of the Ullaba country.

Year Unknown, Rost, opcit., Pl. xv, xvi, text, pp. 26-27. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §772.

(150—157)

I received tribute from Kushhtashi of Commagene (Kummuhiu), Rezon (Ra-hi-a-nu) of Damascus (Sa-imeriui), Menahem of Samaria (Me-ni-hi-im-me 8So-me-ri-na-a-a), Hiram (Hi-ru-um-mu) of Tyre, Sibiti-bili of Byblos, Urikki of Qu'e, Pisiris of Carcshemish, Tel'ul of Hamath, Panammu of Sam'al, Tarhulara of Gurgum, Sulunmat of Militane, Dadili of Kaska, Uasumme of Tabal, Ushhiti of Tuna, Urballa of Tuhana, Tuhumme of Isthunta, Urisme of Hubishna (and) Zabibe, the queen of Arabia,† (to wit) gold, silver, tin, iron, elephant-hides, ivory, linen garments with multicolored trimmings, blue-dyed wool, purple-dyed wool, ebony-wood, boxwood-wood, whatever was precious (enough for a) royal treasure; also lambs whose stretched hides were dyed purple, (and) wild birds whose spread-out wings were dyed blue,‡ (furthermore) horses, mules, large and small cattle, (male) camels, female camels with their foals.

After the 9th Year, Rost, opcit., Pis. xxx, xxm, text pp. 35-41. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§777-779.

(205—240)

I laid siege to and conquered the town Hadara, the inherited property of Rezon of Damascus (Sa-imeriui), [the place where] he was born. I brought away as prisoners 800 (of its) inhabitants with their possessions, . . . their large (and) small cattle. 750 prisoners from Kurussa . . . prisoners from Irama, 550 prisoners from Metuna I brought (also) away. 592 towns . . . of the 16 districts of the country of Damascus (Sa-imeriui) I destroyed (making them look) like hills of (mined cities over which) the flood (had swept).

Samsi, the queen of Arabia who had acted against the oath (sworn) by Shamash and had . . . town to . . . the town Y'zasi . . . Arabia in the country of Sa[ba' . . . ] in her camp . . . she became afraid [of my mighty army] and [sent] to [me camels, camel-mares], . . . I put [an official/regent over her] and made (also) [the Bir'a'ians] bow to my feet. The inhabitants of Mas'a, of Tema (and) the inhabitants of Saba', Hiaappu, Badana, Hatti, the tribe of the Idiba'leans . . . whose countries [(are) far away], towards West, [heard] the fame of my rule [ . . . and brought]—without exception ([lit.: like one man])—as their tribute: gold, silver, [male and female camels and all kinds of spices to [me and his]sed my feet . . . I established] a palace as be[fitting for my position as their king in . . . ] and appointed Idibi'lu as governor over [the country Musru]. In my former campaigns I had considered all the cities [which . . . and I had carried away as booty and . . . the town Samaria only I did le[ave/ex- . . . ] their king [ . . . like a] fog/snow-storm . . . districts of the country Bit[-[. . . prisoners] of the town [. . .] bara, 625 prisoners of the town . . . of the town Hinatuna, 650 prisoners of the town Qana[ . . . of the town . . . jatbiti, 650 prisoners of the town Tr[ . . . all these] people together with their possessions [I brought away . . . ] the town Aruma, the town Marum [. . . (as to) Mitinti from] Ashkelon (who) had [violated] the oath sworn to me [and had revolted], (when) he learned about [the defeat inflicted upon] Rezon he [perished in] in[sanity]. [Rukibtu, son of Mitinti] sat (himself) on his throne. To . . . and he implored me 500 . . . I entered his town. Fifteen towns Idibi'lu of Arabia . . .

Year Unknown. From a fragmentary annalistic text published by Rawlinson, Vol. II, Pl. 10, No. 2,1-45; also, Rost, Pis. xxv-xxvi, text, pp. 79-83. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 1, §§815-819; cf. also E. Forrer, Provinzenteilung, pp. 59 f.

(1-34)

. . . the town Hatarikka as far as the mountain Sauna, . . . the towns: Byb[los] Simirra, Arqa, Zimarrn, . . . Uznii, [Siannu], Ri'-raba, Ri'-sisu, . . . the towns . . . of the Upper Sea, I brought under my rule. Six officers of mine I installed as governors over them. . . . the town R'ashpuna which is (situated) at the coast of the Upper Sea, [the towns . . .] nite, Gal'za, Ablilakka which are adjacent to Israel (Bit Hu-um-ri-a) [and the] wide (land of) [Naphtha], in its entire extent, I united with Assyria. Officers of mine I installed as governors upon them.

As to Hanno of Gaza (Ha-a-nu-ti-nu *Ha-az-za-at-a-a) who had fled before my army and run away to Egypt, [I conquered] the town of Gaza, . . . his personal property, his images . . . [aid I placed (?)] (the images of) my . . . gods and my royal image in his own palace . . . and declared (them) to be (thenceforward) the gods of their country. I imposed upon them tribute. [As for Menahem I overwhelmed him [like a

* The much-damaged stone tablet published by E. Nossouhi in MAOG, N1/1—2, as No. VII contains the names Ra-hi-a-nu and Sa-la-ma-al. The reading Ra-hi-a-nu instead of Ra-sum-nu has been shown by B. Landsberger in Suni'ai (Veröffentlichungen der Tuerischen historischen Gesellschaft, Series VII, No. 16 [Ankara, 1948]), p. 66, n. 159.
† For the female rulers of Arab tribes (attested in cuneiform documents from Tiglath-pileser III to Ashurbanipal, and perhaps [cf. o. 7, p. 312 Nabonidus), cf. N. Abbot, Pre-Islamic Arab Queens, in ASE, LVIII (1943), 1-32.
‡ The terms used in this context are takiltu and argamanu; die first denoting a darker, the second a reddish shade of blue purple, cf. F. Thureau-Dangin, Un comptoir de laine pourpre 4 Ras Shamra, etc., in Syria, xv (1934), 41.
snowstorm] and he . . . fled like a bird, alone, [and bowed to my feet(?)]. I returned to him to his place [and imposed tribute upon him, to wit:] gold, silver, linen garments with multicolored trimmings, . . . great . . . [I re]ceived from him. Israel (lit.: "Omri-Land" Bit Humria) . . . all its inhabitants [and] their possessions I led to Assyria. They overthrew their king Pekah (Pa-qa-ha) and I placed Hoshea (A-ŋ-st-) as king over them. I received from them 10 talents of gold, 1,000 (?) talents of silver as their [tribute] and brought them to Assyria.

As for Samsi, queen of Arabia, . . . I killed, 1,100 inhabitants, 30,000 camels, 20,000 (heads of) cattle . . . 5,000 (containers with all kinds of spices), 11 tulā'-bowls, the property of her gods, . . . her (own) possessions, I took away from her and she herself [fled] to save her life to the town Bazu, a waterless region (lit.: a place of thirst) like a wild donkey-mare . . . forced by hunger, the people which were in her [camp] . . . (Then) she became apprehensive [of the power of] my strong [army] and brought to me male and female camels, . . . her . . . [I put a regent over her. I made the Bir'ai bow to my feet.] The inhabitants of Mas'ai, Tema, the Sabaeans, the inhabitants of Haiappa, Badana, Hattia, the Idib'leans, . . . from the region of the West [whose far] away countries [nobody knows,] heard] of the fame of my rule [and] . . . they bowed to the yoke of my rule. [They brought to me]—without exception—as their tribute male and female camels and all kinds of spices and kissed my feet . . . I appointed Idibi'lu to the office of Warden of Marches on (the frontier of) Musur (Mu-su-ri).

7. SARGON II (721-705): THE FALL OF SAMARIA

(a) Inscriptions of a General Nature

(1) "Pave des Portes," No. IV, lines 31-44. Published by H. Winckler, Die Keilschrifttexte Sargons (Leipzig, 1889), i, 147 f., ii, Pl. 38. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §99.

(Property of Sargon, etc., king of Assyria, etc.) conqueror of Samaria (Sa-mi-rî-na) and of the entire (country of) Israel (Bit-Hu-um-rî-a) who despoiled Ashdod (and) Shinuhi, who caught the Greeks who (live on islands) in the sea, like fish, who exterminated Kasku, all Tabali and Cilicia (Hilakjtu), who chased away Midas (Mi-ta-a) king of Musku, who defeated Musur (Mu-su-ri) in Rabhû, who declared Hanno, king of Gaza, as booty, who subdued the seven kings of the country la', a district on Cyprus (la-ad-na-na), (who) dwell (on an island) in the sea, at (a distance of) a seven-day journey.

(2) From the so-called Cyprus Stela, published by A. Ungnad, in VS, i, 71; cf. also H. Winckler, op. cit., i, 174 ff., ii, Pis. 46-47. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §§818, 86.

(51—65, right face)

I smash [ed] like a flood-storm the country of Hamath

[In Rawlinson: tu-du-ni, according to Rost: tu-la(?)-ni. The latter seems to be the better reading, tulâ being a well-known word for a bowl shaped like the female breast.

Text: be-ed [tami]. This term refers here obviously to the political reliability of the Assyrian subjects settled in Hamath.

The enigmatic phrase has been discussed recently by J. Lewy, in HUCA, xix, 466, and taken as referring to the "landnama" of Assyria by the Assyrians.

1 besieged and conquered Samaria (Sa-me-ri-na), led in its entire [extent]. I br[ought its] ki[ng] laubi'di as well as his family, (and) [his] warriors in fett[ers], as the prisoner (contingent) of his country, to Assyria. From these (prisoners) I set [up a troop] of 300 chariots (and) 600 mout[ted men] equipped with leather shields and lan[ces], and ad[ded them] to my royal corps. I se[ttled] 6,300 Assyrians of reliable [disposition]' in the country of Hamath and installed an officer of mine as go[vernor] over them, imposing upon th[em] (the payment) of trib[ute].

(28—42, left face)

[and the seven ki]ngs of la', a district on [Cy]prus ([Ad]nana) which [lies a]midst the Western Sea at a distance of 7 days, their location being (so) far off (that) none of my royal forefathers [had ever he]ard the names of their countries (mentioned) [since the] far-off days of the si-bit mat 4Al[u]r[2] [lea]rned, far away in the midst of the sea, [the feats which I have ac]hieved in Chaldea and in Hatti, and their hearts began to pound, [terror] fell upon them. They sent me, [to] Babylon, gold, silver, objects made of ebony and boxwood (which are) the treasures of their country, and kissed my feet.

(b) From Annalistic Reports

So-called Annals and their parallels taken from the Display Inscriptions. The Annals are quoted here according to A. G. Lie, The Inscriptions of Sargon II, King of Assyria, Part I. The Annals (Paris, 1929). Their text, taken from stone slabs and wall inscriptions in Khorsabad (Dur-Sharrukin) has been published (latest publication) by H. Winckler (cf. above). The latest English translation of the Annals is that of Lie (cf. above); that of the Display Inscriptions: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §§53 ff.

(10—17)

At the beginning of my royal rule, I . . . the town of the Sama]rians [I besieged, conquered] (2 lines destroyed) [for the god . . . who le[t] me achieve (this) my triumph. . . . I led away as prisoners [27,290 in-

'Orionals in fetters, as the prisoner (contingent) of his country, to Assyria. From these (prisoners) I set [up a troop] of 300 chariots (and) 600 mounted men] equipped with leather shields and lances, and added them to my royal corps. I settled 6,300 Assyrians of reliable disposition in the country of Hamath and installed an officer of mine as governor over them and imposed upon them tribute as is customary for Assyrian citizens.

(23-26)
away as booty 27,290 inhabitants of it. I formed from among them a contingent of 50 chariots and made remaining (inhabitants) assume their (social) positions. I installed over them an officer of mine and imposed upon them the tribute of the former king. Hanno, king of Gaza and also Sib'e, the turtan of Egypt (Mu-su-ri), set out from Rapiliu against me to deliver a decisive battle. I defeated them; Sib'e ran away, afraid when he (only) heard the noise of my (approaching) army, and has not been seen again. Hanno, I captured personally. I received the tribute from Pir'u of Musru, from Samsi, queen of Arabia (and) It'tamar the Sabaeans, gold in dust-form, horses (and) camels.

(1-15)

Iamani from Ashdod, afraid of my armed force (lit.: weapons), left his wife and children and fled to the frontier of M[usru] which belongs to Meluhha (i.e., Ethiopia) and hid (lit.: stayed) there like a thief. I caught, like a fish, the Greek (Ionians) who live (on islands) amidst the Western Sea.

(23-57)

In the second year of my rule, Iub[i]'di (from Hamath) ... a large [army] he brought together at the town Qarqar and, [forgetting] the oaths [which they had sworn ... ] the [cities of Arpad, Simirra], Damascus (Di-mal-Iqcf) and Samaria [revolted against me] (lacuna of uncertain length) he (i.e. Hanno of Gaza) made [an agreement with him (i.e. the Pharaoh)] and he (i.e. the Pharaoh) called up Sib'e his turtan to assist him (i.e. Hanno) and he (Le. Sib'e) set out against me to deliver a decisive battle. I inflicted a defeat upon them (i.e. Hanno and Sib'e) upon an (oracle-) order (given) by my lord Ashur, and Sib'e, like a shepherd whose flock has been stolen, fled alone and disappeared. Hanno (however), I captured personally and brought him (with me) in fetters to my city Ashur. I destroyed Rapiliu, tore down (its walls) and burned (it). I led away as prisoners 9,033 inhabitants with their numerous possessions.

(33-37)

Ia'ubidi from Hamath, a commoner* without claim to the throne, a cursed Hittite, schemed to become king of Hamath, induced the cities Arvad, Simirra, Damascus (Di-maf-qtP) and Samaria to desert me, made them collaborate and fitted out an army. I called up the masses of the soldiers of Ashur and besieged him and his warriors in Qarqar, his favorite city. I conquered (it) and burnt (it). Himself I fpyed; the rebels I killed in their cities and established (again) peace and harmony. A contingent of 200 chariots and 600 men on horseback I formed from among the inhabitants of Hamath and added them to my royal corps.

(72-76)

In the fifth year of my rule, Pisiri of Carchemish broke the oath sworn by the great gods and wrote messages to Midas (Mi-ta-a), king of Muski, (full) of hostile plans against Assyria. I lifted my hands (in prayer) to my lord Ashur (with the result that) I (quickly) made him, and also his family, surrender (lit.: come out) (of Carchemish), (all) in fetters and with the gold, silver and his personal possessions. And the rebellious inhabitants of Carchemish who (had sided) with him, I led away as prisoners and brought (them) to Assyria. I formed from among them a contingent of 50 chariots, 200 men on horseback (and) 3,000 foot soldiers and added (it) to my royal corps. In the city of Carchemish I (then) settled inhabitants of Assyria and imposed upon their (neck) the yoke of Ashur, my lord."

* For this Egyptian name (mentioned also in II Kings 17:4) and the historical problems involved, cf. G. Stein dorf, Die keilschriftliche Wieder- gabe, aegyptischer Eigennamen (BA, 1, 339 ff.); also, Kees, GGA, 1926, p. 426; H. Ranke, Keilschriftliches Material zur alaegyptischen Vokalli- sierung, p. 38; and Helene von Zeissl, Aethiopen und Assyrer in Aegypten, Heft 14, 1944), p. 18 ff. Further, A. T. Olmstead, History of Assyria (New York, 1923), p. 204.

"To this meaning of enü, cf. Tenu discussed below, n.i, p. 289

5 For this Egyptian name (mentioned also in II Kings 17:4) and the historical problems involved, cf. G. Stein dorf, Die keilschriftliche Wieder- gabe, aegyptischer Eigennamen (BA, 1, 339 ff.); also, Kees, GGA, 1926, p. 426; H. Ranke, Keilschriftliches Material zur alaegyptischen Vokalli- sierung, p. 38; and Helene von Zeissl, Aethiopen und Assyrer in Aegypten, Heft 14, 1944), p. 18 ff. Further, A. T. Olmstead, History of Assyria (New York, 1923), p. 204.

* For this Egyptian name (mentioned also in II Kings 17:4) and the historical problems involved, cf. G. Stein dorf, Die keilschriftliche Wieder- gabe, aegyptischer Eigennamen (BA, 1, 339 ff.); also, Kees, GGA, 1926, p. 426; H. Ranke, Keilschriftliches Material zur alaegyptischen Vokalli- sierung, p. 38; and Helene von Zeissl, Aethiopen und Assyrer in Aegypten, Heft 14, 1944), p. 18 ff. Further, A. T. Olmstead, History of Assyria (New York, 1923), p. 204.

1 To the meaning of enü, cf. Tenu discussed below, n.i, p. 289

4 For this Egyptian name (mentioned also in II Kings 17:4) and the historical problems involved, cf. G. Stein dorf, Die keilschriftliche Wieder- gabe, aegyptischer Eigennamen (BA, 1, 339 ff.); also, Kees, GGA, 1926, p. 426; H. Ranke, Keilschriftliches Material zur alaegyptischen Vokalli- sierung, p. 38; and Helene von Zeissl, Aethiopen und Assyrer in Aegypten, Heft 14, 1944), p. 18 ff. Further, A. T. Olmstead, History of Assyria (New York, 1923), p. 204.

4 The Assyrian word (attested since Shalmaneser III, but tertennatu already in Bogazkoi-Akkadian, KKD, 1, 3:29 and Ebeling, KAJ, 245-17 "=tar-ten-ju-ru") refers to a high military and administrative official, second in rank only to die king (cf. E. Unger's translation Viazjop in ZATW, 1923, 204Cf.). Etymology uncertain; beside tarttanu, also taranum is attested.

5 To the thorny problem of the identification of both, name of king and name of country, cf. E. F. Weidner, AO, xiv (1941), 45 f. Also Helene von Zeissl, opcit., pp. 21 ff.

6 The text has siqsu "order," cf. von Soden, ZA, XLI (NF VII), 168.

7 This is meant to be a pun.

8 For the meaning of the term habû denoting in Akkadian (as well as Ugaritic) texts a special social class, cf. G. R. Driver and J. C. Miles, The Assyrian Laws (Oxford, 1932), p. 485 (with references); further, W. F. Albright, BASOR, 43 (1934), 29 f.; I. Mendelsoh, BASOR, 83 (1941), 36 ff.; and R. Lacheman, BASOR, 86 (1942), 36 f.

9 Usually, the yoke of the king is mentioned in connection with the status of newly subjugated peoples. The present reference to the 'Yoke of Ashur' could therefore indicate a special status of the Assyrians forcibly settled in Carchemish.
Upon a trust-inspiring oracle given by) my lord Ashur, I crushed the tribes of Tamud, Ibadidi, Mar-simnu, and Haiaipa, the Arabs who live, far away, in the desert (and) who know neither overseers nor official(s) and who had not (yet) brought their tribute to any king. I deported their survivors and settled (them) in Samaria.

From Pir’u, the king of Musru, Samsi, the queen of Arabia, It’amra, the Sabaeans,—the(se) are the kings of the seashore and from the desert—1 received as their presents, gold in the form of dust, precious stones, ivory, ebony-seeds,10 all kinds of aromatic substances, horses (and) camels.

(249-262)

Azuri, king of Ashdod, had schemed not to deliver tribute (any more) and sent messages (full) of hostilities against Assyria to the kings (living) in his neighborhood. On account of the misdeed which he (thus) committed, I abolished his rule over the inhabitants of his country and made Ahimiti, his younger brother, king over them. But the(se) Hitittes, (always) planning treachery, hated his (i.e. Ahimiti’s) reign and elevated to rule over them a Greek12 who, without claim to the throne, knew, just as they (themselves), no respect for authority. [In a sudden rage] I marched quickly—(even) in my state-chariot13 and (only) with my cavalry which never, even in friendly territory,14 leaves my side—against Ashdod, his royal residence, and I besieged and conquered the cities Ashdod, Gath (Gi-im-tu) (and) Asadummu. I declared the gods residing therein, himself, as well as the inhabitants of his country, the gold, silver (and) his personal possessions as booty. I reorganized the administration of these cities15 and placed an officer of mine as governor over them and declared them Assyrian citizens and they bore (as much) my yoke.16

(90-112)

Azuri, king of Ashdod, had schemed not to deliver tribute any more and sent messages (full) of hostilities against Assyria, to the kings (living) in his neighborhood. On account of the(se) act(s) which he committed, I abolished his rule over the people of his country and made Ahimiti, his younger brother, king over them. But the(se) Hitittes, always planning evil deeds, hated his reign and elevated to rule over them a Greek (Ja-ma-ni) who, without any claim to the throne, had no respect for authority—just as they themselves. In a sudden rage, I did not (wait to) assemble the full might of my army (or to) prepare the camping equipment, but started out towards Ashdod (only) with those of my warriors who, even in friendly areas, never leave my side. But this Greek heard about the advance of my expedition, from afar, and he fled into the territory of Musru—which belongs (now) to Ethiopia—and his (hiding) place could not be detected. I besieged (and) conquered the cities Ashdod, Gath, Asadummu; I declared his images, his wife, his children, all the possessions and treasures of his palace as well as the inhabitants of his country as booty. I reorganized (the administration of) these cities (and) settled therein people from the [regions] of the East which I had conquered personally. I installed an officer of mine over them and declared them Assyrian citizens and they pulled (as such) the straps (of my yoke). The king of Ethiopia who [lives] in [a distant country], in an inapproachable region, the road [to which is . . . ], whose fathers never—from remote days until now17—had sent messengers to inquire after the health of my royal forefathers, he did hear, even (that) far away, of the might of Ashur, Nebo (and) Marduk. The awe-inspiring glamour of my kingship blinded him and terror overcame him. He threw him (i.e. the Greek) in fetters, shackles and iron bands, and they brought him to Assyria, a long journey.

(c) From Broken Prisms

(1) The fragmentary prism Assur 16587 (= VA 8412), published by E. F. Weidner, in AJO, xiv (1941), 40 ff. (text: p. 43), reports in col. B, lines 5-11, on these events as follows:

... in the region of the town Nahal-musur ... I made [my army] march [the road] towards sunset... the sheik2 of the town Laban . . . Shilkanni (or: Shil-heni),8 king of Musri, who . . . the terror-inspiring glamour of Ashur, my lord, overwhelmed him and he brought as tdmaru -present 12 fine (lit.: big) horses from Musri which have not their equals in this country.

10 These seeds are part of the Mesopotamian pharmacopoeia.
12 The pertinent texts interchange the expressions sammu (i.e. Ionian) and labdu; cf. D. D. Luckenbill, ZA, xxvii (1913), 92 ff.
13 According to this passage, the vehicle termed saralbar sepe was not destined for speedy transportation nor for warlike purposes.
14 This translation is suggested by the context (differendy Landsberger, in ZA, xlvii [1914], 13). For the meaning of the administrative terminus tecmicus ana eṣer saubtu, cf. B. Meissner, Babylonien und Assyrien (Heidelberg, 1920), 1, p. 141.
15 A very similar version of this report is contained in the fragment BM 81-7-23, published by E. F. Weidner, in AJO, xiv (1941), 40, with transliteration and translation on p. 50.
In my third campaign I marched against Hatti. Luli, king of Sidon, whom the terror-inspiring glamour of my lordship had overwhelmed, fled far overseas and perished. The awe-inspiring splendor of the "Weapon" of Ashur, my lord, overwhelmed his strong cities (such as) Great Sidon, Little Sidon, Bit-Zitti, Zaribtu, Mahalibia, Ushu (i.e. the mainland settlement of Tyre), Akitzib (and) Akko, (all) his fortress cities, walled (and well) provided with feed and water for his garrisons, and they bowed in submission to my feet. I installed Ethba'al (Tuba'lu) upon the throne to be their king and imposed upon him tribute (due to me) as his overlord (to be paid) annually without interruption. As to all the kings of Amurru—Menahem (Mi-ni-hi-im-mu) from Samsimuruna, Tuba'lu from Sidon, Abdill'ti from Arvad, Urumilki from Byblos, Mitiniti from Ashdod, Buduil from Beth-Ammon, Kammsun-adbi from Moab (and) Aiaramu from Edom, they brought sumptuous gifts (qisqa) and—fourfold—their heavy tdmartu -presents to me and kissed my feet. Sidqia, however, king of Ashkelon, who did not bow to my yoke, I deported and sent to Assyria, his family-gods, himself, his wife, his children, his brothers, all the male descendants of his family. I set Sharruludari, son of Rukibtu, their former king, over the inhabitants of Ashkelon and imposed upon him the payment of tribute (and of) kattr -presents (due to me) as overlord— (and he (now) pulls the straps (of my yoke))!

In the continuation of my campaign I besieged Beth-Dagon, Joppa, Banai-Barqa, Azuru, cities belonging to Sidqia who did not bow to my feet quickly (enough); I conquered (them) and carried their spoils away. The officials, the patricians and the (common) people of Ekron—who had thrown Padi, their king, into fetters (because he was) loyal to (his) solemn oath (sworn) by the god Ashur, and had handed him over to Hezekiah, the Jew (Ha-za-qi-(i)a-u and la-4-da-ai)—(and he (Hezekiah) held him in prison, unlawfully, as if he (Padi) be an enemy)—had become afraid and had called (for help) upon the kings of Egypt (Mus(u)ri) (and the bowmen, the chariots-corsps and the cavalry of the king of Ethiopia (Meluhha), an army beyond counting—and they (actually) had come to their assistance. In the plain of Eltekeh (Al-ta-qu-4), their battle lines were drawn up against me and they sharpened their weapons. Upon a trust (inspiring) oracle (given) by Ashur, my lord, I fought with them and inflicted a defeat upon them. In the melee of the battle, I personally captured alive the Egyptian charioteers with the(ir) princes and (also) the charioteers of the king of...
Ethiopia. I besieged Eltekeh (and) Timnah (Tu-anna-a), conquered (them) and carried their spoils away. I assaulted Ekron and killed the officials and patricians who had committed the crime and hung their bodies on poles surrounding the city. The (common) citizens of war. The rest of them, those who were not accused of crimes and misbehavior, I released. I made Padi, their king, come from Jerusalem (Ur-saqi-im-mu) and set him as their lord on the throne, imposing upon him the tribute (due) to me (as) overlord.

As to Hezekiah, the Jew, he did not submit to my yoke, I laid siege to 46 of his strong cities, walled forts and to the countless small villages in their vicinity, and conquered (them) by means of well-stamped (earth-)ramps, and battering-rams brought (thus) near (to the walls) (combined with) the attack by foot soldiers, (using) mines, breeches as well as sapper work. I drove out (of them) 200,150 people, young and old, male and female, horses, mules, donkeys, camels, big and small cattle beyond counting, and considered (them) booty. Himself I made a prisoner in Jerusalem, his royal residence, like a bird in a cage. I surrounded him with earthwork in order to molest those who were leaving his city's gate. His towns which I had plundered, I took away from his country and gave them (over) to Mitinti, king of Ashdod, Padi, king of Ekron, and Sillibel, king of Gaza. Thus I reduced his country, but I still increased the tribute and the (yoke) upon Hezekiah, its king. I laid waste the large district of Judah and put (to the walls) (combined with) the attack by foot soldiers and (also) to the fish of the ocean. After I had permitted the terror-inspiring splendor of my lordship had overwhelmed and whose irregular* and elite troops which he had brought into Jerusalem, his royal residence, in order to strengthen (it), had deserted him, did send me, later, to Nineveh, my lordly residence, in order to strengthen (it), had sent his (personal) messenger.

And Luli, king of Sidon, was afraid to fight me and fled to the country Cyprus (laddana) which is (an island) in the midst of the sea, and sought refuge (there). But even in this land, he met infamous death before the awe-inspiring splendor of the "Weapon" of my lord Ashur. I installed Ethba'al (Tuba'lu) upon his royal throne and imposed upon him the tribute (due to) me (as his) overlord. I laid waste the large district of Judah (la-ü-dt) and made the overbearing and proud Hezekiah (Ha-za-qi-a-a-a-a), its king, bow in submission.

(I3—15)

I deprived Luli, king of Sidon, of his kingdom. I installed Ethba'al (Tuba'lu) upon his throne and I imposed upon him the tribute (due to) me (as his) overlord. I laid waste the large district of Judah and put the straps (absáni) of my (yoke) upon Hezekiah, its king.

(4) Epigraph from a relief showing the conquest of Lachish.

To illustrate the still mysterious circumstances of the death of Sennacherib, a passage of the annals of Ashurbanipal (Rassam Cylinder, published by Rawlinson, v, Pis. 1-10) is translated here.

Sennacherib, king of the world, king of Assyria, sat upon a nimedu -throne and passed in review the booty (taken) from Lachish (La-ü-dt).

(b) The Death of Sennacherib

I tore out the tongues of those whose slanderous mouths had uttered blasphemies against my god Ashur and had plotted against me, his god-fearing prince; I defeated them (completely). The others, I smashed alive with the very same statues of protective deities with which they had smashed my own grandfather Sennacherib—now (finally) as a (belated) burial sacrifice for his soul. I fed their corpses, cut into small pieces, to dogs, pigs, zebu -birds, vultures, the birds of the sky and (also) to the fish of the ocean. After I had performed this and (thus) made quiet (again) the hearts of the great gods, my lords, I removed the corpses of those whom the pestilence had killed, whose leftovers (after) the dogs and pigs had fed on them were obstructing the streets, filling the places (of Babylon), (and) of those who had lost their lives through the terrible famine.

\footnote{For discussions dealing with the mysterious events connected with the death of Sennacherib and the accession of Esarhaddon, cf. H. Hirschberg, Studien zur Geschichte Esarhaddons, Königs von Assyrien (686-669) (Oblau, 1932), and the pertinent book reviews of J. Schawe, in AJSL, xxv (1935), p. 290 ff.; and Wo befand sich Asarhaddon zur Zeit der Ermordung Sanheribis? in Analecta Orientalia, xu (1936), 232 ff.}
Property of Esarhaddon, great king, legitimate king, king of the world, king of Assyria, regent of Babylon, king of Sumer and Akkad, king of the four rims (of the earth), the true shepherd, favorite of the great gods, whom Ashur, Shamash, Bel and Nebo, the Ishtar of Nineveh (and) the Ishtar of Arbela have pronounced king of Assyria (ever) since he was a youngster.

I was (indeed) the (ir) youngest (brother) among my elder brothers, (but) my own father, upon the command of Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Bel and Nebo, the Ishtar of Nineveh (and) the Ishtar of Arbela, has chosen me—in due form and in the presence (lit.: assembly) of all my brothers—saying: "This is the son to (be elevated to) the position of a successor of mine." (Then) he put this question before Shamash and Adad by means of an oracle and they answered him: "He (verily) is your replacement." He (i.e. Sennacherib) heeded their important pronouncement and called together the people of Assyria, young and old, my brothers (and all) the male descendants of (the family of) my father and made them take a solemn oath in the presence of (the images of) the gods of Assyria: Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Nebo (and) Marduk, (and) of (all) the (other) gods residing in heaven and in the nether world, in order to secure my succession.

In a propitious month, on a favorable day, I happily entered—upon their exalted (oracle-) command—the palace of the crown prince, this highly venerable place in which (those) live (who are) destined for the kingship. (When) the real meaning (of this act) dawned upon my brothers, they abandoned godliness, put their trust on bold actions, planning an evil plot. They originated against me slander, false accusation, (whatever is) disliked by the gods, and constantly were spreading evil, incorrect and hostile (rumors) behind my back. (Thus) they alienated from me—against the will of the gods—the heart of my father which was (formerly) friendly, (though) in the bottom of his heart there was (always) love (for me) and his intentions were (always) that I should become king. I became apprehensive and asked myself as follows: "Are their bold actions based upon trust in their own ideas or could they have acted (that) evil against the will of the gods?" I implored Ashur, the king of the gods (and) the merciful Marduk, to (both of) whom baseness is an abomination, by means of prayers, lamentations and prostrations, and they (eventually) agreed to (give) the (oracle-)answer (that the brothers acted) according to the decision of the great gods, my lords. And they (the gods) made me stay in a hiding place in the face of (these) evil machinations, spreading their sweet protecting shadow over me and (thus) preserving me for the kingship.

Thereupon, my brothers went out of their senses, doing everything that is wicked in (the eyes of) the gods and mankind, and (continued) their evil machinations. They (even) drew weapons in the midst of Nineveh (which is) against (the will of) the gods, and butted each other—like kids—to take over the kingship. Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Bel, Nebo, the Ishtar of Nineveh (and) the Ishtar of Arbela looked with displeasure upon these doings of the usurpers which had come to pass against the will of the gods, and they did not help them. (On the contrary) they changed their strength into weakness and (thus) made them (eventually) bow beneath me. (Also) the people of Assyria which had sworn the oath of the great gods, by means of water and oil, to protect my claim to the kingship, did not come to their assistance. But I, Esarhaddon, who never turns around in a battle, trusting in the great gods, his lords, soon heard of these sorry happenings and I cried out "Woe!" rent my princely robe and began to lament loudly. I became as mad as a lion, my soul was aflame and I (called up the gods by) clapping my hands, with regard to my (intention of) assuming the kingship, my paternal legacy. I prayed to Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Bel, Nebo and Nergal, (to) the Ishtar of Nineveh, the Ishtar of Arbela, and they agreed to give an (oracle-) answer. By means of their correct (and) positive answer, they sent me the (following) trustworthy oracle (received by) extispicy: "Go (ahead), do not tarry! We will march with you, kill your enemies!" I did not even wait for the next day,* nor for my army, did not turn back (for a moment), did not muster the contingents of horses broken to the yoke or the battle equipment, I did not (even) pile up provisions for my expedition, I was not afraid of the snow and the cold of the month Shabatu (in which) the winter is (at its) hard (est)—but I spread my wings like the (swift-)flying storm(bird) to overwhelm my enemies. I followed that road to Nineveh which is difficult for traveling but short. In front of me, in the territory of Hanigalbat, all their (i.e. the brothers') best soldiers blocked the advance of my expeditionary corps, sharpening their weapons (for the battle). But the terror (inspiring sight) of the great gods, my lords, overwhelmed them and they turned into madmen when they saw the attack of my strong battle array. Ishtar, the Lady of Battle, who likes me (to be) her high priest, stood at my side breaking their bows, scattering their orderly battle array. And then they spoke among themselves: "This is our king!" Upon her lofty command they went over in masses to me and rallied behind me. Like lambs they gamboled and (recognized) me as their lord by praying (to me). The people of

\[1\] The term šuru (from enu "to change, replace") corresponds exactly to Arabic zulub.
\[2\] The reading zuru fits better into the context than the variant šuru.
\[3\] Translation suggested by context.

•Idiomatic expression, lit.: "one day, two days, I did not wait."
Assyria which had sworn an oath by the life of the great gods on my behalf, came to meet me and kissed my feet. But they, the usurpers, who had started the rebellion, deserted their (most) trustworthy troops, when they heard the approach of my expeditionary corps and fled to an unknown country.

I reached the embankment of the Tigris and upon the (oracle-)command of Sin and Shamash, the (two) lords of the (celestial) embankment, I had all my troops jump over the Tigris as if it be a small ditch.

(""

In the month of Addar, a favorable month, on the 8th day, the day of the Nebo festival, I entered joyfully into Nineveh, the town in which I (exercise) my lordship and sat down happily upon the throne of my father. The Southwind, the breeze (directed by) Ea, blew (at this moment), this wind, the blowing of which portends well for exercising kingship, came just in time for me. (Other) favorable omena on the sky and on earth (which to interpret is) the work of the seer, messages of the gods and goddesses, happened continuously to me and made my heart confident. The culpable military which had schemed to secure the sovereignty of Assyria for my brothers, I considered guilty as a collective group and meted out a grievous punishment to them; I (even) exterminated their male descendants.

(b) Texts of a General Nature

(i) From the Steinplatteninschrift published by L. Messerschmidt, in KAH, i, No. 75. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 11, §710.

(2—11 obverse)

I cut down with the sword and conquered ... I caught like a fish (and) cut off his head. I trod up[on Arza] at the "Brook of Eg[ypt]." I put Asuhili, its king, in fetters and took [him to Assyria]. I conquered the town of Bazu in a district which is far away. Upon Qanaia, king of Tilmun. I imposed tribute due to me as (his) lord. I conquered the country of Shupria in its full extent and slew with (my own) weapon Ik(!)-Teshup, its king who did not listen to my personal orders. I conquered Tyre which is (an island) amidst the sea. I took away all the towns and the possessions of Ba'lu its king, who had put his trust on Tirhakah (Turq), king of Nubia (Kusu). I conquered Egypt (Musur), Patur[i] and Nubia. Its king, Tirhakah, I wounded five times with arrowshots and ruled over his entire country; I carfird much booty away. All the kings from the (islands) amidst the sea—from the country Iadanana (Cyprus), as far as Tarsisi, bowed to my feet and I received heavy tribute (from them).

(ii) From a clay barrel found in Ashur and published by E. Nassouhi, ibid, as No. XII, 22 ff.

(7-S)

Conqueror of the town Sidon which is situated (on an island) in the midst of the sea ... [who plundered the country Arsa] which is (situated) along the "Brook of Egypt" (ite ‘hu na-ḥad watsm<s>-tʃ/-ʃ/), who put its [king] Asu[hi] in fetters together with his counclors \mali\u_...

(c) The Syro-Palestinian Campaign

(9-54)

(I am Esarhaddon, the conqueror of Sidon, which lies (on an island) amidst the sea, (he) who has leveled all its urban buildings—I even tore up and cast into the sea its wall and its foundation, destroying (thus) completely the (very) place it (i.e. Sidon) was built (upon). I caught out of the open sea, like a fish, Abdimilkutte, its king, who had fled before my attack into the high sea, and I cut off his head. I carried away as booty his piled-up possessions in large amounts (to wit): gold, silver, precious stones, elephant-hides, ivory, ebony and boxwood, garments (made) with multicolored trimmings and linen, all his personal valuables. I drove to Assyria his teeming people which could not be counted, (also) large and small cattle and donkeys. I (then) called together and made all the kings of the country Hatti and of the seashore (do corve-work for me) by making them erect the walls of another (residence) and I called its name Kar-Esarhaddon. I setded therein people from the mountain regions and the sea(shore) of the East, (those) who belonged to me as my share of the booty. I set over them officers of mine as governors.

As for Sanduari, king of Kundi and Sizu, an inveterate enemy, unwilling to recognize me as ruler (and) whom the gods (therefore) forsook,—(who) had put his trust upon the rugged mountains (of his country) and had made Abdimilkutte, king of Sidon, his ally (lit.: helper) by taking mutual oaths by the life of the great gods—they put their trust upon their own force while I trusted Ashur, my lord,—I caught him like a bird in his mountains and (likewise) cut off his

1 For Arza or Arsa cf. Weissbach, ZA, XXVIII, 108 ff.
2 cf. for this name 'i. J. Leibovitch, Pathros, in Bulletin de l'Institut d'Egypte, XVII (1934-35), 55-68.
3 Text: Nu-si-si (identified with Knossos by Luckenbill, in ZA, xxviii, 95) but the tablet has actually Tar-si-si (cf. Meissner, DIZ, 1917, 410). Cf. also Weidner, Melanges syriens, u. 932, n.3, Albright, BASOR, 83, 21 ff.

(2) The door socket published (with transliteration and translation) by E. Nassouhi, Textes divers relatifs à l'histoire de VAssyrie (MAOG, m/1-2, Leipzig, 1927) No. x, 19 f.

To Ashur, his lord, Esarhaddon, king of the world, king of [Assyria], governor of Babylon, king of Kar-Duni[ash], king of kings, k[ing] of E[gypt] (Mlf-ur- surf), Patur[i] and Nubia (Kasu), [has dedicated this door/building] for his (own) life and the prosperity (julmu) of his country.
Abdimilkutte, king of Sidon, without respect for my position as lord, without listening to my personal orders, threw off the yoke of the god Ashur, trusting the heaving sea (to protect him). As to Sidon, his fortress, which lies in the midst of the sea, I leveled it as (and) in great quantities. I led to Assyria his teeming tribute, his daughters with dowries (as well as) all which are situated on the mainland [and reorganized [the region] turning it over to Assyria.

(d) The Campaign against the Arabs and Egypt

(1) From the Prism B, published by R. Campbell Thompson, op. cit. Translation: ibid., p. 20.

(2) Fijom Prism B. published by R. Campbell Thompson, op. cit. Translation: ibid., p. 16.

(ii 65–82)

Abdimilkutte, king of Sidon, without respect for my position as lord, without listening to my personal orders, threw off the yoke of the god Ashur, trusting the heaving sea (to protect him). As to Sidon, his fortress town, which lies in the midst of the sea, I leveled it as (if) an abtibu -storm (had passed over it), its walls and foundations I tore out and threw (them) into the sea destroying (thus) its emplacement completely. I caught Abdimilkutte, its king, who fled before my attack into the sea, upon an oracle-command of Ashur, my lord, like a fish on high sea and cut off his head. I carried off as booty: his wife, his children, the person-conscious stones, garments made of multicolored trimmings and linen, elephant-hides, ivory, ebony and boxwood, whatever precious objects there were in his palace, which could not be counted, (and) large and small cattle and donkeys in great quantities. (There), I called together all the kings of the country Hatti and from the seacoast and made them build a town (for me) on a new location, calling its name Kar-Esarhadon.

(3) From the fragmentary text K 267(1) rev., published by H. Winckler, in Za, 11 (1887), Pl. 1, after p. 314. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, n. §547.

(reverse 2—10)

[Ba’lu, king of Tyre, living [on an island amidst the sea] . . . threw off my yoke . . . [of] Ashur and the splendor of my lordship [overwhelmed him] . . . [he] bowed down and implored me, as his lord. . . heavy [tribute], his daughters with dowries [as well as] all the [tribut]es which he had omitted (to send). He kissed my feet. I took away from him those of his towns (which are situated on) the mainland [and reorganized [the region]] turning it over to Assyria.

(4) From the Prism B, published by R. Campbell Thompson, op. cit. Translation: ibid., pp. 25 f.

(v 54—vi 1)

I called up the kings of the country Hatti and (of the region) on the other side of the river (Euphrates) (to wit): Ba’lu, king of Tyre, Manasseh (Me-na-si-i), king of Judah (La-ti-di), Qausghabri, king of Edom, Musuri, king of Moab, Sil-Bel, king of Gaza, Metinti, king of Ashkelon, Ikauzu, king of Ekron, Milkashapa, king of Byblos, Matanba’al, king of Arvd, Abiba’al, king of Samsimuruna, Puduil, king of Beth-Ammon, Ahimilk, king of Ashdod—12 kings from the seacoast;

Ekishtura, king of Edi’il (Idalion),1 Pilagura (Py-thagoras), king of Kitrusi (Chytros), Kisu, king of Sillu’ua (Soli), Ituandar, king of Pappa (Paphos), Erisu, king of Silli, Damasu, king of Kuri (Curium), Atmesu, king of Tamesi, Damusi, king of Qarti-hadasti (Car-thage), Unasagusu, king of Lidir (Ledra), Bususu, king of Nuria,—10 kings from Cyprus (Iadnana) amidst the sea, together 22 kings of Hatti, the seashore and the islands; all these I sent out and made them transport under terrible difficulties, to Nineveh, the town (where I exercise) my rulership, as building material for my palace: big logs, long beams (and) thin boards from cedar and pine trees, products of the Sirara and Lebanon (Lab-na-na) mountains, which had grown for a long time into tall and strong timber, (also) from their quarries (lit.: place of creation) in the mountains, statues of protective deities (lit.: of Lamassu and Shedu) made of aš n a n -stone, statues of (female) abzazu,2 thresholds, slabs of limestone, of aš n a n -stone, of large- and small-grained breccia, of ddu- -stone, (and) of gi.r.in.hi.li.ba -stone®

(1) From the Prism B, published by R. Campbell Thompson, op. cit. Translation: ibid., p. 20.1

(2) From Adumatu,2 the stronghold of the Arabs which Sennacherib, king of Assyria, my own father, had conquered and (from where) he has taken as booty its possessions, its images as well as Iskallatu, the queen of the Arabs, and brought (all these) to Assyria, Hazail, the king of the Arabs, came with heavy gifts to Nineveh, the town (where I exercise) my rulership, and kissed my feet. He implored me to return his images and I had mercy upon him; I repaired the damages of the images of Atarsamain, Dai, Nuhai, Ruldaiu, Abirillu (and of) Atarquruma,3 the gods of the Arabs, and returned them to him after having written upon them an inscription (proclaiming) the (superior) might of Ashur, my lord, and my own name. I made Tarbua who had grown up in the palace of my father their queen and returned her to her (native) country together

1 For these more or less tentative identifications, cf. Sir George Hill, A History of Cyprus (London, 1940), 1, 107 ff.
2 For this stone, cf. B. Meissner, in MAOG, xi (1937), 21 (No. 17), for the stones called alalu and aš n a n cf. respectively pp. 159 and 165 of R. C. Thompson, A Dictionary of Assyrian Chemistry and Geology (Oxford, 1936).
3 For Arabia at this period, cf. Trude Weiss Rosmarin, Arabi und Arabien in den Babylonisch-Assyrischen Quellen, in JSOR, xvi (1932), 1 ff., especially 14 ff. For Egypt at this period, I can only refer to Helene von Zeisel, Aethiopen und Arabier in Aegypten (Aegyptologische Forschungen, No. 14 [Gluecksstadt, 1944]).
4 Identified with Djof by E. Forrer, Provinzteilung, p. 64. cf. also W. F. Albright, The Conquests of Nahorid in Arabia, JRSA, 1925, pp. 293 ff.
5 For this enumeration of pre-Islamic Arab deities, cf. Weiss Rosmarin, JSOR, xvi (1932), 32.
with her gods. As an additional tribute, I imposed upon him (the payment of) 65 camels (and) 10 foals (more than) before. When fate carried Hazail away, I set lata', his son, upon his throne and assessed upon him an additional tribute of 10 minas of gold (and) 1,000 birutu-stones, 50 camels, 100 unzu-bags with aromatic matter (more than) his father (paid).

Afterwards, Wahb (Uabu) induced all the Arabs to revolt against lata', (because) he wanted to become king (himself), but I, Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, king of the four rings (of the earth), who loves justice and to whom crookedness is an abomination, sent my army to the assistance of lata', and they subdued all the Arabs. They threw Wahb and the warriors of his entourage in fetters and brought them (to me). I put collars on them and bound them to the posts of my gate.

(13 obverse—end)

[Ar]zani which is (situated) on the "Brook of Egypt" I reached ... I destroyed

(reverse)

I brought [NN with he]avy [booty] to Assyria ..., like a pig I tied him [to the gate of]____[As to Hazail, king of Arabia], my [awe-inspiring splendor] overwhelmed him and he brought to me gold, silver, precious stones [and . . . ] and kissed my feet I imposed upon him 65 camels more than [the tribute] imposed by my father. Afterwards, Hazail [died and lata'], his son, sat down [upon] his throne and I (again) imposed upon him an (additional) tribute of 10 minas of gold, 1,000 birdte-stones, 50 ca[mels above the tribute] paid by his father. Wahb (however) induced all the Arabs to rebel against lata' and . . . [But, I, Esarhad-don] to whom [and crooked]ness is an abomination [sent out] (a contingent) of bowmen (mounted on) horse(backs) from my army [and pa]cified [the Arabs] making (them) submit (again) to him (i.e. lata'). They brought Wahb together with the [other leaders to Assyria and they tied him] to the left side of the Metal-worker's Gate in Nineveh and made (him) guard the bar__Abdimilkutte, ki[ng of] Sidon [and Sanduurri], king of Kundi (and) Si[zu] (destroyed).

(6 obverse—18 reverse)

In my tenth campaign, I directed my march [against

... I ordered . . . ] towards the country . . . which is called in the language of the people of Nubia (Kesu) and Egypt (Musur)—I called up the numerous army of Ashur which was stationed in . . . In the month of Nisanu, the first month (of the year), I departed from my city Ashur. I crossed the Tigris and the Euphrates at (the time of) their flood; I advanced over the difficult territory (of my route) as quick-footed as a wild ox. In the course of my campaign I threw up earthwork (for a siege) against Ba'lu, king of Tyre who had put his trust upon his friend Tirhakah (TarqA), king of Nubia (Kusu), and (therefore) had thrown off the yoke of Ashur, my lord, answering (my admonitions with) insolence. I withheld from them (i.e. the inhabitants of besieged Tyre) food and (fresh) water which sustain life. (Then) I removed my camp from Musru and marched directly towards Meluhha—a distance of 30 double-hours from the town of Apku which is in the region of Samaria (Sa-me-r[i-na]) as far as the town Rapihu (in) the region adjacent to the "Brook of Egypt"—and there is no river (all the way)! By means of cords, chains (and) buckets I had to provide water for my army by drawing from wells.

(reverse)

When the oracle-command of Ashur, my lord, came to my mind (during this calamity) my soul [rejoiced] (and) I put [water bottles] ... upon the camels which all the kings of Arabia had brought . . . . A distance of 20 double-hours in a journey of 15 days through . . . I advanced. A distance of 4 double-hours I marched over a territory covered with alum and mitsu[-stone].8 A distance of 4 double-hours in a journey of 2 days (there were) two-headed serpents [whose attack] (spelled) death—but I trampled (upon them) and marched on. A distance of 4 double-hours in a journey of 2 days (there were) green [animals] whose wings were bating. A distance of 4 double-hours in a journey of 2 days ... upper . . . . A distance of 15 double-hours in a journey of 8 days, I advanced [through] . . . . (then) Marduk, the great lord, came to my assistance [he did . . . and thus] kept my troops alive. For 20 days and 7 [double miles] (a town/region) which is on the border of . . . Magan.1 [In . . . ] I spent the night. From the town of Maig[da][li] I advanced to the town of . . ., a distance of 40 double-hours measured . . . this territory was like KA[ . . . ]-stone, [ . . . sharp] like the point of a spear/arrow . . . blood and pus . . . the wicked

8 This text uses the geographical terms Musru, Magan, Meluhha, etc. rather loosely.

For the words used in this context (iblu, harharru, and "ul-ululu), cf. Landsberger, in ZA, XLIII (NF 1X), 75.

9 Text: iblu-iblu. The alum of this region seems to have been exported to Egypt where it was denoted with a Semitic loan word: ibhu, i.e. "stones."

A stone called mitsu is well attested; cf. B. Meissner, OLZ, xxv (1914), 54, N.1; also E. F. Weidner, AJA, VIII (1932-3), 58. In the present context, the word is, however, incompletely preserved.

* Probably referring to obsidian. enemy together as far as . . . to the town of Ishhup[ri]⁵ (balance destroyed).

(4) From the fragment, British Museum 80-7-19.15. Translation and translation only by H. Winckler, Untersuchungen zur altorientalischen Geschichte (J.Wippl. 1889), p. 98.

I scattered their well arranged battle force . . . his brother, his governors [ . . . from] Ishhupri as far as Memphis (destroyed).

(5) From the Senjiri Stela published by A. Ungnad, in VS, i, No. 78 (cf. also, ibid., p. x). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, 11, §§80.

(37–53 reverse)

From the town of Ishhupri as far as Memphis, his royal residence, a distance of 15 days (march). I fought daily, without interruption, very bloody battles against Tirhakah (Tarqu), king of Egypt and Ethiopia, the one accursed by all the great gods. Five times I hit him with the point of my arrows (inflicting) wounds (from which he should) not recover, and (then) I led siege to Memphis, his royal residence, and conquered it in half a day by means of mines, breaches and assault ladders; I destroyed (it), tore down (its walls) and burnt it down. His "queen," Ushanahuru, his "heir apparent," burned it in half a day by means of mines, breaches and assault siege to Memphis, his royal residence, and conquered it immediately to the next, which clearly records the campaign against Egypt. The damaged lines mention Tyre and Ashkelon as has been shown by E. F. Weidner in Assyrian Deeds and Documents, XLIV, 256; for sadinu, cf. 1129:3.

I deported from Egypt—leaving not even one to do homage (to me). Everywhere in Egypt, I appointed new (local) kings, governors, officers (la[mu]), harbor overseers, officials and administrative personnel. I installed regular sacrificial dues for Ashur and the (other) gods, my lords, for all times. I imposed upon them tribute due to me (as their) overlord, (to be paid) annually without ceasing. I had (also) made (this) stela (bearing) my name-inscription and had written thereupon the praise of the valor of my lord Ashur, my own mighty deeds—when I was marching (against the enemy) upon the trustworthy oracles of my lord Ashur—as well as my triumphal personal achievements, and I erected it, for all days to come, (so that) it was to be seen by the entire country of the enemy.

(7^end)

I entered Memphis (Me-im-pi), his royal residence, amidst (general) jubilation and rejoicing. . . . [upon]

---

¹ Against Landsberger-Bauer (ZA, XXXVII [NF in], 76 f.), who locate the above described region in Persia, this local name links our fragment immediately to the next, which clearly records the campaign against Egypt.

² Text: S & E. 4 a 1; for this unique denomination of the wife of a ruler of royal rank, cf., e.g., Martin, Tribut, p. 50, n.1, who discusses the Semogram SAL.LGAL denoting the wife of the Assyrian king. Actual ruling queens (on the divine as well as on the human level) are termed Jarratu (in the Hitite texts SAL.LGAL).

³ Text: SALERIN.GAL.

⁴ Text: mar ridiciti.

⁵ Text: lu.nig. ga.m e-Ri-mu. Hapax legomenon. town Ashur-matsu-urappish, Sik[ ] over the town Ashur-nakamte-LAL, Pudim[e[ ] over the town Lim-mir-ishak-Ashur, Dim[u[ ] over the town Kar-Bainite, Sin[ ] over the town Bit-Marduk, the town Sha-Ashur-turu, the town . . . Arad-Nana, my murafyisu-officer . . . Uarbis in the town . . . Kisir-Ishtar in the town Sha-emuq-Ashur . . . (as) regular sacrificial offerings for Ashur and the great gods: 9 talents 19 minas of gold 300 . . . 1,585 garments . . . ebony wood/trees, 199 leather . . . if . . . 340 horses . . . 30,418 rams . . . 19,323 donkeys . . . as the tribute (paid for) the rule of Assyria... Ashur

10. ASHRUBANIPAL (668-633)

(a) Campaigns against Egypt, Syria, and Palestine

(i 53–ii 94)

In my first campaign I marched against Egypt (Magan) and Ethiopia (Meluhha). Tirhakah (Tarqu), king of Egypt (Musur) and Nubia (Kusu), whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, my own father, had defeated and in whose country he (Esarhaddon) had ruled, this (same) Tirhakah forgot the might of Ashur, Ishtar and the (other) great gods, my lords, and put his trust upon his own power. He turned against the kings (and) regents whom my own father had appointed in Egypt. He entered and took residence in Memphis (Me-im-pi), the city which my own father had conquered and incorporated into Assyrian territory. An express messenger came to Nineveh to report to me. I became very angry on account of these happenings, my soul was aflame. I lifted my hands, prayed to Ashur and to the Assyrian Ishtar. (Then) I called up my mighty armed forces which Ashur and Ishtar have entrusted to me and took the shortest (lit.: straight) road to Egypt (Musur) and Nubia. During my march (to Egypt) 22 kings from the seashore, the islands and the mainland,

A list of these kings is contained in the text of Cylinder C, composed of various fragments by M. Streck, op.cit., pp. 139 ff.

Translation: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §876.

(1 24–46)

Ba’al, king of Tyre, Manasseh (Mi-in-si-e), king of Judah (ia-ii-di), Qasshabri, king of Edom, Musuri, king of Moab, Sili-Bel, king of Gaza, Mitinti, king of Ashkelon, Ikausu, king of Ekron, Miliaksha, king of Byblos, Iakunu, king of Arvad, Abiba’al, king of Samsimuruna, Amninadbi, king of Beth-Amon, Ahumilk, king of Ashdod, Eksitura, king of Edili, Pilagura, king of Pitris, Kisu, king of Sihua, Ituanar, king of Pappa, Erisu, king of Sillu, Damasu, king of Kuri, Admesu, king of Tamesu, Damasu, king of Qorti-hadasti, Unasagusu, king of Lidir, Pususu, king of Nure, together 12 kings from the seashore, the islands and the mainland; servants who belong to me, brought heavy gifts (td-martu) to me and kissed my feet. I made these kings accompany my army over the land—as well as (over) the sea-route with their armed forces and their ships (respectively). Quickly I advanced as far as Kar-Bainite to bring speedy relief to the kings and regents in Egypt, servants who belong to me. Tirhakah, king of Egypt (Musur) and Nubia, heard in Memphis of the coming of my expedition and he called up his warriors for a decisive battle against me. Upon a trust(-inspiring) oracle (given) by Ashur, Bel, Nebo, the great gods, my lords, who (always) march at my side, I defeated the battle(-inspiring) soldiers of his army in a great open battle. Tirhakah heard in Memphis of the defeat of his army (and) the (terror-inspiring) splendor of Ashur and Ishtar blinded (lit.: overwhelmed) him (thus) that he became like a madman. The glamour of my kingship with which the gods of heaven and nether world have endowed him, dazzled him and he left Memphis and fled, to save his life, into the town Ni’ (Thebes). This town (too) I seized and led my army into it to repose (there).

Necho (Ni-u-u), king of Memphis and Sais (Sa-a-a), Sharruludari, king of Si’nu, Pishanhuru, king of Nathu, Pakruru, king of (Pi)shaptu, Bukkunanipi, king of Athribis (Ha-at-hi-ri-bi), Nahke, king of Hininshi, Putubishiti, king of Tanis (sa-’nu), Unamunu, king of Nathu, Harsaeshu, king of Sabnuti, Buaima, king of Pitinti, Shishak (Su-si-in-qu), king of Busiris (Bu-Hi-ru), Tabnathi, king of Punubu, Bukkunanipi’i king of Ahni, Iptihardeshu, king of Pihatihurunipi(ki), Nahtiburuanini, king of Pishabdi’a, Bukkaninip, king of Pahnuti, Siha, king of Siut (Si-ia-a-ti-tu), Lamentu, king of Himuni (Hermopolis), Ishpimatu, king of Taini, Manimanhe, king of Thebes; these kings, governors and regents whom my own father had appointed in Egypt and who had left their offices in the face of the uprising of Tirhakah and had scattered into the open country, I reinstalled in their offices and in their (former) seats of office. (Thus) I seized anew (control over) Egypt (Musur) and Nubia which (already) my own father had conquered; I made the garrisons stronger than before and the(ir) regulations (more) severe. With many prisoners and heavy booty I returned safely to Nineveh.

Afterwards, (however), all the kings whom I had appointed broke the oaths (sworn to) me, did not keep the agreements sworn by the great gods, forgot that I had treated them mildly and conceived an evil world plot. They talked about rebellion and came, among them-

1 For reliefs concerning the Egyptian campaign of Ashurbanipal, cf. the references collected by J. Schawe, in AJO x (1935-36), 170. 2 Text: iti-ti-nu; variant: iti-ilu, "he thought little of. . . ."

3 Variant adds: "in order to murder, to rob and to seize Egypt for himself."

4 The reading: I-Xu-im-su is likewise possible.

5 For the name of Thebes, cf. recently W. Vycichl, in ZAOS, LXVI (1940), 82 ff.

selves to the unholy decision: "(Now when even) Tirthakah has been driven out of Egypt (Musur), how can we, ourselves, (hope to) stay?" And they sent their mounted messengers to Tirthakah, king of Nubia, to establish a sworn agreement: "Let there be peace between us and let us come to mutual understanding; we will divide the country between us, no foreigner shall be ruler among us!" They continued to scheme against the Assyrian army, the forces (upon which) my rule (was based), and which I had stationed (in Egypt) for their (own) support. (But) my officers heard about these matters, seized their mounted messengers with their messages and (thus) learned about their rebellious doings. They arrested these kings and put their hands and feet in iron cuffs and fetters. The (consequences of the broken) oaths (sworn) by Ashur, the king of the gods, befell them, I called to account those who had sinned against the oath (sworn by) the great gods (and those) whom I had treated (before) with clemency. And they (the officers) put to the sword the inhabitants, young and old, of the towns of Sais, Pindidi, (c) Tanis and of all the other towns which had associated with them to plot, they did not spare anybody among (them). They hung their corpses from stakes, flayed their skins and covered (with them) the wall of the town(s). Those kings who had repeatedly schemed, they brought alive to me to Nineveh. From all of them, I had only mercy upon Necho and granted him life. I made (a treaty) with him (protected by) oaths which I had only mercy upon Necho and granted him life. I presented him (furthermore) with the girdle, the mounting of which was golden, and a golden chain on him (as the) insigne of his kingship, I made (a treaty) with him (protected by) oaths which I had only mercy upon Necho and granted him life. I sent with him (and) his son, I appointed for Athribis (thus) treating him (befitting) his position as ruler. I sent with him (and) for his assistance, officers of mine as governors. I returned to him Sais as residence (the place) where my own father had appointed him king. Nabushezibanni, his son, I appointed for Athribis (thus) treating him and he was never heard of again. Afterwards Urdamane, son of Shabaku (var.: son of his sister), sat down on the throne of his kingdom. He made Thebes and Heliopolis (Jo-nu) his fortresses and assembled his (armed) might. He called up his battle (-experienced soldiers) to attack my troops, (and) the Assyrians stationed in Memphis. He surrounded these men and seized (all) their communications (lit.: exits). An express messenger came to Nineveh and told me about this.

In my second campaign I marched directly against Egypt (Musur) and Nubia. Urdamane heard of the approach of my expedition (only when) I had (already) set foot on Egyptian territory. He left Memphis and fled into Thebes to save his life. The kings, governors, and regents whom I had installed in Egypt came to meet me and kissed my feet. I followed Urdamane (and) went as far as Thebes, his fortress. He saw my mighty battle array approaching, left Thebes and fled to Kikipi. Upon a trust (-inspiring) oracle of Ashur and Ishtar I, myself, conquered this town completely. From Thebes (and) carried away booty, heavy and beyond counting: silver, gold, precious stones, his entire personal possessions, linen garments with multicolored trimmings, fine horses, (certain) inhabitants, male and female. I pulled two high obelisks, cast³ of shining zahalu -bronze,- the weight of which was 2,500 talents, standing at the door of the temple, out of their bases and took (them) to Assyria. (Thus) I carried off from Thebes heavy booty, beyond counting. I made Egypt (Musur) and Nubia feel my weapons bitterly and celebrated my triumph. With full hands and safely, I returned to Nineveh, the city (where I exercise) my rule.

In my third campaign I marched against Ba’al, king of Tyre, who lives (on an island) amidst the sea, because he did not heed my royal order, did not listen to my personal (lit.: of my lips) commands. I surrounded him with redoubts, seized his communications (lit.: roads) on sea and land. I (thus) intercepted (lit.: strangled) and made scarce their food supply and forced them to submit to my yoke. He brought his own daughter and the daughters of his brothers before me to do menial services. At the same time, he brought his son Iahimiliki who had not (yet) crossed the sea to greet me as (my) slave. I received from him his daughter and the daughters of his brothers with their great dowries. I had mercy upon him and returned him the son, the offspring of his loins. Iakinlu, king of Arvad, living (also) on an island who had not submitted to (any of) the kings of my family, did (now) submit to my yoke and brought his daughter with a great dowry to Nineveh to do menial services, and he kissed my feet.

(Lines 68-80 deal with kings of Asia Minor bringing tribute, etc.)

After Iakinlu, king of Arvad, had perished, Aziba', Aduniba', Sapatiba', Budiba', Bal'ishapu, Bal'hanunu, Bal'Maluku, Ahimilki, Ahimilki, the sons of Iakinlu who live (on an island) amidst the sea, came from the sea to me with their heavy presents (tdmartu) and kissed my feet. I liked Aziba' (lit.: I looked with pleasure upon Aziba') and made him king of Arvad. I clad Abiba', Aduniba', Sapatiba', Budiba', Bal'ishapu, Bal'hanunu, Bal'Maluku, Ahimilki (and) Ahimilki in multicolored garments, put golden rings on their hands and made them do service at my court.\(^{(17)}\)

(2) From the Cylinder E (cf. A. C. Piekorn, Historical Prism Inscriptions of Ashurbanipal [AS, No. 5] [Chicago, 1933], 1.10; also, M. Streck, op. cit., pp. 155 f.). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §892.

\((1-4-19)\)

Magan and Meluhha, a distant [region] . . . (to which) Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, my own father, had advanced and through which he had marched defeating there Tirhakah, king of Nubia (Kusu), scattering his army. He conquered Egypt (Musur) and Nubia and carried off (from) it booty (beyond) counting. He ruled over the entire country and incorporated it into the territory of Assyria. The former names of the cities he changed, giving them new denominations.\(^{1}\) He installed his (own) servants as kings (and) governors in these towns. He imposed upon them [annual] tribute to be paid to him as overlord—allu distance . . . Memphis . . .

\((6-8)\)

Fifty-five of their statues of kings of Egypt . . . and wrote [upon them . . . ] the triumph achieved by his own hands. After my own father (i.e. Esarhaddon) had died . . .

(4) From the British Museum text K 228 joined to K 2675

\(^{(18)}\) In AFO, xiii (1940), 233, Weidner conjecutes that these sons of the king of Arvad had murdered his father and—unable to settle the problem of succession—appealed to Ashurbanipal for a pertinent decision.

\(^{(17)}\) For the meaning of this idiom, cf. my remarks in JAGOS, LXI (1941), 256.

\(^{1}\) This seems to refer to a renaming of the major cities with Assyrian denominations; cf., e.g. the name Limmuru-\(^{(1)}\) šamua

\(^{2}\) Text: allu qaqqar. One allu corresponds roughly to 60 yards, but it is quite possible that the allu qaqqar denotes a larger unit

\(^{3}\) Text: ul-tam-sa-a; for the verb musu niqm, cf. AFO, XII (1937-39), 142, n.35 (with literature).

\(^{4}\) For the Semitic word denoting the Nile, cf. W. Vycichl, ZA 66, LXXVI (1941), 79 ff.

\(^{5}\) This meaning of \(\text{aramu}\) seems to be suggested by the context

\(^{6}\) Text: allu qaqqar. One allu corresponds roughly to 60 yards, but it is quite possible that the allu qaqqar denotes a larger unit

(1—reverse 5)

The kings from East and West came and kissed my feet. (But) Tirhakah (Tarqti), against (the will of) the gods, planned\(^{(1)}\) to seize Egypt (and) to . . . He thought little of the might of Ashur, my lord, and put his trust in his own power; the harsh way in which my own father had treated him, did not come to his mind. He marched out and entered Memphis, taking this town for himself. He sent l'is army against the Assyrians who were in Egypt, servants belonging to me, whom Esarhaddon, my own father, had appointed there as kings, to kill, to make prisoners and booty. An express-messenger came to Nineveh to report to me. I became very angry on account of these happenings, my soul was aflame. I called the turtan -official, the governors, and also their assistants and gave immediately the order to my mighty (batde-) forces for quick assistance to the kings and governors, servants who belong to me, and made them start out on the march to Egypt. In mad haste they marched on as far as the town Kar-Baniti.

(Lines 15-19 parallel the above translated report.)

He (i.e. Tarqti) left Memphis, his royal residence, the place in which he had put his trust, to save his life, boarded a ship, leaving his camp and fleeing alone. He entered Thebes (Ni'). The warriors (of Assyria) seized all the warships that were with him. They sent me the good tidings through a messenger (who) also reported to me orally. (Then) I ordered to add to my former (battle-)forces (in Egypt) the rabSaq -officer, all the governors (and) kings of (the region) beyond the river (Euphrates), servants who belong to me, together with their forces and their ships, and (also) the kings of Egypt, servants who belong to me, together with their forces and their ships, to chase Tirhakah out of Egypt (Musur) and Nubia. They marched towards Thebes, the fortress-town of Tirhakah, king of Nubia, (covering) a distance of a month march (in) 10 days. Tirhakah, who had heard of the coming of my army, left Thebes, his fortress-town, crossed the Nile (la-ru'-iiy) and pitched camp on the other side (of the river). Necho, Sharruludari (and) Pakruru, kings whom my own father had installed in Egypt, did not keep the agreements sworn by Ashur and the great gods, my lords, they broke their oaths, forgot the friendliness (with which) my own father (had treated them) and began to plot.

(Lines 36-41 parallel the above translated report.)

They plotted constantly against the Assyrian army massed (in Egypt), in order to save their own lives, they schemed\(^{(1)}\) towards (their) complete annihilation. (But) my officers heard of these matters and met their cunning with cunning. They arrested their mounted messengers together with their messages and learned (thus) about their rebellious plot. They arrested Sharruludari (and) Necho.

(Lines 47-51 parallel the above translated report.)

And I, Ashurbanipal, [inclined towards] friendliness, had mercy upon Necho, my own servant, whom Esarhaddon, my own father, had made king in Kar-Bel-matate (= Sais).

(Lines 54-63 parallel the above translated report)

His son Nabushezibanni I made king in Athribis (Hathariba), the (new) name of which is Limmir-ishak-Ashur.

(Lines 66-68 parallel the above translated report.)

He (uRdamane) assembled his (armed) might; he made his weapons ready and marched on to deliver a decisive battle against my army. (But) upon a trustworthy oracle of Ashur, Sin and the great gods, my lords, they (my troops) defeated him in a great open battle and scattered his (armed) might. uRdamane fled at the front of my army . . . they said as follows: "At Pa[kruru . . .] and addressed the officers who marched in which [I had treated] Necho, Sharruludari and PI. 60, Bauer, Das Inschriftener [Assurbanipals (Leipzig, 1933), Vol. 1, PI. 60, ii, 56.

(4—9)

. . . in Egypt they assembled [ . . . Ne]cho, Sharruludari, Pakruru, the ki[ngs . . .] in order to go to the place (from) where my army was marching out [ . . . Pishanhu]ru whom [my own father] Esarhaddon [had installed] in Nathu, [forgot] the harsh way in which [I had treated] Necho, Sharruludari and Pa[kruru . . .] and addressed the officers who marched at the front of my army . . . they said as follows: "At the time of the night . . . ."

(7—10)

Ashurbanipal, the great king, the legitimate king, the king of the world, king of Assyria, king of (all) the four rims (of the earth), king of kings, prince without rival, who rules from the Upper Sea to the Lower Sea and has made bow to his feet all the (other) rulers and who has laid the yoke (ntru) of his overlordship (upon them) from Tyre which is (an island) in the Upper Sea and (read: as far as) Tilmun which is (an island) in the Lower Sea—and they pulled the straps (absânu) (of) his (yoke).

(7) From the inscription in the temple of Ishtar published (with autographs, transliteration, and translation) by R. C. Thompson, in AAA, xx (1933), 71 ff. Text: Pis. x. Text Translation: Ibid., 90 ff.

(78-84)

They (i.e. the great gods) made bo[w] to my yo[ke] all the countries from the Upper Sea to the Lower Sea . . . and they pulled the straps (absânu) (of) my (yoke). Upon their mighty command, quickly . . . I conquered Thebes (Nf), the royal residence of Egypt (Musur) and Nubia (Kusu), [brought] its heavy spoils to Assyria. I made bow to my yoke Ba'lu, king of Tyre, who did not heed my royal orders, by surrounding him with earthworks and by seizing his communications on sea and land. (Also) Iakinlu, king of Arvad, and Sandasharme, king of Cilicia (Hilatyu) who (both) did not submit to my royal forefathers, did bow to [my yoke).

(8) From the very small British Museum fragment K 6049 (published in CT, xxxv, Pl. 18) we learn that "[uRdamane], son of the sister of Tirhakah, king of [Egypt]" had taken refuge in Elam. Translation: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §§1117.

(b) Campaign against the Arabs

(1) From the Rassam Cylinder (cf. above). Translation: Luckenbill, AR, ii, §§817-831.

(vii 82—x 5)

In my ninth campaign, I called up my troops (and) marched directly against Uate', king of Arabia (Aribu) because he had broken the (agreements protected by) oaths (sworn to) me, did not remember that I had treated him with clemency; he had cast away the yoke of my rule which Ashur (himself) has placed upon him and the ropes (absânu) (of which) he has been pulling (till now). He refused to come (and) to inquire about (the state of) my health and held back the presents (tâmartu) and his heavy tribute. He listened—exactly as Elam (did)—to the rebellious propaganda of Akkad and did not care for the oaths sworn to me. He did leave me, Ashurbanipal, the holy high priest, the (ever)praying servant (of the gods), created

(ix 34—49)

As to (that other) Uate', the son of Hazail, the nephew of Uate', the son of Bir-Dadda who had made himself king of Arabia, Ashur, the king of the gods, the Great Mountain, made him change his mind and he came to meet me (in submission). To demonstrate that Ashur and the great gods, my lords (are worthy of) the (highest) praise, I imposed (the following) heavy punishment (var.: he accepted the (following) verdict): I put a pillory (on) his (neck) together with a beard (and) a dog and made him stand on guard (duty) at the gate in Nineveh, (called) Nirib-masnaqti-adnati. Ammuladi, however, king of Qedar (Qi-id-ri) rose to fight the kings of the Westland whom Ashur, Ishtar and the (other) great gods, have given me as my property. Upon a trust-(inspiring) oracle (given by) Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Adad, Bel, Nebu, the Ishtar of Nineveh—

2 Obscure word.

4 This seems to be the meaning of the idiom: marulta mahdru.

5 For the names of the gates of Nineveh, cf. R. C. Thompson (Iraq, vn [1940], 91 ff.).

the Queen of Kidmuri—^the Ishtar of Arbela, Ninurta, Nergal (and) Nusku, I inflicted a defeat upon him. They seized him alive and also Adia, the wife of Uate', king of Arabia, and brought (them) to me.

(v 26—30)

(As to) Adia, queen of Arabia, I inflicted a bloody defeat upon her, burnt down her tents, seized her alive (and) removed her, with many (other) prisoners, to Assyria.

Upon the (oracle-)command of the great gods, my lords, I put a dog's collar on him and made him watch the bar (of the city's gate). Upon the (oracle-)command of Ashur, Ishtar and the great gods, my lords, I defeated in a bloody battle and routed the soldiers of Abiate' (and of) Aamu, son of Te'ri, who marched to the assistance of Shamashshumukin, my evil brother, (when they were) to enter Babylon. The remainder who succeeded to enter Babylon ate (there) each other's flesh in their ravenous hunger, and (later) they made a sortie from Babylon to save their lives. My forces, (however,) stationed (there) against Shamashshumukin, inflicted a second defeat upon him (so that) he (i.e. Abiate') escaped alone and seized my feet to save his own life. I had mercy upon him, made him take oaths by the life of the great gods, appointing him, instead of Uate', son of Hazail, as king of Arabia.

(viii 24—44)

Abiate', son of Te'ri, came to Nineveh and kissed my feet. I made a sworn agreement with him concerning his status as a servant of mine. I made him king instead of Iauta' (or) of somebody else. I imposed upon him as annual tribute, eye-shaped beads of UDA-stone, antimony, camels and stod- donkeys. With the help of Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Adad, Bel, Nebu, the Ishtar of Nineveh—the Queen of Kidmuri—the Ishtar of Arbela, Ninurta, Nergal (and) Nusku and by pronouncing my name which Ashur has made powerful, Kama-shaltu, king of Moab, a servant belonging to me, inflicted a defeat in an open battle upon Ammuladi, king of Qedar who, like him (Abiate'), had revolted and had continuously made razzias against the kings of the Westland. Ammuladi (himself) captured those of his (i.e. Abiate's) people who (escaped) before . . . , put them in handcuffs and iron foot fetters and sent them to me to Nineveh.

But he came to an understanding with the country of the Nabaiateans, was not afraid of the (oaths sworn by) the life of the great gods and made constantly razzias into the territory of my country. Natnu, king of Nabaiati which lies at a great distance and to whom Uate' had fled, heard—through an intervention of Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Adad, Bel, Nebu, the Ishtar of Ra The temple of this Ishtar-figure was in Calah (Kil'fu) and was very famous in Assyria.

6 Cylinder B shows here the variant "in so-and-so."

7 Text: ima takabî. The context suggests that Ashurbanipal assumed that direct divine interference was instrumental in the submission of this king.
Nineveh—the Queen of Kidmuri—the Ishtar of Arbel, Ninurta, Nergal (and) Nusku—about the might of Ashur which endows me with strength, and he—who had never sent a messenger to my royal forefathers to greet them as kings by inquiring after their health—inquired (now)—afraid of the (ever) victorious armies of Ashur—very assiduously² after my royal health. But Abiate', son of Te'ri, devoit of any good intentions, unmindful of oaths sworn (even) by the great gods, spoke of rebellion against me and came to an understanding with Natni, king of Nabaiati; they called up their forces for a dangerous attack against my territory.

Upon an (oracle-) command of Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Adad, Bel, Nebo, the Ishtar of Nineveh—the Queen of Kidmuri—the Ishtar of Arbel, Ninurta, Nergal (and) Nusku, I called up my army and took the direct road against Abiate'. They (i.e. my army) crossed safely Tigris and Euphrates at the time of their highest flood; they took (lit.: followed) a path (leading to) far-away regions. They ascended high mountain chains, winding their way through woods full of shadow, proceeding safely upon a thorny road between high trees and sidr⁹-shrubs (full) of spines. A distance of 100 double-hours from Nineveh, the town beloved by Ishtar, the spouse of Ellil, they marched forward through the desert where parching thirst is at home, where there are not even birds in the sky and wherein neither wild donkeys (nor) gazelles pasture, following Uate', king of Arabia, and Abiate' who marched with the forces of the country of the Nabaiateans. I departed from the town Hadata in the month of Sinanu—the month of Sin, first-born son of Ellil and leader (of his brothers)—on the 25th day—(the day of) the procession of the Lady-of-Babylon, the most important among the great gods. I pitched camp in Laribda, a city with a wall of undressed stones,¹⁰ at the (last) water cisterns. My army drew water (there) for their drinking-supply and (then) marched forward to the regions of parching thirst, as far as Hurarina. I inflicted a defeat upon the Isamme', a confederation² of (the worshipers of) the god Atarsamain, and of the Nabaiateans between the towns of Iarki and Azalla in a far-away desert where there are no wild animals and (where) not even the birds build their nests. I took as booty from them countervailing prisoners, donkeys, camels and small cattle. After my army had marched unopposed through a distance of 8 double-hours, they returned safely and drank (again) water in Azalla to quench their thirst. (Then) they marched forward as far as the town Qurasati, a distance of 6 double-miles (through) a territory of parching thirst. (There) I rounded up the confederation of (the worshipers of) the god Atarsamain

² Hendiadys: sanaqu + su'alula.
³ For the word hulqu with the meaning "to walk through a wooded area" (lit.: "to slip through"), cf. the semantic parallel in ṣ单位 attested in the Epics of Gilgamesh: cf. Thompson’s edition (Tablet X), Pl. 39, 11:34 (ḥ-ul-ul-ma  it-tar-da).
⁴ For this identification of amatdurhu, cf. W. F. Albright, ZA, XXXVII (NF 113), 140 f.
⁵ Text: bê dih'a lu a n:1 s a g. The Sumerian word is to be read in this context i a g (and not: i k S i h "cylinder seal") with regard to i a g a s (b), i.e. undressed stone block.
⁶ The passages interchange u₄₇u₄⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻ Apprentice (Di-maZ-qa) with regard to i a g a s (b), i.e. undressed stone block.
⁷ Idiomatic expression; lit: "for one shekel (and) one-half shekel," ⁸ For this meaning of tiye' is attested in Neo-Assyrian and Neo-Babylonian texts.
⁹ For this identification of matermu, cf. W. F. Albright, ZA, XXXVII (NF 113), 140 f.
¹⁰ This meaning of ite' is attested in Neo-Assyrian and Neo-Babylonian texts.
¹¹ The passages interchange u₄₇u₄⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻⁻ Apprentice (Di-maZ-qa) with regard to i a g a s (b), i.e. undressed stone block.
¹² For this identification of matermu, cf. W. F. Albright, ZA, XXXVII (NF 113), 140 f.
Ashur, my lord,—had run away from them. Famine broke out among them and they ate the flesh of their children against their hunger. Ashur, Sin, Shamash, Adad, Bel, Nebo, the Ishtar of Nineveh—the Queen of Kidmuri—the Ishtar of Arbela, Ninurta, Nergal (and) Nusku (thus) inflicted quickly upon them (all) the curses written (down) in their sworn agreements. Even when the camel foals, the donkey foals, 18 calves or lambs were sucking many times (lit.: 7 times) on the mother animals, they could not fill (lit.: satiate) their stomachs with milk. 18

On my return march, I conquered the town Ushu the emplacement of which is on the seacoast 19 I killed those inhabitants of Ushu who did not obey their governors by refusing to deliver the tribute which they had to pay annually. I took to task those among them who were not submissive. Their images and the (surviving) people I led as booty to Assyria. I killed (also) those inhabitants of Accho who were not submissive, hanging their corpses on poles which I placed around the city. The others I took to Assyria, formed a contingent (out of them) and added (it) to the large army which

(x)

Ashur has presented to me. During the battle I seized personally Aamu, son of Te’ri (who) had sided with Abi‘et, his brother; I (had) him flayed in Nineveh, the town (where I exercise) my rule.

(113–114)

I caught alive Uate’, king of Ishmael (Su-mu-il) 20 [who was in agreement] with him (i.e. Shamasshumukin); Anmuladi, king of Qedar (Qi-da-ri), had fallen into the hands of my army in a battle engagement and they (i.e. the army) brought him (to me) alive.

(118–121)

I harnessed Tammaritu, Pa’a, Ummanai[dsi, king(s)] 21 of Elam, (and) Iaute’, king of Ishmael (Su-mu-il) whom I had captured personally upon the oracle-command of Ashur, Ninlil and the Ish[tar dwelling in Arbela,] like choice foals to my (triumphal) char, 8 my royal means of transportation, after [I went forth in procession] from the temples e.s a r. r a.e. m a E. m a s. 6. […] in order to make the sacrifices and to perform the rites—and they actually held the straps (absamu) (to pull the char).

(123–129)

[Natnu, king of Nabaijati, which is (a country) far away, who did not submit to my royal forefathers, did bow to my y[oke] and (therefore), upon the oracle-command of Ashur and Ninlil, the great gods, my lords, who (thus) encouraged me, I defeated Iaute’ who had put his trust upon (the assistance of) the Nabaijati country and [had therefore held back his tdmarutu -gifts]. 21 turned his cities into ruin-hills and heaps (of debris). I [led away] himself, his wife, his children … as the he[avy] spoils of his country. Nuhuru, 4 his son,

18 The denomination of the donkey foal as nahhur is very rare and recurs, to my knowledge, only in the Middle-Assyrian text Eteling, KAl. No. 311.8–9 where male (n i ti) and female (i-si-il-te) su-hi-ru are mentioned.

16a This situation is mentioned in nearly the same words in the curses of the Aramaic treaty studied by H. Bauer, Ein aramaischer Staatsvertrag aus dem 8. Jahrh. v. Chr. in AFO, vm, p. n. (to lines x + 2–5).

16 The difficult word anuntu (identified in lists of synonymous words with qabbah and nahahu “battle”) is used here in exactly the same context as tuquntu, in L. W. King, STC, 1, 222/12.

15 Dr. F. W. Geers indicated to me the parallel text BRM 1904-10-9,81 (cf. L. W. King, Supplement, p. 20, No. 117) which permits the filling of this gap.

19 Ulu is the name of the mainland settlement of Tyre.

For this identification, cf. Thompson, AAA, xx (1933), 98, and—more in detail—J. Lewy, in RECX, xix, 432, n.143.

For this vehicle, cf. Th. Bauer, Assurbanipal, n. 53. n.4.

Restoration proposed by Thompson, opcit.

This name has been compared with that of the grandfather and brother of Abraham (cf. Thompson, opcit, p. 99). Nahor. For the city of the same name mentioned in Mari Texts, cf., e.g. Ch. Jean, Revue des études sémittiques—Babylonica (1941), 126.
The Neo-Babylonian Empire and its Successors

The historiographic literature of this period is represented by excerpts from four chronicles translated in the first part of this section. They cover—sometimes overlapping—the period from the first year of Esarhaddon to the seizure of Babylon by Cyrus. For the literary form and the political tendencies of these documents, reference should be made to the remarks of Landsberger-Bauer, in ZA, xxxvii (NF 111), 61-65.

The second part contains historical inscriptions of Nebuchadnezzar II and of Nabonidus which refer to conquests made in the West (Syria and Palestine), to the foreign policy of the Chaldean dynasty, and describe, in his own words, Nabonidus' rise to royal power. To illustrate the particular background of this ruler, the Eski-Harran inscription is given, a memorial for the mother of the usurper. The end of this dynasty is illustrated by the account given by Cyrus on his famous cylinder and by the poetic text known under the misleading tide of Persian Verse-Account of Nabonidus. Finally, the novel mood of the Persian domination is shown in one of the trilingual inscriptions of Xerxes and—to document the persistency of the literary tradition—an inscription of the Seleucid king Antiochus I, Soter, has been translated.

HISTORIOGRAPHIC DOCUMENTS

I. TEXT FROM THE FIRST YEAR OF BELIBNI TO THE ACCESSION YEAR OF SHAMASHSHUMUKIN

(ii 23—iv 38)

First year of Belibni: Sennacherib destroyed (lit: broke) the towns Hirimma and Hararatum.

Third year of Belibni: Sennacherib marched down to the country of Akkad and carried away the booty (made) in Akkad. They brought Belibni and his nobles in fetters to Assyria. Three years was Belibni king in Babylon. Sennacherib placed his son Ashurnadinshumi upon the throne in Babylon.

First year of Ashurnadinshumi: Hallushu, the brother of Ishtarhundu, king of Elam, seized him (i.e. Ishtarhundu) and closed up the door (of his palace) in front of him. Eighteen years was Ishtarhundu king in Elam. Hallushu, his brother, sat himself on the throne, in Elam.

Sixth year of Ashurnadinshumi: Sennacherib marched down to Elam, he destroyed (lit: broke) the towns Nagituni, Hilmi, Pillatum and Hupapanu, and carried their booty away. Afterwards, Hallushu, king of Elam, marched against the country of Akkad; towards the end of the (month) Tashritu, he entered Sipparr and killed its inhabitants. (The image of) Shamash did (therefore) not leave the temple Ebarra (in the procession). Ashurnadinshumi was made a prisoner and brought to Elam. Six years was Ashurnadinshumi king in Babylon. The king of Elam placed Nergalashezib on the throne, in Babylon. He declared (a state of) hostility.

First year of Nergal-ushezib: In the month of Tammuz, the 16th day, Nergal-ushezib seized Nippur and (unintelligible). In the month of Tashritu, the 1st day, the Assyrian army entered Uruk; they carried away as booty the gods of Uruk and its inhabitants. (Thus while) Nergal-ushezib went after the Elamites (to ask for help), they (i.e. the Assyrians) snatched the gods of Uruk and its inhabitants. In the month of Tashritu, the 7th day, he (Nergal-ushezib) made an attack against the Assyrian army, in the province of Nippur, but he was seized in open battle and brought to Assyria. One year and 6 months was Nergal-ushezib king in Babylon. In the month of Tashritu, the 26th day, his people made a rebellion against Hallushu, king of Elam, and they closed up the door (of the palace) in front of him and killed him. Six years was Hallushu king in Elam.

Kudurru sat himself on the throne in Elam. Afterwards Sennacherib marched down to Elam and destroyed (lit: broke) (the country) from the land of Rishi as far as Bit-Burnaki, and carried away the booty thereof. Mushezib-Marduk sat himself on the throne in Babylon.

First year of Mushezib-Marduk: In the month of Abu, the 8(?)th day, Kudurru, king of Elam, was seized in a rebellion and killed. Ten months was Kudurru king in Elam. Menanu sat himself on the throne in Elam. In an unknown year, Menanu called up the armies of Elam and Akkad and made an attack against Assyria in the town of Halule. He (also) made a raid against Assyria.

Fourth year of Mushezib-Marduk: In the month of Nisanu, the 15th day, Menanu, king of Elam, suffered a stroke, his mouth was paralyzed, he was unable to speak. In the month of Kislimu, the 1st day, the city (i.e. Babylon) was seized, Mushezib-Marduk was made a prisoner and brought to Assyria. Four years was Mushezib-Marduk king in Babylon. In the month of Addaru, the 7th day, Menanu, king of Elam, died (lit.: "fate"). Four years [was] Menanu king in Elam. Hummahaldashu sat himself on the throne in Elam.

For eight years there was no king in Babylon. In the month of Tammuz, the 3rd day, the gods of Uruk entered Uruk (again) from.... In the month of Tashritu, the 23rd day, Hummahaldashu, king of Elam, was stricken at noon and [died] at sun-set (of the same day). Eight years was Hummahaldashu king in Elam. Hummahaldashu, the second, sat himself on the throne in Elam. In the month of Tashritu, the 20th day, his brother Urtagu sat down on the throne in Elam. In an unknown month the god of Elam, the head of the king of Sidon was cut off and brought to Assyria; in the month of Addaru, the head of the king of Kindu and Sizu was cut off and brought to Assyria.

Sixth year: The king of Elam entered Sippur and made a massacre (there). (The image of) Shamash did (therefore) not leave the temple Ebabbar (in procession). Assyria (marched) against Miletene (Mi.l-i-du). Hummahaldashu, king of Elam, died in his palace without having been sick. Five years was Hummahaldashu king in Elam. His brother Urtagu sat down on the throne in Elam. In an unknown month the god of Elam, the major-domo of the town of Nippur—comparable, perhaps, with that of the (unintelligible). Kudurru went to Assyria.

Seventh year: In the month of Addaru, the 5th day, the army of Assyria was defeated in a bloody battle in Egypt. In the month of Addaru, the (image of) the Ishtar of Agade and the (other) gods of Agade came from Elam and entered Agade, the 10th day.

Eighth year of Esarhaddon: In the month of Tebitu, the day (on the original) is broken (off), the country Shuprisa was conquered and looted. In the month of Kislimu, its booty entered Uruk. In the month of Addaru, the 5th day, the wife of the king died.

Tenth year: In the month of Nisanu, the Assyrian army marched against Egypt Broken (passage on the original)! Three bloody battles were fought in Egypt!

* For this office, attested from the Sumerian to the Neo-Babylonian periods and always in relation to the town of Nippur—cf. e.g. Forrer, in Re-allezungen der Assyriologie, n. 456.

* Text: SAK.SAR N.LIL cf. also, below, n. io, p. 396.

* Obscure term.

* Text: Mi-li-du-me Lug (or: 7); Landsberger-Bauer seem to assume a haplography (Mi-li-du (i=am)), but do not explain the remaining two signs. Langdon (J.R.A.S., 1923, 166) translates "although in good health." The wording seems to imply that the king had been poisoned.

the 3rd, 16th and 18th days. On the 22nd day, Memphis (Me-im-bi), [its royal residence was conquered. Its king escaped (but) his son and [brother] were [captured. It (i.e. Egypt) was looted, its inhabitants were made prisoners, its possessions carried away.

Eleventh year: The king (remained) in Assyria. He executed m[any] of his officials.

Twelfth year: The king of Assyria [went to Egypt]. He fell sick on the way and died (lit.: "fate") in the month of Arashhamnu, the 10th day. For 12 years was Esarhaddon king of Assyria. Both his sons, Shamashshumukin in Babylonia, Ashurbanipal in Assyria, sat down upon the throne.

Accession-year of Shamashshumukin: In the month of Aiaru, Bel and the (other) gods of Akkad went forth from Libbi-dli (i.e. Ashur) and entered Babylon in the month of Aiaru, the 12th day. In the same year, the town Kirbitum was seized, its king was caught. In the same year, the town Agade.

First year: In the month Aiaru, the 12th day. In the same year, the town Agade.

Second year: The major-domo [ordered a bihirtu] in Akkad. In the same year the town Arza[nij]a was seized, its booty ca[pried away . . . . ], the [inhabitants made prisoners, king and crown[prince] put in [fet]ters. Battles were foug[ht] against the Bu[da]u and the Cymmerians, (and) in Kushsheni.

Third year: [ . . . ]-ahshellim, the gu.e.n.na -official (and) Shamashibni, the "Dakkurean," were brought to Assyria and killed in Assyria.

Fourth year: The town of Sidon (Si-da-nu) was seized, its booty carried away. In the (same) year the major-domo ordered a bihirtu in Akkad.

Fifth year: In the month Du’uzu, the 2nd day, the troops of Assyria seized the town Bassa. In the month of [Tashritu] the head of the king of Sidon (Sa-li-du-nu) was cut off and brought to Assyria.

Sixth year: The troops of Assyria marched against Miltene (Mi-li-du). They laid siege against Mugallu. In the month of Ululu, the 5th day, the life of Humbahaldashu, king of (El[ai]m, came to an end in his palace; he was not sick but in good health. Humbahaldashu ruled as king in Elam for six years. His brother Urtag sat down on the throne in Elam. The gu.e.n.na -official Nadinhumi (and) Kudurru, the "Dakkurean," were brought away (to Assyria).

Seventh year: In the month of Addaru, the 8th day, the army of Assyria [fought] against the town Sha- amele. In the same year, the Ishtar-(image) of Agade and the (other) gods of Agade [came] from [Elam], in the month of Addaru, the 10th day, [they entered] the town Agade.

Eighth year: In the month of Addaru, the 6th day, the wife of the king di[ed].

(reverse)

In the month of Addaru, the 18th day, the troops of Assyria seized the country Shup[ra], they carried away its booty.

Tenth year: In the month of Nisanu, the troops of Assyria [marched against Egypt]. In the month Du’uzu, the 3rd day, a battle [was fought] in Egypt.

Eleventh year: The king of Assyria [slew] many of his high officials.

Twelfth year: The king of Assyria went to Egypt. He fell sick on the journey and died in the month of Arashamnu, the 10th day. Esarhaddon ruled as king in Assyria for 12 years.

(For) 8 years (under) Sennacherib, (for) 12 years (under) Esarhaddon (in summa for) 20 years (the image of) Bel stayed in Ashur and the New Year’s Festival was (therefore) interrupted; Nebo did not come from Bo[rsi]ppa for the ["Proc]ession of Bel." In the month of Kislimu, Ashurbanipal, [his] s[on] sat down on the throne in Assyria.

Accession-year of Shamashshumukin: In the month of Aiaru, Bel and the (other) gods of [Akkad] went out from Ashur and, in the month of Aiaru, the 25th day, [they entered] Babylon. Nebo and the (other) gods of Bor[sip]pa c[ame] to Babylon. In the same year the town of Kirbitum was seized, its king cap[tured]. In the month of Tashritu, the 20th day, the (chief)justice of Babylon was sea[zed and executed].

First year of Shamashshumukin: [The army of Assyria marched] against [Egypt], Tirhakah (TarqA) king of Eg[ypt] . . . , the country of Eg[ypt] . . . , Neche [king of] Egypt

(balance broken)

3. TEXT FROM THE TENTH TO THE SEVENTEENTH YEAR OF NABOPOLASSAR: EVENTS LEADING TO THE FALL OF NINEVEH

Tenth year: In the month Aiaru, Nabopolassar called up the army of Akkad and marched (upstream) on the embarkment of the Euphrates. The people of the countries Suhu and Hindanu did not fight against him, but deposited their tributes before him. In the month Abu, the Assyrian army took up battle position in the town Qabilinu and Nabopolassar marched upstream against them. In the month Abu, the 12th day, he made an attack against the soldiers of Assyria and they fell back before him. A great defeat was (thus) inflicted upon Assyria and they took many of them as prisoners. They (also) seized the Mannaean who had come to their (i.e. the Assyrians') assistance and high officials of Assyria. The same day the town of Qabilinu was captured. In the same month of Abu, the king of Akkad called "Nabopolassar" in the preceding lines of the text had not (yet) seized the Mannaeans who had come to their (i.e. the Mannaeans') assistance and high officials of Assyria. They (also) made an attack against the town of Arrapha and attacked the town of... They threw them into the river Zab. They seized their chariots and horses (and) took much booty from them. Many of his (i.e. the Assyrians') high officials made prisoners of them and brought them to Babylon.

[Eleventh year: The king] of Akkad called up his army and marched (upstream) on the embarkment of the Tigris and pitched (his camp) against the town of Ashur. In the month Simunu, the [4th 5th 6th 7th] day, he made an attack against the town, but he did not seize it. The king of Assyria called up his army and the king of Akkad disengaged himself from Ashur and retired as far as the town Takritain, in Assyria, on the banks of the Tigris. The king of Akkad garrisoned his army in the citadel of Takritain. The king of Assyria and his soldiers pitched (camp) against the army of the king of Akkad which was (thus) shut up in Takritain and attacked them for 10 days but did not seize the town. The army of the king of Akkad (although) shut up in the citadel (thus) inflicted a great defeat on Assyria. The king of Assyria and his army [gave up] and he returned to his country. In the month Arah-shammu, the Medians came down into the province of Arrapha and attacked the town of...

Twelfth year: When, in the month Abu, the Medians... against Nineveh... they rushed and seized the town of Tarbusu, a town belonging to the province of Nineveh, ... they went downstream on the embarkment of the Tigris and pitched (camp) against Ashur. They made an attack against the town and [took the town], [the wall of] the town was torn down, a terrible defeat/massacre they inflicted upon the entire population. They took booty (and) carried prisoners away. The king of Akkad and his army who went to the aid of the Medians did not come (in time) for the battle. The town was already taken. The king of Akkad and Cyaxares (V-ma-bi-tar) met each other before the town and established among themselves good relations and friendship... [Cyaxares] and his army returned to his country, the king of Akkad and his army returned to his country.

[Thirteenth year: In the month A]haru the inhabitants of the country of Suhu revolted against the king of Akkad and resorted to hostilities. The king of Akkad called up his army and marched against Suhu. In the month Simunu, the 4th day, he made an attack against Rahilu, a town situated (on an island) amidst the Euphrates, and seized the town the very same day. (Then) he built a...; stones from the banks of the Euphrates they piled up in front of it...; against the city Anat he pitched (camp). [He constructed a turret [at] the west side,.., he brought the turret near to the wall, and made an attack against the city [but] he did not (?) seize it. [In the month]... the king of Assyria and his army came downstream and the king of Akkad and his army made a turnaround and [returned to his country].

(reverse)

[Fourteenth year:] The king of Akkad called up his army and [Cyaxar]es, the king of the Manda-hordes (Umman-manda) marched towards the kingdom of Akkad, [in]... they met each other. The king of Akkad... and [Cyaxar]es... [the...]s he ferried across and they marched (upstream) on the embarkment of the Tigris and... (pitched camp) against Nineveh... From the month Simunu till the month Abu, three [battles were fought, then] they made a great attack against the city. In the month Abu, the...th day, the city was seized and a great defeat he inflicted upon the entire population. On that day, Sinshariskun, king of Assyria fled to... many prisoners of the city, beyond counting, they carried... away. The city [they turned] into ruin-hills and heaps (of debris). The king and the army of Assyria escaped (however) before the king (of Akkad) and [the army] of the king of Akkad... In the month Ululu, the 20th day, Cyaxares and his army returned to his country. Afterwards, the king of Akkad... marched as far as Nisibis. Booty and ga'at-tu of... and (of) the country Ruspahu they brought to the king of Akkad, to Nineveh. [In the month]... Ashuruballit... sat down in Harran upon the throne to become king of Assyria. Till the month... to the [king of Akkad] stayed in Nineveh.... From the 20th day of the month [Tashritu] the king [of Akkad]... in the same month of Tashritu in the town....

Fifteenth year: In the month Du'uzu... [the king of] Akkad [called up his army and] marched against Assyria... [He marched around in Assyria] unopposed (lit: like a ruler). The army of the country Hazzu, Han[... ] and of the country Qa[ng of]... he met/reached. [Their] bo[oty] they took and prisoners [they carried away] from there. In the month Arahshamnu, the king of Akkad o[dered] the return of his army and [pitched camp] against the town Rugguliti... he made an attack against the town and seized the town in the month Arahshamnu, the 28th day, not one man [escaped]... [and he] returned [to] his [country].

Sixteenth year: In the month Aiaru, the king of Akkad called up his army and marched against Assyria. From the month [Aiaru] to the month Arahshamnu they marched around in Assyria unopposed. In the month Arahshamnu, the Manda-hordes (Umm-an-manda) came to the aid of the king of Akkad and they merged their armies and marched against Harran, against [Ashuruballit] who had sat down on the throne in Assyria. Fear of the enemy befall Ashuruballit and the soldiers of the country Gu[13... who] had come [to his aid] and they le[ft] the town and[crossed] the river Euphrates. The king of Akkad arrived at the town Harran and [made an attack and] seized the town. Many prisoners, beyond counting, he carried away from the town. In the month Addaru the king of Akkad... he dismissed/left, and he returned to his country and the Manda-hordes who had come to the aid of the king of Akkad we[nt] and re[turned] [to their country].

(Seventeenth year:) In the month Du'uzu, Ashuruballit, king of Assyria, (and) a large [army of] Eg[yp]t [who had come to his aid] crossed the river (Euphrates) and [pitched on] to conquer Harran. [He] laid siege to the town and[ ] entered it, but the garrison which the king of Akkad had laid therein killed them14 (the assault party) and (then) he pit[ched (camp)] against the town Harran. Till the month Ululu he made attack(s) against the town. Nothing, however, did he ac[h]ieve and they returned.15... The king of Akkad came to the aid of his troops and... an attack. [Then] he went up to the country [I]zalla18 and... the towns of many regions... their... he burnt down. At the same time the army [of the Manda-hordes]... as far as the province of Urartu... in the country Ahs[a... ] they made boaty... the garrisons which the ki[ng of]... they [ ... Jed and to the town... they went up. [In the month]... the king of Akkad returned to his country.

Catchline: In the [eighteenth] ye[ar]: [In the month]... the king of Akkad called up his army and...
Seventh year: The king (i.e. Nabonidus, stayed) in Tema; the crown prince, his officials and his army (were) in Akkad. The king did not come to Babylon (for the ceremonies of the month of Nisanu); the god Nebo did not come to Babylon, the image of the god Bel did not go out (of Esagila in procession), the festival of the New Year was omitted, (but) the offerings within (the temples) Esagila and Ezida were given according [to the complete (ritual)]; the urigedilī -priest made the libation and aspered the temple.

Eighth year: (blank of two lines)

Ninth year: Nabonidus, the king, (stayed) in Tema; the crown prince, the officials and the army (were) in Akkad. The king did not come to Babylon for the (ceremony of the) month of Nisanu; the god Nebo did not come to Babylon, the god Bel did not go out (of Esagila in procession), the festival of the New Year was omitted. (But) the offerings in Esagila and Ezida for the gods of (Babylon) and Borsippa were given according to the complete (ritual). In the month of Nisanu the 5th day, the mother of the king died in Dur-karashu which is on the banks of the Euphrates, above Sippar. The crown prince and his army were in deep mourning for three days, a (n official) "weeping" was performed. In Akkad, a (n official) "weeping" on behalf of the mother of the king was performed in the month of Simanu. In the month of Nisanu, Cyrus, king of Persia, called up his army and crossed the Tigris above the town Arbela. In the month of Aiaru he marched against the country Lydia . . . killed its inhabitants. The 14th day, Sippar was seized without battle. Nabonidus fled. The 16th day, Gobryas (Ubgaru), the governor of Gutium and the army of Cyrus entered Babylon without battle. Afterwards Nabonidus was arrested in Babylon when he returned (there).

Tenth year: The king (stayed) in Tema; the crown prince, his officials and his army (were) in Akkad. The king did not come to Babylon for the (ceremonies of the) month of Nisanu; Nebo did not come to Babylon, Bel did not go out (of Esagila in procession), the festival of the New Year was omitted, (but) the offerings in Esagila and Ezida for the gods of Babylon and Borsippa were given according to the complete (ritual). In the month of Simanu, the 21st day, . . . of the country of the Elamites in Akkad . . . the governor in Uruk.

Eleventh year: The king (stayed) in Tema; the crown prince, the officials and his army (were) in Akkad. The king did not come to Babylon for the (ceremonies of the) month of Nisanu, Nebo did not come to Babylon, Bel did not go out (from Esagila in procession), the festival of the New Year was omitted, (but) the offerings for the gods of Babylon and Borsippa were given according to the complete (ritual).

---

7 Nabonidus’ prolonged and apparently unmotivated stay in Tema has given rise to an extended literature which has been recently discussed by Julius Lewy, in HUCA, xix, 434 ff. (add: R. P. Dougherty, Mârûmu, 1933-140 for the same, JANS, XLI [1922], 305 ff.; the same, in AFA, xxxiv [1930], 206 ff.; cf. also, W. F. Albright, JASS, 1925, 295 ff.).
8 For the important role of the urigilāu -priest at the New Year’s Festival of Esagila, cf. F. Thureau-Dangin, Rituals accusaïens (Paris, 1921), p. 129, n.1.
9 Lit.: Walled Camp.

---

For the important role of the urigilāu -priest at the New Year’s Festival of Esagila, cf. F. Thureau-Dangin, Rituals accusaïens (Paris, 1921), p. 129, n.1.

---

[iii reverse]... Tigris . . . [In the month of] Addaru the (image of the) Ishtar of Uruk . . . the . . . [of the Sea Country . . . army [made an] at[tack]. . .

[Seventeenth year:]—Nebo [went] from Borsippa for the procession of [Bel . . .] [the king] entered the temple E t u r k a l a m m a , in the t[emple] . . . (partly unintelligible). [Bel] went out (in procession), they performed the festival of the New Year according to the complete (ritual). In the month of . . . [Lugal-Marada and the other gods] of the town Marad, Zababa and the (other) gods of Kish, the goddess Ninlillī [and the other gods of] Hursagkalama entered Babylon. Till the end of the month Ululu (all) the gods of Akkad . . . those from above the IM and (those from) below the IM, entered Babylon. The gods from Borsippa, Kutha, . . . and Sippar (however) did not enter. In the month of Tashritu, when Cyrus attacked the army of Akkad in Opis on the Tigris, the inhabitants of Akkad revolted, but he (Nabonidus) massacred the confused inhabitants. The 14th day, Sippar was seized without battle. Nabonidus fled. The 16th day, Gobryas (Ubgaru), the governor of Gutium and the army of Cyrus entered Babylon without battle. Afterwards Nabonidus was arrested in Babylon when he returned (there).

Till the end of the month, the shield (carrying) Gutians were staying within Esagila (but) nobody carried arms in Esagila and its (pertinent) buildings, the correct time (for a ceremony) was not missed. In the month of Arahshamnu, the 3rd day, Cyrus entered Babylon, green twigs were spread in front of him—the state of "Peace" (Iulum) was imposed upon the city. Cyrus sent greetings to all Babylon. Gobryas, his governor, installed (sub-)governors in Babylon. From the month of Kislimu to the month of Addaru, the gods of Akkad which Nabonidus had made come down to Babylon . . . returned to their sacred cities. In the month of Arahshamnu, on the night of the nth day, Gobryas died. In the month of [Arahshamnu, the . . . th day, the wife of the king died. From the 27th day of Arahshamnu till the 3rd day of Nisanu a(n official) "weeping" was performed in Akkad, all the people (went around) with their hair disheveled. When, the 4th day, Cambyses, son of Cyrus, went to the temple e. NIG.PA₅. k a l a m m a , S U M m a , i. L, p a priest of Nebo who ... the bull ... they came (and) made the "weaving" by means of the handles\(^1\) and when [he le]d the image of Ne[bo ... sp]ears and leather quivers, from. ... Nebo returned to Esagila, sheep-offerings in front of Bel and the god Md[r]-b[ltti].

(iv reverse)

(After lacuna, only the ends of 9 lines are preserved.)

HISTORICAL DOCUMENT'S

I. NEBUCHADNEZZAR II (605-562)

(a) The Expedition to Syria

(Two lines destroyed) [from] the Upper Sea [to] the Lower Sea (one line destroyed) which Marduk, my lord, has entrusted to me, has made ... the city of Babylon to the foremost among all the countries and every human habitation; its name I have [made/elevated] to the (most worthy of) praise among the sacred cities. ... The sanctuaries of my lords Nebo and Marduk (as a) wise (ruler) ... always

At that time, the Lebanon (La-ab-na-a-nu), the [Cedar] Mountain, the luxurious forest of Marduk, the smell of which is sweet, the hi[gh] cedars of which, (its) pro[duct], another god [has not desired], which no other king has felted ... my nūba\(^2\) Marduk [had desired] as a fitting adornment for the palace of the ruler of heaven and earth, (this Lebanon) over which a foreign enemy was ruling and robbing (it of) its riches—its people were scattered, had fled to a far (away region). (Trust)ing in the power of my lords Nebo and Marduk, I organized [my army] for an expedition to the Lebanon. I made that country happy by eradicating its enemy everywhere (lit.: below and above). All its scattered inhabitants I led back to their settlements (lit.: collected and reinstalled). What no former king had done (I achieved): I cut through steep mountains, I split rocks, opened passages and (thus) I constructed a straight road for the (transport of) the cedars. I made the Arahtu flo[at]\(^2\) (down) and carry to Marduk, my king, mighty cedars, high and strong, of precious beauty and of excellent dark quality, the abundant yield of the Lebanon, as (if they be) reed stalks (carried by) the river. Within Babylon [stored] mulberry wood. I made the inhabitants of the Lebanon live in safety together and let nobody disturb them. In order that nobody might do any harm [to] me I ere[ceted there] a stela (showing) me (as) everlasting king (of this region) and built ... I, myself, ... established...

(four lines destroyed) ... people to ... towards the entrance to the mountain .... Beside my statue as king ... I wrote an inscription mentioning my name ... I erected for posterity. May future [kings] respect the monuments, remember the praise of the gods (inscribed thereupon). [He who] respects ... my royal name, who does not abrogate my statutes (and) not change my decrees, [his throne] shall be secure, his [life] last long, his dynasty shall continue (lit: renew itself)! Rain from the sky, [floor] water (from) the (interior of) the earth shall be given to him continually) as a present! He himself shall rule peacefully and in abundance.

0 Marduk, my lord, do remember my deeds favorably as good [deeds], may (these) my good deeds be always before your mind (so that) my walking in Esagila and Ezida—which I love—may last to old age. May I (remain) always your legitimate governor (Sa[ana\u]) may I pull your yoke till (I am) sated with progeny, may my name be remembered in future (days) in a good sense, may my offspring rule forever over the black-headed.

(b) The Court of Nebuchadnezzar

From a prism in Istanbul (No. 7834), found in Babylon, and published (photograph, transliteration, and translation) by E. Unger, in Babylon, die heidige Stadt (Berlin-Leipzig, 1931). pp. 282-294 (Ph. 52-56).

(iii 33 – v 29)

1 ordered the (following) court officials in exercise of (their) duties to take up position in my (official) suite: As maZennu -officials\(^1\) Nabuzeridimm, the chief cook, Nabuzeribni, the chief armorer (Lord High Steward), [Eribib ... ] in charge of the palace officials, Sinshar[ilani(?)], the major-domo, Atkal-ana-Mar-Esagila

(iv)

[the ... ] (some names broken), Inaqbit-Bel [the ... ], Bel-erish, the chief [ ... ], Ardia, the mi[dennu of the "House-of-the-Palace-Women," Beluballit, the secretary of the "House-of-the-Palace-Women," Silla,\(^1\)

\(^1\) Text: na-\(\text{\textit{a}}\)-bu-u-a.

\(^2\) Read: \(\text{\textit{u}}\)\(\text{\textit{a}}\)-\(\text{\textit{a}}\)\(\text{\textit{u}}\)\(\text{\textit{u}}\)."
the chief masstr-oil-ceremonies? Nabuhasurus, the chief of the engineers,8 Mushallim-Marduk, Nabu-ushibishi (and) Eribshu, the overseers (lit.: heads) of the slave-girls, Nabubelusser, overseer of the slave-girls, Nabuzeribini, the cupbearer, Nergalresua, the chief of the singers, Ardi-Nabu, the sipi ru-official9 of the crown prince, Eaidanni, the chief of the cattle,10 Rimutu, the chief of the catde, Nabumarsharrusur, the chief of the sailors, (and) Hanunu," the chief of the royal merchants;

(and as) the officials of the country Akkad (i.e. Babylon):? Eadaian, the governor of the Sea (-Country), Nergalsharurus, the Sl n-magi? Emuqahi (?), (the governor) of Tupilash, Belshmishkun (the governor.) of Puqudu, Bibbea, the Dakkurean,9 Nadinahi, the "official"10 of Der, Marduksharrusur (the governor) of Gambulu, Marduksharrani, the district officer of Sumandar, Belidarum, the Amuqean,9 Rimutu, the regular governor of Zame, Beletirnapshate, the governor of Iaptiru, the "official"10 of

(v)

Mushezib-Bel, the "official" of . . . ,

(and as) the "officials":10 Shumkenum, the "official" of the town Dur-[Iakin], Bania, the "official" of the town Limetum, Marduksharrani, the "official" of the town Matakallu, Shula, the "official" of the town Nimid-Laguda, Shuma, the "official" of the town Kullab, Nergalsharibin, the "official" of the town Udannum, Mardukerish, the "official" of the town Larsa, Nabukin-apli, the "official" of the town Kissik, Belupahhir, the "official" of the town of Bakshu;

(and as) qe pu-officials of cities: Iba, the district officer of Dur-[ . . . ], Shalambili, the district officer of . . . , Zira, the district officer of . . . , Cabna, the qe pu-official of . . . , Shuma, the qe pu-official of . . . , Adad-ahiddinem, the district officer of the town . . . , Nabuzerukin (officer) of the country A [ . . . ], Anumepush, the qe pu-official of . . . , Belshmishkun, the qe pu-official of the town N [ . . . ];

(furthermore) the king of Tyre, the king of Gaza, the king of Sidon, the king of Arvad, the king of Ashdod, the king of Mir [ . . . ], the king of . . .

(1) From administrative documents found in Babylon, some information concerning the fate of Jehoiachin, king of Judah, can be gathered. Text and translation- E. F. Weidner, Jojachin, König von Juda, in babylonischen Keilschrifttexten (Melanges syriens offerts à Monsieur Rent Dussard, 11 [Paris, 1939], 923-935), has published a small group of texts excavated by the German expedition in Babylon and dating from the 10th to the 35th year of Nebuchadnezzar II. The tablets list deliveries of oil for the subsistence of individuals who are either prisoners of war or otherwise dependent upon the royal household. They are identified by name, profession, and/or nationality. The two tablets, so far published, also mention, beside Judeans, inhabitants of Ashkelon, Tyre, Byblos, Arvad, and, further, Egyptians, Medeans, Persians, Lydians, and Greeks.

(text Babylon 28122, obverse 29-33)

. . . [?o?] la'-i-um, king . . . to the qipiu-tu-house of . . .

... for Shalamiamu, the . . .

... for 126 men from Tyre . . .

... for Zabiria, the Ly[di]an . . .

(text Babylon 28178, obverse ii 38-40)

10 (sila of oil) 10 . . . [la]-[in], king of Iaq . . . 2

1/2 sila to . . . [so]ns of the king of Judah (la-a-hu-du)

4 sila to 8 men from Judah (ama-la-a-hu-da-a-a) . . .

(text Babylon 28186, reverse ii 13-18)

iY 2 sila (oil) for 3 carpenters from Arvad, Y 2 sila each . . .

3% sila for 7 ditto, Greeks, 1/2 sila each

1/2 sila to Nabuu-eft the carpenter

10 (sila) to lor[u]-ki-nu, the son of the king of la-u-du (i.e. Judah)

i/[i] sila for the 5 sons of the king of Judah (la-r[u]-du) through Qana'a . . .

(2) From a fragmentary historical text (BrM 78-10-15, 22, 37, and 38), published (last publication) by N. Strassmaier, Nib, No. 329. cf. also, H. Winckler, Altorientalische Forschungen (Leipzig, 1897), pp. 511 ff. ("Pittakost"). Translation: Zehnpfund-Langdon, in VAB, iv, 206 ff.

(13—22)

. . . [in] the 37th year, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon [mar]ched against Egypt (Mi-fr) to deliver a battle. [Ama]lis (text: . . . [j]-a-um) of Egypt, [called up his a]r[m[y] . . . [ . . . ]u from the town Pfu-lam . . . distant regions which (are situated on islands) amidst the sea . . . many . . . which/who (are) in Egypt . . . [car]rying weapons, horses and [char-iot]s . . . he called up to assist him and . . . did [ . . . ] in front of him . . . he put his trust. . . (only the first signs at the beginning and the end of the following 7 or 8 lines are legible).

2. NABONIDUS (555-539)

(a) Nabonidi’s Rise to Power

The basalt stele in Istanbul, first published by V. Scheil, Inscription de Nabonide (1896), in RT, XVIII, 15 ff. cf. also, L. Messerschmidt, Die Stele Nabunaid’s, in MVAG, 1/1 (1896), changed during the rule of the king Erba-Marduk removing her cella and unharassing her team, (and who) therefore had left Eanna angrily and stayed (hence) in an un(seemly) place while they had placed in her chapel some image (Lamassu) which was not appropriate for Eanna, (this) Ishtar (NYX) he (the king of Akkad) appeased and he (re)installed her in her cella putting to her (chariot) the seven lions which befit her godhead. The incorrect (image of) Ishtar (NYX) he took out of Eanna and brought back to her shrine Eanna (the correct image of) Inanna (I n 1 ι ι ι κ). (As to) the Ishtar (H-Iar), the lady of Elam, the princess who dwells in Susa (two lines missing) sitting/dwelling ... which is in ... whom nobody has seen for a long time, her throne he erected of alabaster shining like the sun (lit.: day) and of reddish gold. (As to) the goddess Anunitum residing in Sippar, whose residence in old times a (victorious) enemy had removed to Arrapha and whose sanctuary the Gutians had destroyed, and whose cult Neriglissar had renewed and whose (image) he had clad with an attire befiting her godhead, he made her stay (provisionally)—her own temple being in ruins—in a chapel in Sippar-­Annanu arranging (only) for her nidbH (subsistence) -offerings.

(iv)

After (his) days had become full and he had started out on the journey of (human) destiny his son Labashi-­Marduk, a minor (who) had not (yet) learned how to behave, sat down on the royal throne against the intentions of the gods and (three lines missing).

(v)

They carried me into the palace and all prostrated themselves to my feet, they kissed my feet greeting me again and again as king. (Thus) I was elevated to the throne by the order of my lord Marduk and (therefore) I shall obtain whatever I desire—there shall be no rival of mine!

I am the real executor of the wills of Nebuchadnezzar and Neriglissar, my royal predecessors! Their armies are entrusted to me, I shall not treat carelessly their orders and I am (anxious) to please them (i.e. to execute their plans).

Awel-Marduk, son of Nebuchadnezzar, and Labashi-­Marduk, son of Neriglissar [called up] their [troops] and ... their ... they dispersed. Their orders (7-8 lines missing)

(vi)

them and prayed to them; with regard to the impending constellation of the Great Star and the moon, I became

1 This constellation caused also another dream which is reported on a small tablet (Yale Babylonian Collection, published by A. T. Clay, in HO, 1 [1915], No. 39, with translation on p. 55). 'In the month of Tebitu, the 15th day, of the 7th year of [the rule of] Nabonidus, king of Babylon, Shamakih reported (text: present tense) as follows: 'On a dream I saw

1 Lit.: "to blot out" (suhhu). This seems to have been done to make it impossible to retrace the outlines of the original foundation-walls and therefore to rebuild the sanctuary.

2 For a translation of this column, cf. J. Lewy, in MVAG, xxii/2 (1924), 80 ff.

3 Po- the phrase sama naid, cf. B. Meissner, BABWh, 1, 52 f.
aprehensive (but) (in a dream) a (!) man came to my assistance, saying to me: "There are no evil portents (involved) in the impending constellation!"

In the same dream, when my royal predecessor Nebuchadnezzar and one attendant (appeared to me) standing on a chariot, the attendant said to Nebuchadnezzar: "Do speak to Nabonidus, that he should report to you the dream he has seen!" Nebuchadnezzar listened to him and said to me: "Tell me what good (signs) you have seen!" (And) I answered him, saying: "In my dream I beheld with joy the Great Star, the moon and Marduk (i.e. the planet Jupiter) high up on the sky and it (the Great Star) called me by my name!"

(vii)

(2-3 lines missing) [altars of the planet] Venus, the planet Saturn, the Shining Star,8 the star AB (?) +1JAL,9 the great stars dwelling in heaven, the great witnesses (of my dream) I set up for them and prayed to them for a life lasting through many days, permanence of (my) throne, endurance of (my) rule, and that my words might be received favorably before Marduk my lord. (Then) I lay down and beheld in a night(ly vision) the goddess Gula who restores the health of the dead(ly sick) and bestows long life. I prayed to her for lasting life for myself and that she might turn her face towards me. And she actually did turn and looked steadily upon me with her shining face (thus) indicating (her) mercy. I entered the temple e. NIG.PA k a l a m. m a. s u m. m u into the presence of Nebo, he who extends (the length of) my rule; he placed into my hands the correct scepter, the lawful staff, which (alone) ensures the aggrandizement of the country. I beheld the throne of the goddess Tashmetum (who is) Gula (in the role of) bestower of life. She did present my cause favorably before Marduk, my lord, with regard to the lengthening of (my) life into future days and the overthrowing of all opposition.

And the wrath of Marduk, my lord, did (eventually) calm down and—full of awe—I dared to praise him; (then) with fervent prayers I approached his sanctuary and (eventually) addressed my prayers to him (directly), telling him my very thoughts as follows: "If I am in reality a king who pleases your heart—and I am not certain (yet), I (still) do not know (this)—one in whose (text: my) hands you, lord of lords, intend to entrust a kingship which is more (important) than that of the kings whom you have nominated in former times to exercise the rule11—do make my days last long; (if) I live through long years (lit.: if my years grow old), I shall care for the sanctuaries (of the gods)!

(viii)

(of the gods)!" (one line missing) [a fabric befitting a) god [. . . embroidered] and made sparkling with precious stones and gold(-appliques) was its front, I had made (lit.: fit) beautifully into garments befitting their godheads, for my lord Ea who increases my royal power, for Nebo, the administrator of all the upper and nether world, who lengthens the span of my life, for my lady Tashmetum who watches over my life. I furthermore made—what no former king had done—an arattu -throne of reddish gold for my lord Ea, according to the (customs/models of) the past, and placed it, as a seat for him, in his shrine e. k a r. z a. g i. n. n a (Lapis-Lazuli Quay).

I am a king who always, daily (and) without interruption, is interested in the maintenance of the temples Esagila and Ezida. I had plated with shining silver the wooden door-leaves of (all) the rooms in the temple of the gods of the upper and the nether world (to wit) the mystery-room (lit.: room of seclusion) of Marduk and Sarpanit, and the door-leaves of the temple k. d u r u n. K A12 which are on both sides of the temple 6. m a. h, and (also) those of the gate of the goddess Beltia (Madonna) for the procession of Sarpanit, the beloved of Marduk, she who makes firm/steadfast the foundations of my royal throne. As to the main gate, the gate of the temple e. m a. h, the door-leaves of which consisted (each) of one leaf covered with (ordinary) wood, I rebuilt these door-leaves as lulimu -doors18 made of cedarwood and mounted them with gold-bronze making them as shining as the sun, so that the coating could show that excellency which is befitting to these (door-leaves). On (unintelligible)14 I put them on (their) hinges (lit.: places). I [had also made] the bronze snakes which are upon the supporting walls of the temple e. m a. h and the bronze wild-oxen.

(ix)

(one line missing) I am (also) a caretaker who brings large gifts to the great gods. In the month of Nisanu, the 10th day, when Marduk, the king of the gods, as well as (all) the (other) gods from the upper and the

---

11 This passage is very difficult; my translation is necessarily provisional, based upon the peculiar situation (Marduk as the natural protector of legitimacy versus Nabonidus as usurper troubled by his conscience). Exactly as in the Eski-Harran Memorial, longevity is considered here a gift with which the deity endows her favorites among men.

12 The name of this temple or chapel must not be confused with that of the temple of the goddess Nin-Eanna in Babylon: e. k i. d u r u n. PAAN which appears sometimes (cf., e.g., Strassmaier, NM(c. 247:12) as l. k i. d u r u n . K A.N). The latter is also the name of a sanctuary in Kish, cf. J. A. Craig, Hebrewia, in (1897), 220, text BrM, Sm 289, obv.(?) line ii.

13 The meaning of this term remains obscure.

14 Text: ine KLUD ON a m u m . Meaning?
nether world were seated in the e,sizkur.sizkur, the chapel of the offerings, the a,litu -chapel of the "Lord of Justice," I brought in for them 100 talents (and) 21 minas of silver (corresponding in value to) 5 talents and 17 minas of gold, in (addition) to the annual gurru offerings which (come) from tokens of homage," from the excessive abundance of the (flat) lands, the rich yield of the mountain regions, the in-coming taxes of all inhabited regions, (from) tokens of esteem (given) by kings, (from) the vast treasures which the prince Marduk has entrusted to me, (all) as perpetual (and) voluntary (and) 21 minas of silver (corresponding in value to) helpers, I (also) dedicated as temple slaves 2,850 men and watch over my life. To Nebo and Nergal, my divine predecessors. After they had performed the festival In the great sacred cities, I prostrated myself before Larsa and Ur and brought silver, gold (and) precious stones to Sin, Shamash and Ishtar. When I (then) proceeded, (unintelligible) to the town of the god Mah ... beer, abundant sacrifices ... 00 more than 10 lines missing) [as to the temples of the gods] whose storehouses [were empty] (and) where since ... their (gods) had not dwelt, these (temples) Marduk, my lord, called to my attention and entrust ed me (lit: put into my hands) with the restoration of the divine cults. In a sacred pronouncement he ordered the appeasement of the angry gods and the rester-ment of their seats to (be the pious duty of) my rule. As to the temple e.h u1.h u1 in Harran which was in ruins for 54 years—through a devastation by the Manda-hordes the(se) sanctuaries were laid waste—the time (predestined) by the gods, the moment for the appease-ment (to wit) 54 years, had come near, when Sin should have returned to his place. Now, Sin, the crown-bearer, did return to his place and remembered his lofty seat— and as to all the (lesser) gods who had moved out with him from his shrine—it was again Marduk, the king of (all) the gods who ordered (me) to gather them. As to the cylinder seal of the costliest jasper, a stone (befitting) a king, upon which Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, had improved by drawing upon it a picture of Sin—that his own name be remembered— and upon which he had written a eulogy of Sin and hung it around the neck of (the image of) Sin, (this stone) whose exterior had been damaged in these days, during the destruction (wrought by) the enemy, [I restored/mounted and deposited] in Esagila, the temple which keeps the great gods alive," in order not to (permit an) interruption of the oracles given by him (Sin) (by means of this seal) 16

(xi)

(This column contains a list of quotations from heptastrophic texts concerning the results obtained during the examination of the liver of a sheep sacrificed for that purpose probably when this stela was set up.)

(b) The Family of Nabonidus

Memorial written either for the mother or the grandmother of Nabonidus, published by H. Pognon, in Inscriptions sémantiques de la Syrie, de la Mésopotamie et de la région de Mos- soul (Paris, 1907), PIs. xn-xni, and pp. 1 ff. For important corrections, cf. E. Dhorme, RB, 1918, 130 ff., and—superseding previous literature—J. Lewy, The Late Assyro-Babylonian Cult of the Moon and its Culmination at the time of Nabonidus (HUCH, xix [1946], 405-489), as well as B. Landsberger, Die Basaltstèle Nabonid’s von Eski-Harran, in Halil Edhem Hattia Kitabi (Ankara, 1947); cf. also, S. Smith, Iosis, Chapter XL-V (Schweich Lectures of the British Academy, 1940), (London, 1944), pp. 22-28, and E. Dhorme, Eti, XVI (1947), pp. 1-22.

(i)

(one line destroyed); 2 day and night through month(s) and year(s) I ... for the moment; 2 holding the hem (of the garment) of Sin, the king of the gods, looking at him (every) night and (every) day; [in] supplication and prostration, I remained before them (i.e. the gods) saying: "May your return (i.e. Sin’s) to your town take place so that (its) black-headed inhabitants can worship for all days to come your great godhead!" [Upon an id ea prompted by my (personal) god and goddess I did not (anymore) let touch] my body garments (made) of sag -wool, silver [finery], new underwear nor perfumes, sweet(smelling) oil; I was clad [only in] ... and I was performing the reli-gious duties [in] ... and in (ritual) silence. For the ... ls of my town ... what my heart desired, all my finery ... to them [I offered] solemnly.

[During the time from Ashurbanipal], the king of Assyria, [in whose] [rule] I was born—(to wit): [21 years] under Ashurbanipal, [4 years under Ashur]-etil-lani, his son, [21 years under Nabupola]-ssar, 43 years under Nebuchadnezzar, [2 years under Elil-]

15 Text: ḫukīnī. 16 Text difficult: ina MASPAN.QAM Kl ḫu ē; ina i-tu-[tu-qā-iā. 17 This seems to be an allusion to the well-established Mesopotamian concept that it is the function of the temple to receive and to transmit the sacrifices to the deity which "lives" on them. 18 The meaning of the text seems to suggest this translation and the proposed interpretation— although no Mesopotamian parallels can be ad-duced to support it. 19 J. Lewy proposes to restore this line as "I [am] Shumuadan[...]a, the go[verness]." 20 Landsberger reads: ad-īn(?); Lewy (HUCH, xxx, 414, n.50): apī-lāb(i). 21 The term s i g . s a g does not denote "fine, first-(class) wool" as one would be inclined to think, but wool of a specific color. This results clearly from the Middle-Babylonian text, Clay, UM, ii/2, 441-1, where various amounts of *ta-kil-tum and ta-kil-um are summed up as sīgīt-pu, i.e. "colored wool," or from the text UM, ii/2, 135, i,9-9, mentioning garments described as ta-ba-ru-tum "red," ta-kil-um "dark blue," s i g . s a g and pič-"white." The Neo-Babyl. references for s i g . s a g are Dougherty, GCC, n. 361:2; Clay, BIN, 1 9:22; Harper, ABL, 51:119; Strassmaier, NBB, 43:2. 22 The figures given here and in the following lines are those of Lands-barger.
Merodach, 4 years under Nergillassar, [in summa 95 years], [the god was away] till Sin, the king of the gods, [remembered the temple] ... of his [great] godhead, clouded face [shone up], [and he] listened to my prayers, [forgot] the angry command [which he had given, and decided to return to the] temple 6. h u 1. h u 1, the temple, [the mansion,] his heart's delight. [With regard to his impending return to the] temple, Sin, the king of [the gods, said (to me)]: "Nabonidus, the king of Babylon, the son of thy womb] [shall] make [me] en[ter/sit down (again)] in[to] the temple e. h u 1. h u 1 !" I carefully obeyed the orders which [Sin], the king of the gods, had pronounced (and therefore) I did see myself (how) Nabonidus, the king of Babylon (DIN.TIR*), the offspring of my womb, reinstalled completely the forgotten rites of Sin, Ningal, Nusku (and) Sadarnunnna, (how) he rebuilt the temple e. h u 1. h u 1 and completed its construction. He (also) restored completely the town of Harran (making it bigger) than (it was) before. He led (the images of) Sin, Ningal, Nusku (and) Sadarnunnna from Babylon, his royal residence, to Harran and made them take their seats in the temple 6. h u 1. h u 1, the sanctuary which pleases their hearts, under the jubilant rejoicing (of the population).

In his love for me who (always) worshiped his godhead, held (in prayers) the hem of his garment, Sin, the king of the gods, did what he never did before, gave (to me) what he had not given to anybody (else); (to wit) Sin, the king of the gods, chose me (lit.: lifted my head) and made my name famous in the world by adding many (lit.: long) days (and) years of (full) mental capacity (to the normal span of life) and (thus) kept me alive—from the time of Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, to the 6th year of Nabonidus, king of Babylon, the son of my womb, (that is) for 104 happy years, according to what Sin, the king of the gods, had promised me (lit.: put into my heart). (And indeed all the time) my eyesight was keen, my hearing excellent, my hands and feet in perfect condition, my diction well chosen, food and drink agreed with me, under the jubilant rejoicing (of the population).

He* served them (the Assyrian kings) as an official, did always what was agreeable to them and made me a fine name before them (treating me) like the[ir] own daughter, (they) chose me (to become a governor). Afterwards they died; none of their children, none of their families and of their officials to whom—when they had been put into office—they had given rich gifts, performed actually as much as a fumigation-offering, whereas I brought monthly, without interruption—in my best garments—offerings to their souls, fat lambs, bread, fine beer, wine, oil, honey, and all kinds of garden fruits, and established as perpetual offerings abundant fumigations (yielding) sweet smells for them and placed ... before them.

(Postscript) In the [ninth] year of Nabonidus, king of Babylon, she died a natural death, and Nabonidus, king of Babylon, the offspring of her womb, the favorite of his mother, deposited her corpse (in the coffin) (clad in) fine (woolen) garments, shining linen, (with) golden ALU (?), precious and cosdy stones [he decked her out]; he sprinkled her corpse with perfumed oil. They def[erished] (the coffin) [in a] secure tomb and, in front of it, he (then) slaughtered cattle and fat sheep, and he assembled into [his] presence the inhabitants of Babylon and Borsippa (broken).

(c) Nabonidus and the Clergy of Babylon

The "Verse Account of Nabonidus" is preserved on the damaged tablet British Museum 38.299 which was published by Sidney Smith, in Babylonian Historical Texts, Pts. I-v, translation and translation, pp. 85 ff. The understanding of the difficult and partly very damaged poem was greatly furthered by Landsberger-Bauer, ZA, xxxvii (1926-27), (NF 111), 88 ff. The following translation is to a large extent based upon the interpretation given by Landsberger-Bauer. cf. also, S. Smith, in Isaiah, Chapter XL-LV Literary Criticism and History (The Schweich Lectures of the British Academy, 1940). London, 1944.

(i) (one line destroyed)

[... law (and)] order are not promulgated by him, [... he made perish the common people through wajant, the nobles he killed in war, [...] for] the trader he blocked the road.

[... for the farmer] he made rare the [uruppu] [... there is no .. in the country [...] the harvester] does not sing the alalu -song (any more) [... he] does not fence in (any more) the arable territory.

1 This word still remains obscure. From Neo-Babylonian legal texts, one may gather the following evidence: 1) Speebers, Recueil des inscriptions de l'Asie anterieure, etc. (Bruxelles, 1925) 293-2,5,9 mentions a bit ku-ru-up-pu-ri/ti/*-idim which was rented; also Clay, Babylonian Records in the Library of J. Pierpont Morgan, 11, 1:1 where this type of house is described as adjacent to other bit [uruppu. and 2) the formula malihu la kuruppu is quite frequent in texts of this period, note also O. Kruckmann, Texte und Materialien der Fru Professor Hilprecht Babylonian Collection, 11/hi, 193-10 (context damaged) "silver (given) a-n-a ku-ru-up-pu-tu" and 3) R. Dougherty, Yo, vu, 78: 5 (cf. also M. San Nicolo in Archiv orientalisti, v [1933], 299 ff. and 300, n.1) where it is reported that someone was sitting on the ku-ru-up-ru of a goldsmith while witnessing a nocturnal Burglarly. One is perhaps allowed to deduce from these passages that the word uruppu denoted a type of wall used to build warehouses, then also such warehouses.

2 Read perhaps

3 For the alalu -song, cf. my remarks in BASOR, 103 (1946), 11 S.
[... he took away] their property, scattered their possessions, [... ] he ruined completely, [... ] their corpses on a dark/obscure place, [... ] became narrow/small.

[...] their faces became changed/hostile, [... ] they do not parade along the wide street, [... ] you do not see happiness (any more); [...] is unpleasant, they decided.

[As to Nabonidus] (his) protective deity became hostile to him, [And he, the former favorite of the gods (is now) seized by misfortunes: [... against the will of the gods he performed an unholy action, [... ] he thought out something worthless:

[He had made the image of a deity] which nobody had (ever) seen in (this) country [He introduced it into the temple] he placed (it) upon a pedestal; [...] he called it by the name of Nanna, [...] it is adorned with a ... of lapis lazuli, crowned with a tiara,

[... ] its appearance is (that of) the eclipsed moon® [...] the gesture of its hand is like that of the god Lugal SU.DU, [...] its head of hair reaches to the pedestal, [...] in front of it are (placed) the Storm (ab&bti) Dragon and the Wild Bull.

[When he worshiped it] its appearance became [like that of a ... demon crowned with] a tiara [... ] his [... became ... ] his face turned hostile, [... ] his form became [... ] [... ] GAL was his name.

[... ] at his [he]eL (ii) (at least one line missing) [His form] not (even) Ea-Mummu could have formed, Not (even) the learned Adapa knows his name.

(Nabonidus said): "I shall build a temple for him, I shall construct his (holy) seat, I shall form its (first) brick (for) him, I shall establish firmly its foundation, I shall make a replica even to the temple Ekur, I shall call its name e. hu 1. hu 1 for all days to come!

"When I will have fully executed what I have planned, I shall lead him by his hand and establish him on his seat. (Yet) till I have achieved this, till I have obtained what is my desire, I shall omit (all) festivals, I shall order (even) the New Year's Festival to cease!"

And he formed its (first) brick, did lay out the outlines, He spread out the foundation, made high its summit, By means of (wall-decorations made of) gypsum and bitumen he made its facing brilliant, As in the temple Esagila he made a ferocious wild-bull stand (on guard) in front of it.

After he had obtained what he desired, a work of utter deceit, Had built (this) abomination, a work of unholiness —when the third year was about to begin— He entrusted the "Camp" to his oldest (son), the first-born, The troops everywhere in the country he ordered under his (command).

He let (everything) go,9 entrusted the kingship to him And, himself, he started out for a long journey, The (military) forces of Akkad marching with him; He turned towards Tema (deep) in the west.

He started out the expedition on a path (leading) to a distant (region). When he arrived there, He killed in battle the prince of Tema, Slaughtered the flocks of those who dwell in the city (as well as) in the countryside, And he, himself, took his residence in [Te]ma, the forces of Akkad [were also stationed] there.

He made the town beautiful, built (there) [his palace] Like the palace in §u.an.na (Babylon), he (also) built [walls]

9 Idiomatic expression: qatte paparu, cf. also, F. R. Kraus, in ZA, XLII (NF ix), 109.
10 Read: [poly-ri-lu-mu.
11 Landsberger reads [ziqnu] za-qin.
12 Obsolete simile.
13 Read: [ta-ri-as qat-su and cf. E. F. Weidner, AJ 0, xi (1936-7), 361, n.12.]
(For) the fortifications of the town and [...].
He surrounded the town with sentinels [...].

[The inhabitants] became troubled [...]
The brick form [and the brick basket he imposed upon them]
Through the (hard) work [they ... ] (break of some lines)

(iii)
(two or more lines destroyed)
He killed the inhabitants [...]
Women and youngsters [...]
Their prosperity (lit.: possessions) he brought to an end [...]
(All) the barley which he found therein [...]

His tired, weary army [grumbled ... ]
The hazdnu-official of Cyrus [...]
[...].

(iv)
(This column contains now only ten lines, of which but few words at their beginnings are preserved, such as "after," "[the symbol] stylus," "the king is mad," "the Lord-of-the-Stylus," ..., "portents were observed ... ", "How?")

(v)
(break)
The praise of the Lord of Lords [and the names of the countries]
Which he has not conquered he wrote upon [this stela... ].

(While) Cyrus (is) the king of the world whose triumphs are true
And [whose yoke] the kings of all the countries are pulling,
He (Nabonidus) has written upon his stone tablets:
"[I have made ... bow] to my feet
I personally have conquered his countries, his possessions I took to my residence."

(It was he) who stood up in the assembly to praise himself (Saying): "I am wise, I know, I have seen (what is) hidden
(Even) if I do not know how to write (with the stylus), yet I have seen secret things
The god Ilte'ri has made me see a vision, he has shown to me everything.

[For this deity, cf. J. Lewy, HUCA, xix, 426 ff.]

[Text: is lidd-id qatatu.]
[Conditional phrase introduced by lu.]

(Yet) he (continues to) mix up the rites, he confuses the (hepatoscopic) oracles [...].
To the most important ritual observances he makes (lit.: orders) an end;
As to the (sacred) representations in Esagila—representations which Ea-Mummu (himself) had fashioned—
He looks at the representations and utters blasphemies,

When he saw the U₄.sar -symbol of Esagila he makes a ... gesture
He assembled the (priests) scholars, he expounded to them (as follows):
"Is not this the sign (of ownership indicating) for whom the temple was built?
I² it belong (really) to Bel, it would have been marked with the spade, (Therefore) Sin (himself) has marked (already) his (own) temple with his U₄.sar -symbol!"

And Zeria, the latammu-official who used to crouch (as his secretary) in front of him, Rimut, the bookkeeper, who used to have his (court-) position (quite) near to him,
Do confirm the royal dictum, stand by his words, they (even) bare their heads to pronounce under oath:
"Now (only) we understand (this situation), after the king has explained (lit: has spoken) (about it)!"

In the month of Nisanu, the nth day, till the god [was present on] his seat, (break)
(vi)
(break)
[... for] the inhabitants of Babylon he (i.e. Cyrus) declared the state of "peace,"
[... ]... (the troops) he kept away from Ekur.

11 This is the typical posture of the scribe as is indicated by the passage in the Epic of Gilgamesh (cf. R. C. Thompson’s edition, PL. 90, line 51, transliteration p. 47) dup-in-ru-at irtitim ma-har-ta am-sa-at “(lady-) scribe, crouching in front of her.”
12 Here, qqqadu putru could also mean "to clap one's forehead (as a gesture of regret)
13 and indicate that the subservient court official wanted to express, in an exaggerated way, his regret at not having made himself this obvious observation and to stress, at the same time, the cleverness of the argumentation of the king.

To build up/repair the town of Babylon he conceived the idea
And he himself took hoe, spade and earth basket and began to complete the wall of Babylon!
The original plan of Nebuchadnezzar they (the inhabitants) executed with a willing heart,
... he built fortifications on the Imgpur-Enlil-wall.

The images of Babylon, male and female, he returned to their cellas,
The . . . who had abandoned their [chapels] he returned to their mansions,
Their wrath he appeased, their mind he put at rest, [ ... those whose power was] at a low he brought back to life
Because their food is served (to them) regularly.

[ ... ] his picture/symbol he effaced,
[ ... in all] the sanctuaries the inscriptions of his name are erased,
[ ... whatever he (Nabonidus) had cre]ated, he (Cyrus) let fire burn up
[ ... what he (Nabonidus) had cre]ated, he (Cyrus) fed to the flames!

To the inhabitants of Babylon a (joyful) heart is given now
[They are like prisoners when] the prisons are opened [Liberty is restored to] those who were surrounded by oppression
[All rejoice] to look upon him as king!

(crooked)

The old Sumerian tide appears here in a context which seems to indicate that the primitive concept concerning the intimate connection between the physical vitality of the ruler and the prosperity of the country, was still valid in the political speculations of the Babylonian clergy.

14 Text:  i-pat'-aqiq from palaqu to slaughter with the pilaku- axe attested, e.g., in Thureau-Dangin, Rhums accadiens, p. 14 (text p. 4) u:16; also, C. Muller-Weir, in RAS (1929), 554 (K.A.R. 360), line 14 (in parallelism to fabaffu). For the pertinent tool, cf., e.g., nnaplagqtum on the Obelisk of Man-ittusu (V. Scheil, Delegation en Perse, Mint., Vol. n, face c viii:1:2).

16 Text: a eD/i + fa-an-du-ma.
worship him (L. Marduk). All the inhabitants of Babylon (DIN.TIR) as well as all of the entire country of Sumer and Akkad, princes and governors (included), bowed to him (Cyrus) and kissed his feet, jubilant that he (had received) die kingship, and with shining faces. Happily they greeted him as a master through whose help they had come (again) to life from death (and) had all been spared damage and disaster, and they worshiped his (very) name.

I am Cyrus, king of the world, great king, legitimate king, king of Babylon, king of Sumer and Akkad, king of the four rings (of the earth), son of Cambyses (Ka-am-bu-zi-ia), great king, king of Anshan, grandson of Teispes (Si-il-pi-il), great king, king of Anshan, of a family (which) always (exercised) kingship; whose rule Bel and Nebo love, whom they want as king to please their hearts.

When I entered Babylon (DIN.TIR) as a friend and (when) I established the seat of the government in the palace of the ruler under jubilation and rejoicing, Marduk, the great lord, [induced] the magnanimous inhabitants of Babylon (DIN.TIR) [to love me], and I was daily endeavouring to worship him. My numerous troops walked around in Babylon (DIN.TIR) in peace, I did not allow anybody to terrorize (any place) of the [countryside] of Sumer and Akkad. I strove for peace in Babylon (K.a.d.i.n.g i.r. a)" and in all his (other) sacred cities. As to the inhabitants of Babylon (DIN.TIR), [who] against the will of the gods [had/were . . .], I abolished the corvee (lit.: yoke) which was against their (social) standing. I brought relief to their dilapidated housing, putting (thus) an end to their (main) complaints. Marduk, the great lord, was well pleased with my deeds and sent friendly blessings to myself, Cyrus, die king who worships him, to Cambyses, my son, the offspring of [my] loins, as well as to all my troops, and we all [praised] his great [godhead] joyously, standing before him in peace.

All the kings of the entire world from the Upper to the Lower Sea, those who are seated in throne rooms, (those who) live in other [types of buildings as well as] all the kings of the West land living in tents," brought their heavy tributes and kissed my feet in Babylon (S.u.a.n.n.a). (As to the region) from . . . as far as Ashur and Susa, Agade, Eshnunna, the towns Zamban, Me-Turnu,7 Der as well as the region of the Gutians, I returned to (these) sacred cities on the other side of the Tigris, the sanctuaries of which have been ruined for a long time, the images which (used) to live therein and established for them permanent sanc-

8 This phrase refers either to the way of life of a nomadic or a primitive society in contradistinction to that of an urban, cf. A. Peexel, in JNES, i (1942), 252 ff., and also the passage Aff-la-me-tu is-ut ku-ta-ri "Ahamfit peoples (living) in tents" (Craig, Ass. and Babyl. Religious Texts, 1, 81 f., text K 8609 = 2623 + 3016 + 3255, obsn. line 4).

7 Met-tur-na (instead of the usual Me-tur-nat) appears also as Me-e-tur-nat (cf. Deimel, Sl, 381/197). For this name of a river, the literature quoted by A. Falkenstein and L. Matous, ZA, XII (NF v m.), 151, and A. Falkenstein, ZA, XIV (NF 81), 69 f.

tuaries. I (also) gathered all their (former) inhabitants and returned (to them) their habitations. Furthermore, I resettled upon the command of Marduk, the great lord, all the gods of Sumer and Akkad whom Nabonidus has brought into Babylon (S.u.a.n.n.a") to the anger of the lord of the gods, unharmed, in their (former) chapels, the places which make them happy.

May all the gods whom I have resettled in their sacred cities ask daily Bel and Nebo for a long life for me and may they recommend me (to him); to Marduk, my lord, they may say this: "Cyrus, the king who worships you, and Cambyses, his son,...", all of them I sedeted in a peaceful place . . . ducks and doves,... I endeavoured to fortify/repair their dwelling places (six lines destroyed)

4. XERXES (485-465)

Akkadian version of a foundation tablet from Persepolis, SE corner of the terrace. Text: E. Herzfeld, Archeologische Mitteilungen aus dem Iran, VIII (1937), 56 ff.; transliteration and translation with extensive annotations by E. Herzfeld, Altpersische Inschriften (Berlin, 1938), No. 14, pp. 27 ff.8

Ahuramazda is the great god who gave (us) this earth, who gave (us) that sky, who gave (us) mankind, who gave to his worshipers9 prosperity, who made Xerxes, the king, (rule) the multitudes (as) only king, give alone orders to the other (kings).4

I am Xerxes, the great king, the only king (lit: king of kings), the king of (all) countries (which speak) all kinds of languages, the king of this (entire) big and far-(reaching) earth,—the son of King Darius, the Achaemenian, a Persian, son of a Persian, an Aryan (ar-ri-i) of Aryan descent (lit.: seed)."

Thus speaks king Xerxes: These are the countries—in addition to Persia—over which I am king under the "shadow" of Ahuramazda, over which I hold sway, which are bringing their tribute to me—whatever is commanded them by me, that they do and they abide by my law(s)—: Media, Elam, Arachosia, Urartu (Pers. version: Armenia), Drangiana, Parthia, (H)aria, Bactria, Sogdia, Chorasmia, Babylonia, Assyria, Sattagdia, Sardis, Egypt (Mi-fir), the Ionians who live on the salty sea and (those) who live beyond (lit: on the other shore of) the salty sea, Maka, Arabia, Gandara, India, Cappadocia, Da’an, the Amyrgian Cimmerians (Pers. and Elam. versions: Sakans), the Cimmerians (wearing) pointed caps, the Skudra, the Akupish, Libya,6 Banneshu (Carians) (and) Kush.

8 Dr. G. G. Cameron is to be thanked for his expert assistance in translating certain difficult passages of this text.

9 The Persian and Elamite versions do not differentiate between the term which the Akkadian version renders respectively as "mankind" (amélûtu) and "worshipers" (na). The Persian word is connected etymologically with Latin quis (cf. also, Hesgfeld, Altpersische Inschriften, pp. 318 f.), but refers there—as Dr. Cameron pointed out to me—to "earthly affairs."

9 This renders the Akk. mülûtu, the Persian text means literally: one of many kings or frametars.

10 The Akk. text—unable to render the foreign concept—uses here a transliteration of the Old Persian original: ar-ri-i-si-tir for arqafûk-a.

11 cf. for this translation (of Akk. "Pw-wa-fa"). G. G. Cameron, in JNES, 8 (1943), 301.
Thus speaks king Xerxes: After I became king, there were (some) among these countries (names of which) are written above, which revolted (but) I crushed (lit.: killed) these countries, after Ahuramazda had given me his support, under the "shadow" of Ahuramazda, and I put them (again) into their (former political) status. Furthermore, there were among these countries (some) which performed (religious) service (lit.: festival) to the "Evil (God)s," (but) under the "shadow" of Ahuramazda I destroyed (lit.: eradicated) these temples of the "Evil (God)s" and proclaimed (as follows): "You must not perform (religious) service to the 'Evil (God)s' (any more)!"] Wherever formerly (religious) service was performed to the "Evil (God)s," I, myself, performed a (religious) service to Ahuramazda and the arta (cosmic order) reverently. Furthermore, there were other things which were done in a bad way, and these (too) I made in the correct way.

All these things which I did, I performed under the "shadow" of Ahuramazda and Ahuramazda gave me his support until I had accomplished everything. Whosoever you are, in future (days) who thinks (as follows): "May I be prosperous in this life and blessed" after my death!"—do live according to this law which Ahuramazda has promulgated: "Perform (religious) service (only) for Ahuramazda and the arta (cosmic order) reverently." A man who lives according to this law which Ahuramazda has promulgated, and (who) performs (religious) service (only) to Ahuramazda and the arta (cosmic order) reverently, will be prosperous while he is alive and—(when) dead—he will become blessed.

Thus speaks king Xerxes: May Ahuramazda protect me, my family and these countries from all evil. This I do ask of Ahuramazda and this Ahuramazda may grant me!

5. ANTONIUS SOTER (280-262/1)

Published in Rawlinson, Vol. v, Pi. 66; latest translation: F. H. Weissbach, Die Keilinschriften der Achameniden (VAB, ti, Leipzig, 1911), pp. 132 ff.

I am Antiochus (An-ti-u- | | u-us), the great king, the legitimate king, the king of the world, king of Babylon (E[n]), king of all countries,1 the caretaker of the temples Esagila and Ezida, the first(-born) son of king Seleucus (Si-gu-u- | | u), the Macedonian (am[Ma-a] | | a-du-ma-a-d), king of Babylon.

When I conceived the idea of (re)constructing Esagila and Ezida, I formed with my august hands (when I was still) in the country Hatti2 the (first) brick for Esagila and Ezida with the finest oil3 and brought (it with me) for the laying of the foundation of Esagila and Ezida. And in the month of Addaru, the 20th day, the 43rd year (of the Seleucid era), I did lay the foundation of Ezida, the (only) true temple of Nebo which is in Borsippa.

O Nebo, lofty son, (most) wise among the gods, splendid (and) worthy of all praise, first-born son of Marduk, child of Arua, the queen who fashioned all creation, do look friendly (upon me) and may—upon your lofty command which is never revoked—the overthrow of the country of my enemy, the fulfillment of (all) my wishes against my foes, constant predominance, a kingdom (ruled) in justice (to all),4 an orderly government,5 years of happiness, enough progeny (lit.: to be sated with progeny) be your permanent gift to the (joint) kingship of Antiochus and his son, king Seleucus!

When you, prince Nebo, born in (lit.: son of) Esagila, first-born of Marduk, child of Arua the queen, enter—under jubilant rejoicings—Ezida, the (only) true temple, the temple (befitting) your position as Anu (Le. highermost of the gods), the seat which gladdens your heart, may—upon your trustworthy command which cannot be made void—my days (on earth) be long, my years many, my throne firm, my rule lasting, under your lofty scepter which determines the borderline between the heaven and the nether world. May (only words of) favor be on your sacred lips (lit.: mouth) with regard to me, and may I personally conquer (all) the countries from sunrise to sunset, gather their tribute and bring it (home) for the perfection of Esagila and Ezida.

O Nebo, foremost son, when you enter Ezida, the (only) true temple, may there be on your lips (lit.: mouth) (words of) favor for Antiochus, the king of all countries, for Seleucus, the king, his son (and) for Stratonike (As-ta-ar-ta-ni-i- | | i) | | u), his consort, the queen!

1 Antiochus was, at that time, in Syria; cf. W. W. Tarn, The Cambridge Ancient History, vn (Cambridge, 1933), 701 f.
2 Oil was presumably used to keep the brick, prepared by the king himself as his first royal act, in a state of "freshness" till it was actually deposited in the ground. For the use of substitutes for clay when this common matter was to be touched by royal hands, I refer here to two misunderstood passages; Nabopolassar (text: ZA, iv [1889], 129 S, col. 1122-3) reports: "I made my first-born son Nebuchadnezzar carry clay (which was in reality) a mixture of wine, oil, and resin-cuttings (p-it-tam be-el-la-at | | u hi-bi-ti-tm)," and Ashurbanipal (cf. E. Nassyhi, Aqr, n [1924], 98, 137) refers to the same technique with the words "by means of a brick-mould made of ebony and mes-wood from Magan and (from) cuttings of aromatic matters (hi-bil-ti j i m . b i a .), I made the (first) brick for it."
3 For this translation of karrumutum-la-ri, cf. my remarks above in n.1, p. 269b.
4 For this translation of karrumutum-la-ri, cf. my remarks above in n.1, p. 269b.
5 Text: pa-li-e bu-o-ri.
I, the Sun Suppiluliumas, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant, the favorite of the Storm-god, went to war. Because of king Tusratta’s presumptuousness I crossed the Euphrates and invaded the country of Isuwa. The country of Isuwa I vanquished for the second time and made them again my subjects. The countries which in the time of my father (20) had crossed over into the country of Isuwa, (namely) people from Gurtalissa, people from Arawanna, the country of Zazzisa, the country of Kalasma, the country of Tim(mi)na, the mountain district of Haliwa, the mountain district of Kama, people from Turmitta, the country of Alse I presented it as a gift. I proceeded to the provincial center Suta together with their cattle, sheep (and) horses, together with their possessions and together with

---

Hittite Historical Texts

TRANSLATOR: ALBRECHT GOETZE

Suppiluliumas Destroys the Kingdom of Mitanni

---

their deportees I brought to the Hatti land. Tusratta, the king, had departed, he did not come to meet me in battle.

(30) I turned around and (re)crossed the Euphrates. I vanquished the country of Halba and the country of Mukis." Takuya, the king of Neyä, came before me to the country of Mukis to sue for peace. But in Takua’s absence, his brother Akit-Tessub persuaded the country of Neyä and the city Neyä to revolt. Akit-Tessub entered into a conspiracy with the mariyannu (namely) Hismiya, Asiri, Zulkiya, Utriya and Niruwa. Together with their charioteers and their foot soldiers they entered into a conspiracy with Akiya, the king of Arahti. They occupied Arahti and rebelled; this is what they said: “Let us battle with the great king, the king of the Hatti land!” (35) I, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, vanquished them at Arahti. I took prisoner Akiya, the king of Arahti, Akit-Tessub, Akuwa’s brother, and their mariyannu, all of them with all that they owned and brought them to the Hatti land. I also brought Qatna with its possessions and all that they owned to the Hatti land.

When I proceeded to the Nuhasse land, conquered all its countries. Sarrupsu had met a violent death; I took prisoner his mother, his brothers and his sons and brought them to the Hatti land. Takib-sar, his servant, (40) I placed as king over Ukulzat. I proceeded to Apina without expecting that I would have to fight with the country of Kinza. However, Sutatarra together with Aitakama, his son, and together with his charioteers went out to fight with me. I defeated him and they retreated into Abzuya; I had Abzuya besieged. I took prisoner Sutatarra together with his son, his mariyannu, his brothers and with all that they owned and brought them to the Hatti land. I then proceeded to the country of Apina; Ariwanahi, the king of Apina, Wambadura, Akparu and Artaya, his great, went out to fight with me. (45) I took prisoner all of them with their countries and with all that they owned and brought them to the Hatti land. Because of king Tusratta’s presumptuousness I raided all these countries in a single year and conquered them for the Hatti land. On this side I made Mount Niblani, on the other side the Euphrates my frontier.

---

1 The ruler of the Mitannian kingdom in Upper Mesopotamia and contemporary of the pharaohs Amen-hotep III and IV, well-known from the Amarna letters.
2 Region in the bend of the Euphrates near Harput.
3 The mentioned countries seem to stretch from the region of Malatya toward the northwest.
4 The text gives here Tegarama; this is clearly a mistake—Tegarama follows presently—which the parallel passage obverse 12 allows us to correct.
5 Biblical Togarmah.
6 Region on the upper Tigris.
7 Assyrian Kullimeri east of the Batman Su and north of the upper Tigris.
8 In the hilly country between upper Tigris and the Habur.
9 The Mitannian capital, probably opposite Tell Halaf (near modern Ras el-Ain) on the upper Habur.
10 Aleppo.
11 Today Atchana (Tell Afana) east of Antaky.
12 Near the northernmost point of the Orontes river.
13 The nobility of the Mitanni states.
14 Today Mishrif east of the middle Orontes.
15 Region south of Aleppo toward the Orontes.
16 He had been made king there by Suppiluliumas on an earlier campaign.
17 The region of Damascus. The name is the same as Apa; the final ma is the Hurrian article.
18 Qadesh on the Orontes.
19 The Lebanon.
Suppiluliumas and the Egyptian Queen

(iii) While my father was down in the country of Karkamis,1 he dispatched Lupakkis and Tessub-zalmas to the country of Amqa.2 They proceeded to attack the country of Amqa and brought deportees, cattle (and) sheep home before my father. When the people of the land of Egypt heard about the attack on Amqa, they became frightened. Because, to make matters worse, their lord Bibhururiyas* had just died, the Egyptian queen who had become a widow, sent an envoy to my father (10) and wrote him as follows: "My husband died and I have no son. People say that you have many sons. If you were to send me one of your sons, he might become my husband. I am loath to take a servant of mine (15) and make him my husband."

... When my father heard that, he called the great into council (saying): "Since of old such a thing has never happened before me" (20) He proceeded to dispatch Hattu-zitis, the chamberlain, (saying): "Go! Bring you reliable information back to me. They may try to deceive me: As to whether perhaps they have a prince (25) bring reliable information back to me!"

During Hattu-zitis' absence in the land of Egypt my father vanquished the city of Karkamis. The Egyptian envoy, the Honorable Hanis, (45) came to him. Because my father had instructed Hattu-zitis while sending him to the land of Egypt as follows: "Perhaps they have a prince; they may try to deceive me and do not really want one of my sons to (take over) the kingship," the Egyptian queen answered my father in a letter as follows: "Why do you say: 'They may try to deceive me'? If I had a son, would I (iv) write to a foreign country in a manner which is humiliating to myself and to my country? You do not trust me and tell me even such a thing. (5) He who was my husband died and I have no sons. Shall I perhaps take one of my servants and make him my husband? I have not written to any other country, I have written (only) to you. (10) People say that you have many sons. Give me one of your sons and he is my husband and king in the land of Egypt." Because my father was generous, he complied with the lady's wishes and decided for (sending) the son.

(From the text translated below on p. 395, we know that the Hittite prince never reached Egypt but was murdered on his way.)

Hattusilis on Muwatallis' War Against Egypt

At the time that Muwatallis took the field against the king of the land of Egypt and the country of Amurru, and when he then had defeated the king of the land of Egypt and the country of Amurru,1 he returned to the country Apa.2 When Muwatallis, my brother, had (also) defeated Apa, he [returned to] the Hatti land, but [left] me in the country of Apa.

1 On the coast of the Mediterranean between the sea and the upper Orontes. The defeat was accomplished in the famous battle of Qadesh when Muwatallis met Ramses II.
2 The region of Damascus.
Palestinian Inscriptions

TRANSLATOR: W. F. ALBRIGHT

The Gezer Calendar

This little inscription was discovered at Gezer in 1908 by R. A. S. Macalister; it is on a school exercise tablet of soft limestone. For a number of years its date was uncertain, but recent discoveries establish its relative archaism and point to the second half of the tenth century or the very beginning of the ninth as its probable time. The writer would date it in or about the third quarter of the tenth century—about 925 B.C. in round numbers. The language is good biblical Hebrew, in a very early spelling; it is written in verse and seems to have been a kind of mnemonic ditty for children.

The official publication will be found in Macalister, Gezer, 11, pp. 24-28, and hi, Pl. cxxvit. For a nearly exhaustive bibliography up to 1934 see Diringer, Le iscrizioni antico-ebraiche Palestinesi (Florence, 1934), pp. 1-20, supplemented by Albright, BASOR, 92, pp. 16-26. For subsequent bibliography and a full discussion see Sabatino Moscati, L’epigrafia ebraica antica 1935-1950 (Rome, 1951), pp. 8-26; see also A. M. Honeyman, JERAS, 1953, pp. 53-58.

His two months are (olive) harvest, (tricolon, 2:2:2)
His two months are planting (grain),
His two months are late planting;
His month is hoeing up of flax, (tricolon, 3:3:3)
His month is harvest of barley,
His month is harvest and feasting;
His two months are vine-tending, (bicolon, 2:2)
His month is summer fruit.

The Moabite Stone

This important inscription was discovered intact in 1868; it was subsequently broken by the Arabs and in 1873 it was taken to the Louvre. The best publication is found in Dussaud, Les monuments palestiniens et judaïques (Musee du Louvre), 1912, pp. 4-22, with a magnificent photograph of the stela and a good bibliography. The work of Smend and Soehn, Die Inschrift des Königs Mesa von Moab (1886), which was long standard, is not reliable, as was pointed out in detail by Renan and Clermont-Ganneau; see especially Lidzbarski, Ephemeris, 1, pp. 1-10. The most recent competent translation is that of Gressmann, AOT, pp. 440-42. On the question of the authenticity of the text, which was strangely disputed for a long time (in spite of the fact that no forgery of that time could possibly have divined the correct forms of letters in the ninth century B.C.), cf. Albright, JQR, xxxv, 1945, pp. 247-250.

For details of translation which depend on recent discoveries see especially Poebel, Das appositionell bestimmte Pronomen (Chicago, 1932), pp. 7-11; Albright, BASOR, 89, p. 16. n. 53. There are a number of words which were formerly obscure but which have now been found in other Northwest-Semitic inscriptions.

The date of the Mesha Stone is roughly fixed by the reference to Mesha, king of Moab, in II Kings 3:4, after 849 B.C. However, since the contents of the stela point to a date toward the end of the king’s reign, it seems probable that it should be placed between 840 and 820, perhaps about 830 B.C. in round numbers.

I (am) Mesha, son of Chemosh-[..], king of Moab, the Dibonite—my father (had) reigned over Moab thirty years, and I reigned after my father,—(who) made this high place for Chemosh in Qarhoh [..] because he saved me from all the kings and caused me to triumph over all my adversaries. As for Omri, (5) king of Israel, he humbled Moab many years (lit., days), for Chemosh was angry at his land. And his son followed him and he also said, "I will humble Moab." In my time he spoke (thus), but I have triumphed over him and over his house, while Israel hath perished for ever! (Now) Omri had occupied the land of Medeba, and (Israel) had dwelt there in his time and half the time of his son (Ahab), forty years; but Chemosh dwelt there in my time.

And I built Baal-meon, making a reservoir in it, and I built (10) Qaryaten. Now the men of Gad had always dwelt in the land of Arathor, and the king of Israel had built Arathor for them; but I fought against the town and took it and slew all the people of the town as satiation (intoxication) for Chemosh and Moab. And I brought back from there Arel (or Oriel), its chieftain, dragging him before Chemosh in Kerioth, and I settled there men of Sharon and men of Ma-harath. And Chemosh said to me, “Go, take Nebo from Israel!” (15) So I went by night and fought against it from the break of dawn until noon, taking it and slaying all, seven thousand men, boys, women, girls and maid-servants, for I had devoted them to destruction for (the god) Ashtar-Chemosh. And I took from there the [..] of Yahweh, dragging them before Chemosh. And the king of Israel had built Jahaz, and he dwelt there while he was fighting against me, but Chemosh drove him out before me. And (20) I took from Moab two hundred men, all first class (warriors), and set them against Jahaz and took it in order to attach it to (the district of) Dibon.

It was I (who) built Qarhoh, the wall of the forests and the wall of the citadel; I also built its gates and I built its towers and I built the king’s house, and I made both of its reservoirs for water inside the town. And there was no cistern inside the town at Qarhoh, so I said to all the people, "Let each of you make (25) a cistern for himself in his house!” And I cut beams for Qarhoh with Israelite captives. I built Aroer, and I made the highway in the Arnon (valley); I built Beth-bamoth, for it had been destroyed; I built Bezer—for it lay in ruins—with fifty men of Dibon, for all Dibon is (my) loyal dependency.

And I reigned [in peace] over the hundred towns which I had added to the land. And I built (30) [ ... ] Medeba and Beth-diblathen and Beth-baal-meon, and I set there the [ ... ] of the land. And as for Hauronen, there dwelt in it [ ... . And] Chemosh said to me, "Go down, fight against Hauronen. And I went down and [I fought against the town and I took it], and Chemosh dwelt there in my time....

The Ostraca of Samaria

This name is applied to a homogeneous group of 63 docketts on Israelite potsherds which were found by G. A. Reisner in 1910, while excavating a floor-level from the first phase of the second period of palace construction at Samaria. Owing to a mistake in stratigraphy, which was subsequendy corrected by J. W. Crowfoot and his associates, this level was first attributed to Ahab; it is now reasonably certain that it should be assigned to the reign of Jeroboam II (about 786-746 B.C.). The four regnal years mentioned on the Ostraca extend from the ninth to the seventeenth (about 778-770 B.C.). These documents, though jejune in themselves, are of great significance for the script, spelling, personal names, topography, religion, administrative system, and clan distribution of the period.

The documents were published first by G. A. Reisner in his rare book, Israelite Ostracon from Samaria (no date). A revised form of this study was then incorporated in the Harvard Excavations at Samaria, by Reisner, Fisher and Lyon (Cambridge, Mass., 1924), pp. 227-246. For a full bibliography up to 1933 see Diringer, Le iscrizioni antico-ebraiche palestinesi (Florence, 1934), pp. 21-68, especially pp. 66-68. Subsequent treatments deal mainly with the question of chronology or with the personal names; cf. especially J. W. Crowfoot, The Buildings at Samaria (London, 1942), pp. 5-9, 24-27; Albright, BASOR, 73, p. 21, n.38.

Samaria Ostracon, No. 1

In the tenth year. To Shamaryau (Shemariah) from Beer-yam, a jar of old wine. Pega (son of) Elisha, 2; Uzza (son of) . . . ., 1; Eliba, 1; Baala (son of) Elisha, 1; Jedeaiah, 1.

Samaria Ostracon, No. 2

In the tenth year. To Gaddiyau from Azzo. Abibaal, 2; Ahaz, 2; Sheba, 1; Merib-baal, 1.

Samaria Ostracon, No. 18

In the tenth year. From Hazeretho to Gaddiyau. A jar of fine oil.

Samaria Ostracon, No. 50

In the fifteenth year. From Shemida to Hillez (son of) Gaddiyau. Gera (son of) Hanniab.

Samaria Ostracon, No. 55

In the tenth year. (From the) vineyard of Yehau-ell. A jar of fine oil.

An Order for Barley from Samaria

In 1932 several ostraca were found at Samaria, and were published the following year by E. L. Sukenik. One of them is outstanding because of its length and relative completeness. The script belongs to the eighth century, probably to its third quarter; it is characterized by extraordinarily long shafts of such letters as I, m, n, like other Israelite documents of this general period. The text is difficult, and the rendering below is tentative.

Baruch (son of) Shallum [ ... ]

O Baruch... pay attention and [give (?) to ... (son of)] Yimnah (Imnah) barley (to the amount of) two (or three?) measures.

The Siloam Inscription

Accidently discovered in 1880 in the rock wall of the lower entrance to the tunnel of Hezekiah south of the temple area in Jerusalem, the inscription is now in the Museum of the Ancient Orient at Istanbul. Its six lines occupy the lower half of a prepared surface, the upper part of which was found bare of inscription. It is, accordingly, almost certain that the first half of the original document is missing. Its contents and script point to the reign of Hezekiah (about 715-687 B.C.), a dating confirmed by II Kings 20:20 and especially II Chron. 32:20.

There is a very extensive bibliography, which is collected up to 1932 by Diringer, Le iscrizioni antico-ebraiche palestinesi (Florence, 1934) pp. 95-102. For later publications see Sabatino Moscati, L'epigrafia ebraica antica 1935-1950 (Rome, 1951) and Albright, JBL, 62, p. 370. The language is perfect classical Hebrew prose, but the spelling is not entirely consistent; translations can easily be judged by the quality of Hebrew which they presuppose.

[ ... when] (the tunnel) was driven through. And this was the way in which it was cut through:—While [ ... ] (were) still [ ... ] axe(s), each man toward his fellow, and while there were still three cubits to be cut through, [there was heard] the voice of a man calling to his fellow, for there was an overlap in the rock on the right [and on the left]. And when the tunnel was driven through, the quarrymen hewed (the rock), each man toward his fellow, axe against axe; and the water flowed from the spring toward the reservoir for 1,200 cubits, and the height of the rock above the head(s) of the quarrymen was 100 cubits.

The Lachish Ostraca

These ostraca were discovered in the ruins of the latest Israelite occupation at Tell ed-Duweir in southern Palestine, which unquestionably represents biblical Lachish. The first 18 were found by the late J. L. Starkey in 1935; three more (making 21 in all) were added during a supplementary campaign in 1938. Most of the ostraca were letters, while others were lists of names, etc., but only a third of the documents are preserved well enough to be reasonably intelligible throughout. Nearly all of the ostraca come from the latest occupation level. of the Israelite gate-tower, and they are generally placed immediately before the beginning of the Chaldean siege of Lachish, perhaps in the autumn of 589 (or 588) B.C. Since they form the only known corpus of documents in classical Hebrew prose, they have unusual philological significance, quite aside from the light which they shed on the time of Jeremiah.

The texts were published by Harry Torczyner of the Hebrew University in The Lachish Letters (Lachish I), (London, 1938), and Teudot Lajish (Jerusalem, 1940). There is a large scattered bibliography, for which see Torczyner's second publication, pp. viii-x, and BASOR, 82, p. 18. Among the more useful items will be found Albright, BASOR, 61, pp. 10-16; 70, pp. 11-17; 73, pp. 16-21; 82, pp. 18-24; H. L. Ginsberg, BASOR, 71, pp. 24-26; 80, pp. 10-13; Roland de Vaux, RB, 1939, pp. 181-206; S. Birnbaum, PEQ, 1939, pp. 20-28, 91-110; Winton Thomas, Journal of Theological Studies, 40, pp. 1-15. For a mise-au-point of interpretation and bibliography see D. Diringer, in Olga Tufnell, Lachish III—The Iron Age (Oxford, 1933); pp. 331-339.

Lachish Ostraca

To my lord Yaosh: May Yahweh cause my lord to hear tidings of peace this very day, this very day! Who is thy servant (but) a dog that my lord hath remembered his servant? May Yahweh afflict those who report an (evil) rumor about which thou art not informed!

Lachish Ostraca

Thy servant Hosaiah hath sent to inform my lord Yaosh: May Yahweh cause my lord to hear tidings of peace! And now thou hast sent a letter, but my lord did not enlighten thy servant concerning the letter which thou didst send to thy servant yesterday evening, though the heart of thy servant hath been sick since thou didst write to thy servant And as for what my lord said, "Dost thou not understand?—call a scribe!", as Yahweh liveth no one hath ever undertaken to call a scribe for me; and as for any scribe who might have come to me, truly I did not call him nor would I give anything at all for him!

And it hath been reported to thy servant, saying, "The commander of the host, Coniah son of Elnathan, hath come down in order to go into Egypt; and unto Hodaviah son of Ahijah and his men hath he sent to obtain... from him."

And as for the letter of Tobiah, servant of the king, which came to Shallum son of Jaddua through the prophet, saying, "Beware!", thy servant hath sent it to my lord.

Lachish Ostraca

May Yahweh cause my lord to hear this very day tidings of good! And now according to everything that my lord hath written, so hath thy servant done; I have written on the door according to all that my lord hath written to me. And with respect to what my lord hath written about the matter of Beth-haraphid, there is no one there.

And as for Semachiah, Shemaiah hath taken him and hath brought him up to the city. And as for thy servant, I am not sending anyone thither [today(?), but I will send] tomorrow morning.

And let (my lord) know that we are watching for the signals of Lachish, according to all the indications which my lord hath given, for we cannot see Azekah.

Lachish Ostraca V

May Yahweh cause my lord to hear [tidings of peace] and good [this very day, this very day!] Who is thy servant (but) a dog that thou hast sent to thy servant the [letters . . . Now] thy servant hath returned the letters to my lord. May Yahweh cause thee to see [. . .

How can thy servant benefit or injure the king?

Lachish Ostraca VI

To my lord Yaosh: May Yahweh cause my lord to see this season in good health! Who is thy servant (but) a dog that my lord hath sent the [letter] of the king and the letters of the prince[s, saying, "Pray, read them!" And behold the words of the prince[s] are not good, (but) to weaken our hands [and to slachen] the hands of the men who are informed about them [. . . And now] my lord, wilt thou not write to them, saying, "Why do ye thus [even] in Jerusalem? Behold unto the king and unto [his house] are ye doing this thing!” [And,] as Yahweh thy God liveth, truly since thy servant read the letters there hath been no [peace] for [thy serv]ant....

Lachish Ostraca VIII

May Yahweh cause my lord to hear tidings of good this very day! [. . .]. The Lord hath humbled me before thee. Nedabiah hath fled to the mountains [. . .]. Truly I lie not—let my lord send thither!

Lachish Ostraca IX

May Yahweh cause my lord to hear [tidings] of peace! [. . . ] let him send [. . . ]fifteen [. . .]. Return word to thy servant through Shelemiah (telling us) what we shall do tomorrow!

Lachish Ostraca XIII

. . . they did not wish to do (any) work . . . and Semachiah. . . .
IV. Rituals, Incantations, and Descriptions of Festivals
A Ritual for Offering Food

The ancient Egyptian texts contain an abundance of material on the ritual to be performed in making offerings. The most common setting is the mortuary offering to the dead, in which the material offered is called "the Eye of Horus." The deceased was thought of as Osiris, and the servitor thus became his pious son Horus, who offered up his eye fighting on behalf of his father. The brief extract which follows is accompanied by the directions to the servitor for his manual acts.

The passages come from the pyramids of Unis and Pepi I (Nefer-ka-Re) of the Fifth and Sixth Dynasties (25th-24th centuries B.C.). Published by K. Sethe, Die altagyptischen Pyramidentexte (Leipzig, 1908), 1, §§61c-63c.

Words to be spoken: "O Osiris King Nefer-ka-Re, take to thyself the Eye of Horus" Lift thou it to thy face." A lifting of bread and beer.

Lifting before his face. Words to be spoken: "Lift thy face, O Osiris. Lift thy face, O this King Nefer-ka-Re, whose state of glory has departedLift thy face, O this King Nefer-ka-Re, honored and keen, that thou mayest look at that which came forth from thee, . . . Wash thyself, O King Nefer-ka-Re. Open thy mouth with the Eye of Horus. Thou callest thy \( \alpha \) like Osiris, that it may protect thee from all wrath of the dead. O King Nefer-ka-Re, receive thou this thy bread, which is the Eye of Horus." Laid on the ground before him.

The Daily Ritual in the Temple

The temple ceremonial on behalf of gods or deified pharaohs was elaborate and detailed. Brief extracts are here given of the ritual whereby Amon-Re of Karnak was awakened each morning and prepared for his daily activities. One episode has to do with the preliminary burning of incense, the other two with the opening of the shrine within which the god rested.

The texts are from Berlin Papyrus 3055, facsimiled in Hieratische Papyri aus den königlichen Museen zu Berlin, 1 (Leipzig, 1901), Pis. I-XXXVII. The manuscript comes from Thebes and dates to the Twenty-second Dynasty (iooth-ith centuries B.C.). It was treated by O. von Lemmi, Das Ritualbuch des Amondienstes (Leipzig, 1882), and by A. Moret, le rite du culte divin journalier en Egypte (Paris, 1902). For a similar ritual on behalf of the deified Amen-hotep I, related to scenes of offering in the temple of Karnak, see the study by H. H. Nelson in JNES, vm (1949), 201-232, 310-345*(See Addenda).

For a text which was used in the daily ritual of the temple, see p. 6 above.

(i 1) THE BEGINNING OF THE UTTERANCES OF the sacred rites which are carried out for the House of Amon-Re, King of the Gods, in the course of every day by the major priest who is in his day's (service).

THE UTTERANCE FOR striking the fire. WORDS TO BE SPOKEN: "Welcome, welcome in peace, O Eye of Horus, who art glorious, unharmed, and youthful in peace! It shines forth like Re upon the horizon. The power of Seth has hidden itself before the Eye of Horus, who took it away and brought it back, (so that) it is put in its place (again) for Horus. Triumphant is Horus because of his Eye. The Eye of Horus drives away enemies (5) [for] Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, wherever they may be. An offering which the king gives: I am pure."...

(iii 5) . . . THE UTTERANCE FOR breaking the clay. WORDS TO BE SPOKEN: "The clay is broken; the cool waters are opened; the veins of Osiris are drawn. Have certainly not come to drive the god from his throne; I have come to put the god upon his throne. (Thus) thou abidest upon thy great throne, O Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands." I am one whom the gods inducted. An offering which the king gives: I am pure." THE UTTERANCE FOR loosening the shrine. WORDS TO BE SPOKEN: "The finger of Seth is drawn out of the Eye of Horus, (so that) it may become well. The finger of Seth is loosened from the Eye of Horus, (so that) it may become well. The leather covering on the back of the god is laid off. O Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, (iv 1) receive thy two feathers and thy white crown as the Eye of Horus, the right

1 Grammar uncertain, but not: whose glory is lost to him; rather: whose state of other-world being has departed (to the other world).
2 Probably some confusion of Osiris and Horus here, as the Eye came from Horus. Alternatively, the bread which was offered came forth from Osiris as god of the grain.
3 An elaborate ceremonial of "Opening the Mouth" was performed upon a statue of the deceased, in order to enable him to eat, drink, and speak.
4 It is clear that the 'a could function to protect the deceased from the malignity of other dead, but the significance of the phrase "like Osiris" is not clear.
5 The flame for the incense, like other offerings, was called the Eye of Horus.
6 "True is the voice of Horus because of his Eye," i.e. he triumphed in the legal contest against Seth.
7 Dogmatically the pharaoh was the priest of all the gods. Since it was impossible for him to fulfill this function, he delegated authority to priests, who were thus made pure for the designated activity. There follow this utterance the utterances for taking the censer, for laying the bowl of the censer upon its arm, for putting the incense upon the fire, and for proceeding to the shrine.
8 Breaking the clay sealing of the doors of the shrine.
9 The breaking of the clay is like the opening of an earthen dam in order to release irrigating waters. This, in turn, is likened to the opening of the veins of Osiris, god of the Nile waters.
10 The god, awakened from his night’s sleep, must be assured that the priest has no hostile intention and is fit for his role.
11 A variant title in the daily ritual for the goddess Mut (Berlin Papyrus 3014, ii 10, in the same publication) gives: "THE UTTERANCE FOR THE DRAWING BACK OF THE BOLT" (of the shrine door).
12 The door-bolt of the shrine is likened to the finger of Seth with which he damaged the eye of Horus. When the finger was withdrawn, the eye might heal.
13 If the translation is correct, this must refer to a shroud which covered the image of the god by night.
Circumcision in Egypt

References to circumcision are rare in ancient Egypt. In the following text the man wishes to record the fact that he came successfully through that rite. The inscription should be studied in conjunction with a scene of circumcision mentioned in the notes to the translation.

The stela probably comes from Naga ed-Der in Middle Egypt and is now at the University of Chicago, Oriental Institute 16056. It was published by D. Dunham, Naga ed-Der Stela of the First Intermediate Period (London, 1937), pl. XXXII, No. 84, pp. 102-04. Dunham considers the stela to date from the early part of the First Intermediate Period (23rd century B.C.).

An offering which the king and Anubis, Who is Upon His Mountain, He Who is In Ut, the Lord of the Holy Land, give: an invocation-offering to the Count, Seal-Bearer of the King of Lower Egypt, Sole Companion, and Lector Priest, honored with the great god, the Lord of Heaven, Uha, who says:

"I was one beloved of his father, favored of his mother, whom his brothers and sisters loved. When I was circumcised,1 together with one hundred and twenty men, there was none thereof who hit out, there was none thereof who was hit, there was none (5) thereof who scratched, there was none thereof who was scratched.2 was a commoner of repute, who lived on his (own) property, plowed with (his own) span of oxen, and sailed in (his own) ship, and not through that which I had found in the possession of my father, the honored Uha.3

1 Confusing to the modern. The god’s headdress consisted of a crown flanked with two feathers. Each feather was an “eye” and the composite headdress the “Eye.”
2 cf. n.3 above. The sense may be: “To be sure, I am (only) a priest, (but) it was the king who sent me to see the god.”
3 As Dunham points out, this word nab may be connected with the Coptic word for “circumcise,” tebë or tebë. Further, it is probably the same word as the sebet attached as a legend to the scene referred to in the following note.

Dunham suggests that these phrases may have referred to the circumcision ceremony or may have been general, that Uha in his career abused no one and was abused by no one. We have taken it as meaning that it was remarkable that so large a group should have been circumcised without injury to the youths or without any youth reacting violently. In support might conclude that circumcision was effected periodically in a mass ceremony, rather than individually.

An expression of the independent spirit of the end of the Old Kingdom and the beginning of the Middle Kingdom.

Charms Against Snakes

The fear of snakes and scorpions in the ground, of crocodiles in the water, and of lions in the desert was ever-present in ancient Egypt. For an example of a charm which might be used against snakes or scorpions, see pp. 12-14 above. Since the dead were buried in the ground, they also needed protection against the beasts of the ground, so that the mortuary texts in tombs provided adequate magic against snakes.

The following charms come from the pyramids of pharaohs Unis, Tera, and Pepi I of the Fifth-Sixth Dynasties (25th-24th centuries B.C.) at Sakkarah. They are published in K. Sethe, Die altägyptischen Pyramidentexte (Leipzig, 1908), I, and translated in his Koptersetzung und Kommentar zu den altägyptischen Pyramidentexten (Gluckstadt, n.d.), 1-11. (a) is Sethe’s Spruch 228 (§228), (b) is Spruch 229 (§229), and (c) is Spruch 293 (§293).

a

Words to be spoken: "A face has fallen against a face; a face has seen a face. The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it. It has swallowed for itself that which it tasted.”

b

Words to be spoken: "This is the fingernail of Atum, which was on the backbone of Nehebu-kau and which brought to an end the strife in Hermopolis. Fall, roll up!"

c

Words to be spoken: "Back with thee, hidden snake! Hide thyself! Thou shalt not make King Unis see thee. Back with thee, hidden snake! Hide thyself! Thou shalt not come to the place where King Unis is, lest he tell that name of thine against thee: Nemi, the son of Nemi! The servant of the Ennead fell into the Nile. Turn about, turn about! O monster, lie down!"

Curses and Threats

a

In the Sakkarah pyramid of the pharaoh Unis (25th century B.C.), the earth-god Geb is cited as the authority to restrain mortals from abusing the name of the deceased king. The text is in K. Sethe, Die altägyptischen Pyramidentexte (Leipzig, 1908), 1, §§137-38; translation in Sethe, Uebersetzung und Interpretation der altägyptischen Pyramidentexte, 1, 293-302.

1 For amuletic tablets of late times, used against stings or bites, cf. the article by K. C. Seale, Horus on the Crocodiles, in JNES, vi (1947), 43-54.
2 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
3 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
4 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
5 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
6 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
7 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
8 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
9 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
10 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
11 The mottled knife, black and green, goes forth against it.
Kommentar zu den altägyptischen Pyramidentexten (Glückstadt, n.d.), i, 4-5, 11-13.

Other curses will be found in the texts of pp. 25, 201, 377.

Everyone who shall speak evilly against the name of King Unis, when thou ascendest—Geb has decreed that he be a poor man in his town, (so that) he flees and is exhausted.

b

Even the gods were not immune to the threatening magic which might withhold from them their offerings and privileges. The text, in the Sakkarah pyramid of Meri-Re Pepi I (25th-24th century B.C.), is in Sethe, op. cit., n, §§1322-24; translation in H. Kees, Totenglauben und Jenseitsvorstellungen der alten Aegypten (Leipzig, 1926), 108.

Every god who will not build the staircase of this Meri-Re for him, when he goes up and when he ascends to heaven—he shall have no offering bread, he shall not wash himself in the basin, he shall not smell the joint of meat, he shall not taste the leg of meat, earth shall not be hacked up for him, offerings shall not be struck for him—when he goes up, when this Meri-Re ascends to heaven. It is not really this Pepi who says this against you, O gods; it is magic which says this against you, O gods.

c

The tomb was a man's "house of eternity," and violators of a tomb were threatened with an afterlife judgment or with the other-world vengeance of the deceased, who dwelt with the gods. The following text, from the Sakkarah tomb of the Sixth Dynasty magistrate Nenki (24th-23rd century B.C.), appears in K. Sethe, Urkunden des Alten Reichs (Ür., 1, Leipzig, 1933), 260, and in A. H. Gardiner and K. Sethe, Egyptian Letters to the Dead (London, 1928), 10, Pl. x, 1.

As for this tomb, which I have made in the necropolis of the West, I made it (in) a clean and central place. As for any noble, any official, or any man who shall rip up any stone or any brick from this tomb, I will be judged with him by the Great God,1 (will) seize his neck like a bird, and I will cause all the living who are upon earth to be afraid of the spirits who are in the West, which is (still) far from them.

d

The following text, from the Sakkarah tomb of the Sixth Dynasty vizier Ankh-ma-Hor, is published in Sethe, op. cit., 207-08, and in Gardiner and Sethe, op. cit., 10, Pl. x, 2.

[May it go well with you], my successors; may it prosper you, my predecessors! As for anything which ye may do against this my tomb (of) the necropolis, [the like shall be done] against your property. I was a successful and knowing lector priest. No magic was ever effectively secret from me.2 [As for] all [people] who may enter into this tomb in their impurity * when they have eaten fish* the abomination of an effective spirit—(thus) they are not pure for me as they would be pure for an effective spirit who does what his lord praises—[I will seize] him like a bird, (so that) the fear of me is cast into him, so that the spirits and those who are upon earth may see and may be afraid of me, an effective spirit; [I will be] judged with him in that august council of the Great Gad. But as for every man who may enter [into this tomb] being pure and satisfied with it, I will be his partisan in the necropolis, in the council of the Great God.

e

In addition to afterlife vengeance, perils upon earth might be invoked against a evildoer. The following text is from the Gizeh tomb of the Sixth Dynasty official Meni and is now in the Glyptothek at Munich. Published by Sethe, op. cit., 23, and by A. Scharff in MDIK, VIII (1939), 17-33, p1. 12.

The Eldest of the House Meni says: The crocodile be against him in the water, the snake be against him on land—(against) him who may do a thing to this (tomb). I never did a thing to him. It is the god who will judge (him).

f

The divine king of Egypt might—in effect—excommunicate any violators of a royal decree. The following text is a promise on behalf of the property of a vizier of the First Intermediate Period (23rd century B.C.). It was found in the Temple of Koptos and is now Cairo Museum 41984. Published by R. Weill, Les decrets royaux de l'ancien empire egyptien (Paris, 1912), 59-67, PIs. iv, ix, and by Sethe, op. cit., 304-06.

As to all people of this entire land who may do an injurious or evil thing to any statues, offering-stones, chapels, woodwork or monuments of thine which are in any temple precincts or any temples, my majesty does not permit that their property or that of their fathers remain with them, that they join the spirits in the necropolis, or that they remain among the living [upon earth].

g

In royal decrees the pharaoh might set mundane legal penalties against acts which could be established by evidence. However, where the evidence might be obscure, he could invoke divine vengeance. The following text is from a decree of Seti I (about 1318-1301 B.C.) at Nauri near the Third Cataract in the Sudan, and is on behalf of a temple of Osiris at Abydos. It was published by F. J.J. Griffith in JEA, XX (1927), 193-206, and translated by W. F. Edgerton in JNES, VI (1947), 219-30. This extract is from lines 109-19.

[As to any people] who are in the entire land, to whom shall come anybody of the House-of-Men-maat-Re-HeartVContent-in-Abydos® to say: [A certain agent] wronged [me], (for) he took my ox,... he took

1 For this attitude to the gods cf. H. Grapow, Bedrohungen der Götter durch den Verstorbeneren, in ZAS, XLI (1911), 48-54.
2 The "Great God" in these Old Kingdom contexts was probably the sun-god Re, although Osiris may have been meant (cf. Gardiner and Sethe, op. cit., 11-12).
3 The lector priest was learned in magic.

* The word here and in similar contexts is written as if "purity," but it is obviously undesirable and, by the principle of invoking opposites for magic prophylaxis, probably means "impurity."
5 Or "abominations." The two words are written identically.
6 The name of the temple protected by this decree.
my goat”—or anything which may be taken from people, or (to say): "A certain agent took my man by (unlawful) seizure"—and they do not fly at his word to have his opponent brought quickly, in order to judge him—Osiris, the Foremost of the Westerners, the owner of the people and the owner of the property, shall be after him, after his wife, and after his children, to wipe out his name, to destroy his soul, and to prevent his corpse from resting in the necropolis.

But as to any [magistrate] who is in any city, to [whom] shall come anybody of the House-of-Men-maat-Re-Heart’s-Ease-in-Abydos in order to make complaint to him—and he shall be deaf to him, in order not to let at his word to do his business quickly—the law shall be carried out against him by beating him with one hundred blows, he being removed from his office and made a peasant-farmer in [the House-of]-Men-maat-Re-Heart’s-Ease-in-Abydos.

By a nice application of magic, divine vengeance might be apportioned to a triad of gods. This text, from a temple of Seti I at Wadi Abbud east of Redesiyeh on the Nile, was last published by C. E. Sander-Hansen, Historische Inschriften der 9. Dynastie (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, iv, Brussels, 1933). 29; was translated by Breasted, AR, in, §94, and by B. Gunn and A. H. Gardiner in JEA, iv (1917), 248.

As to anyone who shall be deaf to this decree, Osiris shall be after him, Isis after his wife, and Horas after his children, and the great ones, the lords of the Holy Land, will make their reckoning with him.

Magical Protection for a Child

A brief extract will serve as an example of protective magic, in this case the mother protecting her sleeping child at night.

Berlin Papyrus 3027, perhaps from the 16th century B.C., was published by A. Erman, Zaubersprüche für Mutter und Kind (APAW, 1901). The following extract, recto i 9-II 6, is also in K. Sethe, Aegyptische Lesestücke (2nd ed., Leipzig, 1928), 51-52. There is a translation in G. Roeder, Urkunden zur Religion des alten Agypten (Jena, 1923), 116-19.

ANOTHER (CHARM). Mayest thou flow away, he who comes in the darkness and enters in furtively, with his nose behind him, and his face reversed, failing in that for which he came!

Mayest thou flow away, she who comes in the darkness and enters in furtively, with her nose behind her, and her face turned backwards, failing in that for which she came!

Hast thou come to kiss this child? I will not let thee kiss him! Hast thou come to silence (him)? I will not let thee set silence over him! Hast thou come to injure him? I will not let thee injure him! Hast thou come to take him away? I will not let thee take him away from me!

I have made his magical protection against thee out of clover—that is what sets an obstacle—out of onions—what injures thee—out of honey—sweet for men, (but) bitter for those who are yonder—out of the roe of the abduj-fish, out of the jawbone of the /wrrrt-fish, and out of the backbone of the perch.

The Exorcism of Asiatic Princes

In the Middle Kingdom period the Egyptians practiced the magical cursing of their actual or potential enemies. In the Berlin Museum are fragments of pottery bowls which had been inscribed with the names of such foes and then smashed. In the Cairo and Brussels Museums inscribed figurines carry the same kind of curse. As they smashed such pottery, so they thought to break the power of their enemies. The exercised elements were Nubians, Asiatics, Libyans, hostile Egyptians, and evil forces. The translation below, from the Berlin material, gives some Asiatics, some Egyptians, and the forces.

The Berlin fragments were purchased in Thebes; the Cairo and Brussels fragments came from Sakkarah. The period was the latter part of the Twelfth Dynasty or the Thirteenth Dynasty (19th-18th centuries B.C.). 3 The Berlin material was published by K. Sethe, Die Aechtung feindlicher Fürsten, Völker und Dinge . . . (APAW, 1926). The numbering below is that of Sethe. The figurines were published by G. Posener, Princes et pays d’Asie et de Nubie . . . (Brussels, 1940), with added remarks by B. van de Walle. Many of the identifications are still sub judice, with an extensive literature of comment and identification. We follow here S. H. Horn, The Relations between Egypt and Asia during the Egyptian Middle Kingdom (unpublished Ph.D. thesis, Chicago, 1931), which takes account of the discussion up to 1931.

Asiatics

(e 1) The Ruler of Iy-’anaq, 4 Erum, and all the retainers 5 who are with him; the Ruler of Iy-’anaq, Abi-yamimu, and all the retainers who are with him; the Ruler of Iy-’anaq, Akirum, and all the retainers who are with him;

5 This may be either soothing the child, just as the spirit desired to kiss the child and thus gain its affection, or imposing the silence of death.

6 Some of the magic packet, which kept the spirits away, had known efficacy, here specifically stated.

2 Posener, op. ext., 31-35, believes that the figurines cannot be earlier than Sen-User III (about 1880-1840 B.C.), but may be later, and that the bowls may be slightly older. W. F. Albright, in JNES, lx (1940), 492, n.44, states that the Berlin texts "cannot be earlier than Senusret [+]Sen-User] III and are more probably to be placed in the Second Intermediate Period." W. F. Albright, in BASOR, 88 (1942), 32, places the figurines in the middle-19th century B.C.

3 Of the geographic names are unknown, and identifications for most of the others must be tentative. The present name has been related to the ‘Anqin "giants" who were in the land of Canaan at the time of the Conquest: e.g. Deut. 2:10.

4 Taken as the Egyptian word for "trusted men." Perhaps the same word as the "hami" of Gen. 14:14; see the comments by T. O. Lambdin in JQOS, lxiii (1955), 150.
Egyptian Rituals

The Ruler of Shutu, Ayayubam, and all the retainers who are with him; the Ruler of Shutu, Kushar, and all the retainers who are with him; the Ruler of Shutu, Zabalunu, and all the retainers who are with him; . . .

(23) the Ruler of Asqanu/ Khalu-kim, and all the retainers who are with him; . . .

(27) the Ruler of Jerusalem, Yaqr-Amamu, and all the retainers who are with him; the Ruler of Jerusalem, Setj-Aim, and all the retainers who are with him; . . .

(31) all the rulers of losip and all the retainers who are with them;

(i) all the Asians—of Byblos, of Ullaza, of Iy-anaq, of Shutu, of lymu-aru, of Quehermu, of Rehob, of Yarimuta,” of Inhia, of Aghi, of “Arqata, of Yarimuta, of /b8/x, of Asqanu, of Demnitu, of Mut-ilu, of Jerusalem of Ahjimut, of Lahenu, and of Iysipi;

(g 1) their strong men, their swift runners, their allies, their associates, and the Mentu in Asia;

(hi) who may rebel, who may plot, who may fight, who may talk of fighting, or who may talk of rebelling—in this entire land.

Egyptians

(i) All men, all people, all folk, all males, all eunuchs all women, and all officials,

(n 1) who may rebel, who may plot, who may fight, who may talk of fighting, or who may talk of rebelling, and every rebel who talks of rebelling—in this entire land.

(01) Ameni shall die, the tutor of Sit-Bastet, the chancellor of Sit-Hat-Hor, (daughter of) Nefru.

Sen-Usert the younger, called Ketu, shall die, the tutor of Sit-Ipi, (daughter of) Sit-Hat-Hor, and tutor of Sit-Ipi, (daughter of) Sit-Ameni, the chancellor of li-menet, (daughter of) Sit-Hat-Hor....

(8) Amen, born to Hetep and son of Sen-Usert, shall die.

Baneful Forces

(p 1) Every evil word, every evil speech, every evil slander, every evil thought, every evil plot, every evil fight, every evil quarrel, every evil plan, every evil thing, all evil dreams, and all evil slumber.

Religious Drama in Egypt

Much of Egyptian religious ceremonial was carried on in dramatic form. Priests and other initiated persons assumed roles and recited parts in a drama appropriate to a religious purpose. For the most part, such a use of the ceremonial texts is not stated; only occasionally is our evidence more explicit. The following Twelfth Dynasty text records the satisfaction of an official at his opportunity to take part in a passion play of Osiris at Abydos.

The stela of li-kher-nofret was found at Abydos and is now 1204 in the Berlin Museum. It was published by H. Schäfer, Die Mysterien des Osiris in Abydos unter König Sesostris III (H. Schäfer, Leipzig, 1904), and the text appears in K. Sethe, Ägyptische Liturgien (2nd ed., Leipzig, 1928), 70-71. Translated by Breasted, AK, I, §666-170.

For a text to present religious drama in an Egyptian temple, see pp. 4-6 above.

For other texts used for magical purposes see pp. 6-7, 12-14, and 29-31 above. For further references to magic, see p. 215, n. 8; p. 215, n. 15-16; p. 442, n. 18.

Live the Horus: Divine of Form; the Two Goddesses: Divine of Birth; the Horus of Gold: Who Comes into Being; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Kha-kau-Re; the Son of Re: Sen-Usert, given life like Re forever. Royal decree to the Hereditary Prince and Count, Seal-Bearer of the King of Lower Egypt, Sole Companion, Overseer of the Two Houses of Gold, Overseer of the Two Houses of Silver, and Chief Treasurer, li-kher-nofret, the possessor of reverence:

"My majesty has commanded that thou be sent upstream to Abydos of the Thinite nome, to make monuments for my father Osiris, the Foremost of the Westerners, and to embellish his mysterious image with the fine gold which he caused my majesty to bring out of the land of Nubia in victory and in triumph. Now thou shalt do this in (5) the truest way to do a thing, . . . inasmuch as it is the case that thou hast had recourse to the teaching of my majesty—for thou didst really grow up as my majesty's ward, the sole pupil of my palace, and I made thee a courtier when thou wert a youth of twenty-six years. . . . Go thou, and return when thou hast acted according to all that my majesty has commanded."

(10) I acted according to all that his majesty commanded in accomplishing what my lord had commanded for his father Osiris, the Foremost of the Westerners, the Lord of Abydos, the great power residing in the Thinite nome.

I acted as the "Son-Whom-He-Loves" for Osiris, the Foremost of the Westerners. I adorned his great barque of eternity and everlastingness. I made for him a portable shrine which would carry the beauty of the Foremost of the Westerners, of gold, silver, lapis lazuli, carob-vfooA, and meru-vrood. The gods who attended him were fashioned, and their shrines were made anew. I laid [a charge upon] the hour-priests of the temple to do their duties, and they were made to know the regulations for every day and the feasts of the beginnings of the seasons. I conducted the work on the neshmet-bzTque and I fashioned the cabin. (15) I decked the breast of the Lord of Abydos with lapis lazuli and turquoise, fine gold, and all costly stones which are the ornaments of a god’s body. I clothed the god with his regalia in my office of privy councilor and my duty of ritualist. I was pure of hand in decking the god, a sem-priest purified of fingers.

1 For example, in the two documents studied by K. Sethe, Dramatische Texte zu altägyptischen Mysterienspielen (Untersuch., x, Leipzig, 1928); cf. pp. 4-5 above.

2 Sen-Usert III (about 1880-1840 B.C.).

3 The pious son who performs funerary rites for his father—here the role of Horus for his father Osiris.

I celebrated the Procession of Up-wawet, when he went forth to champion his father. I opposed those rebellious to the »«A/wrt-barque, and I overthrew the enemies of Osiris. I celebrated the Great Procession, following the god in his footsteps. I caused the god’s boat to sail, while Thoth guided the journey.® I outfitted with a cabin the barque (named) "Appearing in Truth, the Lord of Abydos." (20) His beautiful regalia was fixed, when he proceeded to the domain of Peqer/ I cleared the ways of the god to his tomb which is in Peqer. I championed Wen-nofer® on that day of the Great Fight, and I overthrew all his enemies on the flats of Nedit." I caused him to proceed into the «/wrt-barque,® and it carried his beauty. I made the eastern deserts glad; I [caused rejoicing in the western deserts, when they saw the beauty of the neshmethbanque, as it landed at Abydos and brought [Osiris, the Foremost of the Westerners, the Lord] of Abydos, to his palace. I accompanied the god into his house. When his purification had taken place and his place had been widened, I loosened the knot within the . . . . [and he came to rest among] his [retinue] and among his court.

® A priestly actor playing the role of the god Thoth, Perhaps this was Ii-kher-nofret himself, as it is possible to translate: "a Thoth in guiding the journey."

® The part of Abydos in which the Egyptians located the tomb of Osiris, probably the area in which the tombs of the kings of the first two dynasties lay.

® Osiris.

® In Egyptian mythology, Seth slew Osiris on the "shore of Nedit." Here it is the scene of a drama in which Osiris repulses attack.

®® Perhaps a separate boat from the neshmet. cf. J. A. Wilson in JNES, in (1944), 206-07.
Akkadian Rituals

TRANSLATOR: A. SACHS

Temple Program for the New Year's Festivals at Babylon

Copies, transcriptions, and translations: F. Thureau-Dangin, \textit{Rituels accadiens} (Paris, 1921), 127-154; translation only: E. Ebeling, \textit{AOT}, 295-303. Two duplicate texts are involved, one in Paris and the other in London, both tablets dating to the Seleucid period. The program described may go back to a much earlier time.

On the second day of the month Nisannu, two hours of the night (remaining?), the \textit{urigallu}-priest shall arise and wash with river water. He shall enter into the presence of the god Bel, and he shall... a linen \textit{gadalu} in front of Bel. He shall recite the following prayer.

O Bel, who has no equal when angry,
O Bel, excellent king, lord of the countries,
O Bel, who fells the mighty with his glance,
O Bel, your dwelling is the city of Babylon, your lord of the countries, light of mankind, who divides the portions—
O Bel, your dwelling is the city of Babylon, your tiara is the (neighboring) city of Borsippa, (15)
Broader heaven is the "totality of your liver."
O Bel, with your eyes you see all things,
[With] your oracles you verify the oracles,
[With] your glance you hand down the law.
[With] your ... you ... the mighty;
When you look (at them), you grant them mercy;
You show them the light, (and) they speak of your valor.
(25)
Lord of the countries, light of the Igigi deities (who) bless—
Who (does not speak) of you, does not speak of your valor?
Who does not speak of your glory, does not glorify your sovereignty?
Lord of the countries, who dwells in the temple Eudul, who grasps the hand of the fallen,
Grant mercy to your city, Babylon!
(30)
Turn your face to the temple Esagil, your house!
Establish the "liberty" of the people of Babylon, your subordinates.

(Colophon:) Twenty-one lines (of writing): secrets of the temple Esagil. [Whoever reverses the god Bel (35) shall show (them) to nobody except the \textit{urigallu}-priest of the temple Eku.a
[After] he speaks the recitation, he shall [open the gate]. The \textit{eribbiti}-priests [shall arise] and perform their rites, in the traditional manner, [before] the deities Bel and Beltiya. (40) [The ^<e/>-priests and the] singers (shall do) likewise.

(eight lines missing or hopelessly broken)
... he shall place ... ; a seal. ... (50) in the tiara of the god Anu ... of the second day, upon ... he shall place... before them. Three times he shall speak

The evil enemies ... (55) who in their strength ... this which in ... of the exorcism... because the enemy and the bandit ... the great lord, Marduk ... (60) has uttered a curse that cannot be altered... who ... the god Bel, my lord; who ... the lord of the countries, who ... the city of Babylon. (65) In the middle of the earth ... who ... the temple Eudul, the purification of ... like heaven and earth ... (70) who extracts ... the temples of ... the forgetting of their rites ... who overwhelms ... the people dwelling in ... (75) the maidservants ... of the city Babylon ... who ... the temple Eudul, he bound (all) of you... (all) of you dwell (about 75 lines missing)

(157) On the [third] day of the month Nisannu, [at ... o'clock, the \textit{urigallu-priest} shall arise [and] wash with [ (...He shall speak the following) prayer to the god Bel.]
(about 25 lines missing or hopeless)
... He shall open the doors. [All the \textit{eribbiti-priests] (185) shall enter and perform [their rites in the traditional manner. The ^<e/>-priests and the singers shall do likewise.]
(two lines missing)

(190) When it is three hours after sunrise, [he shall call] a metalworker and give him precious stones and gold [from] the treasury of the god Marduk to make two images for (the ceremonies of) the sixth day (of Nisannu). He shall call a woodworker and give him (some) cedar and tamarisk (pieces). (195) He shall call a goldsmith and give him (some) gold. From the third day (of the month Nisannu) to the sixth day, (pieces of meat) from (the slaughtered sheep offered) before the god Bel (are to be distributed as follows:) the tail to the metalworker, the breast to the goldsmith, the thigh to the woodworker, the rib(s) to the weaver. These (pieces of meat) from (the slaughtered sheep offered) before the god Bel shall be delivered to the \textit{urigallu-priest} (200) for the artisans.

Those two images (which the artisans are to make) shall be 7 finger(-widths) high. One (shall be made) of cedar, one of tamarisk. \textit{Four duiu}-stones shall be mounted in settings of gold weighing \textit{four} shekels. (205) [One image] shall hold in its left hand a snake (made) of cedar, raising its right [hand] to the god Nabu. The second (image) shall hold in its [left hand] a scorpion, raising its right hand [to the god] Nabu. They shall be clothed in red garments, [bou]nd in the middle [with] a palm [br]anch. (210) Until the sixth day (of the month Nisannu), [they shall be placed] in the house of the god Madan. Food (from) the tray of the god Madan shall be presented to them. On the sixth day (of the month), when the god Nabu reaches the temple Ehursagtiila, the slaughterer . . . shall strike off their heads. Then, a fire having been started (215) in the presence of the god Nabu, they shall be thrown into it.

On the fourth day of the month Nisannu, three and one-third hours of the night (remaining?), the urigallu-priest shall arise and wash with river water. A linen gadalu he shall . . . in front of the god Bel and the goddess Beltiya. (220) He shall recite the following prayer, while lifting his hand, to the god Bel.

Powerful master of the Igigi gods, exalted among the great gods,
Lord of the world, king of the gods, divine Marduk, who establishes the plan, (225)
Important, elevated, exalted, superior,
Who holds kingship, grasps lordship,
Bright light, god Marduk, who dwells in the temple Eudul,
. . . who sweeps the enemy’s land,
. . . (three lines missing) . . .
Who . . . s heaven, heaps up the earth, (240)
Who measures the waters of the sea, cultivates the fields,
Who dwells in the temple Eudul; lord of Babylon,
exalted Marduk,
Who decrees the fates of all the gods,
Who turns over the pure scepter to the king who reveres him—
I am the urigallu-priest of the temple Ekua, who blesses you. (245)
To your city, Babylon, grant release!
To Esaggil, your temple, grant mercy!
At your exalted command, O lord of the great gods,
Let light be set before the people of Babylon.

(250) He shall (then) withdraw from the presence of the god Bel and recite the following prayer to the goddess Beltiya.

Powerful, goddess, (most) exalted of the female divinities, Sarpanitu, who shines brilliantly (among) the stars, who dwells in the temple Eudul,
. . . of the goddesses, whose garment is (bright) light,
Who . . . s heaven, heaps up the earth,
Sarpanitu, whose position is exalted, (255)
Bright, Beltiya, sublime and elevated—
There is none like her among the female divinities—
Who brings complaints, who defends,
Who impoverishes the rich, who causes the poor to become wealthy,

Who fells the enemy who does not fear her divinity,
Who releases the prisoner, grasps the hand of the fallen—
Bless the slave who blesses you!
Decree the destiny for the king who reveres you!
Grant life to the people of Babylon, who are your subordinates,
Defend them in the presence of Marduk, king of the gods! (265)
May (the people) speak your praise, magnify your lordship,
Speak of your heroism, exalt your name.
Grant mercy to the servant who blesses you,
Take his hand (when he is) in great difficulty and need!
Present him with life when he is sick and in pain, (270)
(So that) he may constantly walk in happiness and . . .
Speaking of your heroism to all people.

He shall (then) go out to the Exalted Courtyard, turn to the north (275) and bless the temple Esagil three times with the blessing: “Iku-star, Esagil, image of heaven and earth.” He shall (then) open the doors. All the eribbiti-priests shall enter and perform their rites in the traditional manner. The */-.priests and the singers (shall do) likewise.

When this is done, (280) [and after] the second meal of the late afternoon, the urigallu-priest of the temple Ekua shall recite (while lifting his hand?) to the god Bel the (composition entitled) Enuma eliL While he recites Enuma eliL to the god Bel, the front of the tiara of the god Anu and the resting place of the god Enil shall be covered.

(285) On the fifth day of the month Nisannu, four hours of the night (remaining?), the urigallu-priest shall arise and wash with water from the Tigris and Euphrates. [He shall enter into the presence of the god Bel, and] he shall . . . a linen gadalu in front of the god Bel and the goddess Beltiya. He shall recite the following prayer [to Bel].

My Lord, is he not my lord?
My Lord, is not his name My Lord? (290)
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, king of the countries,
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, . . .,
Is it not My Lord who gives, My Lord who . . . ?
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, . . .,
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, . . ., (295)
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, who dwells in the temple Eudul,
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, . . .,
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, who gives,
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, who dwells in the temple,
My Lord, . . ., My Lord, he is my lord. (300)
God of heaven and earth, who decrees the fates—My Lord, be calm!
The star Musirkeshda, who carries the (royal) scepter and circle, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
The Eridu star, the possessor of wisdom, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
Asari, who grants the gift of cultivation, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
Planet Jupiter, who carries the royal scepter—My Lord, be calm!
Planet Mercury, who causes it to rain, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
Planet Saturn, star of justice and righteousness, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
Planet Mars, fierce flame, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
The star Shupa, lord of the Enlil gods, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
The star Nenegar, who was self-created, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
The star Sirius, who measures the waters of the sea, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
The star Numushda, who causes the rains to continue, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!
The .Sft«g-of-the-Scorpion star, who ... the breast of Moon, who brings the darkness, My Lord—My Lord, be calm!

To the goddess he shall recite the following prayer.

My merciful Lady—My Lady, be calm!
My Lady, who does not become angry, who is calm, My Lady, who gives, My Lady, who is so very good, (320)
My Lady, ..., My Lady, who is so very good,
The calm lady, who does not become angry, My Lady, who confers gifts, (325)
My Lady, (who receives) prayer, My Lady, who confers gifts,
Damkianna, mistress of heaven and earth, whose name is My Lady,
Planet Venus, who shines brilliantly (among) the stars, whose name is My Lady, (325)
The star Ban, who fells the mighty, whose name is My Lady,
The star Uz, who views heaven, whose name is My Lady,
The star Hegala, the star of abundance, whose name is My Lady,
The star Baltesha, the star of sensuousness, whose name is My Lady,
The star Margidda, the bond of heaven, whose name is My Lady, (330)
The star Eru, who creates sperm, whose name is My Lady,
The star Ninmah, who makes a gift of life, whose name is My Lady,
My Lady, her name is My Lady. Is not her name My Lady?

After the recitation has been recited, he shall open the doors. (335) All the eribbiti-priests shall (then) enter and perform their rites in the traditional manner. The ^s-priests and the singers (shall do) likewise.

When it is two hours after sunrise, after the trays of the god Bel and the goddess Beltiya have been set, he shall call (340) a malmalu-prist to purify the temple and sprinkle water, (taken from) a cistern of the Tigris and a cistern of the Euphrates, on the temple. He shall beat the kettle-drum inside the temple. He shall have a censer and a torch brought into the temple. He shall smear all the doors of the sanctuary with cedar resin. In the court of the sanctuary, he shall place a silver censer, upon which he shall mix aromatic ingredients and cypress. He shall call a slaughterer to decapitate a ram, the body of which the malmalu-prist shall use in performing the kuppuru-ritual for the temple. (350) He shall recite the incantations for exorcising the temple. He shall purify the whole sanctuary, including its environs, and shall remove the censer. The masmalu-priest shall lift up the body of the afore-mentioned ram and proceed to the river. Facing west, he shall throw the body of the ram into the river. (360) He shall (then) go out into the open country. The slaughterer shall do the same thing with the ram's head. The malmalu-pivsz. and the slaughterer shall go out into the open country. As long as the god Nabu is in Babylon, they shall not enter Babylon, but stay in the open country from the fifth to the twelfth day (of the month Nisannu). The urigallu-pncsx. of the temple Ekua shall not view the purification of the temple. (365) If he does view (it), he is no (longer) pure. After the purification of the temple, when it is three and one-third hours after sunrise, the urigallu-pntsxx. of the temple Ekua shall go out and call all the artisans. They shall bring forth the Golden Heaven from the treasury of the god Marduk (370) and (use it to?) cover the temple Ezida, the sanctuary of the god Nabu, from (its) ... to the foundation of the temple. The urigallu-priest and the artisans shall recite the following loud recital.

They purify the temple,
The god Marduk from Eridu, who dwells in the temple Eudul, (375)
The god Kusug..., The deity Ningirim, who listens to prayers,
Ritual to be Followed by the ^/-Priest when Covering the Temple Kettle-Drum

This ritual is known from four texts, designated below as A, B, C, and D; all four texts are transcribed and translated by F. Thureau-Dangin, Rituels accadiens (Paris, 1921), 10 ff. Text A, now in the Louvre, was copied in the Seleucid period in the city of Uruk; a copy of the text was published by E. Ebeling, AOT, 303 ff. Text B, now in Berlin, was excavated at Ashur, where it had been copied from older Babylonian texts in the seventh century B.C.; a copy of the text was published by E. Ebeling, KAR, 1, No. 60. Text C consists of two duplicate texts, in Berlin and London, the former excavated at Ashur and the latter at Nineveh, both having been copied in the seventh century B.C. from older tablets which came from Babylonia; one was published by E. Ebeling, KAR, 1, No. 50, the other by H. Zimmern, Beiträge zur Kenntnis der bab. Rel., Ritualtafeln No. 56. Text D, from Nineveh, was published in Vol. iv of Rawlinson, No. 1 of Plate 23; it is a copy of an older text which came from Babylonia.

TEXT A

(i) When you [are confronted with the task of] covering (that is, replacing the head of) the kettle-drum (used in the temple, proceed as follows). An expert shall inspect—from head to tip of tail—a sound black bull whose horns and hooves are whole. If its body is black as pitch, it shall be taken for the ceremony. (5) If it is spotted by (as many as?) seven white tufts (which look like) stars, or if it has (ever?) been struck with a staff or touched by a goad, it shall not be taken for the ceremony.

When you have the bull led into the /ass/ass-house, on an auspicious day you shall stand at its side, sweep the ground, sprinkle pure water, (and) ... the mummu-house. You shall lay two bricks, (one) at the right, (the other) at the left of the doorway of the mummu-house. (10) You shall scatter flour for the god(s) of heaven, the god(s) of heaven and earth, and the great gods. You shall make a libation of prime beer. You shall (then) have the bull led into the /ass/ass-house. You shall lay down a reed mat. You shall scatter sand beneath the reed mat, and you shall surround the reed mat with sand. You shall set the bull on the reed mat, tying his legs with a bond made of goat’s hair. (15) Opposite the bull, you shall place beer (made of) ... , in a bronze drum. You shall set up [two] egubbu-vessels for the deities Kusug and Nimirgir. You shall set up [two] stands; on each you shall place seven loaves of barley bread, seven loaves of emmer bread, a paste of honey and cream, dates, and /isasqu-Qow’i/. You shall set up (vessels containing?) [beer, wine,] and milk. You shall set up an adagurru-vessel. (Of lines 20-36 only the following ends of lines are preserved:) .. cypess... you shall set up a drinking cup ... one-third of a pound of white wool ... seven and one-half (pounds?) of goat’s hair you shall put down ... beer (made of) ... tamarisk ... reed ... thorn ... you shall lay down an egubbu-vessel ... cedar sap, honey, cream ... you shall lay down; [you shall purify] with a censer and a torch ... thigh ... , and roasted meat you shall offer; you shall make a libation of [prime beer, wine,] and milk ... you shall lay down ... egubbi-vessellX ... you shall lay twelve bricks, (ii) On (the bricks) you shall lay twelve (pieces of) linen. On them you shall seat all twelve gods. You shall lift up the egubbu-vessel of the deity Nimirgir and with its water you shall clean the equipment prepared for the ceremony. You shall sprinkle some (aromatic?) barley seed. You shall set up the kettle-drum. (5) You shall lay a brick for the deity Lumha. You shall set up a stand. You shall slaughter a sheep. You shall offer the thigh, ... , and roasted meat. You shall make a libation of prime beer, wine, and milk. Before these (gods) you shall place water. You shall draw the curtains shut. On the bull you shall perform the rite of Washing the Mouth. You shall whisper through a reed tube into the bull’s right ear the incantation entitled “Gugal gunmah u J(ii)ui kjiga.” (10) You shall whisper through a reed tube into the bull’s left ear the incantation entitled “Alpu illuta Zi attama.” You shall be-sprinkle the bull with cedar resin. You shall purify the bull, using a brazier and a torch. You shall draw a ring of zisurru-Rovir around the bull. Standing at its head, you shall sing (the composition called) “Nitugji niginniC to the accompaniment of a bronze halhallatu. (15) After that, you shall recite (the composition entitled) “Dimmer ... anji muddinma.” Then you shall cut open that bull and start a fire with cedar. You shall burn the bull’s heart with cedar, cypress, and mas$hatu&four before the kettle-drum. You shall remove the tendon of its left shoulder and shall bury the body of that bull (wrapped) in a single red ... cloth. (20) You shall throw some gunnu-oil on it (and) arrange it so that its face points to the west. You shall take the hide of that bull and dip it in fine flour made from clean barley, in water, prime beer, (and) wine. You shall then lay it in the pure fat of a bull and aromatic ingredients, (taken) from the hearts of plants, with four “-measure(s) of ground malt, four “-measures of bitqa-Rour, and one (“-measure?) of ... (25) You shall press (it) with gall-nuts and alum from the land of the Hittites. (With it) you shall cover the bronze kettle-drum. On it you shall stretch a linen cord. Drum-sticks (or pegs?) of musu“annu-wood, ... -wood, cedar, and “-wood, and all the rest of the drum-sticks (of?) /ass/ass-wood for the bronze kettle-drum you shall cover with varnish. (30) With the tendon of (the bull’s) left shoulder you shall... its opening. You shall loosen the (linen) cord, and lay it on a napdu. You shall bury the ... You shall make preparations for a sacrifice to the god Lumha. You shall sacrifice a sheep and shall offer the thigh, the ... , and roasted meat. (35) You shall make a libation of prime beer, wine, and milk. (iii) Anu, Enlii, and Ea, the great gods. The deities Lugaldirra and Meslamattae. The deity Zisummu (or) Ninsig, who is in the city Nippur. (5) The deity Bigirhurs (or) Shuzianna, of the apsu-octzn. The deity Sabarragigimmme (or) Ennugi, who cultivates the fields. The deity Urbadda (or) Kusug, the exalted lord. (10) The deity Urbadgumgum (or) Ninsar, the son of the temple Eshabba. The deity Gubbagarrae (or) Ninkasi, the son of the new city. The deity Abarralah (or) Nusku, born on the thirtieth day (of the month, when the moon is) invisible. (15) On the fifteenth day, you shall cause the bronze kettle-drum to be brought forth to the presence of the god Shamash. You shall prepare five sacrifices for the deities Ea, Shamash, Mardu, Lumha, and the Divine Kettle-Drum. You shall sacrifice a sheep and offer the thigh, the ... , and roasted meat. You shall make a libation of (20) prime beer, wi[ne, and milk]. You shall perform the purifications with brazier and torch and with water from the egubbu-esse. You shall recite three times (the composition entitled) “En[i Utu... zadede.” You shall cause to be performed the rite of the Washing of the Mouth ... on it (that is, the kettle-drum). You shall anoint it with animal fat and filtered oil. The “alamahhu-pnist (25) shall lay ... upon the bronze kettle-drum. You shall (then) remove the (sacrificial) accoutrements (and) shall purify it (that is, the kettle-drum) with brazier and torch. You shall grasp the “hand” of the kettle-drum (and bring it?)
to the presence of the gods, setting it in (aromatic?) barley seed. You shall perform the lamentation (called?) "Lugale dimmer an\i."

(Colophon:) This ritual, which you perform, (only) the properly qualified person (30) shall view. An outsider who has nothing to do with the ritual shall not view (it); if he does, may his remaining days be few! The informed person may show (this tablet) to the informed person. The uninformed shall not see (it)—it is among the forbidden things of Anu, Enlil, and Ea, the great gods, (iv) [Whoever .. ], may his [remaining days] be many!

(Equipment to be assembled:) ... the bronze kettle-drum ... cypress, one-half pound of sweet-smelling reed, (5) ... of roses, ten shekels of aromatic annabu, ... of qa\isihatu,... of\panatyu,... of saudi, two qa-measures of filtered oil, ... two \asit\-measures of wine, (10) ... of bitqa-fLOUR, four \asit\-measures of ground malt,... one-half \asit\-measure of cedar sap,... varnish; ... the wrappings of the drum-stic\s.

... white ...-cloth, one red ...-cloth, (15) ... pounds of wool, seven pounds of ... seven pounds of blue wool,... [goat’s] hair, two \asit\-measures and four pan-measures of barley, one \asit\-measure of (aromatic?) barley seed,... enomer, salt, and cypress, one reed,... utensils (20) of iron... one-half pound of alum from the land of the Hittites, one pound of bright linen cords, each cord ten cubits long; one linen cord, one-hundred cubits long; ten cords of goat’s hair, four cubits long; one cord, with which the bull was bound; one ... ; one cover.

The equipment (to be made by) the potter are: four equbbu-[\isels, four \asit\-\isels, (30) four sahharu-vessels, twenty-four habti-\isels, 320 malittust\isels, 300 bagurru-[\isels, sixty braziers, five sabittu, six aggannu, six nisippu, two sindti, two namharu. The equipment (to be made by) the woodworker: one \asit\-wood; ... cedar, three of \asit\-wood, three of tamarisk—all the rest of the drum-sticks of ma\hu-wood; (25) ten linen cords, each cord ten cubits long; one linen cord, one-hundred cubits long; ten cords of goat’s hair, four cubits long; one cord, with which the bull was bound; one ... ; one cover.

The equipment (to be made by) the woodworker: one \asit\-wood; ... cedar, four iron pegs, wood for the pegs (or drum-sticks?). The equipment for the wickerworker: twenty-four stands, twenty-four baskets, five hand mats, three mats, three covers.

(Colophon:) Ritual of the \asit\-priest. Tablet belonging to Anuhaiddin, the son of Rihatanu, the \asit\-priest of the deities Anu and Antu, citizen of Uruk. It was copied from an old(er) tablet, checked, and rechecked.

TEXT B

(beginning and end of tablet broken)

... water before them ... the \asit\-priest in a bronze drum ... You shall lay down a reed mat, [strewing sand] beneath the mat and (5) surrounding the sides of the reed mat with sand. You shall set the bull upon the reed mat and besprinkle him with water from the egubbu-vessel; you shall wash the bull’s mouth. You shall encircle the bull with a circle made of zisurr\-Rour and lay a brick in front of the bull. You shall sprinkle some cypress on the brazier and make a libation of prime beer. (10) You shall whisper through a reed tube into the bull’s right ear the incantation entitled "Gugal gumah u \iui \uya." You shall whisper through a reed tube into his left ear the incantation entitled "Alpu ilittu Zi attama." You shall place the bull before the god Lumha and ... with cedar sap. (15) Then you shall cut open that bull and (burn) the bull’s heart before the god Lumha with cypress, (cedar, and mashatu-\kour. You shall sprinkle (some cypress upon the brazier) and make a libation of beer. The \asit\-priest shall remove his head, ... he shall bow down and remain at the bull’s head, reciting three times the composition entitled "Mulu na." Furthermore, he shall recite the following words three times: "These acts—it is the totality of the gods who have performed (them); it is not (really) I who performed them." You shall then take away the water and open the curtains. (5) You shall take the above-mentioned hide and dip it in crushed flour made from clean barley, in water, beer and first-class wine. You shall press (it) with fat from a clean bullock, alum from the land of the Hittites, and gall-nuts. (With it) you shall cover the bronze kettle-drum. With the left tendon of the (bull’s) shoulder you shall ... its opening. (10) You shall wrap the drum-sticks with fluffy wool and cover it with varnish; you shall ... In an auspicious month, you shall find a favorable day, and then you shall perform all these acts. The kalamahhu-priest shall not eat any of the flesh of the above-mentioned bull....

TEXT C

(obverse)

Incantation: You are the Exalted Bull, created by the great gods.

You were created for the service of the great gods....

In the heavens your image ... for the rites of divinity.

(5) When the gods Anu, Enlil, Ea, and Ninmah [decreed] the destinies of the great gods,

Your skin (and) your muscles were destined for the secrets of the great gods.

(10) Remain for everlasting days in this secret!

(O great gods), fix the destiny of this image with the gods, his brothers!

As for this god, may his temple be holy and pure!

May the evil tongue remain outside!

(reverse)

The ritual (is as follows). On a good day in the correct month, in the morning, before sunrise, you shall prepare three sacrificial stands for the gods Ea, Shamash, and Marduk. (On the stands,) you shall sprinkle some dates and lasqu-\fLOUR and shall set a mixture of honey and cream. (5) You shall slaughter three white sheep and offer the thighs, the ... , and the roasted meat. You shall put down a brazier filled with cypress and sprinkle some mashatu-flour (on it?). You shall pull the curtains shut. You shall scatter (about?) heaps of flour. You shall place the Exalted Bull in a place forbidden (to the outsider), and then you shall whisper three times into his right ear and his left one. You shall then cut (open?) the Exalted Bull (10) and take his hide and tendon for this work (which you are about to perform).

Incantation:  "Karzaginna  |ar...

(TEXT D)

(beginning of col. i broken)

The deity Gabbagarar (or) Ninkasi, the son of the new city.  (5) The deity Ebarralah (or) Nusku, born on the thirtieth day (of the month, when the moon) is invisible.

(These) seven gods, children of the god Enmesharra, are (represented by) the heaps of flour.

You shall lay the twelve bronze gods in the bronze kettle-drum and then you shall cover (that is, attach the head of) the bronze kettle-drum.

Great Bull, Exalted Bull, who treads upon clean pasture,  (10)
Who walks upon the fields, who holds abundance,
The cultivator of grain, who causes the countryside to be fertile,
My clean hands have made a sacrifice before
you.  (15)

(The above is) the word of the apsii-ocezn which you shall whisper through a reed tube into the right ear of the bull used to cover the bronze kettle-drum.

O Bull, you are the offspring of the deity Zu.
You have been chosen for the rites and ceremonies.
The deity Ningizzida is your friend for eternity.
The great..., guard the (heavenly) plans!
... fix the scheme of heaven and earth!
... be entrusted to the god Lumha!
... be ... to the god Bel.  (25)

(The above is) [the word of the a/v«-ocean which you shall whisper into] the left ear of the bull used to cover the bronze kettle-drum.

He who is lying down, the lord who is lying down,
how long will he remain lying down?
The great Mountain, the father, Mullil, who is lying down, how long (will he remain lying down)  ?  (30)
The Shepherd who decrees the destinies, who is lying down, how long?

(ii) ...

The god Mullil, who has given his city away—together (the foe) devoured it.

The person who had good clothing perished of cold,
He who owned vast fields perished of hunger.

The above composition is for the occasion when the twelve bronze gods are laid in the bronze kettle-drum.

Faithful Shepherd, faithful Shepherd,
God Enlil, faithful Shepherd,
Master of all countries, [faithful] Shepherd,
Lord of all the Icgi deities, faithful Shepherd,
Lord of the . . . , faithful Shepherd,
The lord who drew the outline of his land, who . . .
his land,
The lord who drew the outline of his land,...,
You gave the accumulated possessions [to the enemy],
[You gave] the stored treasure [to the enemy].
[The enemy dwelt] in a clean house,
The enemy dwelt in a clean place,
[The stranger lay] in a clean bedroom.

(iii)
(So) beautiful a city—[how could you turn it over to the enemy] ?
May lord Ea, the king [of the apsu-octan, calm you]!
May lord Marduk [pacify your liver]!  (5)
May the lordly father Adad [calm you]!
May the lordly hero Shamash [pacify your liver]!  (10)
May lord Ninurta [calm you]!
May excalted lord Shulpae [calm you]!
Point my hands in the straight direction, [point my hands in the straight direction]!
Point my hands in the straight direction, [point]
my hands [in the straight direction]!
Make these words be right, [make] these words
[be right]!  (20)
As for the kettle-drum, [make] its word be right.

(The above is) the incantation (to recite) [when performing] the rite of the Mouth Washing of the bronze kettle-drum.

Before the god Lumha and the bronze kettle-drum, you (25) shall set up a stand and prepare it (for the ceremony). You shall sprinkle some iasquSour (on?) a paste of honey and cream and some dates. You shall [sacrifice] a sheep and [make an offeringl of the thigh, the . . . , and roasted meat....

(iv)
(The above—broken away in the text—is) the in-cantation (to recite) when placing water (on the stand) and when drawing the curtains shut. [Having placed the water (on the stand)], you shall draw the curtains shut.

Wash [your hands], wash your hands,
You are the god Enlil, wash [your hands],
You are Enlil,..., You are ..., (10) you are ... wash [your hands]!
... the earth..., (15) May all [the gods] rejoice in you!

[O god Marduk], for your king speak (the words):
"You are released." (20)
O god Adad, for your king speak (the words): "You are released."

(The above is) the incantation (to recite) when removing the water. Having removed the water, you shall open the curtains.

(25) (The next tablet of this series begins with the words:) When you have had the bull led into the m¹/m«-house.

(Colophon:) Ritual for the ^/«-priesthood, copied from an older tablet and checked.

Temple Ritual for the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Days of an Unknown Month at Uruk

(obverse)

... upon ... he shall pay his respects to the Scepter, just as ... The Scepter and the Shoe shall "arise," and then the gods and goddesses shall, exactly as before, proceed before him and behind him. They shall descend to the Exalted Court and shall turn toward the god Anu. The masmasu-pnst shall purify the Scepter; the Scepter shall enter and be seated. The deities Papsukkal, Nusku, (5) and Sha(P) shall be seated in the court of the god Anu. Furthermore, the Shoe, the divine Daughters of Anu, and the divine Daughters of Uruk shall return, and the Shoe shall enter the Enir, the house of the golden bed of the goddess Antu, and shall be placed upon a stool. The divine Daughters of Anu and the divine Daughters of Uruk shall be seated in the court of the goddess Antu. (The priest) shall mix wine and good oil, and shall make a libation at the gate of the sanctuary of Anu, Antu, and all the gods. (10) He shall smear (some of it) on the door-sockets of the gate of the sanctuary (and on) the doors and gates. He shall fill the golden censers, and then he shall sacrifice a bull and a ram to Anu, Antu, and all the gods. He shall serve the evening meal to Anu, Antu, and all the gods without interruption. He shall spend the night (there?). The door shall not be shut. He shall offer the meal to all the deities dwelling in the court.

In the first watch of the night, on the roof of the totemp stage of the temple-tower of the (15) Resh temple, when the star Great Anu of Heaven rises and the star Great Antu of Heaven rises in the constellation Waggon, (he shall recite the compositions beginning?) "Ana tamit' zimu bunne |a| ab lamami Anu larru" and "Ittasa falam band." You shall prepare a golden tray for the deities Anu and Antu of heaven. You shall present water (for washing) hands to the deities Anu and Antu of heaven, and then you shall set the tray, serving bull meat, ram meat, and fowl. You shall also serve prime beer (20) together with "pressed" wine. You shall heap up all (types of) garden produce. You shall sprinkle some cedar resin and mashatu-fleur upon a golden censer, and then you shall make a libation of "pressed" wine from a golden libation vessel. Upon seven large golden trays, you shall present water (for washing) hands to the planets Jupiter, Venus, Mercury, Saturn, Mars, the moon, and the sun, as soon as they appear. Then you shall set the tray (25) and serve bull meat, ram meat, and fowl. You shall also serve prime beer together with "pressed" wine. You shall heap up all (types of) garden produce. You shall sprinkle cedar resin and mashatu-fleur upon seven golden censers, and then you shall make a libation of "pressed" wine from a golden libation vessel. The mahhu-priest, wearing a sash, shall use a naphtha fire to light a large torch, in which spices have been inserted, which has been sprinkled with oil, and upon which the rite of "Washing of the Mouth" has been performed. (30) He shall then face the tray, raise his hand to the deity Great Anu of Heaven, and recite (the composition beginning?) "Ku|ab Anu etellu Jamami." You shall (then) clear the large tray, and you shall present water (for washing) hands. The chief eribbiti-priest shall take the "hand" of the torch among the /«/«/«-priests, the ^/«^-priests, and the singers (on leaving) the temple-tower, and then, (by) the Holy Gate which is behind the sanctuary, he shall enter the Exalted Court, and, at the side of the Kizalagga, he shall turn toward the deity Anu. In his presence, (reverse) a hard-pot shall be broken. He shall speak a recitation. The chief eribbiti-priest shall then take the "hand" of the torch of the deities Papsukkal, Nusku, Sha(?), and Pisanguunuq, and they shall proceed to the sanctuary of the goddess Antu. He shall turn toward Antu. In her presence a hard-pot shall be broken. The deities Papsukkal, (5) Nusku, Sha (?) and Pisanguunuq, with the torch, shall go forth toward the Ubshukkinakkru. Near the Sanctuary of Destinies, a bull shall be sacrificed in their presence. The torch shall (be used to) start a fire in the Ubshukkinakkru. The thigh of the bull, together with its skin, shall be removed and shall then be seared at the right and left of the fire. The deities Papsukkal, Nusku, Sha(?) and Pisanguunuq, with the torch, shall go forth from the Ubshukkinakkru, by the High Gate, (10) into the street. Then, with Pisanguunuq at the head, Papsukkal,
Ritual for the Repair of a Temple

Two of the texts (A and B) come from Uruk and were written in the Seleucid period, the third (C) was excavated at Babylon and is probably only a century or two older. All of these texts are probably copies of older ones. The latest copies of A and B are by F. Thureau-Dangin, _TCL_, vi, Nos. 45 and 46; text C was published by F. H. Weissbach, _Babylonische Miscellen_, No. 12. For transcriptions and translations of all three texts, see F. Thureau-Dangin, _Rituels accadiens_ (Paris, 1921), 34 ff.

TEXT A

(oververse)

When the wall of the temple of the god Anu falls into ruin—[for the purpose of demolishing and found-

Nusku, and Sha (?) shall proceed, circling the temple. They shall then return, Papsukkal by the High Gate, Nusku by the (ordinary?) gate, and Sha (?) by the Main Gate. The eribbti-priest shall use the torch to start a fire in their presence, and they shall be seated until daybreak. The priests of the temples of Uruk—and similarly the eribbti-pnsts of all the temples—shall use the torch to start fires and shall carry (the fires) to their temples. Then they shall perform the ceremony of lalam biti. They shall light fires at the gates of their temples and shall recite (the compositions entitled) "Anu uftapa. ina naphar matati" and "Ittasa salam banu." The torch and the deity Pisangunuqu shall return, entering the court of Anu, turning toward the goddess Antu. The main meal of the morning shall be offered. The main meal of the morning shall be offered. The main meal of the morning shall be offered.

On the seventeenth day (of the month), forty minutes after sunrise, the gate shall be opened before die deities Anu and Antu, bringing an end to the(ri) overnight stay. The main meal of the morning shall be offered to Anu, Antu, and all the gods. (30) When the main meal (meal) is over, the second meal shall be offered. The (priest) shall fill the golden censers and then shall sacrifice a bull and a ram. The singers shall [sing] (the hymn entitled) "Elum gud sarna" (The priest) shall then fill the censers and shall sacrifice a bull and a ram. [He shall grasp?] the hands of the deities Adad, Sin, Shamash, and Beletile through the linen curtain.…. away in a lahansahar-tussi. And (then) you shall leave it (that is, the vessel) at the enemy's border. He (that is, the king) shall go straight back to his palace. You shall offer a major sacrifice to the god Anu. You shall make a lamentation. After that, you shall make lamentations and special poems of appeasement on the Royal Fringed Garment (reverse) in all the cities. If you do all this, no evil will approach the king.

(The above is) the ritual of the ^s/-priest.

(An omen reads:) If a dog enters a temple, (this means that) the gods will show no mercy to the land. (Another omen reads:) If a beast of the desert, different and rare, enters the city and . . . , (this means) the overthrow of the city and the destruction of the people.

(5) On a favorable day, you shall set up three sacrificial stands for the god of the city, the goddess of the city, and the household god of the city. You shall sacrifice the sheep and offer the thigh, the . . . , and roasted meat. You shall make a libation of prime beer, wine, (and) milk. You shall light a fire. You shall make a lamentation. You shall recite the special poems of appeasement on the Royal Fringed Garment.

In the morning, in the desert or on the bank of a river, at a place which is not public, you shall sprinkle the earth with pure water. You shall set up three sacrificial stands for the gods Anu, Enlil, and Ea. You shall sacrifice the sheep and offer the thigh, the . . . , and roasted meat. (10) You shall make a libation of prime beer, wine, (and) milk. You shall light a fire. You shall make a lamentation. You shall recite the special poems of appeasement on the Royal Fringed Garment. After that, you shall set up two sacrificial stands for the god and goddess of the desert. You shall sacrifice the sheep and offer the thigh, the . . . , and roasted meat. You shall make a libation of prime beer, wine, (and) milk. You shall make a lamentation. You shall sing the lamentation (called) "Utudim etā" and the lamentation (called) "Utīl enzu marmar." In the morning, on the roof of the temple in question, at a spot [which is forbidden to the outsider], you shall sprinkle pure water. You shall set up three sacrificial stands for the gods Ea, Shamash, and Marduk. You shall sacrifice three sheep. You shall scatter (about) some (aromatic?) barley seed of all (kinds?), You shall have some water available. (10) You shall light a fire. Facing the temple, you shall sing (the compositions called) "Ezi gulgulde," "NibHu? and "Er Meier After that, accompanied on the ḫdhalatu-instrument, you shall sing for the gods Ea, Shamash, and Marduk (the compositions entitled) "Nitug niginna," "Utū lugalam," and "Eiahhungata." He(!) shall then stop (singing); you shall take up some water and shall open the curtains. The director of the reconstruction of the temple in question shall put on clean clothes, place a tin bracelet on his hand, (15) take up an axe of basalt, shall lift up the first brick, and put (it) away in an inaccessible place. You shall set up a single sacrificial stand in front of the brick for the god of the foundations and shall sacrifice the sheep. (On it?) you shall scatter some (aromatic?) barley seed of all (sorts?) and shall make a libation of beer, [wine], and milk. He(!) shall prostrate (himself). While you are engaged in the job of demolishing and reconstructing, you shall . . . water. The ^s/-priest shall strew some (aromatic?) flour. They shall make a libation of honey, cream, milk, beer, wine, and [good] oil on (the brick).
When the wall of the temple falls into ruin—for the purpose of demolishing and founding anew the temple in question, the £rs-priest shall investigate its plans. Then, in an auspicious month, on a favorable day, during the night, they shall light a fire for the gods Ea and Marduk and make a sacrifice to Ea and Marduk. The ^«/«-priest shall make a lamentation, and (5) the singer shall make groaning noises. In the morning you shall make preparations on the roof of the temple in question for three sacrifices to the gods Ea, Shamash, and Marduk. You shall strew (about?) nine loaves of emmer bread, dates, (and) tasqu-fiout. You shall lay down a mixture of honey, cream, and filtered oil. You shall set down three adagurrusu-ts[l]s. [You shall make a libation] of prime beer, [wine, and milk]. (10) You shall put down a brazier (filled with) cypress. [You shall strew (about?) (aromatic?) barley seed of all (sorts?)]. You shall slaughter two sheep. The ^lu-priest, accompanied on the halhallatu-mxiumtšt, shall sing [for the gods Ea], Shamash, and Marduk [the compositions entitled] "Nitug niginna," "Utu lugal-am," (and) "Elabhungata". After this, he shall sing (the compositions called) "Ezi [gulgulude]," "Nibilu," and "Er imieie." He shall then stop. [The director of the reconstruction] of the temple in question (15) shall put on clean clothes, place a tin [bracelet] on his hand, take up a basal axe, shall lift up [the first brick], shall mourn [for the] house, shall say "Woe," and shall put that brick away in an inaccessible place. (20) Then the ^«/«-priest shall strew some (aromatic?) flour [on] the brazier. He shall pour [honey], cream, milk, prime beer, wine, and good oil [on] it (that is, the brick). And then he shall recite in front of the brick (the composition called) "Enuma Anu ibnti lame." (This composition now follows.)

When the god Anu created heaven,
(When) the god Nudimmud created the a/v«-ocean, his dwelling,
(25) The god Ea pinched off a piece of clay in the apsu ocean,
Created the (brick-god) Kulla for the restoration of [temples],
Created the reed marsh and the forest for the work of their construction,
Created the gods Ninildu, Ninsumug, and Arazu to be the completers of their construction work,
Created mountains and oceans for everything..., (30)
Created the deities Gushkinbanda, Ninagal, Ninzadim, and Ninkurra for their work, (Created) the abundant products (of mountain and ocean) to be offerings..., Created the deities Ashnan, Lahar, Siris, Ningizzida, Ninsar, — For making their revenues abundant..., Created the deities Umnumutamku and Umnummutamnag to be presenters of offerings, (35)
Created the god Kusug, high-priest of the great gods, to be the one who completes their rites and ceremonies.

Created the king to be the provider . . . ,

Created men to be the makers . . . ,

. . . the gods Anu, Enlil, Ea . . .

††

(40) At the command of the deities Anu and Antu, may (everything which I do) go well!†

†††††††

(1) . . . after the (statue of the) god Anu has left the chapel (called) Enamenna and has reached the Exalted Gate, all the malmalu-priests shall recite three times the incantation (entitled) "Sarru ittasaThe /»»/»»-priests shall (then) stop (reciting), and the urigallu-priest, the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the brewers—who are harnessed to the cross-beam (supporting the moving statue of Anu)—(5) shall bless Anu with the blessing (entitled) "Anu rabu lame u erasetu li\rubu)a."‡‡

After the blessing, the /»»/»»-priests shall (again) recite four times the incantation (entitled) "Sarru ittasi" as far as the Street of the Gods. The urigallu-priest, the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the brewers—who are harnessed to the cross-beam—shall (again) bless Anu with the blessing (entitled) "Anu rabu lame u erasetu li\rubu)a."‡‡

After the blessing, the /»»/»»-priests shall (10) recite four times the incantation (entitled) "Lugale ankia lugalttea" when they are in the Street of the Gods. They shall (then) stop (reciting) the incantation, and the urigallu-priest, the malmalu-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the people carrying the cross-beam shall bless Anu exactly as before.

After the blessing, the /»»/»»-priests shall recite seven times both the incantation (entitled) "Lugale ezen limmunu" and the incantation (entitled) "Equbba\ugata" as far as the Holy Quay, the Dike of the Ship of Anu, the Path of the Gods. They shall (then) stop (reciting) the incantation, and the rig/»/»-priest, (15) the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the people carrying the cross-beam shall bless Anu.

As soon as Anu is on the Dike of the Ship of Anu, the /»»/»»-priests (and) the eribbiti-priests shall recite with hand-raising gestures the incantation (entitled) "Magur munu" to Anu. Thereafter, the urigallu-priest, the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the people carrying the cross-beam shall bless Anu exactly as before.

(20) From the Upper Dike of the Holy Quay to the Royal Gate, the /»»/»»-priests shall recite seven times the incantation (entitled) "Lugalttea si\uga badi-bata"They shall (then) stop (reciting) the incantation, and, in the Royal Gate, the urigallu-priest, the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the people carrying the cross-beam shall bless Anu exactly as before.

From the Royal Gate to the Akitu House (outside the city), the house of worship, the /»»/»»-priests shall recite the incantations (25) (which they recited before) in the Street of the Gods. They shall (then) stop (reciting) the incantation, and the rig/»/»-priest, the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, and the brewers—who are harnessed to the cross-beam—shall bless Anu seven full times.

As soon as Anu has reached the Akitu House, the /»»/»»-priests shall recite the incantation (entitled) "Efytga edingirene" the incantation (entitled) "An lugalmu ladugazule," the incantation (entitled) (30) "Unu kinsi\nanvas ethe incantation (entitled) "Subtu la ilani."

(39) The following is the blessing with which the urigallu-priest, the /»»/»»-priests, the eribbiti-priests, (40) and the brewers—who are harnessed to the cross-beam—shall bless Anu seven times, on the way to the Akitu House from the Resh House:

Great Anu, may heaven and earth bless you! (32)

May the deities Enlil, Ea, and Beletile bless you joyfully!

May both the gods Sin and Shamash bless you when you appear!

May the deities Nergal and Sibi bless you with firm hearts! (35)

May the Igigi gods of heaven and the Anunnaki gods of earth bless you!

May the gods of the Deep and the gods of the Holy Shrine bless you!

May they bless you daily (every) day, month, and year!

(The next tablet of these instructions begins with the words:) Incantation (entitled) "Sarruittasalarruittasas." (Colophon:) Copied from an old tablet, verified and collated. Copy of an old tablet which is the property of (the temple of) Anu and Antu. (This) tablet (belongs) to Anuhaushabshi, the son of Kidinanu, the descendant of Ekurzakir, the malmalu-priest of Anu and Antu, the /»/»/»-priest of the Resh Temple, citizen of the city Uruk. (This tablet was written by) the hand of Anbalatsuqibi, his son. He wrote (this tablet) for his own instruction, for the prolongation of his days, for the continuation of his life, (and) for the "establishment of his foundation(s)"; and then he deposited it in the city of Uruk, in the Resh Temple, the house of his (that is, Anu’s) divinity. Whoever reveres Anu shall not steal it! (Dated at) Uruk, in the month Du’uzu, the twenty-fifth day, the year sixty-one (of the Seleucid Era, corresponding to the year 251 B.C.). Antiochus (being) king of the lands (at that time).

Daily Sacrifices to the Gods of the City of Uruk

For a complete edition of this text, see F. Thureau-Dangin, Rituels accadiens (Paris, 1921), 62 ff. and 74 ff.; the copy was later republished by F. Thureau-Dangin, TCL, vi, No. 38; for another translation, see E. Ebeling, AOT, 305 ff.

(verse)

Every day in the year, for the main meal of the morning, you shall prepare—in addition to the sappu-vessels of the maqqane—eighteen gold rapp/»-vessels on the tray of the god Anu. Of these (eighteen vessels), you shall prepare before the god Anu seven sappu-vessels on the right—three for barley-beer and four for mixed beer—and seven sappu-vessels on the left—three for barley-beer, one for mixed beer, one for nalu-beer, one for zarbabu-beer, and one alabaster sappu-vessel for milk—and (5) four gold /^»-vessels for “pressed” wine. Similar (preparations shall be made) for the second (meal) of the morning as well as for the main and second (meals) of the evening. No milk shall be served at the main and second (meals) of the evening. Among the gold sappu-vessels for the tray, there are five gold *sappu-*vessels which are bound with (strings of?) inexpensive stone(s).

He shall grasp the five gold rapp/»-vessels, each with a capacity of one /^»-measure, and [shall perform] the maqqane of the sanctuary [of the god Anu]. (10) (These five vessels should contain different liquids:—) one for barley-beer, one for mixed beer, one for nasu-beer, one for “pressed” wine, and [one for milk]. He shall grasp a sappu-vessel with a capacity of five halu-measures (=one-half qa), containing wine of the land Azallu. Four [gold] *tigidi-*vessels of the sanctuary of the god Anu, of which one gold *tigidi-*vessel[. . . . , one gold *tigidi-*vessel is painted with blossoms, one gold *tigidi-*vessel has rope wrapped around its neck, (and) one [gold] *tigidi-*vessel is. . . . (This makes a total of four gold *tigidi-*vessels on a anduru-vessel[. . . . of the deities Anu and Antu

You shall prepare fourteen gold sappu-vessels upon the tray of the goddess Antu. (These are to contain) prime beer, exactly [as in the case of the tray of Anu]. Twelve gold sappu-vessels (are to be set) before the goddess Ishtar, ten gold sappu-vessels before [the goddess Nana], (These vessels do) not include the gold sappu-vessel (used) throughout the year for the (other) deities dwelling in [the city of Uruk].

(20) (Furthermore, these vessels do) not include the gold in/7*/^»*-vessels (which are filled) with the food prepared for the god’s trip or the two *tigidi-vessels in/7/^»*-measures and three /^»-measures of barley [and emmer]—[in other words, expressed sexagesimally], 148 /^»-measures, or, (expressed decimally), one hundred and eight /^»-measures—the basic quantity for the regular offerings, according to the /^»-measure of “ten pounds” . . . which the millers in the kitchen shall turn over to the chefs every day for the four meals of the deities [Anu], Antu, Ishtar, Nana, and the (other) deities dwelling in the city of Uruk.

(25) Of these (108 /^»-measures, there shall be) eighty-one /^»-measures of barley flour and twenty-seven /^»-measures of emmer flour which the chef shall use in baking two hundred and forty-three /^»-loaves. Of these (loaves), the chef shall supply for the four (daily) meals thirty /^»-loaves to be placed on the tray before the god Anu. (To itemize these more specifically,) the chef shall supply eight /^»-loaves for the main meal of the morning and (eight for) the second meal of the morning; the chef shall supply seven /^»-loaves for the main meal of the evening and (seven for) the second meal of the evening. (30) (Furthermore,) the chef shall supply thirty /^»-loaves (to be set) before the goddess Antu, thirty /^»-loaves (to be set) before the goddess Ishtar, thirty /^»-loaves (to be set) before the goddess Nana, twelve sibtu-loaves (to be set) before the seat of the god Anu and the household god of the sanctuary of the goddess Antu, four sibtu-vessels (to be set) before the two tarias of the god Anu, sixteen loaves (to be set) before the temple-tower and the household god of the temple-tower, (and) sixteen loaves (to be set) before the other (gods) of the sanctuary of the deities Anu and Antu—totalling one hundred and sixty-eight /^»-loaves for the four (daily) meals. (These loaves are) in addition to the seventy-five /^»-loaves which shall be offered to the (other) deities dwelling in the city of Uruk, in their temples at the (35) four (daily) meals. (These loaves are also) in addition to the loaf(s) off (?) the rabbii and the date cakes (to be prepared) for the god’s trip, for the guqqadnu-szcr’ifect, for the </>-fests, for the (ceremonies of) the Opening of the Gate, for the (ceremony) of the Clothing, for the equbbii-tssels (ceremonies?), for the overnight (ceremonies), for the brazier (ceremonies?), for the ritual of the (divine) marriage, for the “blessers,” for the sacrifices of the king, . . . And one thousand and two hundred . . . oil, which is placed beneath the (ordinary) dates and the dates of the land of Tilmun, and filtered oil shall be offered upon the alafyu of Anu, Antu, and the (other) deities of the city of Uruk. And mashatu-flour in storage baskets which the miller shall supply every day of the year to the eribbiti-prits. The miller, while grinding flour on the millstone, shall recite (the composition entitled?) . . . mulapin ina seri epinni zeri ismidu.

(45) And the chef, while (working at) the kneading trough with the lumps (of dough) and while withdrawing the hot (loaves?), shall recite (the composition beginning with the words?) "Nisaba bengal duiû mâtâ/ali ellu."

Every day of the year, for the four (daily) meals, 148 if-t/measure—i.e., (that is, expressed decimally,) one hundred and eight râz-measures—of ordinary dates, dates of the land of Tilmun, figs, and raisins, in addition to the... and the... shall be offered to the deities Anu, (50) Antu, Ishtar, Nana, and the (other) deities dwelling in the city of Uruk.

(reverse)

(Below are enumerated) the bulls and rams for the regular offerings (to be made) every day of the year to the deities Anu, Antu, Ishtar, Nana, and the (other) gods dwelling in the Resh Temple, the Irgal Temple, and the Esharra Temple, which is the topmost stage of the temple-tower of the god Anu. From the first day of the month Nisannu through the thirty day of the month Adaru, the deities dwelling in the city of Uruk, to the deities Anu, Antu, Nana, and the (other) deities dwelling in the city of Uruk.

(For) the second meal of the evening, the regular offering to the deities Anu and Antu and the household gods (of the temples), throughout the year: four fat, clean rams which have been fed barley for two years; one fat, milk-fed râ-ram of the regular offering; and five other rams which, unlike those just mentioned, have not been fed barley.

The daily total, throughout the year, for the four meals per day: twenty-one first-class, fat, clean rams (25) which have been fed barley for two years; two large bulls; one milk-fed bullock; eight lambs; thirty marratu-birds thirty...-birds; three cranes which have been fed...-grain; five ducks which have been fed...-flour; two ducks of a lower quality than those just mentioned; four wild boars; three ostrich eggs; three duck eggs.

Every day throughout the year, ten fat, clean rams, whose horns and hooves are whole, (30) shall be sacrificed in the... to the deities Anu and Antu of heaven, to the planets Jupiter, Venus, Mercury, Saturn, and Mars, to the sunrise, and to the appearance of the moon.

On the sixteenth day of each month, ten first-class, fat, clean rams, whose horns and hooves are whole, shall—after (the sacrificed) hands have been cleaned—be offered boiled to the deities Anu and Antu of heaven and to the seven planets on the topmost stage of the temple-tower of the god Anu—exactly as on the sixteenth day of the month Tebetu.

(35) (AH these are) in addition to the rams of the regular offerings throughout the year, in the Eanna Temple and the (other) temples of the city of Uruk; and (they are also) in addition to the bulls and rams which shall be offered for the guqqa-sacrifices, for the c[eremonies of] the Opening of the Gate, for the (ceremony) of the Clothing, for the eggubu-uttsel (ceremonies?), for the brazier (ceremonies?), for the ritual of the (divine) marriage, for the "blessers," and for the sacrifices of the king, which are written down in the ritual instructions for the whole year, in the Resh Temple, the Irgal Temple, the Eanna Temple, and the (other) temples of the city of Uruk, to the deities Anu and Antu and all the (other) gods.

(40) In the temple of the god Shamash, ram's meat shall never be offered to the deity Shakkân. In the temple of the god Sin, bull's meat shall never be offered to the god Harû. Fowl flesh shall never be offered to the goddess Beletseri. Neither bull's meat nor fowl flesh shall ever be offered to the goddess Ereshkigal.

Colophon: Tablet written by the hand of Shamsheîr, son of Inaqibitanu, son of Shipkâtznû. Tablet containing instructions for the worship of Anu; for the holy ritual; for the ceremonies of kingship, together with the rituals of the divinities of the Resh Temple, the Irgal Temple, the Eanna Temple, and the (other) temples of the city of Uruk. (Also) the procedures (to be followed) by the malmd&upilest, the ^«/«-priests, the singers, and all the artisans behind the . . . , not to mention all things having to do with the novices of the £«r«-priesthood. (This tablet was copied) from tablets which Nabuaplausur, king of the Sea Land, carried off as plunder from the city of Uruk; but now Kidinanu, a citizen of Uruk, a malmau-priest of Anu and Antu, a descendant of Ekurzakir, an urigallu-priest of the Resh Temple, looked at these tablets in the land of Elam, copied them in the reign of the kings Seleucus and Antiochus, and brought (his copies) back to the city of Uruk.
Ritual for the Purification of God and Man

Text: KUB, xxix, 7. Only the better-preserved parts, beginning with reverse 12, are translated here.

At nightfall they [. . . ] and they w[ipe clean] the god. F[or the sake of the king] they treat him1 with herbs against words of blasphemy (and) curse. Also [for the sake] of the queen's implements [they treat him with herbs]. (15)[She2 hand]s a soda-plant to the one who holds the queen's implements during the ceremony and while doing so she speaks as follows: "If in the pr[esence of the god anyone, king or queen, has said in mal]ice: 'Let blasphemy and uncleanliness enter that temple (and) grow there like a soda-plant! Let it thrive (there) [like] a soda-plant so that it becomes abundant! Let no one be able [to uproot] the soda-plant!"

(20) "Now look, [this is what has happ]ened: The god has [. . . ] cut down that thriving (and) abundant soda-plant like a harvester, and then reduced it to ashes. Like that soda-plant let him also reduce to ashes and make into soap evil word, oath, cu[rse] (and) uncl[eanliness]! So let it then no longer exist for my god; neither let it exist for the sacrificer's person! Let god and sacrificer be free of that matter!"

Afterward they hand to him an o[nion], and while this is being done, she speaks as follows: "If in the presence of the god anyone sp[eaks] as follows: 'Just as this onion consists of skins which are wrapped together, one being [un]able to get loose from another—as (in) an on[ion] let evil, oath, cur[se] (and) uncleanliness be wrapped around that temple!' See now, (30) I have picked this onion apart and have [no]w left only one wretched stem. Even so let him3 pick apart evil word, oath, curse (and) uncleanliness from the god's [temple]! Let god and sacrificer be free of that matter!"

After that they hand him a co[rd] which is twisted together toward the left. While this is being done, she speaks as follows: "If anyone has afflicted th[is] god

1 The sacrificer, i.e. the one who ordered the ritual.
2 The priestess, called Old Woman, who usually performs these rituals.
3 The sacrificer.
Ritual to Counteract Sorcery

Text: KUB, xvn, 27. This is a fragment which comprises less than half of the original composition.

(beginning lost)

(ii) [She] takes clay from the pit and ties it to the sacrificer. Thereafter we release it. She throws it into the hole which has been dug in the ground and speaks as follows: "Just as . . . brought up this clay] from the pit [and] is presenting [it to the sacrificer, even so let . . . bring up] this man's recovery [(and) vigor!]

She takes mud from the spring (5) and ties [it] to [the sacrificer]. Thereafter [we] release it. She throws it into the hole which has been dug in the ground and speaks as follows: "Just as [the spring brought] up this mud from the nether world, [and] people are presenting [it to the sacrificer], even so let it bring up this man's [recovery] (10) (and) vigor!"

Then she takes wine-dregs and ties them [to the sacrificer]. Then she goes to the vineyard, takes a [ . . . ] loaf, breaks it, scatters (the crumbs) about and says as follows: "Eat ye, gods of the trees! [Just as] ye, gods, (15) let vanish every [trace of the dregs], even so let this man's evil [vanish]!"

She . . . takes branches from all (of them)—but . . . she does not take—, makes a float and puts [it into the river]. She returns to the clay pit, deposits a broken loaf for the demons of the clay pit and speaks as follows:

(20) "Eat ye, demons of the clay pit! If the wicked sorcerer made over this man's form either to the clay pit or to the current of the river, give it back to him!"

Whatever she had taken to the open country, she carries back to the city and deposits it in the city within the inner chamber at a secret spot (25) The Old Woman goes forth and assembles in front of the Sunriver. She returns to the clay pit, deposits a broken loaf, and speaks as follows:

Whatever words the sorcerer spoke, whatever he twined together, whatever he wove, whatever he made in whatever place, (30) those (things) he did not (properly) know, the sorcerer. He built up sorcery like a pillar, twined it together like a string. I am thwarting him. I have pushed over these words of sorcery like a pillar, I have untwined them like a string."

(35) The Old Woman pushes the pieces of bitumen over, breaks them and puts them into the fire. The Old Woman takes the cord, untwines it the left-hand way and untwines it the right-hand way and speaks as follows: "If the sorcerer twined it from the right, (40) I am now untwining it [the right-hand way]. If he twined it from the left, I am now un[twining] it the left-hand way."

(iii) [The Old Woman throws the threads into the fire and says as follows: " . . . ] Just as (5) I have [burned] these threads and they will not [come back], [even so] let also these words of the sorcerer [be burned] up!" [She then] extinguishes the fire with water.

[She says]: "I have vanquished them, the words of sorcery. The spell [that was superior], my spell-binding has vanquished (it). (10) [Since] I cast a double counterspell—I spat upon them and I trampled them under [foot]—let the ass bloody them and let the ox muck [them]! Let man [not] (even) walk over them, (15) let him [split] on them! Let them be spat upon, the words of sorcery and the sorcerer (himself)!

Afterward the [Old] Woman spits once and [speaks] as follows: "Let the thousand gods [curse] him, the sorcerer! Let [heaven and earth] curse him! . . ."

(The rest of the text is hopelessly mutilated or completely lost)

Ritual Against Pestilence

These are the words of Uhha-muwas, the Arzawa man. If people are dying in the country and if some enemy (45) god has caused that, I act as follows:

They drive up one ram. They twine together blue wool, red wool, yellow wool, black wool and white wool, make it into a crown and crown the ram with it They drive the ram on to the road leading to the enemy (50) and while doing so they speak as follows: "Whatever god of the enemy land has caused this plague—see! We have now driven up this crowned ram to pacify thee, O god! Just as the herd (55) is strong, but keeps peace with the ram, do thou, the god who has caused this plague, keep peace with the Hatti land! In favor turn again toward the Hatti land!" (60) They drive that one crowned ram toward the enemy.

Afterward they bring fodder for the god's horses and mutton tallow, and while doing so they speak as follows: (iii) "Thou hast harnessed (thy) horses; let them eat this fodder and let their hunger be satisfied! Let also thy chariot be greased with this mutton tallow! (5) Turn toward thy land, O Storm-god! In favor turn toward the Hatti land!"

Afterward they drive up one full-grown goat and two sheep. He consecrates the goat to the Seven; he consecrates one sheep to the Sun-god. (10) The other sheep they kill and cook. Then they bring 1 cheese, 1 curd, 1 pulla (vessel), leavened bread, 1 amphora of wine, 1 amphora of beer, (and) fruit With these they make provision for the god's journey.

1 The priestess called Old Woman.
2 The hole has been dug in order to dispose of the materials used in the ritual, materials which are now contaminated and dangerous.
3 This must have been mentioned in the lost beginning of the text.
4 The Pleiades.
Purification Ritual
Engaging the Help of Protective Demons

Text: KUB, xxvii. 67. This ritual consists of four parts. The first three of them run mainly parallel with one another except that they are addressed to different demons. In the first section (i) Tarpatassis is invoked, in the second (ii) Alauwaimis, and in the third (most of iii) he who turns in front of the Tarpatassis demons.7 The fourth part (iii 67-iv 43) again invokes Tarpatassis. Only the second and the fourth parts are translated here.

(ii 2) [Aft]erward she2 pours out a libation for Alauwaimis. She places pine cones upon a large pan and thereupon she strewn grains of kar 3; these they roast. She then extinguishes the cones with water and says: "Just as I have quenched these, even so let evil also be quenched for the sacrificers!"

She sets up an altar of wood and breaks one long sacrificial loaf for Alauwaimis, she puts the upper shoulder and places on the altar for Alauwaimis. She places the . . . (upon the altar) for Mammas. Then she pours out a libation.

[Afterward] she offers the heart in the same way. She places one leg (55) [(and) one-half of the head?] (upon the altar) for the (Alauwaimis) gods. [She places] the other half of the head (upon the altar) [for Alauwaimis] (and) the womb (upon the altar) [for Mammas]; furthermore she pours out a libation.

[Then] they cook [the goat] in a cauldron and [eat] (and) drink. Then she scatters silver (and) gold, (60) [lapis], Babylon stone, lulluri stone, "life" stone, [Barahsi stone], iron, tin, copper (and) bronze—a little of everything! (saying): "[Alauwa]imis! Here [I have given] thee silver, gold, (and) lapis. Go! Say a good word for me before the gods!

"Grant [me . . .] . . .; grant me to appear before thy face! Should someone else speak unfavorably of [me],—since thou art strong, [go] (and) speak a good word for me [before] all the gods!"

(iii 67) When she3 comes home, she takes a fir tree—at the top it is in its natural state, at the bottom it is trimmed—and rams it (into the ground) at the right-hand side of the first gate. (70) Under the tree she places a pot.

(gap of about 15 lines)

(A tree is apparently set up at the left-hand side too.)

(iv 3) She goes away [and while walking off] she does not turn around [or . . . ], (5) or curse. [In another place] she sets up [an altar] and breaks three sacrificial loaves. Of these she breaks [one long sacrificial loaf] for the (Alauwaimis) gods, one sacrificial loaf for Tarpatasssis (and) one sacrificial loaf for Mafmmas (saying):

"Tarpatassis! Accept [this] fir tree from me (10) and set me free! Let not [evil] sickness get to me! Stand by the side of my [wif]e, my children, (and) my children's children! Thou, who art a strong god—thou, Tarpatasssis, [who] . . . say a [favorable word] before all the gods!"

(15) She consecrates a buck to Tarpatasssis and [cuts] it up before the god. She lets the blood run into a bronze cup [and empties it] into the pots on either side of [the gate].

[She takes off the right shoulder and] cooks [it on a fire], (20) [ . . . the left] shoulder she [cooks likewise]. She puts the shank (upon the altar) for the (Alauwaimis) gods; she puts [the upper sh]oulder (upon the altar) [for Alauwaimis]; [she puts the . . .

1 Or: she.
2 The priestess called Old Woman.
3 A cereal.
4 This should be the piece of fur mentioned above.
5 It is not quite clear whether "she" or "he" be translated. In the first case the Old Woman is referred to. in the second the sacrificer.
6 Literally: [who] turnest in front of [ . . .].
Ritual Against Impotence

> These are the words of Pissuwattis, the Arzawa woman who lives in Parassa: If a man possesses no reproductive power or has no desire for women, I bring libations to Ulilliyassis on his behalf (5) and entreat him for three days. On the first day I prepare as follows: Rations for one man are assembled and to it the following is added: 3 sweet sacrificial loaves of flour (and) water weighing one tarnal, figs, grapes, ... the god’s meal, a little of everything; (10) the fleece of an unblemished sheep, a pitcher of wine, [the headdress] or the shirt of the male sacrificer (in question)—they are put upon the rations.

A virgin takes up [these materials], and the sacrificer —(15) having taken [a bath]—walks behind them; [then] he bathes again. We shall take the materials to another place in the open country. We shall remain standing while [the ... ]; holds the rations up. I shall build a gate of reeds.

I shall twine together [a cord] of red wool (and) of white wool. (20) I shall place a mirror (and) a distaff in the sacrificer's [hand]. He will pass under the gate. When he comes [for]th through the gate, I shall take the mirror (and) the distaff away from him. (25) I shall give him a bow [and arrows] and while doing so I shall speak as follows: "See! I have taken womanliness away from thee and given thee back manliness. Thou hast cast off the ways of a woman, now show the ways of a man!"

(30) Later we [present a eunuch (as) a defend[ant] and [...] While doing so I shall speak as follows: "Here we present a eunuch. He has made his nature the subject of an oracle; (whether) by ... [the] ways of a man were indicated, or (those) of a girl were indicated for him. For his part he went down to her bedchamber, but all this fellow could produce was excrement (and) urine. Such (will) not be (10) found to be the case with thee!

"Now see, he has gone down on his knees and is seeking thee for the sake of thy divine power. Whether thou art in the mountain, whether thou art in the meadow, whether thou art in the valley, (15) or wherever else thou mayest be, in favor come to this man! Let driving wind and rain not hold thee back!

"He will go and worship thee, O god! He will provide a place for thee, (20) he will give thee a house. He will give thee slaves (and) slave-girls. He will give thee cattle (and) sheep. He will make vows to thee.

"See! I am entreating (and) alluring thee. So come! Bring with thee the moon, the star of the nether world, (and) the sun! (25) Let slave-girls (and) slaves run before thee! Let gods [(and) goddesses] (ii) run before thee! Come down to this man! Make his wife conceive a child, look after her! (5) Turn to him and speak to him! Let him have thy maid, and let her bear thy yoke! Let him take his wife and beget sons (and) daughters for himself! (10) They will be thy servants and thy handmaids; they will always be giving thee offerings, sacrificial loaves, meal (and) libations.

"See! This man (15) knew thee not. See! Now he has sought after thee. Since then this (man) has sought after thee. So stand by him, in favor, O god! (20) In this matter in which he has come to thee, O god, show thy divine power and set all aright! Let him experience thy divine power, make it good! Let him see thy divine nature, and he will come [and worship] thee. (25) . . .

I shall take [the materials] from upon the rations and we shall go back into the house. (5) In the house in which I make offerings a new table is set up and I shall put the rations upon that table; in front of it I shall put a pitcher.

The broken sacrificial loaves (10) which are lying on the rations, I shall take a little of them and give it to the male sacrificer. He will put it into his mouth, and he will drink (for) Ulilliyassis three times. When night falls, the sacrificer (15) will He down in front of the table; they will set up a bed for him in front of the table.
The headdress or the shirt that is lying upon the rations, he will spread (it) out at night time. (20) I shall do that for three days. But daily I shall entreat three times, once at dawn, once at midday (and) once at nightfall. While doing so I shall speak the same words.

(25) One set of loaves I shall break at dawn, another set at noon, and another set at nightfall. I shall also stew another portion of meal, (iii) Then I shall consecrate one sheep to Utillyassist, and they will slaughter it down in front of the table. They will finally remove the sheep (5) [cut] it up and then [cook] it. From the meat [they will select. . .]. Liver [(and) heart . . . ] they will cook [on a fire . . . ], two sacrificial loaves [they will break and put them] on the table for him.

(The following 15-20 lines are badly mutilated. The remnants point to a ceremony similar to that described in the earlier parts of the text, probably belonging to a second ritual. The preserved end of the text contains the incantation which goes with that ritual:)

". . . (5) Let him have [thy maid], and let her bear his yoke! Let him take his wife and beget children for himself! Let him beget sons (and) daughters for himself. (10) Thou, O god, prove thy divine power!

"Let him experience thy might! and he will make thee his personal god. He will make vows to thee." They will spread out a bed for him (15) in front of the table and they will also spread out the headdress or the shirt that had been lying on the rations, (iv) The sacrificer will lie down, (to see) whether he will experience the bodily presence of the deity in his dream, coming to him and sleeping with him. (5) During the three days on which he is entreating the deity he tells all the dreams which he has, whether the deity appears to him and whether the deity (10) sleeps with him.

He will go (and) worship the god. Furthermore, if sacrificial vessels are in order, he will set up sacrificial vessels; if not, (15) he will set up a stone pillar or erect a statue. But the new table which stood throughout the entreaty, becomes the property of the deity. (After three mutilated lines, the text is completely destroyed and thus the end of the composition is missing.)

Ritual Against Domestic Quarrel

Texts: KBo, xii, 3 and its duplicates KUB, x, 76 - F- KUB, XII, 34 + 59 + KUB, xv, 39 - IBoT, ii, 109 ff.; KUB, xxxiv, 84 - K etc. Literature: F. Hrozný, Heth. Keilschrifte aus Boghazko (1919), 60-89; Liane Rost, Mitt. des Instituts fur Orientforschung, 1 (1953), 345-79.

These are the words of Mastiggas, the woman from Kizzuwatna: If a father and (his) son, or a husband and his wife, or a brother and (his) sister quarrel, when I reconcile them, I treat them as follows:

(5) She takes black wool and wraps it in mutton fat; fitatwa they call it. She presents it to the sacrificer and speaks as follows: "Whatever thou spokest with (thy) mouth (and) tongue—see, here is fitatwa! Let it be cut out (10) of your body these days!" She throws the tongues into the hearth.

Afterward the Old Woman takes salt, tissue, fat and wax. She makes the wax into tongues and waves them over the two sacrificers. She also waves the salt and the [fat and] the tissue over them, [presents it to them and they] [flatten it] with (their) left (15) hands.

The Old Woman speaks as follows: "In whatever curses you indulged, let now the Sun-god turn those curses (and) tongues toward the left!" And she throws them into the hearth.

The red wool (and) the blue wool that (20) had been placed upon the bodies of the two sacrificers, the two figures of dough that had been placed before them, and the hands and tongues of dough that had been placed upon their heads, those the Old Woman removes. She cuts the strings off them, the Old Woman breaks the two hands and the tongues of dough to pieces.

(25) She then waves them over them and speaks as follows: "Let the tongues of these [days] be cut off! Let the words of these days be cut off!" And she throws them [into the hearth].

Afterward the Old Woman takes [a tray] and [places] (30) seven tongues [and seven hands . . . ] upon it. She waves it over the two sacrificers and [speaks] as follows: "The day at which ye satisfied your hunger—see here the tongues and the hands of that day. See, the father Sun has now nailed them down." And she puts them into the hearth.

The Old Woman takes water and dough. She sprinkles the water upon them (36) and purified them. Then she waves the dough over them and speaks as follows: "Be ye cleansed of mouth and tongue!" And she puts the dough into the hearth.

They drive up a (white) sheep. The Old Woman presents it to the two sacrificers and speaks as follows: "Here is a substitute for you, (40) a substitute for your persons. Let that tongue and that curse stay in (its) mouth!" They spit into its mouth.

She speaks as follows: "Spit ye out those evil curses!" They dig a hole in the ground, cut the sheep up over it, and then put it into it.

(45) They put 1 thin sacrificial loaf down with it, she also pours out a libation of wine and they level the ground.

They drive up a black sheep, the Old Woman presents it to them6 and speaks as follows: "For your heads and

---

1. The priestess; the text changes abruptly into the third person.
2. Probably in the Hurrian language.
3. The text ends a section here, dividing the same sentence over two sections.
4. I.e. destroy them.
5. The persons who ordered the ritual performed.
6. I.e. the sacrificers.
all parts of your bodies the black sheep is a substitute. In its mouth (and its) tongue (50) is the tongue of curses." She waves it over them.

The two sacrificers [spit] into its mouth. They cut up the sheep and dismember it. They [kindle] the hearth and [burn] it. They pour honey (and) olive oil over it. She [breaks] a sacrificial loaf (55) and throws it into the hearth. She also pours out a libation of wine.

The Old Woman takes a small pig, she presents it to them and speaks as follows: "See! It has been fattened with grass (and) grain. Just as this one shall sacrifices either!

She waves the small pig over them, and then they kill it. They dig a hole in the ground (5) and put it down into it. They put a sacrificial loaf down with it, she also pours out a libation of wine and they level the ground.

The Old Woman makes a kneading-pan of clay. She puts into it a little dough into which she throws a little black cumin. She waves it over the two sacrificers (10) and speaks as follows:

"Just as this clay does not return to the clay pit and this cumin does not turn white and cannot be used for seed a second time;

"(as) this dough does not get into a sacrificial loaf for the gods, even so let the evil tongue not get to the body of the two sacrificers!"

(The following sections are not intelligible as yet.)

The Old Woman [waves] water over the two sacrificers and purifies them. She also [waves] the dough over them.

(30) Afterward she again makes a kneading-pan of clay and pours oil into it. She severs the blue wool and throws the severed end in. The Old Woman hides it under the coats of the two sacrificers, and she speaks as follows: "This is the kneading-pan of Ishtar.® May they get away to good life! May they hide from evil matter likewise!"

Afterwards she takes a hupuwai vessel and fills it with wine, plain olive oil (and) honey; she adds figs, raisins, tissue, salt (and) mutton-fat.

(40) She pours the (content of the) hupuwai into the hearth, breaks the hupuwai to pieces and speaks as follows: "Let the hupuwai be broken with mouth (and) tongue!"

When the Old Woman has broken the hupuwai to pieces, (45) she also breaks a sweet loaf and throws (the crumbs) into the hearth.

They drive up a sheep and call it "substitute." The Old Woman takes 1 sweet sacrificial loaf (and) 1 jug of wine.

While offering the sheep to the Sun-god the Old Woman speaks as follows: (50) "O Sun-god! Here is a substitute in their place, with mouth and tongue." She consecrates the sheep, breaks the loaf and pours out the wine. A white sheep they do not kill again; the Old Woman gets it.

(The next sections are mutilated and therefore omitted here.)

(iii 10) They light fires on the right and on the left; in between they set seven stone pillars in the ground. The Old Woman presents one sacrificial loaf weighing i tarnai and a cheese to the two sacrificers and they touch it with their hands.

(15) The Old Woman breaks the sacrificial loaf, pours out a libation of wine and speaks as follows:

"Whoever erected these stone pillars in this one place—see, now they totter. Whatever issued from the mouths (and) the tongues of the two sacrificers on that day—let those words totter in the same way!"

The two sacrificers overturn the stone pillars with (their) feet and throw them into the fire. (25) The fine garments which they are wearing they cast off and the Old Woman gets them.

She waves a pot over them, takes the DUG.LIIGAL off their heads and speaks as follows: "See! [I have taken the DUG.LIIGAL off your heads. [Let the evil] words [be taken off in the same way]]!" (35) [. . .] the two sacrificers break the pot with their feet and [she says as follows: "Let them break] all the words [of mouth (and) tongue in the same way]!"

The Old Woman takes the Sun's hay,® calls it tiwariya® and rubs down the limbs of the two sacrificers. She speaks as follows: "Let the evil words of mouth (and) tongue be rubbed away from you!"

(iv) The Old Woman takes water with a cup or an amphora and presents it to the two sacrificers; salt is also put in. The two sacrificers pour the water over their heads, (5) they also rinse their hands (and) their eyes.

Then they pour it into the horn of an ox. The two sacrificers seal it up and the Old Woman speaks as follows:

(10) "On the day when the olden kings return and examine the state of the land,—then, and then only, shall this seal be broken."

Evocatio

When the diviners attract the gods by means of nine trails from the meadows, the mountains (and) the rivers, from the sea, from the springs, from fire, from heaven and from the earth, they take the following things: He takes a basket and in the basket (materials)

8 This is usually considered as a kind of vessel; this apparently does not fit here.

9 "Reading in doubt.

"Again in Hurrian?"
are made ready as follows: (5) there lies (in it) one hupparal, upon it lies one sacrificial loaf made of fine flour, upon the loaf a (piece of) cedar is fastened and to the front (of the piece) of cedar red wool is tied.

It (the wool) is led down (to the ground). Fine oil ... is poured into a bitumen cup and he soaks it (the wool) in it; (10) fine flour is strewed over it Upon it 30 thin loaves of fine flour are placed. A ... of the gods ... the wing of an eagle (and) the fleece of an unblemished sheep, are (also) placed there all wrapped together.

Apart (from these) are (kept) one wine jug (and) one pitcher filled with wine, (10) honey (and) fine oil mixed together, one jar of fine oil, one jar of honey; also fruit, figs, grapes, olives, barley, a broken leavened loaf, one pot filled with fat cake.

They go down from the Tawinia gate and set up a wickerwork table for the "cedar" gods on the road. (20) Upon it they place the prepared basket and in front of it they construct a fireplace for (burning) wood. They draw a length of cloth down from the wickerwork table and make it into a trail. Then they draw a trail in fine flour in front of the cloth; on the one side of the flour trail they draw a trail in honey, but on the other side they draw a trail in wine (25) (and) fine oil mixed together.

He then breaks one thin (loaf), puts fat cake upon it and places it on the ends of the trails. He breaks one thin loaf, strews it upon the trail and pours out a libation of wine. He breaks one thin loaf, puts fat cake upon it, and places it upon the path, he also pours out a libation of wine. (30) One diviner takes the red wool that had been tied to the (piece of) cedarwood from a libation of wine. He breaks one thin loaf, puts fat cake and cheese, also fruit and barley, for the god, pours out a libation and says:

"Let the vigorous Cedar-gods eat and drink the trails! Let them satisfy their hunger and quench their thirst! O gods, (50) in favor turn ye toward the king and the queen! Wherever ye may be, O Cedar-gods, whether in heaven or on earth, whether on mountains or in rivers, whether in the Mitanni country or in the country of Ugarit,® the country of Zinzira, the country of Dunanapa, the country of Idarukatta, the country of Gataana, the country of Alalha, 4 (55) the country of Kinahhi,5 the country of Amurru, the country of Sidon, the country of Tyre, the country of Nuhasse, the country of Ugalzit, the country of Arrapha,6 the country of Zunzurhi;

"Whether ye are in the country of Ashur, the country of Babylon, the country of Shanharra, the country of Egypt, the country of Alasiya,7 the country of Alziya,8 the country of Papahhi, the country of Kummra, the country of Hayasa, the country of Lulluwa,8 the country of Arzawa, the country of Kuntara, the country of Iyantla, the country of Wilusa,9 the country of Uraya, the country of Suhma, the country of Sappuwa, [the country of ... ], the country of Talawa, the country of Massa, the country of Galkisa, the country of Kuntara, the country of Iyantla, the country of Wilusa, the country of Lulwa, the country of Kasula, the country of Himuwa, the country of Lulwa, in the Kashkane country or in whatever other countries—(65) come ye now back to the Hatti land!

"If anyone, either [a foreigner] or a Hittite, [either a common man] or a member of the nobility, has drawn you away, entreated you, lured you away [ ... ] (70) into his house [ ... ], see, here we are [drawing you back] ... (and) we are squealing.

(small gap if any)

(ii) "Turn your backs on the enemy country and on the wicked p[eople]; turn your eyes toward the king and the queen! They will give you holy offerings. So [come here] in favor and receive your offerings with both hands [and ... ]! (5) Come ye forth from the enemy country and from evil uncleanness!

"Come ye to the blessed, holy, fine (and) wonderful Hatti land! Bring with you life, good health, long years, power of procreation, sons (and) daughters, grandchildren (and) great-grandchildren, the gods' love, the gods' kindness, (10) valor (and) ... obedience! Lift ye from [the king (and) the queen] (their) thousand shortcomings! Look ye upon the king (and) the queen [with] favor!

"Come ye back to your fine and wonderful sanctuaries! Sit ye down again on your thrones and chairs! Sit ye down again on your holy, fine (and) wonderful seats!

"Provide ye for the king (and) the queen life, good health, long years, power of procreation, sons (and) daughters, grandchildren (and) great-grandchildren! For the man manliness (and) valor, for the woman womanliness (and) motherhood!

---

1 The region between the Euphrates and Assyria in the east.
2 Qadesh on the Orontes, today Tell Nebi Mendo.
3 Today Ras Shamra.
4 The capital of Mukish(hi) excavated at Atchana (Tell A(ana).
5 The Hurrian form of Canaan.
6 The region of the upper Tigris.
7 The island of Cyprus.
8 Today Kirkuk in Iraq.
9 Today Atchana (Tell A(ana).
10 The three last mentioned countries are situated in the region where Turkey, Iran and Iraq meet today.
11 This group comprises the main countries of southern and western Anatolia.
12 The region along the Black Sea in Pontus.
(20) "Throughout the land give ye love and loyalty, the gods' love, the gods' kindness, high spirits in god (and) high spirits in man, valor, its victorious arms, fertility (and) prosperity in the country, fertility of man, cattle, sheep, grain (and) wine! Grant ye to him (the king) the loyalty (25) (and) obedience of his charioteers (and) foot soldiers!"

He sprinkles fine oil (about) with the red wool and says: "Just as brightness has been imparted to this wool, even so let brightness be imparted to the persons of the Cedar-gods!

"Just as this fine oil is soothing, (as) it is agreeable to gods (30) and agreeable to men, even so let the king and the queen of the Hatti land be agreeable to the gods! Let the soothing effect of the cedar, the music of the lyres (and) the words of the diviner be such an [alluring] inducement to the gods that they will get them called here! Wherever else ye may be, come (ye) here! If ye do not hear the first time, hear the second time! If ye do not hear the second time, (35) hear the third, the fourth, the fifth, the sixth, the seventh time! So come ye! Come back to your holy, fine (and) wonderful temples, thrones (and) chairs!

"Turn with favor toward the king and the queen! (40) Give them life, good health, long years (and) days!" At the feet of the gods they strew out a leavened loaf (and) cheese, fruit [and figs]: they pour out wine, honey and fine oil mixed together, and he speaks as follows:

"See! At your feet I have placed for you, Cedar-gods, [a leavened loaf] (and) a cheese. So abandon ye the enemy country (45) and come back to the blessed, fine (and) wonderful Hatti land! Evil, evil sickness, fever, hunger, plague, pest, bad word . . . wipe out at the Hatti land and give it [to all] [the enemy]! Those who (50) do not perform [the proper rites], those who do not [break] sacrificial loaves, [let] those [ . . . ]."

considerable gap

(The reverse of the tablet describes ceremonies designed to attract the gods from the rivers [iii 1-20], the sea [iii 21-22], the springs [iii 23-47], the mountains [iii 48-58], gap, the nether world [iv 1-26], the heaven [iv 27-40], the tablet closes with "the bringing up of the gods," presumably to their permanent dwelling places.)

The Soldiers' Oath

Text: KBo, vi, 34 and its duplicate KUB, VII, 59. Literature: J. Friedrich, Za, NF 1 (1924), 161-192, reprinted with additions in the same author's Hethitische Studien (1924). Excerpts are also found in Zimmern's contribution to Lehmann-Haas, Textbuch zur Religionsgeschichte, 2nd ed. (1929), 335 f. and in J. Friedrich, Aus dem hethitischen Schrifttum, 2 (AO, xxv/2, 1929); 16 ff. The tablet in question is marked as the second of a series entitled "When they lead the troops to the (ceremony of taking the) oath." At the beginning about 17 lines are missing.

[He1 . . .]s and says: "Just as this . . . could [see] and was able to find [(its) food], and (as) they have now blinded it at the place of the oath,—(15) whoever breaks these oaths, betrays the king of the Hatti land, and turns his eyes in hostile fashion upon the Hatti land, let these oaths seize him! Let them blind this man's army (20) and make it deaf! Let them not see each other, let them not hear each other! Let them make a cruel fate their lot! Below let them fetter their feet, and above let them bind their hands! (25) Just as the gods of the oath bound the hands and feet of the army of the Arzawa country and made them unable to move, even so let them bind that man's army and make them unable to move!"

He places yeast in their hands, they squeeze it (30) and he says: "Is not this that you have here yeast? Just as they take this little piece of yeast, mix it (into the dough) in the kneading bowl and let the bowl stand for a day (so that) it can ferment—whoever breaks these oaths, (35) shows disrespect to the king of the Hatti land, and turns his eyes in hostile fashion upon the Hatti land, let these oaths seize him! Let him be ridden with disease! Make a cruel fate his lot!"

The men (40) declare: "So be it!"

Then he places wax and mutton fat in their hands. He throws them on a flame and says: "Just as this wax melts, and just as the mutton fat dissolves,—(45) whoever breaks these oaths, (ii) [shows disrespect to the king] of the Hatti [land], let [him] melt like wax, let him dissolve like [mutton fat]!" [The men] declare: "So be it!"

(5) He places sinews (and) salt in their hands. He throws them on a flame and speaks as follows: "Just as these sinews split into fragments on the hearth, and just as the salt (10) is scattered on the hearth—whoever breaks these oaths, shows disrespect to the king of the Hatti land, and turns his eyes in hostile fashion upon the Hatti land, let these oaths seize him! (15) Let him split into fragments like the sinews, let him be scattered like the salt! Just as salt has no seed, even so let that man's name, seed, house, cattle (and) sheep perish!"

He places malt (and) malt loaf in their hands, (20) they crush them and he speaks as follows: "Just as they grind this malt loaf between mill stones, mix it with water, bake it and break it up—whoever breaks these oaths and does evil to the king (and) the queen, (25) the princes (and) to the Hatti land, let these oaths seize him! Let them grind their bones in the same way! Let him see in the same way! Let him be broken up in the same way! Let a cruel fate be his lot!" The men declare: "So be it!"

"Just as this malt no (longer) has the power of growth, (as) one cannot take it to a field and use it as

1 The officiating priest.

2 The most important group of countries in the southern part of Anatolia bordering on the Mediterranean Sea.
seed, (as) one cannot use it as bread or store it in the storehouse—whoev er (35) breaks these oaths and does evil to the king (and) the queen and the princes, even so let the gods of the oath also destroy that man's future! Let not his wife bear sons and daughters! Let his land (and) his fields have no crop, (40) and his pastures no grass! Let not his cattle (and) sheep bear calves (and) lambs!

They bring the garments of a woman, a distaff and a mirror, they break an arrow and you speak as follows: "Is not this that you see here (45) garments of a woman? We have them here for (the ceremony of taking) the oath. Whoever breaks these oaths and does evil to the king (and) the queen (and) the princes, let these oaths change him from a man into a woman! Let them change his troops into women, (50) let them dress them in the fashion of women and cover their heads with a length of cloth! Let them break the bows, arrows (and) clubs in their hands and (iii) [let them put] in their hands distaff and mirror!"

They parade in front of them a [blind woman] and a deaf man and [you speak] as follows: "See! here is a blind woman (5) and a deaf man. Whoever does evil to the king (and) the queen, let the oaths seize him! Let them make him blind! Let them [ma]ke him [deaf]! Let them [blind] him like a blind man! Let them [deafen] him like a deaf man! Let them [annihilate him], the man (himself) (10) together with his wife, [his children] (and) his kin!"

He places a stone [of a man] full of . . . in their hands and speaks as follows: "Did not this man whom you see here take the oath? (15) [At some other time] he was sworn in before the gods and then broke his oath. The oaths seized him and his inner parts are sagging out in front, he has to hold his entrails in his hands. Whoever (20) breaks these oaths, let these oaths seize him! Let his inner parts sag out in front! Let them break the oaths and they trample it under foot and he speaks as follows: "Whoever breaks these oaths, even so let the Hatti people come and trample this man's town under foot! Let them make it bare of people!"

(30) They light [a fire~\brand] and trample it under foot so that it scatters here and there and he says: "Just as this one flies apart(?)—whoever breaks these oaths, even so let this man's house be robbed (?) of men, (35) cattle (and) sheep!"

You will place before them an oven. Also a plow, a cart (and) a chariot you will place before the congregation. These things they break and he speaks as follows: "Whoever breaks these oaths, let the Storm-god break his plow! Just as grass does not come [out of] the oven, let not spelt (and) barley (45) [come out] of his field, let sahlii* come forth!"

(35) "Blot out the Kashkean country, O gods! Let every single god take thought for his place of worship and win it back!

"Let Zithariyas win back his place of worship! Let him again roam those countries (40) at will! Let people again celebrate [his] great festivals! . . ."

(Gap that must have contained a ritual in which the enemy gods are summoned.)

(11) And he speaks as follows: "O gods of the Kashkean country! We have summoned you before this assembly.

Ritual before Battle

When they perform the ritual at the boundary of the enemy country he consecrates one sheep to the Sun-goddess of Arinna and to the Storm-god, god Inar (and) all the gods, to Telepinus (and) the gods and goddesses of Turmitta, (5) to all . . . gods (and) the . . . gods, to all the mountains (and) rivers.

But one sheep they consecrate to Zithariyas.

(10) They speak as follows: "See! Zithariyas is appealing to all the gods. The offerings which had long been assigned to Zithariyas' worship, the countries which have fallen into turmoil—in all of them they would celebrate great festivals for him.

(16) "But now the Kashkeans1 have taken them. The Kashkeans have begun war. They boast of their power (and) strength. They have made light of you, O gods!

"See! Zithariyas (20) is appealing to all the gods; he brings his complaints before you. So pass judgment on his case, all ye gods! Let it be of great concern to the gods!

"In fact they (the sanctuaries) have been taken away by these people not from Zithariyas alone, (25) they have been taken away from all you gods, all of you; from the Sun-goddess of Arinna, from the Storm-god of Nerik, from the Storm-god (and) from god Inar, from Telepinus (and) from all the (other) gods. From you (also) have his cities been taken.

(30) "See! Zithariyas is bringing his case before all of you, gods. Take your own case to heart! Pass judgment on your own case in passing judgment on the case of Zithariyas!

(35) "Blot out the Kashkean country, O gods! Let every single god take thought for his place of worship and win it back!

"Let Zithariyas win back his place of worship! Let him again roam those countries (40) at will! Let people again celebrate [his] great festivals! . . ."

1 A group of wild tribes living in the mountains along the shore of the Black Sea who incessantly raid and plunder on Hittite territory.
Come ye, eat (and) drink! Hear ye the accusation (5) which we bring against you!

"The gods of the Hatti land have done nothing against you, the gods of the Kashkean country. (10) They have not put you under constraint.

"But ye, the gods of the Kashkean country, began war. Ye drove the gods of the Hatti land out of their realm and took over their realm for yourselves.

(15) "The Kashkean people also began war. From the Hittites ye took away their cities and ye drove them out of their field (and) fallow and out of their vineyards.

"The gods of the Hatti land and the (Hittite) people (20) call for bloody vengeance. The[v]engeance of the (Hittite) people [will be wrought] on you, the gods [of the Kashkean country] and the [Kashkean people]."

(Gap that must have contained, beside the end of the preceding, a ritual of purification which intends to enable the army again to vanquish the enemy.)

When he has finished he goes again before the Hatti gods, and they eat up the meat and the bread. They return to the army (and) battle the enemy!

(5) When he has finished he goes again before the Hatti gods, and they eat up the meat and the bread. He offers libations to the Hatti gods, the Storm-god of the army (and) the Warrior-god. They give them to drink (10) as much as they think fitting. The "master of the gods" receives the implements used at the feast (and) the sheepskins. They return to the army, and go to battle in this condition.

Removal of the Threat Implied in an Evil Omen

Text: KUB, ix, 13-27—KUB, xxiv, 5. Literature: M. Vieyra, RHR, cxix (1939), 121-153. The upper third of the obverse and the corresponding part of the reverse are lost. The missing beginning must have stated the main theme of the text: a threat to the king implied in an evil omen. It must also have contained part of the treatment. It consists in the attempt at deflecting the predicted misfortune to persons who substitute for the king. The first preserved lines seem to finish the treatment of a first group of such substitutes. The better preserved part (beginning with obverse 6) deals already with a second group.

[During the night] the king] takes the . . . [substitutes and goes to the sanctuary of the Moon-god. [He presents them to the Moon-god and] says: "In the matter about which [I prayed] to you, listen to me, Moon-god, my lord! [That omen which thou gavest—if thou foundest fault with me, (10) (witness) that I have given [thee] straightaway [these substitutes]. These take, [but let me go free]!" They drive up to the sanctuary a live steer [and consecrate it [...].

The king goes up to the sanctuary [and speaks as follows: "That] omen which thou gavest, O Moon-god—if thou foundest fault with me [and] wishedst to behold with thine own eyes [the sinner's] abasement, (15) [see, I, the king,] have come in person [to thy sanctuary] and have [given] thee these substitutes. Consider [the substitution! Let these die! But, let me not die!" They hand [the substitutes over to the . . . ] and he takes them away. [When] he has finished . . . ing [them], he casts (spells of) deliverance (over him).]

He [brings a healthy prisoner to the sanctuary]. They anoint the prisoner with the fine oil of kingship, (20) and [he speaks] as follows: "This man (is) the king. To him [have I given] a royal name. Him have I clad [in the vestments] of kingship. Him have I crowned with the diadem. Remember ye this: That evil omen signifies short years (and) short days. Pursue ye this substitute!" The one shkel of silver, the one shkel of gold, the one mina of copper, (25) the one mina of tin, the one mina of iron, the one mina of lead, all this is removed from his [body]. The one healthy prisoner is released, and he has him taken back to his country. The king submits to the waving ceremony, and afterward the king goes to bathe.

When it Dawns, the king submits to the waving ceremony and afterward he performs the "Ritual of the House" (and) the "Pure Ritual." When it is light, the king performs the "$[ ] Rite." (30) When he goes away he takes a bath and consecrates one . . . sheep to the Sun-god under the open sky.

Words [of . . . ] he speaks as follows: "Sun-god of Heaven, my lord! That omen which the Moon-god gave—if he found fault with me, accept ye, Sun-god of Heaven and (all) ye gods, these substitutes that I have given (35) and let me go free! To (appearing before) thee, I might prefer appearing before die Sun-goddess of Arinna." (reverse) [Afterward] he goes into [—] and [consecrates one . . . sheep] to Eresh-kigal. He prays as follows: "Eresh-kigal, my lady! That omen which the Moon-god gave,—if (5) he found fault with me, (remember) that the Gods of Heaven have delivered me into thy hands. Take these substitutes that I have handed over to thee and let me go free! I want to see the Sun-god of Heaven with mine eyes!" They offer pieces of raw and cooked meat, (10) and the king arranges for cups at his own expense.

When night comes, he consecrates one . . . sheep for the Moon-god under the open sky and speaks as follows: "Moon-god, my lord! That omen which thou gavest—if thou foundest fault with me, (remember that) thou didst deliver me (15) into the hands of the gods of the nether world and Eresh-kigal. I made my peace with the gods of the nether world (and) handed over substitutes (to them). Take those, but let me go free! To (appearing before) thee I might prefer (appearing before) the Sun-god of Heaven." The king offers pieces of raw and cooked meat (20) and arranges for cups.

(end of text lost)

Ritual for the Erection of a House

Text: KBo, iv, 1 and its duplicates KUB, 11, 2 and KUB, ix, 33. Literature: M. Witzel, Hethitische Keilinschriften-Urunden (= Keilinschriften Studien, 4 [1924]), 76-87.

(oververse)

When they rebuild a temple that had been destroyed or (build) a new house in a different place and they lay the foundations, they deposit under the foundations as follows: 1 mina of refined copper, 4 bronze pegs, 1 small iron hammer. In the center, at the place of the [ura]ì (5) he digs up the ground. He deposits the copper therein, nails it down on all sides with the pegs and afterward hits it with the hammer. While doing so he speaks as follows:

"Just as this copper is secured, (as) moreover it is firm, even so let this temple be secure! (10) Let it be firm upon the dark earth!"

He mentions the name of the sacrificer: "He who built this temple, let him be firm before the gods likewise! Graciously let him draw upon himself before the gods (the potency of) this house for enduring life! "Just as the four corner(stones) of the house are firm on the ground (15) and as they will not be overturned, even so let the sacrificer's well-being not overturn in future before the gods! Graciously, O god, let him draw upon himself before the gods (the potency of) this house for life, good health (and) vigor on the part of the lordship over the Hatti land (and) on the part of the throne of kingship!"

Beneath the four corner(stones), each one of them, (20) he deposits as follows: 1 foundation stone of silver, 1 foundation stone of gold, 1 foundation stone of lapis, 1 foundation stone of marble, 1 foundation stone of iron, 1 foundation stone of copper, 1 foundation stone of bronze, 1 foundation stone of diorite. The four corner(stones) are (each) provided with these in the same way.

Beneath the four J[ura]ì, each one of them, (25) he deposits as follows: he deposits 1 [tiraty]ì of silver, 1 J[ura]ì of gold, 1 [urakjì]ì of lapis, 1 [urakì]ì of jasper, 1 [ura]ì of iron, 1 [tiraty]ì of diorite, 1 [ura]ì of copper, 1 J[uraklt]ì of bronze. While doing so he speaks as follows:

"See! This temple which we have built for thee, the god (he mentions the name of the god for whom they build it)—it is not we (30) who have (really) built it, all the gods have built it.

"The gods—those (who are) craftsmen—have built it. Telepinus has laid the foundations. The walls above them, Ea, the king of wisdom, has built (them). Timber and stones, all the mountains have brought (them). But the mortar, the goddesses have brought (it).

(35) "They have laid foundations of silver and gold; the gold they brought from Birunduma, the silver they brought from. . . . The lapis they brought from Mount Takniyara.¹ The marble they brought from the country of Kanisha.² The jasper they brought from the country of Elam.² The diorite they brought from the earth. The black iron of heaven they brought from heaven. Copper (and) bronze (40) they brought from Mount Taggata in Aššû."²

"See! beneath the foundations they have deposited gold for (firm) founding. Just as the gold is firm, (as) moreover it is clean (and) strong, (as) the mind of the gods is set on it, and (as) it is dear to god and man, even so let the gods be set on this temple (and) let it be dear (to them)!

(45) "Let the sacrificer, and (his) children and children's children likewise be dear to the gods (and gain) enduring life by their grace!"

9 props of silver, each one 1 shekel of weight; 9 props of gold, each one 1 shekel in weight; 9 props of iron; 9 props of bronze, (reverse) Beneath the cult stand he deposits 4 props, among them one of silver, one of gold, one of iron (and) one of bronze. At the front J[uraklt]ì in the center he deposits 4 props in the same manner. Also against the [ura]ì, on the right (and) the left sides, on either he deposits 4 props in the same manner.

(5) Also at the four corner (stones), at each corner-stone, he deposits 4 props in the same manner.

A lion of gold weighing 1 shekel, 2 pairs of oxen of iron, yoked under a yoke of silver, every ox weighing 1 shekel,—beneath them are plates, and two oxen stand on one plate, (10) (while) the other two oxen stand on (the other) plate.

The weight of the plate is not laid down, nor is the weight of the yoke by which the oxen are yoked laid down. He deposits them under the front [ura]ì in the center.

Beneath the cult stand he deposits 1 cult stand of silver, 1 cult stand of gold, 15) 1 cult stand of lapis, 1 cult stand of jasper, 1 cult stand of iron, 1 cult stand of copper, 1 cult stand of bronze, 1 cult stand of marble, 1 cult stand of diorite.

Beneath the heart (he deposits) 1 heart of silver weighing 1 shekel, 1 heart of gold weighing 1 shekel, 1 heart of lapis, 1 heart of jasper, 1 heart of iron, 1 heart of marble, 1 heart of iron, 1 heart of bronze, 1 heart of diorite.

(20) 4 props, among them one of silver, one of gold, one of iron (and) one of bronze, each one weighing 1 shekel (are also deposited there). The hearts made of stone, each one also weighs 1 shekel.

Beneath the door (he deposits) 1 door of silver weighing 1 shekel, 1 door of gold weighing 1 shekel, 1 door of lapis weighing 1 shekel, 1 door of jasper weighing 1 shekel, (25) 1 door of iron weighing 1 shekel, i door of bronze weighing i shekel, i door of marble weighing i shekel, i door of diorite also weighing i shekel.

2 ... of bronze he deposits in the gate; their weight is not laid down.

16 ..., among them 4 of gold, 4 of silver, (30) 4 of iron (and) 4 of bronze (are also deposited); their weight is not laid down.

Ritual for the Erection of a New Palace

Text: KUB, xxix, 1 and its duplicates KUB, xxix, 2 and 3.

[When the king] builds [a new palace and when the time comes for roofing it] with timber, [they speak as follows:] "By consulting [the Sun-god] and the Storm-god they have found out [that it is the right time for roofing the palace which] you are building."

A. Erection of the Palace

Plastering the Walls

(5) When you have finished [building] the palace, and [when you plaster (it) on the inside, plaster (it) with long years [(and) plaster] (it) [with well-being]! [When you plaster (it)] on the outside, plaster (it) with awe, plaster (it) [with lordliness]!

Procuring Timber for the Roof

(5) The king says: "What are they doing?" That one (i.e. the Eagle) answers him: "She® is holding a distaff; they are holding mirrors (and) combs.

(5) The Throne says: "What are they doing?" That one (i.e. the Eagle) answers him: "The feminine is chosen because of the feminine implement.

(50) When the king makes his entry into the house, the Throne hails the Eagle: "Go! I am sending thee to the Sea. When thou gettest there, drive out of field and woods those who still remain there!"

(ii) That one (i.e. the Eagle) answers: "I have driven (them) out. Only Isdustaya (and) Papaya who are the eternal gods of the nether world still remain there crouching."

(5) The king says to the Throne: "Come! Let us go! But stay thou behind the mountains! Thou must not become my rival, thou must not become my rival! Remain my [equal] (and) my friend!"

(10) The king says to the Throne: "Come! Let us go to the Mountain! I, the king, will come (and) put steel and iron in your heart."

(10) The king says: "Soothe his eyes! Keep sickness from him! Keep the heart-sickness (from him)!"

(50) When the king makes his entry into the house, the Throne hails the Eagle: "Go! I am sending thee to the Sea. When thou gettest there, drive out of field and woods those who still remain there!"

(5) The king says to the Throne: "Cut it down, cut (it) down!" And the Throne answers the King: "Cut it down, cut (it) down! The Sun-god and the Storm-god have placed it at thy disposal"

Charm Spoken over the Trees

"Now come ye up from that country of yours! The Storm-god has placed you (40) at the King’s disposal. They will assign work to you. He will procure (experts) for you and they will pronounce charms over you.

"Whatever is in your heart, cast it out! If (it is) a flaw, remove it! If (it is) an evil (45) .. , cast it out! If (it is) a curse, cast it out!

"If weakness is in your heart, or (if) the ailment of the sun is in your heart, sweep it out! I, the Labarnas, the King, will come (and) put steel and iron in your heart."

B. Entry into the New Palace

(50) When the king makes his entry into the house, the Throne hails the Eagle: "Go! I am sending thee to the Sea. When thou gettest there, drive out of field and woods those who still remain there!"

(50) When the king makes his entry into the house, the Throne hails the Eagle: "Go! I am sending thee to the Sea. When thou gettest there, drive out of field and woods those who still remain there!"

(50) When the king makes his entry into the house, the Throne hails the Eagle: "Go! I am sending thee to the Sea. When thou gettest there, drive out of field and woods those who still remain there!"
stay in thy place! Thou shalt not raise the great one! Mount Tudhaliya, stay in thy place! Thou shalt not raise the great one!

"Mount [Sidjduwen]9 (and) Mount Piskurunuwa, stay ye in your places! Ye shall not raise the great one!"

(30) [When] the king goes to the mountain to raise the great Sun, he10 performs various charms (and) incantations (all of die general kind): "Such (and) such a one has taken an ailment away from the king."

"Affliction this one has taken away. Concern this one has taken away. Fear (35) this one has taken away. Heart-sickness this one has taken away. Sickness this one has taken away. Old age this one has taken away. Vigor this one has given back to him."

"Come thou, Eagle! Go forth! One of my charms (40) has failed. Go to the ghats11 and bring a piece of crockery!"

"Upon it put together a lion's tail (and) a panther's tail! Keep hold of them!"

"Twine them together and make them one. Place them at man's heart. (45) Let the king's heart and soul be reunited!"

"Let the Sun-god and the Storm-god enter into accord with the king! Let their word become one! Entrust ye, Sun-god and Storm-god, the land to the king! (50) They have restored his years, they have restored his awesomeness."

"They have made his frame of steel.12 They have made his head of iron. They have made his eyes those of an eagle. They have made his teeth those of a lion."

(iii) "Let Telepinus come and open [the storehouse, take out wine, nine casks, and bring (it) to the Mountain, all gods being assembled on the Mountain! They will make the king welcome (5) and give him their approval.

"The Sun-god and the Storm-god have taken care of the king. They have renewed his strength and set no limits to his years."

"They have strewn leppit and euwan and crushed it (saying) (10): 'He who plots evil against the king, let the gods abandon him to an evil fate! Let them crush him!'"

C. PROVISIONS FOR THE WORKMEN

In whatever town he13 builds a palace, the carpenter who goes to the mountain to cut the beams (15) receives from the palace one bull, three sheep, three jugs of wine, one jug of marmunawant14 ten wageliar loaves, thirty "tooth loaves," and fifty "ration loaves."

When the carpenter goes to cut the ridgepole (and) the rafters, he receives from the palace (20) twenty-five "tooth loaves" and fifty "ration loaves."

When they lay the foundations, they receive from the palace one bull, one cow, and ten sheep. They sacrifice the bull to the Storm-god, and the one cow to the Sun-goddess of Arinna.

(25) They sacrifice the sheep, everyone for another deity. Loaves and wine they receive from the palace.

When they stretch the beams across, they act in the same way again.

The Festival of the Warrior-God1

Text: KBo, iv. 9. From v 9 on KUB, xxv, 1 is a duplicate, beginning with vi 30, also KUB, ii. 5. Literature: J. Friedrich, Aus dem hethitischen Schrifttum, 2 (= AO, xxi/2 [1925]), 5 ff.; A. Goetze, Kulturgeschichte Kleinasiens (1933), 155.

(The preserved text begins in the middle of a day.)

The king remains seated. "waqatnata"15 is called, but he does not perform any libation. Then the king leaves the temple of the War-god.

(5) Two palace servants (and) one major-domo march before him. The king goes to the halentuu/a house. And if the king is so inclined, he makes a circumambulation. Just as he pleases, so (10) he does; nothing definite is laid down (about it).

Afterward they sweep the temple of the War-god. They place the raw meat of a bull, of cows, of sheep and of goats in front of the cult stand (15) before the god (all) in one and the same place.

Two silver basins for libations filled with wine they place on the right-hand side and the left-hand side of the meat.

(20) They announce: "talila." The cult servants set out the bread baskets.

The cooks put cooked meat upon the bread baskets.

(25) The staff-men set up "long chairs." The king (and) the queen put on their ritual dress in the halentuu/a house. The forecourt of the guardsmen has previously been opened and all the noblemen, (30) palace servants and guardsmen are waiting there.

Then the king (and) the queen come forth from the halentuu/a house. (35) Two palace servants (and) one guardsman march before the king.

The noblemen, the palace servants and the guardsmen walk behind the king.

The entertainers play the arkanmi16 (40) the huhupal (and) the galgalturi17 before (and) behind the king.

... stand beside the king; they dance and play tambourines.

(45) Other entertainers are clad in red garments. They stand beside the king, hold the hands up and

---

9 The restoration of the name is quite uncertain.
10 The officiating priest, or perhaps the king.
11 The place where the dead are cremated.
12 Literally: tin.
13 The king.
14 An alcoholic beverage.
15 His name in Hittite is unknown; if the Hattic name is to be substituted as is likely it would be Wurunkatte, i.e. "king of the land."
16 The meaning of this and the following cultic calls—probably in the Hattic language—is not known.
17 Three musical instruments.
whirl around on the spot; (50) they also recite psalmodies.

(ii) Before the king (and) the queen enter the temple of the War-god, entertainers, psalmodists (and) priests (5) have come in and taken their places.

Then the king (and) the queen enter the temple of the War-god. The king arrives at the gateway and the dancers (10) whirl around once.

The king (and) the queen halt in the forecourt of the temple of the War-god.

The major-domo (and) the priest of god Inar—he holds a coat and the priest of god Inar (15) holds some tuhhuellar * Two palace servants bring to the king (and) the queen water for their hands. The king (and) the queen rinse their hands. The chief of the palace servants hands them a linen and they wipe their hands.

(20) The priest of god Inar presents [the tuhhuellar] * to the king. The king... /

The chief of the palace servants presents to the king the pennant of a gold lance (25) and he wipes his hands.

A palace servant takes the tuhhuellar * from the priest of god Inar. The priest of god Inar pays homage to the king.

The palace servant (30) presents the tuhhuellar * to the queen. The queen... 5

Then the palace servant hands the tuhhuellar * back to the priest of god Inar. The chief of the palace servants (35) hands to the king the pennant of a gold lance and the queen wipes her hands.

Then the king (and) the queen enter the temple of the War-god. They prostrate themselves once before the god. (40) The entertainer recites the |ital calls.

The king takes his stand at the throne, but the queen enters the inner temple.

The foreman of the cooks brings |attapalal cuts. (45) He puts down one portion before the throne and before the War-god; he puts down one at the hearth, one at the throne, one at the window, one at the bolt of the door, furthermore (50) he puts down one by the side of the hearth.

The foreman of the cooks presents a libation vessel with wine to the king. The king touches it with the hand, (iii) The foreman of the cooks pours out three libations before the throne and three for the War-god.

The foreman of the cooks and the foreman of the table-men (5) sanctify themselves.

The foreman of the cooks pours out one libation for the hearth, one for the throne, one for the window, one for the bolt of the door. Furthermore (10) he pours out one libation by the side of the hearth.

Also for the statue of Hattusilis® he pours out one libation.

The king prostrates himself; the entertainer recites (15), the |ital calls.* (See Addenda).

Then they drive out the entertainer, the liturgist, the psalmodist (25) and the |ital.

The king (and) the queen sit down on the throne. Then a palace servant brings in the pennant of a gold lance and the kfdmuV He hands the pennant of the gold lance (30) to the king, but the |almul he places on the throne at the king’s right.

This (palace servant) also leaves. He takes his stand before the tarkanzipal holding a gold lance (35) and calls kasmellar.

Then the great major-domo enters holding a gold lance and also holding a staff of luruhha wood. (40) He takes his place opposite the king.

Two palace servants bring to the king (and) the queen water for (washing) their hands in a basin. The chief [of the palace] servants [holds a linen in readiness] behind them.

(5) They leave and the great major-domo also leaves. A palace servant brings a gold lance and a mu|ar * He proceeds to place (it) on the throne (10) beneath the mart... at the king’s right, and he leaves (again). He takes his stand over the bread baskets (set out) for the palace servants.

The great major-domo comes forward (15) and takes his stand opposite the king. Two palace servants put two pieces of linen cloth upon the knees of the king (and) the queen.

The palace servants leave again and take their stand (20) over the bread baskets (set out) for palace servants.

The great major-domo gives a sign with (his) gold lance, and calls "milla." He then brings the gold lance and puts it at the king’s left (25) against the wall.

Then the foreman of the table-men brings in a sacred table. Three guardsmen walk at the right side of the table; they hold gold lances (30) and three staffs of luruhha -wood.

The great major-domo comes forth to face the table and stands behind the foreman of the table-men. He marches before him and gets hold of the table from underneath (35) the foreman of the tablemen lifts it.

The chief of the palace servants and all the palace servants walk at the right-hand side of the table. The foreman of the table-men (40) sets up the table for the king. The chief of the palace servants leaves (again) and takes his stand over the bread baskets. All the palace servants squat down.

(45) The great major-domo and the chief of the palace servants leave. The great major-domo stands behind the hearth and takes his place over the bread baskets (set out) for the great major-domo. But the foreman of the table-men (50) leaves.

The three guardsmen who had marched at the right of the table, leave (again), (v) They squat down over their bread baskets.

A single guardsman takes from them the lances which they hold (5) and proceeds to put them with the gold lance of the great major-domo against the wall. That (guardsman) squats down over his bread basket.

A herald comes forward (10) and the table-men of first rank take their stand.

The sweeper brings one sweet loaf. He hands it to a palace servant. The palace servant hands it to the chief of the palace servants. But the chief of the palace servants breaks it on a gold lance for god Inar.

(15) The chief of the palace servants hands it back to the palace servant. The palace servant hands it back to the sweeper.

But in the forecourt zeriyalli covered with linen cloths have been standing ready beforehand.

(20) A herald goes in front of the princes and seats them.

Then the herald leaves (again) and marches in front of the cooks of higher rank. The cooks of higher rank take their stand.

Then the herald leaves (again) for another time (25) and marches before the holy priests, the Hittite EN (and) the mother-of-god of (god) Halkis and seats them.

Then the great major-domo goes out to the forecourt and says to the herald: "zinar zinar."

But the herald goes before the gate (35) and says to the musicians: "zinar zinar? Then the musicians lift the ishtar instruments. The herald marches in front of the musicians who carry the ishtar instruments in.

(40) They take their place in front of the tarlanzipai. The liturgists, the entertainers, the psalmodists and the ^itoZ-priests walk with the same ishtar instruments. (45) They go and take their seats.

The cooks serve "pot," water (and) meat. They distribute cold fat.

The herald marches before the ubarus, the master of the zaharttil of the inner temple, and the dignitaries and seats them.

(vi) When the "pots" are distributed, the great major-domo announces the marnuwuani to the king: "Shall they serve the marnuwuani?" and they serve the marnuwuani to the congregation.

(5) The king throws the linen away. If he throws it toward the side where the palace servants have squatted down, the palace servants take it. But if (10) he throws it toward the side where the guardsmen have squatted down, the guardsmen take it. They hand it to the table-men.

The king gives a sign with his eyes. The sweepers (15) sweep the floor.

The great major-domo calls to the palace servants: "milla." Two palace servants bring to the king (and) the queen water for (washing) the hands in a golden basin. (20) The chief of the palace servants holds a linen ready behind them. The king (and) the queen rinse their hands. The chief of the palace servants hands them the linen and they wipe their hands. They leave (again).

(25) Then the cupbearer of squatting comes forth. The great cupbearer and a palace servant (acting as) cupbearer give to the king (and) the queen (the amount of) marnuwuani (necessary) for (the) drinking (ceremony).

(30) The king (and) the queen drink in standing position (god) Tauri. The great Ishtar instruments play, but they do not sing and there are no sacrificial loaves.

(4) In the following, king and queen "drink" various gods in slightly varying ways.)

Then the cupbearer of squatting comes forth. The great major-domo enters and announces to the king that the "dog-men" will clad themselves with their proper vestments and deliver . . . , silver (and) gold.

The table-man (selects) two tunnaptal loaves weighing 2 seah, (50) one of them white, the other red, and brings them from the table. Upon them lies an open cheese. He places them before the window.

The herald marches before the smiths. (60) Then the smiths (iv) bring in two silver heads of bulls. In front of them marches the cupbearer in his (ritual) dress.

(4 mutilated sections)

(21) The cupbearer seizes [the . . . (and)] the horns of the two silver bull heads and pours out a libation by the side of the hearth. They carry them (25) out (again).

The table-man takes the tunnaptal loaves [from the table] and they carry those out (again).

Then he fills the two silver bull heads with wine. The smiths (iv) [The . . . (and) the . . . ] distribute the tunnaptal loaves.

(5) Then the king and the queen "drink" more gods.

(v 17) When the psalmist says so, the citizens and the congregation pay homage to the king once.

(20) The cupbearer presents once an ilgaruh vessel with wine.

The cupbearer brings from outside one sacrificial loaf

13 The same cultic call as above; see n.10.
14 KBo, iv, 9 ends here.
15 KUB, xxv, 1 iii 41 if.
16 KUB, xxv, 1 iv 4-20.
17 The goddess of grain.
18 An alcoholic beverage.
(made) of leppit weighing 3 seah. (25) The king breaks it, takes a bite and then they take it out (again).

The ubarûs pay homage to the king three times and sit down.

(30) Then the cupbearer of squatting comes forth.

The great major-domo (and) the cupbearer—he holds his coat in his hands, but the cupbearer (35) holds a silver cup with wine. He offers that to the king.

The cupbearer hands the silver cup with wine to the king. The great major-domo (and) the cupbearer—he holds his coat in his hands, but the cupbearer holds a silver cup with wine. He offers that to the king.

The cupbearer hands the silver cup with wine to the king. The great major-domo (and) the cupbearer—he holds his coat in his hands, but the cupbearer holds a silver cup with wine. He offers that to the king.

(40) Then the cupbearer of squatting comes forth.

The great major-domo (and) the cupbearer—he holds his coat in his hands, but the cupbearer (35) holds a silver cup with wine. He offers that to the king.

The cupbearer hands the silver cup with wine to the king. The great major-domo (40) walks out backwards, while his eyes are directed toward the king.

He takes his stand beside the hearth.

(45) The great major-domo (and) the cupbearer—he discards his coat, and the cupbearer pays homage to the king. Then the great major-domo takes his coat up again.

(50) He then brings it to the king. Then the cupbearer sets up the cup for the king. The great major-domo seizes it (and the coat) with his left.

(55) Then they go back and take their stand beside the hearth. The cupbearer squats down by the side of the hearth, (vi) The great major-domo leaves. Then the ZABBARDIB enters to squat down (with) the cupbearer. He takes the silver cup with wine away, (5) and they take it out (again).

Then the cult servants bring in a bread basket, . . . (and) cooked meat. (10) They offer it to the king.

The cupbearer who has been squatting beside the hearth gets up and pays homage to the king. (15) He takes the bread basket and he carries it out (again).

The herald makes the ubarûs and the congregation rise (21) and they stand.

Two palace servants take the linen from the knees of the king (and) the queen.

(25) The king (and) the queen drink in standing position the . . . Sun-god. The liturgists sing, They play the ar\(ammi\) the galgalturi and the huhupal (30) and sing psalmodies.

The cupbearer brings one sacrificial loaf of flour weighing a parisu and 3 upnu from the outside. He gives them to the king and the king breaks them. Then he takes them out (again).
V. Hymns and Prayers
Egyptian Hymns and Prayers

TRANSLATOR: JOHN A. WILSON

A Hymn to Amon-Re

Egypt's world position under her Empire produced strong tendencies toward centralization and unification of Egyptian religion, with universalism and with syncretism of the gods. The following hymn antedates the Amarna Revolution. The imperial god Amon-Re is here viewed as supreme and as the force which creates and sustains life.

Papyrus Boulaq 17 in the Cairo Museum dates from the Eighteenth Dynasty (1550-1350 B.C.). It was published by A. Mariette, Les Papyrus égyptiens du Musée de Boulaq (Paris, 1871-76), 11, Pis. xi-xiii. A facsimile of six columns is in G. Moller, Hieratische Lesestücke 11 (Leipzig, 1927), 33-34. The text was studied by E. Gribaut, Hymne h Ammon-Ra (Paris, 1874). The manuscript is divided by marks of pause into four stanzas. Selim Hassan, Hymnes religieux du moyen empire (Cairo, 1928), 157-93, pointed out that British Museum statue 40959, which has been dated to the Thirteenth to Seventeenth Dynasties (1775-1575 B.C.), carries this hymn in broken context. Translated by Erman, LAE, 282-88.

ADORATION of Amon-Re, the Bull Residing in Heliopolis, chief of all gods, the good god, the beloved, who gives life to all that is warm and to all good cattle.

Hail to thee, Amon-Re,
Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, Presiding over Karnak, Bull of His Mother, Presiding over His Fields!
Far-reaching of stride, presiding over Upper Egypt,
Lord of the Madjoi and ruler of Punt,
Eldest of heaven, first-born of earth,
Lord of what is, enduring in all things, enduring in all things. (5)
UNIQUE IN HIS NATURE LIKE THE FLUID of the gods,
The goodly bull of the Ennead, chief of all gods,
The lord of truth and father of the gods.
Who made mankind and created the beasts,
Made herbage, and gave life to cattle.
The goodly daemon whom Ptah made,

(""

The goodly beloved youth to whom the gods give praise,
Who made what is below and what is above,
Who illuminates the Two Lands
And crosses the heavens in peace:
The King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Re, the triumphant,
Chief of the Two Lands,
Great of strength, lord of reverence,

The chief one, who made the entire earth.
MORE DISTINGUISHED IN NATURE THAN any (other) god,
In whose beauty the gods rejoice,
To whom is given jubilation in the Per-wer,
Who is given ceremonial appearance in the Per-nezer, Whose fragrance the gods love, when he comes from Punt,
Rich in perfume, when he comes down (from)
Madjoi,
The Beautiful of Face who comes (from) God's Land. (5)
The gods FAWN (at) his feet,
According as they recognize his majesty as their lord,
The lord of fear, great of dread,
Rich in might, terrible of appearances,
Flourishing in offerings and making provisions.
Jubilation to thee who made the gods,
Raised the heavens and laid down the ground!

THE END. (I)

He who awakes in health, Min-Amon, Lord of eternity, who made everlastingness,
Lord of praise, presiding over [the Ennead],
Firm of horns, beautiful of face,
Lord of the uraeus-serpent, lofty of plumes,
Beautiful of diadem, and lofty of White Crown.
The serpent-coil and the Double Crown, these are before him,
The aromatic gum which is in the palace,
The Double Crown, the head-cloth, and the Blue Crown.
Beautiful of face, when he receives the atef-crown,
He whom the crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt love,
Lord of the Double Crown, when he receives the ames-staff,
Lord of the me-es-scepter, holding the flail,
The goodly ruler, CROWNED WITH THE WHITE CROWN,
The lord of rays, who makes brilliance,
To whom the gods give thanksgiving,
Who extends his arms to him whom he loves,
(But) his enemy is consumed by a flame.
It is his Eye that overthrows the rebels,
That sends its spear into him that sucks up Nun,

1 As sun-god, Amon-Re recreated himself every day.
2 Regions to the south and southeast of Egypt.
3 Written as though Amon-Re were a former pharaoh.
4 The Per-wer, "Great House," was the religious capital of Upper Egypt at el-Kab; the Per-nezer was the counterpart for Lower Egypt at Buto.
5 "God's Land" was the east generally, the land of the rising sun. The countries south and east of Egypt were the incense-bearing lands.
6 Amon had strong derivative ties with the old god of procreation Min of Koptos.
(iv)
And makes the fiend disgorge what he has swallowed.8

HAILE TO THEE, O Re, lord of truth!
Whose shrine is hidden the lord of the gods,
Khepri in the midst of his barque,
Who gave commands, and the gods came into being.10

(v)
In whose beauty the gods rejoice;
Their hearts live when they see him.

THE END.

O Re, ADORED IN KARNAK,
Great of appearances in the House of the Benben,18
The Heliopolitan, lord of the New Moon Feast,
For whom the Sixth-Day and Quarter Month feasts are celebrated.14
The Sovereign—life, prosperity, health!—lord of all gods;
[They] behold him in the midst of the horizon,
The overlord of men of the silent land Whose name is hidden from his children,
In this his name of Amon.16

HAILE TO THEE, WHO ART IN PEACE!
Lord of joy, terrible of appearances,
Lord of the uraeus-serpent, lofty of plumes, (5)
Beautiful of diadem, and lofty of White Crown.
The gods love to see thee
With the Double Crown fixed upon thy brow.
The love of thee is spread throughout the Two Lands,
When thy rays shine forth in the eyes.
The good of the people is thy arising:
The cattle grow languid when thou shinest.
The beauty of thee carries away hearts;
The sweetness of thee is in the northern sky. (1)

Who spends the night wakeful, while all men are asleep,
Seeking benefit for his creatures.
Amon, enduring in all things, Atum and Har-akhti—
Praises are thine, when they all say:
"Jubilation to thee, because thou weariest thyself with us!"
Salaams to thee, because thou didst create us!"

HAILE TO THEE FOR ALL BEASTS!
Jubilation to thee for every foreign country—
To the height of heaven, to the width of earth,
To the depth of the Great Green Sea!
The gods are bowing down to thy majesty
And exalting the might of him who created them,
Rejoicing at the approach of him who begot them.
They say to thee: "Welcome in peace!
Father of the fathers of all the gods,
Who raised the heavens and laid down the ground,
WHO MADE WHAT IS AND CREATED WHAT EXISTS;
Sovereign—life, prosperity, health!—and chief of the gods!

We praise thy might, according as thou didst make us.

Let (us) act for thee, because thou brought us forth.
We give thee thanksgiving because thou hast wearied thyself with us!"

HAILE TO THEE, WHO MADE ALL THAT IS!
Lord of truth and father of the gods,
Who made mortals and created beasts,

8 The Eye of the sun repulsed the Apophis-dragon, which tried to check the journey of the sun, cf. pp. 11-12 above.
9 A play on Amon and amen "hidden, secret."
10 A play on Khepri and hishep "come into being."
11 Siu "Perception," and Hu "Authoritative Command," were personified forces of creative rule.
12 Nun was the primeval waters out of which life came. "Every eye" is figurative for "everybody."
13 The sacred pyramidion stone in Heliopolis.
14 The relation of the sun-god to these moon festivals is not very clear.
15 The necropolis, Or, "men who are silent," i.e. submissive?
16 Sec n.9 above.
17 A reference to the myth that mortals came into being as the tears of the creator-god, gods as his spittle, cf. p. 6 above.
18 Since he was alone at creation, he needed many hands for his work.
Lord of the grain,
Who made (also) the living of the beasts of the desert.
Amon, the bull beautiful of countenance,
The beloved in Karnak,
Great of appearances in the House of the Benben,
Taking again the diadem in Heliopolis,
Who judges the Two in the great broad hall,

THE SOLITARY SOLE ONE, WITHOUT HIS PEER,
Presiding over Karnak,
The Heliopolitan, presiding over his Ennead,
Presiding over Karnak,
The horizon-dweller, Horus of the east,
And living on truth every day.

THE SOLITARY SOLE ONE, WITHOUT HIS PEER,
Genuine lapis lazuli for love of him,
From whom the desert creates silver and gold,
Presiding over Karnak,
And fresh myrrh for thy nostrils—

With many names, unknown in number,
The sole king, like the

THE END.

The gods of Babylon are in jubilation,
They who are in the shrines are salaaming,
WHEN THEY SEE HIM RICH IN HIS MIGHT.
The daemon of the gods,
The righteous one, Lord of Karnak,
In this thy name of Maker of Righteousness;
The lord of provisions, bull of offerings.
In this thy name of Amon, Bull of His Mother;
Maker of all mankind,
Creator and maker of all that is,

(x)

In this thy name of Atum-Khepri,
Great falcon, festive of bosom,
Beautiful of face, festive of breast,
Pleasing of form, lofty of plume,
On whose brow the two uraei flutter.
To whom the hearts of mankind make approach,
To whom the people turn about;
Who makes festive the Two Lands with his comings forth.

Hail to thee, Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands,
Whose city loves his rising!
IT HAS COME (TO ITS END) . . .

A Universalist Hymn to the Sun

The forces of empire and of international contacts were moving Egypt toward universalism and a partial approach to monotheism, even before the Amarna Revolution. One of the clearest expressions of the new spirit comes from a hymn to the sun-god on behalf of two brothers named Seth and Horus.

The date and provenience of the text are given in the facts that Seth and Horus were architects at Thebes under Amenhotep III (about 1413-1377 B.C.). The hymn occurs on two stelae, British Museum 826 and the badly broken Cairo 34051! The publications are Hieroglyphic Texts from Egyptian Stelae, &c., in the British Museum, VIII (ed. by I. E. S. Edwards; London, 1939), 22-25, Pl. xxii; A. Varille in BIFAO, xx (1942), 25-30; and the comments by J. S. F. Garnot in JEA, xxxv (1949), 69-88.1

Praising Amon, when he rises as Har-akhti, by the Overseer of the Works of Amon, Seth, and the Overseer of the Works of Amon, Horus. They say:

Hail to thee, beautiful Re of every day, who rises at dawn without ceasing, Khepri wearying (himself) with labor! Thy rays are in (one's) face, without one knowing it. Fine gold is not like the radiance of thee. Thou who hast constructed thyself, thou didst fashion

1 As supreme god, he presided over the trial between Horus and Seth. cf. pp. 14-17 above.
2 cf. the myth of the names of Re, pp. 12-14 above.
3 Sun and moon.
4 At dawn apes warm themselves in the sun's rays.
5 cf. n. 8 above.
6 cf. n. 8 above.
7 Amon Re Har-akhti, himself a syncretic deity, is greeted as the "sole lord" of universal sway, but this does not preclude the worship of other deities. In the scenes and texts surrounding the main inscription, the brothers give service to Osiris, Anubis, Amon-Re, Mut, Khonsu, Hat-Hor in two forms, Re Har-akhti, Sokar, Isis, and the deified queen Ahmes Nefert-iri.
8 "Thou who hast Ptah'ed thyself," a play on the name of Ptah, the fashioner-god. The passages from "Thy rays . . ." to . . . not shaped occur also in the hymn to the rising sun, the 15th chapter of the Book thy body, a shaper who was (himself) not shaped; unique in his nature, passing eternity, the distant one, under whose guidance are millions of ways, just as thy radiance is like the radiance of heaven and thy color glistens more than its surface.

When thou crasest the sky, all faces behold thee, (but) when thou departest, thou art hidden from their faces. (5) Thou presentest thyself daily at dawn. Steadfast is thy sailing which carries thy majesty. A brief day—and thou racest a course of millions and hundreds-thousands of leagues. Every day under thee is an instant, and when it passes, thou settest So also thou hast completed the hours of the night: thou hast regulated it without a pause coming in thy labors.

All eyes see through thee, and they have no fulfillment when thy majesty sets. Thou bestirrest thyself early to rise at dawn. Thy rays open the wakeful eyes. When thou settest in Manu then they sleep in the manner of death.

Hail to thee, sun of the daytime, creator of all and maker of their living! Great falcon, bright of plumage, scarab eepee who has elevated himself, self-created, who was not born! Horus, the first-born in the midst of the sky-goddess, for whom they make jubilation (10) at rising, as well as at his setting! The fashioner of that which the soil produces, the Khnum and Amon of mankind. He who seizes upon the Two Lands, (from) great to small. A mother of profit to gods and men; a patient craftsman, greatly wearying (himself) as their maker, without number; valiant herdsman, driving his catde, their refuge and the maker of their living.

Runner, racer, courser! Khepri, whose birth was distinct, whose beauty was upraised in the body of the sky-goddess. He who illuminates the Two Lands with his disc, the primordial one of the Two Lands, who made himself and who beheld what he would make.

The sole lord, who reaches the ends of the lands every day, being (thus) one who sees them that tread thereon. He who rises in heaven, (his) form being the sun. He makes the seasons by months, heat when he wishes, and cold when he wishes. He makes the body lax, or he gathers it together. Every land chatters at his rising every day, in order to praise him.

Amon as the Sole God

The following hymns have been characterized as monotheistic in spirit. They come from the Nineteenth Dynasty, subsequent to the Amarna Revolution. They are extracts from a long document in praise of the imperial god Amon-Re of Thebes and treat that deity as the sole god, or, perhaps, as the first principle and the sole god of immediate attention.

The bibliography for Leyden Papyrus I 350 was given on p. 8 above.

HUNDREDTH STANZA.

The first to come into being in the earliest times, Amon, who came into being at the beginning, so that his mysterious nature is unknown. No god came into being before him; there was no other (iv 10) god with him, so that he might tell his form. He had no mother, after whom his name might have been made. He had no father who had begotten him and who might have said: "This is I!" Building his own egg, a daemon mysterious of birth, who created his (own) beauty, the divine god who came into being by himself. All (other) gods came into being after he began himself.

TWO-HUNDREDTH STANZA.

Mysterious of form, glistening of appearance, the marvelous god of many forms. All (other) gods boast of him, to magnify themselves through his beauty, according as he is divine. Re himself is united with his body. He is the great one who is in Heliopolis. He is called Ta-tenen, and Amon who came forth from Nun, for he leads the people. Another of his forms is the Ogdoad. The procreator of the (15) primeval gods, who brought Re to birth; he completed himself as Atum," a single body with him. He is the All-Lord, the beginning of that which is. His soul, they say, is that which is in heaven. It is he who is in the underworld and presides over the East; his soul is in heaven, his body is in the West, and his statue is in Hermopolis, heralding his appearances.

One is Amon, hiding himself from them, concealing himself from the (other) gods, so that his (very) color is unknown. He is far from heaven, he is absent from the Underworld, (so that) no gods know his true form. His image is not displayed in writings. No one bears witness to him . . . He is too mysterious that his majesty might be disclosed, he is too great that (men) should ask about him, too powerful that he might be known. (20) Instandy (one) falls in a death of violence at the utterance of his mysterious name, unwittingly or wittingly. No (other) god knows how to call him by it, the Soul who hides his name, according as he is mysterious.

1 In the papyrus the 100th stanza is iv 9-11, the 200th is iv 12-21, the 300th iv 21-26, and the 600th v 16-vi 1.
2 The other gods are proud to be subsumed into his being.
3 Atum.
4 The procreator-god of Memphis.
5 The "Eight," the precreation gods, including the abysmal waters, Nun.
6 Pun: tern "complete," and Atum.
7 The statue was not the god himself, but gave opportunity for his appearances at a cult-seat of his.
8 His secret name carries the blight of awful holiness, cf. pp. 12-14 above.
9 The word is Egyptian Aten.
10 The western mountain.
11 The gods' names carry a pun: "the hidden builder of mankind."
12 The picture is that of the apes who greet the warmth of the morning sun with jabberings and gesticulations.
13 The final 7 lines of the stela carry successive statements by the two brothers, Seth avows: "I am a just man, whose abomination is deceit, not content with any words of him who speaks equivocally—except for my brother, like unto me: I am content with his ideas, for he came forth from the womb together with me on that (same) day." Each twin emphasizes his good works for Amon, in asking benefits from that god.
THREE-HUNDREDTH STANZA.

All gods are three: Amon, Re, and Ptah, and there is no second to them.11 "Hidden" is his name as Amon,12 he is Re in face, and his body is Ptah. Their cities are on earth, abiding forever: Thebes, Heliopolis, and Memphis unto eternity.

A message is sent from heaven, is heard in Heliopolis, and is repeated in Memphis to the Fair of Face. It is composed in a despatch by the writing of Thoth, with regard to the City of Amon and their (right to) possess their property. The matter is answered in Thebes, and a statement is issued: "It belongs to the Ennead." Everything that issues from his mouth is (itself) Amon. The gods are established according to command because of him. (25) A message is sent: "It shall slay or shall let live. Life and death are with it for everybody." Only he (is): Amon, with Re, and with Ptah together three. . . .

(SIX-HUNDREDTH STANZA).13

Perception is his heart, Command is his lips. . . . When he enters the two caverns which are under his feet, the Nile comes forth from the grotto under his sandals.18 His soul is Shu, his heart is Tefnut. He is Har-akhti who is in (v 20) the heaven; his right eye is day, his left eye is night. (Thus) he is one who leads people to every way. His body is Nun, and he who is in it is the Nile, giving birth to whatever is and making to live what exists. The warmth of him who leads is breath for every nostril.

Fate and Fortune are with him for everybody. His wife is the fertile field; he impregnates her, for his seed is the fruit tree, and his fluid is the grain (vi 1) . . . The faces of everybody are on him among men and gods. He is Perception.

The God Amon as Healer and Magician

A Nineteenth Dynasty manuscript contains poetical praise of the Theban god Amon-Re. In one stanza of this composition the god is treated as a divine physician and magical healer.

The bibliography for Leyden Papyrus I 359 was given on p. 8 above.

SEVENTIETH STANZA.2

He who dissolves evils and dispels ailments; a physician who heals the eye without having remedies, (iii 15) opening the eyes and driving away the squint; . . . Amon. Rescuing whom he desires, even though he be in the Underworld; who saves (a man) from Fate as his heart directs. To him belong eyes as well as ears wherever he goes, for the benefit of him whom he loves. Hearing the prayers of him who summons him, coming from afar in the completion of a moment for him who calls to him. He makes a lifetime long or shortens it. He gives more than that which is fated to him whom he loves.

Amon is a water-charm when his name is pronounced over the flood. The crocodile has no power when his name is pronounced. The breeze opposing the rebellious wind and turning (it) back. The sportive (wind) ceases at the (mere) thought (20) of him. Beneficial of mouth at the time of the melee, and a sweet breeze for him who calls to him. Rescuing the faint, the mild god, efficient of plans. He belongs to him who bends the back to him when he is in his vicinity. He is more effective than millions for him who sets him in his heart. One (man) is more valiant than hundred-thousands because of his name, the goodly protector in truth, successfully seizing upon his opportunity, without being opposed.

The Hymn to the Aton

The Pharaoh Amen-hotep IV broke with the established religion of Egypt and instituted the worship of the Aton, the sun disc as the source of life. "The Amarna Revolution" attempted a distinct break with Egypt’s traditional and static ways of life in religion, politics, art, and literature. Pharaoh changed his name to Akh-en-Aton (perhaps “He Who is Service-able to the Aton”) and moved his capital from Thebes to Tell-el-Amarna. Pharaoh’s own attitude to the god is expressed in the famous hymn which follows. Beyond doubt, the hymn shows the universality and beneficence of the creating and re-creating sun disc. A similarity of spirit and wording to the 104th Psalm has often been noted, and a direct relation between the two has been argued.3 Because Akh-en-Aton was devoted to this god alone, the Amarna religion has been called monotheistic. This is a debatable question, and a reserved attitude would note that only Akh-en-Aton and his family worshiped the Aton, Akh-en-Aton’s courtiers worshiped Akh-en-Aton himself, and the great majority of Egyptians was ignorant of or hostile to the new faith.

This is the "long hymn" to the Aton, from the tomb of Eye at Tell el-Amarna. Akh-en-Aton’s reign was about 1380 to 1362 B.C. The best copy of the text is that of N. de G. Davies, The Roci^ Tombs of El Amarna, vi (London, 1908), Pl. xxvi. Translations will be found in Erman, LÄE, 288-91, and in J. H. Breasted, The Dawn of Conscience (New York, 1933), 281-86.

1 The number "seventy," which contained the sounds safehk is carried over in a pun to the beginning and end of the stanza, with the words safehk “dissolve,” and heafk “oppose.”

2 The role of Fate was powerful at this period, but not immutable if the god intervened.

3 From the context, this continues the idea of Amon as a soothing breeze against more violent winds.

1 As in Breasted, op. cit., 366-70.
Praise of Re Har-akhti, Rejoicing on the Horizon, in His Name as Shu Who Is in the Aton-disc,² living forever and ever; the living great Aton who is in jubilee, lord of all that the Aton encircles, lord of heaven, lord of earth, lord of the House of Aton in Akhet-Aton;⁸ (and praise of) the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, who lives on truth, the Lord of the Two Lands: Nefer-kheperu-Re Wa-en-Re; the Son of Re, who lives on truth, the Lord of Diadems: Akh-en-Aton, long in his lifetime; (and praise of) the Chief Wife of the King, his beloved, the Lady of the Two Lands: Nefer-neferu-Aten Nefert-iti, living, healthy, and youthful forever and ever; (by) the Fan-Bearer on the Right Hand of the King... Eye. He says:

Thou appearest beautifully on the horizon of heaven, Thou living Aton, the beginning of life! When thou art risen on the eastern horizon, Thou hast filled every land with thy beauty. Thou art gracious, great, glistening, and high over every land; Thy rays encompass the lands to the limit of all that thou hast made: As thou art Re, thou reachest to the end of them;⁴ (Thou) subduest them (for) thy beloved son.⁵ Though thou art far away, thy rays are on earth; Though thou art in their faces, no one betows thy going.

When thou settest in the western horizon, The land is in darkness, in the manner of death. They sleep in a room, with heads wrapped up, Nor sees one eye the other. All their goods which are under their heads might be stolen, (But) they would not perceive (it). Every lion is come forth from his den; All creeping things, they sting. Darkness is a shroud, and the earth is in stillness, For he who made them rests in his horizon.⁶

At daybreak, when thou arisest on the horizon, When thou shinest as the Aton by day, Thou drivest away the darkness and givest thy rays. The Two Lands are in festivity every day, Awake and standing upon (their) feet, For thou hast raised them up. Washing their bodies, taking (their) clothing, (5) Their arms are (raised) in praise at thy appearance. All the world, they do their work/

All beasts are content with their pasturage; Trees and plants are flourishing. The birds which fly from their nests, Their wings are (stretched out) in praise to thy |a. All beasts spring upon (their) feet. Whatever flies and alights, They live when thou hast risen (for) them.⁸ The ships are sailing north and south as well, For every way is open at thy appearance. The fish in the river dart before thy face; Thy rays are in the midst of the great green sea.⁹

Creator of seed in women, Thou who makest fluid into man, Who maintainest the son in the womb of his mother, Who sootheast him with that which stills his weeping, Thou nurse (even) in the womb, Who givest breath to sustain all that he has made! When he descends from the womb to breathe On the day when he is born, Thou openest his mouth completely, Thou suppliest his necessities. When the chick in the egg speaks within the shell, Thou givest him breath within it to maintain him. When thou hast made him his fulfillment within the egg, to break it, He comes forth from the egg to speak at his completed (time); He walks upon his legs when he comes forth from it.

How manifold it is, what thou hast made! They are hidden from the face (of man). O sole god, like whom there is no other! Thou didst create the world according to thy desire, Whilst thou wert alone:¹⁰ All men, cattle, and wild beasts, Whatever is on earth, going upon (its) feet, And what is on high, flying with its wings.

The countries of Syria and Nubia, the land of Egypt, Thou settest every man in his place, Thou suppliest their necessities: Everyone has his food, and his time of life is reckoned.¹¹ Their tongues are separate in speech, And their natures as well; Their skins are distinguished, As thou distinguishest the foreign peoples. Thou makest a Nile in the underworld, Thou bringest it forth as thou desirest To maintain the people (of Egypt)¹² According as thou madest them for thyself, The lord of all of them, wearying (hims)elf with them,

The lord of every land, rising for them, The Aton of the day, great of majesty.

² The Aton had a dogmatic name written within a royal cartouche and including the three old solar deities, Re, Har-of-the-Horizon, and Shu. ⁴ Akhet-Aton was the name of the capital at Tell el-Amarna. ⁶ Pun: Re "Re," and er-ra "to the end." ⁸ cf. Ps. 104:20-21. ⁹ cf. Ps. 104:22-23. ¹⁰ cf. Ps. 104:24. ¹¹ cf. Ps. 104:27. ¹² The Egyptians believed that their Nile came from the waters under the earth, called by them Nun.
All distant foreign countries, thou makest their life (also),
For thou hast set a Nile in heaven,
That it may descend for them and make waves upon the mountains.
(10) Like the great green sea,
To water their fields in their towns.
How effective they are, thy plans, O lord of eternity! The Nile in heaven, it is for the foreign peoples
And for the beasts of every desert that go upon (their) feet;
(While the true) Nile comes from the underworld for Egypt.

Thy rays suckle every meadow.
When thou risest, they live, they grow for thee. Thou makest the seasons in order to rear all that thou hast made,
The winter to cool them,
And the heat that they may taste thee. Thou hast made the distant sky in order to rise therein,
In order to see all that thou dost make. Whilst thou wert alone,
Rising in thy form as the living Aton,
Appearing, shining, withdrawing or approaching,
Thou madest millions of forms of thyself alone.
Cities, towns, fields, road, and river—
Every eye beholds thee over against them,
For thou art the Aton of the day over the earth

Thou art in my heart,
And there is no other that knows thee
Save thy son Nefer-kheperu-Re Wa-en-Re.
For thou hast made him well-versed in thy plans and in thy strength.

The world came into being by thy hand,
According as thou hast made them. When thou hast risen they live,
When thou settest they die. Thou art lifetime thy own self,
For one lives (only) through thee. Eyes are (fixed) on beauty until thou settest.
All work is laid aside when thou settest in the west. (But) when (thou) risest (again), [Everything is] made to flourish for the king,...
Since thou didst found the earth
And raise them up for thy son,
Who came forth from thy body:
the King of Upper and Lower Egypt,... Akh-en-Aton,... and the Chief Wife of the King,... Nefertiti,... living and youthful forever and ever.

Hymns to the Gods as a Single God

These hymns have been called monotheistic. Whether they are so or not will depend upon the definition of monotheism and whether tendencies toward syncretism and universalism may be sufficient explanations. The hymns present different Egyptian gods of universal or cosmic nature, treated as a conflate personality and addressed in the singular.

Papyrus Chester Beatty IV (now British Museum 10684), recto vii 2 ff. The hieratic manuscript is probably from Thebes and dates to somewhere around 1300 B.C., definitely after the Amarna Revolution. Published in Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty Gift, ed. by A. H. Gardiner (London, 1935), 1, 28 ff.; 11, PIs. 15-17.

. . . the Outline Draftsman of Amon, Mer-Sekhmet. He says: I sing to thee, intoxicated with thy beauty, with hands upon the minstrel’s harp. I cause the children of singers to know how to worship the beauty of thy face. Mayest thou reward (me) with a goodly burial for the singer who gives thee song, that he may go forth (5) upon earth as a good spirit to see the Lord of the Gods!

PRAISE TO THEE, Amon-Re-Atum-Har-akhti, who spoke with his mouth and there came into existence all men, gods, large and small cattle in their entirety, and that which flies and lights totally.

THOU DIDST CREATE the regions of the Hau-nebut, settled in the towns thereof, and the productive meadows, fertilized by Nun and giving birth thereafter—good things without limit to their number, for the provision of the living.

THOU ART VALENT as a herdsman tending them forever and ever. Bodies are (10) filled with thy beauty; eyes see through (thee). The [fear] of thee is for everybody; their hearts turn about to thee, good at all times. Everybody lives through the sight of thee.

DO (NOT) WIDOWS say: (viii i) “Our husband art thou,” and little ones: “Our father and our mother”? The rich boast of thy beauty, and the poor (worship) thy face. He that is imprisoned turns about to thee, and he that has a sickness calls out to thee. . . . Everybody is turned (5) back to thy presence, so that they may make prayers to thee.

THY EARS ARE open, hearing them and taking care of them, O our Ptah who loves his crafts, herdsman who loves his herds. His reward is a goodly burial for the heart which is satisfied with truth.

His love is (to be) the moon, as a child to whom everybody dances. When petitioners are gathered before his face, then he will search out hearts. Green plants turn about in his direction, that they may be beautiful, and lotuses are gay because of him.

1 These words are actually part of a colophon which belongs to preceding hymns, but seem also to apply to the hymns which follow.
2 The northern lands, particularly the Mediterranean coast and islands. This states the universality of the conflate creator-god.
3 The abysmal waters, out of which life came at the creation and still comes.
4 The conflate god is also Ptah, the craftsman who fashioned men.
5 The god rewards the faithful with a proper burial.
Hymn to the Nile

The Egyptians recognized that life was possible in their land only because of the existence of the Nile. The following hymn celebrated their gratitude. The extant texts have been brutally corrupted by schoolboys, who had to copy the hymn as an exercise. Fortunately, some of the briefer fragments give a more sensible text.

The text is a Theban composition. The documents are numerous, and the majority of them are fragmentary. Perhaps all of them derive from the Nineteenth and Twentieth Dynasties (1350-1100 B.C.), but the original composition may have gone back to the Middle Kingdom (2100-1700 B.C.). The text occurs on 4 papyri (Papyrus Sallier 11 = British Museum 10182; Papyrus Anastasii VII = British Museum 10222; Papyrus Chester Beatty V = British Museum 10685; a papyrus in Turin); 1 writing tablet (Louvre 693); and at least 13 ostraca. The present translation was made from as many of these documents as were available to the translator; the line numbers follow Sallier II.

An up-to-date study of the texts is needed. Published by G. Maspero, Hymne au Nil (Bibliothèque d’étude, v, Cairo, 1912). A translation in Erman, LAE, 146-49.

(x 6) WORSHIP OF THE NILE.

Hail to thee, O Nile, that issues from the earth and comes to keep Egypt alive! Hidden in his form of appearance, a darkness by day, to whom minstrels have sung. He that waters the meadows which Re created, in order to keep every kid alive. He that makes to drink the desert and the place distant from water; that is his dew coming down (from) heaven. The beloved of Geb, the one who controls Nepri® and the one who makes the craftsmanship of Ptah to flourish.

THE LORD OF FISHES, HE WHO MAKES THE MASH-BIRDS TO GO UPSTREAM. There are no birds which come down because of the hot winds. He who makes barley and brings emmer into being, that he may make the temples festive. If he is sluggish, then nostrils are stopped up, and everybody is poor. If there be (thus) a cutting down in the food-offerings of the gods, then a million men perish among mortals, covetousness is practised, the entire land is in a fury, and great and small are on the execution-block. (But) people are different when he approaches. Khnum constructed him. When he rises, then the land is in jubilation, then every belly is in joy, every backbone takes on laughter, and every tooth is exposed.

THE BRINGER OF FOOD, rich in provisions, creator of all good, lord of majesty, sweet of fragrance. What is in him is satisfaction. He who brings grass into being for the cattle and (thus) gives (5) sacrifice to every god, whether he be in the underworld, heaven, or earth, him who is under his authority. He who takes in possession the Two Lands, fills the magazines, makes the granaries wide, and gives things (to) the poor.

HE WHO MAKES EVERY BELOVED TREE TO GROW, without lac! Him. He who brings a ship into being by his strength, without hewing in stone. The enduring image with the White Crown. He cannot be seen; (he has) no taxes; he has no leves; no one can read of the mystery; no one knows the place where he is; he cannot be seen.

The Nile had no regular cult or temple in which he might appear in an image.

The extant texts ib "kid," but the original may have had ibu "thirsty one."

Regions cut off from the waters of the Nile had his rain to sustain them.

The earth-god.

The grain-god.

South from the marshes of the Delta.

An unknown word, determined in one text with signs for heat and wind. If the translation is justified, it suggests that the Nile cools Upper Egypt sufficiently so that no birds need to go down to the Delta.

So that men cannot breathe in the breath of life.

When the Nile floods, all Egyptians laugh in delight.

 Probably corrupt, although the following context compares the Nile to a king.
be found by the power of writing. (HE HAS) NO SHRINES; HE HAS NO PORTION. He has no service of (his) desire. (But) generations of thy children jubilate for thee, and men give thee greeting as a king, stable of laws, coming forth (at) his season and filling Upper and Lower Egypt, (xiii 1) (Whenever) Water is drunk, every eye is in him, who gives an excess of his good.

HE WHO WAS SORROWFUL, IS COME FORTH GAY. Every heart is gay. Sobek, the child of Neith, laughs, and the Ennead, in which thou art, is exalted. Vomiting forth and making the field to drink. Anointing the whole land. Making one man rich and slaying another, (but) there is no coming to trial with him, who makes satisfaction without being thwarted, for whom no boundaries are made.

A MAKER OF LIGHT when issuing from darkness, a fat for his cattle. His limits are all that is created. There is no district which can live without him. Men are clothed (5) with flax from his meadows, for he made

The Hymn of Victory of Thut-mose III

This hymn celebrating the conquests of the great Egyptian empire-builder, Thut-mose III, carried a victorious theme which became popular with later pharaohs. Amen-hotep III, Seti I, and Ramses III borrowed freely from the triumphant stanzas.

The stela containing the hymn was found in the temple of Karnak and is now in the Cairo Museum (34010). The approximate dates of the pharaohs who used themes from the hymn are: Thut-mose III, 1490-1436 B.C.; Amen-hotep III, 1413-1377; Seti I, 1318-1301; and Ramses III, 1195-1164.

Words spoken by Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands:

Welcome to me, as thou exultest at the sight of my

---

11 The Nik has no temples, no temple service or labor.
12 The crocodile-god delights in the inundation.
13 The actions of the Nile are not subject to legal appeal.
14 The weaver-god.
15 Creating all work in Ptah as the earth-god?
16 Corruption and probably mistransliterated. It may say that the Nile has made Pb his deputy in Lower Egypt
17 The Egyptians thought that the Nile poured forth from underground caverns.
18 If this has any meaning at all in its present form, it may claim that the failure of the Nile to rise makes the nights too hot for conversation.
19 The thought is clouded but seems to compare the sea unfavorably with the Nile.
20 The produce coming by sea is inedible; the Nile's produce is edible and sustains life.
21 Beating time to music by dapping with the hands.
22 Thebes
23 Egyptian Hymns and Prayers 373
24 "Eating makes him forgotten"? The abundance of good things from the inundation makes people forgetful of the Nile, as they give themselves up to flowers and food.
25 He is so well feted at Thebes that he transfers his source caverns to that city.
beauty, my son and my avenger, Men-kheper-Re, living forever! I shine forth for love of thee, and my heart is glad at thy good comings into my temple, while my hands endow thy body with protection and life. How sweet is thy graciousness toward my breast!

I establish thee in my dwelling place. I wonder for thee: I give thee valor and victory over all foreign countries; I set the glory of thee and the fear of thee in all lands, the terror of thee as far as the four supports of heaven. I magnify the aye of thee in all bodies. I set the battle cry of thy majesty throughout the Nine Bows.

The great ones of all foreign countries are gathered together in thy grasp. (5) I stretch out my own arms, and I tie them up for thee; I bind the barbarians of Nubia by ten-thousands and thousands, the northerners by hundred-thousands as living captives. I cause thy opponents to fall beneath thy sandals, so that thou crushest the quarrelsome and the disaffected of heart, according as I have commended to thee the earth in its length and its breadth, so that westerners and easterners are under thy oversight.

Thou treadest all foreign countries, thy heart glad. There is none who can thrust himself into the vicinity of thy majesty, while I am thy guide, (but) thou reachest them (thysel). Thou hast crossed the waters of the Great Bend of Naharin by the victory and by the power which I have decreed to thee. They hear thy battle cry, having entered into caves. I have cut their nostrils off from the breath of life, so that I might set the dread of thy majesty throughout their hearts. My serpent-diadem which is upon thy head, she consumes them; she makes a speedy prey among those twisted of nature; (10) she devours those who are in their islands by her flame; she cuts off the heads of the Asiatics. There is none of them missing, (but they are) fallen and in travail because of her might.

I cause thy victories to circulate in all lands. The gleaming (serpent), she who is upon my brow, is thy servant, (so that) there shall arise none rebellious to thee as far as that which heaven encircles. They come, bearing tribute upon their backs, bowing down to thy majesty, as I decree. I have made the aggressors who come near thee grow weak, for their hearts are burned up and their bodies are trembling.

I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down the great ones of Djahi; I spread them out under thy feet throughout their countries.
I cause them to see thy majesty as the lord of radiance.

So that thou shinest into their faces as my likeness.
I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down those who are in Asia;
Thou smitest the heads of the Asiatics of Retenu.
I cause them to see thy majesty equipped with thy adornment,
As thou takest the weapons of war in the chariot I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down the eastern land;
Thou treadest upon those who are in the regions of God’s Land.
I cause them to see thy majesty as a shooting star,
Sowing its fire in a flame, as it gives off its steam.
I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down the western land;
Keftiu and Isy are under the awe (of thee).
I cause them to see thy majesty as a young bull,
Firm of heart, sharp of horns, who cannot be felled.
I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down those who are in their islands;
The lands of Mitanni are trembling under the fear of thee.
I cause them to see thy majesty as a crocodile,
The lord of fear in the water, who cannot be approached.
I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down those who are in the islands;
They who are in the midst of the Great Green Sea are under thy battle cry.
I cause them to see thy majesty as the Avenger Appearing in glory on the back of his sacrifice.
I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down the Tehenu;
The Utentiu belong to the might of thy glory.
I cause them to see thy majesty as a fierce lion,
As thou makest them corpses throughout their valleys.
I have come,
That I may cause thee to trample down the ends of the lands;
That which the Ocean encircles is enclosed within thy grasp.
I cause them to see thy majesty as a lord of the wing,
Taking possession of what he sees as he wishes.
I have come,

1 Thut-mosc III.
2 Perhaps: “I wonder at thee,” but the expression is usually followed by a boon conferred by the god.
3 The nine traditional enemies of Egypt.
4 Naharin, a reasonable Semitic approximation to the term Mesopotamia, was a land along the great bend of the Euphrates.
5 Approximately the Phoenician coast.
6 The sun.
7 The highland of Palestine-Syria.
8 The land of the rising sun.
9 Disputed, but probably Crete (Caphtor) and Cyprus.
10 Mitanni, the lands of Upper Mesopotamia and northern Syria, was a political equivalent of the geographical term Naharin.
11 Horus defeating Seth.
12 The Tehenu were Libyans. The land of Utent is elsewhere listed among the peoples to the south of Egypt.
That I may cause thee to trample down the front of the land;

Thou bindest the Sand-Dwellers as living captives. I cause them to see thy majesty like a jackal of the Southland, The lord of speed, the runner coursing the Two Lands.

I have come, That I may cause thee to trample down the barbarians of Nubia; As far as Shat-Djeba is in thy grip, I cause them to see thy majesty like thy two brothers; I have joined their hands together for thee in victory.

Thy two sisters (also), I have set them in protection behind thee, while the arms of my majesty are uplifting, warding off evil. I give thy protection, my son, my beloved, Horus: Mighty Bull, Appearing in Thebes, whom I begot in the divine [body], Thutmos, living forever, who has done for me all that my [a desires.

Thou hast erected my dwelling place as the work of eternity, made longer and wider than that which had been before, and the very great gateway (named) of eternity.

The name of the gateway is doubtful. Under the Amarna Revolution, but restored under Seti I. Then Mer-ne-Ptah appeareth his seheri djut.

From Amen-hotep III’s Building Inscription

The following inscription illustrates the reciprocal relation between pharaoh and god in ancient Egypt. At great length Amen-hotep III (about 1413-1377 B.C.) details his building activities on behalf of the god Amon-Re. The text closes with the grateful hymn of the god to the king.

The stela is now Cairo 34025. It was set up by Amen-hotep III in his temple which stood behind the Colossi of Memnon at Thebes. The text was thoroughly hacked under the Amarna Revolution, but restored under Seti I. Then Mer-ne-Ptah appropriated the stela and used its back for the “Israel Stela” in his mortuary temple, where it was found by W. M. F. Petrie; see his Six Temples at Thebes (London, 1897), 10-11, 23-26; PIs. xvi-xvi. It was published by P. Lacau, Stiles du nouvel empire

"Men-heper-Re", (25) whose Beauty Ma’es Festive the [House of] Amort: Thy monuments are greater than (those of) any king who has been. I commanded thee to make them, and I am satisfied with them. I have established thee upon the throne of Horus for millions of years, that thou mightest lead the living for eternity.

... (Amen-hotep III). He made, as (3) his monument for his father Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, the erecting for him of an august temple on the west side of Thebes, an everlasting fortress, a possessor of eternity, of fine sandstone, worked with gold throughout. Its pavement was washed with silver, all its doorways with fine gold. It was made very wide and great, embellished forever, made festive with this very great monument, and abounding in statues of the lord in the granite of Elephantine, gritstone, and every (5) august costly stone, perfected with the work of eternity. Their height shines up to heaven; their rays are in (men’s) faces like the sun disc, when he shines at dawn. It is equipped with a Station of the Lord, worked with gold and many costly stones. At its face flagstaffs have been set up, worked with fine gold. It is made like the horizon which is in heaven when Re shines forth therein. Its canal is filled with the high Nile, the lord of fish and fowl, pure in bouquets. Its workhouse is filled with male and female slaves, the children of the princes of every foreign country of his majesty’s plundering. Its magazines enclose good things of which the count is not known. It is surrounded with Syrian towns, settled with the children of princes. Its cattle are like the sands of the shore; they total millions. It has the prow-robe of the Southland and the stern-robe of the Northland.

I made another monument for him who begot me, Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, who is established upon his throne, (in) making for him a great barque upon the river, "Amon-Re in User-het," of (17) new cedar which his majesty cut in the country of God’s Land, dragged from the mountains of Retenu by the princes of all foreign countries. It was made very wide and great. The like had never been made. Its hull is washed with silver and completely worked with gold. The great shrine is of fine gold. I made other monuments for Amon, (24) of which the like has never occurred. I built for thee thy house of millions of years in the precinct of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, "Appearing in Truth," an august (place) of fine gold, a resting place for my father in all his feasts. It is embellished with fine sandstone and worked with gold throughout. Its pavement is decorated with silver, and all its doorways

(Catalogue general . . . du Musee du Caire, Cairo, 1909), 1.

47-52, PIs. xv-xvi. It was translated by Breasted, AR, 11, §§878-92.

I made another monument for him who begot me, Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, who is established upon his throne, (in) making for him a great barque upon the river, "Amon-Re in Userhet," of (17) new cedar which his majesty cut in the country of God’s Land, dragged from the mountains of Retenu by the princes of all foreign countries. It was made very wide and great. The like had never been made. Its hull is washed with silver and completely worked with gold. The great shrine is of fine gold. I made other monuments for Amon, (24) of which the like has never occurred. I built for thee thy house of millions of years in the precinct of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, "Appearing in Truth," an august (place) of fine gold, a resting place for my father in all his feasts. It is embellished with fine sandstone and worked with gold throughout. Its pavement is decorated with silver, and all its doorways

(Catalogue general . . . du Musee du Caire, Cairo, 1909), 1.

47-52, PIs. xv-xvi. It was translated by Breasted, AR, 11, §§878-92.

... (Amen-hotep III). He made, as (3) his monument for his father Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, the erecting for him of an august temple on the west side of Thebes, an everlasting fortress, a possessor of eternity, of fine sandstone, worked with gold throughout. Its pavement was washed with silver, all its doorways with fine gold. It was made very wide and great, embellished forever, made festive with this very great monument, and abounding in statues of the lord in the granite of Elephantine, gritstone, and every (5) august costly stone, perfected with the work of eternity. Their height shines up to heaven; their rays are in (men’s) faces like the sun disc, when he shines at dawn. It is equipped with a Station of the Lord, worked with gold and many costly stones. At its face flagstaffs have been set up, worked with fine gold. It is made like the horizon which is in heaven when Re shines forth therein. Its canal is filled with the high Nile, the lord of fish and fowl, pure in bouquets. Its workhouse is filled with male and female slaves, the children of the princes of every foreign country of his majesty’s plundering. Its magazines enclose good things of which the count is not known. It is surrounded with Syrian towns, settled with the children of princes. Its cattle are like the sands of the shore; they total millions. It has the prow-robe of the Southland and the stern-robe of the Northland.

I made another monument for him who begot me, Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, who is established upon his throne, (in) making for him a great barque upon the river, "Amon-Re in Userhet," of (17) new cedar which his majesty cut in the country of God’s Land, dragged from the mountains of Retenu by the princes of all foreign countries. It was made very wide and great. The like had never been made. Its hull is washed with silver and completely worked with gold. The great shrine is of fine gold. I made other monuments for Amon, (24) of which the like has never occurred. I built for thee thy house of millions of years in the precinct of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, "Appearing in Truth," an august (place) of fine gold, a resting place for my father in all his feasts. It is embellished with fine sandstone and worked with gold throughout. Its pavement is decorated with silver, and all its doorways

(Catalogue general . . . du Musee du Caire, Cairo, 1909), 1.

47-52, PIs. xv-xvi. It was translated by Breasted, AR, 11, §§878-92.

... (Amen-hotep III). He made, as (3) his monument for his father Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, the erecting for him of an august temple on the west side of Thebes, an everlasting fortress, a possessor of eternity, of fine sandstone, worked with gold throughout. Its pavement was washed with silver, all its doorways with fine gold. It was made very wide and great, embellished forever, made festive with this very great monument, and abounding in statues of the lord in the granite of Elephantine, gritstone, and every (5) august costly stone, perfected with the work of eternity. Their height shines up to heaven; their rays are in (men’s) faces like the sun disc, when he shines at dawn. It is equipped with a Station of the Lord, worked with gold and many costly stones. At its face flagstaffs have been set up, worked with fine gold. It is made like the horizon which is in heaven when Re shines forth therein. Its canal is filled with the high Nile, the lord of fish and fowl, pure in bouquets. Its workhouse is filled with male and female slaves, the children of the princes of every foreign country of his majesty’s plundering. Its magazines enclose good things of which the count is not known. It is surrounded with Syrian towns, settled with the children of princes. Its cattle are like the sands of the shore; they total millions. It has the prow-robe of the Southland and the stern-robe of the Northland.

I made another monument for him who begot me, Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, who is established upon his throne, (in) making for him a great barque upon the river, "Amon-Re in Userhet," of (17) new cedar which his majesty cut in the country of God’s Land, dragged from the mountains of Retenu by the princes of all foreign countries. It was made very wide and great. The like had never been made. Its hull is washed with silver and completely worked with gold. The great shrine is of fine gold. I made other monuments for Amon, (24) of which the like has never occurred. I built for thee thy house of millions of years in the precinct of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, "Appearing in Truth," an august (place) of fine gold, a resting place for my father in all his feasts. It is embellished with fine sandstone and worked with gold throughout. Its pavement is decorated with silver, and all its doorways with gold. Two great obelisks have been erected, one on each side, so that my father may appear between them, while I am in his retinue. I have sacrificed to him thousands of oxen, as well as choice cuts.

(Catalogue general . . . du Musee du Caire, Cairo, 1909), 1.

47-52, PIs. xv-xvi. It was translated by Breasted, AR, 11, §§878-92.

Words spoken by Amon-Re, King of the Gods:

My son, my body, my beloved, Neb-maat-Re,
My living image, whom my body created,
Whom Mut, Mistress of Ishru in Thebes, the Lady of the Nine Bows, bore to me,
And (she) nursed thee as the Sole Lord of the people—
My heart is very joyful when I see thy beauty;
I worship a wonder for thy majesty,™
That thou mightest renew youth,
According as I made thee to be Re of the Two Banks.

When I turn my face to the south, I worship a wonder for thee:—
I make the princes of the wretched Ethiopia bestir themselves for thee,
Bearing all their tribute upon their backs.

When I turn my face to the north, I worship a wonder for thee:—
I make the countries of the ends of Asia come to thee,
Bearing all their tribute upon their backs.
They themselves present to thee their children,
Seeking that thou mightest give to them the breath of life.

When I turn my face to the west, I worship a wonder for thee:—
I let thee take Libya—they cannot escape—(Shut) up in this fortress bearing the name of (thy) majesty,
Surrounded with a great wall reaching to heaven,
And settled with the children of the princes of the Nubian barbarians.

When I turn my face to the orient, I worship a wonder for thee:—
I make the countries of Punt™ come to thee,
Bearing all the sweet plants of their countries,
To beg peace from (thee and to) breathe the breath of thy giving.

Hymn of Victory of Mer-ne-Ptah
(The "Israel Stela")

The date of this commemorative hymn (or series of hymns) relates it to Mer-ne-Ptah's victory over the Libyans in the spring of his fifth year (about 1230 B.C.). However, the text is not historical in the same sense as two other records of that victory, but is rather a poetic eulogy of a universally victorious pharaoh. Thus it was not out of place to introduce his real or figurative triumph over Asiatic peoples in the last poem of the hymn. In that context we meet the only instance of the name "Israel" in ancient Egyptian writing.

The "Israel Stela," now Cairo 34025, was discovered by Petrie in the ruins of Mer-ne-Ptah's mortuary temple at Thebes. There is also a fragmentary duplicate in the Temple of Karnak.

Year 5, 3rd month of the third season, day 3, under the majesty of the Horus: Mighty Bull, Rejoicing in Truth; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Ba-en-Re Meri-Amon; the Son of Re: Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat. The magnification of the strength and the exaltation of the strong arm of the Horus: Mighty Bull, who smites the Nine Bows, whose name is given to eternity forever. The relation of his victories in all lands, to cause that every land together know and to let the virtue in his deeds of valor be seen: the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Ba-en-Re Meri-Amon; the Son of Re: Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat; the Bull, lord of strength, slaying his foes, gracious on the field of valor when his conquest has been effected;

The sun, uncovering the cloud which had been over Egypt
And letting Egypt see the rays of the sun disc;
Removing the mountain of metal from the neck of the people,
So that he might give breath to the folk who had been shut in;
Appeasing the heart of Memphis over their enemies,
And making Ta-tenen™ rejoice over those rebellious to him;
Opening the doors of Memphis which had been barred
And letting its temples receive their food (again);
the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Ba-en-Re Meri-Amon; the Son of Re: Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat;
The sole one, restoring the courage of hundred-thousands,
For breath enters into their nostrils at the sight of him;
Penetrating the land of Temeb™ in his lifetime,
And setting the terror of eternity in the hearts of the Meshwesh.

— (5)
He causes to turn back the Rebu, who had trodden Egypt.

Great dread being in their hearts because of Egypt.

Their advanced guard abandoned their rear. Their legs did not stop, except to run. Their archers abandoned their bows. The heart of their runners was weak from traveling. They untied their waterskins, thrown on the ground; their packs were loosed and cast aside.

The wretched enemy prince of Rebu was fled in the depth of the night, by himself. No feather was on his head; his feet were unshod. His women were taken before his face. The loaves for his provision were seized; he had no water of the waterskin to keep him alive. The face of his brethren was fierce, to slay him; among his commanders one fought his companion. Their tents for the troops.

Foolish and witless is he who takes him on! He who transgresses his frontier knows not for himself the morrow.

Great joy has arisen in Egypt; Jubilation has gone forth in the towns of Egypt.

1 Libyan warriors wore a feather in the headress.
2 The Libyan prince.
3 The Egyptians used their god Seth as a god of foreign peoples.
4 Egypt was thus the daughter of Re, and the pharaoh, who was by dogma the Son of Re, sat upon the throne of Shu, the air-god who was the direct divine son of Re.
5 The diviners by stars and winds see die evil eye of the gods as being against any of Egypt's attackers.
6 The Ennead, the nine gods of Heliopolis over whom Atum-Re presided, is here conceived to be judging Mer-ne-Ptah and die Libyan ruler Merey. In the following context, first Re, the All-Lord, gives his verdict and reward to the victorious pharaoh, and then the Ennead confirm this award.
7 The word may mean "scimitar." cf. n.i above.
8 Or the "Walls of (the god) Ta-tenen"? In either case, Memphis.
They talk about the victories
Which Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat made in Te-henu:
"How amiable is he, the victorious ruler!
How exalted is the king among the gods!
How fortunate is he, the lord of command!
Ah, how pleasant it is to sit when there is gossip!"

One walks with unhindered stride on the way, for there is no fear at all in the heart of the people. The forts are left to themselves, the wells (lie) open, accessible to the messengers. The battlements of the wall are calm in the sun until their watchers may awake. The Madjoi are stretched out as they sleep; the Nau and Tekten are in the meadows as they wish. The cattle of the field are left as free to roam without herdsmen, (even) crossing the flood of the stream. There is no breaking out of a cry in the night: "Halt! Behold, a comer comes with the speech of strangers!" (but) one goes and comes (25) with singing. There is no cry of people as when there is mourning. Towns are settled anew again. He who plows his harvest will eat it. Re has turned himself around (again) to Egypt. He was born as the one destined to be her protector, the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Ba-en-Re Meri-Amon; the Son of Re: Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat.

The princes are prostrate, saying: "Mercy!" Not one raises his head among the Nine Bows. Desolation is for Tehenu; Hatti is pacified; Plundered is the Canaan with every evil; Carried off is Ashkelon; seized upon is Gezer; Yanoam is made as that which does not exist; Israel is laid waste, his seed is not; Hurra is become a widow for Egypt! All lands together, they are pacified; Everyone who was restless, he has been bound by the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Ba-en-Re Meri-Amon; the Son of Re: Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat, given life like Re every day.

Joy at the Accession of Mer-ne-Ptah

In the dogma of Egyptian religion each pharaoh was a god who repeated the creation miracle of establishing order out of chaos. The following hymn, from a papyrus of miscellaneous texts for school instruction, celebrates the accession of Mer-ne-Ptah of the Nineteenth Dynasty (about 1234-1222 B.C.). From Papyrus Salier I (British Museum 10185), recto viii 7-ix 1. A photographic facsimile in Egyptian Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum, Second Series (ed. by E. A. W. Budge, London, 1923), Fis. ix.i.xi. Transcription into hieroglyphic by A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Miscellanies (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, VII, Brussels, 1937), 86-87. Translated in Erman, LAE, 278-79. Also translated by R. A. Caminos, Late-Egyptian Miscellanies (Oxford, 1954), 329-35.

The Chief Archivist of the Treasury of Pharaoh—life, prosperity, health!—Amen-em-Onet, addressing the Scribe Pen-ta-Uret, thus: This writing is brought to thee (to) say: Another matter:

Be glad of heart, the entire land! The goodly times are come! A lord—life, prosperity, health!—is given in all lands, and normality has come down (again) into its place: the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, the lord of millions of years, great of kingship like Horus: Ba-en-Re Meri-Amon—life, prosperity, health!—he who crushes Egypt with festivity, the Son of Re, (most) serviceable of any king: Mer-ne-Ptah Hotep-hir-Maat—life, prosperity, health!

All ye righteous, come that ye may see! Right has banished wrong. Evidloers have fallen (upon) their faces. All the rapacious are ignored.

The water stands and is not dried up; the Nile lifts high. Days are long, nights have hours, and the moon comes normally. The gods are satisfied and content of heart [One] fives in laughter and wonder. Mayest thou know it.

THE END.

Joy at the Accession of Ramses IV

It was normal in Egypt to affirm that the accession of any pharaoh was the restoration of the normal divine order. In the case of the accession of Ramses IV, there was an additional justification, in that the reign of Ramses III did end in palace disorder, including a conspiracy within the royal harem, see pp. 214-216.

An ostracon in the Turin Museum, probably of the reign of Ramses IV (about 1164-1157 B.C.), published by G. Maspero in Recueil de travaux . . ., 11 (1886), 116-17; translated by Erman, LAE, 279. The following rendering benefits by a translation by W. Spiegelberg in OLZ, xxx (1927), 73-76.

A happy day! Heaven and earth are in joy, for thou art the great lord of Egypt because of the notorious carelessness of Late-Egyptian scribes and several blunders of writing in this stela.

The statement that the "seed," i.e. offspring, of Israel had been wiped out is a conventional boast of power at this period.

1 The pupil, Pen-ta-Uret, copies a letter from his master, Amen-em-Onet. This has been preceded by another letter on a different subject. Hence the words: "Another matter," cf. p. 379.
2 "Truth drives out lying," The Egyptian concept of ma'at "truth, order, right," was of the essential order of the universe, given by the gods at the beginning and maintained and reconfirmed by the god-king.
3 Order is found in the regularity of times and seasons, restored by the new king.
They who were thirsty are drunken.
They who were hungry are sated and gay; they who were thirsty are drunk.
They who were naked are clothed in fine linen; they who were dirty are clad in white.
They who were in prison are set free; they who were fettered are in joy. The troublemakers in this land have become peaceful.
High Niles have come forth from their caverns, that they may refresh the hearts of the common people.
The homes of the widows are open (again), so that they may let wanderers come in. The womenfolk rejoice so that they may refresh the hearts of the common people.
"The King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Hega-maat-Re Setep-en-Amon—life, prosperity, health!—wears the White Crown again; the Son of Re: Ramses Hega-maat—life, prosperity, health!—has taken over the office of his father!"
All lands say to him: "Gracious is the Horus upon the throne of his father Amon-Re, the god who sent him forth, the protector of the prince who carries off every land!"
Made by the Scribe of the Necropolis Amon-nakht in the year 4,1st month of the first season, day 14.\(^3\)

A Prayer to Thoth

This prayer to Thoth, the god of wisdom and thus the patron of scribes, comes from a collection of letters and exercises to be used as models for schoolboys. Characteristically for the late Empire, the prayer makes a virtue of "silence" or submissive conformity.

From Papyrus Sallier I (British Museum 10185), recto viii 2-7. The manuscript dates from the latter part of the 13th century B.C. A photographic facsimile in Egyptian Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Second Series (ed. by E. A. W. Budge, London, 1925), Pl. LX. Transcription into hieroglyphic by A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Miscellanies (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, vn, Brussels, 1937), 85-86. Translated in Erman, LAE, 305-06.*Also Caminos, op.cit., 60-62.

A Prayer to Re-Har-akhti

This prayer to the sun-god Atum Re-Har-akhti is found in a manuscript of model texts for the instruction of schoolboys. It illustrates the humble and penitential spirit of the late Empire.

From Papyrus Anastasi II (British Museum 10243), recto x i-xi 2. The manuscript dates from the late Nineteenth Dynasty (about 1230 B.C.) and probably comes from Memphis. Facsimiled in Select Papyri in the Hieratic Character from the Collections of the British Museum, ii (London, 1842), PIs. LXXII-LXXIII. A transcription into hieroglyphic in A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Miscellanies (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, VII, Brussels, 1937), 18-19. Translated in Erman, LAE, 307.*Also Caminos, opcit., 60-62.

"Come to me, O Re-Har-akhti, that thou mayest look after me! Thou art he who does, and there is none who does without thee, unless it be thou that [actest with] him.

Come to me, Atum, every day! Thou art the august god. My heart advances to Heliopolis, while my . . . and my heart is gay and my breast is in joy. My prayers, my supplications of every day, and my adorations of the night are heard. My petitions will continue in my mouth, and they are heard today.

Thou one and only, O Re-Har-akhti! There is no other here like unto him, who protects millions while he rescues hundred-thousands! The protector of him who calls out to him, the Lord of Heliopolis.

Do not punish me for my numerous sins, (for) I am one who knows not his own self, I am a man without sense. I spend the day following after my (own) mouth,\(^1\) like a cow after grass. If I spend the evening in . . ., I am one to whom calm comes. I spend the day going around and around in the temple and spend the night...

---

1. In the difficult times, even navigation on the river had required exceptional means. Now current and breeze have become helpful.
2. On this refrain of triumph, see J. A. Wilson in JEA, xvii (1931), 214-16.
3. Not the accession day of Ramses IV, but the date on which this ostracon was written.
4. The pupil, Pen-ta-Uret, copies a letter from his master, Amen-em-Onet. This has been preceded by another letter on a different subject. Hence the words: "Another matter." cf. p. 378.
5. The scribe would like the advocacy of Thoth in die judgment after death.
6. For the thirsty there is water, even though it may not lie easily at die surface. The same thought lies in the following context, where die babbler or "heated" man cannot find the well of wisdom, but the "silent" man can.
7. That is, he is not "silent" or submissive to the god.
A Prayer for Help in the Law Court

A characteristic of the later Empire was the humble submission of a worshiper to his god. Man could achieve a good life only with the help of his god. For example, the helpless client in the court of law is bewildered by the clamor of human injustice and turns to the god for justice.

The text comes from Papyrus Anastasi II (British Museum 19243), 151-54. The manuscript dates from the late Nineteenth Dynasty (about 1290 B.C.) and probably comes from Memphis. The hieratic text was facsimiled in Select Papyri in the Hieratic Character from the Collections of the British Museum, i (London, 1842), Pts. IXX-XXXI, and in G. Moller, Hieratische Lesestücke, n. (Leipzig, 1927), 36. A transcription into hieroglyphic is given in A. H. Gardiner, Late Egyptian Miscellanies (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, VII, Brussels, 1937), 17. Translated in Erman LAE, 308*Also Caminos, op. cit., 56-58.

O Amon, give thy ear to one who is alone in the law court, who is poor; he is not rich. The court cheats him (of) silver and gold for the scribes of the mat and clothing for the attendants. May it be found that Amon assumes his form as the vizier, in order to permit the poor man to get off. May it be found that the poor man is vindicated. May the poor man surpass the rich.

THE END.

Gratitude for a God's Mercy

An artisan of the Nineteenth Dynasty here expresses his humble gratitude for the recovery of his son from illness. Neb-Re and his son Nakht-Amon were outline draftsmen of the Theban necropolis. It seems that Nakht-Amon acted impiously in respect to a cow belonging to the god Amon-Re and was then taken with a serious illness. He recovered after supplication had been made to the god. His father Neb-Re here gives pious thanks to Amon-Re.

The inscription is carved on a memorial stela, now Berlin 20377:* The text is published by G. Roeder in Aegyptische Inschriften aus den Staatlichen Museen zu Berlin, 11 (Leipzig, 1924), 158 ff. A. Erman gave a photograph and translation in Denksteine aus der thebanischen Gräberstadt (SBW, 1911, 1088 £.). Additional translations are by B. Gunn in JE.A, 311 (1916), 83-85, and by Erman, LAE, 310-12? Also Williams, op. cit., 151-54.

The Scene Above:* Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, the Great God Presiding over Karnak, the august god, he hears the prayer, who comes at the voice of the poor and distressed, who gives breath (to) him who is weak.

The magistrates and clerks of die court sat on reed mats. "The City* is turned around when I am distressed, thou (15) comest and thou rescuest me. Thou givest breath (to) him who is weak; thou rescuest him who is imprisoned. Thou art Amon-Re, Lord of Thebes, who rescues him who is in the underworld, inasmuch as thou art he who is . . . when one calls to thee; thou art he who comes from afar.

Made by the Outline Draftsman of Amon in the Place of Truth, Neb-Re, the justified, son of the Outline Draftsman in the Place of Truth, Pay, . . . in the name of his lord Amon, Lord of Thebes, who comes at the voice of the poor man. Adorations were made for him in his name, because of the greatness of his strength; supplications were made to him before his face and in the presence of the entire land, on behalf of the Outline Draftsman Nakht-Amon, the justified, when he was lying ill and in a state of death, when he was (under) the power of Amon because of his cow? I found the Lord of the Gods coming as the north wind, with sweet breezes before him. He rescued the Outline Draftsman of Amon, Nakht-Amon, the justified, the son of the Outline Draftsman of Amon in the Place of Truth, Neb-Re, the justified, and born (20) to the Lady of the House, Pa-shed, the justified.

He says: Though it may be that the servant is normal in doing wrong, still the Lord is normal in being merciful." The Lord of Thebes does not spend an entire day angry. As for his anger—in the completion of a moment there is no remnant, and the wind is turned about in mercy for us, and Amon has turned around

* The north wind is the cooling and healing breeze of Egypt.

 The former dedication "to the vital force of" So-and-so has come to mean a dedication by that man, as in the case of contemporary papyri.

* A common expression at this time for the submissive or humble.

* A section in the Theban necropolis.

It is uncertain whether 'his' really means Amon's cow, i.e. the temple herds, or Nakht-Amon's cow. It is uncertain what the transgression was.

* The City is No or Thbes, as in the biblical No-Amon.

† The inscriptions are used as seats before the pylon of a temple. On the right Neb-Re kneels in worship of the god.

† The two paragraphs of the following translation apply to die two figures in the scene above the memorial prayer. On the left the god Amon-Re is depicted as seated before the pylon of a temple. On the right Neb-Re kneels in worship of the god.

† Not Berlin 20377, as often listed.

1 The two paragraphs of the following translation apply to die two figures in the scene above the memorial prayer. On the left the god Amon-Re is depicted as seated before the pylon of a temple. On the right Neb-Re kneels in worship of the god.
with his breezes. As thy \( \alpha \) endures, thou wilt be merciful, and we shall not repeat what has been turned away!

By the Outline Draftsman in the Place of Truth, Neb-Re, the justified, he says: I shall make this stela in thy name, and I shall establish for thee these adorations in writing upon it, because thou hast rescued for me the Outline Draftsman Nakht-Amon. (25) So I spoke unto thee, and thou didst listen to me. Now, see, I shall do what I have said. Thou art the lord of him who calls unto him, satisfied with truth, the Lord of Thebes.

Made by the Outline Draftsman Neb-Re (and his) son, the Scribe Khay.

A Penitential Hymn to a Goddess

The end of the Egyptian Empire produced a number of expressions of humble piety, unquestioning faith in a god, and penitence for wrongdoing. The following inscription was dedicated by a man of humble rank to a goddess, "Meres-ger, Lady of Heaven, Mistress of the Two Lands, whose good name is Peak of the West." Meres-ger means "She Loves Silence," that is, pious submissiveness. The Peak of the West was probably her location on a mountain-head of western Thebes. We do not know what the transgression of the workman Nefer-abet was.

This stela comes from Thebes and is now Turin Museum 102. It was published by G. Maspero in Recueil de travaux . . . , 11 (1880), 109, and studied by A. Erman, Denksteine aus der thebanischen Graberstadt (SBAW, 1911, 1086-1110). It was translated by B. Gunn in JEA, 111 (1916), 86-87.

Giving praise to the Peak of the West; kissing the ground to her \( \alpha \). I give praise; hear (my) call I was a righteous man upon earth. Made by the Servant in the Place of Truth, Nefer-abet, the triumphant, an ignorant and widess man.

I knew not good or evil. When I did the deed of transgression against the Peak, she punished me, and I was in her hand by night as well as day. I sat upon the brick(s) like the pregnant woman. I called out to the wind, (but) it did not come to me. I was tormented by the Peak of the West, great in strength, and by every god and every goddess.

See, I shall say to great and small who are in the gang: "Beware of the Peak! For a lion is in the Peak; she smites with the smiting of a savage lion. She pursues him who transgresses against her."

(But) when I called to my mistress, I found her coming to me with sweet breezes. She showed mercy unto me, after she had let me see her hand. She turned about to me in mercy; she made me forget the sickness which had been (upon) me. Lo, the Peak of the West is merciful, when one calls to her.

What Nefer-abet, the triumphant, says. He says:

"See, and let every ear of him who lives upon earth hearken:—Beware of the Peak of the West!"

For a possible admission of error, much earlier than these penitential prayers, cf. the Instruction for King Meri-ka-Re, p. 416, n.17; p. 417 n.44.

For other hymns among these translations, see pp. 33-34, 431*. For other prayers among these translations, see pp. 3, 35-36, 453, 457, 448.

1 A part of the Theban necropolis.
2 The Egyptian women in childbirth sat upon a support of bricks, the "birth-stones" of Exod. 1:16. Cf. RT, xxv (1893), 47.
3 Of necropolis workmen.
Petition to a King

The following text represents an epistolary composition highly prized by the Babylonian scribes who developed it into a special literary genre. Quite a number of these "petitions" are now extant. They take the form of a letter addressed to a king or deity; in the latter case the writer of the petition may be the king himself. In the text before us, an individual from Ur by the name of Urshagga probably addresses the petition letter to the king of Ur, whose name he unfortunately fails to mention. Three copies of this text have been found to date: two were excavated in the city of Erech, and one may come from Nippur. The latter was published by S. Langdon, Babylonian Liturgies (1913), No. 5; a transliteration and translation were published by the same author in BE, xxxi (1914), p. 25. Photographs of the two Erech tablets were published by A. Falkenstein together with an excellent transliteration, translation, and commentary, in ZA, xliv (1936), 1-25. All three texts date from the first half of the second millennium B.C.

To my king with varicolored eyes who wears a lapis lazuli beard,

Speak;

To the golden statue fashioned on a good day.

1 In spite of their epistolary formulae, these "petitions" are, of course, not to be thought of as real letters forwarded by an individual who expects a letter in reply; they seem to be but another form of the "prayer" type of composition developed by the scribes in imitation of real letters with urgent appeal for help. As our text shows, in spite of their typical letter headings, these petitions are not written in prose; they have all the earmarks of Sumerian poetry.

2 As Falkenstein, Joc. cit., p. 8, n. 2, states, representations of the bearded ox may be found illustrated in Leonard Woolley's Royal Tombs, Pis. 107, 109, and 110.

3 Falkenstein takes this "to" to refer to line 5 only (the Sumerian construction is unfortunately ambiguous) and treats lines 3 and 4 as a parenthetical passage addressed to the king.

4 Perhaps, then, this petition is addressed to a dead, deified king of Ur whose statue was placed in the temple for veneration and worship.

5 The Sumerian word left untranslated here is db-za-za; its usual meanings are "monkey" and "sphinx."

6 The Sumerian word is ambiguous; it usually means "heart" but may also be rendered "womb," cf. now particularly Jacobsen, JNES, n (1943), 119-121.

7 For this rendering of the Sumerian word dim, cf. AS 12, p. 12, line 31. The sense of the line seems to be that this king's judgment is as trustworthy as that of a heavenly deity.

8 Note that the present translation differs to some extent from that of Falkenstein; the implications of the line are not too clear.

9 The implication of the words "of Anu" is not too clear; Falkenstein renders the line as: "As surely as my king is (the king) of Anu." To judge from this and the next line, Urshagga seems to be pleading for the safety of his family in the most general terms. For the passive renderings in this passage, cf. BASOR, 79 (1940), p. 21, n. 5.

10 Presumably a phrase such as "this my plea" is to be understood.

The ..5 raised in a pure sheepfold, called to the pure womb6 of Inanna,

The lord, hero of Inanna, say:

"Thou (in) thy judgment7 thou art the son of Anu,

Thy commands, like the word of a god, cannot be turned back

Thy words like rain pouring down from heaven, are without number.8

Thus says Urshagga, thy servant:

'My king has cared for me, who am a "son" of Ur.

If now my king is (truly) of Anu,"

Let not my father's house be carried off.10

Let not the foundations of my father's house be torn away.

Let my king know.8"
Hymn to Ishtar

After extolling the charms and virtues of the goddess, the hymn concludes by enumerating the blessings which she has bestowed upon the king, Ammiditana. While these are represented as accomplished facts, the statements should be taken as indications of the hope of the king for their eventual realization. The text publication does not indicate the provenience of the tablet. It was written in the latter part of the First Dynasty of Babylon, approximately 1600 B.C. Text: RA, xxii, 170-1; translation: RA, xxii, 174-7; metrical transcription: Za, xxxvm, 19-22.

Praise the goddess, the most awesome of the goddesses.
Let one revere the mistress of the peoples, the greatest of the Igigi.1
Praise Ishtar, the most awesome of the goddesses.
Let one revere the queen of women, the greatest of the Igigi.

She is clothed with pleasure and love.
She is laden with vitality, charm, and voluptuousness.

In lips she is sweet; life is in her mouth.
At her appearance rejoicing becomes full.
She is glorious; veils are thrown over her head.
Her figure is beautiful; her eyes are brilliant.

The goddess—with her there is counsel
The fate of everything she holds in her hand.
At her glance there is created joy,
Power, magnificence, the protecting deity and guardian spirit.

She dwells in, she pays heed to compassion and friendliness.
Besides, agreeableness she truly possesses.
Be it slave, unattached girl, or mother, she preserves (her).
One calls on her; among women one names her name.

Who—to her greatness who can be equal?
Strong, exalted, splendid are her decrees.
Ishtar—to her greatness who can be equal?
Strong, exalted, splendid are her decrees.

She is sought after among the gods; extraordinary is her station.
Respected is her word; it is supreme over them.

Ishtar among the gods, extraordinary is her station.
Respected is her word; it is supreme over them.

She is their queen; they continually cause her commands to be executed.
All of them bow down before her.
They receive her light before her.
Women and men indeed revere her.

In their assembly her word is powerful; it is dominating.
Before Anum their king she fully supports them.
She rests in intelligence, cleverness, (and) wisdom.
They take counsel together, she and her lord.

Indeed they occupy the throne room together.
In the divine chamber, the dwelling of joy,
Before them the gods take their places.
To their utterances their attention is turned.

The king their favorite, beloved of their hearts,
Magnificently offers to them his pure sacrifices.
Ammiditana, as the pure offering of his hands,
Brings before them fat oxen and gazelles.

From Anum, her consort, she has been pleased to ask for him
An enduring, a long life.
Many years of living, to Ammiditana
She has granted, Ishtar has decided to give.

By her orders she has subjected to him
The four world regions at his feet;
And the total of all peoples
She has decided to attach them to his yoke.

Prayer of Lamentation to Ishtar

A prayer to be accompanied by a ritual of incantation. Ishtar, in her aspect as goddess of valor and of war, is addressed as the greatest of goddesses. The supplicant describes his bitter affliction and prays for a restoration of his prosperity, so that he and all who see him may praise and glorify the goddess. A colophon of the text indicates that it was the property of the temple Esagila in Babylon; and that it was copied from an older version at Borsippa. The extant text was written in the Neo-Babylonian period as, in all probability, was the older text from which it was copied. Text: L. W. King, STC, 11, Pis. 75-84. Translations: ibid., 1, 222-37; A. Ungnad, Die Religion der Babylonier und Assyrer (Jena, 1921), 217-22; E. Ebeling, in AOT, 257-60.

1A collective name for the great gods of heaven.
I pray to thee, O Lady of ladies, goddess of goddesses.
O Ishtar, queen of all peoples, who guides mankind right,
O Irnini, ever exalted, greatest of the Igigi,
O most mighty of princesses, exalted is thy name.
Thou indeed art the light of heaven and earth, O valiant doughter of Sin.
O supporter of arms, who determines battle,
O possessor of all divine power, who wears the crown of dominion,
O Lady, glorious is thy greatness; over all the gods it is exalted.
O star of lamentation, who causes peaceable brothers to fight,
Yet who constantly gives friendship, (10)
O mighty one, Lady of battle, who suppresses the mountains,
O Gushea, the one covered with fighting and clothed with terror
Thou dost make complete judgment and decision, the ordinances of heaven and earth.
Chapels, holy places, sacred sites, and shrines pay heed
to thee.
Where is not thy name, where is not thy divine power?
Where are thy likenesses not fashioned, where are thy shrinis not founded?
Where art thou not great, where art thou not exalted?
Anu, Enlil, and Ea have made thee high; among the gods they have caused thy dominion to be great
They have made thee high among all the Igigi; they have made thy position pre-eminent.
At the thought of thy name heaven and earth tremble.
(20)
The gods tremble; the Anunnaki stand in awe.
To thine awesome name mankind must pay heed.
For thou art great and thou art exalted.
All the black-headed (people and) the masses of mankind pay homage to thy might.
The judgment of the people in truth and righteousness ou indeed dost decide.
Thou regardest the oppressed and mistreated; daily thou causest them to prosper.
Thy mercy! O Lady of heaven and earth, shepherdess of the weary people.
Thy mercy! O Lady of holy Eanna the pure storehouse.
Thy mercy! O Lady; unwearied are thy feet; swift are thy knees.
Thy mercy! O Lady of conflict (and) of all battles.
(30)
O shining one, lioness of the Igigi, subduer of angry gods,
O most powerful of all princes, who holdest the reins
(over) kings,
(But) who dost release the bridles of all maidservants,
Who art exalted and firmly fixed, O valiant Ishtar, great is thy might.
O brilliant one, torch of heaven and earth, light of all peoples,
O unequaled angry one of the fight, strong one of the battle,
O firebrand which is kindled against the enemy, which brings about the destruction of the furious,
O gleaming one, Ishtar, assembler of the host,
O deity of men, goddess of women, whose designs no
one can conceive,
Where thou dost look, one who is dead lives; one who is sick rises up;
(40)
The erring one who sees thy face goes aight
1 have cried to thee, suffering, wearied, and distressed, as thy servant.
See me O my Lady; accept my prayers.
Faithfully look upon me and hear my supplication.
Promise my forgiveness and let thy spirit be appeased.
Pity! For my wretched body which is full of confusion and trouble.
Pity! For my sickened heart which is full of tears and suffering.
Pity! For my wretched intestines (which are full of) confusion and trouble.
Pity! For my afflicted house which mourns bitterly.
Pity! For my feelings which are satiated with tears and suffering.
(50)
O exalted Irnini, fierce lion let thy heart be at rest.
O angry wild ox, let thy spirit be appeased.
Let the favor of thine eyes be upon me.
With thy bright features look faithfully upon me.
Drive away the evil spells of my body (and) let me see thy bright light
How long, O my Lady, shall my adversaries be looking upon me,
In lying and untruth shall they plan evil against me,
Shall my pursuers and those who exult over me rage against me?
How long, O my Lady, shall the crippled and weak seek me out?
One has made for me long sackcloth; thus I have appeared before thee.
(60)
The weak have become strong; but I am weak.
I toss about like flood-water, which an evil wind makes vilient.
My heart is flying; it keeps fluttering like a bird of heaven.
I mourn like a dove night and day.
I am beaten down, and so I weep bitterly.
With "Oh" and "Alas" my spirit is distressed.
I—what have I done, O my god and my goddess?
Like one who does not fear my god and my goddess
I am treated;
While sickness, headache, loss, and destruction are provided for me;
So are fixed upon me terror, disdain, and fullness of wrath,
Anger, choler, and indignation of gods and men.
I have to expect, O my Lady, dark days, gloomy months, and years of trouble.
I have to expect, O my Lady, judgment of confusion.
Death and trouble are bringing me to an end.
Silent is my chapel; silent is my holy place;
Over my house, my gate, and my fields silence is poured out.
As for my god, his face is turned to the sanctuary of another.
My family is scattered; my roof is broken up.
(But) I have paid heed to thee, my Lady; my attention has been turned to thee.
To thee have I prayed; forgive my debt.
Forgive my sin, my iniquity, my shameful deeds, and my offence.
Overlook my shameful deeds; accept my prayer;
Faithfully look upon me and accept my supplication.
(May) my fold be wide; may my stable be enlarged.
(And) the goddess who has been angry with me may turn again.
Like the water of the opening up of a canal let thy emotions be released.
My foes like the ground let me trample;
Let my prayers and my supplications come to thee.
Let thy great mercy be upon me.
Let those who see me in the street magnify thy name.
As for me, let me glorify thy divinity and thy might before the black-headed (people), [saying,] Ishar indeed is exalted; Ishtar indeed is queen;
The Lady indeed is exalted; the Lady indeed is queen.
Imin, the valorous daughter of Sin, has no rival.

Hymn to the Moon-God

A bilingual, Sumerian and Akkadian, text portraying the attributes and aspects of Sin, the god of the moon. Following the part of the text here translated there was a prayer; but this part of the text is so poorly preserved that it has not been thought worth-while to give the fragmentary translation. The tablet was found at the site of ancient Nineveh. The writing of the text may be dated to the reign of Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, 668-623 B.C. The tablet states that it was copied from an older tablet; but the date of the original composition of the text cannot be determined. Text: Rawlinson (2d ed.), iv, 9. Translations: S. Langdon, Babylonian Penitential Psalms (OECT, vi), 6-11; E. Ebbing in AOT, 241-2; Landsberger in E. Lehmann and H. Haas, Textbuch zur Religionsgeschichte (Leipzig, 1922), 301-3.

(verse)
O Lord, hero of the gods, who in heaven and earth is exalted in his uniqueness,
Father Nanna, lord Anshar, hero of the gods;1 Father Nanna, great lord Anu, hero of the gods,
Father Nanna, lord Sin, hero of the gods,
Father Nanna, lord of Ur, hero of the gods,
Father Nanna, lord of Egishshirgal,2 hero of the gods,
Father Nanna, lord of the shining crown, hero of the gods,
Father Nanna, who is grandly perfected in kingship, hero of the gods,
Father Nanna, who solemly advances in garments of princeliness, hero of the gods,
Ferocious bull, whose horn is thick, whose legs are perfected, who is bearded in lapis, and filled with luxury and abundance,

(verse)
Offspring which is self-created, fullgrown in form, pleasant to the sight, whose exuberance is unrestrained,
Womb that gives birth to everything, which dwells in a holy habitation with living creatures,
Begetter, merciful in his disposing,3 who holds in his hand the life of the whole land,
O Lord, thy divinity fills the wide sea with awe, as well as the distant heavens.

(verse)
Father begetter of gods and men, who founds shrines and establishes offerings,
Namer of monarchs, giver of the scepter, thou dost determine destiny unto distant days.
O mighty prince whose deep heart no one of the gods comprehends,
Swift colt whose knees do not tire, who opens the way for his brother gods,

1 The words "who in heaven and earth is exalted in his uniqueness," though not written at the ends of lines 2-9, are intended to be repeated after each of these lines as part of the refrain. Of the four proper names with which the god is addressed in lines 2-4, Nanna is the Sumerian name of the moon-god. Sin is his Akkadian counterpart, Anshar is a primitive father of the gods mentioned in the Babylonian Creation Epic, and Anu is the god of heaven and chief of all the gods.
2 Egishshirgal is the name of the temple of the moon-god in Ur.
3 So apparently the Sumerian; the Akkadian has "merciful and forgiving."
Whose light goes from the base of heaven to the zenith, who opens the door of heaven and gives light to all people, Father begetter, who looks favorably upon all living creatures....

O Lord, in heaven as to dominion, on earth as to valor, Thou! Thy word which is far away in heaven, which is hidden in the earth is something no one sees.

O Sin, shining one of Ekur, when they ask thee thou dost give counsel. On account of the evil of an eclipse of the moon which took place in such and such a month, on such and such a day,* On account of the evil of bad and unfavorable portents and signs which have happened in my palace and my country,* In the dark of the moon, the time of thy oracle, the mystery of the great gods, On the thirtieth day, thy festival, the day of delight of thy divinity, o Namrasit, unequaled in power, whose designs no one can conceive, I have spread out for thee a pure incense-offering of the night; I have poured out for thee the best sweet drink.

I am kneeling; I tarry (thus); I seek after thee. Bring upon me wishes for well-being and justice. May my god and my goddess, who for many days have been angry with me, In truth and justice be favorable to me; may my road be propitious; may my path be straight.

Thus the moon-god is identified with the chief god of the pantheon.

The name of the principal temple in Nippur.

This composition has a feature in its final lines which is unusual for hymns and prayers, but which is reminiscent of numerous royal inscriptions from very early times in Mesopotamia; a blessing is pronounced on whoever makes proper use of the piece, and a corresponding curse is added for its misuse. Duplicate copies of the text are preserved on two tablets found in the German excavations at Ashur. Text: E. Ebeling, KAR, Nos. 105, 361. Translations: E. Ebeling, Quellen zur Kenntnis der babylonischen Religion, MVAG, XXIII (1918), 1, 25-7; E. Ebeling in AOT, 247-8.

1 Thus the moon-god is identified with the chief god of the pantheon.
2 The name of the principal temple in Nippur.
3 These two lines stand after line 11 in the original text. They represent a later insertion in the text, which interrupts the sense awkwardly. I have ventured to transpose them to the present place in the translation, where I believe the interpolator intended them to stand.
4 A name of the moon-god meaning "bright rising."
5 The text has a mark of division in the midst of this line, at a point corresponding to the first semicolon in the translation. The probable meaning of this is that the line formed two separate lines in an earlier tablet from which our copy was made.
6 The personal deity mentioned two lines above.
of whose kingship Shamash in a vision commanded, and then shall name another royal name, May his playing on the harp be displeasing to the people; may his song of rejoicing be a thorn and a thistle.

Hymn to the Sun-God

Shamash is praised as a universal god. He shines on all the earth and even on the nether world. He enjoys the worship and devotion of all types of mankind even those in foreign lands. Appearing alternately with this thought throughout the hymn is the proclamation of the sun-god's interest in justice and righteousness. He punishes the wicked and rewards the righteous. The text is made up out of many fragments, all found in the library of Ashurbanipal, 668-633 BC. The best edition of the text is that of C. D. Gray, The Samaš Religious Texts (Chicago, 1901), Pis. 1-11, to which must be added, R. E. Brindinow, Assyrian Hymns, ZA, iv (1889), 25-35. Translations: P. A. Schollmeyer, Sumerisch-babylonische Hymnert und Gebete an Samaš (Paderborn, 1912), 80-94; E. Ebeling, in AOT, 244-47; F. M. Th. Bohl, De zonnegod als de beschermer der nooddruijten, JEOL (1942), 665-80.

(i)

O illuminator of [darkness ... ], Destroyer of [evil... ] above and below, O Shamash, illuminator of [darkness... ].

Destroyer of [evil... ] above and below, Cast down like a net [over the land] are thy rays; Over the mighty mountains ... of the sea. At thy appearance [all] princes are glad; All the Igigī rejoice over thee. They are always kept hidden [in] thy ... ; In the brilliance of thy light their path [is obscured]. (10) ... constantly look at thy radiance. The four world regions like fire... .

Opened wide is the gate which entirely... . The bread-offerings of all the Igigī.... O Shamash, at thy rising ... are bowed down. ... O Shamash ..., O shining one, who opens the darkness, who..., Who intensifies the noonday heat... . the grain fields. The mighty mountains are covered with thy brightness. Thy brilliance fills the extent of the land. (20) (When) thou art risen over the mountains thou dost scan the earth.

Thou art holding the ends of the earth suspended from the midst of heaven. The people of the world, all of them, thou dost watch over. Whatever Ea, the counselor-king, has willed to create, thou art guarding altogether. Those endowed with life, thou likewise dost tend; Thou indeed art their shepherd both above and below. Faithfully thou dost continue to pass through the heavens;

A collective name for the great gods of heaven.
The broad earth thou dost visit daily.
... the sea, the mountains, the earth, and the heavens.
Like a ... steadfastly thou goest every day. (30)
The lower region, belonging to the prince Kubu² (and) the Anunnaki,® thou dost guard;
The upper world, consisting of all inhabited places,
thou dost lead aright.
Shepherd of the lower world, guardian of the upper,
Guide, light of everything, O Shamash, art thou.
Thou dost constantly pass over the vast wide seas,
Whose innermost depths even the Igigi do not know.
... thy gleaming rays go down into the Deep;
The monsters of the sea look upon thy light.
... thou dost lead aright.

(10)

The sea, the mountains, the earth, and the heavens.
Thou dost keep awake; by day thou dost go and by night thou dost [return].
There is not among all the Igigi one who wearies
(himself) except thee;
(Yet) none among the gods of all the world who is exuberant like thee.

(30)

At thy rising the gods of the land assemble;
By thy frightful brilliance the land is overwhelmed.
Of all countries (even) those different in language,
Thou knowest their plans; thou art observant of their course.
All mankind rejoices in thee;
O Shamash, all the world longs for thy light.
By the cup of the diviner, by the bundle of cedarwood,
Thou dost instruct the oracle priest and the interpreter of dreams.
... of spells are bowed down before thee;
[Before] thee are bowed down both the wicked and the just.

("")

[Who] penetrates into the sea except thee?
For the good and the wicked (alike) thou dost set up judgment.
(line 3 is too incomplete for translation)
Pours over him, and sleep —
Thou dost hold back the evildoer, who is not...
Thou dost bring up ... which holds judgments.
By the true judgment, O Shamash, which thou hast spoken...

Glorious are thy pronouncements; they are not changed

Thou dost stand by the traveler whose road is difficult;

To the seafarer who fears the waters thou dost give [courage].
(Over) roads which are not proven thou dost [guide]
the hunter;
He follows along the high places just like the sun.
[The merchant with his] pouch thou dost save from the flood.

(seventeen broken fines omitted)
Spread out is thy wide net [to catch the man]
Who has coveted the wife of his comrade ...
On an unlucky day ...
(line omitted)
When thy weapon is turned on him [he has] no saviors.
In his trial his father will not stand by him;
To the word of the judge even his brothers do not answer;
By a bronze trap he will be caught unawares.
The horn of the perpetrator of abomination thou dost destroy.
He who manipulates the calculating of an account¹—his foundation will be changed. (40)
The unrighteous judge thou dost make to see imprisonment.
The receiver of a bribe who perverts (justice) thou dost make to bear punishment.
He who does not accept a bribe (but) intercedes for
the weak,
Is well-pleasing to Shamash (and) enriches (his) life.
The solicitous judge who pronounces a judgment of righteousness,
Shall prepare a palace; the abode of princes (shall be) his dwelling.
He who invests money at an exorbitant rate of reckoning—what does he gain?
He will make himself lie for the profit and then lose
[his bag of weights].
² He who invests his money at liberal rates of reckoning, yielding one shekel for three?
Is well-pleasing to Shamash, (and) enriches his life. (50)
He who handles the scales in falsehood,
He who deliberately changes the stone weights (and) lowers [their weight,]
Will make himself lie for the profit and then lose
[his bag of weights.]
He who handles the scales in truth, much
As much as possible . . .
He who handles the measure . . .

(iii)

(six broken lines omitted)
He is well-pleasing to Shamash (and) enriches his life.

¹ The word siddu appears to be borrowed from Sumerian Siddu "reckoning," although it has not been recognized as such in the previous translations of this text, nor in the existing Akkadian dictionaries. The phrase epci siddu is an exact translation of Sumerian Siddu "to render an account."
² The word for "bag of weights" may also be translated "capital."
³ The translation is based on a restoration which is uncertain but probable.
Such an interest rate is very common in Babylonian contracts; higher rates are also frequent.

See above, the Prayer of Lamentation to Ishtar, n.4.
He will expand (his) family; he will acquire wealth.
Like the water of eternal springs, there shall be enduring seed.
For the doer of good deeds, who is not crafty in accounts.
He who changes the least (thing) in an offering of...
Those who do evil—their seed shall not endure.
Those who make appeal—it is put before thee;
Quickly thou dost interpret their statements.
Thou dost hearken; thou dost support them; thou dost reinstate the right of him who has been badly treated.
Each and every one is kept by thy hand;
Thou dost guide all their omens aright; what is bound to come before thee.
Thou hearkenest, O Shamash, to prayer, supplication, and adoration;
To devotion (and) kneeling, to reciting of prayers and prostration.
In his hollow voice the feeble man calls out to thee;
The miserable, the weak, the mistreated, the poor man comes before thee faithfully with psalms (and) offerings.
When his family is distant, his city is far away, From the fear of the (open) field, the shepherd comes before thee.
The shepherd boy in confusion, the shepherd among enemies
o Shamash, comes before thee. The caravan which marches in fear,
The traveling trader, the peddler carrying the bag of weights, o Shamash, comes before thee. The net-fisherman, The hunter, the fighter and guard against animals
In the hiding place, the bird-catcher comes before thee.
The burglar, the thief, the enemy of the king,
The vagabond in the roads of the desert, comes before thee.
The wandering dead, the fleeting ghosts
Are in thy presence.
They then fear thee; they honor thy name;
They praise thy greatness forever.
The foolish of tongue who speak evil, Who, like clouds, have no face or countenance,
[To guide] their omens [aright] thou art sitting on a throne.
In all directions thou dost investigate their past.

Thou dost open the ears of the whole world.
For the wings of the glance of thine eyes the heavens are not sufficient;
For a divination bowl all the countries are not enough.
On the twentieth day thou dost rejoice; in joy and gladness
Thou dost eat and drink. Their pure wine (and) beer of the quay tavern-keeper
They pour out for thee. Beer of the quay tavern-keeper thou dost receive.
Those whom ... and flood surround thou indeed dost spare;
Their bright, pure outpourings thou dost accept.
Thou dost drink their mixture, the wine;
The wishes which they conceive thou indeed dost cause to be realized.
Those who are submissive—thou dost release their bans;
Those who do homage—thou dost accept their prayers.
They then fear thee; they honor thy name;
They praise thy greatness forever.
The foolish of tongue who speak evil, Who, like clouds, have no face or countenance,

Those who traverse the wide earth,
Those who tread upon the high mountains,
The monsters of the sea which are full of terror,
The product of the sea (and) what belongs in the Deep,
The spawn of the river which it produces from itself,
(all) O Shamash, are in thy presence.
Which are the mountains that have not clothed themselves with thy brilliance?
Which are the world regions that do not warm themselves by the glow of thy light?
O brightener of gloom, who makes darkness to shine,
O opener of darkness, who makes the broad earth to shine,
Who makes the day bright (and) sends down burning heat on the earth in the midday;
Who like a fire heats the broad earth,
Who makes days short, who makes nights long, ... cold (and) frost, rain (and) snow,

Psalm to Marduk

The one purpose of this composition is to establish a quiet and favorable mood in the god Marduk, when he is returned to his temple, after a long ceremony known as the Akitu, or New Year's Festival. To this end the principal temples where he is worshiped, and all the main gods are invoked, and asked to say to him, "Be appeased." This word is common to three slightly different refrains which run throughout the composition, at the ends of the lines. The most complete copy of the text is from a tablet found at Babylon. Other copies existed at Nineveh, and fragments of two of them are known from the time of Ashurbanipal, 668-633 B.C. The Babylonian text is said to have been copied from an older tablet. To judge from the name of the scribe, Bel-ahhim-iribam, this was done in Neo-Babylonian times. The date of the original composition can not be determined. It appears to have been written in Sumerian.
May Sin, the lamp of heaven and earth, (say to thee) "How long," (and) "Be appeased." 8

May the princess of city and house, the great mother, Ninlil, (say to thee) "How long," .... (20)

May Baba, the gracious lady, (say to thee), "How long," ....

May Adad, the son beloved of Anu, (say to thee), "How long," ....

May Shala, the great wife, (say to thee), "How long," ....

O Lord, mighty one who dwells in Ekur” let thine own divine spirit bring thee rest.

O thou who art the hero of the gods—may the gods of heaven and earth cause thine anger to be appeased.

Do not neglect thy city, Nippur; “O Lord, be appeased,” may they say to thee.

Do not neglect Babylon, the city of thy rejoicing; “O Lord, be appeased,” ....

Look favorably on thy house; look favorably on thy city; “O Lord, be appeased,” ....

The bolt of Babylon, the lock of Esagila, the bricks of Ezida restore thou to their places; “O Lord, be appeased,” may the gods of heaven and earth say to thee.

Prayer to the Gods of the Night

The occasion for this prayer is a divination ceremony carried on at night. The great gods who ordinarily control the affairs of the world are regarded as resting in deep; and therefore the gods represented by several of the constellations of fixed stars are asked to witness the performance and to guarantee that truth will be revealed. The place from which this text comes is not known, but it was written in the Old Babylonian period, in the first half of the second millennium B.C. It is written in the Akkadian language and the Babylonian cursive script. Two slightly variant copies of the text are known, one of which is on a tablet giving two additional prayers of similar nature. These latter are not given here because they are somewhat fragmentary. Text A: V. K. Shileiko, Izvestija Rossisjs[oj

May Sarpanitum, daughter-in-law of the Deep (say to thee), "How long," .... (20)

May Nabu (say to thee) "How long,"

May the prince, Lord Marduk, director of the Anunnaki, (say to thee), "How long," ....

May Babylon say to thee, "Be appeased"; may thy house... (10)

May Anu, the great, father of the gods, say to thee, "How long," (and) "Be appeased."

May the great mountain, father Enlil, (say to thee) "How long," ....

May the princess of city and house, the great mother, Ninlil, (say to thee) "How long," ....

May Ninurta, the chief son of Enlil, the exalted arm of Anu, (say to thee) "How long,"

May Sin, the lamp of heaven and earth, (say to thee) "How long," ....

May the hero Shamash, the bearded one, son of Ningal (say to thee) "How long," ....

May Ea, king of the Deep, (say to thee) "How long," ....

May Damkina, queen of the Deep, (say to thee) "How long," ....

1 The restoration is made on the basis of the following Times and in particular lines 31 and 36, following also Langdon, Babylonian Penitential Psalms, ix.

2 It is intended that the first eleven lines should all end with the same refrain as line 1, although the text actually gives only the first word of the refrain in 2:11.

3 One of the “Fifty Names” of Marduk listed in the seventh tablet of the Babylonian Creation Epic.

4 The name of the chief temple of Marduk, located in Babylon and known from Old Babylonian times until the Hellenistic period.

5 Although there was a chapel in the temple of Ezida known as Ezida, it is not probable that it is meant here; more likely the reference is to the great temple in Borsippa. It is true that Ezida in Borsippa was a temple of Nabu, but it is not inappropriate to call Marduk, the chief of the gods in Neo-Babylonian times, the “Lord of Ezida,” especially since he seems to have been associated with this temple even as early as the time of Hammurabi.

6 A principal sanctuary in the temple of Ezida at Borsippa.

7 The refrain is now augmented by the words, “How long?” and continues in this form through line 28, although in its written form it appears only represented by the first word. “How long?” is an abbreviated exclamation, meaning, “How long will you remain in your present state? Is it not time for a change?”

8 The refrain is written out in full in this line because it is the first line on the reverse of the tablet.

9 The historic temple of Enlil in the city of Nippur. Since Marduk in Neo-Babylonian theology had been assigned the position that Enlil once held it is quite in order to say that he dwells in Ekur.

10 After two lines (29-30) without a refrain, the response now assumes its third form and continues so to the end.

11 The original composition seems to have ended here; but the Assyrian copy adds the following prayer: “Make Astarunzipal, the shepherd, thy sustainer, to live; hear his prayer; lay well the foundation of the seat of his royalty; the control of the people let him hold unto distant days.”
They are lying down, the great ones. They are pronouncing judgment; they are not deciding things. They are not pronouncing judgment; they are not deciding things. Shamash, Sin, Adad, and Ishtar, the gods of the land and the goddesses of the land, the temple and the most holy places are quiet and dark. In ignorance I have eaten that forbidden of my god; in ignorance I have set foot on that prohibited by my god; the fire-god...
I utter laments, but no one hears me; I am troubled; I am overwhelmed; I can not see.

O my god, merciful one, I address to thee the prayer, "Ever incline to me";

I kiss the feet of my goddess; I crawl before thee.  (40)

(lines 41-49 are mostly broken and cannot be restored with certainty)

How long, O my goddess, whom I know or do not know, ere thy hostile heart will be quieted?  (50)

Man is dumb; he knows nothing; Mankind, everyone that exists,—what does he know? Whether he is committing sin or doing good, he does not even know.

O my lord, do not cast thy servant down; He is plunged into the waters of a swamp; take him by the hand.

The sin which I have done, turn into goodness;

The transgression which I have committed, let the wind carry away;

My many misdeeds strip off like a garment

O my god, (my) transgressions are seven times seven; remove my transgressions;

O my goddess, (my) transgressions are seven times seven; remove my transgressions;

O god whom I know or do not know, (my) transgressions are seven times seven; remove my transgressions.

O goddess whom I know or do not know, (my) transgressions are seven times seven; remove my transgressions.

Remove my transgressions (and) I will sing thy praise. May thy heart, like the heart of a real mother, be quieted toward me; Like a real mother (and) a real father may it be quieted toward me.
Hittite Prayers

Prayer of Pudu-hepas¹ to the Sun-Goddess of Arinna and her Circle

Text: KUB, xxi, 27. Literature: Short quotations were given by E. Forrer, Reallexikon der Assyriologie, 1 (1929), 150 and by A. Götze, Kulturgeschichte Kleinasiens (1933), 129, 2nd ed. (1957) 137.

A. PRAYER TO THE SUN-GODDESS HERSELF

To the Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady, the mistress of the Hatti lands, the queen of heaven and earth.

Sun-goddess of Arinna, thou art queen of all countries! In the Hatti country thou bearest the name of the Sun-goddess of Arinna; (5) but in the land which thou madest the cedar land thou bearest the name Hebat. (6) In the Hatti country thou bearest the name of the Sun-goddess of Arinna; (5) but in the land which thou bearest the name Hebat. (6)

To the Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady, the mistress of the Hatti lands, the queen of heaven and earth.

Sun-goddess of Arinna, thou art queen of all countries! In the Hatti country thou bearest the name of the Sun-goddess of Arinna; (5) but in the land which thou madest the cedar land thou bearest the name Hebat. (6)

Try again! In the Hatti country thou bearest the name of the Sun-goddess of Arinna; (5) but in the land which thou bearest the name Hebat. (6)

Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady, yield to me, hearken to me! (15) Among men there is a saying: "To a woman in travail the god yields her wish." (Since) I, Pudu-hepas, am a woman in travail (and since) I have devoted myself to thy son, yield to me, Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady! (20) Grant to me what [I ask]! Grant life to [Hattusilis, thy servant]! Through [the Good-women] (and) the Mother-goddesses [long (and) enduring] years (and) days shall be [given] to him. (Since) thou, an exalted deity, holdest [a place set apart among the gods], (25) all the gods are [suffrants to thee], and no one appeals [to thee in vain].

In [the assembly] of all the gods request thou the life [of Hattusilis]! May [thy] request (30) be received with favor! Because thou, Sun-goddess of Arinna, my [lady], hast shown favor to me and (because) the [good of [the land] and of its realm [is close to thy heart], thou shalt enjoy the reverent [worship] of [my family]. Where[as I have now pacified] thy soul, Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady, (35) hearken to whatsoever I lay before thee in prayer on [this] day! [Do something] for this cause! Let not the gods reject my request!

... (iii) Hattusilis, that servant of thine, who [is ill]. (15) In the presence of Sun[____], the physician, they spoke charms over him [. . .]. If [Hattusilis is] accursed, and if Hattusilis, [my husband], has become [hateful] in the eyes of you, the gods; or (if) anyone of the gods above or below has taken offence at him; or (if) anyone has made an offering to the gods (20) to bring evil upon Hattusilis—accept not those evil words, O goddess, my lady! Let evil not touch Hattusilis, thy servant! (25) O gods, prefer not [our] adversaries,

B. PRAYER TO LELWANIS*¹

... (iii) Hattusilis, that servant of thine, who [is ill]. (15) In the presence of Sun[____], the physician, they spoke charms over him [. . .]. If [Hattusilis is] accursed, and if Hattusilis, [my husband], has become [hateful] in the eyes of you, the gods; or (if) anyone of the gods above or below has taken offence at him; or (if) anyone has made an offering to the gods (20) to bring evil upon Hattusilis—accept not those evil words, O goddess, my lady! Let evil not touch Hattusilis, thy servant! (25) O gods, prefer not [our] adversaries,

*¹ This is probably the Hittite pronunciation of the name which is otherwise spelled "Ishtar" of Samuha; she was Hattusilis' special patroness.

¹ Hittite queen and consort of Hattusilis, the son of Mursilis.
² i.e. died.
³ Uruhi-Tessub is meant; the expression is derogatory.
(our) enviers (and our) ... [. . .] to us! If thou, goddess, my lady, wilt grant him life and relay to the gods, thy peers, the good (word), and (if) (30) thou wilt tread under foot the evil words and shut them out—O Lelwanis, my lady, may the life of Hattusilis, thy servant, and of Pudu-hepas, thy handmaid, come forth from thy mouth in the presence of the gods! To Hattusilis, thy servant, and to Pudu-hepas, thy handmaid, (35) (5)th days, months and days!

And if thou, Lelwanis, my lady, relayest the good (word) to the gods, grantest life to thy servant Hattusilis, (and) givest him long years, months (and) days, I will go (and) make for Lelwanis, my lady, (40) a silver statue of Hattusilis—as tall as Hattusilis himself, with its head, its hands (and) its feet of gold—moreover I will hang it (with ornaments).

C. PRAYER TO ZINTUIHS

O Zintuhiis, my lady, beloved granddaughter of the Storm-god and of the Sun-goddess of Arinna! Thou art the pectoral (45) of the Storm-god and of the Sun-goddess of Arinna; they continually look at thee.

(small gap)

(iv) [In this matter], Zintuhiis, my lady, [prove] thy divine power! Before the Storm-god, thy grandfather, (5) [and before] the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy grandmother, bring (the request) [of Hattusilis, thy servant, for life and long years! Let that come forth from their mouth!]

[And] if thou, Zintuhiis, my lady, wilt [hear]ken to these words and relay them to the Storm-god, thy grandfather, (10) [and] to the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy grandmother, [then] I will make a [great] ornament for thee, Zintuhiis, my lady.

D. PRAYER TO MEZZULLAS

O Mezzulas, my lady! Thou art the beloved daughter of the Storm-god [and] of the Sun-goddess of Arinna. (15) Whatever thou, Mezzulas, my lady, sayest [to] the Storm-god, thy father, and to the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother, [to that] they will hearken; they will not reject it. These words which [I], Pudu-hepas, thy handmaid, have laid in [prayer] before the Storm-god, thy father, and the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother, (20) announce them, Mezzulas, my lady, and convey them to the Storm-god, thy father, [and to the Sun-goddess of Arinna], thy mother!

[And if thou, Mezzulas, my lady, wilt hearken to these] words [and convey them to the Storm-god, thy father, and to the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother], (25) [then I will make . . . ] and present (it) to Mezzulas, my lady, [ . . . ].

E. PRAYER TO THE STORM-GOD OF ZIPPALANDA

[O Storm-god of Zippalanda], my lord! Thou art the beloved son [of the Storm-god and of the Sun-goddess of Arinna]. Announce [my words to the Storm-god, thy father,] and to the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother! (30) The Storm-god, thy father, (and) the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother, will [not reject] thy word, they will hearken to thee. This [word], which I, Pudu-hepas, thy handmaid, have [spoken] in prayer, announce and relay thou (to thy parents), Storm-god of Zippalanda, my lord! O god, my lord, (35) yield to this word of mine! Because as a woman in travail I have in my own person made reparation to the god, my lord, intercede for me, god, my lord, with the Storm-god, thy father, and the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother! Hattusilis, thy servant, wore himself out in the god's service; he gave himself body and soul (40) to the restoration of Nerik, the beloved city of the god, my lord. So be thou, O god, my lord, favorably inclined toward Hattusilis, thy servant! These words, which I lay in prayer before the Storm-god, thy father, (45) and the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother—convey them (to thy parents) for me, O Storm-god of Zippalanda, my lord!

And if thou, Storm-god of Zippalanda, my lord, wilt convey these words to the Storm-god, thy father, and to the Sun-goddess of Arinna, thy mother, and thereby wilt [deliver] Hattusilis from evil, (edge) then I will make [for thee . . . ] (and) a golden shield weighing x minas; I will make [for thee . . . ] and the . . . for the god [ . . . ].

Plague Prayers of Mursilis¹

1. Haitian Storm-god, my lord, and ye, Haitian gods, my lords! Mursilis, the great king, your servant, has sent me (with the order:) Go! To the Haitian Storm-god, my lord, and to the gods, my lords, speak as follows:

What is this that ye have done? A plague ye have let into the land. The Hatti land has been cruelly afflicted by the plague. For twenty years now men have been dying in my father's days, in my brother's days, and in mine own since I have become the priest of the gods. When men are dying in the Hatti land like this, the plague is in no wise over. As for me, the agony of my heart and the anguish of my soul I cannot endure any more.

2. When I celebrated festivals, I worshiped all the gods, I never preferred one temple to another. The matter of the plague I have laid in prayer before all the gods making vows to them (and saying): "Hearken to me, ye gods, my lords! Drive ye forth the plague from the Hatti land! The reason for which people are dying in the Hatti land—either let it be established by an omen, or let me see it in a dream, or let a prophet declare it!" But the gods did not hearken to me and the plague got no better in the Hatti land. The Hatti land was cruelly afflicted.

¹Hittite king, son of Suppiluliumas; about third quarter of the 14th century B.C.

3. The few people who were left to give sacrificial loaves and libations were dying too. Matters again got too much for me. So I made the anger of the gods the subject of an oracle. I learnt of two ancient tablets. The first tablet dealt with the offerings to the river Mala. The old kings had regularly presented offerings to the river Mala. But now a plague has been rampant in the Hatti land since the days of my father, and we have never performed the offerings to the river Mala.

4. The second tablet concerned Kurustama. When the Hattian Storm-god had brought people of Kurustama to the country of Egypt and had made an agreement concerning them with the Hattians so that they were under oath to the Hattian Storm-god—although the Hattians as well as the Egyptians were under oath to the Hattian Storm-god, the Hattians ignored their obligations; the Hattians promptly broke the oath of the gods. My father sent foot soldiers and charioteers who attacked the country of Amka, Egyptian territory. Again he sent troops, and again they attacked it. When the Egyptians became frightened, they asked outright for one of his sons to (take over) the kingship. But when my father gave them one of his sons, they killed him as they led him there. My father let his anger run away with him, he went to war against Egypt and attacked Egypt. He smote the foot soldiers and the charioteers of the country of Egypt. The Hattian Storm-god, my lord, by his decision even then let my father prevail; he vanquished and smote the foot soldiers and the charioteers of the country of Egypt. But when they brought back to the Hatti land the prisoners which they had taken a plague broke out among the prisoners and they began to die.

5. When they moved the prisoners to the Hatti land, these prisoners carried the plague into the Hatti land. From that day on people have been dying in the Hatti land. Now, when I found that tablet dealing with the country of Egypt, I made the matter the subject of an oracle of the god (and asked): "Those arrangements which were made by the Hattian Storm-god—namely that the Egyptians and the Hattians as well were put under oath by the Hattian Storm-god, that the Damnassaras deities were present in the temple of the Hattian Storm-god, and that the Hattians promptly broke their word—has this perhaps become the cause of the anger of the Hattian Storm-god, my lord?"

And (so) it was established.

6. Because of the plague, I made the offerings to the river Mala the subject of an oracle also. And in that matter too it was established that I should have to account for myself before the Hattian Storm-god.

See now! I have admitted my guilt before the Storm-god (and said): "It is so. We have done it." I know for certain that the offence was not committed in my days, that it was committed in the days of my father. But, since the Hattian Storm-god is angry for that reason and people are dying in the Hatti land, I am (nevertheless) making the offerings to the Hattian Storm-god, my lord, on that account.

7. Because I humble myself and cry for mercy, hearken to me, Hattian Storm-god, my lord! Let the plague stop in the Hatti land!

8. The reasons for the plague that were established when I made the matter the subject of a series of oracles, these have I removed. I have made [ample] restitution. The matter of the (broken) oath which was established (as a cause) in connection with the plague, offerings for those oaths I have made to the Hattian Storm-god, my lord. I have also made (offerings) [to the other gods]. The offerings have been presented to thee, Hattian Storm-god, my lord; the offerings have been presented to them too. (As for) the offerings to the river Mala that were established (as a cause) in connection with the plague—since I am now on my way to the river Mala, acquit me of that offering to the river Mala, O Hattian Storm-god my lord, and ye gods, my lords! The offering to the river Mala I promise to make, I promise to complete it properly. The reason for which I make it—namely the plague—O gods, my lords, take pity on me and let that plague abide in the Hatti land!

9. Hattian Storm-god, my lord, (and) ye gods, my lords! It is only too true that man is sinful. My father sinned and transgressed against the word of the Hattian Storm-god, my lord. But I have not sinned in any respect. It is only too true, however, that the father's sin falls upon the son. So, my father's sin has fallen upon me. Now, I have confessed before the Hattian Storm-god, my lord, and before the gods, my lords (admitting): "It is true, we have done it." And because I have confessed my father's sin, let the soul of the Hattian Storm-god, my lord, and (those) of the gods, my lords, be again pacified! Take pity on me and drive the plague out of the Hatti land! Suffer not to die the few who are still left to offer sacrificial loaves and libations!

10. See! I lay the matter of the plague before the Hattian Storm-god, my lord. Hearken to me, Hattian Storm-god, and save my life! This is of what I [have to remind] thee: The bird takes refuge in (its) nest, and the nest saves its life. Again: if anything becomes too much for a servant, he appeals to his lord. His lord hears him and takes pity on him. Whatever had become too much for him, he sets right for him. Again: if the servant has incurred a guilt, but confesses his guilt to his lord, his lord may do with him whatever he pleases. But, because (the servant) has confessed his guilt to his lord, his lord's soul is pacified, and his lord will not punish that servant. I have now confessed.

*A river marking the eastern frontier of Hittite dominated territory and separating it from the Hurri kingdom.
*A city in the Kashkean country of northern Anatolia. The purpose for which these people were sent to Egypt is not known to us.
*The region between Lebanon and Antilibanus.
*See! I lay the matter of the plague before the Hattian Storm-god, my lord. Hearken to me, Hattian Storm-god, and save my life! This is of what I [have to remind] thee: The bird takes refuge in (its) nest, and the nest saves its life. Again: if anything becomes too much for a servant, he appeals to his lord. His lord hears him and takes pity on him. Whatever had become too much for him, he sets right for him. Again: if the servant has incurred a guilt, but confesses his guilt to his lord, his lord may do with him whatever he pleases. But, because (the servant) has confessed his guilt to his lord, his lord's soul is pacified, and his lord will not punish that servant. I have now confessed.
my father's sin. It is only too true, I have done it. If there is to be restitution, it seems clear that with all the gifts that have already been given because of this plague, with all the prisoners that have been brought home, in short with all the restitution that Hattusa has made because of the plague, it has already made restitution twentyfold. And yet the soul of the Hattian Storm-god, my lord, and of the (other) gods, my lords, is not pacified. But, if ye demand from me additional restitution, tell me of it in a dream and I will give it to you.

11. See! I am praying to thee, Hattian Storm-god, my lord. So save my life! If indeed it is for those reasons which I have mentioned that people are dying,—as soon as I set them right, let those that are still able to give sacrificial loaves and libations die no longer! If, on the other hand, people are dying for some other reason, either let me see it in a dream, or let it be found out by an oracle, or let a prophet declare it, or let all the priests find out by incubation whatever I suggest to them. Hattian Storm-god, my lord, save my life! Let the gods, my lords, prove their divine power! Let someone see it in a dream! For whatever reason people are dying, let that be found out!... Hattian Storm-god, my lord, save my life! Let this plague abate again in the Hatti land!

What is this, O gods, that ye have done? A plague ye have let into the land. The Hatti land, all of it, is dying; so no one prepares sacrificial loaves and libations for you. The plowmen who used to work the fields of the god are dead; so no one works or reaps the fields of the god at all. The grinding women who used to make the sacrificial loaves for the gods are dead; so no one works or reaps the fields of the god at all. The shepherds are dead and the corral [and the sheepfold are empty]. So it comes to pass that the sacrificial loaves (and) libations, and the offerings of animals have stopped. And ye, O gods, come on this day and hold us responsible. Man has lost his wits, and there is nothing that we do aright. O gods, whatever sin you behold, either let a prophet rise and declare it, or let the sibyls or the priests learn about it by incubation, or let man see it in a dream!... Hattian Storm-god, my lord, save my life! Let this plague abate again in the Hatti land!

b

Daily Prayer of the King

Texts: KUB, xxiv, 1-4 and the additional pieces KUB, xxx, 12 and 13. Literature: The hymn of section b. is translated in the following places: H. Ebholz, Berichte aus den preussischen Kunstsammlungen, xux (1928), 32-34; E. Forrer, Reattexilion der Assyrilogie, 1 (1929), 149 f.; A. Götze, Kulturgeschichte Kleinasiens (1933), 128. The whole composition was treated by O. R. Gurney in AAA, xxvii (1940), 3-163. In part of the texts the addressed deity is the Sun-goddess of Arinna, in another part Telepinus. The latter version has been adopted here.

Entreaty

The scribe reads this tablet addressing the deity daily; he praises the deity (saying):

Telepinus, a mighty (and) noble deity art thou. Mursilis, the king, thy servant, and the queen, (5) thy handmaid, have sent me (with the request): "Go! entreat Telepinus, our lord, the guardian of our persons!"

Whether thou art in heaven above among the gods, noble Telepinus; whether gone to the sea or to the mountains (10) to roam; whether gone to war to the country of the enemy—now let the sweet and soothing cedar essence lure thee! Come home into thy temple! Here I am entreat thee with sacrificical loaves and libations, (15) allow thyself to be lured forth! Let me speak to thee alone and whatever I say unto thee—lend me thine ear, O god, and hearken to it!

Thou, Telepinus, art a noble god; thy godhead and the gods’ temples are firmly established in the Hatti land. But (20) in no other land anywhere are they so.
Festivals (and) sacrifices pure (and) holy they present to thee in the Hatti land. But in no other country anywhere do they present them so.

(25) Lofty temples adorned with silver and gold thou hast in the Hatti land. But in no other country anywhere hast thou their like, (ii) Cups (and) rhyta, silver, gold and (precious) stones thou hast in the Hatti land. But in no other country hast thou their like.

Festivals too—the festival of the month, the festivals of the new year, the ceremonies of winter and, spring, (5) and of the summer, the festivals of entreaty—men celebrate for thee in the Hatti land. But in no other country anywhere do they celebrate their like. Thy divinity, O Telepinus, (10) is honored in the Hatti country anywhere do they celebrate their like. Thy celebrate for thee in the Hatti land. But in no other country hast thou their like. Copies (and) sacrifices pure (and) holy they present during life, health, long years (and) strength! Into their souls place [light] and joy!

Grant them sons (and) daughters, grandsons (and) great-grandsons! (10) Grant them . . . ! Grant them fertility of grain (and) vine, of sheep, cattle (and) people! Grant them a man's valiant (and) victorious weapon! Set the countries of the enemy (15) beneath their feet and let [them die by the sword]!

From the Hatti land drive forth the evil fever, plague, famine and misery to these enemy countries.

But to the king (and) the queen, to the princes and to the Hatti land (10) grant life, health, long and enduring years and joy! Grant everlasting fertility to their crops, vines, fruit-bearing trees, cattle, sheep, goats, pigs, mules (and) asses together with the beasts of the fields, and to (their) people! Let them flourish! Let the rains [come]! Let the winds of prosperity pass over! Let all thrive (and) prosper in the Hatti land!

And the congregation shouts: "Let it be so!"

Prayer to be Spoken in an Emergency

(i) Thus speaks the Tabarnaš Muwatallis, the Great King, the king of the Hatti country, the son of Mursilis, the Great King, the king of the Hatti country, the valiant: When things get too much for a man and he approaches his gods in prayer, he sets up two offering-tables of wickerwork (5) covered (with a cloth) on the roof under the open sky. He sets up one table for the Sun-goddess of Arinna, and one table for [all the (other)] gods. Upon them (there are deposited) 35 sacrificial loaves weighing one tarnal made of barley meal, [x] thin loaves(?) with honey and fine oil inside, mutton-fat cake, a full stewpot, meal, a full cup, 30 pitchers of wine. When this is all made ready, the king ascends to the roof and offers it to the Sim-god of Heaven.

(10) He speaks as follows: "Sun-god of Heaven and Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady, queen of the Hatti land! Storm-god, king of heaven, my lord! Hebat, queen, my lady! Hattian Storm-god, king of heaven, master of the Hatti land, my lord! Storm-god of Zippalanda, my lord, beloved son of the Storm-god, lord of the Hatti land! (15) All ye gods and goddessess! All ye mountains (and) rivers of the Hatti land! (My) lords, lordly gods! Sun-goddess of Arinna, my lady, and all ye gods of the Hatti land, lords whose priest I am and who have accorded me unlimited kingship over the Hatti land!

(20) "Now, hearken ye, gods, to the prayer of me, your priest and your servant! I shall speak in prayer first of you, the lordly gods, of your temples (and) of your images; how the gods of the Hatti land are worshiped, and how they are abused.

(25) "Thereafter I shall speak in prayer of my own affairs. Lend me your ears, O gods, my lords! Listen to these my prayers! And whatever matters I lay before the gods in prayer, receive those matters, O gods, my lords, and listen to them! I may lay before you, (30) gods, matters which ye do not wish to hear; they rise from my mortal mouth. Those words, O gods, my lords, refrain from hearing!

"Seris, my lord, thou bull who standest in the presence of the Storm-god of the Hatti-land! These matters that I present in my prayer, (35) announce them to the gods! Let the lord gods listen to those matters that I present in my prayer, the lord gods of heaven and earth!"

(There follows a full list of the Hatti gods.)

(iii) "Storm-god of the house of the Tawannannas. Storm-god hda!lal!i!\ Gods and goddesses of king and queen, ye who have been invoked (and) ye who have not been invoked; ye in whose temples king and queen worship officiating as priests, (and) ye in whose temples they do not! Gods (and) goddessses, (10) . . . , dark nether world, heaven (and) earth, clouds (and) winds, thunder (and) lightning, place of assembly where the gods meet in assembly.

"Sun-god of Heaven, my lord, shepherd of mankind! Thou risest, O Sun-god of Heaven, from the Sea. Thou takest thy place in heaven, (15) Sun-god of Heaven, my lord. Over man, dog, swine (and) the beasts of the field dost thou, Sun-god, pronounce judgment daily.

"Here then am I, Muwatallis, the king, the priest of the Sun-goddess of Arinna and of all the gods, praying to the Sun-god of Heaven. (20) On this day, O Sun-god of Heaven, my lord, arouse the (other) gods! Those gods whom I invoked with (the word of) my mouth on this day, and with whatever request,—

"those gods, O Sun-god of Heaven, summon from heaven (and) from earth, from the mountains (and) from the rivers, from their temples (and) their thrones!"

(25) Thereafter the king speaks as follows: "Storm-god pihanUaU, my lord! I was but a mortal. Yet my father was priest of the Sun-goddess of Arinna and of all the gods. My father begat me, but thou, Storm-god pihanHallil, tookest me from my mother and rearedst me. Thou madest me priest of the Sun-goddess of Arinna (30) and of all the gods. In the Hatti land thou madest me king.

"So, I, Muwatallis, the king, reared by thee, Storm-god pihanHaHU, am now praying. The gods whom I invoked (with the word of) my tongue, (35) the gods to whom I prayed,—intercede for me with all those gods! Take the words of my tongue, the words of me, Muwatallis, thy servant, and pass them on in full to the gods! In the matters that I lay before the gods in prayer let them not forsake me!

(40) "The bird takes refuge in (its) nest and lives. I have taken refuge with the Storm-god pihanHallil, my lord; so save my life! The matters which I lay before the gods in prayer, pass them on in full to the gods! Let them hearken to me! Therefore too shall I praise the Storm-god pihanHallil.

(45) "No sooner will the gods have heard my words, than they will put right (and) remove the evil that is in my soul. To whom is praise due, if praise is not due to the Storm-god pihanJaaStil, my lord? Then, whenever a man looks upon god and mortal, (50) he will say: 'Surely, the Storm-god pihanUaU, my lord, the king of heaven, has favored (that) man and rescued him; he has put him right and advanced him.' In the future my children (and) children's children, kings (and) queens (55) of Hatti, princes (and) noblemen will always show reverence to the Storm-god pihanHallil, my lord. Thus they will speak: 'Surely, that god is a strong, valiant (and) glorious god!' And the gods of heaven, the mountains (and) the rivers will praise thee.

(60) "I, Muwatallis, thy servant,—my innermost soul rejoices, and I praise the Storm-god pihanallasW. Thou, Storm-god pihanHallil, shalt rejoice over the temples that I shall build for thee, over the decrees I shall issue for thee. The sacrificial loaves and the libations (65) which I am accustomed to present to the Storm-god pihanUaU, my lord—I would give them to thee gladly; I would not give them to thee grudgingly. So, Sun-god pihanlaslaU, my lord, beam upon me like the full moon, (70) and shine above me like the sun in the sky!

"Walk on my right hand! Team up with me as (with) a bull to draw (the wagon)! Walk by my side in true Storm-god fashion! Truly I wish to speak thus: 'He who is favored by the Storm-god pi has fas I if; he who is reared by him, [prospers....]'"

(There follow offerings to the gods.)

(iv) When the Sun has finished breaking the sacrificial loaves, he presents in prayer the (special) matters which are in his mind.
(Upon completion of that prayer new offerings to the gods are given. Finally the broken loaves are burned.)

Prayer of Arnuwandas and Asmu-Nikkal Concerning the Ravages Inflicted on Hittite Cult-Centers

(begning lost)

(1) The land of the Hittites is a land [that is devoted] to you, the gods. In the land of the Hittites we are accustomed to present to you pure and really [holy] sacrifices. In the land of the Hittites we are accustomed to show you, the gods, reverence.

(6) Ye should know, O gods, by your divine insight that no one has ever before taken care of your temples as we have;

that no one has ever paid more reverent attention to your implements; (11) that no one has ever taken care of the goods, silver (and) gold, of the rhyta (and) cups(!) of you, the gods, as we have;

furthermore, that (in the case of) the images of you, the gods,—(15) when anything had grown old on any god’s body, when any implements of the gods had grown old—that no one has ever renewed them as we have;

furthermore, (20) that no one has ever paid more reverent attention to matters of cleanliness connected with your sacrifices; that no one has ever made more careful provisions for the sacrifices (and) festivals due you for the day, the month, (and) the new year;

furthermore, (as for) the slaves, slave-girls (and) villages of you, the gods,—they used to oppress them with imposts (25) (and) feudal services; the slaves (and) slave-girls of you, the gods, they would take and make them their own slaves and slave-girls. [We, Arnuwandas the Great King,1 [and Asmu-Nikkal, the Great Queen, have freed them] for you in every particular.

Ye should know by your divine insight what offerings of sacrificial loaves and libations they used to present.

[We], Arnuwandas, the Great King, and Asmu-Nikkal, the Great Queen, shall again give fat sheep (and) fine [oxen], fine sacrificial loaves and libations.

(ii) So stand ye by us!

(5) The territory which the enemies² plundered and kept for themselves when they invaded the Hatti country, that (territory) we promise to restore to you, the gods, and to make them account for it.

The territories which were under obligation to present to you, the gods of heaven, sacrificial loaves, libations (and) tribute—in some the priests, the mothers-of-god, the holy priests, (10) the anointed, the musicians (and) the singers had to leave, in others the gods’ tributes and treasures were carried off;

in others there were carried off the Sun-goddess’ of Arinna sun discs and lunulæ (15) made of silver (and) gold, bronze (and) copper, the fine cloth, the adufii garments, the tunics (and) the gowns, the sacrificial loaves (and) the libation bowls; in others they drove away the herds, the fattened oxen (and) the fattened cows, the fattened sheep (and) the fattened goats.

(20) In the country of Nerik, in Hursama, in the country of Kastama, in the country of Himuwa, in the country of Taggasta, in the country of Kammama, in the country of Zalpuwa, in the country of Kapiruha, in the country of Hurna, in the country of Danskusna, in the country of Tapapanulwa, in the country of Tarugga, in the country of Ilauluha, in the country of Zihana, in the country (25) of Sipidduwa, in the country of Washaya, in the country of Parituya³—

the temples⁴ which ye, the gods, possessed in these countries, the Kashkeans sacked them. They smashed the images of you, the gods, (iii) They plundered silver (and) gold, rhyta (and) cups of silver (and) gold, (and) of copper, your implements of bronze (and) your garments; they shared out these things among themselves.

They scattered the priests and the holy priests, the mothers-of-god, the anointed, (5) the musicians, the singers, the cooks, the bakers, the plowmen (and) the gardeners and made them their slaves.

They also scattered your cattle (and) your sheep. They shared out among themselves your fields (and) lands, (the source) of the sacrificial loaves (and) the vineyards, (10) (the source) of the libations. Those the Kashkeans took for themselves.

Thus it has come about that in those countries no one invokes the names of you, the gods, any more; no one presents to you (15) the sacrifices due you for the day, the month, (and) the new year⁵ no one celebrates your festivals (and) pageants.

Here, to the Hatti land, no one brings tribute (and) treasures for you anymore. No longer do priests, holy priests, mothers-of-god, musicians, (or) singers come to you from any [place].

¹ A predecessor of Suppiluliumas.

² The Kashkeans are meant, unruly tribes who live in the mountains of northern Anatolia and incessantly harass Hittite territory.

³ All these countries must be located along the Kashkean frontier.

⁴ The text is taken from KUB, xxxi, 124 if 10 ff.

---

¹ i.e. the king.

¹ The territory which the enemies plundered and kept for themselves when they invaded the Hatti country, that (territory) we promise to restore to you, the gods, and to make them account for it.
Prayer of Kantuzilis for Relief from his Sufferings

Text: KUB, xxx, 10. Literature: A few lines are translated by J. Friedrich AFJ, xii (1940), 154.

(beginning lost)

O Sun-god, when thou goest down to the nether world (to be) with him, forget not to speak with that patron-god of mine and (5) apprise him of Kantuzilis’ plight!

O god, ever since my mother gave birth to me, thou, my god, hast reared me. Thou, my god, (art) my [refuge] and my anchor.2 Thou, [my god], broughtest me together with good men. Thou, my god, didst show me what to do in time of distress. [Thou], my god,

---

5 Perhaps bridged by KUB, XXIII, 115.

6 Kantuzilis is not otherwise identified in the text. He is probably the high official and member of the royal family who is mentioned in 2 BoTU, 24 among children of Suppiluliumas.

7 Literally: my rope.

---

The Sun-god, who for[sook] me, [might take] pity on me! [Much as] I wearied myself with pleading before my god, it is yet of no avail. (5) No sooner didst thou scrape [one thing evil] off [me], than thou broughtest back [another] in its stead.

Would that [the Sun-god] might calm down again and that peace might return to his heart! Would that he might raise me up again out of my affliction. [O Sun-god], . . . , [the favorite son of] Sin and Ningal8 art thou. See! I, Kantuzilis, thy servant, have asked for [mercy] and humbled myself. [See!] I am beseeching thee.

(10) To the Sun-god I sing. See! I, Kantuzilis, implore my god incessantly. Would that my god might hearken [to me]! Whenever in times past I, Kantuzilis, performed the cult of my god, whenever I . . . [ . . . ] led to my god, thou gavest the abundance, thou gavest me strength. But now when I, Kantuzilis, performed the cult for thee with the merchant, a mortal, holding the balance for the Sun-god and upsetting the balance—what [wrong] did I do to my god?

The advantage of my god that I have not known since childhood [must i experience] it in my old age."

Even when I fared well, I always acknowledged the superior power (and) the wisdom of my god. Never have I sworn in thy name, my god, and then broken the oath afterward. That which is holy to my god and hence not fit for me to eat, never have I eaten it. I have not brought impurity upon my body.

(15) Never have I withheld from thy stable an ox; never have I withheld from thy fold a sheep. Whenever I came upon food, I never ate it indiscriminately; whenever I came upon water, I never drank it indiscriminately. Were I now to recover, would I not have recovered at the word of thee, my god? Were I to regain my strength, would I not have regained it at the word of thee, my god?

(20) Life is bound up with death, and death is bound up with life. Man cannot live for ever; the days of his life are numbered. Were man to live for ever, it would not concern him greatly even if he had to endure grievous sickness.

Would that my god might now freely open his heart (and) soul to me and [tell] me my fault (25) so that I might learn about it! Either let my god speak to me in a dream! Would that my god would open his heart to me and tell [me] my [fault] so that I might learn about it! Or let the sibyl tell me, [or] let the Sun-god’s seer tell [me] from the liver (of a sheep). Would that my god might freely open [his heart (and) his soul] to me and tell me my fault so that I might learn about it!

O my god! Let me know how to improve on your worship! (rev.) of all [men] the shepherd art thou. It has always been said about thee [that thou . . . ]. My god who was angry at me and rejected me—let the same (god) care for me again and grant me life! Would that my god, who for[sook] me, [might take] pity on me! [Much as] I wearied myself with pleading before my god, it is yet of no avail. (5) No sooner didst thou scrape [one thing evil] off [me], than thou broughtest back [another] in its stead.

Would that [the Sun-god] might calm down again and that peace might return to his heart! Would that he might raise me up again out of my affliction. [O Sun-god], . . . , [the favorite son of] Sin and Ningal8 art thou. See! I, Kantuzilis, thy servant, have asked for [mercy] and humbled myself. [See!] I am beseeching thee.

(10) To the Sun-god I sing. See! I, Kantuzilis, implore my god incessantly. Would that my god might hearken [to me]! Whenever in times past I, Kantuzilis, performed the cult of my god, whenever I . . . [ . . . ] led to my god, thou gavest the abundance, thou gavest me strength. But now when I, Kantuzilis, performed the cult for thee with the merchant, a mortal, holding the balance for the Sun-god and upsetting the balance—what [wrong] did I do to my god?
Through sickness my house has become a house of misery. Through misery (15) my soul longs for another place. As (one who has been) sick on new year's day (?),—thus have I become. Sickness and misery have now become oppressive to me; that I must declare to thee, my god.

At night sweet slumber does not overtake me on my bed. While I lie there, good tidings do not come to me. Now, my god, join thy strength (20) to that of (my) patron-god! How thou couldst have ordained this sickness for me from (my) mother's womb on, that I have never asked thy sibyl

Now I cry for mercy in the presence of my god. Hearken to me, my god! O my god, do not make me a man who is unwelcome at the king's court! Do not make my condition an offence to mankind! Those to whom I did good, none of them wishes [me] (long) life. (25) [Thou], my god, [(art) father and mother] to me; [beside thee there is no fa]ther or mother for me. C ' ' ' 1 (end lost)
VI. Didactic and Wisdom Literature
Fables and Didactic Tales

Egyptian Didactic Tales

(Translator: John A. Wilson)

A DISPUTE OVER SUICIDE

This remarkable text carries the argument between a man who is weary of this life and his own soul. Since he finds life unbearable, the man contemplates suicide. His soul vacillates, first agrees, then fears that suicide will entail the danger that the man will have no mortuary service from his survivors, then proposes an abandonment to a life of careless pleasures, and finally agrees to remain with the man in any case.

The text dates from the Middle Kingdom, or, more probably, from the disturbed times between the Old and Middle Kingdoms (end of the third millennium B.C.), when the established order of life had broken down and men were groping for new values.

Berlin Papyrus 3024 was published by A. Erman, Gesprächen eines Lebensmädchens mit seiner Seele (APA W, 1896, 2). A transcription of much of the text into hieroglyphic appears in K, Sethe, Aegyptische Lesestücke (2nd ed., Leipzig, 1928), 43-46. It has been studied by A. Scharff, in German in SBAW, 1937, 9, by R. Weill, in French in BIFAO, XLV (1946), 89-154, and in Dutch by A. de Buck in Kernmomente. "Ex Oriente Lux"—Mededeelingen en Verhandelingen, No. 7, (Leyden, 1947), 19-32. It was translated in Erman, LÆ, 86-92. The beginning of the manuscript is lost. The translation starts with the man's answer to a previous argument by his soul.

I opened my mouth to my soul, that I might answer what it had said: "This is too much for me today, that my soul no (longer) talks with me. It is really too great to be exaggerated. It is like abandoning me. Let not my soul go away; it should wait for me because of... It will not (10) thereby succeed in escaping from the day of misfortune. Behold, my soul wrongs me, (but) I do not listen to it, and draws me toward death before (I) have come to it and casts (me) upon the flame to burn me up.... (15) May it be near to me on the day of misfortune and wait on that side... O my soul, who art too stupid to subdue wretchedness over life, (yet) drivest me to death ere I come to it, make (20) the West pleasant for me! Is that (so) bad? Life is a circumscribed period: (even) the trees must fall. Trample down wrongs—(yet) my wretchedness endures. Let Thoth, who propitiates the gods, judge me. Let Khonsu, who writes in truth, defend me. (25) Let Re, who pilot the sun barque, hear my speech. Let Isdes... defend me. My wretchedness is heavy... Pleasant would be the defense (30) of a god for the secrets of my body."1

What my soul said to me: "Art thou not a man? Art thou... whilst thou livest? What is thy goal? Thou art concerned with [living] like a possessor of wealth..."

I said: "I have not departed as long as these things are neglected. He who carries (men) off forcibly will take, without (35) caring about thee, (like) any criminal saying: 'I shall carry thee off, for thy (fate) is still death, (though) thy name may live.' 2 (But) yonder is a place for settling down, the guide of the heart; the West is home... If my soul, which is innocent, will listen to me (40), and its heart agrees with me, it will be fortunate. (Then) I shall make it reach the West like one who is in his pyramid, at whose burial a survivor has stood.3 I shall make a shelter [over] thy corpse, (so that) thou mayest scorn another soul (45) as inert. I shall make a shelter—now it must not be (too) cool—(so that) thou mayest scorn another soul which is (too) hot. I shall drink at the watering place and shall... (so that) thou mayest scorn another soul which is hungry.4 If thou delayest (50) me from a death of this fashion, thou wilt not find a place where thou canst settle down in the West. (So) be [patient], my soul and my brother, until my heir has appeared, he who will make offerings and will stand at the grave on the day of burial, so that he may prepare the bed (55) of the cemetery.5

My soul opened its mouth to me, that it might answer what I had said: "If thou art thinking of burial, that is heart's distress. It is a bringing of tears, making a man sad. It is taking a man out of his house, (so that) he is left on the hillside, (whence) thou shalt never go up above that thou mightest see (60) the suns. They who build in granite and who hew out chambers in a pyramid, good men in good work, as soon as the builders have become gods,6 their offering-stones are as bare, for lack of a survivor, as (those of) the weary ones, the dead on the dyke—(65) the waters take hold of an end of him, and the sunlight as well, and the fish of the water-banks talk to them." Listen to me. Behold, it is good for men to listen. Pursue the happy day and forget care!

"The poor man plows his plot of ground and loads his harvest (70) into a ship's hold. He makes the journey by towing (the boat), (because) his feast day is ap

1 This sounds as though the soul had refused to continue the argument. The man wishes to seek death by fire, but his soul refuses to support him in this escape. He then longs for the advocacy of the gods and concaves of himself as pleading his case before a divine tribunal.
2 The soul makes the sharp retort that the man seems to be concerned proaching. When he sees the forthcoming of an evening of high water, he is vigilant in the ship when Re retires, (and so) comes out (safely), with his wife and his children being lost on the lake, treacherous (75) with crocodiles in the night. At last he sits down, when he can take part in speech: 'I am not weeping for that mother, (though) there is no coming forth from the West for her, for another (time) on earth. (But) I am concerned about her (unborn) children, broken in the egg, who saw the face of the crocodile-god (80) before they had (even) lived!'

'The poor man asks for an afternoon meal, (but) his wife says to him: 'It's for supper!' He goes out-of-doors to grumble for a while. If he comes back into the house and is like another man, his wife is (still) experienced in him: that he does not listen to her (but) grumbles, unresponsive to communications.'

I opened my mouth to my soul, that I might answer what it had said:

Behold, my name will reek through thee More than the stench of bird-droppings
On summer days, when the sky is hot.
Behold, my name will reek through thee (More than) a fish-handler
On the day of the catch, when the sky is hot. (90)
Behold, my name will reek through thee More than the stench of bird-droppings, More than a covert of reeds with waterfowl.
Behold, my name will reek through thee More than the stench of fishermen, More than the stagnant pools which they have fished.
Behold, my name will reek through thee More than the stench of crocodiles, More than sitting in the assembly among the crocodiles.
Behold, my name will reek through thee More than a (married) woman Against whom a he has been told because of a man.
Behold, my name will reek through thee (100) More than a sturdy boy of whom it is said:

10 Because he is in a hurry to reach home for his feast, he tows his boat for greater speed.
11 Before he reaches home a storm comes up, and his wife and children are lost, a prey to crocodiles.
12 His wife, by dying in this way, cannot "come forth by day" to enjoy continued contacts with this life, as do those who die normally and are given normal funerary service.
13 This parable of the poor man who loses his children by accident is probably meant to persuade the man that the only proper death is the normal death.
14 This parable is not clear. It seems to say that a poor man cannot expect an elaborate funeral.

The gentle man has perished,
(But) the violent man has access to everybody.
To whom can I speak today?
(One's) fellows are evil; Goodness is rejected everywhere.
To whom can I speak today?
(Men) are contented with evil; Their hearts are rapacious.
To whom can I speak today? (no)
(Though) a man should arouse wrath by his evil character,
He (only) stirs everyone to laughter, (so) wicked is his sin.
To whom can I speak today?
Men are plundering;
Every man seizes his fellow's (goods).
To whom can I speak today?
The foul fiend is an intimate, (But) a brother, with whom one worked, has become an enemy.
To whom can I speak today?
No one thinks of yesterday; No one at this time acts for him who has acted.20
To whom can I speak today?
(One's) fellows are evil;
One has recourse to strangers for upright heart.
To whom can I speak today?
Hearts are rapacious;
No man has a heart upon which one may rely.
To whom can I speak today?
There are no righteous;
The land is left to those who do wrong.
To whom can I speak today?
There is lack of an intimate (friend);
One has recourse to an unknown to complain to him.
To whom can I speak today?
There is no one contented of heart;

17 "To his hated one." It is whispered of the boy that he is the child of his father's rival.
18 Uncertain. Perhaps the rebellious town shows a peaceful exterior while it is plotting within.
19 "I speak to whom today?"—with whom can I have any friendly and satisfactory contact in times like these?
20 There is disregard for the lessons of the past, including grateful response for good services.
That man with whom one went, he no (longer) exists.
To whom can I speak today?
I am laden with wretchedness
For lack of an intimate (friend).
To whom can I speak today?
The sin which treads the earth,
It has no end. (130)

Death is in my sight today21
(like) the recovery of a sick man,
Like going out into the open after a confinement.
Death is in my sight today
Like the odor of myrrh
Like sitting under an awning on a breezy day.
Death is in my sight today
Like the odor of lotus blossoms,
Like sitting on the bank of drunkenness.22

Death is in my sight today
Like the passing away of rain,
Like the return of men to their houses from an expedition.
Death is in my sight today
Like the clearing of the sky,
Like a man fowling thereby for what he knew not.23 (140)

Death is in my sight today
Like the longing of a man to see his house (again),
After he has spent many years held in captivity.

Why surely, he who is yonder24
Will be a living god,
Punishing a sin of him who commits it.25

Why surely, he who is yonder
Will stand in the barque of the sun,
Causing that the choicest (offerings) therein be given to the temples.
Why surely, he who is yonder
Will be a man of wisdom,
Not hindered from appealing to Re when he speaks.

What my soul said to me: "Set mourning aside, thou who belongest to me, my brother! (Although) thou be offered up on the braizer,26 (150) (still) thou shalt cling to life, as thou sayest. Whether it be desirable that I (remain) here (because) thou hast rejected the West, or whether it be desirable that thou reach the West and thy body join the earth, I shall come to rest after thou hast relaxed (in death). Thus we shall make a home together."27

It has come (to its end), (155) its beginning to its end, as found in writing.

THE PROTESTS
OF THE ELOQUENT PEASANT

The duty of social justice was an insistent theme of the Middle Kingdom. At that time the man of power and position was asked to deal impartially with all men—or even to be partial in seeking out and meeting need. In the following text, this theme is given a story setting and is emphasized by the mechanism of letting a poor man insist upon his rights.

The story is laid in the reign of Neb-kau-Re Khety III, king at Herakleopolis and one of the competing pharaohs of the early 21st century BC. Almost all of the manuscript material derives from the Middle Kingdom (20th-18th centuries). These are three papyri in Berlin (10496-“T”, 3023-“Bi”, and 3025-“B2”) and a papyrus in the British Museum (10274), with other, smaller fragments.

The facsimile publication was Hieratische Papyri aus den königlichen Museen zu Berlin, le, 1. Die Klagen des Bauern, bearbeitet von F. Vogelsang und A. H. Gardiner (Leipzig, 1908). The texts were then studied by Vogelsang, Kommentar zu den Klagen des Bauern (Untersuch., vi, Leipzig, 1943). See also E. Suys, Etude sur le conte du fellah plaidant (Rome, 1933). There are translations by A. H. Gardiner, in JEA, ix (1923), 5-25, and by Erman, LAE, 116-31.*

(Ri) THERE WAS A MAN whose name was Khun-Anup, and he was a peasant of the Field of Salt. Now he had a wife, whose name was [Me]rit. Then this peasant said to this his wife: "Behold, I am going down to Egypt to [fetch] food thence for my children. Now go and measure for me the grain which is in the barn, the grain remaining from [last year]." Thereupon he measured for her [six] hekat of grain.2 (5) Then this peasant said to this his wife: "Behold, [there are] twenty hekat of grain for thee and thy children for food. But thou shouldst make for me these six hekat of grain into bread and beer for every day in which [I may be traveling]."

So this peasant went down into Egypt, after he had loaded his donkeys with Jw-plants, rwiw-plants, (10) natron, salt, . . . staves of the Farafra Oasis, leopard skins, (15) wolf hides, . . . doves, . . . earth’s hair, and anis. (35) full (measure) of all the good produce of the Field of Salt. So this peasant went south toward Herakleopolis, and he reached the region of Per-Fefi, to the north of Medenit.4 He met there a man standing on the riverbank, whose name was Thut-nakht. He was the son of a man (40) whose name was Isri, and he was a vassal of the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi.

Then this Thut-nakht said, when he saw this peasant’s donkeys, which were tempting to his heart: "Would that I had some effective idol, (so that) I might steal away the goods of this peasant with it!" Now the house of this Thut-nakht was on a riverbank (45) pathway. It was narrow; it was not at all wide: it

1 The modern Wadi Natrun, northwest of Herakleopolis.*
2 A hekat was a little over four dry quarts.
3 The uncertain elements in a long list are here omitted.
4 The locations of Per-Fefi and of Medenit are unknown.
may have exceeded the width of a loincloth. One side of it was under the water, and the other side of it was under grain. Then this Thut-nakht said to his attendant: "Go and fetch me a sheet from my house." It was brought to him immediately. Then he spread it on the riverbank pathway. Thereupon (50) its fringe came to rest on the water and its hem on the grain. Then this peasant came along the public road.

(B1.1) Then this Thut-nakht said: "Be accommodating, peasant! Wouldst thou tread upon my garments?" Then this peasant said: "I shall do thy pleasure. My course is good." So he went up higher. Then this Thut-nakht said: (5) "Wilt thou have my grain for a path?" Then this peasant said: "My course is good. The embankment is high, and the (only other) way is under grain, (but still) thou providest our road with thy garments. Now wilt thou not let us pass by on the road?"

Now he had (scarcely) finished saying [this] word, when one of the donkeys filled (10) his mouth with a wisp of grain. Then this Thut-nakht said: "Behold, I will take away thy donkey, peasant, because he is eating my grain. Behold, he will (have to) thresh because of his boldness." Then this peasant said: "My course is good. (Only) one (wisp) has been damaged. I brought my donkey because of . . . ; wilt thou take him (15) for filling his mouth with a wisp of grain? Moreover, I know the lord of this district. It belongs to the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi. Moreover, he is the one who punishes every robber in this entire land. Shall I be robbed in his district?" Then this Thut-nakht said: "Is this the proverb which men say: (20) ‘The name of the poor man is pronounced (only) for his master’s sake?’ I am the one who is speaking to thee, (but) it is the Chief Steward whom thou mentionest!"

Then he took a stick of green tamarisk against him. Then he belabored all his limbs with it, and his donkeys were taken away and driven into his estate. Thereupon this peasant (25) wept very greatly because of the pain of what had been done to him. Then this Thut-nakht said: "Do not be (so) noisy, peasant! Behold, thou art at the home of the Lord of Silence." Then this peasant said: "Thou bastest me, thou stealst my goods, and now thou (even) takest away the complaint from my mouth! O Lord of Silence, mayest thou give me back (30) my property! Then I shall not cry out (so that) thou art alarmed!"

Then this peasant spent the time up to ten days appealing to this Thut-nakht, (but) he would not pay attention to it. So this peasant went to Herakleopolis to appeal to the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi. He met him going out of the door (35) of his house to embark on his official barge.

Then this peasant said: "Would that I might be permitted to make a communication to thee about this recital of fact! It is (only) a matter of letting an attendant of thine of thy choice come to me, (so that) I might send him back to thee about it." So the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, had (40) an attendant of his choice go in front of him, and this peasant sent him back about this affair in every aspect of it.

Then the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, laid a charge against this Thut-nakht before the officials who were at his side. Then they said to him: "Probably it is a peasant of his who has gone to someone else beside him. (45) Behold, that is what they do to peasants of theirs who go to others beside them." It is (only) a matter of having this Thut-nakht punished for a little natron and a little salt. Let him be ordered to replace it, and he will replace it." Then (50) the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, was silent; he did not reply to these officials, nor did he reply to this peasant.

Then this peasant came to appeal to the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi. He said:

"O Chief Steward, my lord, greatest of the great, undertaker of that which is not and of that which is! If thou embarkest on the lake of (55) justice, mayest thou sail on it with a fair breeze! A squall shall not tear away thy sail, thy boat shall not lag, no misfortune shall overtake thy mast, thy yards shall not break, . . . the current shall not carry thee away, thou shalt not taste the evils (60) of the river, thou shalt not see a frightened face! (Even) the timid fish shall come to thee, and thou shalt attain (some) of the fattest fowl. Because thou art the father of the orphan, the husband of the widow, the brother of the divorcee, and the apron of him that is motherless. Let me make thy name in (65) this land according to every good law: a leader free from covetousness, a great man free from wrongdoing, one who destroys falsehood and brings justice into being, and who comes at the cry of him who gives voice. When I speak, mayest thou hear. Do justice, thou favored one whom the favored ones favor! Dispose of (70) my burdens. Behold me, (how) burdened I am! Count me: behold, I am lacking!"

Now this peasant made this speech in the time of the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nebkau-Re, the triumphant. So the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, went before his majesty and said: "My lord, (75) I have found one of these peasants who is really eloquent. His goods have been stolen, and, behold, he has come to appeal to me about it."

Then his majesty said: "As truly as thou wisiest to see me in health, thou shalt make him linger here, a typically oriental proposal to treat the matter through an intermediary instead of by direct appeal. On their way to the official barge. The magistrates take the attitude that Thut-nakht’s guilt is slight and may be expiated by repayment, whereas custom condones rough treatment of a peasant who has left his normal patron and has sought action elsewhere. I.e. of everything. In his first appeal the peasant is still courteous and takes justice for granted. Later he becomes more indignant in his appeals, daring to charge the Chief Steward with injustice.
without replying to anything which he may say. For the purpose of keeping him (80) talking, be thou silent. Then have his speech brought to us in writing, (that) we may hear it. But provide that on which his wife and children may live. Behold, one of these peasants may come before his house is empty down to the ground. Further, keep this peasant himself alive. Thou shalt cause that provisions be given to him, without letting him know that thou art the one who has given them to him.

So they gave him ten loaves of bread and two jars of beer (85) every day. The Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, used to give them. He used to give them to a friend of his, and he was the one who gave them to him. Then the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, sent to the Mayor of the Field of Salt about providing food for this peasant’s wife: thirty hekat of grain every day.

Then this peasant came to appeal to him a second time.

Then the Chief Steward, Meru’s son Rensi, said:

"Is what belongs to thee more important to thy heart than (the fact) that my attendant may carry thee off?"

56 Then this peasant said: "The measurer of (165) piles (of grain) cheats for himself. He who should fill up for another trims his share. He who should lead according to the laws orders robbery. Who then will punish meanness? He who should drive out decay (himself) makes distortions. One man is straightforward in crookedness, another assents to mischance. Dost thou thyself find (a lesson) for thee? Punishment is short, (but) mischance is long. A (good) example comes back to me. Now this is the command: 'Do to the doer (no) to cause that he do.' That is thanking him for what he may do. That is parrying something before (it is) shot. That is ordering something from him who (already) has business."... (145) ...

"Desire to live long, as it is said: 'Doing justice is the very breath of the nose.' Carry out punishment against him who should be punished, and none shall equal thy scrupulousness. Does the hand-scales err? Does the stand-balance incline to the side? Is even Thoth (150) indulgent? Then thou (also) mayest work mischief. When thou makest thyself the second of these three, if the three are indulgent, then thou (also) mayest be indulgent. . . . Take not, (for) thou shouldest act against a taker. (165) That great one who is covetous is not really great. Thy tongue is the plummet (of the doer) to conduct hearings, to judge between two men, (235) and to punish the brigand, (but) behold, it is the upholder of the thief which thou wouldst be. One trusts in thee, whereas thou art become a transgressor. Thou wert appointed to be a dam for the sufferer, guarding lest he drown, (but) behold, thou art his flowing lake.

Now then this peasant came (240) to appeal to him a sixth time, and he said: "... (250) . . . Cheating diminishes justice. (But) good full (measure)—justice neither falls short nor overflows...."

Now then (290) this peasant came to appeal to him an eighth time, and he said: "O Chief Steward, my lord! One may fall a long way because of greed. The covetous man is void of success; (any) success of his belongs to failure. Though thy heart is covetous, it is not (of avail) for thee. Though thou robtest, it does not profit thee, who should still permit a man to attend to his (own) proper business. Thy (own) needs are in thy house; thy belly is full; the grain-measure overflows—but when it is jostled (295) its surplus is lost on the ground. Takers, robbers, appropriators, magistrates—and (yet) made to punish evil! Magistrates are a refuge for the violent—and (yet) made to punish deceit!!..."

14 One of the peasants of the Wadi Natrun is come to Egypt to get food for the peasant’s family.
15 In his second appeal the peasant boldly suggests that the expected dispenser of justice is becoming an abuser of justice.
16 The Chief Steward interrupts with a threat of punishment if the peasant insists upon his property claims.
17 A good deed is normative of the good times of the past.
18 "That is praising god for him."
19 Doing unto others, in order to induce them to do for oneself, produces in advance the desired results.
20 The Egyptians inhaled the breath of life.
21 Thoth was the patron of just measure.
22 Sk, in the sense of "companion."
"Do justice for the sake of the Lord of Justice, the justice of whose justice exists! (305) Thou reed-pen, papyrus, and palette of Thoth, keep apart from doing evil! It is good if thou art good—good indeed. Now justice lasts unto eternity; it goes down into the necropolis with him who does it. When he is buried and interred, (310) his name is not wiped out upon earth, (but) he is remembered for goodness. That is a principle of the word of god. Is it the hand-scales—(then) it does not tilt. Is it the stand-balance—(then) it does not incline to the side. Whether I shall come or whether another may come, thou shouldst address (us) (315) with an answer. Do not address (us) silently. Do not attack him who cannot attack.

(B2,9i) Now then this peasant came to appeal to him a ninth time, and he said: 'O Chief Steward, my lord! The balance of men is their tongue. It is the scales which seeks out deficiencies (in weight). Carry out punishment against him who should be punished, (or some) one will equal thy scrupulousness. . . . If falsehood walks about, it goes astray. It cannot cross over in the ferry; [it] does not advance. (100) As for him who grows rich thereby, he has no children, he has no heirs upon earth. As for him who sails with it, he cannot reach land, his boat cannot moor at its town.

'Be not heavy; thou art not light. Do not delay; thou art not swift. Be not partial. Do not listen to (105) the heart. Do not veil thy face against him whom thou knowest. Do not blind thy face against him whom thou hast beheld. Do not rebuff him who petitions thee. Mayest thou step down from this sluggishness, (in order that) thy saying may be reported: 'Act for him who acts for thee.' Do not listen to everybody, (but) summon a man to his (own) rightful interests. There is no yesterday for the slothful, (now) esteemed may become a sufferer, and the sufferer a petitioner, (if) the enemy becomes a killer. Behold, I have been appealing to thee, (but) thou dost not hear it. I shall go that I may appeal (115) about thee to Anubis.'

Then the Chief Steward, Meru's son Rensi, sent two guardsmen to bring him back. Then this peasant was afraid, for he thought that (it) was done in order to punish him for this speech which he had made. Then this peasant said: "The approach of a thirsty man to water, the tasting (120) of milk by the nursing child—this [aN] death, for the coming of which one has longed to see, (when) his death comes for him delayed."

Then the Chief Steward, Meru's son Rensi, said: "Do not be afraid, peasant! Behold, thou shalt arrange to live with me. Then this peasant took, (125) an oath: I will surely eat of thy bread, and I will surely drink of thy [beer] to eternity!' The Chief Steward, Meru's son Rensi, said: "Now tarry here, that thou mayest hear thy appeals." Then he caused to be read from a new roll of papyrus every appeal according to [its] content. (130) Then the Chief Steward, Meru's son Rensi, sent it in to the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Neb-kau-Re, the triumphant. Then it was more pleasing to [his] heart than anything which was in this entire land. Then [his majesty] said: 'Give thou judgment thyself, O son of Meru!"

Then [the Chief Steward], Meru's son Rensi, sent two guardsmen to [fetch Thut-nahjit]. (135) Then he was brought, and a report was made of [all his property]:..., his . . ., six persons, apart [from] . . ., his Upper Egyptian barley, his emmer, [his] donkeys, . . ., his pigs, and [his small] cattle. [So the property of this Thut-nakht [was given] to [this peasant]. . . .

For examples of myths explicative of origins, cf. pp. 8-9 and 10 above. For examples of legends conferring sanction upon Egyptian documents, cf. p. 495 below.

Akkadian Fable

(Translator: Robert H. Pfeiffer)

DISPUTE BETWEEN THE DATE PALM AND THE TAMARISK

A

(obverse)

. . . . (3) The tamarisk [opened] its mouth and [said,] "My flesh for the flesh of . . . . (5) You have destroyed the precious, beautiful one; you have cast . . . . like a maid-servant who has [raised her hand] against her mistress."

(7) The date palm's mouth became very large and it answered saying, 'They have broken off your blossom with a stick!... For whom are they closed up? For sin! The flesh . . . . (10) The tamarisk does not know the beauty of the gods, the beauty of [the goddesses]."

(11) Ditto. "I am higher than you, O father of the wise, in every respect; the farmer has [made it known]. The farmer cuts all he has from my sprout. From my bosom he brings forth his hoe; [the earth] he opens up with my hoe. The irrigation ditch waters the field, and

1 Perhaps Tammuz (Adonis) is meant.
2 "Ditto" here and below (lines 17, 21, 28, 32, 37, 40, 45) means the repetition of line 7, except that in lines 11, 21, 32, and 40 the tamarisk is speaking and should be substituted for the date palm in this introductory formula.

---

Footnotes:
1 "Ditto" here and below (lines 17, 21, 28, 32, 37, 40, 45) means the repetition of line 7, except that in lines 11, 21, 32, and 40 the tamarisk is speaking and should be substituted for the date palm in this introductory formula.
2 "Ditto" here and below (lines 17, 21, 28, 32, 37, 40, 45) means the repetition of line 7, except that in lines 11, 21, 32, and 40 the tamarisk is speaking and should be substituted for the date palm in this introductory formula.
I close it. (15) And in spite of the dampness of the earth, the grain ... I thresh. So I bring in (the goddess of grain) Nisaba, the people's joy."

(17) Ditto. "I am higher than you, O father of the wise, in every respect; the farmer [has made it known]. All that he has, the bridle, the whip, the team's cover, the sheet, the wagon,..., (20) ... the utensils of the farmer, as many as there are: [I am] higher [than you]."

(21) Ditto. "Pay attention, O lunatic. What of mine [is set up] in the king's palace? In the king's house the king eats off my table, [the queen drinks] from my cup, with my fork the warriors eat, out of my basket the baker takes the flour; I am a weaver [and I weave] my threads; (25) I clothe the troops ... I am the chief exorcist of the god, I renew the house of god, [I am the master. Let there be no rival of mine!"

(reverse)

(28) Ditto. "In the shrine, when sacrifices are offered to the great gods, where I am not standing the king does not sacrifice with a wise heart. (30) In (ritual) sprinkling they pour out my libation, they scatter my branches on the ground. [I am the master.] On the same day the date palm is the perfumer. A big mouth [pronounces] your replies."

(32) Ditto. "Come, let us go, I and you, to the city of Kish ... where my work is. To wit, are not [the temples] filled with my omens, [are not the vessels] filled with my incense? The temple pours out water, ... (35) she takes. They purify themselves (thereby) and perform rites with it. On the same day [the tamarisk] is available to the hand of the sacrificer and its container is in the place [of the gods]."

(37) Ditto. "Come, let us go, I and you, to the city of ... . Where there are sins, there is your activity, O tamarisk. A carpenter ... and him they fear, and every day they dread [him]."

(40) Ditto. "Who is like ... ? My cluster is luxuriant; (though) I lift it high, shepherd boys make out of it big sticks. But they cut up your face like a basketmaker who ... . Terrible is my strength, let me gloat about my fury! I have placed you in the underworld. My work is might... ."

(45) Ditto. "I am taller than you, six times greater, seven times greater. I am a comrade of the goddess Nisaba, three months ... . The orphan girl, the widow, the wretched man ... eat the sweet dates which are not scarce ... . (50) (Text) destroyed. My ropes ... (51-52 fragments; 53 ff. lost.)"

B

(1) In the holy (primeval) days,—in those days the people dug canals, the (gods of the) destinies assembled—they appointed (as) gods in the countries Anu, Enlil, Ea. Enlil and the people came, (5) the god Shamash sat between them. Ditto sat the mistress of the gods, the great (Ishtar). To them the dominion of the countries did not belong, for the lordship was granted to the gods. Gishganmesh the gods appointed as king. (10) They ordered him (to accomplish) the image of the finest things. The king in his palace plants date palms, in addition, ditto, just as many tamarisks. In the shade of the tamarisk a banquet (15) was arranged. In the shade of the date palm decision concerning crime ... opening... the path of the king. The trees compared themselves one with the other. The tamarisk and the date palms became restless. (20) The tamarisk spoke, greatly praising himself; when the date palm (spoke), surpassing (in boastfulness) was (its) word. "As for you, O tamarisk, you are useless wood. What are your branches? Wood without fruit. Mine is the fruit of a big tree: (25) fully grown it is food; in the second place the gardener speaks well (of me) as a profit for slave and governor. The nourishment of my fruit makes the infant grow, adults eat my fruit. (30) Am I not well thought of in the king's presence? O lunatic, in the king's palace what is set up of mine? In the king's palace the king eats off my table, the queen drinks out of my cup. (35) I am a weaver and I weave my threads. A god I purify as an exorcist... ." "My mouth is not a weapon; in the second place ... ." (said the tamarisk). "Its mouth is not a weapon," [the ing] answered: he planted at its side the date palm (saying), "If (you stand) at the city gate, calm the strife; if in the wilderness, calm the heat."

1The restorations in lines 21-26 are based on the parallels in B, 31-36 (see below).

3 "Destroyed" is a scribal note.

6 Le. presumably the people.

4 Lines 31-36 are substantially identical with parts of A, 21-26 (see above).
Proverbs and Precepts

Egyptian Instructions

(Translator: John A. Wilson)

THE INSTRUCTION OF THE VIZIER PTAH-HOTEP

The Egyptians delighted in compilations of wise sayings, which were directive for a successful life. To them, this was "wisdom." One of the earliest of these compilations purports to come from Ptah-hotep, the vizier of King Izezi of the Fifth Dynasty (about 2450 B.C.). The old councilor is supposed to be instructing his son and designated successor on the actions and attitudes which make a successful official of the state.

The chief manuscript is the Papyrus Prisse of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris (No. 183-194), written in the Middle Kingdom. Later documents, running into the Eighteenth Dynasty, are British Museum Papyri 10371, 10435, and 10509, and the reverse of Carnarvon Tablet I, now in the Cairo Museum (cf. pp. 232-233 above). Facsimiles of the hieratic texts were published by G. Möller, Hieratische Lesestücke (2rd ed., Leipzig, 1927), 1, 2-3. The texts are transcribed into hieroglyphic in E. Devaud, Les maximes de Ptah-hotep (Fribourg, 1916). The following translation uses Devaud's numbering for the texts. There are translations by B. Gunn, The Instruction of Ptah-hotep and the Instruction of Ke'gemni (Wisdom of the East Series; London, 1909), and by Erman, LÄE, 54-66. On the general subject of Egyption wisdom literature in successive periods, see R. Anthes, Lebensregeln und Lebensweisheit der alten Aegypter (AO, 32,2, Leipzig, 1933). (See Addenda.)

THE INSTRUCTION OF THE MAYOR AND VIZIER PTAH-HOTEP, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Izezi, living forever and ever. The Mayor and Vizier Ptah-hotep says:

0 sovereign, my lord! Oldness has come; old age has descended. Feecness has arrived; dotage is coming anew. (10) The heart sleeps wearily every day. The eyes are weak, the ears are deaf, the strength is disappearing because of weariness of heart, and the mouth is silent and cannot speak. The heart is forgetful and cannot recall yesterday. The bone suffers old age. Good is become evil. All taste is gone. (20) What old age does to men is evil in every respect. The nose is stopped up and cannot breathe. (Simply) to stand up or to sit down is difficult.

Let a command be issued to this servant to make a staff of old age, that my son may be made to stand in my place. (30) Then may I speak to him the words of them that listen and the ideas of the ancestors, of them that hearkened to the gods. Then shall the like be done for thee, that strife may be banished from the people and the Two Banks may serve thee.

The majesty of this god said:
Teach thou him first about speaking. Then he may set an example for the children of officials. (40) May obedience enter into him, and all heart's poise. Speak to him. There is no one born wise.

THE BEGINNING OF THE EXPRESSION OF GOOD SPEECH, SPOKEN BY THE HEREDITARY PRINCE AND COUNT, GOD'S FATHER AND GOD'S BELoved, ELDEST SON OF THE KING, OF HIS BODY, THE MAYOR AND VIZIER, PTAH-HOTEP, IN INSTRUCTING THE IGNORANT ABOUT WISDOM AND ABOUT THE RULES FOR GOOD SPEECH, AS OF ADVANTAGE TO HIM WHO WILL HEARKEN (50) AND OF DISADVANTAGE TO HIM WHO MAY NEGLECT THEM.

Then he said to his son:
Let not thy heart be puffed-up because of thy knowledge; be not confident because thou art a wise man. Take counsel with the ignorant as well as the wise. The (full) limits of skill cannot be attained, and there is no skilled man equipped to his (full) advantage. Good speech is more hidden than the emerald, but it may be found with maidservants at the grindstones...

If thou art a leader (85) commanding the affairs of the multitude, seek out for thyself every beneficial deed, until it may be that thy (own) affairs are without wrong. Justice is great, and its appropriateness is lasting; it has not been disturbed since the time of him who made it, (whereas) there is punishment for him who passes over its laws. It is the (right) path before him who knows nothing. Wrongdoing has never brought its undertaking into port. (It may be that) it is fraud that gains riches, (95) (but) the strength of justice is that it lasts, and a man may say: "It is the property of my father."...

If thou art one of those sitting (120) at the table of one greater than thyself, take what he may give, when it is set before thy nose. Thou shouldst gaze at what is before thee. Do not pierce him with many stares, (for such) an aggression against him is an abomination to the \\

As for the great man when he is at meals, his purposes

4 Variant: "of them that served the forebears," i.e. previous government officials.

5 The king.

6 "Limits of craftsmanship," or "artistry," and "no skilled craftsman," or "artist"—here in eloquent speech.

7 This translation omits many sections which are obscure.

8 Ma'at "justice" or "truth," was an ineritable value.

9 The k.a was the protecting and guiding vital force of a man, and thus his social mentor.
conform to the dictates of his \(a\). He will give to the one whom he favors. (140) The great man gives to the man whom he can reach, (but) it is the \(a\) that lengthens out his arms. The eating of bread is under the planning of god—it is (only) a fool who would complain of it.

If thou art a man of intimacy, whom one great man sends to another, be thoroughly reliable when he sends thee. Carry out the errand for him as he has spoken. (150) Do not be reserved about what is said to thee, and beware of (any) act of forgetfulness. Grasp hold by no means to be repeated. (Thus) making one great man hostile to another through vulgar speech (160) A great man, a little man—it is the \(k\)'s abomination.\(^{12}\)

(175) If thou art a poor fellow, following a man of distinction, one of good standing with the god, know thou not his former insignificance. Thou shouldst not be puffed-up against him because of what thou didst know of him formerly. Show regard for him in conformance with what has accrued to him—property does not come of itself. It is their law for him who does not come of itself. A petitioner likes wishes them. It is god who makes (a man's) quality, (185) and he listens to thy instruction, while his manners in thy house are fitting, and if he takes care of thy property and love thy wife at home as is fitting. Fill her belly; clothe her back. Ointment is the prescription for her body. Make her heart glad as long as thou livest. (330) She is a profitable field for her lord. Thou shouldst not contend with her at law, and keep her far from gaining control. . . . Her eye is her stormwind. Let her heart be soothing through what may accrue to thee; it means keeping her long in thy house.

Satisfy thy clients with what has accrued to thee.\(^{21}\) (340) what accurses to one whom god favors. As for him who evades satisfying his clients, men say: "He is a ka of robbery. A proper \(k\) is a \(K\) with which one is satisfied."\(^{28}\) One does not know what may happen, so that he may understand the morrow. If misfortunes occur among those (now) favored, it is the clients who (still) say: "Welcome!" One does not secure satisfaction from a stranger; one has recourse to a client when there is trouble.

\(^{12}\) Variant: "One who has woes likes the assuaging of his heart better than the doing of that for which he came."

\(^{21}\) Variant: "as a son."

\(^{28}\) Probably: He is the very spirit of rapacity; the right kind of a spirit is one which gratifies others.
IF THOU ART A MAN of standing, one sitting in the counsels of his lord, summon thy resources for good.
(365) If thou art silent, it is better than tejet-plants.
If thou speakest, thou shouldst know how thou canst explain (difficulties). It is a (real) craftsman who can speak in counsel, (for) speaking is more difficult than any labor. It is explaining it that puts it to the stick?...

IF THOU ART (NOW) IMPORTANT after thy (FORMER) UNIMPORTANCE, so that thou mayest do things after a neediness (430) formerly in the town which thou knowest, in contrast to what was thy lot before, do not be miserly with thy wealth, which has accrued to thee without perishing in this land forever. It makes knowest, in contrast to what was thy lot before, do not ascend to his heart with a bit of talk. If what he may have seen should come out of him or he should do something with which thou art displeased, behold, he is still a friend. . . . (475) . . . Do not answer in a state of turmoil; do not remove thyself from him; do not remove thyself from him. His time has never failed to come;
he cannot escape from him who predetermined him....

IF THOU HEAREST THIS WHICH I HAVE SAID TO THEE, thy every project will be (better) than (those of) the ancestors. As for what is left over of their truth, it is their treasure—(510) (though) the memory of them may escape from the mouth of men—because of the goodness of their sayings. Every word is carried on, without perishing in this land forever. It makes for expressing well, the speech of the very officials. It is what teaches a man to speak to the future, so that it may hear it, what produces a craftsman, who has heard what is good and who speaks to the future—and it hears it. 27...

To HEAR IS OF ADVANTAGE FOR A SON who hear-kens.
(535) If hearing enters into a hear-kener, the hearkener becomes a hearer.28 (When) hearing is good, speaking is good. Every hear-kener (is) an advantage, and hearing is of advantage to the hear-kener. To hear is better than anything that is, (and thus) comes the goodly love (of a man). How good it is when a son accepts what his father says! Thereby maturity comes to him. (545) He whom god loves is a hear-kener, (but) he whom god hates cannot hear. It is the heart which brings up its lord as one who hears or as one who does not hear. The life, prosperity, and health of a man is his heart. 29...

IF A SON ACCEPTS WHAT HIS FATHER SAYS, (565) no project of his miscarries. He whom thou instructest as thy obedient son, who will stand well in the heart of the official, his speech is guided with respect to what has been said to him, one regarded as obedient.... (But) the induction of him who does not hearken mis-carries. The wise man rises early in the morning to establish himself, (but) the fool rises early in the morning (only) to agitate himself.

(575) As for the fool who does not hearken, he cannot do anything. He regards knowledge as ignorance and profit as loss. He does everything blameworthy, so that one finds fault with him every day. He lives on that through which he should die, and guilt is his food.
His character therefrom is told as something known to the officials: (585) dying while alive every day....

AN OBEDIENT SON IS A FOLLOWER of Horus. 30 It gets well with him when he hears. When he becomes old and reaches a venerable state, he converses in the same way to his children, by renewing the instruction of his father. Every man is as (well) instructed as he acts.
If he converses with (his) children, (595) then they will speak (to) their children

Mayest thou reach me, 32 with thy body sound, and with the king satisfied with all that has taken place.
Mayest thou attain (my) years of life. (640) What I have done on earth is not inconsiderable. I attained one hundred and ten years of life which the king gave me, 33 with favor foremost among the ancestors, through doing right for the king up to the point of veneration. 34

IT HAS COME (TO ITS END, FROM) ITS BEGINNING TO ITS END, LIKE THAT WHICH WAS FOUND IN WRITING.

THE INSTRUCTION FOR KING MERI-KA-RE

The confused period between the Old and Middle Kingdoms was a time of changing values. The overturn of the old sanctions of power and property exerted a sobering influence. New values were increasingly expressed in spiritual and social terms, as the following text from that period shows. It presents the advice which one of the several competing rulers of that time (end of the 22nd century B.C.) gave to his son and successor.

The text is on the verso of the Papyrus Leningrad 1116A, a manuscript copied in the Eighteenth Dynasty, in the latter half of the 15th century B.C.; published by W. Golenischeff, Les papyrus hiéroglyphiques no. ///5, 1116A, et 1116B de VErmitage
Imperial à St. Petersbourg (St. Petersburg, 1913), Pis. IX-XIV.
Two other very fragmentary papyrus copies of the text are known.
Translated by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, 1 (1914), 20-36, and by Erman, LAE, 75-S4. An excellent special study is A. Schäfrt, Der historische Abschnitt der Lehre für König Merikare (SBAW, 1936, Heft 8)?

1 (1) [The beginning of the instruction which the 24 “Gather thy heart.”

25 “The ability to expound puts speech to the test?”
26 “Not behind or ahead of, but the same as.”
27 “Glorification of the verbal wisdom of the past. For a glorification of the written wisdom of the past, cf. pp. 431-432 below.”
28 “This section gives itself up to a literary play on the word “to hear.”
Its purpose is to prescribe “hearkening” or obedience upon the youth, so that he may become a ‘hearer’ or magistrate who hears cases.”
29 “The seat of his mind and emotion.”
30 “Induction into the official service.”
31 Elsewhere this term applies to the deified kings of past ages. Here it was probably a servant of the existing king, who was a Horus.
32 “Join me in the next world.”
34 Until death.”
King of Upper and Lower Egypt:... made] for his son, King Meri-ka-Re,...

(21) ... [IF THOU [FINDEST A MAN WHO] ...], whose adherents are many in total, ... and he is gracious in the sight of his partisans,... and he is excitable, a talker —remove him, kill [him], wipe out his name, [destroy] his faction, banish the memory of him and of his adherents who love him.

(25) THE CONTENTIOUS MAN IS A DISTURBANCE TO CITIZENS: he produces two factions among the youth. If thou findest that the citizens adhere to him ..., denounce him in the presence of the court, and remove [him]. He also is a traitor. A talker is an exciter of a city. Divert the multitude and suppress its heat

(30) ... Thou shouldst be justified in the presence of the god. Then people will say, (even) [in] thy absence] that thou punishest in conformance with ... A good demeanor is a man’s heaven, (but) cursing the speech is more valorous than any fighting. No one mayest read and copy (their) wisdom. (Thus) the learned.

(35) COPY THY FATHERS AND THY ANCESTORS. . . . Behold, their words remain in writing. Open, that thou dost know that they are not lenient on that day of judging the wretchedness. . . . Do not trust in length of years, (55) for they regard a lifetime as (but) an hour. A man remains over after death, and his deeds are placed beside him in heaps. However, existence yonder is for eternity, and he who complains of it is a fool. (But) as for him who reaches it without wrongdoing, he shall exist yonder like a god, stepping out freely like the lords of eternity.

Foster thy younger generation, that the residence city may love thee, and increase thy adherents with recruits. Behold, thy citizenry is full of new growing (boys). It is twenty years that the younger generation is happy following its heart, (and then) recruits [come] forth anew. . . . Make thy officials great, advance thy [soldiers], increase the younger generation of thy [following, provided with property, endowed with fields, and rewarded with cattle.

Do NOT DISTINGUISH THE SON OF A MAN14 FROM A POOR MAN, (but) take to thyself a man because of the work of his hands. Every skilled work should be practised according to the ... of the lord of a strong arm. Protect... thy frontier and build thy fortresses, (for) troops are of advantage to their lord.

Make monuments... for the god. That is what makes to live the name of him who does it. A man should do what is of advantage to his soul: the monthly service of the priest, putting on the white sandals, visiting the temple, revealing the mysteries, having access to the shrine, and eating bread in the temple. Make the offering-table flourish, increase the loaves, and add to the daily offerings. It is an advantage to him who does it. Make thy monuments to endure according as thou art able. A single day gives for eternity, and an hour effects accomplishment for the future. The god is aware of him who works for him. Let thy statues be transported into a distant country, without their giving the total thereof, for (only) a sick man is free (from) some hostility, and the foe within Egypt is never calm.

GENERATION WILL OPPRESS GENERATION, as the ancestors prophesied about it. Egypt fights (even) in the necropolis, by hacking up graves, by ... I did the same, being driven in its way by the god. Do not (deal) evilly with the southern region, for thou knowest the prophecy of the Residence City concerning it. That may come to pass as this came to pass. They do not transgress (our frontier), as they said ... I should praise (also) This is the chief city of the Thinite (Abydos) nome and the frontier between the realms of Herakleopolis and Thebes. Taut (?) is unknown.

The bowmen, however, are a locked wall, opened I made the picked men of the entire land, in order to oppose theirs arms thereby. I should (like to) see a valiant man who could copy it, one who could do for himself more than I have done.

But this further should be said because of the Bowman. Lo, the wretched Asiatic—it goes ill with the place where he is, afflicted with water, difficult from many trees, the ways thereof painful because of the mountains. He does not dwell in a single place, (but) his legs are made to go astray. He has been fighting (ever) since the time of Horus, (but) he does not conquer, nor yet can he be conquered. He does not announce a day in fighting, like a thief who ... for a gang.

But as I live! (95) I am while I am! The bowmen, however, are a locked wall, opened ... I made the Northland smite them, I captured their inhabitants, and I took their cattle, to the disgust of the Asiatics against Egypt. Do not trouble thyself about him: he is (only) an Asiatic, one despised on his (own) coast. He may rob a single person, (but) he does not lead against a town of many citizens.

The limestone quarries across the River from Memphis. The preceding and succeeding sentences urge that it is wrong to take stone from the monuments of the ancestors, since granite and limestone are available from the quarries.

416 PROVERBS AND PRECEPTS

what I have done. There is no enemy within the compass of thy frontier.

He who arose (as) Lord in a City arose with his heart troubled because of the Northland, Het-shenu to Sebaqa, with its southern boundary up to the ... Canal. I pacified the entire west, as far as the coast of the sea. It works for itself, as it gives meru-t/ooA, and one may see juniper. They give it to us. (But) the east is rich in bowmen, and their work ... Turned about are the islands in the midst and every man within it. The administrative districts say: "Thou art more honored (85) than Z. Behold, [the area] which they injured is (now) made into nomes and all large cities." The domain of one man is (now) in the hands of ten men. ... lists with every (kind of) tax that exists. The priest is presented with fields, working for thee like a single troop. It will not come to pass thereby that they be treacherous of heart. The Nile will not fail for thee, so that it does not come. The dues of the Northland are in thy hand. Behold, the mooring-stake is driven in the region which I have made on the east, up to the limits of Hebenu and as far as the Ways-of-Horus, settled with citizens and filled with people, the picked men of the entire land, in order to oppose (90) their arms thereby. I should (like to) see a valiant man who could copy it, one who could do for himself more than I have done.

As every local ruler knew, the current peaceful relations with the south were not duplicated by those with the Delta. Het-shenu was near Heliopolis; the other two sites are unknown.

The western Delta was friendly to Herakleopolis and transmitted the timber of Asia.

Foreign warriors.

The land which has been delivered from the foreigners has been made into small administrative units—perhaps on the principle of divide et impera.

Even the priest must work out his taxes.

From somewhere near modern Minieh in Middle Egypt to the Suez frontier (on the "Ways-of-Horus" cf. pp. 21, 478). Thus the east Delta was anchored along a newly established frontier line.

The characterization is that of the nomad Bedouin, who raid but fight no campaigns.

Uncertain, but perhaps a contrast between the pharaoh and the (incrutable?) foreigners.

Perhaps only in the sense of carrying out the rites.

The sentence is not clear, but may urge upon the king that he should not shrink from hostility incurred if he advances himself abroad. If he feared hostility he would have enough fears at home.

It is not clear what the king's failure and the resultant retribution were.
Dig a dyke against [half] of it, and flood half of it as far as the Bitter Lakes. Behold, it is the (very) navel-cord of foreigners.\textsuperscript{38} Its walls are warlike, and its soldiers are many. The subjects in it know (how) to take up weapons—apart from the priest of the home.\textsuperscript{39} The region of Djed-suṭ\textsuperscript{38} totals ten thousand men as commoners, free and without taxes. Officials have been fixed in it since the time of the Residence City.\textsuperscript{39} The boundaries are fixed, its garrisons are valiant. Many north-easters water it as far as the Northland, tax-free in grain,\textsuperscript{38} . . . They have made a dyke as far (105) as Herakleopolis. Abundant citizens are the heart's support. Guard against encirclement by the retainers of an enemy.

When thy frontier is endangered toward the [southern] region, it means that the [northern] bowmen will take on the girdle.\textsuperscript{38} Build structures in the Northland. The name of a man will not be smaller through what he has done, and a (well-) founded city cannot be harmed. Build structures—The foe desires qualms\textsuperscript{32} of heart, his nature being miserable. King Khety, the triumphant, laid (it) down in [his] instructions:\textsuperscript{40} (no) "He who is silent with regard to violence of heart injures . . . The god will attack the rebel against the temple.\textsuperscript{41}

. . . Revere the god. Do not say that he is weak of heart. Let not thy arms be slack, yet create thy (own) joy. Satisfaction is which that harms heaven, (whereas) imprisonment is a monument in the knowledge of the foe.\textsuperscript{7} He cannot harm it through a desire that what he has done may be maintained by someone else coming after him. There is no one free from a (115) foe. The (Lord of) the Two Banks is a wise man. The king and lord of courtiers cannot be a fool. He is (already) wise when he comes forth from the womb. (The god) has distinguished him ahead of a million lands.

It is a goodly office, the kingship. It has no son and no brother, made to endure on its monuments. (But) it is one (king) who promotes another. A man works for him [who] was before him, through a desire that what (he) has done may be maintained by someone else coming after him.\textsuperscript{49}

Behold, a misfortune happened in my time. (120)

The Thinite regions were hacked up. It really happened through what I had done,\textsuperscript{44} and I knew of it (only) after (it) was done. Behold, my recompense (came) out of what I had done. However, he is a wretch and one who has no advantage, who reconsolidates what he has brought to naught, who demolishes what he has built, or who improves what he has damaged” Be on thy guard against it. A blow is to be repaid with its (own) like. That is the application of all that has been done.

Generation passes generation among men, and the god, who knows (men’s) characters, has hidden himself. (But) there is none who can withstand the Lord of the Hand: he is the one who attacks what (125) the eyes can see.\textsuperscript{48} Revere the god upon his way, made of costly stones and fashioned [of] metal, like a flood replaced by (another) flood. There is no river that permits itself to be concealed; that is, it breaks the [dam] by which it was hidden.\textsuperscript{47} (So) also the soul goes to the place which it knows, and deviates not from its way of yesterday. Enrich thy house of the West; embellish thy place of the necropolis, as an upright man and as one who executes the justice upon which (men’s) hearts rely. More acceptable is the character of one upright of heart than the ox of the evildoer.\textsuperscript{48} Act for the god, that he may act similarly for thee, with oblations (130) which make the offering-table flourish and with a carved inscription—that is what bears witness to thy name. The god is aware of him who acts for him.

Well directed are men, the cattle of the god. He made heaven and earth according to their desire, and he repelled the water-monster.\textsuperscript{49} He made the breath of life (for) their nostrils. They who have issued from his body are his images. He arises in heaven according to their desire. He made for them plants, animals, fowl, and fish to feed them. He slew his enemies and injured (even) his (own) children because they thought of making rebellion.\textsuperscript{50} He makes the light of day according to their desire, and he sails by in order to see them. He has erected (135) a shrine around about them, and when they weep he hears.\textsuperscript{51} He made for them rulers (even) in the egg, a supporter to support the back of the disabled. He made for them magic as weapons to ward off what might happen or dreams by night as well as day. He has slain the treacherous of heart among them, as a man beats his son for his brother’s sake.\textsuperscript{52} For the god knows every name.

Thou shouldst do nothing harmful with regard to me, who have given all the laws concerning the \textsuperscript{44} Perhaps: do not try to plug holes; be bold enough to meet damage with aggressive force.

\textsuperscript{45} God, the “Lord of the (creative) Hand,” remains unseen from age to age, but he must be respected. Invisible, he controls the visible.

\textsuperscript{46} The creator god, a sun disc of stone and metal, goes his daily way like the annual, irresistible inundation.

\textsuperscript{47} Cf. I Sam. 15:22; Prov. 15:17. A variant text begins: "More profitable is . . ."

\textsuperscript{48} "The snbmerger (determined with a crocodile) of the water." Scharff, op.cit., 60, n.6, thinks of the Babylonian Tiamat and suggests a monster which the creator god defeated at creation.

\textsuperscript{49} For the allusion see "The Deliverance of Mankind from Destruction" (pp. 10-11 above).

\textsuperscript{50} The unseen god is still close to men through his shrine in the temple.

\textsuperscript{51} God’s punishments are for man’s good, like a father’s discipline.
king. Open thy face, that thou mayest be raised as a man. Thou shalt reach me, without having an accuser. Do not kill (140) a single one that comes close to thee, when thou hast shown him favor: the god knows him. He who prospers on earth is one of them, and they who follow the king are gods. Give the love of thee to the whole world; a good character is a remembrance ... It has been said (to) thee: "May the time of the sufferer be destroyed!" by those who are in the back of the house of King Khety, in contrast to its situation today.

Behold, I have spoken to thee the profitable matters of my (very) belly. Mayest thou act on what is established before thy face.

It has come successfully (to an end), according to what was found (145) in writing, in the writing of the scribe [Kha-Jem-Waset] for himself alone, the truly silent one, ... experienced in the work of Thoth, the scribe Kha-em-Waset, for his brother, the beloved of his affections, the truly silent one, godly of character, experienced in the work of Thoth. The scribe Meh, son of...

THE INSTRUCTION OF KING AMEN-EM-HET

This text purports to give the advice which Amen-em-het I, the first pharaoh of the Twelfth Dynasty, offered to his son and successor. As the reaction of an old and experienced ruler, it has some of the somber pessimism and some of the social idealism of the period. The specific historicity of the text has been challenged, on the grounds that it has some of the somber pessimism and some of the social idealism of the period. The specific historicity of the text will be found in ..., in which there is an...

Do not kill (140) a single one that comes close to thee, when thou hast shown him favor: the god knows him. He who prospers on earth is one of them, and they who follow the king are gods. Give the love of thee to the whole world; a good character is a remembrance ... It has been said (to) thee: "May the time of the sufferer be destroyed!" by those who are in the back of the house of King Khety, in contrast to its situation today.

Behold, I have spoken to thee the profitable matters of my (very) belly. Mayest thou act on what is established before thy face.

It has come successfully (to an end), according to what was found (145) in writing, in the writing of the scribe [Kha-Jem-Waset] for himself alone, the truly silent one, ... experienced in the work of Thoth, the scribe Kha-em-Waset, for his brother, the beloved of his affections, the truly silent one, godly of character, experienced in the work of Thoth. The scribe Meh, son of...

THE BEGINNING OF THE INSTRUCTION WHICH the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Sehetep-ib-Re; the Son of Re: Amen-em-het, the triumphant, made, when he spoke in a message of truth to his son, the All-Lord. He said:

Thou that hast appeared as a god, hearken to what I have to say to thee, that thou mayest be king of the land and ruler of the regions, that thou mayest achieve an overabundance of good.

HOLD THYSELF APART FROM THOSE SUBORDINATE TO (THEE), lest that should happen to whose honors no attention has been given. Approach them not in thy loneliness. Fill not thy heart with a brother, nor know a friend. Create not for thyself intimates—there is no fulfillment thereby. (Even) when thou sleepest, guard thy heart thyself, because no man has adherents on the day of distress. (5) I gave to the destitute and brought up the orphan. I caused him who was nothing to reach (his goal), like him who was (somebody).

(BUT) it was he who ate my food that raised troops (against me) and he to whom I had given my hands that created terror thereby. They who were clothed in my fine linen looked upon me as (this) those who lacked (it). They who were perfumed with my myrrh poured out water while having (it).

MY LIVING COUNTERPARTS, YE WHO SHARE WITH ME AMONG MORTALS, make lamentations for me as something which cannot be heard, for a great piece of fighting cannot be seen. Indeed, one fights on the arena forgetful of yesterday. (But) there is no fulfillment of happiness for him who does not know what he should know.

IT WAS AFTER SUPPER, WHEN EVENING HAD COME. I had taken an hour of rest, lying upon my bed, for I had become weary. My heart began to follow after slumber for me. Then the weapons which should have been solicitous for me were branded, and I was like one crumbling, crumbled to (ii) dust, a snake of the desert.

I AWOKE AT THE FIGHTING, BEING MYSELF, and I found that it was a hand-to-hand conflict of the guard. If I had made haste with weapons in my hand, I should have made the cowards retreat hether-s|){ appeal on behalf of the deceased scribe Khety (cf. p. 432), "that excellent one, choice of utterances! give his name to eternity. He it was who made a book which was the Instruction of the King of Upper (and Lower Egypt: Se|hetep-ib-[Re]—life, prosperity, health!—when he had gone to rest, when he joined heaven and entered among the lords of the necropolis." This passage must be treated as a valid or as a misapplied tradition that a scribe Khety composed the present text.

That is, the deceased. The applicability of this epitaph and the question whether it might have been added in a later copy are critical to the problem whether the king spoke in life or posthumously.

For the argument that "message of truth" means a "dream" or a "revelation" from the dead king to the living king, see B. Gunn in JEA, xxvii (1941), 2-5.

Sen-Usert I, who was coregent in the last ten years of the reign of his father, Amen-em-het I.

Corrupt, or perhaps figurative for a covert obscenity of disrespect.

Future pharaohs. cf. Gardiner, in Melanges Maspero, i, 484 f.

Although he cannot transmit his own experience fully to his successors, and they must learn chiefly by their own struggles, still the ignorant cannot achieve anything.

The old king illustrates his disillusionment by telling about a treacherous attack upon him by night. Apparently his own bodyguard was involved. is no one valiant at night, and there is no fighting alone. No success may occur without a protector.*

BEHOLD, BLOODSHED OCCURRED WHILE I WAS WITHOUT THEE, before the courtiers had heard that I was handing over to thee, before I had sat together with thee. Pray, doer of valiant deeds.

Never had there been the like of my reputation as a benefactor of men; I had not (even) thought of it, my heart had already turned from it. No mischance had come up behind me since my birth. Never had there been the like of my reputation as a benefactor of men; I had not (even) thought of it, my heart had already turned from it. No mischance had come up behind me since my birth.

I TROD AS FAR AS ELEPHANTINE; I attained to the marches of the Delta.121 I stood upon the margins of the land and saw its enclosure. I reached the limits of the armed territory by my (own) strong arm and in my (own) form of being. I was the one who made barley, the beloved of the grain-god. The Nile honored me in the way of gods, for it, I had not (even) thought of it, my heart had already turned from it. No mischance had come up behind me since my birth.

I OVERCAME LIONS; I CAUGHT CROCODILES. I subjugated them of Wawat;124 I carried off the Madjoji;124 (iii 1) I made the Asians do the dog-walk.15

I MADE FOR MYSELF A HOUSE ADORNED WITH GOLD, its ceiling of lapis lazuli, the floors of . . . , the doors of copper, and the bolts of bronze, made for eternity, for it, I had not (even) thought of it, my heart had already turned from it. No mischance had come up behind me since my birth.

Much idle cant is in the streets. The wise man says "Yes," making search for his "No," because he does not know it, when deprived of thy countenance a man of the royal blood is unaccountable to his ruler. Thou art my own heart; my eyes behold thee. The children have an hour of rest beside the people, as they give (5) thee praise.18

BEHOLD, I MADE THE BEGINNING, AND I WILL FIX FOR THEE THE END. I am he who comes to port for the sake of him who is in (my) heart.19 It is seemly to lay aside the White Crown for the sake of the seed of a god, so that things sealed should be in their proper place through that which I began for thee. Jubilation is in the barque of Re, because the kingship, which came into being formerly, (still) stands, through him who acts lovingly, through him who acts valiantly. Erect thy monuments perfected and enduring. Fight on behalf of the man who is wise, because he will not love himself beside thy majesty—life, prosperity, health.20

THE INSTRUCTION OF PRINCE HOR-Dedef

The only excuse for introducing the miserable remains of the following text is that the composer to whom it is ascribed was so frequently mentioned as one of the traditional wise men of Egypt.21 li-em-hotep, a high official of the pharaoh Djoser, and Hor-dedef, a son of the pharaoh Khufu (or Cheops, about 27th century B.C.), became legendary for their wisdom. It is unfortunate that the sole surviving elements of their ascribed lore should be in such miserable physical condition, uncertain of translation, and rather trite in content.

Munich Ostracon 3400, published by E. Brunner-Traut in ZAsS, LXXVI (1940), 3-9, Pl. 1, and Oriental Institute Ostracon 17003 (unpublished). Both come from Thebes and are to be dated, on the basis of handwriting to the late Nineteenth or early Twentieth Dynasty (1250-1150 B.C.). However, the language indicates a date of composition somewhat earlier.*

Beginning of the instruction which the Hereditary Prince and Count, the King’s Son Hor-dedef, made for his son, whom he bred, named Au-ib-Re.

* [Be not] boastful before (my very) eyes, and beware of the boasting of another. If thou art a man of standing and foundest [a household, take] thou a wife as a man of feeling,2 and a male child will be born to thee.

Thou shalt build thy house for thy son (in) the place where thou art. Embellish thy [house] of the necropolis, and enrich thy place of the West.8 A lofty reception is for him who is dead, (but) a high reception for him who is living, and thy house of death is (destined) for life.*

---

* This seems to say that the attack on Amen-em-het was successful. In conflict with that impression, the following context would suggest that his long, long campaign with his son had not yet begun. In the latter case, the attack could not have been fatal.

121 The old king feels constrained to offer his son advice because his own misplaced confidence in his servants had been so costly.

124 Following Gardiner, op. cit., 496 ff., the first two questions may carry chagrin at the actual situation, a conspiracy within the king’s own harem, while the third question would be a metaphorical bridge to the king’s benevolences which are to be listed. He was the beneficent channel of the king’s majesty—life, prosperity, health!

15 The southern and northern limits of Egypt.

16 Perhaps “the regions be-armed,” as a designation of Egypt within its frontier protection.

17 Peoples to the south of Egypt.

18 As submissive as a cur in one’s own home.

19 Corrupt in the extant texts, but perhaps: I know the time limits of my palace, since I am the Lord-to-the-Limit.

20 This is an example of our difficulties in translating a corrupt text without aid. The passages from “Much” to “countenance” are rendered as they are visible in the best of four broken and corrupt texts. It is assumed that the initial sentence means: “Much (insincere) ‘Oh surely, surely!’ is in the streets.” If the sentences have any meaning at all, they deal with the sincere eloquence of the wise man. No other meaning or sense is possible.

21 Instruction of Ptah-hotep (p. 413 above), and for the passage beginning “If thou art a man of standing,” cf. the Instruction for Meri-ka-Re (p. 417 above).

22 For the passage beginning “If thou art a man of standing,” cf. the Instruction of Pah-hotep (p. 417 above), and for the passage beginning “Embellish thy . . . the man who is wise, because he will not love himself beside thy majesty—life, prosperity, health!”
See thou the ... for the fields which should be inundated....

THE INSTRUCTION OF ANI

The following extracts are from a set of instructions given by a father to his son toward the end of the Egyptian Empire. They exist only in later copies, so that there has been abundant opportunity for corruption to enter the copies. However, they do reflect the later emphases of quietude, personal piety, and ritual activity. The final sections, not translated here, give the respectful answer of Ani’s son, fearing that he cannot measure up to his father’s high standards.

The main manuscript is a papyrus of the Twenty-first or Twenty-second Dynasty (18th-20th centuries B.C.), now in the Cairo Museum, “Boulaq no. 4.” It was published by F. Chabas, Les maximes du scribe Ani (Chalon-sur-Saone, 1876-78). There is also a fragmentary papyrus of a somewhat earlier period, No. 16959, in the Museum Guimet in Paris; a writing tablet of the Twenty-second Dynasty, No. 8934 in Berlin; and two extracts elsewhere. There is a transcription into hieroglyphic in E. Suys, La sagesses d’Ani (Rome, 1935), and there are several extracts in A. Volten, Studien zum Weisheitsbuch des Anii (Copenhagen, 1937). The Berlin tablet begins: “The beginning of the instruction and teaching which the Scribe Ani of the Temple of (Queen) Nefert-iri made,” i.e., Ah-mose Nefert-iri of the 18th dynasty: Revue d’Égyptologie, vi (1951), 42.

(iii 1) ... Take to thyself a wife while thou art (still) a youth; so that she may produce a son for thee. Beget [him] for thyself while thou art (still) young. Teach him to be a man. A man whose people are many is happy; he is saluted (respectfully) with regard to his children.

* Celebrate the feast of thy god and repeat it at its season. God is angry at them who disregard him. Have witnesses attending (5) when thou makest offering at the first time of doing it. If someone comes to require thy examination, have them set on papyrus thy going-down at this time.2 ... Singing, dancing, and incense are his food, and to receive prostrations is his property (right). The god will magnify the name of him who does it....

(13) ... Be on thy guard against a woman from abroad, who is not known in her (own) town. Do not stare at her when she passes by. Do not know her carnally: a deep water, whose windings one knows not, a woman who is far away from her husband. “I am sleek,” she says to thee every day. She has no witnesses when she waits to ensnare thee. It is a great crime (worthy) of death, when one hears of it....

(iv 1) Do not talk a lot. Be silent, and thou wilt be happy. Do not be garrulous. The dwelling of god, its magnificence, shall not be diminished, but what he needs, he will hear what thou sayest, and he will accept thy offering....

1 This section appears also in Papyrus Chester Beatty V, verso ii 6-8 (of the late 19th dynasty), where the clause “and teach her about that which men do” is inserted at this point—Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty Gift, ed. by A. H. Gardiner (London, 1935), 1, 50, ii, Pl. 27.

2 “The god’s eye may have regard to the nature of his anger, and prostrate himself in his name. He shows (his) power in a million forms. (Only) they are magnified whom he magnifies. The god of this land is the sun which is on the horizon, and (only) his images are upon earth.”

3 “Or ‘about his form of appearance,’” the cult image.

4 The images of some gods were enshrouded during their public appearances.

5 Some of that approach to monotheism which appeared in later Egypt. The sun is the god, appearing in a myriad of forms, including his images.
HE SAYS: FIRST CHAPTER:

Give thy ears, hear what is said, give thy heart to understand them. (10)
To put them in thy heart is worth while, (5)
But it is damaging to him who neglects them. Let them rest in the casket of thy belly, that they may be a key in thy heart.

1 On the characteristics of older and later Egyptian books of wisdom, see R. Anthes, Lebensregeln und Lebensweisheit der alten Aegypter (AO, 32, Leipzig, 1933).
At a time when there is a whirlwind of words,
They shall be a mooring-stake for thy tongue. (15)
If thou spendest thy time while this is in thy heart,
Thou wilt find it a success;
Thou wilt find my words a treasury of life, (iv 1)
And thy body will prosper upon earth.©

SECOND CHAPTER:
Guard thyself against robbing the oppressed
And against overbearing the disabled. (5)
Stretch not forth thy hand against the approach of an old man,
Nor steal away the speech of the aged.
Let not thyself be sent on a dangerous errand,
Nor love him who carries it out.
Do not cry out against him whom thou hast attacked,
Nor return him answer on thy own behalf.
He who does evil, the (very) river-bank abandons him,
And his floodwaters carry him off.
The north wind comes down that it may end his hour;
It is joined to the tempest; (15)
The thunder is loud, and the crocodiles are wicked.
Thou heated man, how art thou (now) ?
He is crying out, and his voice (reaches) to heaven.
O moon,® establish his crime (against him)!
So steer that we may bring the wicked man across,
For we shall not act like him—
Lift him up, give him thy hand;
Leave him (in) the arms of the god;
Fill his belly with bread of thine, (5)
So that he may be sated and may be ashamed.9
Another good deed in the heart of the god
Is to pause before speaking. . . .10

FOURTH CHAPTER:
As for the heated man of a temple, (vi 1)
He is like a tree growing in the open.
In the completion of a moment (comes) its loss of foliage,
And its end is reached in the shipyards;
(Or) it is floated far from its place, (5)
And the flame is its burial shroud.
(But) the truly silent man holds himself apart.
He is like a tree growing in a garden.
It flourishes and doubles its yield;
It (stands) before its lord. (10)
Its fruit is sweet; its shade is pleasant;
And its end is reached in the garden.12

SEVENTH CHAPTER:
Cast not thy heart in pursuit of riches, (10)
(For) there is no ignoring Fate and Fortune.10
Place not thy heart upon externals,
(For) every man belongs to his (appointed) hour.
Do not strain to seek an excess,
When thy needs are safe for thee. (15)
If riches are brought to thee by robbery,
They will not spend the night with thee;
At daybreak they are not in thy house:
Their places may be seen, but they are not.
The ground has opened its mouth . . . that it might swallow them up,
And might sink them into the underworld. (x 1)
(Or) they have made themselves a great breach of their (own) size
And are sunken down into the underworld*
(Or) they have made themselves wings like geese
And are flown away to the heavens.17

The fifth chapter urges honesty in relations with the temple, because today's dispositions may be upset by tomorrow's changes.

1 It is obvious that each chapter (Egyptian: "house") is divided into stanzas. For example, the first chapter divides 4-4-4. However, the division is not always clear. Does the second chapter divide 4-4-2-4-4-2 or 4-4-8-6-2? Does the fourth chapter divide 4-2-4-2 or 6-6? Therefore, this translation does not attempt such divisions.

2 The "hot" man is the passionate or impulsive man, in contrast to the "silent" or humbly pious man.

3 The moon-god Thoth was the barrister of the gods.

4 The third chapter, here omitted, advises restraint in debate. "Sleep before speaking." Avoid arguing with "the heated man," because "the god knows how to answer him."

5 This chapter has general similarity to Ps. 1 or Jer. 17:5-8.
Rejoice not thyself (over) riches (gained) by robbery, Nor mourn because of poverty.
If an archer in the van advances (too far), Then his squad abandons him.
The ship of the covetous is left (in) the mud, \( ^{10} \) While the boat of the silent man (has) a fair breeze. Thou shouldst make prayer to the Aton when he rises,
Saying: "Give me prosperity and health."
He will give thee thy needs for this life, And thou wilt be safe from terror. \( ^{18} \)...

NINTH CHAPTER:
Do not associate to thyself the heated man, Nor visit him for conversation. \( ^{19} \)
Preserve thy tongue from answering thy superior, \( ^{xi \ 15} \)
And guard thyself against reviling him.
Do not make him cast his speech to lasso thee, Nor make (too) free with thy answer.
Thou shouldst discuss an answer (only) with a man of thy (own) size,
And guard thyself against plunging headlong into it. Swifter is speech when the heart is hurt \( ^{xii \ 1} \)
Than wind of the head-waters. \( ^{28} \) ... Do not leap to hold to such a one, Lest a terror carry thee off.

TENTH CHAPTER:
\( ^{xiii \ 10} \) Do not greet thy heated (opponent) in thy violence, \( ^{21} \)
Nor hurt thy own heart (thereby).
Do not say to him: "Hail to thee!" falsely, When a terror is in thy belly.
Do not talk with a man falsely—\( ^{15} \) The abomination of the god.
Do not cut off thy heart from thy tongue, That all thy affairs may be successful.
Be sincere in the presence of the common people, For one is safe in the hand of the god. \( ^{xiv \ 1} \)
God hates him who falsifies words; His great abomination is the contentious of belly.

ELEVENTH CHAPTER:
Be not greedy for the property of a poor man, \( ^{5} \)
Nor hunger for his bread. As for the property of a poor man, it (is) a blocking to the throat,
It makes a vomiting to the gullet. If he has obtained it by false oaths, His heart is perverted by his belly. \( ^{28} \)...
\( ^{xiv \ 10} \)
The mouthful of bread (too) great thou swallowest and vomitest up, \( ^{xiv \ 17} \)
And art emptied of thy good. \( ^{24} \)...

THIRTEENTH CHAPTER:
Do not confuse a man with a pen upon papyrus—\( ^{xv \ 20} \)
The abomination of the god.
Do not bear witness with false words, \( ^{xvi \ i} \)
Nor support another person (thus) with thy tongue.
Do not take an accounting of him who has nothing, Nor falsify thy pen.
If thou findest a large debt against a poor man, \( ^{5} \)
Make it into three parts, Forgive two, and let one stand.
Thou wilt find it like the ways of life;
Thou wilt lie down and sleep (soundly); in the morning
Thou wilt find it (again) like good news. \( ^{10} \)
Better is praise as one who loves men Than riches in a storehouse;
Better is bread, when the heart is happy, Than riches with sorrow. \( ^{25} \) —

SIXTEENTH CHAPTER:
Do not lean on the scales nor falsify the weights, Nor damage the fractions of the measure. \( ^{26} \)
Do not wish for a (common) country measure, \( ^{xvii \ 20} \)
And neglect those of the treasury.
The ape \( ^{27} \) sits beside the balance, And his heart is the plummet. \( ^{xviii \ 1} \)
Which god is as great as Thoth, He that discovered these things, to make them? Make not for thyself weights which are deficient; They abound in grief through the will of god. \( ^{28} \) ...
If the tongue of a man (be) the rudder of a boat, (5) Or be fierce of face against him if he errs. For man is clay and straw, And the god is his builder. He is tearing down and building up every day. (15) He makes a thousand poor men as he wishes, (Or) he makes a thousand men as overseers, When he is in his hour of life. How joyful is he who reaches the West, When he is safe in the hand of the god.42...

TWENTIETH CHAPTER:
Do not confuse a man in the law court,
Nor oppress for him the disabled.
Do not accept the bribe of a powerful man,
Nor damage the plans of god.
Do not discover for thy own self the will of god, (15) Nor damage (thus) the regard for thee.
Then he will be cleansed by them.

TWENTY-FIRST CHAPTER:
Do not say: "I have found a strong superior, (xxii 1) For a man in thy city has injured me." Do not say: "I have found a patron, For one who hates me has injured me." For surely thou knowest not the plans of god, (5) Lest thou be ashamed on the morrow. Sit thou down at the hands of the god, And thy silence will cast them down.85... Empty not thy belly to everybody, Nor damage (thus) the regard for thee. Spread not thy words to the common people,
Nor lay on thy mouth at first. Do not eat bread before a noble,
Nor injure the affairs of the lame. (xxiv 10) They entertain; they instruct; They are the foremost of all books; They are a pastime for thy spittle. If thou art satisfied with false chewings, (xxiii 15) They make the ignorant to know. If they are read out before the ignorant, Then with him will.... Do not falsify the income on the records* Nor damage the plans of god. Do not discover for thy own self the will of god, (15) Without (reference to) Fate and Fortune.84...

TWENTY-SECOND CHAPTER:
The All-Lord is its pilot.
Nor be fierce of face against him if he errs.
For man is clay and straw, And the god is his builder. He is tearing down and building up every day. (15) He makes a thousand poor men as he wishes, (Or) he makes a thousand men as overseers, When he is in his hour of life. How joyful is he who reaches the West, When he is safe in the hand of the god.42...

TWENTY-EIGHTH CHAPTER:
Do not recognize a widow if thou catchest her in the fields.48 Nor fail to be indulgent to her reply. (xxvi 10) Do not neglect a stranger (with) thy oil-jar, That it be doubled before thy brethren. God desires respect for the poor More than the honoring of the exalted.44 ...

THIRTIETH CHAPTER:
See thou these thirty chapters:
They entertain; they instruct;46 They are the foremost of all books; They make the ignorant to know. (xxvii 10) If they are read out before the ignorant, Then he will be cleansed by them.

It has come to its end In the writing of Senu, son of the God’s Father Pa-miui.47
Two other texts to which the Egyptians applied the term "Instruction" are on the divine attributes of the pharaoh (p. 431 below) and the Satire on the Trades (pp. 432-434 below).

Akkadian Proverbs and Counsels
(Translator: Robert H. Pfeiffer)

PROVERBS

I

(40:4) My cistern has not gone dry, so my thirst is not excessive.1 (5) The net is loosened, but the fetters were not remiss.2 (6) I have obtained a pawn, but the loss does not stop.3 (9) If I myself had not gone, who would have gone at my side?4 (10a) He consecrated the temple before he started it.5 (iob-n) If indeed he had not stood up, when would he sit high up, like gentlemen, on a chair?6 (i2b-i3) My mouth had not spoken as gentlemen (do), (consequently) when have I sat and eaten high up on a chair?7 (14-15) My friend, my secret knowledge is not safeguarded by an enemy: on the contrary, by a son or a daughter, my friend, is my secret knowledge safeguarded.8

(97:7-8) Fruit in the spring (of the year)—fruit of mourning.® (9) A canal in the direction of the wind brings water in abundance.9

II

As long as a man does not exert himself, he will gain nothing.10 Whoso has neither king nor queen, who if then his lord?

III

Text: Rawlinson, Vol. 11, No. 16. S. Langdon, ASL, xxv (1912), 234-43. Translation: Langdon, ibid., pp. 219-33. B. Meissner, Die babylonische-assyrische Literatur (Wildpark-Pots-

1. "We never know the worth of water till the well is dry."
2. cf. Prov. 5:19; and "Out of the frying-pan into the fire."
3. cf. Eccles. 9:11; and "One fair day assureth not a good summer"; "No fence against ill fortune."
4. cf. Prov. 25:9. In English, "Tell it not in Gathil" (II Sam. 1:20) has become proverbial.
5. cf. Prov. 5:9; and "Tip it not in Gathil" (II Sam. 1:20) has become proverbial.
6. cf. "We never know the worth of water till the well is dry."
cosmeticians are there is slander. A (plain) citizen in another city becomes its chief. C. Bu 80-7-19, 130 An alien ox eats grass, one's own ox lies down in the pasture. IV Text: C. Bezold and E. A. W. Budge, The Tell el-Amarna Tablets in the British Museum (London, 1892), No. 12, lines 17-19. Translation: L. Knudtzon, Die el-Amarna-Tafeln (VAB, 11), No. 74 (cf. Vol. 11, pp. 1159-60). S. A. B. Mercer, The Tell el-Amarna Tablets (Toronto, 1939). The original form of the proverb (attested in 1400-1360 in the letter of Rib-Addi of Byblos just quoted) may have been, "A woman without a husband is like a field without cultivation." My field is like a woman without a husband, on account of its lack of cultivation. Text: Bezold and Budge, The Tell el-Amarna Tablets, No. 61, (lines 16-19). Translation: Knudtzon, Die el-Amarna Tafeln, No. 252. W. F. Albright, An Archaic Hebrew Proverb in an Amarna Letter from Central Palestine, BASOR, No. 89 (February, 1943), pp. 29-32. On ants, cf. Prov. 6:6; 30:25. This proverb may be seen in its context in the translation of the Amarna letter No. 252, p. 486. When ants are struck, they do not accept (it passively), but bite the hand of the man who smites them. V Text: R. F. Harper, ABL, No. 403, lines 5-7; 14-15; No. 652, lines 10-13. Translation: L. Knudtzon, Royal Correspondence of the Assyrian Empire, Vol. 1 (Ann Arbor, 1930), R. H. Pfeiffer, State Letters of Assyria (American Oriental Series, Vol. 6, New Haven, 1935). Chi the third of these proverbs cf. A. L. Oppenheim in BASOR, No. 107 (October, 1947), p. 9, n. 6. The first and second proverbs are quoted by Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria (668-623 B.C.). a sarcastic letter to the Babylonians. In a fuller and clearer form the first proverb occurs in Ahiqar 8:17 (Syrac) and 8:14 (Arabic). "My son, you have been to me like the dog that came to the potters' oven to warm himself, and after he was warm rose up to bark at them" (Syrac). "O my son! You have been to me like the dog that was cold and went into the potters' house to get warm. And when it had got warm, it began to bark at them, and they chased it out and beat it, that it might not bite them" (Arabic). See: R. H. Charles, The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament (Oxford, 1913), Vol. 11, p. 771. The third proverb is dated to the reign of Esarhaddon (680-669 B.C.). (1) When the potter's dog went into the oven, the potter blew on the fire inside of it. (2) A sinful woman at the gate of a judge's house—her word prevails over that of her husband. (3) Man is the shadow of a god, a slave is the shadow of a man; but the king is like the (very) image of a god.

COUNSEL OF WISDOM Text and translations: Kerr Duncan Macmillan, Some Cuneiform Tablets Bearing on the Religion of Babylonia and Assyria (BA, v [1906]), 5, pp. 557-62, 622 f. H. Zimmer, in ZA, xxxii (1908), 307 ff.; and in AO, xiii (111), pp. 27-9. S. Langdon, A Tablet of Babylonian Wisdom, PSBA, xxxvii (1915), 105-16, 131-37; see also his Babylonian Wisdom (London, 1923), pp. 88-92. E. Ebeling, AOT, pp. 291-93. B. Meissner, Babylonien und Assyraren, Vol. 11, pp. 421 f.; Die babylonisch-assyrische Schriftkunde (Wildpark-Potsdam, 1928), p. 81 f. We do not know how long before 700 B.C. this text was written. The lines are numbered as in Langdon's edition of the text. EARS 27 is regarded as the beginning of this work. As a wise man, let your understanding shine modestly, Let your mouth be restrained, guarded your speech. Like a man's wealth, let your lips be precious. Let affront, hostility, be an abomination unto you. Speak nothing impertinent, (give no) unreliable advice. Whoever does something ugly—his head is despised. Hasten not to stand in a public assembly, Seek not the place of quarrel; For in a quarrel you must give a decision, And you will be forced to be their witness. They will fetch you to testify in a lawsuit that does not concern you. When you see a quarrel, go away without noticing it. But if it is really your own quarrel, extinguish the flame; For a quarrel is a neglect of what is right, A protecting wall . . . (for) the nakedness of one's adversary: Whoever stops it is thinking about the interests of a friend. Unto your opponent do no evil; Your evildoer recompense with good; Unto your enemy let justice [be done]. Unto your oppressor . . .

1. Let him rejoice over you, . . . return to him. Let not your heart be induced to do evil. (some lines lost) Give food to eat, give date wine to drink; The one begging for alms honor, cloth: Over this his god rejoices, This is pleasing unto the god Shamash, he rewards it with good.

2. Be helpful, do good. A maid in the house do not . . . .

3. More than all watchfulness watch your mouth . . . . (H. L. Ginsberg's translation, p. 428 of this volume).

5. Cf. the Arabic version of Ahiqar ii 54 (R. H. Charles, The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament, Vol. 11, p. 736): "And stand not between persons quarrelling, because from a bad word there comes a quarrel, and from a quarrel there comes war, and from war there comes fighting, and you will be forced to bear witness; but run from thence and rest your-

Do not marry a harlot whose husbands are six thousand.

An Ishtar-woman vowed to a god,
A sacred prostitute whose favors are unlimited,
Will not lift you out of your trouble:
In your quarrel she will slander you.\(^5\)
Reverence and submissiveness are not with her.
Truly, if she takes possession of the house, lead her out
Toward the path of a stranger she turns her mind. (30)
Or the house which she enters will be destroyed, her husband will not prosper.\(^6\)
My son, if it be his will, you belong to the prince:
Guard his seal, bind it to your person
Open his treasury, enter therein,
For before you no stranger was ever there.
Wealth without measure you will see therein;
(But) to any such thing do not turn your eye,
Do not let your mind consider doing something stealthy,
For eventually the matter will be investigated.
And whatever stealthy action you have done will become manifest;
The prince will hear of it, [will punish you].

(Reverse i)
Do not slander, speak what is fine.
Speak no evil, tell what is good.
Whoever slanders (or) speaks evil,
As a retribution the god Shamash will pursue after his head.
Open not wide your mouth, guard your lips;
The words of your inner self do not speak (even) when alone.
What you now speak hastily you will later take back,
And you should cause your mind to refrain by its efforts from speech.\(^7\)
Pay homage daily to your god
With sacrifice, prayer, and appropriate incense-offering.
Towards your god you should feel solicitude of heart:
That is what is appropriate to the deity.
Prayer, supplication, and prostration to the ground
Shall you offer in the morning: then your might will be great,
And in abundance, through god’s help, you will prosper.\(^8\)
In your learning examine the tablet.

(Reverse B)
Reverence (for the deity) produces well-being,
Sacrifice prolongs life,
And prayer atones for sin.
A god-fearing man is not despised by [his god];
A worshiper of the Anunnaki lengthens his days.
Towards your god you should feel solicitude of heart:
That is what is appropriate to the deity.
Prayer, supplication, and prostration to the ground
Shall you offer in the morning: then your might will be great,
And in abundance, through god’s help, you will prosper.\(^8\)
In your learning examine the tablet.

---

\(^6\) See Prov. 7:5-27.

\(^7\) See above, n. 3.

\(^8\) On the duties of ritual worship (lines 35-41) see: Prov. 3:9-10; Eccles. 5:1-7 (Hebr. 4:17-5:6); Ecclus. 7:29-31; Tobit 1:6-8.
who [was a righteous] man [and bly whose counsel and words all of Assyria was guided] 'Extinguished be [the lamp] of your son whom you brought] up, whom you set up at the gate of the palace. He has ruined you, and an [evil] return [is it].’ Th[en] I, Ah[i]qar, was afraid. I answered and said to [that officer] Nabu-sum[iskun, “Am] I [not] the same Ah[i]qar who once saved you from an undeserved death? [When Sennacherib, the father of this King Esaraddon, sought to [kill you, th]en I brought you to my house. There I sustained you (iv 49-63) as a man deals with his brother, having hidden you from him and having said 'I killed him,' until at a la[ter] tim[e] and after many days I brought you before King Sennacherib and cleared you of offenses before him and he did you no evil]. Moreover, Sennacherib was well pleased with me for having kept you alive and not having killed you. Now do you do to me even as I did to you. Don’t kill me. Take me to your house until other times. King Esarhad-don is merciful as any man(?). In the end he will remember me and wish for my advice. Th[en] you will [presen]t me to him and he will spare me alive.” Then the officer Nabusumiskun [answered] and said, "Fear not, my [lord] Ah[i]qar, father of all Assyria, by whose counsel King Sennacherib and (all) the host of Assyria (were guided)!” Then the officer Nabusumiskun said to his companions, those two men that were with him, "[Do you lis]ten [and pay attention] to me while I tell you [my] plan, and a [very] good plan it is.” S[o] those [men answered] and said ifo him. “Te[ll] us, O officer Nabusumiskun, what [ever you will, and we shall listen to] you.” The [officer Nabusumiskun then spoke and said to them, “Listen to me. This is [Ahi]qar. He [is] a great man [and a bearer of the se]al of [King] Esaraddon, and the whole army of [Assy]ria was guided by his counsel and words. Let us not kill him [undeservedly]. I will give you [a] eunuch [slave] of mine. Let him be slain bet[ween these] two mountains instead of this Ah[i]qar. Whe[n] it is reported, and the king [se]nds other [men] af[ter us to see the body of this Ah[i]qar. Whe[n] is eunuch slave of mine, (v 64-78) In the end [King] Esaraddon [will remember Ah[i]qar and desire his advice] and he will [regret etc].”

(Since only the right half—or less than half—of col. v is preserved, its translation involves too much conjecture. It is, however, certain that Nabusumiskun’s companions agree to his plan, and Nabusumiskun secretly maintains Ah[i]qar in his house as Ah[i]qar once maintained Nabusumiskun. The latter and his two companions report to Esaraddon that they have slain Ah[i]qar. The rest of the story is missing altogether. We know from the later recensions that eventually the king did, in fact, miss Ah[i]qar’s advice sorely and was overjoyed to learn that he was still alive, and that Ah[i]qar was re-habilitated while Nadin got his deserts.)

(vi 79-94) [Wh]at is stronger than a braying ass?

The l[ojad. The son who is trained and taught and on [whose] feet the fetter² is put [shall prosper]. With-hold not thy son from the rod, else thou wilt not be able to save [him from wickedness]. If I smite thee, my son, thou wilt not die, but if I leave thee to thine own heart [thou wilt not live]. A blow for a bondman, a reb[u]ke for a bondwoman, and for all thy slaves discipline. One who buys a run[away] slave [or a thievish handmaid squanders his fortune and dis-graces] the name of his father and his offspring with the reputation of his wantonness.—The scorpion [finds] bread but is not p[leased, and something b]lad is and more pleased than if one fe[eds i] t . . . The lion will lie in wait for the stag in the concealment of the e . . . and he [ . . . ] and will shed its blood and eat its flesh. Even so is the meeting of [me]n.— . . . a lion. . . . An ass which leaves [its load] and does not carry it shall take a load from its companion and take the [b[urde]n which is not its [own with its own] and shall be made to bear a camel’s load.—The ass bend[s] down] to the she-ass [from love of her, and the birds [. . .]. Two things [which] are meet, and the third pleasing to Shamash: one who dr[inks] wine and gives it to drink, one who guards wisdom, and one who hears a word and does not tell.—Behold that is dear [to] Shamash. But he who drinks wine and does not [give it to drink], and one whose wisdom goes astray, [and . . . ] is seen.—[ . . .] Wisdom . . . .

(vii 95-110) To gods also she is dear. F[or all time] the kingdom is [hers]. In he[avn]en is she established, for the lord of holy ones has exalted [her.—My s]on, ch[att]er not overmuch so that thou speak out [every w]ord [that] comes to thy mind; for men’s (eyes) and ears are everywhere (trained) u[pon] thy mouth. Beware lest it be [thy] undoing. More than all watchfulness watch thy mouth,⁸ and [over] what [thou h[earrest] harden thy heart. For a word is a bird: once released no man can re[capture it]." First co[fun]t the secrets of thy mouth; then bring out thy [words] by numberFor the instruction⁶ of a mouth is stronger than the instruction of war. Treat not lightly the word of a king: let it be healing for thy [flesh].⁷ Soft is the utterance of a king; (yet) it is sharper and stronger than a [two]-edged knife. Look before thee: a hard look⁵ [on the] face of a k[ing] (means) "Delay not!"⁹ His wrath is swift as lightning: do thou take heed unto thyself that he disp[lay i]t not against thine ut[era]nces and thou perish [before thy time].¹⁰ [The w]rath of a king, if thou be commanded, is a burning fire. Obey [it] at once. Let it not be kindled against thee and cover (read: burn) thy hands. [Cov]er up the word of a king

¹ cf. line 196 and Isa. 41:3b, which render "no fetter is put to his feet."
² cf. Prov. 4:23.
³ Or, "who releases it is a man of no understanding!"
⁴ Reading b’dath and interpreting according to the Arabic.
⁵ Reading ‘dbth and again interpreting according to the Arabic.
⁶ cf. Prov. 4:22; 16:24. ¹⁰ De 3:8 LXX.
⁷ Literally ‘thing (word).’
⁸ Literally "stand not."
⁹ "cf. for the whole saying Eccles. 8:2-3; where the verse division of the LXX must be followed, and ἐπὶ and ὑπὸ μὴν, are perhaps to be read at the beginnings of vv. 2 and 3 respectively."
with the veil of the heart.—Why should wood strive with fire, flesh with a knife, a man with the Merciful? For a man's charm is his truthfulness; his repulsiveness, the lies of his lips. [At first] a throne [is set up] for the liar, but in the end they [ind] out his lies and spit in his face. A liar's neck is cut [i.e. he speaks very softly?] like a . . . virgin that is hidden] from sight, like a man who causes misfortun[] which does not proceed from God.—[Despise not] that which is in thy lot, nor covet a wealth which is denied thee. [Multiply not] riches and make not great thy heart. [Whosoever takes no pride] in the names of his father and mother, may the [s]un not shine [upon him];[20] for he is a wicked man. [From myself] has my misfortune proceeded: with whom shall I be justified?—The son of my body has spied out my house: [wh]at can I say to strangers? [My son has] been a false witness against me: who, then, has justified me?—From my house has gone forth wrath: with whom can I strive and win? Reveal not thy [secrets] before thy [fr]ends, lest thy name become despised of them.[21] (x 142-158) With him who is more exalted than thou, quarrel not. With him who is . . . and stronger than thou, [contend not; for he will take] of thy portion and [add it to] his. Behold even so is a small man (who strives) with [a great one]. Remove not wisdom from thee . . . . Gaze not overmuch [lest] thy vi[s]on be dimmed. Be not (too) sweet, lest they [swallow] thee: be not (too) bitter [lest they spit thee out]. If thou wouldst be [exalted], my son, [humble thyself before God], who humbles an [exalted] man and [exalts a lowly man]. What me[n]'s [li]ps curse, God does n[ot] curse, (lines 152-5 badly damaged and omitted here) God shall twist the twister's mouth and tear out [his] tongue. Let not [good ey]es be darkened, nor [good] ears [be stopped, and let a good mouth love] the truth and speak it. (xi 159-172) A man of [beco]ming conduct whose heart is good is like a mighty c[it]y which is sif[uated] upon a m[ountain]. There is [none that can bring him down. Except] a man dwell with God, how can he be guarded by his own refuge? . . . , but he with whom God is, who ca[n cas] him down? (line 162 difficult and omitted here) A man [knows not] what is in his fellow's heart. So when a good man [se]es a wi[cked] man [let him beware of him]. Let him [not] join with him on a journey or be a neighbor to him—a good man [wi]th a ba[d] m[an]. The [bram]ble sent to [the] pomegranate tree [saying], "The bumble to the pomegranate: Wherefore the mul[titude] of (thy) thorns [to him that to]u[ches thy] [fru]it?" ... The [pomegranate tree] answered and said to the bramble, "Thou art all[1] thorns to him that touches thee." All that come in contact with a righteous man are on his side. [A city] of wicked men shall on a gusty day be pulled apart, and in 21a ... its gates be brought low; for the spoil [of the righteous are they].—Mine eyes which I lifted up unto thee and my heart which I gave thee in wisdom [hast thou scorned, and thou hast brought my name into disgrace]. If the wicked man seize the corners of thy garment, leave it in his hand. Then approach Shamash: he will take his and give it to thee.

(xii 173-190) (Ends of all lines and beginnings of some missing. Only the point of line 188 is entirely clear: "Hunger makes bitterness sweet, and thirst [sour-ness]."

Calm weather (Grelot).

... If thy master entrust to thee water to keep [and thou do it faithfully, he may] leave gold with thee.... [A man] one [day said] to the wild ass, "[Let me ride] upon thee, and I will maintain thee [____] Said the wild ass, "Keep thy maintenance and thy fodder, and let me not see thy riding." ... Let not the rich man say, "In my riches I am glorious." 23

(Column xiv 208-223 has only shreds preserved; the point of the first one can be guessed: "[Do not sh\ow an Arab the sea nor a Sidonian the de[sert]; for their work is different")

Observations on Life and the World Order

Egyptian Observations

(Translator: John A. Wilson)

THE DIVINE ATTRIBUTES OF PHARAOH

The king of Egypt ruled the land as a god, as the Son of Re, or as the Horus, or as the incorporation of the deities of Upper and Lower Egypt. He was also a synthesis of other gods who represented forces of proper rule, a blend of force and intelligence, of terror and nurture, or of sustenance and punishment. The following poem sets forth some of the divine elements which went into the composition of a pharaoh. It is framed as a father’s instruction to his children on right living: if they faithfully serve so great a god, they will prosper.

The beginning of the instruction which he made for his children.

I tell something important
And cause that ye hear it.
I cause that ye know a counsel of eternity
And a manner of living aright
And for passing a lifetime in peace.
Worship King Ni-maat-Re, living forever, within your bodies
And associate with his majesty in your hearts.
He is Perception which is in (men’s) hearts,
And his eyes search out every body.
He is Re, by whose beams one sees,
He is one who illumines the Two Lands more than the sun disc.
He is one who makes the land greener than (does) a high Nile,
For he has filled the Two Lands with strength and life.
The nostrils are chilled when he inclines toward rage,
(But) when he is merciful, (they) will breathe the air.
He gives food to them who are in his service,
And he supplies them who tread his path.

And his mouth is increase.
He who is to be is his creation,
(For) he is the Khnum of all bodies,
The begetter who creates the people.
He is the Bastet who protects the Two Lands;
He who worships him will be one whom his arm shelters.
He is Sekhmet against him who transgresses his command;
He whom he hates will bear woes.
Fight on behalf of his name,
And be scrupulous in the oath to him,
(That) ye may be free from a taint of disloyalty.
He whom the king has loved will be a revered one,
(But) there is no tomb for a rebel against his majesty,
And his corpse is cast into the water.
If ye do this, your persons shall be unblemished—
Ye will find it (so) forever.

IN PRAISE OF LEARNED Scribes

The Egyptian Empire built up a large bureaucracy. A constant theme of the writings for schoolboys in that period deals with the high standing and privileges of the secretarial profession. The following extract sets forth the advantages of learning in terms of the immortality of great writings. In that respect it stands in contrast to the Song of the Harper (p. 467), where the theme was the powerlessness of the ancient sages to leave a standing memorial. The Song of the Harper was addressed to an occasion of entertainment, whereas the present text was a call to more diligent application to studies.

Papyrus Chester Beatty IV (now British Museum 10684), verso ii 5-iii n. Probably from Thebes and about 1300 B.C. Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty Gift, ed. by A. H. Gardiner (London, 1935), 1, 38-41; n, Pis. 18-19* (See Addenda).

NOW THEN, IF THOU DOST THESE THINGS, THOU ART skilled in the writings. As for those learned scribes from the time of those who lived after the gods, they who could foretell what was to come, their names have become everlasting, (even though) they are gone, they completed their lives, and all their relatives are forgotten.

THEY DID NOT MAKE FOR THEMSELVES pyramids of metal, with the tombstones thereof of iron. They were not able to leave heirs in children,... pronouncing their names, but they made heirs for themselves in the writings and in (the books of) wisdom which they composed. THEY GAVE THEMSELVES the papyrus-roll as a

---

1 “Arighit,” ni mdw, is a play on the name of the pharaoh, Ni-maat-Re.
2 "Cognitive intelligence" or "Perception" was an attribute of personality defied as the god Sia. It was particularly an attribute of good rule.
3 A favorite device was to set terror and kindliness in juxtaposition as components of rule.
4 “Ka ‘vital force,’ or protecting and sustaining ‘soul,’ or ‘fortune,' etc.—the other self which supported a man. cf. p. 3, n,4 above. Here the pharaoh is the ka of his people.
5 His command created surplus of provisions.
6 Khnum was a god who fashioned mortals, as on a potter’s wheel.
7 Bastet was a kindly cat-goddess.
8 The gentle Bastet is contrasted with the terrible Sekhmet, a lioness-goddess. Sekhmet had also to do with disease, and the word rendered "woes" might be read "sickness."
OBSErvations on life AND world ORDER lector] priest, the writing-board as a son-he-loves,\(^1\) (books of) wisdom (as) their (ii 10) pyramids, the reed-pen (as) their child, and the back of a stone for a wife.\(^2\) From great to small were made into his children.\(^8\) (As) for the scribe, he is the foremost of them. If there were made for (them) doors and buildings, they are crumbled. Their mortuary service is [gone]; their tombstones are covered with dirt; and their graves are forgotten. (But) their names are (still) pronounced because of their books which they made, since they were good and the memory of him who made them (lasts) to the limits of eternity.

Be a scribe, put it in thy heart, that thy name may fare (iii 1) similarly. More effective is a book than a decorated tombstone or an established tomb-wat. Such things make buildings and pyramids for the sake of pronouncing their names. Without doubt a name in the mouth of men is of benefit in the necropolis. A man is perished, his corpse is dust, all his relatives are come to the ground—with (but) it is writing that makes him remembered in the mouth of a reciter. More effective is a book than the house of the builder or tombs in the West. It is better than a (well-) founded castle or a stela (5) in a temple.

Is there (anyone) here like Hor-dedef? Is there another like li-em-hotep? None has appeared among our relatives like Neferti or Khety, that foremost of them. I cause thee to know the names of Ptah-em-Djedhuti and Kha-kheper-(Re)-seneb. Is there another like Ii-em-hotep? None has appeared among the people are given to them to be heirs, as though (they were) their own children. Though they concealed their magic (10) from everybody (else), it may be read in a (book of) wisdom. Though they are gone and their names are forgotten, it is writing that makes them remembered.

THE SATIRE ON THE TRADES

Egyptian schoolboys who were learning to write frequently had to copy the classics which extolled the profession of the scribe, to die disarray of other vocations. One of the popular models under the Empire was the Satire on the Trades, which details the wretchedness of non scribal activities. The unhappy schoolboys who made the extant copies mangled the text so thoroughly that translation is often uncertain.

The documents are numerous, most of them from the Nineteenth Dynasty (1350-1200 B.C.) and most of them fragmentary. There are clear indications that the lost original derived from the Middle Kingdom or earlier (2150-1750 B.C.). In whole or in part, the text occurs on 3 papyri (Papyrus Sallier II = British Museum 10182; Papyrus Anastasi VII = British Museum 10222; Papyrus Chester Beatty XIX = British Museum 10699); 1 writing tablet (Louvre 6043); and more than 90 ostraca. The present translation was made from as many of these documents as were available to the translator; the line numbers follow Sallier II. The text has commonly been called the "Instruction of Duau," but the author was apparently a Khety, as Gardiner pointed out in Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty Gift, 1, 40, n.\(^1\).\(^2\)

A recent study of the hieratic texts is by Hellmut Brunner, Die Lehre des Cheï, Sohnes des Duau (Münchner ägyptologische Forschungen, No. 13; Glückstadt, 1944), with transcription, translation, and commentary. There is a translation in Erman, LAE, 67-72.

Other Egyptian texts which might have been included under this heading are the statement of a creation in terms of equal opportunity for all men (pp. 7-8 above); the two didactic tales of pp. 405-410 above; the Song of the Harper (p. 467 below); and the song on the happiness of the dead (pp. 33-34 above).

(iii 9) The beginning of the instruction which a man of the ship's cabin, whose name was Duau's son Khety, made for his son, (whose) name was Pepy, as he was journeying upstream (iv i) (to) the Residence City, to put him into the Writing School among the children of officials, in the lower part of the Residence City.\(^3\) Then he said to him:

I have seen how the belabored man is belabored—thou shouldst set thy heart in pursuit of writing. And I have observed how one may be rescued from his duties—behold, there is nothing which surpasses writing. . . . Read thou at the end of the Conclusion.\(^2\) Thou wilt find this statement in it, to wit: "As for the scribe, every place of his is at the Residence City, and he will not be poor in it. (But) if he uses the wisdom of someone else, he will not come out successfully." Thus have I seen the professions: they are in the meaning of this statement (5) on it.

I shall make thee love writing more than thy (own) mother; (thus) I shall make beauty enter before thy face. Moreover, it is greater than any (other) office; there is not its like in the land. If he\(^4\) began to prosper when he was (only) a child, men greet him (respectfully). If some one sends him to carry out an errand, he does not return (only) that he may clothe himself in the (workman's) apron.

I HAVE NEVER SEEN A SCULPTOR ON AN ERRAND nor a goldsmith when he was sent out. (But) I have seen

1 The lector priest and the "son-he-loves" performed die funerary rites which beatified and maintained the deceased.

2 A stone ostraco.

3 Because they were dependent upon the scribe's writings.

4 We know a surprising number of these famed sages. Hor-dedef and Ka-iris is unknown. Neferti is very probably the "man of the ship's cabin, whose name was Duauf's son"—thou shouldst set thy heart in pursuit of writing. And I have observed how one may be rescued from his duties—behold, there is nothing which surpasses writing. . . . Read thou at the end of the Conclusion. Thou wilt find this statement in it, to wit: "As for the scribe, every place of his is at the Residence City, and he will not be poor in it. (But) if he uses the wisdom of someone else, he will not come out successfully." Thus have I seen the professions: they are in the meaning of this statement (5) on it.

5 He should send him to carry out an errand, he does not return (only) that he may clothe himself in the (workman's) apron.

6 The scribe.
the metalworker at his work at the mouth of his furnace. His fingers were somewhat like crocodiles; he stalked more than fish-roe.

Every craftsman that wields the adze, he is wearier than a hoeman. His field is the wood, and his job is the metal. At night, though he is released, he does more (vi i) than his arms can (really) do. At night he has to strive a light.

The fashioner of costly stones seeks for skill in every (kind of) hard stone. When he has fully completed things, his arms are destroyed, and he is weary. When he sits down at the going in of Re, his thighs and his back are cramped.

The barber is (still) shaving at the end of dusk. When he gives himself up to chins, he puts himself upon his (own) shoulder. He gives himself from street to street, to seek out those whom he may shave. Thus if he is valiant his arms will fill his belly, (5) like a bee eating for its work.

The itinerant merchant sails downstream to the Delta to get trade for himself. When he has done more than his arms can (really) do, the gnats have slain him, the sand flies have made him miserably miserable. Then there is inflammation.

The small building contractor carries mud. He is dirtier than vines or pigs, from treading under his mud. His clothes are stiff with clay; his belt is breaking. His lamp is out, though (still) in good condition. He pounds with his feet; he crushes with his own self, muddying the court of every house, when the water of the streets has flooded.

(vi i) Let me tell thee also of the builder of walls. His sides ache, since he must be outside in a treacherous wind. He builds in an apron, while he is girt under with the court of every house, when the water of the streets has flooded.

The gardener brings vegetables, both his shoulders being under . . . upon his neck. Early in the morning he must water the vegetables and in the evening the vines. The sand fly of his mother" is his name, "the sheikh of every profession." He is mixed up by the differences in his accounts. . . . When he puts (5) on the apron of a woman, then he is in woe. I weep for him, spending the day under the rod

The tenant-farmer, his reckonings (go on) forever. His voice is louder (than) the abu-bird. . . .

1 "His fingers were like a thing of crocodiles; they were tough and wrinkled.
2 At sunset?
3 Has to carry his own heavy responsibility to earn a living?
4 To make mud-bricks.
5 Sarcastic designations, which have a general similarity of phrasing to those of the modern Arab world.
6 He loses count of his bricks or his measurements.
7 For lack of food, he gnaws his fingers?
8 "Sarcastic designations, which have a general similarity of phrasing to those of the modern Arab world.
9 He must always render account to his landlord.

Wearer is he than a wayfarer of the Delta. Yet he is (vii i) a picked man: his safety is a safety from lions. His sides ache, as if heaven and earth were in them. When he goes forth thence from the meadows and he reaches his home in the evening, he is one cut down by traveling.

The weaver in the workshops, he is worse than a woman, with his thighs against his belly. He cannot breathe the (open) air. If he cuts short the day of weaving, he is beaten with fifty thongs. He must give food to the doorkeeper to let him see the light of day.

The arrow-maker, he is very miserable as he goes out (5) into the desert. Greater is that which he gives to his donkey than its work thereafter (is worth). Great is that which he gives to him who is in the meadows, who sets him on the way. When he reaches his home in the evening, the traveling has cut him down.

The courier goes out to a foreign country, after he has made over his property to his children, being afraid of lions and Asiatics. And what of him, when he is in Egypt? When he arrives thence from the meadows and he reaches his home in the evening, the traveling has cut him down. His house is (only) an apron of brick. He does not return happy of heart.

The embalmer, his fingers are foul, for the odor thereof is (that of) corpses. His eyes burn from the greatness of the heat, (viii i) He could not oppose his own daughter. He spends the day cutting up old rags, so that clothing is an abomination to him.

The cobbler, he is very badly off, carrying his equipment forever. His safety is a safety from corpses, as he bites into the leather.

The laundryman launders on the river bank, a neighbor of the crocodile. When a father comes out of the greasy waters, he could not oppose his own daughter. There are no satisfying jobs in thy sight, O sheikh of every profession! He is mixed up by the differences in his accounts. . . . When he puts (5) on the apron of a woman, then he is in woe. I weep for him, spending the day under the rod

The bird-catcher, he is very miserable, when he looks at the denizens of the sky. If marsh-fowl pass by in the heavens, then he says: "Would that (I had) a net!", (but) god does not let (it) happen to him, being neglectful of his affairs.

Let me tell thee also of the fish-catcher. He is more miserable than any (other) profession. Behold, there is nothing his work on the river, mingled with the crocodiles. If there is a cutting down in the total of the official register then there is complaint. He 14 A heavy-handed jibe at the peaceful farmer.

15 To get flint points.
16 The text may be corrupt. If the translation is approximately correct, it means that his house has become a mere shell in his absence.
17 Is too weak from weariness to stand up to a girl?
18 For strips with which to wrap mummys.
19 May he have only animal hides to bite on.
20 Cf. n. u above.
21 Of fish due the government.
cannot (even) say: "A crocodile is (ix i) waiting (there)," for fear has made him blind.

Behold, there is no profession free of a boss—except for the scribe: he is the boss.

But if thou knowest writing, then it will go better with thee than (in) these professions which I have set before thee. . . . Behold, it is done in journeying upstream to the Residence City; behold, it is done for love of thee. A day in school is of advantage to thee. The eternity of its work is (like that of) the mountains.

Thou shouldst act according to what he says to thee . . . . When the words of officials (only). . . . When thou heedest! If three loaves should satisfy thee, no limit [to] the belly, fight against it.

Behold, it is good that thou send away the multitude and hear the words of officials (only) . . . . When the scribe has been seen to listen, listening becomes a heroic quality. Thou shouldst act according to what he says to thee . . .

I have become like a deaf man. (111)
Once I behaved like a lord, now I have become a slave. (13)
The fury of my companions destroys me.

The day is sighing, the night is weeping;
The month is silence, mourning is the year.

I have arrived, I have passed beyond life's span.
I look about me: evil upon evil!
My affliction increases, right I cannot find.

Who became negligent, despised their images,
Who did not bow his face and did not know reverence,
And at meal-time did not invoke a goddess,
In whose mouth prayer and supplication ceased,
In whose mouth prayer and supplication were cut off,
In whose mouth prayer and supplication were cut off.
In whose mouth prayer and supplication ceased.
In whose mouth prayer and supplication were cut off.

The conjurer through magic did not dispel the wrath against me.

I will praise the Lord of Wisdom

---

1. Meskhenet was a goddess of birth and destiny.

2. He reaches the halls of the magistrates, when he has become a man. Behold, there is no scribe who lacks food, from the property of the House of the King—life, prosperity, health! Meskhenet is (the source of) the scribe's welfare, he being set before the magistrates.

3. He is so blinded by fear of crocodiles that no one will believe his excuses for not delivering a full quota of fish.

4. In this context “it” means “hearing,” the respectful obedience of the scribe to higher authority.
5. Only one text so, whereas three texts have: “Behold, Renenut is on the way of god,” which we take to be a corruption affected by the following sentence.

6. Slaves were branded with the master's name. Renenut, the harvest-goddess, was a goddess of fortune. Thus, the good fortune of a scribe was fixed for him from birth.

7. The elı̄fu festival was celebrated on the 4th, 8th and 17th day of the month.
Who did not teach his people religion and reverence,
Who did not remember his god, although eating his food,
Who forsook his goddess and did not offer her a libation;
Nay, worse than one who became proud and forgot his (divine) lord,
Who swore frivolously in the name of his honorable deity—like such a one have I become!
Yet I myself was thinking only of prayer and supplication:
Supplication was my concern, sacrifice my rule;
The day of the worship of the gods was my delight,
The day of my goddess’ procession was my profit and wealth.
Veneration of the king was my joy,
And I enjoyed music in his honor.
I taught my land to observe the divine ordinances,
To honor the name of the goddess I instructed my people. (30)
The king’s majesty I equated to that of a god,
And reverence for the (royal) palace I inculcated in the troops.
Oh that I only knew that these things are well pleasing to a god!
What is good in one’s sight is evil for a god.
What is bad in one’s mind is good for his god.

Who can understand the counsel of the gods in the midst of heaven?
The plan of a god is deep waters, who can comprehend it?
Where has befuddled mankind ever learned what a god’s conduct is?
He who was living yesterday has died today:
Instantly he is made gloomy, suddenly is he crushed. (40)
One moment he sings a happy song,
And in an instant he will moan like a mourner.
Like day and night their mood changes.
When they are hungry they resemble corpses,
When they are sated they rival their god;
In good luck they speak of ascending to heaven,
When they are afflicted they grumble about going down to the underworld.

An evil ghost has come from its abyss,
... a headache has come out from Ekur.²

The... [demon] has descended from the (underworld) mountain.

[My] ... shook [with] a chill,
Like the grass of the earth the disease turns one pale...
all these together drew near unto me.
(fragmentary description of pathological symptoms)
(II reverse)
The tall [body] they destroyed like a wall,
My broad figure they brought low like a reed.

² Ekur (meaning ‘mountain house’) the great temple of Enlil at Nippur, is used here in the sense of the underworld.

Like a sungirtu (water plant) I was torn away and cast on my belly.
The alk (disease demon) has clothed himself with my body as with a garment.
Like a net, sleep has covered me.
My eyes stare without seeing.
My ears are open without hearing.
Faintness has seized my whole body.
A stroke has fallen upon my flesh.
Weakness has taken hold of my hand.
Weariness has fallen upon my knees.

Death [pursued me] and covered my whole body.
If someone asking for me calls me, I do not answer.
My people weep, I myself no longer exist.
In my mouth a gag is placed,
I hold back the word of my lips. (20)

Wheat, even though putrid, I eat.
Beer—life divine!—I have eliminated from me.
Extremely long has lasted the distress.
Through starving my appearance....
My flesh is flaccid, my blood is [going].
My bones are smashed....
My muscles are inflamed ....
I took the bed to the jail, they have blocked (my) exit. (30)

My prison—that is what my house has become.
My hands have been cast into fetters—(i.e.) my flesh;
Into my own chains have my feet been thrown.
My wheals are sore, the wound is serious.
The lash striking me is filled with terror.
They have pierced me with a goad, the sting was fierce.
All day a pursuer pursues me.
At night he does not let me draw my breath for a moment.
Through straining my sinews have been loosened,
My limbs are wrecked, hit aside. (40)
I spend the night in my dung, like an ox.
I was soaked like a sheep in my excrements.
My arthritis baffled the conjurer,
And my omens confused the diviner.
The enchanter has not determined the condition of my illness,
And the time (of the end) of my malady the diviner did not give (me).
No god helped, (none) seized my hand;
My goddess showed no mercy, she did not come to my side.

While the grave was still open they took possession of my jewels,
Before I was dead the weeping (for me) was ended. (50)

All my land said, "How sad!"³
My ill-wisher heard it, and his countenance shone (with joy);

³ Another possible translation, instead of "How sad!" is "How has he been mistreated!"
They brought the good news to the woman who was my ill-wisher, and her spirit was delighted. But I know the day on which my tears will cease, On which in the midst of the protecting deities their divinity will show mercy. Heavy was his hand, I could not bear it; (III i) Mighty was his frightfulness. (fragments) (3-7) A dream in the morning appeared twice with the same meaning. (8) A certain man, immense in stature,.. Gigantic in size, clad in new raiment. (Ill A10) .... he came to me. my flesh became numb. .... 'The lady sent me.' .... saying, \\.. sent me.' They shouted ... Shamash.... " (20) A second time [I saw a dream], In a dream I saw ... A certain man ... A tamarisk (branch), a purification vessel he held in his hand. "Tab-ul-Enlil, the dweller of Nippur, Has sent me to purify you." Lifting water, he poured it over me. The incantation of life he recited, he anointed me [with... ]. I saw a third dream. ... the dream which I saw in the night. (30) After the manner of humans, a [beautiful] maiden, with nice features. The queen of life, saying, "Declare mercy [for him]... " "Fear not!" he (or, she) said.... "Whatever happened in the dream... ". He (or, she) declared for me mercy—me, the sorely afflicted. Someone, who in the night saw a vision, Saw in the dream Ur-Nin-tin-ug-ga, A mighty man, wearing his crown; a conjurer carrying a [tablet]. (40) "Marduk has sent me." Unto Subshi-mesre-Nergal he brought..., In his clean hands he brought.... To my attendant he entrusted (it). Early in the morning he sent a message, His (Marduk’s) omen caused my people to see benevolence (done unto me). In malady the patient.... He quickly ended my illness, broken was..... After my lord’s heart had found rest, The spirit of Marduk the merciful was quieted. (50) (fragments) (51-58) He caused the wind to carry away my trespasses. (III reverse) He sent the storm wind to the foundations of heaven, (5) Unto the bosom of the earth.... (5b) To his abyss he caused the evil ghost to descend. The countless demons he sent back to Ekur (i.e. the underworld). The demon Labartu he knocked down, he drove her straight to the mountain (of the underworld). Into the waves of the sea he sank the fever heat. The root of the sickness he pulled out like a plant. (10) The unhealthy sleep, the spell of slumber, As when the heavens are filled with smoke..., They were driven away, with the woe and pain.... He caused them to withdraw like a hurricane, causing the earth to... . (53b) The torturing headache.... He removed the running of my eyes and drove it from me. The blur of my eyes, over which had spread the curtain of night. A mighty wind blew it off and cleared their sight. My ears, stopped and closed as in a deaf man, He removed their obstruction, he opened my hearing. My nose, whose [breathing] was hindered by the oppression of the heat, Its injury he healed so that I could breathe. My lips, that were constricted and [trembled], He dispelled their fear and loosed their bonds. My mouth that was covered and with which I spoke in whispers, He cleansed like copper and made to shine. My teeth that were locked together and... , He opened the space between them and their roots he... . The tongue that was bound, was unable to function,— He [removed] its dumbness and its speech became [distinct]. The windpipe that was tightened and stiff as in a corpse, (30) Its songs he made glad, so that they sounded like a flute. The lungs that are constricted and do not receive breath, Their... was made right, their stoppage he opened. The large intestine that had become empty through hunger and was entwined like a basket, Receives food, takes drink. The neck that had become flabby and bent, Rose mountainlike, stood up high like a cedar. Similar to (that of) one having full might became my strength.

---

2. The name is written ideographically in Sumerian LAS-UG-"AJM-MA, meaning "good is the bosom of Enlil."
3. This Sumerian name means, "Servant of the divine mistress of the revivification of the dead."
He rubbed off the rust, made it shiningly clean.

The knees that were stiff like a falcon

The faded appearance became brilliant.

Out of (obscure) ...

... he revived me.

Marduk removed the incantation of the one hounding me, turned back his lumps.

Into the mouth of the lion who was devouring me

Marduk placed a Int.

Marduk removed the incantation of the one hounding me, turned back his lumps.

(7≈74)

(IV I)

... he took me.
... he opened for me.
... he revived me.
[From distress] he saved me.
[Out of the river] Hubur (in the underworld) he drew me.

Marduk seized my hand.
... smote me.
[Marduk] lifted high my head,
He smote my smiter's hand;
[His weapon Marduk shattered.]

With lowly countenance I entered Esagila":

I, who had gone down into the grave, returned to Babylon.

In the "Gate of Abundance" abundance was given to me.12

In the "Gate of the Great Lamassu" my Lamassu approached me.

In the "Welfare Gate" I beheld welfare.

In the "Gate of Life" I met life.

In the "Gate of Sunrise" I was reckoned with the living.

In the "Radiant Omen Gate" my omens became radiant

In the "Release from Guilt Gate" my guilt was released.

In the "Gate of the Mouth's Inquiry" my mouth inquired.

In the "Release from Sighing Gate" my sighing was appeased. (30)

In the "Gate of the Purifying Waters" I was sprinkled with purifying waters.

In the "Welfare Gate" I appeared before Marduk.
In the "Gate of Full Opulence" I kissed the foot of the goddess Sarpanit"

In supplication and imploration I persisted before them.

Sweet-smelling incense smoke I offered to them.

I presented (to them) my produce, gifts, angub-te-offerings.

I slew fat oxen, I sacrificed lambs.
I offered a libation of sweet date wine,... wine.
I . . . the divine Shedu, to the divine protectors of the walls of Esagila;
With libations I made happy their mood,
[With] abundant... I gladdened their heart
... , bolt, lock of the doors
With pure [oil], butter... grain
[according to] the temple ritual.

Bread
The product of the halurru tree [pleased him]
(At) a banquet the Babylonians....
They had made his grave, at a banquet....
The Babylonians saw that (Marduk) had restored [his] life.

All mouths praise [his] greatness.

"Who commanded it, who accomplished the vision of the deity?
In whose mind is the going (freely) on one's way realized?
Apart from Marduk, who revived his lifeless state?
Besides Sarpanit, what goddess conferred life unto him?"

Marduk is able to revive in the grave.

Sarpanit knows how to deliver from destruction.

Wherever the earth reaches, the heavens are spread out,
The sun shines, fire glows,
Water flows, the wind blows,
(Wherever the beings) whose clay the goddess Aruru has nipped off,14
Creatures endowed with breath, stride rapidly,... as many as there are, glorify Marduk!

(A fragments) (64-68)

A PESSIMISTIC DIALOGUE BETWEEN MASTER AND SERVANT

12 Sarpanit was Marduk’s consort. 14 Arum’s clay-beings are humanity.
Present his dough-and-incense burnt offering to appease his goddess’ displeasure?

Does [really] the upstart, whose affluence has increased, Weigh [precious metal] to the goddess Mami?^2

Have I withheld the meal-oblation? (No), I have prayed to the gods,

I have presented the prescribed sacrifices to the goddess....

(O) palm, tree of wealth, precious brother,    (VI)

Endowed with the totality of wisdom, jewel of choice gold

You are firmly established like the earth, but [divine] counsel is remote.

Consider the noble onager in ... ;

He has trampled on the produce of the fields, the arrow turns against him.

(60)

The enemy of the herds, the lion, which you mentioned, please consider:

(For) the brutality which the Hon has committed, a pit was opened against him.

The upstart endowed with wealth, whose property is heaped up,

In the fire, before his appointed time, the ruler burns him.

Do you wish to follow the paths these have trod?

Seek (instead) incessantly the gracious favor of a god.

Your opinion is a north-wind, a [good] breeze for the people;

(VII)

Pure, choice, is your ... counsel.

But a single word [let me add] in your presence:

"They walk on a lucky path those who do not seek [a god]."

(70)

Those who devoutly pray to [a goddess] become poor and weak."

In my childhood I [investigated] the mind of the god,

In humility and piety have I searched for the goddess:

(And yet) a corvee without profit I bear like a yoke;

The god brought me scarcity instead of wealth;

A cripple above, a fool in front,

Have stolen my necklace, and I have been brought low.

In reality, (O) sharp-witted one, what you have in mind is not proper:

(VIII)

You have rejected the truth, you have despised the decree of the god.

Not to observe the ordinances of the god was the wish of your soul,

(80)

The correct purifications of the goddess you have [neglected].

Like the center of the heavens, so the divine counsel [is remote].

The utterance of the god (and) goddess is not taken [to heart].

True understanding [w excluded] for mankind,

(While) to plan evil [▷ unavoidable] for men.

To teach [people] an evil path...

Let me forsake the house    (XIII133)

^2 Mama (variant, Mami) is the mother goddess.
Let me not crave property....
Let me forget the votive gifts of the god, trample upon ritual prescriptions.
Let me slaughter the bullocks... eat.
Let me go to a fortress, reach distant places.
Let me open a spring, free the flow (of water),
A spring of the steppe, let me wander about,
Let me enter house after house, control my hunger,
Let me camp in the fields, hunt along the highways,
Let me in like a beggar
The necklace, the beauty of which you coveted, (XXII235)
... his legs, quickly he was lost.
The godless, the scoundrel, who has acquired wealth,
The murderer (with) his weapon pursues him.
You, who do not seek the counsel of the god, what is your success?
Whoever draws the yoke of the god, verily... his food (supply) is constant.
Seek (then) the good breath of the gods,
And what you have lost this year you will recover at once.
Among men I have made observations, (but) the signs were variable.
The god does not stop the advance of the larrabu-demon.
In the canals the begetter draws the ship,
(While) his first-born lies in bed;
The oldest brother moves about on his way like a lion,
(While) the second son delights in driving a mule.
In the street the senior son hunts disgracefully (for plunder),
(While) the second son distributes food to the needy.
In the presence of a leader I, who humble myself, what do I gain?
I must submit (even) to my slave.
The wealthy and thriving man despises me,—the last (of all).
(O) wise (and) strong one, endowed with insight,
Your heart is eating itself (when) you treat God unjustly.
The mind of the god, like the center of the heavens, is remote;
His knowledge is difficult, men cannot understand it.
The product of the hand of the goddess Aruru is life in general.
The premature offspring is always thin:
A cow’s first heifer is inferior,
Her second offspring is twice as large.
The fool gives birth to an outstanding son,
The mighty hero to one whose designation is quite different.
Let him know (that) people cannot understand what the counsel of a god is.
Give heed, my friend! Understand my meanings
Guard the choice expression of my speech.
(People) extol the word of a prominent man, expert in murder,
(But) they abase the humble, who has committed no violence.
They justify the evildoer, whose iniquity is...,
(But) they drive away the righteous, who gives [heed] to the god’s counsel.
(270)
They fill with precious metal the...of the bandit,
(But) they empty of food the larder of the helpless man.
They strengthen the mighty man, whose retinue is...
(But) they ruin the weakling, they cast down the feeble.
Even me, helpless (as I am), the upstart persecutes.
The primeval king, the god Naru, creator of mankind,
(XXVI)
The glorious god Zulummuru, who nipped off their clay,
The queen who formed them, the divine lady Mama,
They bestowed upon humanity ingenious speech:
Falsehood and untruth they conferred upon them forever.
(280)
Enthusiastically they speak of the rich mati’s graciousness,
"He is a king! His tutelary deities go at his side!"
As if he were a thief, they mistreat a wretched man,
They bestow slander on him, they plot murder against him,
Disloyally they bring every evil upon him because he lacks protection;
Dreadfully they destroy him, they extinguish him like a flame.
Be merciful, my friend: listen to my woe! (XXVII)
Help me! See (my) misery, and you will truly understand.
A wise and imploring slave am I.
Help and encouragement I have not experienced for an instant.
I walked quiedy through the squares of my city,
My voice was never loud, my speech was low;
I did not raise my head, I looked (down) at the ground.
Like a slave I was not glorified in the assembly of [my peers].
May the god Ninurta, who..., supply help!
May the goddess Ishtar, who..., have mercy upon me!
May the shepherd, the sun of the people, have mercy,

1 A cuneiform commentary identifies Niru or Naru with the god Enlil.
2 Zulummuru is the god Ea, according to the commentary.
3 Le. the king.
Oracles and Prophecies

Egyptian Oracles and Prophecies

(Translator: John A. Wilson)

THE ADMONITIONS OF IPU-WER

The following text is "prophetic" in a biblical sense. The "prophet" is not foretelling the future but is standing before a pharaoh and condemning him of the past and present administration of Egypt. The manuscript is too fragmentary for a full, connected sense. It seems clear, however, that Egypt had suffered a breakdown of government, accompanied by social and economic chaos. These calamities met with indifference in the palace. A certain Ipu-wer, about whom nothing is known apart from the surviving text, appeared at the palace and reported to the pharaoh the anarchy in the land. Ipu-wer first was inclined to absolve the pharaoh of guilt for these woes, but grew more bold and ended with a denunciation of the king who evaded his responsibilities.

Although our manuscript was written in the Nineteenth or Twentieth Dynasty (1350-1100 B.C.), the original belonged to an earlier time, perhaps to the period between the Old and Middle Kingdoms (2500-2050 B.C.). The language and orthography are "Middle Egyptian." The situation described conforms to that which followed the breakdown of the central government at the end of the Old Kingdom. The pharaoh who is denounced is not named, but may have been one of the last rulers of the Sixth Dynasty or one of the kings of the weak dynasties which followed the breakdown of the central administration.

The beginning and end of the manuscript are missing, and the body of the text is full of lacunae. Only extracts may be given here. The lost beginning of the text probably gave the narrative setting of Ipu-wer's arrival in court and the reasons for his speeches.

Leyden Papyrus I 344, recto, was facsimiled in C. Leemans, Monumens egyptiens du Musée d'antiquités des Pays-Bas à Leyde (Leyden, 1841-82), ii, Pis. cxv-cxvm. The significance of the text was first presented by H. O. Lange, Prophezeiungen eines ägyptischen Weisen (SPAW, 1903, 601-10). The definitive study of the text is still that of A. H. Gardiner, The Admonitions of an Egyptian Sage (Leipzig, 1909). The text is translated in Erman, LAE, 92-108. The significance of the text was studied by J. H. Breasted, The Dawn of Conscience (New York, 1933), 193-200*

(i i) Door[keepers] say: "Let us go and plunder." 2 The laundryman refuses to carry his load. 3 Bird-watchers have marshaled the battle array 4 Men of the Delta marshes carry shields. 5 . . . (5) . . . A man regards his son as his enemy. 6 . . . A man of character goes in mourning 7 because of what has happened in the land. . . . Foreigners have become people 8 everywhere. . . .

(ii 2) . . . WHY REALLY, the [face] is pale. The bow-

1 To the Egyptian the past was the good time given by the gods. Here the sudden breakdown of order gives specific point to this statement.
2 The potter god shaped infants on his wheel.
3 Probably those parts of private houses which were made of wood.
4 Either this is said out of respect for the king, or it sets an invidious contrast between the fate of the people and the indifference of the pharaoh.
5 Suicide in the River.
6 "cf. n. 5 above. In a breakdown of government, restless foreigners infiltrated into the fertile land of Egypt.
7 The produce of foreign trade. Byblos in Phoenicia was an Egyptian shipping point for coniferous wood and resinous oil.
8 Probably Crete. provisions: reed-mats,... fresh ra/zwrt-plants, ... of birds, and, ...

WHY REALLY, Elephantine, the Thinite nome, and the [shrine] of Upper Egypt do not pay taxes because of [civil] war. What is a treasury without its revenues for? The heart of the king (must) indeed be glad when truth comes to him!14 But really, every foreign country [comes]? Such is our water! Such is our welfare! What can we do about it? Going to ruin!

WHY REALLY, laughter has disappeared, and is [no longer] made. It is wailing that pervades the land, mixed with lamentation (iv i) ...

WHY REALLY, the children of nobles are dashed against the walls. The (once) prayed-for children are (now) laid out on the high ground (5) ...

WHY REALLY, the entire Delta marshland will no (longer) be hidden: the confidence of the Northland is (now) a beaten path.15 What is it that one could do? ... Behold, it is in the hands of those who did not know it, as well as those who knew it: foreigners are (now) skilled in the work of the Delta (10) ...

WHY REALLY, all maid-servants make free with their tongues.16 When their mistresses speak, it is burdensome to the servants (v 10) ...

WHY REALLY, the ways are not guarded roads. Men sit in the bushes until the benighted (traveler) comes, to take away his burden and steal what is (on him). He is presented with the blows of a stick and slain wrongfully. ... Ah, would that it were the end of men, no conception, no (vi i) birth! Then the earth would cease from noise, without wrangling! ...

WHY REALLY, grain has perished on every side. ... Everybody says: 'There is nothing!' The storehouse is stripped bare; its keeper is stretched out on the ground. ... (5) ... Ah, would that I had raised my voice at that time—it might save me from the suffering in which I am!

WHY REALLY, the writings of the august enclosure are read.17 The place of secrets which was (so formerly) is (now) laid bare.

WHY REALLY, magic is exposed. Go-spells and enfold-spells are made ineffectual because they are repeated by (ordinary) people.18

WHY REALLY, (public) offices are open, and their reports are read.19 Serfs have become the owners of serfs...

WHY REALLY, the writings of the scribes of the mat have been removed.20 The grain-sustenance of Egypt is (now) a come-and-get-it.21

WHY REALLY, the laws (10) of the enclosure are put out-of-doors. Men actually walk on them in the highways. Poor men tear them up in the streets....

WHY REALLY, the children of nobles are abandoned in the streets. He who knows says: "Yes, (it is so)!" The fool says: "No, (it is not)!" It is fair in the sight of him who knows it not.22 ...

(vii i) BEHOLD now, the fire has mounted up on high. Its flame goes forth against the enemies of the land.

BEHOLD now, something has been done which never happened for a long time: the king has been taken away by poor men.23

BEHOLD, he who was buried as a falcon (now lies) on a (mere) bier. What the pyramid hid has become empty.

BEHOLD NOW, IT HAS COME TO A POINT WHERE the land is despoiled of the kingship by a few irresponsible men.25

BEHOLD now, it has come to a point where (men) rebel against the uraeus,26 the . . . of Re, which makes the Two Lands peaceful.

BEHOLD, the secret of the land, whose limits are unknowable, is laid bare.27 The Residence (may) be razed within an hour (5) ...

BEHOLD, the (guardian-)serpent is taken from her hole.28 The secrets of the Kings of Upper and Lower Egypt are laid bare (10) ...

BEHOLD, nobles' ladies are (now) gleaners, and nobles are in the workhouse. (But) he who never (even) slept on a plank (now) the owner of a bed

BEHOLD, the owners of robes are (now) in rags. (But) he who never wove for himself is (now) the owner of fine linen

BEHOLD, he who knew not the lyre is (now) the owner of a harp. He who never sang for himself (now) praises the goddess of music (viii i) ...

BEHOLD, the bald-headed man who had no oil has become the owner of jars of sweet myrrh.

(5) BEHOLD, she who had not (even) a box is (now) the owner of a trunk. She who looked at her face in the water is (now) the owner of a mirror (10) ...

BEHOLD, the king's men thrash around among the cattle of the destitute.29 ...

20 Scribes seated on mats kept the records of Egypt's grain produce.
21 A compound and perhaps colloquial phrase, "when-I-go-down-it-is-brought-to-me."
22 Those who are blissfully unaware of the troubles are fools. The statement may have been intended to implicate the pharaoh indirectly. The passage is in place here. It is an inapt quotation in the Instruction of King Amen-em-het (p. 419 above).
23 "Men who know not plans."
24 The next stanza makes this explicit as the robbing of royal tombs. But there is an implicit attack here on the king who heard the words for his failure to preserve former order.
25 "Men who know not plans."
26 The serpent on the brow of the king, and thus the symbol of kingship.
27 The "secret" was the awful mystery and inviolability of the god who was pharaoh of Egypt, cf. the following stanza.
28 The defiled snake which was the guardian of a temple or a palace.
29 The sense seems to be that those directly responsible to the king are...
BEHOLD, the king’s men thrash round among geese, which are presented (to) the gods instead of oxen.

... (ix i) ...

BEHOLD, nobles’ ladies are growing hungry, (but) the king’s men are sated with what they have done.

BEHOLD, not an office is in its (proper) place, like a stamped herd which has no herdsman.

BEHOLD, cattle are (left) free-wandering, (for) there is no one to take care of them. Every man takes for himself and brands (them) with his name.

BEHOLD, he who had no grain is (now) the owner of granaries. (5) He who had to get a loan for himself (now) issues it (x 1) ...

So Lower Egypt weeps. The storehouse of the king is a (mere) come-and-get-it for everybody,” and the entire palace is without its taxes. To it (should belong) barley, emmer, birds, and fish. To it (should belong) white cloth, fine linen, metal, and (5) ointment. To it (should belong) rug, mat, [flowers], palanquin, and every good revenue...

Remember (xi i) ... how fumigation is made with incense, how water is offered from a jar in the early morning.

Remember fattened re-geese, tercp-geese, and sag-geese, how the divine offerings are made to the gods.

Remember how natron is chewed and how white bread is prepared by a man on the day of moistening the head.

Remember how flagstaffs are set up and a stela is carved, while a priest purifies the temples and the house of god is whitewashed like milk; how the fragrance of the horizon is made sweet, and how offering-bread is established.

Remember how (ritual) regulations are adhered to, how (religious) dates are distributed, how (5) one who has been inducted into priestly service may be removed for personal weakness—that is, it was carried out wrongfully....

... It shall come that he brings coolness upon the heart, (xii i) Men shall say; "He is the herdsman of all men. Evil is not in his heart. Though his herds may be small, still he has spent the day caring for them." ... Would that he might perceive their character from the (very) first generation! Then he would smite down running wild in appropriating the property of ordinary citizens. Ipu-wer is now directing his criticism closer to the person of the king.

 Probably thereby making a profit on a contracted obligation.

 Another series of stanzas, each beginning with the word "destroyed," describes further chaos. This section is too damaged for connected translation.

 of ix i above.

Moistening the head, like cleansing the mouth with natron-water, was probably some kind of purificatory rite.

 "The horizon" was the temple.

 In context full of lacunae there is a transition to a new theme. Unfortunately we cannot be sure about the argument. Ipu-wer is certainly describing the ideal ruler. The alternatives are (a) that this ruler is a pattern from the past, perhaps the sun-god Re, or (b) that the passage is truly messianic and that Ipu-wer is looking forward to the god-king who will deliver Egypt from her woes. This translation takes the latter alternative.

 The ideal king should know the perennial nature of man. Grammatically, the sentence is not an unreal condition. "Would that he had perceived," referring to Re’s punishment of mankind (pp. 10-11 above), but a condition of wish, probably referring to the future.

 In an unintelligible section, here omitted, Ipu-wer uses the second person singular. As Nathan said to David: "Thou art the man," so Ipu-wer must finally be addressing the pharaoh. pinning the responsibility for Egypt’s woes directly on the king, as indicated in the following context.

 _Hu_ "authoritative utterance" or "creative command," and _Sia_ "intellectual perception" or "cognition," were a pair of related attributes, often deified. As attributes of kingship, they were sometimes linked to ma’at "justice" or "truth." Kingship thus needed the ability to comprehend a situation, the authority to meet the situation by command, and the balance of equitable justice.

 The slave people belong to the herd of pharaoh, the herdsman.

 It is impossible to understand the statement which Ipu-wer attributes to the pharaoh as an excuse for weakness. Perhaps he is saying that there is more than one side to a question.

 In milder form, this might be translated: "Lies are told thee."

 In combatting the pharaoh’s obscure argument, Ipu-wer again recites some of the anarchy in Egypt. Seemingly he states that personal experience in such troubles would make the king talk differently.

 A series of stanzas now begins with the formula: "It is still, however, good," introducing a nostalgic recollection of former days, which would still be happy in the future.

 The Madjoi, people from lands south of Egypt, were used as police in Egypt.
ans, beginning to destroy that from which they too| their being and to show the Asiatics the state of the| land. The Middle Kingdom delivered Egypt from the civil war and anarchy which had followed the Old Kingdom. These troubles and their ultimate resolution produced a sense of messianic salvation, a feeling which the early pharaohs of the Middle Kingdom probably fostered in their own interests. The following text was apparently composed at that time of happy deliverance, although the earliest extant copies happen to date from the Eighteenth Dynasty, about five centuries later. The text purports to relate how King Snefru of the Fourth Dynasty sought entertainment and how a prophet foretold the downfall of the Old Kingdom and the reestablishment of order by Amen-em-het I, the first king of the Twelfth Dynasty. Papyrus Leningrad 1116B was published by W. Golenischeff, Les papyrus hiérapiques no. 1175, 1116A, et 1116B de l'Ermitage Imperial & St. Petersburg (St. Petersburg, 1913). The text was studied and translated by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, 1 (1914), 100-06, and translated by Erman, LAE, no-15. The text was used for school purposes in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties and portions appear on two ostraca and two writing tablets.

Now it happened that the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Snefru, the triumphant, was the beneficent king in this entire land. On one of these days it happened that the official council of the Residence City entered into the Great House—life, prosperity, health!—to offer greeting. Then they went out, that they might offer greetings (elsewhere), according to their daily procedure. Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—said to the seal-bearer who was at his side: “Go and bring me (back) the official council of the Residence City, which has gone forth hence to offer greetings on this [day].” (Thereupon they) were ushered in to him (5) immediately. Then they were on their bellies in the presence of his majesty a second time.

Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—said to them: “(My) people, behold, I have caused you to be called to have you seek out for me a son of yours who is wise, or a brother of yours who is competent, or a friend of yours who has performed a good deed, one who may say to me a few fine words or choice speeches, at the hearing of which my [majesty] may be entertained.”

Then they put (themselves) upon their bellies in the presence of his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—once more. Then they said before his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—: “A great lector-priest of Bastet, O sovereign, our lord, (10) whose name is Nefer-rohu—he is a commoner valiant [with] his arm, a scribe competent with his fingers; he is a man of rank, who has more property than any peer of his. Would that he [might be permitted] to see his majesty!” Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—said: “Go and [bring] him to me!”

Then he was ushered in to him immediately. Then he was on his belly in the presence of his majesty—life, prosperity, health! Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—said: “Come, pray, Nefer-rohu, my friend, that thou mayest say to me a few fine words or choice speeches, at the hearing of which my majesty may be entertained!” Then the lector-priest Nefer-rohu said: “Of what has (already) happened or of what is going to happen, O Sovereign—life, prosperity, health!—[my] lord?” (15) Then his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—said: “Rather of what is going to happen. If it has taken place by today, pass it [towards you].” Then he stretched forth his hand for the box of writing equipment; then he drew forth a scroll of papyrus and a palette; thereupon he put it (in writing).

What the lector-priest Nefer-rohu said, that wise man of the east, who belonged to Bastet at her appearances, that child of the Heliopolitan nome, AS HE BROODED over what (was) to happen in the land, as he called to mind the state of the east, when the Asiatics would move about with their strong arms, would disturb the hearts [of] those who are at the harvest, and would take away the spans of cattle at the plowing. (20) He said:

Bestir thyself, O my heart, as thou bewaillest this land in which thou didst begin! To be silent is repres- sion. Behold, there is something about which men sneak as terrifying, for, behold, the great man is a thing passed away (in the land) where thou didst begin. BE

The lector-priest (literally, “he who carries the ritual”) was initiated into the sacred writings and thus was priest, seer, and magician. Bastet was the cat-goddess of Bubastis in the eastern half of the Delta.

8 This must be the general sense, although the wording is obscure. An Egyptian interest in the future, rather than the past, was not normal, but a prophecy which promised that the future would restore the past would be acceptable.

9 The pharaoh himself wrote down the prophecy. The Egyptian texts treat Snefru as a friendly and approachable ruler; see B. Gunn in JEA, xx (1926), 250-51. Here, instead of calling upon a scribe, he does his own writing; he addresses his courtiers as “my people” and Nefer-rohu as "my friend.”

Although now serving in Bubastis, he had been born in the Heliopolitan nome.

49 Since the following words contain an “answer” of Ipu-wer, this paragraph, much of which is omitted as unintelligible; contains the pharaoh’s disturbed comment, trying to assay Egypt’s strength.

48 “His salvation” means death. The formula at the beginning of this paragraph is the storytelling formula, “There was a man, who was,” and we certainly have the beginning of a narrative here. Either it is told by Ipu-wer as a parable, or it does not belong to the Admonitions of Ipu-wer, which then would end on-the ominous note of “fear of the morrow.”

47 The story defies consecutive translation. It apparently deals with violence to the tomb and to the corpses and funerary furniture. The last two columns of the papyrus are in lamentable destruction.

46 It would seem that Egypt’s own troops were disloyal.

45 Since the following words contain an “answer” of Ipu-wer, this paragraph, much of which is omitted as unintelligible; contains the pharaoh’s disturbed comment, trying to assay Egypt’s strength.

44 “His salvation” means death. The formula at the beginning of this paragraph is the storytelling formula, “There was a man, who was,” and we certainly have the beginning of a narrative here. Either it is told by Ipu-wer as a parable, or it does not belong to the Admonitions of Ipu-wer, which then would end on-the ominous note of “fear of the morrow.”

43 The translation retains the now traditional name of Nefer-rohu for the Egyptian prophet, even though G. Posener in Revue d’Egyptologie, vui (1951), 171-74, has produced evidence making it highly probable that the man’s name is to be read Neferti—cf. the reference to a sage of that name in the text translated on p. 432.
NOT LAX; BEHOLD, IT IS before thy face! Mayest thou rise up against what is before thee, for, behold, although great men are concerned with the land, what has been done is as what is not done. Re must begin the foundation (of the earth over again). The land is completely perished, (so that) no remainder exists, (so that) not (even) the black of the nail survives from what was fated.6

THIS LAND IS (SO) DAMAGED (that) there is no one who is concerned with it, no one who speaks, no one who weeps. How is this land? The sun disc is covered over. (25) It will not shine (so that) people may see. No one can live when clouds cover over (the sun). Then everybody is deaf for lack of it.7

I shall speak of what is before my face; I cannot foretell what has not (yet) come.8

THE RIVERS of Egypt are empty, (so that) the water is crossed on foot. Men seek for water for the ships to sail on it. Its course is [become] a sandbank. The sandbank is against the flood; the place of water is against the (flood)—both the place of water and the sandbank.9 The south wind will oppose the north wind; the skies are no (longer) in a single wind.10 A foreign bird will be born in the marshes of the Northland. It has made a nest beside (30) men, and people have it approach through want of it.11 DAMAGED INDEED ARE THOSE good things, those fish-ponds, (where there were) those who clean fish, overflowing with fish and fowl. Everything good is disappeared, and the land is prostrate because of woes from that food,12 the Asiatics who are throughout the land.

Foes have arisen in the east, and Asiatics have come down into Egypt.13 No protector will listen.... Men will enter into the fortresses.14 Sleep will be banished from my eyes, (35) as I spend the night wakeful. THE WILD BEASTS of the DESERT will drink at the rivers of Egypt and be at their ease on their banks for lack of some one to scare them away.

This land is helter-skelter,15 and no one knows the result which will come about, which is hidden from speech, sight, or hearing. The face is deaf, for silence confronts. I show thee the land topsy-turvy.16 That which never happened has happened. Men will take up weapons of warfare, (so that) the land lives in (40) confusion. MEN WILL MAKE ARROWS of metal,17 beg for the bread of blood, and laugh with the laughter of sickness.18 There is no one who weeps because of death; there is no one who spends the night fasting19 because of death; (but) a man's heart pursues himself (alone)* (Dishevelled) mourning is no (longer) carried out today, (for) the heart is completely separated from it. A man will sit still while crooking his back while one man kills another. I show thee the son as a foe, the brother as an enemy, and a man (45) killing his (own) father.

EVERY MOUTH is FULL of "LOVE ME!", and everything GOOD has disappeared. The land is perished, (as though) laws were destined for it, the damming of what had been done, the emptiness of what had been found,20 and the doing of what had not been done. Men take a man's property away from him, and it is given to him who is from outside. I show thee the possessor in need and the outsider satisfied. He who never filled for himself (now) empties.21 Men will give something (simply) out of hate, in order to silence the mouth that speaks. If a statement is answered, an arm goes out with a stick, and men speak with: "Kill him!" THE UTTERANCE OF SPEECH IN THE HEART is like a fire. (50) Men cannot suffer what issues from a man's mouth.

The land is diminished, (but) its administrators are many; bare, (but) its taxes are great; little in grain, (but) the measure is large, and it is measured to overflowing.22

Re separates himself (from) mankind. If he shines forth, then the hour exists. No one knows when midday falls, for his shadow cannot be distinguished.23 There is no one bright of face when seeing [him]; the eyes are not moist with water, when he is in the sky like the moon. His prescribed time does not fail. His rays are indeed in (men's) faces in his former way.24

I SHOW THEE THE LAND TOPSY-TURVY. The weak of arm is (now) the possessor of an arm. Men (55) salute (respectfully) him who (formerly) saluted. I show thee the utmost on top, turned about in proportion to the turning about of my belly. Men live in the necropolis. The poor man will make wealth.... It is the paupers that will be eating bread, while the servants jubilate. The Heliopolitan nome, the birthplace of every god, will no (longer) be on earth.

(THEN) IT IS THAT a king WILL COME, BELONGING TO THE SOUTH, "Amen, the triumphant, his name. He is the son of a woman of the land of Nubia; he is one born

50, notes that metal arrow-points were first used in Egypt in the nth dynasty (about 2100 B.C.).
14 Hysteria.
16 "Hungry."
18 A pious obligation resting upon the Egyptians was to restore the inscriptions of the ancestors which were 'found empty,' i.e. damaged or containing lacunae. Under the present un센ted conditions what was found empty was left empty.
20 Perhaps: he who never had to insist on full measure for himself now scrapes the bottom.
21 A land smaller and poorer has more bureaucrats and higher and more exacting taxes.
22 The sun's shadow on the shadow-clock determined the hour of noon.
23 The last sentence accords poorly with the idea that die sun is dimmed... in Upper Egypt. He will take the [White] Crown; he will wear the Red Crown; (60) he will unite the Two Mighty Ones; (61) he will satisfy the Two Lords with what they desire. The encircler-of-the-fields (will be) in his grasp, the oar...

REJOICE, ye people of his time! The son of a man (62) will make his name forever and ever. They who incline toward evil and who plot rebellion have subdued their speech for fear of him. The Asiatics will fall to his sword, and the Libyans will fall to his flame. The rebels toward evil and who plot rebellion have subdued their speech for fear of him. The people gave him (5) [praise, when he halted at the . . . ] of his temple. Then his majesty (65) offered him incense upon the flame and presented to him a great oblation of oxen, cattle, and wild beasts of the desert... [The procession] made the circuit of the colonnaded hall on its two sides, but (it) was not in the heart of those who were present to his actions, in seeking out my majesty everywhere. (Then he) really recognized me, and he halted . . . [/ touched] the ground; I bowed myself down in his presence. He set me before his majesty, I being posted at the Station [of] the Lord. Then he worked a marvel over me. . . . [These things really happened, without] equivocation, though they were remote from the faces of mankind and mysterious in the hearts of the gods... There is no one who knows them; there is no one who can judge them ...

[He opened for] me the doors of heaven; he spread open for me the portals of its horizon. . . . flew up to the sky as a divine falcon, that I might see his mysterious form which is in heaven, that I might adore his majesty. (10) . . . I saw the forms of being of the Horizon God on his mysterious ways in heaven.

Re himself established me, and I was endowed with [his] crowns [which] were upon his head, his uraeus-serpent was fixed upon [my brow]. . . I [was equipped] with all his states of glory; I was made satisfied with the understanding of the gods, like Horus when he took account of himself at the house of his father Amon-Re. I was [perfected] with the dignities of a god . . . [He established] my crowns, and drew up for me my titulary himself.

(1) . . . (The god Amon)—he is my father, and I am his son. He commanded to me that I should be upon his throne, while I was (still) a weaned child. He begot me from the (very) middle of [his] heart [and chose me for the kingship... There is no lie], there is no equivocation therein—when my majesty was (only) a puppy, when I was (only a newly) weaned child who was in his temple, before my installation as prophet had taken place. . . .

While I was in the guise and role of the "Pillar-of-His-Mother" priest, like the youth of Horus in Khemmis, and I was standing in the north colonnaded hall, [Amon-Re came forth from] the glory of his horizon. He made heaven and earth festive with his beauty, and he began a great marvel, with his rays in the eyes of men like the rising of Har-akhti. The people gave him (5) [praise, when he halted at the . . . ] of his temple. Then his majesty offered him incense upon the flame and presented to him a great oblation of oxen, cattle, and wild beasts of the desert... [The procession] made the circuit of the colonnaded hall on its two sides, but (it) was not in the heart of those who were present to his actions, in seeking out my majesty everywhere. (Then he) really recognized me, and he halted . . . [/ touched] the ground; I bowed myself down in his presence. He set me before his majesty, I being posted at the Station [of] the Lord. Then he worked a marvel over me. . . . [These things really happened, without] equivocation, though they were remote from the faces of mankind and mysterious in the hearts of the gods... There is no one who knows them; there is no one who can judge them ...

[He opened for] me the doors of heaven; he spread open for me the portals of its horizon. . . . flew up to the sky as a divine falcon, that I might see his mysterious form which is in heaven, that I might adore his majesty. (10) . . . I saw the forms of being of the Horizon God on his mysterious ways in heaven.

Re himself established me, and I was endowed with [his] crowns [which] were upon his head, his uraeus-serpent was fixed upon [my brow]. . . I [was equipped] with all his states of glory; I was made satisfied with the understanding of the gods, like Horus when he took account of himself at the house of his father Amon-Re. I was [perfected] with the dignities of a god . . . [He established] my crowns, and drew up for me my titulary himself.

1 The rank of the hem-netjer "servant of the god," conventionally translated as "prophet," was that of a high temple officiant.
2 The priestly role, "Pillar-of-His-Mother," goes back to the myth of Horus and his mother Isis in the Delta swamps of Khemmis, the mythical birth-place of Horus.
3 This should have been located between the 4th and 5th pylons of the Temple of Amon at Karnak.
4 The image of the god was carried out of his shrine.
5 The then reigning king, Thut-mose I or II.
6 Those who witnessed the movements of the god's portable shrine could not understand why he was circling the hall.
7 The omission of the pronoun is troublesome, but the sense demands its restoration.
8 The place where the king stood in the temple, cf. pp. 248, 375.
9 Or: "Then he marvelled over me."
10 Poetical terms are used for the entry of the king-designate into the holy of holies of the temple.
11 Counted his body," in the sense of recognizing his mature powers, after Horus had been awarded the kingship by Re.
12 Sethe points out that the fivefold titulary which follows has a form which characterizes the latter part of Thut-mose's reign (after his 30th year), which would set a terminus a quo for this inscription.
(I) He fixed my falcon upon the facade; he made me mighty as a mighty bull; he made me appear in the midst of Thebes, [in this my name of "Horus: the Mighty Bull, Appearing in Thebes."]

(II) [He made me wear the Two Goddesses; he made my kingship to endure like Re in heaven, in] this my [name] of "the Two Goddesses: Enduring in Kingship like Re in Heaven."

(III) He fashioned me as a falcon of gold; he gave me his power and his strength; I was august in these his appearances, in this my name of "Horus of Gold: Powerful of Strength, August of Appearances."

(IV) [He caused that I appear as King of Upper and Lower Egypt in the Two Lands; he established my forms like Re, in this my name of] "King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Men-kheper-Re."

(V) I am his son, who came forth out of him, perfect like Re in Heaven."

(1) I have [provided his temple workshop with] . . . . seted with serfs. I have filled it with my cap[turings] in the countries of the north and south, with the children (40) of the princes of Retenu and with the children [of the princes] of Nubia, as my father, [Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands], decreed.

THE DIVINE NOMINATION OF AN ETHIOPIAN KING

The diffusion and persistence of custom are shown by the following inscription, which is to be dated shortly after 600 B.C. and comes from the Ethiopian kingdom which had its capital at Napata near the Fourth Cataract. Despite differences in time and distance, the essential situation is the same as in the nomination of Thut-mose III: it is the god of Karnak, Amon-Re, here resident at Napata, who makes the choice. The situation conforms generally to the account of the selection of Ethiopian kings as given by Diodorus (111, 5,1).

Stela 939 in the Cairo Museum was found at Gebel Barkal near the Fourth Cataract. The text is published in H. Schäfer, Urkunden der älteren Aethiopienkönige (Urk., 11, Leipzig, 1905), 81-100. All the royal names in the inscription have been hacked out and are here supplied with probability but not with certainty.

Year i, 2nd month of the second season, day 15, under the majesty of the Horus: Beautiful of Appearances; the Two Goddesses: Beautiful of Appearances; the Horus of Gold: Mighty of Heart; the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: [Merk-a-Re]; the Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: [Aspalta], beloved of Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, Resident in the Pure Mountain.

Now the entire army of his majesty was in the town named Pure Mountain, in which Dedwen, Who Presides over Nubia, is the god—he is (also) the god of Cush—that after the death of the Falcon upon his throne. Now then, the trusted commanders from the midst of the army of his majesty were six men, while the trusted commanders and overseers of fortresses were six men. Now then, the trusted chief secretaries were six men, while the officials and chief treasurers of the palace were seven men. Then they said to the entire army: "Come, let us cause (5) our lord to appear, (for we are) like a herd which has no herdsmen!" Thereupon this army was very greatly concerned, saying: "Our lord is here with us, (but) we do not know him! Would that we might know him, that we might enter in under him and work for him, as the Two Lands work for Horus, the son of Isis, after he sits upon the throne of his father Osiris? Let us give praise to his two crowns."

\[\ldots\ (10) \ldots\]

Then the army of his majesty all said with one voice:
"Still there is this god Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, Resident in the Pure Mountain. He is (also) a god of Cush. Come, let us go to him. We cannot do a thing without him; nothing is good which is done without him, (but) a good fortune (comes) from the god. He is the god of the kings of Cush since the time of Re. It is he who will guide us. In his hands is the kingship of Cush, which he has given to the son whom he loves"

So the commanders of his majesty and the courtiers of the palace went to the Temple of Amon. They found the prophets and the major priests waiting outside the temple. They said to them: "Pray, may this god, Amon-Re, Resident in the Pure Mountain, come, to permit that he give us our lord, to revive us, to build the temples of all the gods and goddesses [of] Upper and Lower Egypt,\(^4\)\(^6\)\(^8\) and to present their divine offerings! We cannot do a thing without this god. It is he who guides us."

Then the prophets and the major priests entered into the temple, that they might perform every rite of his purification and his censing. Then the commanders of his majesty and the officials of the palace entered into the temple and put themselves upon their bellies before this god. They said: "We have come to thee, O Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, F sident in the Pure Mountain, that thou might give (to) us a lord, to revive us, to build the temples of the gods of Upper and Lower Egypt, and to present divine offerings! That beneficent office is in thy hands—mayest thou give it to thy son whom thou loveth."

Then they offered\(^9\) the King's Brothers before this god, (but) he did not take one of them. For a second time there was offered the King's Brother, Son of Amon, and Child of Mut, Lady of Heaven, the Son of Re: [Aspalsa], living forever. Then this god, Amon-Re, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, said: "He is your king. It is he who will revive you. It is he who will build every temple of Upper and Lower Egypt. It is he who will present their divine offerings. His father was my son, the Son of Re: [Inle-Amon], the triumphant. His mother is the King's Sister, King's Mother, Mistress of Cush, (20) and Daughter of Re: [Nenselsa], living forever. "... He is your lord."

\[\ldots\]

\(^4\) Ethiopia adhered scrupulously to the hallowed tradition of Egypt, where the dead king was an Osiris and the new king a Horus. Ethiopia even had two crowns to correspond to the two parts of the land of Egypt.

\(^6\) Four different members of the nominating college next voice opinions, which the deified pharaoh Neb-pehti-Re (Ah-mose I), who was being carried in procession by priests, halted to give answer to questions submitted to him. In the presence of witnesses, the god accepted one of two alternatives laid before him with regard to the ownership of a certain field.

\(^8\) The gods of Egypt gave visible indications to answer questions which were put to them at appropriate times and in appropriate ways. Examples of the divine nomination of rulers are given on pp. 446-448. A case of simpler nature is given below, in which the deified pharaoh Neb-pehti-Re (Ah-mose I), who was being carried in procession by priests, halted to give answer to questions submitted to him. In the presence of witnesses, the god accepted one of two alternatives laid before him with regard to the ownership of a certain field.

\(^9\) The Ethiopian officials accept this nomination gratefully. Aspalsa enters into the presence of Amon, receives the crown and sceptre, asks for divine guidance, and receives the god's assurances.

A DIVINE ORACLE THROUGH VISIBLE SIGN

The gods of Egypt gave visible indications to answer questions which were put to them at appropriate times and in appropriate ways. Examples of the divine nomination of rulers are given on pp. 446-448. A case of simpler nature is given below, in which the deified pharaoh Neb-pehti-Re (Ah-mose I), who was being carried in procession by priests, halted to give answer to questions submitted to him. In the presence of witnesses, the god accepted one of two alternatives laid before him with regard to the ownership of a certain field.

The scene above the inscription shows the ceremonial barque of "the good god, the Lord of the Two Lands: Neb-pehti-Re Ah-mose," carried on the shoulders of four pairs of priests and attended by the "Prophet Pa-iry, the triumphant." Facing this barque in an attitude of worship or appeal is the "Priest of Osiris, Pa-ter."

The inscription is dated in the fourteenth year of Ramses II (about 1287 B.C.). Ah-mose I, who had reigned about 1570-1545 B.C., presumably had a mortuary chapel at Abydos, where he was worshiped as a god and from which he might emerge in procession. The stela was found at Abydos and is in the Cairo Museum (Journal d'entrée No. 43649). It was published by G. Lefrançais in ASAE, xvi (1916), 161-70, with a photographic plate.

Year 14, 2nd month of the first season, day 25, under the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: User-maat-Re Setep-en-[Re; the] Son [of Re: Ra]mases [Meri-Amon], given life. The day of the appeal\(^7\) which the Priests Pa-ser and the Priest Tjay made, to lay a [charge before the good god] Neb-pehti-Re. The Priest Pa-ser appealed: "As for this field, it belongs to Paï, the son of Sedjemenef\(^8\) and (to) the children of Hayu."

And the god remained still.\(^4\) [Then] he appealed to the god with the words: "It belongs to the Priest Pa-ser, son of Mose." [Then] the god nodded very much,\(^8\) in the presence of the priests of [the good god] Neb-pehti-Re: the Prophet Pa-iry, the Priest of the Front Yanzab, the Priest [of the Front] Tja-nofer, the Priest of the Rear Nakht, and the Priest of the Rear Thutmes.*

Done by the Outline Draftman of the House-of-Ramses-Meri-Amon-in-the-House-of-Osiris, Neb-mehit\(7\)

\(^1\) About 1287, this date would fall close to the beginning of September.

\(^2\) Here and below, literally "approach" (with a petition).

\(^3\) It is possible to read "my son Sedjemenef," but the translation given is equally possible, and it seems less likely that Pa-ser would be disputing the possession of a field with his own son.

\(^4\) The portable image of the god in his shrouded shrine gave no visible response to the first alternative. In other oracular texts, a word is used for a visible negative response, probably to be translated "recoil," that is, to lean backward.

\(^5\) That is, leaned forward repeatedly or very markedly.

\(^6\) The five witnesses to the oracle, which established legal ownership of the field in question, were the "prophet" (a conventional rendering of a priestly title) who attended the portable barque, two priests of the front carrying-poles, and two priests of the rear carrying-poles.

\(^7\) The inscription was made by an artist of a temple of Ramses II at Abydos.

\(^8\) The Ethiopians adhered scrupulously to the hallowed tradition of Egypt, where the dead king was an Osiris and the new king a Horus. Ethiopia even had two crowns to correspond to the two parts of the land of Egypt.

\(^9\) Four different members of the nominating college next voice opinions, which the deified pharaoh Neb-pehti-Re (Ah-mose I), who was being carried in procession by priests, halted to give answer to questions submitted to him. In the presence of witnesses, the god accepted one of two alternatives laid before him with regard to the ownership of a certain field.
A DIVINE ORACLE THROUGH A DREAM

One way in which the gods might make their wishes known was through dreams. The "Sphinx Stela" relates how the god who was in the Sphinx, Harmakhis, asked Thut-mose IV, before he had ascended the throne, to clear that great image of its encumbering sand.

Thut-mose IV reigned about 1421-1413 B.C. The present text is a pious restoration from somewhere between the nth and 7th centuries B.C. The general similarity of the inscription to the "Sports Stela" of Amen-hotep II (pp. 244-245 above) shows that it faithfully restores a known psychology of the Eighteenth Dynasty.

The stela was discovered between the paws of the Sphinx and still stands there. The text was presented in C. R. Lepsius, Denkmäler aus Aegypten und Aethiopien (Berlin, 1849-59), 111, 68. Its best publication was by A. Erman, (SPAW, 1904,428-44). Translated by Breasted, AR, 11, §§810-15.

(1) Year i, 3rd month of the first season, day 19, under the majesty of (Thut-mose IV).

(5) ... Now he used to occupy himself with sport on the desert highland of Memphis, on its southern and northern sides, shooting at a target of copper, hunting lions and beasts of the desert, making excursions in his chariot, (for) his horses were swifter than the wind, together with one or another of his retinue, and nobody at all knew of it.

Now his hour came for giving a rest to his retinue, (he paused) at the ruins of Harmakhis, beside Sokar in Gizeh; Renenut in Tjamut in the heavens; Mut of the northern . . . , Lady of the Southern Wall; Sekhmet, Presiding Over Khas; and Hike, the first-born of the holy place of primeval times; near the lords of Babylon, the divine way of the gods to the horizon west of Heliopolis. Now the very great statue of Khepri rests in this place, great of fame, majestic of awe, upon which the shadow of Re rests. The villages of Memphis and of every town which is beside it come to it, with their arms (outstretched) in praise before it, bearing great obligations to its \\n
One of these days it happened that the King's Son Thut-mose came on an excursion at noon time. Then he rested in the shadow of this great god. Sleep took him, slumbering at the time when the sun was at (its) peak. He found the majesty of this august god speaking with his own mouth, as a father speaks to his son, saying: "See me, look at me, my son, Thut-mose! I am thy father, Harmakhis-Khepri-Re-Atum. I shall give thee my kingdom (10) upon earth at the head of the living. Thou shalt wear the southern crown and the northern crown on the throne of Geb, the crown prince (of the gods). Thine is the land in its length and its breadth, that which the Eye of the All-Lord illumines. Provisions are thine from the midst of the Two Lands and the great tribute of every foreign country. The time is long in years that my face has been toward thee and my heart has been toward thee and thou hast been mine. Behold, my state was like (that of) one who is in need, and my whole body was going to pieces. The sands of the desert, that upon which I had been, were encroaching upon me; (but) I waited to let thee do what was in my heart, (for) I knew that thou art my son and my protector. Approach thou! Behold, I am with thee; I am thy guide."

When he had finished these words, then this king's son awo\e, because he had heard these [words] and he understood the speech of this god. (But) he set silence in his heart, (for) [he] said: "... Come, let us go to our house in the city. They shall protect the offerings to this god which ye will bring to him: cattle, . . . , and all green things. We shall give praise to [to] Wen-nofer . . . , Khaf-[Re], the image made for Atum-Harmakhis; ... Khepri in the horizon west of Heliopolis . . .

For an example of a prophetic frenzy, see the passage in the story of Wen-Amon (p. 26 above). Another example of an oracle through visible sign is in the Legend of the Possessed Princess (p. 30 above). Other examples of divine guidance through dreams will be found on pp. 30; 32; 246; and 418: n.3.

Akkadian Oracles and Prophecies

(Translator: Robert H. Pfeiffer)

ORACLES CONCERNING ESARHADDON

(1 5) [Esarhad]don, king of the countries, fear not! [N]o[tice the wind which blows over you; I speak of it without.... Your enemies, (10) like a wild boar in the month of Sivan, from before your feet will flee away. I am the great divine lady, I am the goddess Ishtar of Arbela, who (15) will destroy your enemies from before your feet. What are the words of mine, which I spoke to you, that you did not rely upon? I am Ishtar of Arbela. (20) I shall lie in wait for your enemies, I

1 cf. the encouragement given to Amen-hotep II by the god Amon in the text of p. 246 above and perhaps the appearance of Amen-em-het I to his son (n 3 on p. 418). See also B. Gunn in IAE, xviii (1941), 4. n.1.
2 Around 1:40 B.C. this date would have fallen in October. The present translation omits some lines of general praise of the king.
3 The setting is similar to that in the "Sports Stela," pp. 244-245.
4 The Sphinx. Other gods and goddesses of the Gizeh necropolis are listed in the following context.
5 The god "Magic."
6 Egyptian Babylon, on the east bank opposite Gizeh.
7 The Sphinx.
8 Thus, before he had become king.

8 Osiris.
9 Thus relating Khaf-Re (Chephren) to the Sphinx, as does the "Sports Stela," p. 244.
10 The end of the text is lost, but it is clear that Thut-mose must have cleared the Sphinx from sand for the story to have point.
shall give them to you. I, Ishtar of Arbela, will go before you and behind you: (25) fear not! You are in a state of rebirth. I am in a state of woe, (whether) I stand (or) I sit down.

(Oracle) from the lips of the woman Ishtar-latashiat (30) of Arbela.

(31) King of Assyria, fear not! The enemy of the king of Assyria I deliver to slaughter! (i 34-40 and ii 1-8 are fragmentary)

(ii 9) (Oracle) from the lips of the woman Sinqisha-amur (10) of Arbela.

(11) I rejoice over Esarhaddon, my king; Arbela rejoices!

(13) (Oracle) of the woman Rimute-allate of the city Darahuya (15) which is in the midst of the mountains.

(16) Fear not, Esarhaddon! I, the god Bel, speak to you. The beams of your heart (20) I strengthen, like your mother, who caused you to exist. Sixty great gods are standing together with me and protect you. The god Sin is at your right, the god Shamash at your left; (25) sixty great gods stand round about you, ranged for battle. Do not trust men! Turn your eyes to me, look at me! (30) I am Ishtar of Arbela; I have turned Ashur's favor unto you. When you were small, I sustained you. Fear not, praise me! Where is that enemy (35) which blew over you when I did not notice? The future is like the past! I am the god Nabu, lord of the tablet stylus, praise me!

(40) (Oracle) from the lips of the woman Baia of Arbela.

(iii 15) I am Ishtar of Arbela, O Esarhaddon king of Assyria. In the cities of Ashur, Nineveh, Calah, Arbela, protracted days, (20) everlasting years, unto Esarhaddon my king shall I grant. I am your great protector. (25) Your gracious leader am I, who unto protracted days, everlasting years (30) have fixed your throne under the wide heavens; with golden nails, in the midst of the heavens I made it firm. The light of the diamond before Esarhaddon king of Assyria (35) I cause to shine. Like the crown of my head I guard him. "Fear not, O king," I said to you, (40) "I have not abandoned you." (iv 1) I have given you confidence, I shall not let you be disgraced. With assurance I have made you cross the river. (5) O Esarhaddon, legitimate son, offspring of the goddess Ninlil, hero! For you, with my own hands, your foes (10) shall I crush. Esarhaddon, king of Assyria. . . (lines 11 and 12 are obscure). Esarhaddon in the city Ashur (15) protracted days, everlasting years shall I grant you. Esarhaddon, in Arbela my mercy is your shield. (20) Esarhaddon, [legitimate] son, offspring of the goddess Nin[n]il, your mind is sagacious. I love you (25) greatly . . . (lines 26-39 are fragmentary).

(v 1-3, obscure) (4-5) Those who speak (deceitfully) soothing (words), from before his feet I shall cut to pieces. You, you indeed, O king, are my king!

(10) (Oracle) from the mouth of the woman Ishtar-bel-daini, oracle-priestess of the king.

(12) I, Belit of Arbela, (say) to the king's mother, "Because you have complained with me (saying), (15) 'What is to the right, what is to the left you place in your bosom; but where is the offspring of my heart? (20) You let him be chased through the open country.'—Now, O king, fear not! The royalty is in you, the might is in you indeed!"

(24-25) (Oracle) from the lips of the woman Belit-abisha of Arbela.

(26) Peace to Esarhaddon king of Assyria! Ishtar of Arbela has gone forth into the open country. Peace unto her child (the king)! (30) You will send into the midst of the city . . .

(vi 1) . . . good. [Ishtar] of Arbela his . . . (5) will fill. (Why) did you not trust the former oracle which I spoke to you? Now (10-11) you may trust the later one. Praise me! Like the day (14-15) (when) the storm shrieked (line 16 is obscure) before me; praise me! (line 18 is obscure) from my palace (20) shall I drive. Excellent food you will eat, excellent water you will drink; in your palace (25) you will be comfortable. Your son, your grandson will exercise the royal power on the knees of the god Ninurta.

(30) (Oracle) from the lips of Ladagil-ilu, of Arbela.

A LETTER TO ASHURBANIPAL

(obverse 7)

In a dream the god Ashur said to (Sennacherib) the grandfather of the king my lord, "O sage! You, the king, lord of kings, are the offspring of the sage and of Adapa. . . . You surpass in knowledge Apsu (the abyss) and all craftsmen.... (10) When (Esarhaddon) the father of the king my lord went to Egypt, he saw in the region of Harran a temple of cedarwood. Therein the god Sin was leaning on a staff, with two crowns on his head. The god Nusku was standing before him. The father of the king my lord entered. (The god) placed [a crown] upon his head, saying, "You will go to countries, therein you will conquer!" (15) He departed and conquered Egypt. The remaining countries, not yet subjected to the gods Ashur (and) Sin, the king, lord of kings, will conquer.

ORACLE OF NINLIL

CONCERNING ASHURBANIPAL

The goddess Ninlil is highly regarded (as a) sibyl. This is the word of Ninlil herself for the king, "Fear not, O Ashurbanipal! Now, as I have spoken, it will come to pass: I shall grant (it) to you. Over the people of the four languages (and) over the armament of the princes (5) you will exercise sovereignty....

(8) The kings of the countries confer together (saying), "Come, (let us rise) against Ashurbanipal. (10) The fate of our fathers and our grandfathers (the Assyrians) have fixed: [let not his might] cause divisions among us.

(12) Ninlil answered saying, "[The kings of the lands] I shall overthrow, place under the yoke, bind their feet in [strong fetters]. For the second time I proclaim to you that as with the land of Elam and the Cimmerians [I shall proceed]. (15) I shall arise, break the thorns, open up widely my way through the briers. With blood shall I turn the land into a rain shower, (fill it with) lamentation and wailing. You ask, "What lamentation and wailing?" Lamentation enters Egypt, wailing comes out (from there).

(20) Ninlil is his mother. Fear not! The mistress of Arbek bore him. Fear not! As she that bears for her child, (so) I care for you. I have placed you like an amulet on my breast. At night I place a spread over you, all day I keep a cover on you. In the early morning heed your supplication, heed your conduct. (25) Fear not, my son, whom I have raised.

AN ORACULAR DREAM CONCERNING ASHURBANIPAL

(v 46) The goddess Ishtar heard my anxious sighs and, "Fear not!" she said, and filled my heart with confidence. "Inasmuch as you have lifted your hands in prayer (and) your eyes are filled with tears, I have mercy." During the night in which I appeared before her, (30) a seer reclined and saw a dream. When he awoke Ishtar showed him a night vision. He reported to me as follows: "Ishtar who dwells in Arbela came in. Right and left quivers were hanging from her. She held the bow in her hand (55) (and) a sharp sword was drawn to do battle. You were standing in front of her and she spoke to you like the mother who bore you. Ishtar called unto you, she who is exalted among the gods, giving you the following instructions: You will contemplate fulfilling my orders. (60) Whither your face is turned, I shall go forth. You told me: Wherever you go, let me go with you, O Lady of Ladies!' She informed you as follows: 'You shall stay here, where the dwelling of Nabu is. (65) Eat food, drink wine, supply music, praise my divinity, while I go and do that work in order that you attain your heart's desire. Your face (need) not become pale, nor your feet become exhausted, (70) nor your strength come to nought in the onslaught of battle.' In her loving bosom she embraced you and protected your whole figure. Before her a fire was then burning. To the conquest of [your] enemies [she will march forth] at (your) side. (75) Against Teumman, king of Elam, with whom she is wroth, she has set her face."

PROPHCIES

(obverse i)

A prince will arise and [exercise sovereignty eighteen years.]

(1) The country will live safely, the heart of the country will be glad, men will [enjoy abun]dance.

The gods will make beneficial decision for the country,

... (obscure)

The deity of cattle and the deity of grain will produce abundance in the land.

Rainfalls (sic!) and high water will prevail, the people of the land will observe a festival.

But the ruler will be slain with a weapon during an uprising.

A prince will arise, thirteen years will he exercise sovereignty.

There will be a rebellion of Elam against Akkad. (10) Akkad's booty will be plundered.

(Elam) will destroy the temples of the great gods, the downfall of Akkad will be decided.

Revolution, chaos, and calamity will occur in the country.

A dreadful (man), son of a nobody, whose name is not mentioned, will arise.

As king he will seize the throne, he will destroy his lords with weapons.

Half the troops of Akkad will fall, in the gorges of Tupilash

They will fill plain and hills.

The people of the land will experience great scarcity.

A prince will arise, his days will be few, the land (will have) no lord.

A prince will arise, three years will he exercise sovereignty.

[The canals] and the rivers will fill up with sand.
(obverse iii)
[A prince will arise,... years will he exercise sovereignty.] (i)
This same king [will rule] the world.
His people will [produce] abundance....
The regular sacrifice for the gods, which had been discontinued will come (again), the gods....
Good rainfalls will come, there will be abundance in [the land].
Cattle [will lie down] safely on the plain....
The procreation of cattle [will thrive].

A prince will arise, eight years will he exercise the sovereignty.

(the rest is lost)

(reverse i)
A prince will arise, three years [will he exercise the sovereignty].
The rest of mankind [will descend] into the earth.
Cities will decay, houses [will be desolate].

PROPHECIES

Revolution, destruction will occur,....
Unto Akkad from the enemy's country....
The sacred object of Ekur and of Nippur will [be brought] into the [enemy] country.
... to Nippur. ... The same ruler [will defeat] with weapons the land of Amurrus.

A prince will arise, eight years will he [exercise] the sovereignty.
The temples of the gods [will rise] from the dust.
Hie sanctuaries of the great gods {sic} [will be restored] on their sites.
Rain showers and high water [will come].
People, who have seen evil....
Wealth will come on the street,... wealth....
... will prostrate himself before the child, stretch out his hand.
... the mother will speak what is right with her daughter....

(the rest is fragmentary and obscure)
VII. Lamentations
Lamentation over the Destruction of Ur

The composition bewails the destruction of Ur at the hands of the Elamites and Subarians. It consists of 436 lines divided into 11 "songs" or stanzas of uneven length; they are separated from one another by an "antiphon" of one or two lines. The text has been reconstructed from 22 tablets and fragments; except for one tablet which probably comes from Ur, they were all excavated at Nippur. The tablets on which the poem text has been reconstructed from are all on tablets and fragments; except for one tablet which probably comes from Ur, they were all excavated at Nippur. The tablets on which the poem text has been reconstructed from 22 tablets and fragments; except for one tablet which probably comes from Ur, they were all excavated at Nippur.

The words "antiphon" and "song" or "stanza" are approximate renderings for a Sumerian complex whose more exact meaning is still uncertain. The word "antiphon" is an approximate rendering of a Sumerian complex whose more exact meaning is still uncertain.

The first song begins with the line "He has abandoned his stable, his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind;" and repeats the second half of this line as a sort of refrain in each of the following lines which list the more important temples of Sumer together with the deities who have abandoned them. This list runs as follows: Enlil has abandoned Nippur, his sheepfold; his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Ninmah has abandoned their house Kesh, her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Ningula of Nina has abandoned their house Nina, her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Ninlil has abandoned their house Ki[ur], her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; the queen of Erech has abandoned (her stable), her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Sin has abandoned Ekishnu(gal), his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind.

The Sumerian word rendered "the lady" in AS 12 is written throughout as Uruk; how- ever in my following publications I have used the biblical form Uruk, and for the sake of consistency this form will be used in the present translation.

The wild ox of Eridu has abandoned (his stable), his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Enki has abandoned their house Eridu, his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Ninnina has abandoned Umma, his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; Usaharra has abandoned their house Umma, her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind.
Bau\(^1\) has abandoned Urukug, her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind;
The holy Bagara, her chamber, she has abandoned, her sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind.
Her son Abbau has abandoned (his stable), his sheep-fold (has been delivered) to the wind;
Abbau has abandoned the Maguenna, his sheepfold
(has been delivered) to the wind.
The lamassu of the holy house\(^9\) has abandoned (his stable), his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind;
The lamassu has abandoned Etarsirsir,\(^6\) his sheepfold
(has been delivered) to the wind.
The mother of Lagash has abandoned (her stable), her
sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind;
Gatumdug\(^*\) has abandoned their house Lagash, her
sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind.
She who is\(^8\) of Nina has abandoned (her stable), her
sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind; \((30)\)
Ningula has abandoned their house Sirara, her sheepfold
(has been delivered) to the wind.
The lord of Kinirshag has abandoned (his stable), his
sheepfold has been delivered to the wind;
Dumuziabzu has abandoned their house Kinirshag, his sheepfold has been delivered to the wind.
She who is\(^8\) of Guabba has abandoned (her stable), his sheepfold (has been delivered) to the wind.
Ninmar has abandoned the shrine Guabba, his sheep-fold (has been delivered) to the wind.
The first song.
His sheepfold has been delivered to the wind, he makes [grieve]ous its wail;
The cow of... without a stable... ;
Its antiphon.
O city, a bitter lament set up as thy lament;\(^{19}\) \((40)\)
Thy lament which is bitter—O city, set up thy lament.
His righteous city which has been destroyed—bitter is its lament;
His Ur which has been destroyed—bitter is its lament.
Thy lament which is bitter—O city, set up thy lament;
His Ur which has been destroyed—bitter is its lament.
Thy lament which is bitter—how long will it grieve thy weeping lord?

Thy lament which is bitter—how long will grieve the weeping Nanna?
O thou brickwork of Ur, a bitter lament set up as thy
lament;
O Ekishnugal, a bitter lament set up as thy lament;
O thou shrine Enunkug, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O thou Kiur, thou iyallu\(^7\) a bitter lament set up as thy lament;
O thou shrine of Nippur . . . , a bitter lament set up as thy
lament;
O thou brickwork of the Ekur, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O Magishshua, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O Ubshukinnakku, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O thou brickwork of Urukug, a bitter lament set up as thy
lament;
O Etarsirsir, a bitter lament set up as thy lament;
O Maguenna, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O thou brickwork of Isin, a bitter lament set up as thy
lament;
O thou shrine Egalmah, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O thou brickwork of Erech, a bitter lament set up as thy lament.
O thou brickwork of Erid[u], a bitter lament set up as thy
lament.\(^{16}\)
Thy lament which is bitter—how long will grieve thy weeping lord?
Thy lament which is bitter—how long will it grieve the weeping Nanna?
O thou city of name, thou hast been destroyed;\(^{18}\)
O thou city of high walls, thy land has perished.
O my city, like an innocent ewe thy lamb has been torn away from thee;
O Ur, like an innocent goat thy kid has perished.
O city thy rites unto inimical dread and awe?\(^2\)
O thy ordinances—unto inimical ordinances, have been transformed. \((70)\)
Thy lament which is bitter—how long will it grieve thy weeping lord?
Thy lament which is bitter—how long will it grieve the weeping Nanna?

The second song.

\(^{11}\) For one meaning of the word ijald (I'yaldu is the Akkadian loan word), cf. PAPS, 133xv (1942), 312; its meaning when used alongside of the Kiur is uncertain.
\(^{12}\) Lines 48-62 have quite a different arrangement in one of the texts; cf.
AS 12, p. 22, n.4ia.
\(^{13}\) For another possible rendering of this and the following line, cf.
Jacobson, loc. cit., p. 223.
\(^{14}\) Note the new rendering of this difficult line; it is based on the assumption that it parallels the first part of line 70. Actually the last part of the line might have been expected "unto inimical rites" rather than "unto inimical dread and awe"; perhaps "dread and awe" are intended as a descriptive substitute for "rites."
\(^{15}\) The word "ordinances" attempts to render the Sumerian word mer which designates a theological concept developed by the Sumerian thinkers to answer the problem as to what keeps the cosmic entities and phenomena, once created, operating continuously and harmoniously, without conflict and confusion. To judge from the various contexts, the word mer seems to denote a set of rules and regulations assigned to each cosmic deity and phenomenon for the purpose of keeping it operating forever in accordance with the plans laid down by the creating deities.
\(^{16}\) The names Bau and Abbau are also read Baba and Abba, but probably the two readings represent slightly variant pronunciations of the same word.
\(^{17}\) "House" instead of 'temple' in AS 12.
\(^{18}\) For the reading Etarsirsir, cf. Nougayrol, JS, 1 (1947), 332, n.18.
\(^{19}\) In AS 12 this name was read in its Emesal form Masisib; this was inconsistent since all the other names were read as they appear in the main dialect, and not in the Emesal.
\(^{20}\) "She who is" instead of "the lady" in AS 12.
\(^{21}\) Like the first 'song,' the second too is written in the Emesal dialect
(cf. end of n.8). Beginning with a cry directed to Ur to "set up a bitter lament," the first part of the 'song' continues with several variations on the theme of Ur and her lament. The cry to "set up a bitter lament" is then directed to other centers of Sumer, namely to Nippur and its main temple, the Ekur, as well as the shrines Magishshua, Ubshukinnakku, and perhaps Kiur; to Lagash, particularly its district Urukug, the temple Etarsirsir, and the shrine Maguenna; to Isin and its temple Egalmah; to Erech and Eridu. Toward the end of the "song," however, it returns once more to Ur and in words spoken directly to the city, bewails its destruction, the loss of its people, and die transformation of its ordinances into inimical ordinances.
A SUMERIAN LAMENTATION

His [righteous city] which has been destroyed—bitter is its lament;
His Ur which has been destroyed—bitter is its lament;
Its antiphon.
Together with the lord, whose house has been attacked, his city was given over to tears;25
Together with Nanna, whose land had perished,
Ur joined (its) lament.
The righteous woman,26 because of his city to grieve the lord,
Ningal, because of his [land] to give no rest to [the lord]
Unto h[im] for the sake of his city approached—bitterly
she weeps,
Unto the lord for the sake of his house which had been attacked approached—bitterly she weeps;
[Far the sa\(\mathrm{e}\)] of his [city which had been attacked] she approached him—bitterly she weeps.
[For the sa\(\mathrm{e}\)\(\mathrm{e}\) of his [house]\(\mathrm{e}\) which had been attacked] she approached him—its bitter lament she sets before him.
The woman, after h... had set the lamentation down upon the ground,27
Herself utters softly the wail of the smitten house.
"The storm ever breaking forth—its wail has filled me full."28
Raging because of the storm,
Me, a woman, the storm ever breaking forth—its wail has filled me full.
(90)
The storm ever breaking forth—its wail has filled me full.
During the day a bitter storm having been raised unto me,
I, although, for that day I tremble,
Fled not before that day's violence.
Because of its affliction I ran not one good day during my rule, one good day during my rule.
At night a bitter lament having been raised unto me>

25 The third "song" informs us that Ningal, the wife of the moon-god Nanna, moved by Ur's bitter plight, approached her husband and, determined to give him no rest and to arouse him to the fate of his city and house, wept bitterly before him: Day and night she is pursued by long days had not been granted me,

26 "Woman" instead of "lady" in AS 12.

27 Note the new, though still doubtful, translations for lines 86-7; they are based primarily on Jacobson's suggestions (loc. cit., 223, n.18); cf. also Witzel's excellent suggestion that the third sign in line 86 is AD (Orientatica NS, xv [1946], 47) its meaning in our line, however, remains uncertain.

28 For lines 88-112, cf. the excellent rendering by Jacobson-Frankfort in The Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man, pp. 196-197; much of its effectiveness is due to a not overly literal approach in the translation of the Sumerian words and phrases and to a flexible treatment of the Sumerian line order. However, for our present purpose, and under present conditions—not a few of the renderings in the Jacobson-Frankfort translation of this passage are far from assured—it is advisable to follow the more literal translations in AS 22. Note, however, the modifications in the translations of lines 94, 98, 99, 100, 102, 103, 104, and 109; some of these were suggested by the renderings in The Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man; others are due to several excellent suggestions made by Witzel, loc. cit., pp. 48-49, to lines 99, 102, 103, and 108.

29 "The righteous" instead of "a righteous man" in AS 12.

30 Note the modified rendering of this line; cf. Witzel's comment to he-en-za, loc. cit., p. 50. Witzel also suggests a variant rendering of this line which is well worth noting.

31 Note the modifications in the renderings of lines 118-121: cf., too, Witzel, loc. cit., p. 50. The implications of the phrase "upon which no eye had been cast," are uncertain.

32 "Had" and "set" for "has" and "established" in AS 12.

33 "All-surpassing" instead of "extra large" in AS 12; note, too. Witzel's suggestion to the line in loc. cit., p. 50.

I, although, for that night I tremble,
Fled not before that night's violence.
The storm's cyclonelike destruction—verily its terror has filled me full.
Because of its [affliction] in my nightly sleeping place, in my nightly sleeping place verily there is no peace
for me;
(100)
Nor, verily, because of its affliction, has the quiet of my sleeping place, the quiet of my sleeping place been allowed me.
Although, because in my land there was bitter [distress],
I, like a cow for (its) calf, trudge the earth,
My land was not delivered of fear.
Although, because in my city there was bitter [distress],
I, like a bird of heaven, flap (my) wings,
(And) to my city I fly,
My city on its foundation verily was destroyed;
Ur where it lay verily perishes.
Although because the hand of the storm appeared above,
I screamed and cried to it, 'Return, O storm, to the plain,'
The storm's breast verily rose not to depart,
Me, the woman,26 in the Enunkug, my house of ladyship,
For whose rule long days had not been granted me,
Verily weeping and lamentation follow.
As for the house which used to be the place where soothed the spirit of the black-headed people,
Instead of its feasts wrath (and) distress verily multiply.
Because of its affliction, in my house, the favorable place,
My attacked righteous house upon which no eye had been cast,
With heavy spirit, laments that are bitter,
Laments that are bitter, have been brought.
My house founded by the righteou... like a garden hut, verily on its side has caved in.
The Ekishnugal, my royal house,
The righteous house, my house which has been given over to tears,
Whose building, falsely, whose perishing, truly,
Had been set for me as its lot and share,
Like a tent, the house where the crops have been . . .,
Like the house where the crops have been . . ., to wind and rain verily has been exposed.
Ur, my all-surpassing chamber, (130)
My smitten house (and) city which have been torn down,
Like the sheepfold of a shepherd verily has been torn down;
My possessions which had accumulated in the city verily have been dissipated."
The third song.
Ur has been given over to tears;
Its antiphon.

"On that day, after the lord had been overcome by the storm,\(^{84}\)
After, in spite of the lady, her city had been destroyed;
On that day, after the lord had been overwhelmed by the storm,
After they had pronounced\(^ {86}\) the utter destruction of my city;
After they had pronounced the utter destruction of Ur,\(^{40}\)
After they had directed\(^ {46}\) that its people be killed—
On that day verily I abandoned not my city;
My land verily I forsake not
To Anu the water of my eye verily I poured;
To Enlil in person verily made supplication.
'Let not my city be destroyed,' verily I said unto them;
'Let not Ur be destroyed,' verily I said unto them;
'Let not its people perish,' verily I said unto them.
Verily Anu changed not\(^ {87}\) this word;
Verily Enlil with its 'It is good; so be it' soothed not my heart.

For the second time, when the council had ... ed\(^ {86}\)
(And) the Anunnaki... had seated themselves,
The legs verily I... ed, the arms verily I stretched out,
To Anu the water of my eye verily I poured;
To Enlil I in person verily made supplication.
'Let not my city be destroyed,' verily I said unto them;
'Let not Ur be destroyed,' verily I said unto them;
'Let not its people perish,' verily I said unto them.
Verily Anu changed not this work;
Verily Enlil with its 'It is good; so be it' soothed not my heart.
The utter destruction of my city verily they directed,
The utter destruction of Ur verily they directed;
That its people be killed, as its fate verily they decreed.
Me like one who has given them my—
Me of my city verily they deprived;\(^{90}\)
My Ur of me verily they deprived.
Anu changes not his command;
Enlil alters not the command which he had issued."

The fourth song. (170)
Her city has been destroyed; her ordinances have become inimical;
Its antiphon.

\(^{84}\) In the fourth "song" Ningal continues her lament before Nanna, describing her efforts in behalf of her city and bemoaning their futility: It was Anu and Enlil who had ordered Ur to be destroyed and its people to be killed. And when she, Ningal, wept before them and pleaded that Ur should not be destroyed and that its people should not perish, they denied her plea. Anu and Enlil have ordered the destruction of Ur and the death of its people, and they are not wont to change their commands.\(^ {86}\) " Pronounced" in this and the following line instead of "commanded" in AS 12.

\(^{86}\) "Directed" in this line and in lines 162-163 instead of "ordered" in AS 12.

\(^{87}\) 'Changed not' for "turned not to"; cf. Witzel's constructive comment in loc. cit., p. 51.

\(^{86}\) For lines 152-164, cf. Jacobsen, JNES, n. (1943), 172, and Jacobsen-Frankfort, The Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man, p. 197; the suggestions there made for the rendering of the words and phrases here left untranslated in the first three lines of this passage do not seem to me to hit the mark.

\(^{90}\) The new renderings of this line and the next follow Witzel's suggestion, loc. cit., p. 51.
At the side of their cups dust was piled high; the people groan.

Over the black-headed people, the winds swept; the people groan.

Sumer is broken up by the gilburru; the people groan. It attacks the land and devours it.

The afflictive storm by tears is not adjured; the destructive storm makes the land tremble and quake.

Like the flood storm it destroys the cities. The land-annihilating storm set up its ordinance in the city; the all-destroying storm came doing evil; like a storm it placed upon the people. The storm ordered by Enil in hate, the storm which wears away the land, Covered Ur like a garment, enveloped it like linen. The fifth song.

The raging storm has attacked unceasingly; the people groan; its antiphon.

On that day the (good) storm was carried off from the city; that city into ruins,

O Father Nanna, that city into ruins was made; the people groan.

On that day the (good) storm was carried off from the land; the people groan. Its people, not potsherds, filled its sides. Its walls were breached; the people groan.

In its lofty gates, where they were wont to promenade, dead bodies were lying about; in its boulevards, where the feasts were celebrated, scattered they lay.

In all its streets, where they were wont to promenade, dead bodies were lying about.

51 "Their" refers perhaps to the "black-headed people" in the next line.
52 The gilburru is a weapon used in hunting gazelles; cf. line 220.
53 Note the new rendering of the line. Note, that in this and the following lines, the refrain is omitted.
54 More literally, "makes the land tremble again and again."
55 "Decrees" (here rendered "ordinances") should have been translated as doubtful in AS 12; cf. Jacobsen, loc. cit., p. 223.
56 "Came doing evil" should have been translated as doubtfult in AS 12; note, too, the slightly different rendering in the next line.
57 Note the new rendering; cf. particularly Jacobsen, loc. cit., p. 223.
58 The sixth "song" too is written in the main Sumerian dialect. The first three lines speak of a "storm" which had been directed against Ur and Sumer and had turned them into ruins; practically the entire remainder of the "song," however, treats of the calamities that befell Ur as a result of her defeat in battle. The walls of Ur were breached, and the dead bodies of its people filled the gates. In their streets and boulevards they were ruthlessly attacked and laid low. Those who had been killed by the enemies’ weapons lay unburied and unattended; those who escaped were proscribed by the "storm." In Ur weak and strong alike perished through famine. Parents who did not leave their houses were overcome by fire, suckling babes were carried off by the waters. Judgment and counsel perished in the land. Parents abandoned their children, husbands their wives; all their possessions were scattered about. Gone is Ningal, its lady; she has departed like a flying bird. Lofty Ekishnugal is devoured by the axe; the all-destroying storm makes the land tremble and quake; the people lay in heaps.
59 Note that the refrain is only used intermittently throughout this "song."
60 For lines 208-218, cf. the Jacobsen-Frankfort translation in The Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man, p. 142.
64 For the new rendering of this phrase, cf. Jacobsen, JNES, n. 171, n.70.

In its places, where the festivities of the land took place, the people lay in heaps.

The blood of the land, like bronze and lead... Its dead bodies, like fat placed in the sun, of themselves melted away.

Its men who were brought to an end by the axe were not covered with head-bandages:

Like a gazelle held fast by the gilburru, (their) mouths bit the dust.

Its men who were struck down by the spear were not bandaged:

Lo (as) in the place where their mother labored they lay stricken in their blood.

Its men who were brought to an end by the battle-mace were not... d;

(Although) they were not drinkers of strong drink, they drooped neck over shoulder.

Who kept standing near the weapons, by the weapons was killed; the people groan.

Who escaped them, by the storm was prostrated; the people groan.

Ur—its weak and (its) strong perished through hunger; Mothers and fathers who did not leave their houses, were overcome by fire;

The young lying on their mothers’ laps, like fish were carried off by the waters;

Of the nursemaids, pried open were their strong hýrim m u-garments;

The judgment of the land perished; the people groan.

The counsel of the land was dissipated; the people groan.

The mother left her daughter; the people groan.

The father turned away from his son; the people groan.

In the city the wife was abandoned, the child was abandoned, the possessions were scattered about;

The black-headed people into their family places... were carried off.

Its lady like a flying bird departed from her city;

Ningal like a flying bird departed from her city;

On all its possessions which had been accumulated in the land, a defiling hand was placed.

In all its storehouses which abounded in the land, fires were kindled;

At its rivers Gibil, the purified, relentlessly did (his) work.

The lofty unapproachable mountain, the Ekishnugal—its righteous house by large axes is devoured;
A SUMERIAN LAMENTATION

My houses of the outer city verily have been destroyed—‘alas for my city’ I will say;
My houses of the inner city verily have been destroyed—‘alas for my house’ I will say.
My city like an innocent ewe has not been...ed, gone is its trustworthy shepherd;
Ur like an innocent ewe has not been...ed, gone is its shepherd boy.
My ox in its stable has not been...ed, gone is its herdsman;
My sheep in its fold has not been...ed, gone is its shepherd boy.
In the rivers of my city dust has gathered, into fox-dens...verily they have been made;
In their midst no sparkling waters flow, gone is its riveru/orkjer.
In the fields of the city there is no grain, gone is its fieldworker;
My fields verily like fields torn up by the pickaxe have brought forth
My palm groves and vineyards that abounded with honey and wine verily have brought forth the mountain thorn.
My plain where the...azallu...and strong drin...were prepared verily like an oven has become parched.
My possessions like heavy locusts on the move verily...have been carried off—‘O my possessions’ I will say.
My possessions verily he who came from the (lands) below...the (lands) below has carried off—‘O my possessions’ I will say.
My possessions verily he who came from the (lands) above, to the (lands) above has carried off—‘O my possessions’ I will say.
Verily my (precious) metal, stone, and lapis lazuli have been scattered about—‘O my possessions’ I will say.
My treasure verily has been dissipated...‘O my possessions’ I will say.
My (precious) metal, verily they who know not (precious) metal have fastened about their hands. (280)
My (precious) stones verily they who know not (precious) stones have fastened about their necks.
Verily all my birds and winged creatures have flown away—‘alas for my city’ I will say.
My daughters and sons verily...have been carried off—‘alas for my men’ I will say.
Woe is me, my daughters verily in a strange city carry strange banners;
With...verily the young men and young women have been fastened.
Woe is me, my city] which no longer exists—I am not its queen;
[O Nanna], Ur which no longer exists—I am not its mistress.

73 That is, perhaps, treated it with the utmost contempt; note the amount ‘thirty shekels.’
74 ‘Woman’ instead of ‘lady’ in AS 12.
75 In the first three lines the poet introduces ‘mother’ Ningal on the point of uttering a bitter wail for the terrible fate that overtook her city and shrine; the contents of this rather long lament are then given in the form of a soliloquy by the embittered goddess (lines 257-296). Anu has cursed her city, and Enlil has turned inimical to her house. The inner city as well as the outer city have been destroyed. In the rivers of Ur the dust has gathered; there is no fresh water. There is no grain in the fields; the lower lands and the upper lands; her precious metal, stone, and lapis lazuli lie scattered about. Her ornaments of precious metal and stone adorn the bodies of those who know not precious metal and stone. Her sons and daughters have been carried off into captivity; she is no longer queen of Ur. Her city and house have been destroyed; a strange city and a strange house have been erected in their place. Woe is her; Ur is destroyed, and its people are dead. Where then shall she sit down, where shall she stand up? Here follows an interruption of the goddess’s words in which the poet describes the violence of her lament (lines 299-301); the deity’s bitter soliloquy then continues: Woe is her; her house is a stable torn down, her cows are dispersed, the weapon has fallen on her ewes. She has gone forth from the city and found no rest; she has gone forth from the house and found no dwelling place. She is a stranger in a strange city; curses and abuse are heaped upon her. She approached her lord Nanna for a sheath of his house and city which have been destroyed and weeps bitterly before him. Woe is her; ‘O my city-fate,’ she will say, ‘bitter is my city-fate.’ ‘O my house which has been destroyed’ she will say, ‘bitter is my house-fate.’ Like a fallen ox she will lie down beside the ruins of her city and her house, and will not rise up. Bitter is the destruction of her house and city attacked without cause.
76 ‘Woman’ instead of ‘lady’ in AS 12.
79 Perhaps some kind of drug.
80 ‘(Lands) below’ and ‘(lands) above’ in this and the next line instead of ‘lower lands’ and ‘upper lands’ in AS 12.
81 The four dots in AS 12 are superfluous.
82 ‘Woman’ instead of ‘lady’ in AS 12.
I whose house verily has been made into ruins, whose city verily has been destroyed,
I, the righteous woman, in place of whose city verily a strange city has been built, 88
I whose house verily has been made into ruins, whose house verily has been destroyed, (290)
I, Ningal, in place of whose house verily a strange house has been built—

Woe is me, the city has been destroyed, the house too has been destroyed;
o Nanna, the shrine Ur has been destroyed, its people are dead.
Woe is me, where shall I sit me down, where shall I stand up?
Woe is me, in place of my city a strange city is being built;
I, Ningal—in place of my house a strange house is being erected.

Upon its removal from its place, from the plain, 'alas for my city' I will say;
Upon its removal from my city, Ur, 'alas for my house' I will say."
The woman tore her hair like the reed; 84
Her chest, the pure..., she strikes, "alas for my city" she cries. (300)

Her eyes are flooded with tears; bitterly she weeps.
"Woe is me, in place of my city a strange city is being built;
I, Ningal—in place of my house a strange house is being erected.
Woe is me, I am one whose house is a stable torn down;
I am one whose cows have been dispersed;
I, Ningal—like an unworthy shepherd the weapon has fallen on (my) ewes.
Woe is me, I am one who has been exiled 85 from the city, I am one who has found no rest;
I, Ningal—I am one who has been exiled from the house, I am one who has found no dwelling place.
Lo, I am a stranger sitting with raised head in a strange city;
Curses and abuses press upon me, head and limb. (Against) the curse of those who inhabit its dwelling places, I (dare) not speak out. (310)

In that place for the sake of his city I approached him—bitterly I weep;
To the lord for the sake of his house which had been attacked I approached—bitterly I weep.
For the sake of his house which had been attacked I approached him—bitterly I weep.

Woe is me, 'O my city-fate' I will say, 'bitter is my city-fate':

I, the queen—'O my house which has been destroyed,' I will say, 'bitter is my house-fate.'
O my brickwork of Ur which has been torn down, which has been wrecked,
O my righteous house, my city which has been made into ruins,
In the debris of thy righteous house which has been destroyed, I lay me down alongside of thee;
Like a fallen ox, from thy wall I do not rise up. (320)
Woe is me, untrustworthy was thy building, bitter is thy destruction.
O Ur, my, the woman's shrine 87 whose offerings have been cut off,
O Enunkug, my house of burnt offerings whose bounty is no longer satisfying,
O my city which exists no longer, my (city) attacked without cause,
O my (city) attacked and destroyed, my (city) attacked without cause,
Behold the storm ordered in hate—its violence has not abated; 85
O my house of Sin in Ur, bitter is thy destruction."
The seventh song.
"Alas for my house, alas for my house."
Its antiphon. (330)

O queen, make thy heart live water; thou, how dost thou live! 89
O Ningal, make thy heart live water, thou, how dost thou live!
O thou righteous woman 90 whose city has been destroyed, now how dost thou exist!
O thou Ningal whose land has perished, make thy heart like water
After thy city had been destroyed, now how dost thou exist!
After thy house had been destroyed, make thy heart live water!
Thy city has become a strange city; now how dost thou exist!

Thy house has become a house of tears, make thy heart like water

84 The subject in lines 299-301 is Ningal; for the new rendering of the passage, cf. Jacobsen, loc. cit., p. 222, n. 12, and Witzel, Orientalia NS, xv, 95.
85 For "been exiled" in this and the next lines, cf. the excellent suggestion by Witzel, loc. cit., p. 56.
86 For the new renderings in this and the next line, cf. Witzel, loc. cit., p. 57.
Thy city which has been made into ruins—thou art not its mistress;[102]
Thy righteous house which has been given over to the pickaxe—thou dost not dwell as its dweller. (340)
Thy people who have been led to slaughter—thou entertainest not as their queen.
Thy tears have become strange tears, thy land weeps not;
Without 'tears of supplication' it inhabits foreign lands;[96]
Thy land like one who has multiplied... shuts tight its mouth.[TM]
Thy city has been made into ruins; now how dost thou exist!
Thy house has been laid bare;[94] ma\e thy heart like water \nUr, the shrine, has been given over to the wind; now how dost thou exist!
Its pa\i\u verily has not been brought into the... make thy heart like water!
Its enu verily dwells not in the giparru; now how dost thou exist!
Its... who cherishes lustrations makes no lustrations for thee;
In the ahuy thy house of feasts, they... music has been turned into [336]
Thy sheep verily stays not in its fold, its milk is not Thy ox verily has not been brought into its stable, its Thy song has been turned into weeping...;
Thy...—music has been turned into lamentation.... (360)
Thy ox verily has not been brought into its stable, its Thy sheep verily stays not in its fold, its milk is not presented to thee.[90]

Thy... fat from the stable has not been brought for thee...;
Thy... milk from the sheepfold has not been brought for thee
Thy fisherman and... fish were overtaken by misfortune...;
Thy bird-hunter and... birds....
Thy river which had been made fit for the makurrro-boat—in its midst the...-plant grows;
On thy road which had been prepared for the chariots
the mountain thorn grows.
O my queen, thy city weeps before thee as. its mother;[108]
Ur, like the child of a street which has been destroyed seeks a place before thee. (370)
The house, like a man who has lost everything stretches out the hands to thee;
Thy brickwork of the righteous house, like a human being cries thy "Where, pray?"
O my queen, verily thou art one who has departed from the house; thou art one who has departed from the city.
How long, pray, wilt thou stand aside in the city like an enemy?
O Mother Ningal, (how long) wilt thou hurl challenges in the city like an enemy?
Although thou art a queen beloved of her city, thy city... thou hast abandoned;
[Although] thou art [a queen[96] beloved of her people], thy people... thou hast abandoned.
O Mother Ningal, like an ox to thy stable, like a sheep to thy fold!
Like an ox to thy stable of former days, like a sheep to thy fold!
Like a young child to thy chamber, O maid, to thy house!
May Anu, the king of the gods, utter thy "tis enough"
May Enil, the king of all the lands, decree thy (favorable) fate.
May he return thy city to its place for thee; exercise its queenship! [905]
May he return Ur to its place for thee; exercise its queenship!
The eighth song.
My ordinances have become inimical;
Its antiphon.
Alas, all the storms together have flooded the land.[462]
The great storm of heaven, the ever roaring storm, 102

104 Note restoration of 'a queen' instead of Mother Ningal, and cf. Witzel, Oriantula NS, xv, 59.

[103] Two variant texts have two lines preceding this line; they read: "May he return Nippur to its place for thee; exercise its queenship? May he return Isin to its place for thee; exercise its queenship?" In these two texts, therefore, Nippur and Isin are treated more or less as equals of Ur.

106 The ninth and tenth 'songs' together—from the point of view of their contents there seems to be no reason for the division into two songs—contain the poet's plea to Nanna not to permit the 'storm' to overwhelm Ur and its inhabitants. Beginning with the statement: 'Alas, all the storms together have flooded the land,' they continue with a description of the 'storms' and their destructive deeds, and conclude with a number of curses against it.
The afflicting storm which sated the land,\textsuperscript{107} (390)
The storm which destroyed cities, the storm which destroyed houses;
The storm which destroyed stables, the storm which destroyed sheepfolds;\textsuperscript{108}
Which stretched out (its) hand over the holy rites,
Which placed a defiling hand on the weighty counsel,
The storm which cut off all that is good from the land;
The storm which held the black-headed people in its ban.\textsuperscript{109}
The ninth song.
Its antiphon.

Like the great gate of night may the door be closed on it!
Let not that storm be given a place in the numbering
May its record hang by a (clay) nail outside the house of Enlil!

The tenth song.
Unto distant days, other days, future days;
Its antiphon.

The storm which knows not the wife, the storm which knows not the mother,
The storm which knows not the sister, the storm which knows not the weak,
The storm which knows not the child,
(The storm) which overwhelmed the living creatures of heaven and earth, the black-headed people—(410)
May that storm be entirely destroyed!

Note the new renderings to lines 390, and 395-396; they are based on the assumption that the first Sumerian word has the meaning "storm"; cf. also Witzel, Orientuš NS, xv, 229, 231. Note, too, that lines 390, 395-396, 398, 400-406, and 410 end in a Sumerian sign which may indicate that line 388 is to be repeated after each of them as a refrain.\textsuperscript{107} "Destroyed" instead of "destroy" in AS 12; so quite correctly Witzel, loc. cit., 229.

Note that line 396 should not be followed by a period; the description of the storm is continued after lines 397-399 which, for reasons that are far from obvious, have been interposed here to separate the two "songs."\textsuperscript{108}

As Witzel, Orientalia NS, xv, 60, has pointed out, the Sumerian transliteration to this line in AS 12 erroneously read ješ for dumu.\textsuperscript{109}

Note the new renderings to lines 405-406 and cf. the comparable text in lines 202-203; indeed one of the texts has a variant to line 406 whose contents are identical with line 203, that is: "The storm ordered by Enlil in hate, the storm which wears away the land."
VIII. Secular Songs and Poems
A Song of the Harper

A Song of the Harper

A common scene in the tombs of ancient Egypt shows a harper entertaining guests at a feast. More than once he calls upon them to surrender themselves to pleasure, because they can have no certainty that earthly diligence will lead to eternal bliss.

The present translation is made from Papyrus Harris 500 (now British Museum 10060), recto vi 2-vii 3, a manuscript of about 1300 B.C. A closely similar version was in the Sakkarah tomb of Pa-Aton-em-heb, of the Amarna period (about 1375-1360 B.C.), now in Leyden. The version in the tomb of Nefer-hotep at Thebes (Tomb No. 50, about 1350-1320 B.C.) was somewhat different. The title given below shows that the original was ascribed to the reign of one of the Intef kings before or after the Twelfth Dynasty. The theme may have been characteristic of the groping for value which followed the collapse of the Old Kingdom. However, the use of the text at Thebes (Tomb No. 50, about 1350-1320 B.C.) was somewhat different. The title given below shows that the original was ascribed to the reign of one of the Intef kings before or after the Twelfth Dynasty. The theme may have been characteristic of the groping for value which followed the collapse of the Old Kingdom. However, the use of the text in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Dynasties shows that this hedonism was an acceptable literary expression for some centuries.

M. Lichtheim studied this and other harper's songs in JNES, iv (1945), 178 ff., translation on pp. 192 ff., bibliography on pp. 211 ff. The present translation is made from W. M. Müller, Die Uebespoesie der alten Aegypter (2nd printing, Leipzig, 1932), Pis. 13-15. (See Addenda).

The song which is in the House of King Intef, the triumphant, and which is before the singer with the harp.

Prosperous is he, this good prince,
Even though good fortune may suffer harm!
Generations pass away, and others remain
Since the time of the ancestors.
The gods who lived formerly rest in their pyramids,
The beatified dead also, buried in their pyramids.
And they who built houses—their places are not.
See what has been made of them!
I have heard the words of Ii-em-hotep and Hor-dedef,
With whose discourses men speak so much.

What are their places (now)?
Their walls are broken apart, and their places are not—
As though they had never been!
There is none who comes back from (over) there,
That he may tell their state,
That he may tell their needs,
Until we (too) may travel to the place where they have gone.

1 The fate of death may not be happy, but this prince need not fear. The version in the tomb of Nefer-hotep, "How weary is this righteous prince; the goodly fortune has come to pass," makes death a kindly release.
2 The Nefer-hotep version, "Generations pass away since the time of the god, (but) young people come in their place," shows that the meaning is the transition from one generation to another.
3 The dead kings and nobles of older times.
4 Ii-em-hotep, the famous vizier of Djoser, and Hor-dedef, the son of Khufu, were traditional sages of Egypt. See p. 432, n. 4.

Let thy desire flourish,
In order to let thy heart forget the beatifications for thee.
Follow thy desire, as long as thou shalt live.
Put myrrh upon thy head and clothing of fine linen upon thee,
Being anointed with genuine marvels of the god's property.
Set an increase to thy good things;
Let not thy heart flag.
Follow thy desire and thy good.
Fulfill thy needs upon earth, after the command of thy heart.
Until there come for thee that day of mourning.
The Weary [of Heart] hears not their [mourning],
And wailing saves not the heart of a man from the underworld.

REFRAIN: Make holiday, and weary not therein!
Behold, it is not given to a man to take his property with him.
Behold, there is not one who departs who comes back again!

Love Songs

The later Egyptian Empire (1300-1100 B.C.) has provided us with several collections of love songs. They were apparently intended to be sung to the accompaniment of some musical instrument. They express an enjoyment of nature and the out-of-doors. As in the Song of Songs, the lovers are called "my brother" and "my sister."

THE BEGINNING OF THE beautiful SONGS OF ENTERTAINMENT of thy sister, the beloved of thy heart, as she comes from the meadow.

My brother, my beloved,
My heart pursues the love of thee,
All that thou hast brought into being.

5 An important part of the funerary services was "beatification" or "making (the deceased) an effective personality."
6 Osiris, the god of the dead, is not concerned with the earthly mourning for the dead.

4 Outis, the god of the dead, is not concerned with the earthly mourning for the dead.
SECULAR SONGS AND POEMS

I say to thee: "See what I am doing!"
I have come from setting my trap with my (own) hand;
In my hand are my bait and my snare.
All the birds of Punt, they alight in Egypt,
Anointed with myrrh.

1. The first one comes and takes my worm.
And its talons are full of resin.
My wish for thee is that we loose them together,
When I am alone with thee,
That I might let thee hear the cry
Of the one anointed with myrrh.
How good it would be
If thou wert there with me
When I set the trap!
The best is to go to the fields,
To the one who is beloved!

THE END.

b

The voice of the swallow speaks and says:
"The land has brightened—What is thy road?"
Thou shalt not, O bird, disturb me!
I have found my brother in his bed,
And my heart is still more glad,
(When he) said to me:
"I shall not go afar off.
My hand is in thy hand,
I shall stroll about,
And I shall be with thee in every pleasant place."
He makes me the foremost of maidens.
He injures not my heart.

THE END.

c

The love of my sister is on yonder side,
A stream lies between us,
And a crocodile waits in the shallows.
But when I go down into the water,
I wade the current.

1. Punt, a land on the Arabian Sea, was famous for gums and perfumes. The theme of this song is that the maiden has been catching birds from the lands of fragrant gums, and she wishes that her "brother" might join her in this pastime, with its implications of rich perfumes and merrymaking. Cf. the frequent references to myrrh and spices in the Song of Songs, chap. 4 and 5.

2. Where are you walking in the early morning? The swallow invites the maiden to the pleasures of the open fields. She, however, seeks out the company of her "brother." Cf. Song of Songs 2:12-13, with "the voice of the plover-dove."

3. Though a flowing stream with lurking crocodiles lies between the youth and his "sister," the love of her is a magic charm to carry him successfully across to her. Cf. Song of Songs 8:7.

My heart is great upon the stream,
And the waves are like land unto my feet.
It is the love of her that makes me steady,
For it makes a Water-charm for me!
When I see my sister coming,
My heart dances,
And my arms open wide to embrace her,...
When the mistress comes to me.

THE END.

d

From Papyrus Chester Beatty I, verso C ii 4-9, of the Twentieth Dynasty and from Thebes. Published by A. H. Gardiner, The Library of A. Chester Beatty (London, 1931), Pl. xxin, pp. 31-32.

THIRD STANZA.
My heart intended to see Nefrus,

That I might sit in her home.
But I found Mehyn driving on the road,
Together with his gallants.
I know not how to take me from his presence,
That I might pass him freely by.

See, river is like road,
And I know not the place of my feet.

Very foolish art thou, my heart—
Wherefore wouldst thou make free with Mehyn?
Behold, if I pass by before him,
I shall tell him of my waverings;
"Behold, I am thine!" I shall say to him;
And he will boast of my name
And assign me to the foremost harem
Of those who are in his retinue.

THE END.

e

Also from Papyrus Beatty I, verso C iv 6-2. Gardiner, op. cit., Pls. xvi-xxvi, p. 34.

SEVENTH STANZA.

Seven (days) to yesterday I have not seen the sister,
And a sickness has invaded me.
My body has become heavy,
Forgetful of my own self?
If the chief of physicians come to me,
My heart is not content (with) their remedies;
The lector priests, no way (out) is in them:—
My sickness will not be probed.

1. Papyrus Beatty I, c, contains "the beginning of the speeches of great entertainment," with seven numbered stanzas, of which this is the third. By a characteristic Egyptian literary device, there is a pun on the word "third" at the beginning and end of the stanza: khemet "three," khemet "intended," and imiu-khetef "who are in his retinue."

2. The translation depends for good sense on treating two words as proper names, even though they are not properly determined as names: nefrus "her beauty," and myrym "flax."

3. Possibly there was some colloquially known implication in these two terms. It would then seem that the maiden went out to visit a girl friend and unexpectedly met her "brother" riding with other lusty youths. She was covered with confusion and feared that her emotions might be so obvious that he would scorn her and turn her over to one of his group.

4. Cf. n. 4 above. Here the word "seven" is employed in place of a pun.

The theme of the song is that of Song of Songs 2:5 or 5:8: "I am sick from love." Physicians and magicians cannot diagnose or cure the youth's ailment, but the mere sight of his "sister" will make him well.

5. Often in the sense of losing consciousness.

6. Who read magic spells for the cure of disease.
To say to me: "Here she is!" is what will revive me; Her name is what will lift me up; The going in and out of her messengers Is what will revive my heart. More beneficial to me is the sister than any remedies; She is more to me than the collected writings. My health is her coming in from outside: When (1) see her, then (1) am well. If she opens her eye, my body is young (again); If she speaks, then I am strong (again); When I embrace her, she drives evil away from me— But she has gone forth from me for seven days!

Also from Papyrus Beatty I, verso G i 5-ii 1. Gardiner, op. cit Pis. xxix-xxx, p. 35.

Would that thou wouldst come (to the sister speedily),9
Like a horse of the king, Picked from a thousand of all steeds, The foremost of the stables! It is distinguished in its food, And its master knows its paces. If it hears the sound of the whip, It knows no delay, And there is no foremost of the chasseurs10
Who can stay before it (to hold it). How well the sister's heart knows That he is not far from the sister!

THE END.

Songs of the Common People

Many of the working songs in the modern Near East are antiphonal, with a leader and a chorus. Scenes and legends suggest that the same was true in antiquity, although it is difficult to present a single clear case. The following two songs are separated in the scene in which they occur: the first is antiphonal, with a leader and a chorus. Scenes and legends attached to a group of plowmen and the second to a near-by group of reapers. The general similarity of words and the "answering refrain" justify their juxtaposition here.

The texts are in an agricultural scene in an Eighteenth Dynasty (16th-14th centuries B.C.) tomb at el Kab, published by J. J. Tylor, The Tomb of Paheri (Wall Drawings and Monu-

Over the Plowmen

A good day—it is cool.
The cattle are pulling,

And the sky does according to our desire— Let us work for the noble!

Over the Reapers

The answering refrain which they say: This good day is come forth in the land; The north wind is come forth, And the sky does according to our desire— Let us work as our hearts may be bound!

A Threshing Song

In the same scene, a herdsman is shown driving his cattle around and around to thresh out the grain. He urges them that their monotonous labor is easy and profitable.

Thresh ye for yourselves, thresh ye for yourselves, O cattle! Thresh ye for yourselves, thresh ye for yourselves! Straw to eat, and barley for your masters— Let not your hearts be weary, for it is cool.

A SONG OF THE HERDSMAN

In scenes of earlier times, as the herdsman drives his sheep to tread out the grain, he sings a song which, in humorous allusion, implies that he is out of his usual place. The text occurs in the same setting in two Sakkarah tombs of the Old Kingdom (25th-24th centuries B.C.). It is given in A. Erman, Reden, Rufe und Lieder des alten Reiches (APAW, 1919), 19-20, and translated in Erman, LAE, 131-9.

The herdsman is in the water among the fish: He talks with the shad And greets the oxyrhynchus fish. O west, where is the herdsman (now), The herdsman of the west?

A SONG OF THE CARRIERS OF A PALANQUIN

Three Old Kingdom scenes which depict a noble traveling in a palanquin give the words of the porters. The recurring words, "It is pleasant full than when it is empty," link these three together in the recognized refrain of a song. The longest of these texts is the most difficult, and only the concluding words can be translated with certainty. It comes from the Dahshur tomb of Ipi, and is now Cairo Museum 1536, published by L. Borchart, Denkmäler des alten Reiches I (Catalogue général... du Musée du Caire, Berlin 1937), 240. The following translation follows the imaginative rendering of W. Wreszinski in OLZ, xxvi (1923), 309-12, which has the merit of giving the feeling of the song, even though some of the words remain uncertain.

Go down into the palanquin, and it is sound! Go down into the palanquin, and it is well! The carrying-poles are on the support of the carriers. O palanquin of Ipi, be as heavy as I wish— It is pleasant full than when it is empty!

SONGS AT A FEAST

An annual feast at Luxor had as its central feature the journey of the god Amon and of the pharaoh by boat between Karnak and Luxor. In scenes of the time of Tut-ankh-Amon (about 1361-1352 B.C.) in the Temple of Luxor, this ceremonial
A drinking place has been built for the menials who are in the ship of ships.

The ways of the earth god have been hacked open for (thee). O Nile, great and high! Mayest thou satisfy thy Two Goddesses For Horus, the strong of arm, When the god is rowed, carrying the beauty of the god.1

Hat-Hor has effected the beauty of good things For King (Tut-anhk-Amon), beloved of Amon and favored of the gods.

So says Neith.

Close by this song there are depicted eight women with sistrum-rattles and eight priests clapping their hands in measure. The text (Wolf, op. cit., 57 [No. 15 c]) relates them to the songs of the entire scene.

The chorus which sets the measure while the journey takes place upon the river: o Amon, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands, thou livest forever!

In the same large scene units of soldiers swing along in gay and vigorous movement, with some of the Negro troops breaking out in jubilant dance. Over the heads of the soldiers their songs of festivity are written (Wolf, op. cit., 63-64 [No. 34]).

[The leaders of] the army. They rejoice in front of his majesty: "How happy is the good ruler when he has conveyed Amon, for He decreed to him valor against the south and victory against [the north]? Amon [is the god who decreed] the victory to the ruler!"

[The soldiers] who are following his majesty. The chorus of jubilation which they utter: "King (Tut-ankh-Amon) is conveying Him who begot him! De-creed for him was kingship from the beginning of the lifetime of Re in heaven. He is rewarded with valor and victory over every foreign country that attacks him. Amon decreed the victory to King (Tut-ankh-Amon)! Amon*is the god who decreed the victory to the ruler!"

Another song of military triumph, presumably sung by returning soldiers, will be found on p. 228 above.

In Praise of the City Ramses

The pharaohs of the Nineteenth Dynasty established their residence city, the biblical Ramses or Raamses, in the north-eastern Delta.2 The glories of this new capital were celebrated in poetical compositions like the following.

(fl) From Papyrus Anastasi II (British Museum 10243), recto i i-ii 5, with a parallel text in Papyrus Anastasi IV (British Museum 10249), i-ii 1-10. Both manuscripts are school compositions dated to the end of the 13th century B.C. and ascribed to Memphis. Faesimilied in Select Papyri in the Hieratic Character from the Collections of the British Museum, n (London, 1842), PIs. xxiii-xxvi, xxxxxvi, with the Anastasi II text also in G. Müller, Hieratische Lesestücke, 11 (Leipzig, 1927), PIs. 37-38. Transcription into hieroglyphic by A. H. Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Miscellanies (Bibliotheca Aegyptiaca, VII, Brussels, 1937), 12-13, 40-41. Translations by A. H. Gardiner in JEA, v (1918), 187-88, and by Erman, LAE, 270-71.

(b) From Papyrus Anastasi III (British Museum 10246), recto i 11-19, of the same characteristics as the above. Parallels from a papyrus in Vienna (Papyrus Rainer 53) and from an ostracoon in Queen's College, Oxford. Faesimilied in Select Papyri, etc., PIs. xxxix-lxxx. Transcription into hieroglyphic by Gardiner, Late-Egyptian Miscellanies, 21-23, 137-38. Translations by Gardiner in JEA, v, 184-86, and by Erman, LAE, 206-07. The present translation omits many of the good products listed as available at Ramses.3 Translated by Caminos, op. cit., 73-82.

1 The location of Ramses has been much disputed, and scholars are not yet in agreement. For its location at Tanis, modern San el-Hagar in the northeastern Delta, see A. H. Gardiner in JEA, xix (1933), 122 ff.; xxx (1944), 60; and R. Weil in JEA, xx (1935), 17 ff. For a view that Ramses may have been at modern Qantir, about 15 miles south of San el-Hagar, cf. W. C. Hayes, Glazed Tiles from a Palace of Ramesses at Kanit (Metropolitan Museum of Art Papers, No. 3, New York, 1937), 8.

2 Centrally the Phoenician coast, but carrying down into Palestine.

3 An old cult-center south of Thebes.

4 Temples of the gods mark the four quarters of the city. The Semitic goddess Astarte is appropriately in the east. The Egyptian goddess Uto is in the north, and Egyptian goddess Astarte is appropriately in the west. The Egyptian goddess Maat-Re®—life, prosperity, health!—has built herself a castle, the name of which is "Great of Victories." The castle which is in it is like the horizon of heaven. Ramses Meri-Amon is in it as Lord of Egypt.

5 The glories of this new capital were celebrated in poetical compositions like the following.

6 The glories of this new capital were celebrated in poetical compositions like the following.

7 The glory of this new capital was celebrated in poetical compositions like the following.

8 The glory of this new capital was celebrated in poetical compositions like the following.
through the love of him. Hatti is in his power alone. If the god receives not its offering, it does not see the water of heaven, for it is in the power of User-maat-Re—life, prosperity, health!—the bull that loves valor!”

THE END.

The Scribe Pai-Bes communicating to his lord, the Scribe Amen-em-Opet: In life, prosperity, health! It is a letter to let [my] lord know. Another communication to my lord, to wit:10

I have reached Per-Ramses,11 and have found (ii i) it in [very, very] good condition, a beautiful district, without its like, after the pattern of Thebes. It was [Re] himself [who founded it.]

The Residence is pleasant in life; its field is full of everything good; it is (full) of supplies and food every day, its ponds with fish, and its lakes with birds. Its meadows are verdant with grass; its banks bear dates; its melons are abundant on the sands. ... Its granaries are (so) full of barley and emmer (that) they come near to the sky. Onions and leeks (5) are for food, and lettuce of the garden, pomegranates, apples, and olives, figs of the orchard, sweet wine of -Ka-of-Egypt, surpassing honey, red wed-fish of the canal of the Residence City, which live on lotus-flowers, bedin-fish of the Han-waters...

The Shi-Hor14 has salt, and the Her canal has natron.

1 If Ramses does not receive Haiti’s offer of submission, Ramses is able to withhold rain from Hatti. cf. p. 257 above.
10 Pai-Bes, the pupil, is writing to Amen-em-Opet, his master.
12 A well-known vineyard of the Delta.
13 Other varieties of fish follow.
14 The biblical “the Shihor (which is before Egypt),” literally, “the

Its ships go out and come (back) to mooring, (so that) supplies (10) and food are in it every day. One rejoices to dwell within it, and there is none who says: “Would that!” to it.15 The small in it are like the great.

Come, let us celebrate for it its feasts of the sky, as well as its feasts at the beginning of the seasons.16

The reed-thicket17 comes to it with papyrus; the Shi-Hor with rushes. ... (iii i) ... The young men of "Great of Victories" are dressed up every day, with sweet oil upon their heads and newly dressed hair. They stand beside their doors, their hands bowed down with flowers, with greenery of the House of Hat-Hor and flax of the Her candy on the day when User-maat-Re Setep-en-Re—life, prosperity, health!—Montu-in-the-Two-Lands enters in, on the morning of the Feast of Khoiakh.18 (5) Every man is like his fellow in uttering their petitions.

The ale of “Great of Victories” is sweet;...19 beer of Kode20 from the harbor, and wine of the vineyards. The ointment of the Segbeyen waters is sweet, and the garlands of the garden. The singers of "Great of Victories" are sweet, being instructed in Memphis.

THE END.

Waters of Horus.” Presumably the Tanite branch of the Nile, with its salt-flats.
15 No one feels a lack in the city Ramses.
16 The "feasts of the sky" were those astronomically set, such as those of the phases of the moon. The seasonal feasts included the Coronation Feast, the Rising of the Dog-Star, the Feast of Opet, etc., which recurred with regularity.
17 The word used appears also in Hebrew in "the Sea of Reeds" (conventionally translated "Red Sea"). See Gardiner, Ancient Egyptian Onomatostica, n. 201* f.
18 The relation of this feast to the king’s entry into the city is not clear.
19 Other drinks are listed.
20 See n.6 above.
IX. Letters
A Satirical Letter

This text was one of the admired literary compositions of the late Empire and was used for the instruction of apprentice scribes. A royal official Hori received a letter from a scribe Amen-em-Opet. Hori responded in lofty and sarcastic vein, attempting to expose the weaknesses in his correspondent’s qualifications for office. A particular value for our purposes is the summary catalogue of places in the Egyptian empire in Asia.

Papyrus Anastasi I (British Museum 10247) is of the late Nineteenth Dynasty (end of the 13th century B.C.) and probably comes from Memphis. In addition, from the Nineteenth and Twentieth Dynasties, there are three fragmentary papyri and about fifty ostraca, schoolboy exercises. Facsimiled in Select Papyri in the Hieratic Character from the Collections of the British Museum, n (London, 1842), Pts. XXXV-LXII. The standard study of the text was made by A. H. Gardiner, Egyptian Hieratic Texts. Series I. Part I. The Papyrus Anastasi I and the Papyrus Roller Together with the Parallel Texts (Leipzig, 1911). The most significant fragments appearing since Gardiner’s publication have been presented by G. Farina, in RSO, xxi (1932), 313 ff., by G. Posener, Catalogue des ostraca hiiratiques litteraires de Deir el Medineh (Documents de fouilles ... J, Cairo, 1934-38), 1, cf. Index on pp. 29-30, by G. Posener, in Mélanges Maspero, 1 (Cairo, 1934), 327 &., by J. Cerny, Ostraca hiiratiques (Catalogue général : du Musee de Caire (Cairo, 1930-35), No. 25773, xxvii d by A. H. Gardiner, ed., Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty gift (London, 1935), 130, Pt. 72. A translation in Erman, LAE, 214-34.

The Writer

THE SCRIBE, CHOICE OF HEART, persevering of counsel, for whose utterances there is rejoicing when they are heard, skilled in the Word of God,1 (for) there is nothing which he does not know. He is a hero valiant in the work of Seshat,2 a servant of the Lord of Hermopolis3 in his bureau of writing, the teacher of apprentices in the Office of the Writings, the first of his fellows, foremost of his colleagues, prince of his generation, without any like unto him ... Swift is he in inscribing empty scrolls, a youth distinguished of appearance and pleasing of charm, who can explain the difficulties of the annals like him who composed them. All that issues from his mouth is steeped in honey, and the heart is treated therewith as if (with) medicines. The groom of his majesty—life, prosperity, health!—the attendant of the Lord—life, prosperity, health!—who trains the steeds of the Sovereign. He is an energetic digger (ii 1) for the stable Hori, son of Wen-nofer, of Abydos, the Island of the Righteous, born of Ta-Usert in the district of Bilbeis, the Singer of Bastet in the Field of the God.4

1 The divine order as revealed in the sacred writings. Hence, drilled at writing.
2 The goddess of writing.
3 Thoth, god of wisdom and patron of scribes.
4 His mother was a singer for the goddess Bastet in the Babastis region.

The Salutation

HE GREENS his friend, his excellent brother, the royal scribe of orders to the victorious army, choice of heart, godly of character, wise of understanding, whose like does not exist in any scribe,... (5) ... the Scribe of..., Amen-em-Opet, son of the Steward Mose, the possessor of reverence:

MAYEST THOU LIVE, MAYEST THOU PROSPER, MAYEST THOU BE HEALTHY, MY EXCELLENT BROTHER, equipped and steadfast, without having a wish.5

Criticism of Amen-em-Opets Letter

ANOTHER MATTER, to wit: Thy letter (iv 6) reached me in an hour of relaxing for a while. I found thy message as I was sitting beside the horse which is in my charge. I rejoiced and was glad and ready to answer. When I went into thy’ stall to look at thy letter, I found that it was neither praises nor insults. Thy statements mix up this with that; all thy words are upside-down; they are not connected ... (v 1) ... (So) I write to thee to instruct thee, like a friend teaching one greater than himself to be an excellent scribe. Now as for me, when thou speakest, I shall answer it. Lo, thy speeches are {only} idle talk. Thou maketh thyself like one agitated to scare me. (5) But I am not in dread before thee, (for) I know thy nature. So I thought that thou wouldst answer it all by thyself. (But) lo, thy supporters stand behind thee® Thou hast gathered many fowler as helpers, like those who would be (gathered) for a law court. Thy face is wild, as thou standest wheedling the backers, saying: "Come with me, that ye may give me a hand!" Thou presentest them with gifts for each man, and they say [to] thee: "Let thy heart be steadfast. We shall attack him." Thou standest in agitation ... , and they sit deliberating, (vi 1) the six scribes,10 ... (vii 1) ... Thy letter is (too) inferior to permit that one listen to it ... If thou hadst known beforehand that it was no good, thou wouldst not have sent it ....

Horis Reply

I REPLY TO THEE IN LIKE MANNER in a letter (5) which is original from the first page to the colophon. It is filled with utterances of my lips, which I created all by myself, no other being with me. By the J(a of Thoth),11

1 The text continues at length with good wishes.
2 Sic, read "my.
3 "Cool," perhaps in the sense of spiritless or vain.
4 Hori intimates that Amen-em-Opet cannot write a letter without help. The word may be corrupt. If correct, the sense would be that common persons like catchers of birds were helping Amen-em-Opet; gathered as he might gather witnesses for a law court.
5 "Scribes" is of course sarcastic. The text goes on to detail how each of six assistants contributes to Amen-em-Opet’s own confusion.
6 cf. n.3 above.
I did (it) by myself! I did not call to a scribe to have him witness (it). I shall give thee more in twenty parts; I shall repeat for thee what thou hast said, (each) part in its place, the fourteen sections (of) thy letter. Fill my hand with papyrus, and I shall tell thee many things and pour out for thee choice things, (viii 1) . . .

All my words are sweet and pleasant; that is, I do not part in its place, the fourteen sections (of) thy letter.

Again thou hast said of me: "Crippled of arm and without strength." Thou dost minimize me as a scribe when thou sayest: "He does not know (anything)." I shall not spend a moment (ix 1) beside thee, wheedling thee and saying: "Be my supporter: another man is troubling me!" . . . I know many men without strength, crippled of arm, feeble, and without their force, but they are rich in houses, in supplies and food, and they speak no wish [about] anything. Come, let me tell thee the nature of the scribe Rey, (5) who was called the firebrand of the granary. He did not stir nor run since his birth. His abomination was energetic work, and he would not know it. (Yet) he is resting in the West, with his body whole, and terror of the good god has not carried him off. . . . (x 1) . . . Let me tell thee of Pa-hery-pedjet, who is in Heliopolis. [He is an] old man with his body whole, and terror of the good god has not carried him off. . . .

He would not know it. (Yet) he is resting in the West, and his name is Ki-sep . . . who goes on the ground without counting their officers. What is his name: "Crippled of arm and without strength." Thou receivest them, placed in the camp. The troops are ready and prepared. Make them quickly into portions, that of each man at his turn. The bowmen of the army which is before thee amount to 1,900, the Sherden 520, the Qeheq 1,600, the Meshwesh 880—total 5,000 in (5) all, not counting their officers. There is brought thee a peace offering before thee: bread, cattle, and wine. The number of men is too great for thee, whereas the provisions are too small for them.... Thou receivest them, placed in the camp. The troops are ready and prepared. Make them quickly into portions, that of each man at his hand. The Bedouin look on (vurtively, (saying): "Sopher yodeaY"* Midday is come, the camp is hot. "Time to start! Don't let the troop commander be angry! Much marching is ahead of us. What bread have we at all? (xviii 1) Our night-quarters are far away. O Who-is-it, what does it mean, this beating of us?" So thou art an experienced scribe, if thou (canst) approach to give the provisions, (but) an hour comes into a day for lack of a scribe from the Ruler—life, prosperity, health!" "This (business of) bringing thee to beat us—it's no good, my boy! He will hear and will send to destroy thee!"

The Problem of a Military Mission

O alert scribe, understanding of heart, who is not ignorant at all, (xvii 9) torch in the darkness at the head of the troops—and it gives light to them! Thou art sent on a mission to Djahan* at the head of the victorious army, to crush those rebels called Near'in. The bowmen of the army which is before thee amount to 1,900, the Sherden 520, the Qeheq 1,600, the Meshwesh 880—total 5,000 in (5) all, not counting their officers. There is brought thee a peace offering before thee: bread, cattle, and wine. The number of men is too great for thee, whereas the provisions are too small for them.... Thou receivest them, placed in the camp. The troops are ready and prepared. Make them quickly into portions, that of each man at his hand. The Bedouin look on (vurtively, (saying): "Sopher yodeaY"* Midday is come, the camp is hot. "Time to start! Don't let the troop commander be angry! Much marching is ahead of us. What bread have we at all? (xviii 1) Our night-quarters are far away. O Who-is-it, what does it mean, this beating of us?" So thou art an experienced scribe, if thou (canst) approach to give the provisions, (but) an hour comes into a day for lack of a scribe from the Ruler—life, prosperity, health!" "This (business of) bringing thee to beat us—it's no good, my boy! He will hear and will send to destroy thee!"

The Problem of Asiatic Geography

Thy letter abounds in cutting speeches, is loaded with big words. See, thou art rewarded with that which was sought—a greater load for thee than thou hast wished. "I am a scribe, a mahir!" they sayest again. If there be truth in what thou sayest, come out (5) that thou mayest be tested! A horse is harnessed for thee, swift as a jackal... It is like a whirlwind when it goes forth. Thou loosest the reins and takest the bow. Let us see what thy hand can do. I shall explain for thee the nature of a mahir and let thee see what he has done.

Thou hast not gone to the land of Hatti, thou hast not seen the land of Upi, Khedem, thou knowest [not] its nature, nor Yegdy either. What is it like, the Simyra of Sessi—life, prosperity, health? On which side of it is the city of Aleppo? (xix 1) What is its stream like? Thou hast not gone forth to Kadesh and Tubikhi. Thou hast not gone to the region of the Bedouin with the bowmen of the army. Thou hast [not] trodden the road to the Magur, where the sky is darkened by day and it is overgrown with cypresses and oaks and cedars which reach the heavens. Lions are more numerous than leopards or bears, (and it) is surrounded by Bedouin on (every) side of it. Thou hast not climbed the mountain of Shafel foot, thy hands (5) laid upon thy chariot laced with ropes, thy horse in tow. Pray let [me tell thee of]... beret. Thou art dismayed (at) climbing it and let thee see what he has seen. Pray, teach me about the appearance of Qiyen, let me know Rehob, explain Beth-Shan and Tirqa-El. The stream of (xxii 1) Jordan, how is it crossed? Let me know the way to pass Megiddo, which is above it.

Thou art a mahir, experienced in deeds of heroism. A mahir such as thou art should be found (able) to stride at the head of an army! O margvanu, forward to shoot! Behold, the ambuscade is in a ravine two thousand cubits deep, filled with boulders and pebbles. Thou makest a detour as thou graspest the bow. Thou makest a feint to thy left, that thou mightest make the chiefs to see, (but) their eyes are good and thy hand falters. Abata (ama ir, mahir ne'am) ? (Thus) thou makest a name for every mahir, officers of Egypt! Thy name becomes like (that of) Qazardi, the Chief of Aser, when the bear found him in the balsam tree.

The narrow valley is dangerous with Bedouin, hidden under the bushes. Some of them are of four or five cubits (from) their noses to the heel, and fierce of face. Their hearts are not mild, and they do not listen to wheedling. Thou art alone; there is no face. Their hearts are not mild, and they do not listen to wheedling. Their hearts are not mild, and they do not listen to wheedling.

Another town is in the sea, named Tyre-the-Port. Water is taken (to) it by the boats, and it is richer in fish than the sands.

Let me tell thee another difficult case—the crossing of Seram. Thou wilt say: "It burns more than a sting!" Very sick is the mahir. Come, set (me) on the way southward to the region of Acre. Where does the Achshaph road come? (5) At what town? Pray, teach me about the mountain of User. What is its head like? Where does the mountain of Shechem come? Where does the mahir make the journey to Hazor? What is its stream like? Put me (on) the track to Hamath, Deger, and Deger-El, the promenade ground of every mahir. (xxiii 1) Pray, teach me about its road and show me Yan. If one is traveling to Adummim, which way is the face? Do not shrink from thy teaching! Guide us (to) know them!

Come, that I may tell thee other towns which lie above them. Thou hast not gone to the land of Takushi, Kur-mereren, Timnat, Kadesh, Deper, Azai, or Harnaim. Thou hast not seen Kiriath-Anab and (5) Beth-Sipher. Thou dost not know Aduran or Zedpet either. Thou dost not know the name of Khenrez, which is in the land of Upi, the bull upon its boundary, the place where the battle array of every hero may have been seen. Pray, teach me about the appearance of Qiyen, let me know Rehob, explain Beth-Shan and Tirqa-El. The stream of (xxii 1) Jordan, how is it crossed? Let me know the way to pass Megiddo, which is above it.

Thou art a mahir, experienced in deeds of heroism.
scout, that he might make thee a way of (xxiv i) crossing. Thou comest to a decision by going forward, although thou knowest not the road. Shuddering seizes thee, (the hair of) thy head stands up, and thy soul lies in thy hand. Thy path is filled with boulders and pebbles, without a toe hold for passing by, overgrown with reeds, thorns, brambles, and "wolf's-paw." The ravine is on one side of thee, and the mountain rises on the other. Thou goest on jolting, with thy chariot on its side, afraid to press (5) thy horse (too) hard. If it would be left uncovered and thy girth would fall. Thou unfastenest the yoke in order to pass over the gardens. She takes thee to herself as a companion and gives thee the color of (5) her lap. (But) they put on the harness, and findest the fair maiden who is watching by the time thou findest a night-quarters. Thou seest the taste of pain!

Thou art introduced into the armory, and workshops surround thee. Craftsmen and leatherworkers are close by thee, and they do (5) all that thou hast desired. They take care of thy chariot, so that it ceases to be thine. They fix up thy yoke. They apply thy ensign, engraved (with) the chisel, to the . . . They put a knob on thy whip and fasten a lash to it. Thou goest forth quickly to fight at the pass, to accomplish deeds of heroism.

WHO-IS-15-IT, thou choice scribe, mahir (xxvii i) who knows (how to use) his hand, foremost of the nearin first of the army host, [let me relate to] thee the [foreign countries] of the end of the land of the Canaan. Thou answerest me neither good nor evil; thou returnest me no report. Come, let [me] tell thee many things as far as the Fortress of the "Ways [of Horus]." I begin for thee with the "Dwelling of Sessi—life, prosperity, health!" Thou hast not trodden it at all. Thou hast not eaten the fish of . . .; thou hast not bathed in it. Pray, let me recall to thee Husayin—where is its fortress? (5) Come now to the region of Uto of Sessi—life, prosperity, health!—in his strongholds of Ummaat-Re—life, prosperity, health!—and Seba-El, and Ibsaqab. Let me tell thee the nature of Ayaniun. Thou knowest not its rules. Nekhes and Hebrat, thou hast not seen them since thy birth. O mahir, where are they? Raphia—what is its wall like? How many iters march is it as far as Gaza? Answer quickly! Make me a report, that I may call thee mahir and boast to (xxviii i) others of thy name maryamus—so shall I speak to them.

Conclusion

Thou art angry at what [I] say to thee. (But) I am competent of heart in every office. My father taught me what he knew and instructed me a million times. I know how to take the reins—even beyond thy experience! There is no hero who can compare himself to myself. I am initiated in the service of Montu.

How damaged is everything which comes forth over thy tongue! How futile are thy speeches! Thou comest to me wrapped up in confusions, loaded down with mistakes. Thou spitest words apart in charging ahead, and thou dost not weary of fumbling. Be strong! Forward! Make haste! Thou wilt not fail. What is it like, not to know what one has attained?

Now how will this end? Should I withdraw? Behold, I have arrived! Submit thou! If (5) thy heart is heavy, (still) thy heart is composed. Do not be angry I have shorn for thee the end of thy letter, that I might answer for thee what thou hast said. Thy speeches are gathered together on my tongue and remain upon my lips. They are confused when heard, and there is no interpreter who can explain them. They are like the words of a man of the Delta marshes with a man of Elephantine.

Now thou art a scribe of the Great Double Door,

45 See n.21 above.
46 The "Ways of Horus" was applied to the fronder station for the main road across Sinai. Here it is probably the frontier post of Sile, near modern Kantarah. Cl. pp. 26, 416.
47 cf. n.30 above on "Sessi." Gardiner tentatively locates this place at Tell Halweh, a few miles northeast of Kantarah.
48 Despite some difficulties, this might be located at Tell el-Her, about a dozen miles northeast of Kantarah.
49 Uto was a goddess. The name "Uto of Sessi" corresponds to a Sinai oasis known at the time of Seth I.
50 "The Well Ibsaqab" under Seth I.
51 Perhaps the rules governing the use of water at "Two Springs."
52 These two occur as stations having water under Seth I.
53 Raphia (Rafa) is the first frontier town of Palestine, about 20 mi. southwest of Gaza. The length of an iters is not absolutely certain, but may have been six and a half miles.
54 See n.40 above.
55 God of war.
56 At the two extremities of Egypt dialectical differences were marked.
reporting the affairs of the lands, good and fair, [to him] who may see it. Thou shouldst not say: "Thou hast made my name to stink before the rabble and everybody!" See, I have told thee the nature of the mahir. I have traversed for thee the roads of foreign countries I have marshaled for thee the foreign countries all together and the towns according to their order. Pray, let thyself look at them calmly, that thou mayest find thyself (able) to recount them, that thou mayest become with us a ..

39 Papyrus Anastasi I gives tenu, probably to be emended to Rctenu "Syria-Palestine," but a Turin parallel text gives metenu . . ., perhaps 59 Here Papyrus Anastasi I breaks off. The Turin parallel continues with a few disconnected phrases.
A Sumerian Letter

TRANSLATOR: S. N. KRAMER

Letter of King Ibbi-Sin

This document is of considerable importance to the modern historian; it provides us with a lively and probably contemporary account of the troubled conditions of the last years of the Third Dynasty of Ur. It purports to be a letter addressed by Ibbi-Sin, the last ruler of the Third Dynasty of Ur, to Puzur-Numushda, the governor of Kazallu, and it refers primarily to events involving Ishbi-Irra, Ibbi-Sin’s mortal enemy and founder of the Dynasty of Isin. Its contents run approximately as follows: Following the conventional letter heading (lines 1-3) and two lines whose meaning is at present obscure (lines 4-5), we find Ishbi-Irra complaining to Puzur-Numushda that he (i.e., the latter) and a fellow governor by the name of Qirbubu had failed to come to his support at a crucial moment in the struggle with Ishbi-Irra. Ibbi-Sin then continues with an admission that Enlil, the leading deity of the Sumerian pantheon, had indeed bestowed the kingship on Ishbi-Irra, the man of Man who is not a Sumerian, and that the latter seems to be on the verge of subjugating all Sumer to his rule (lines 15-31). Nevertheless he ends the letter on a note of optimism; with the help of the Martu, Ishbi-Irra and the Elamites will be defeated and once again Sumer’s might will become known throughout the foreign lands (lines 32-38).

The text of this document is restored from three tablets excavated at Nippur and dating from the first half of the second millennium B.C. All three are now located in the University Museum. One of these tablets was published by G. A. Barton as No. 9 of his Miscellaneous Babylonian Inscriptions (1918); there, too, will be found a transliteration and translation of the text, pp. 57-59. The other two were published by Leon Lagrange as Nos. 3 and 6 of PBS, xii (1922); a transliteration and translation of their contents will be found there on pp. 28-32. The first to recognize that all three tablets contain copies of the same document was Stephen Langdon who published a partial transliteration and translation of the letter in RA, xx (1923), 49-51. But it is Adam Falkenstein who has prepared the first scientific edition of the text, including a complete transliteration, translation, and detailed commentary. Falkenstein’s study, which appeared in ZA, xlix (1949), 59-79, represents by all odds the most trustworthy effort to get at the meaning of the text, and the present translation is based primarily upon it.

To Puzur-Numushda, the governor of Kazallu; thus says your king Ibbi-Sin. ... since I have selected for you — troops (and) have put them at your disposal as the governor of Kazallu, are not, as in my case, your troops your renown? (6). Why did you send me thus: “Ishbi-Irra has seen his eyes on me, and (only) after he has left me will I come.” (10) How is it that you did not know when Ishbi-Irra will return to (his) land? (11) Why did not you together with Qirbubu, the governor of Girkal, march forth the troops which had been placed in your hand before

---

1 Unfortunately the authenticity of the contents of the document, at least as it now lies before us, is open to question. On the surface, to be sure, it seems to be a bona fide copy of a letter addressed by the king Ibbi-Sin to his governor Puzur-Numushda; the heading is in common use for letters from one individual to another. But there are several factors which tend to indicate that, at least in part, it was a literary fabrication of the later scribes.

2 Following his defeat and the destruction of Ur, the Sumerians gradually disappeared from the military and political scene.

3 One of these tablets originally contained the entire text of the letter, while the other two contained only extracts, one being inscribed with lines 1-21 and the other with lines 21-38.

4 Barton was under the impression that the text was an oracle of Ishbi-Irra.

5 Important variations from Falkenstein’s renderings will be indicated in the notes. The present writer has also had the opportunity of collating the three tablets, and the results of this collation will be noted in their place.

6 “Governor” renders the Sumerian word ensil[10], more commonly known in its Akkadian form isibη.[11]

7 Literally, “like me.”

8 Presumably, the implication of this difficult sentence is that Puzur-Numushda should have proceeded with his troops against Ishbi-Irra instead of procrastinating. Falkenstein’s rendering, which is grammatically quite as justifiable as the present translation, reads: Since I have (sent) you several troops, they stood at your disposal as governor of Kazallu. But while I was all for you, not so your troops (and) your levies.

9 The last sign in this line is miscopied; it is probably GAR.[12]

10 As Falkenstein correctly surmised, the end of line 10 reads a-gim(1) na-ne(1) di-ku.

11 Reading of last part of name is uncertain.

---
How is it that you delay to turn back? (15) ... Enlil has sent evil upon Sumer. (16) Its enemy descending from the land... , he has raised unto the shepherdship of the land. (18) Now did Enlil give the kingship to a worthless man, to Ishbi-Irra who is not of Sumerian seed. Lo, in the assembly of the gods Sumer has been prostrated. (21) Father Enlil whose commands are... , verily commanded thus: "As long as evil doers exist in Ur, Ishbi-Irra, the man of Mari, will tear down its foundations, will measure out Sumer." (25) And (so) when you have been appointed governors of the several cities, they have gone over to Ishbi-Irra in accordance with Enid's word. (27)

(13) How is it that you delay to turn back? (15) ... 20 Enlil has sent evil upon Sumer. (16) Its enemy descending from the land... , he has raised unto the shepherdship of the land. (18) Now did Enlil give the kingship to a worthless man, to Ishbi-Irra who is not of Sumerian seed. Lo, in the assembly of the gods Sumer has been prostrated. (21) Father Enlil whose commands are... , verily commanded thus: "As long as evil doers exist in Ur, Ishbi-Irra, the man of Mari, will tear down its foundations, will measure out Sumer." (25) And (so) when you have been appointed governors of the several cities, they have gone over to Ishbi-Irra in accordance with Enid's word. (27)

Lines 12, according to the original reads: a-na-ui-am  erin(I)  Iu(!)-zu-ll·gdl-la  igi(l)-zu(l)-ii  la-ba-an-sug-gi-za(l)-na(l). Falkenstein correctly surmised the reading of several of the miscopied signs.

The verb read mu-un-git; the sign A following -un- is a miscopy.

The three dots stand for a destroyed sign which may have given the name of the land.

"Land" here refers to Sumer.

In PBS, xin, No. 3, the sign u following ki-en-gi is a miscopy for PA.

Falkenstein renders this line as: Until the enemy plunders (everything) in Ur.

To judge from the context "will measure out" should denote some destructive action.

That is presumably the inhabitants of the cities.

Falkenstein translates lines 25 f. as: If he (Ishbi-Irra) sets you up (now) (Even) after you, like a... , hand over the city to the enemy and have become a faithful servant. Ishbi-Irra does not know you. (29) Now bring you (help) hither in order to restore the good word and to put an end to the false; let them perform... among its people. (32) Do not turn away; do not go against me. (33) His hand will not reach over the city; the man of Mari will not exercise lordship in accordance with (his) inimical plan. (35) For now Enlil has stirred up the Martu from out of their land; they will stride down the Elamites and capture Ishbi-Irra. With the restoration of the land to its (former) place, (its) might will become known throughout all the lands. It is urgent, do not as governors of the several cities, they (really "you") will go over to Ishbi-Irra in accordance with the word of Enlil.

That is perhaps Ishbi-Irra.

Rendering assumes that the end of line 14 of Barton, Miscellaneous Babylonian Inscriptions, No. 9 reads mu(!)-dim instead of ie-ni-nht.

That is, perhaps it means to say that Ishbi-Irra will not recognize his services to him.

That is, perhaps to Ur.

"Them" may perhaps refer to those whom he brought as help.

"His" refers to Ishbi-Irra.

The meaning of the Sumerian verb rendered as "strike down" is quite uncertain. Falkenstein, who assumes that the Elamites were allies of Ibbi-Sin, renders this same verb by "will stand at my side" and concludes that it is the Elamites who will capture Ishbi-Irra.
The Mari Letters

In 1935-38 André Parrot excavated the palace of king Zimri-Lim (about 1730-1700 B.C.) at Tell el-Hariri, ancient Mari on the Middle Euphrates. Among nearly 20,000 cuneiform tablets found in this palace were some 5,000 letters, mostly written by native Amorites (Northwestern Semites) in a Babylonian full of West-Semitic words and grammatical usages. Personal names, language and customs reflect the culture of the Patriarchal Age in Genesis. There is already a very extensive literature on the letters, only a few of the more important items of which can be listed here. The principal edition of them is in Volumes xxi ff. of Musée du Louvre: textes cunéiformes (1941-); Archives royales de Mari by G. Dossin, Charles-F. Jean, J. R. Kupper (1950-) give generally excellent translations (the first 5 parts are completely indexed in Vol. xv, 1954). For comprehensive surveys see Dossin, Syria, xix (1938), pp. 105-126; W. F. Albright, BASOR, No. 77, pp. 30 ff.; F. M. Th. Bohl, Welt des Orients, 1, pp. 187-204 (where a good bibliography and map will also be found). For historical orientation see also F. M. Th. Bohl, King Hammurabi of Babylon in the Setting of His Time (Amsterdam, 1946), and Dossin, Samši-Adad IV rot Eassyrie (Brussels, 1948). J. R. Kupper’s monograph, Un gouvernement dans le royaume de Mari (RA, XLI, 1947), pp. 149-183, provides an excellent survey of the administrative system of Mari. A very good popular account of the results of the excavations of Mari, with particular attention to the letters, will be found in George E. Mendenhall’s Mari, in the Biblical Archaeologist, xi (1948), pp. 1-19.

a
Published and translated by G. Dossin in RA, xxxv (1938), pp. 178 ff.

To my lord say: Thus Bannum, thy servant. Yesterday, (5) I departed from Mari, and spent the night at Zuruban. All the Benjamines’ raised fire-signals. (10) From Samanum to Ilum-Muluk, from Ilum-Muluk to Mishlan, all the cities of the Benjamines (15) of the Terqa district raised fire signals in response, and so far I have not ascertained the meaning of those signals. Now, I shall (20) determine the meaning, and I shall write to my lord whether it is thus or not. Let the guard of the city of Mari be strengthened, (25) and let my lord not go outside the gate.

b
Published by C. F. Jean in Archives royales de Mari, xi, No. 37, and translated in Revue des études sumériques, 1944, pp. 10 ff.; the following is fully revised.

To my lord say: Thus Ibal-Il, thy servant. The tablet of Ibal-Adad from Aslakka (5) reached me and I went to Aslakka to “kill an ass” between the Hanu and Idamaras. A “puppy and lettuce” they brought, but I obeyed my lord and (10) I did not give the “puppy and lettuce.” I caused the foal of an ass to be slain. I established peace between the Hanu and Idamaras. (15) In Hurra, in all of Idamaras, the Hanu are victorious, as a victor who has no enemy. May my lord be pleased. This tablet of mine (20) I will have delivered to my lord in Rataspatum. I will reach my lord by the third day after this tablet of mine. The camp and the Banu-Sim’āl are well.

See above, n.i.

The cuneiform barum. In later times Balaam was just such a barum: cf. JBL, lxiii (1944), p. 231 and n.141.

This expression is always in Amorite, transcribed in cuneiform hay or um qatulam (Heb. qadim ‘u); it means simply “make a treaty,” which was solemnized by the sacrifice of a young ass, much as the later Saracen’s of St. Nilus’ time sacrificed a camel.

On the meaning of these words and parallels from other ancient cultures see G. E. Mendenhall, BASOR, No. 133, pp. 26-30 (1954). The words meranum and hazzum have their ordinary Akkadian meanings.

The expression is “young ass, son of a she-ass.” Exactly the same Hebrew words are employed in the passage Zech. 9:9-Matthew 21:5.

The cuneiform text must be read hābūm qērem ḫlū; obviously referring to the bloodless victory of the Hanu (the most important tribe of Mari) over their former foes in the southeastern marches.

See above, n.i.
The Amarna Letters

In 1934, an Egyptian peasant woman discovered a collection of cuneiform tablets at Tell el-Amarna in Middle Egypt, the site of Akh-en-Aton's capital in the early fourteenth century BC. These tablets were sold to European museums and private dealers; some of them escaped attention for nearly thirty years. Subsequently excavation disclosed enough additional tablets to bring the total collection up to about 377 numbers. Almost all of them are letters belonging to the royal archives of Amen-hotep III and his son Akh-en-Aton. Nearly 300 letters were written by Canaanite (or rarely Egyptian) scribes in Palestine, Phoenicia, and southern Syria, about half of them in Palestine, proper. These letters are written in a conventional vulgar Akkadian, full of canaanitisms in grammar and vocabulary. Occasionally we find a letter written mostly in Canaanite with scattered Akkadian formulas and ideograms. They date from the last years of Amen-hotep III and the reign of his successor; a very few may date from the ephemeral reign of Akh-en-Aton's son-in-law and successor, Smenkhkare.

The original publications, though antiquated, are important for the cuneiform texts: note especially H. Winckler and C. Bezold and E. A. W. Budge, Norwegian Assyriologist, J. A. Knudtzon, in his invaluable transcription and translation, to which O. Weber added a detailed commentary and E. Ebeling a valuable glossary: Die El-Amarna-Tafeln (VAB, Vol. n), Leipzig, 1907-15. Since then the Berlin tablets were reedited admirably by O. Schroeder, Die Tontafeln von El-Amarna (Leipzig, 1915). S. A. B. Mercer's two-volume work, The Tell el-Amarna Tablets (Toronto, 1939), has no independent value and is full of errors not found in Knudtzon's edition.

Among minor publications the following will be found of particular significance: F. Thureau-Dangin, Nouvelles lettres d'el-Amarna, RA, xix, pp. 91-108; C. H. Gordon, The New Amarna Tablets, Orientalia, xvi, pp. 1-21; W. F. Albright, The Egyptian Correspondence of Abimilki, Prince of Tyre, JEA, xxiii, pp. 190-202; Albright, Cuneiform Material for Egyptian Prosopography, 1900-1200 B.C., JNES, V, pp. 7-25; Albright, various papers, mainly in BASOR, No. 86 ff. J. De Koning's monograph, Studien over de El-Amarnabrieven en het Oude Testament, inzonderheid uit historisch oogpunt (Delft, 1940), contains much material, but must be used with the greatest caution.

The translations offered below represent the combined work of W. F. Albright and George E. Mendenhall, with a few corrections by W. L. Moran, S. T. — E.D.

EA, No. 137

Rib-Ad[i spoke] to the king, [his] lord, the Sun-god of the lands. Beneath the feet of [the king, my lord,] seven times, and seven times [I fall:] (5) I have written repeatedly for [garrison troops], but they were not given, [and] the king did [not] listen to the word[s of his servant] And I sent my courier to the palace, but [he returned] (10) empty-handed—he had no garrison troops. And when the people[e ef] my [house] saw that silver was not given, they ridiculed me like the governors, my brethren, and they despised me.

Further, I (15) went to Hamuniri, and my younger brother is estranging Byblos in order to give the city to the sons of 'Abdu-Ashirta. (20) When my brother saw that my courier came out (from Egypt) empty-handed, (that) there were no garrison troops with him, he despised me, and so he committed a crime and drove me (25) from the city. Let the king not restrain (himself) at the deed of this dog!

Behold, I cannot enter the land of Egypt I am an old man, there is grievous illness (30) in my body, and the king, my lord, knows that the gods of Byblos are holy, and the illness is severe; and my sin I have redeemed (by a vow) from the gods, so I have not entered (35) the presence of the king, my lord.

But behold, my son, the servant of the king, my lord, I have sent before the king, my lord. Let the king hear the words of his servant, and let the king, my lord, give (40) archers, and let them take Byblos, lest rebellious troops and the sons of 'Abdu-Ashirta enter it, and the archers of the king, my lord, (then) need (46) to capture it (by force). Behold, many are the people who love me in the city; few are the rebels in it When an army of archers goes out and they hear (50) about the day of its arrival, then the city will return to the king, my lord. Let my lord know that I would die for him. When I am in the city, I will protect it for my lord, and my heart is fixed (55) on the king, my lord; I will not give the city to the sons of 'Abdu-Ashirta. So my brother has estranged the city in order to give it to the sons of 'Abdu-Ashirta. Let the king, my lord, not hold back from (60) the city. Verily, there is very much silver and gold within it; in its temple there is much wealth. If they take it (the city), let the king my lord do as he please with his servant, but let him give the city Buruzilim (65) for my dwelling place,—behold, I am now with Hamuniri—since there is left but one city, namely, Buruzilim. The sons of 'Abdu-Ashirta were hostile, and I was afraid. When I went to Hamuniri (70) because of the sons of 'Abdu-Ashirta when they were powerful against me and there was no breath of the mouth of the king to me, then I said to my lord: "Behold our city Byblos! There is much wealth of the king in it, the property (75) of our forefathers. If the king does not intervene for the city, all the cities of the land of Canaan will (no longer) be his. Let the king not ignore this deed!"

9 On the Hapiru (Habiru) or 'Apiru in the Mari texts see especially E. Dhorme, RB, cxix, pp. 170-187.

1 This letter was dictated by Rib-Addi, prince of Byblos, to Akh-en-Aton (Amen-hotep IV) about 1370 B.C. or a little later. The old enemy of Rib-Addi, 'Abdu-Ashirta of Amurru (land of the Amorites), was now dead, but his son, 'Aziru, and the latter's brothers continued to menace the territory of Byblos. At this time Rib-Addi had actually been forced to retire from his own city to the comparative safety of Berytus (Beirut), whose prince 'Amunnumra was related to him by marriage.

Now I have sent thy servant, my son, to the king, my lord: let the king quickly send him back (80) with troops to take the city. If the king, my lord, be gracious to me and return me to the city, then I will guard it as before for the king, my lord. If the king, my lord, does not bring me back into it, then [... ] (85) the city from Buruzilim [... ] Forsa (70) until when [shall I remain with him(?)].

(90) May [the king, my lord.] hear [the words of] his servant hastily (perhaps) and send troops quickly to take the city. Let the king not ignore (95) this grievous deed which was done to the lands of the king, my lord; but let the king rush archers to take the city immediately. (100) If it is said to the king concerning the city: "The city is strong," it is not strong against the warriors of the king, my lord.

EA, No. 147*

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god say: Thus Abimilki, thy servant. Seven and seven times I fall at the feet of the king, my lord. I am the dirt under (5) the feet of the king, my lord. My lord is the Sun-god who rises over the lands day by day, as ordained by the Sun-god, his gracious father; who gives life by his sweet breath, (10) and who lessens when he is hidden; who sets the whole land at peace by his might, who utters his battle-cry in heaven like Baal, so that the whole land quakes at his cry.

Behold, the servant has written to his lord because he has heard the gracious messenger of the king who comes to his servant, and the sweet breath which went forth (20) from the mouth of the king, my lord, to his servant (he has received); and his breath was feeble before the arrival of the messenger of the king, my lord, (but now his) breath is not feeble. I remember the words of my father: "Behold, now (25) that the breath of the king has come forth to me, I rejoice greatly, and I am happy day by day. Because I rejoice, the earth does not... (30) that I have heard the gracious messenger who (came) from my lord, and all the earth is reverent before the face of my lord, for I have heard the sweet breath, and the gracious messenger (35) who came to me. When the king, my lord, says: "Be valiant? before the great army, then the servant says, "Aye, Aye!" to his lord. On my belly, on my back (40) I bear the word of the king, my lord. As for him who hearkens to the king, his lord, and serves him in his place, the Sun-god shall rise over him, and the sweet breath from the mouth of his lord shall give him life(!); (45) but as for him who hearkens not to the word of the king, his lord, his city shall perish, his dynasty shall perish, his name shall not exist in the whole land forever. Behold, the servant who hearkens to his lord— (50) it shall be well with his city, it shall be well with his house; his name shall exist forever. Thou art the Sun-god who rises over me, and a brazen wall which is reared for me, and because of the mighty power of the king my lord (56), I am tranquil.

Behold, I have said to the Sim-god, the father of the king, my lord, "When shall I see (60) the face of the king, my lord?" But behold, I am guarding Tyre, the great city, for the king, my lord, until the mighty power of the king come out unto me, (65) to give water for me to drink, and wood to warm me.

Further: Zimreda, the king of Sidon, has written day by day to the criminal 'Aziru, the son of 'Abdu-Ashirta, concerning everything that he heard from Egypt (70) Behold, I have written to my lord, (for) it is good that you should know.

EA, No. 2344

To the king, my lord, the Sun-god from heaven: Thus Zatatna, prince of Accho, thy servant, the servant

* This letter was dictated by Abimilki (Abimelech) of Tyre to Akh-en-Aton about the same time as the previous letter, or perhaps a little later. We know from the peculiar spelling and grammar, as well as from a great many Egyptian words and expressions translated literally from Egyptian, that the scribe who wrote die Abimilki letters was himself a native Egyptian, a fact which is not surprising, since the Amarna letters from the Egyptian court to Asiatic kings and chieftains were all written by Egyptian scribes who had learned cuneiform in the palace schools.

* This is a characteristic letter from pharaoh to a Palestinian chieftain. Indrota (or Indrauta of the Rig Veda) was prince of Achshaph, probably Tell Kiana in the Plain of Arav in southwestern Galilee.

* This letter comes from the time of Akh-en-Aton. Shuta (pronounce Suta) was an Egyptian officer, probably the great-grandfather of Ramses II; of the king; and (5) the dirt (under) his two feet, the ground which he treads. At the two feet of the king, my lord, the Sun-god from heaven, seven times, seven times I fell, both prone and supine. (10) Let the king, my lord, hear the word of his servant! [Zir]damyashda has withdrawn from Biryawaza. [He was] with Shuta, the sfervant of the (15) king in the city of ______. He did not say anything to him. The army of Yashda has withdrawn from Biryawaza. [He was] with it in Megiddo. (20) I said nothing to him, but he deserted him. Behold, Accho is (as Egyptian) as Magdal (30) in Egypt, but the king, my lord, has not heard that [Shuta] has turned against me. Now let the king, my lord, send (35) his commissioner and fetch me.

EA, No. 2455

To the king, my lord, and my Sun-god, say: Thus Biridiya, the faithful servant of the (5) king. At the two feet of the king, my lord, and my Sun-god, seven and seven times I fall. Let the king know that (10) ever since the archers returned (to Egypt?), Lab’ayu has carried on hostilities against me, and we are not able to pluck the wool, and we are not able to go outside the gate in the presence of Lab’ayu, since he learned that thou hast not given (20) archers; and now his face is set to take Megiddo, (25) but let the king protect his city, lest Lab’ayu seize it (30) Verily, the city is destroyed by death from pestilence and disease. Let the king give (35) one hundred garrison troops to guard the city lest Lab’ayu seize it. Verily, there is no other purpose in (41) Lab’ayu. He seeks to destroy Megiddo.

EA, No. 2456

Further, I said to my brethren, "If the gods of the king, our lord, grant (5) that we capture Lab’ayu, then we will bring him alive to the king, our lord!"; but my mare was felled by an arrow, and I alighted (10) afterwards and rode with Yashdata, but before my arrival, they had slain him. (15) Verily, Yashdata is thy servant, and he entered the battle with me. And veily, [ ... ] (20) the life of the king, my lord [and] [ ... ] a li n [ ... ] of the king, [my] lord, [ ... ], and Zurata (25) removed Lab’ayu from Megiddo, saying to me: "I will send him by ship (30) to the king," and Zurata took him and sent him home from Hanathorn, for Zurata had received his ransom money (35) in his hand.

Further, what have I done to the king, my lord, that he should despise me and honor (40) my younger brothers? Zurata has sent Lab’ayu, and Zurata has sent Ba’lu-mihir to their homes, and let the king, my lord, be informed!

RA, xix, p. 977

To the king, my lord, and my Sun-god say: Thus Biridiya, the true servant of the king. (5) At the feet of the king, my lord, and my Sun-god, seven times and seven times I fall. Let the king be informed concerning his servant and concerning his city. (10) Behold, I am working in the town of Shunama, and I bring men of the corvee, (15) but behold, the governors who are with me do not as I (do): they do not (20) work in the town of Shunama, and they do not bring men for the corvee, but I alone (25) bring men for the corvee from the town of Yapu. They come from Shunama, and likewise from the town of Nuridba. (30) So let the king be informed concerning his city!

EA, No. 2508

To the king, my lord, say: Thus Ba’lu-UR.SAG, thy servant At the feet of the king, my lord, seven times, seven times, I fall. Let the king, my lord, know that (5) the two sons of a rebel against the king my lord, the two sons of Lab’ayu, have determined to destroy the land of the king, my lord, after their father’s death. And let the king, my lord, know that (10) many days the two sons of Lab’ayu have accused me (saying): "Why hast thou given the town of Giti-padalla into the hand of the king, thy lord—the city which Lab’ayu, our father, captured?" (15) So thus the two sons of Lab’ayu spoke to me: "Declare war against the people of die land of Qena, because they slew our father; and if you do not declare war, then we are hostile to you."

But I answered them: (20) "May the god of the king, my lord, preserve me from making war against the people of the land of Qena, the servants of the king, my lord!" Now may it be agreeable to the king, my lord, to send one of his officers to Biryawaza (25) and let him say to him: "Wilt thou march against the two sons of Lab’ayu, or art thou a rebel against the king?" And after him, let the king, my lord, send to me [ ... ] the deed (30) ‘of the king,’ thy lord, against the two sons of Lab’ayu [ ... ] Milkilu has gone in to them[ ... ] (35) ‘land of the king, my lord, with them after Milkilu and Lab’ayu died.’ (40) And thus the two sons of Lab’ayu spoke: "Be hostile to the king, thy lord, like our father, when he attacked Shunama and Burquna and Harabu, and (45) destroyed them/

---

5 This letter from the prince of Megiddo is very instructive because of the light it throws on forced labor for the king in the Plain of Esdraelon, several of whose towns and villages are mentioned. The word for ‘corvee’ is the Hebrew mat, which is employed a little later of the tribe of Issachar in this very region (Gen. 49:13).

6 The prince from whom this letter comes was in control of a district in the northern coastal plain of Palestine, south of Carmel. The death of Lab’ayu is described in EA, No. 245 (cf. n.6). Here his sons are described as continuing their father’s activities. Biryawaza, whose help is wanted to subdue the recalcitrants, was prince of Damascus (cf. n.4). Milkilu was prince of Gezer, whose territory adjoined the territory of Ba’lu-UR.SAG (‘Baal is a warrior’) on the south.
smote them. And he took Giti-rimuni, and he betrayed the helpers of the king, thy lord."

But I answered them: "The god of the king, my lord, preserve me from making (50) war against the king, my lord. The king, my lord, I serve, and my brothers who hearken to me." But the courier of Milkilu does not move from the two sons of Lab'ayu (55) a (single) day. Behold, Milkilu seeks to destroy the land of the king, my lord. But there is no other intention with me—I serve the king, my lord, and the word which the king, my lord, speaks do I hear.

EA, No. 252

To the king, my lord, say: Thus Lab'ayu, thy servant. At the feet of my lord I fall. (5) As for what thou hast written, "Are the people strong who have captured the town? How can the men be arrested?" (I reply) "By fighting was the town captured, (10) in spite of the fact that I had taken an oath of conciliation and that, when I took the oath, an (Egyptian) officer took the oath with me! The city as well as my god are captured. I am slandered/blamed (15) before the king, my lord."

Further, when (even) ants are smitten, they do not accept it (passively), but they bite the hand of the man who smites them. (20) How could I hesitate this day when two of my towns are taken?

Further, even if thou shouldst say: "(25) Fall beneath them, and let them smite thee," I should still repel my foe, the men who seized the town and (30) my god, the despoilers of my father, (yea) I would repel them.

EA, No. 254

To the king, my lord and my Sun-god: Thus Lab'ayu, thy servant, and the dirt on which thou dost tread. At the feet of the king, my lord, (5) and my Sun-god, seven times and seven times I fall. I have heard the words which the king wrote to me, and who am I that the king should lose his land (10) because of me? Behold, I am a faithful servant of the king, and I have not rebelled and I have not sinned, and I do not withhold my tribute, and I do not refuse (15) the requests of my commissioner. Now they wickedly slander me, but let the king, my lord, not impute rebellion to me!

Further, (20) my crime is namely that I entered Gezer and said publicly: (25) "Shall the king take my property, and not likewise the property of Milkilu?" I know the deeds which Milkilu has done against me.

Further, the king wrote concerning my son. I did not know that my son associates with the 'Apiru (36), and I have verily delivered him into the hand of Addaya.

EA, No. 256

To Yanhamu, my lord say: Thus Mut-ba'lu, thy servant. At the two feet of my lord I fall. How is it said (5) before thee, "Mut-ba'lu has fled, Ayab has hidden himself?" How can the prince of Pella flee from the face of the commissioner (10) of the king, his lord? As the king my lord lives, as the king my lord lives, Ayab is not in Pella. Behold, he has not been (here) for two months(?). (15) Indeed, ask Ben-ilima, ask Taduwa, ask Yashuya. Again, at the instance of (20) the house of Shulum-Marduk, the city of Ashtartu came to (my) help, when all the cities of the land of Garu were hostile, (namely) Udumu, Aduru, (25) Araru, Meshqu, Magdalu, Eni-anabu and Zarqa, and when Hayanu and Yabilima were captured.

Further, behold—after (30) thy writing a tablet to me, I wrote to him. Before thou dost arrive with thy caravan, behold, he will have reached Pella, and he will hear (thy) words.

EA, No. 270

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, say: Thus Milkilu, thy servant, (5) the dirt (under) thy feet. At the feet of the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, seven times, seven times I fall. Let the king, my lord, know (10) the deed which Yanhamu did to me after I left the presence of the king, my lord. Now he seeks (15) two thousand (shekels) of silver from my hand, saying to me: "Give me thy wife and (20) thy children, or I will smite!" Let the king know this deed, and let my lord send to me (26) chariots, and let him take me to himself lest I perish!

EA, No. 271

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, say: Thus Milkilu, thy servant, (5) the dirt (under) thy feet. At the feet of the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, seven times, seven times I fall. Let the king know (10) that powerful is the hostility against me and against Shuwardata. Let the king, my lord, protect his land (15) from the hand of the 'Apiru. If

9 This letter is written in almost pure Canaanite and was not understood until very recently; for a detailed commentary on it see BÁSQR, No. 86, pp. 29-32. Lab'ayu virtuously protests that he was only repelling aggressors who had attacked his native town (not Shechem, which was his capital) in spite of a previous treaty sworn in the presence of an Egyptian official.

10 In this letter Lab'ayu protests his innocence of all charges against him and assures the king (Amen-hotep III) that he is more loyal than the neighbors who complain against him.

11 For a detailed interpretation of this letter see BÁSQR, No. 89, pp. 7-15.

12 Mut-ba'lu (literally "Man of Baal") was prince of Pella in the northern Jordan Valley, opposite Beth-Shan; Ayab (Ayyah, Hebrew Job) was prince of Ashtartu (biblical Ashhtaroth) in Bashan. The land of Garu lay in southern Golan between Pella and Ashtartu. Yanhamu, to whom the letter is addressed, was a high Egyptian official of Canaanite (possibly of Hebrew) origin, who seems to have been the Egyptian governor of Palestine at the beginning of the reign of Akh-en-Aton.

13 Mittulu (Heb. Malchiel) was prince of Gezer. For Yanhamu see the previous letter.

14 For Milkilu see the previous letter. Shuwardata (with an Indo-Aryan name) was prince of the Hebrew region in the southern hill-country, and frequently appears in association with Milkilu. The 'Apiru (formerly called Habiru) were a strong semi-nomadic people, or rather class of population in Syria and Palestine. While there is much reason to identify them with the Hebrews of the Patriarchal Age, the combination still remains uncertain and cannot be made the basis for any historical inferences.
not, (then) let the king, my lord, send chariots (20) to fetch us, lest our servants smite us.

Further, let the king, my lord, ask (25) Yanhamu, his servant, concerning that which is done in his land.

RA, xxxi, pp. 125-136

To Milkiulu, prince of Gezer. Thus the king. Now I have sent thee this tablet to say to thee: Behold, (5) I am sending to thee Hanya, the commissioner of the archers, together with goods, in order to procure fine concubines (i.e.) weaving women: silver, gold, (linen) garments, (10) turquoise, all (sorts of) precious stones, chairs of ebony, as well as every good thing, totalling 160 deben. Total: 40 concubines: the price of each concubine is 40 (shekels) of silver. (15) So send very fine concubines in whom there is no blemish. (19) And let the king, thy lord, say to thee, "This is good. To thee life has been decreed." And mayest thou know that (25) the king is well, like the Sun-god. His troops, his chariots, his horses are very well. Behold, the god Amon has placed the upper land, (30) the lower land, the rising of the sun, and the setting of the sun under the two feet of the king.

EA, No. 286

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, say: Thus Shuwardata, (5) thy servant, the dirt (under) thy feet! At the feet of the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, seven times, seven times, I fall! (9) The king, my lord, sent me to make war against Keilah. I have made war (and) I was successful; my town has been restored (15) to me. Why did 'Abdu-Heba write to the people of Keilah (saying): "Take (my) silver and (20) follow me!" And let the king, my lord, know that 'Abdu-Heba had taken the town from me.

Further, (25) let the king, my lord, investigate; if I have taken a man or a single ox or an ass from him, then he is in the right! (30) Further, Lab'ayu is dead, who seized our towns; but behold, 'Abdu-Heba is another Lab'ayu, and (35) he (also) seizes our towns! So let the king take thought for his servant because of this deed! And I will not do anything until the king sends back a message to his servant.

RA, xix, p. 106

To the king, my lord, my Sun-god, my pantheon, say: Thus Shuwardata, thy servant, servant of the king (5) and the dirt (under) his two feet, the ground (on) which thou dost tread! At the feet of the king, my lord, the Sun-god from heaven, seven times, seven times I fall, both (10) prone and supine.

Let the king, my lord, learn that the chief of the 'Apiru has risen (in arms) against the lands which the god of the king, my lord, gave me; (16) but I have smitten him. Also let the king, my lord, know that all my brethren have abandoned me, and (20) it is I and 'Abdu-Heba (who) fight against the chief of the 'Apiru. And Zurata, prince of Accho, and Indaruta, prince of Achshaph, it was they (who) hastened (25) with fifty chariots—for I had been robbed by the 'Apiru—to my help; but behold, they are fighting against me, so let it be agreeable to the king, my lord, and (30) let him send Yanhamu, and let us make war in earnest, and let the lands of the king, my lord, be restored to their (former) limits!

EA, No. 286

To the king, my lord, say: Thus 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant At the two feet of my lord, the king, seven times and seven times I fall. (5) What have I done to the king, my lord? They blame me before the king, my lord (saying): "'Abdu-Heba has rebelled against the king, his lord." Behold, as for me, (it was) not my father (10) and not my mother (who) set me in this place; the arm of the mighty king brought me into the house of my father! Why should I commit transgression against the king, my lord? As long as the king, my lord, lives, I will say to the commissioner of the king, my lord, "Why do ye favor the 'Apiru and oppose the governors?"—And thus (21) I am blamed in the presence of the king, my lord. Because it is said, "Lost are the lands of the king, my lord," thus am I blamed to the king, my lord! (25) But let the king, my lord, know that (when) the king had established a garrison, Yanhamu took 'it all' away, [and . . . ] the troops! (30) [of archers (?) . . . ] the land of Egypt [ . . . ] O king, my lord, there are no garrison troops (here)! [So] let the king take care of his land! (35) Let the king take care of his land! [The land]s of the king have all rebelled; Ilimilku is causing the loss of all the king's land. So let the king take care of his land! I keep saying, "Let me enter (40) into the presence of the king, my lord, and let me see the two eyes of the king, my lord." But the hostility against me is strong, so I cannot enter into the presence of the king, my lord. So may it please the king (45) to send me garrison troops in order that I may enter and see the two eyes of the king, my lord. As truly as the king, my lord, lives, when the commissioners go forth I will say, "Lost are the lands of the king! (50) Do you not hearken unto me? All the governors are lost; the king, my lord, does not have a (single) governor (left)!"

Let the king turn his attention to the archers, and let the king, my lord, send out (55) troops of archers, (for) the king has no lands (left)! The 'Apiru plunder all the lands of the king. If there are archers (here) in this year, the lands of the king, my lord, will remain (intact); but if there are no archers (here) (60) the lands of the king, my lord, will be lost!

To the scribe of the king, my lord: Thus 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant Present eloquent words to the king, my lord.—All the lands of the king, my lord, are lost!

EA, No. 287

[To the king, my lord, [say:] 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant [At the feet] of my lord seven times and seven times I fall.] [Let my king] [know (?) this] matter! [Milkilu and Tagu (?)] (5) have caused [their troops (?)] to enter [the town of Rubutu (?)] [Behold] the deed which [Milkilu (?)] has done; [bows] (and) copper arrows [ . . . he has given (?) . . .] word [ . . . (10) . . .] into the town of [Rubutu (?)] they brought in. Let my king know that all the lands are at peace (but that) there is war against me. So let my king take care of his land!

Behold the land of Gezer, the land of Ashkelon, (15) and 'Lachish;[.]they have given them grain, oil, and all their requirements; and let the king (thus) take care of his archers! Let him send archers against the men who transgress against the king, my lord. (20) If there are archers (here) in this year, then the lands and the governor(s) will (still) belong to the king, my lord; [but] if there are no archers, the lands and the governors will (no longer) belong to the king! (25) Behold this land of Jerusalem: (It was) not my father (and) not my mother (who) gave (it) to me, (but) the arm of the mighty king (which) gave (it) to me.

Behold, this deed is the deed of Milkilu (30) and the deed of the sons of Lab'ayu who have given the land of the king to the 'Apiru. Behold, O king, my lord, I am right!

With reference to the Nubians, let my king ask the commissioners whether his house is (not) very strong! (35) Yet they attempted a very great crime; they took their implements and breached . . . of the roof. [If]

18 In this letter the prince of Jerusalem complains about a number of events which recur in other letters. In the first place he excoriates Milkilu of Gezer and Tagu of the northern Coastal Plain of Palestine for their aggression against Rubutu, which lay somewhere in the region southwest of Megiddo and Taanach. In the second place he urges the king to instruct his officers to supply the Egyptian archers from the towns of the Philistine Plain and Sharon (in order to avert heavy drain on the scanty supplies of Jerusalem). He goes on to complain that the Nubian (biblical Cushite) slave-troops (or mercenaries) of Egypt, stationed as garrison in Jerusalem, had burglarized the residence of 'Abdu-Heba himself, nearly killing the prince in his own house. He finally complains that his last caravan containing tribute and captives for the king was attacked and robbed near Ajalon, presumably by the men of Milkilu of Gezer and the sons of Lab'ayu.

they send into the land [of Jerusalem] 'troops', let them come up with [an (Egyptian) officer (40) for] (regular) service. Let [my king] take heed for them—for [all] the lands are impoverished by them—and let my king requisition for them much grain, much oil, (and) much clothing, (45) until Pawure, the royal commissioner, comes up to the land of Jerusalem.

Addaya has left, together with the garrison (and) the (Egyptian) officer which my king had given (me). Let the king know! Addaya spoke to me, (saying,) (50) [Loo]k, let me go, (but) do not thou leave it (the city)! So send me a garrison this [year], and send me a commissioner likewise, O my king. I have sent [gifts (?)] to the king, my lord: [ . . . ] captives, five thousand [silver (shekels)] (55) and eight porters for the caravans of the king, my lord; (but) they were captured in the plain of Ajalon. Let the king, my lord, know that I cannot send a caravan to the king, my lord. For thy information!

(60) Behold, the king has set his name in the land of Jerusalem for ever; so he cannot abandon the lands of Jerusalem!

To the scribe of the king, my lord, (65) say: Thus 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant. At thy two feet I fall—thy servant am I! Present eloquent words to the king, my lord. I am (only) a petty officer of the king; (70) I am more insignificant (?) than thou!

But the men of the land of Nubia have committed an evil deed against (me); I was almost killed by the men of the land of Nubia (75) in my own house. Let the king [call] them to (account). Seven times and seven times let the [king,] my lord, [avenge (?)] me!

EA, No. 288

To the king, my lord, my Sun-god, say: Thus 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant. At the two feet of the king, my lord, seven times and seven times I fall. (5) Behold the king my lord, has set his name at the rising of the sun, and at the setting of the sun! (It is) vile what they have done against me. Behold, I am not a governor (10) (nor even a) petty officer of the king, my lord; behold, I am a shepherd of the king, and a bearer of the royal tribute am I. It was not my father (and) not my mother, (but) the arm of the mighty king (which) placed me in the house of my father. [ . . . ] came to me [ . . . ] I delivered ten slaves [into his] hand. Shuta, the royal commissioner, came (20) to me. Twenty-one maidens (and) eighty captives I delivered into the hand of Shuta as a gift for the king, my lord. Let my king take thought for his land! The land of the king is lost; in its entirety (25) it is taken from me; there is war against me, as far as the lands of Seir (and) as far as Gath-carmel! All the governors are at peace, but there is war against me. I have become like an 19 This letter continues the complaints of the previous letter, and incidentally paints a vivid picture of the anarchic condition of the country early in the reign of Akh-en-Aton. The references to "the very gate of Sile (Zillu)" mean that the outreaches against the pax Aegyptiaca extend to the frontiers of Egypt itself, near modern Qantarah.

'Apiru (30) and do not see the two eyes of the king, my lord, for there is war against me. I have become 'Apiru (30) and do not see the two eyes of the king, the land of Cush, but now the 'Apiru capture the cities of the king. There is not a single governor (remaining) (40) to the king, my lord—all have perished! Behold, 'Turbagu has been slain in the (very) gate of Sile, (yet) the king holds his peace. Behold Zimreda, the townsman of Lachish has smitten him, slaves who had become 'Apiru. (45) Yaptih-Hadad has been slain [in] the (very) gate of Sile, (yet) the king holds his peace. [Wherefore] does not [the king] call them to account? [So] let the king take care of his land; [and I]et the king decide, and let the king send (50) archers to his land! [But] if there are no archers (here) this year, let the king send archers to his brothers, and we shall die near the king, our lord! of the king, my lord, has been lost, and (that) all of the governors have perished! If there are no archers (here) this year, let the king send a commissioner, and let him send me (60) to himself (!) together with (my) brothers, and we shall die near the king, our lord! [To] the scribe of the king, my lord: [Thus] 'Abdu-Heba, (thy) servant. At [thy (?)] two feet I fall. Present eloquent words (65) [. . .] to the king, [thy lord!] thy servant [and] thy son am I.

To the king, my lord, [say]: Thus 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant At the two feet of my lord, the king, seven times and seven times I fall (5) Behold the deed which Milkilu and Shuwardata did to the land of the king, my lord! They rushed troops of Gezer, troops of Gath (10) and troops of Keilah; they took the land of Rubutu; the land of the king went over to the 'Apiru people. But now even (15) a town of the land of Jerusalem, Bit-Lahmi by name, a town belonging to the king, has gone over to the side of the people of Keilah. Let my king hearken to 'Abdu-Heba, thy servant, (20) and let him send archers to recover the royal land for the king! But if there are no archers, the land of the king will pass over to the 'Apiru people. (25) This was done at the command of Milkilu [and at] the command of Shuwardata (?) . . . So let my king (30) take care of [his] land!

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god say: Thus Ba'lu-shipti, thy servant, the dirt (under) thy two feet. (5) At the feet of the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, seven times, seven times I fall. I have looked this way, and I have looked that way, (10) but it was not bright. I looked toward the king, my lord, and it was bright A brick may move from beneath its companions, (15) but I will not move from beneath the two feet of the king, my lord. I have heard the words, which the king, my lord, wrote to his servant: (20) "Guard thy commissioner, and guard the cities of the king, thy lord." Behold, I guard, and behold, I hearken day (25) and night to the words of the king, my lord. But let the king, my lord, learn concerning his servant, (that) there is hostility against me from the mountains, so I have built (30) a house—Manhatu is its name—in order to make ready before the archers of the king, my lord; but Maya took it from my hands, and installed (35) his commissioner within it. So command Reanap, my commissioner, to restore the city to my hands, that I may make ready for (40) the archers of the king, my lord.

Further, behold the deed of Peya, the son of Gulate, against Gezer, the maidservant of the king, my lord, how many days he plundered it, so that it has become an empty cauldron because of him. From the mountains (50) people are ransomed for dirty (shekels) of silver, but from Peya for one hundred (shekels) of silver; so know these words of thy servant!

EA, No. 297”

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sim-god, say: Thus Yapahu, thy servant, the dirt (under) ry two feet. (5) At the feet of the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, seven times, seven times, I fall. Everything which the king, my lord, said to me (10) I have heard most attentively.

Further: I have become like an empty bronze cauldron (because of) the debt (15) at the hands of the Sutu, but now I have heard the sweet breath of the king, and it goes out (20) to me, and my heart is very serene.

EA, No. 298”

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, the Sun-god of heaven. Thus Yapahu, the prince of (5) Gezer, the dirt (under) thy two feet, the groom of thy horse. At the two feet of the king, my lord (10) the Sun-god of heaven, seven dmes and seven times I fall, both prone and supine; and everything (15) which the king, my lord, commands me I hear very attentively. A servant of the king am I, and the dirt of thy two feet. (20) Let the king my lord know that my youngest brother is estranged from me, and has entered (25) Muhhazu, and has given his two hands to the chief of the 'Apiru. And now the [land of . . . ]anna is hostile to me. (30) Have concern for thy land! Let my lord write to his commissioner concerning this deed.

EA, No. 32028

To the king, my lord, my pantheon, my Sun-god, the Sun-god of heaven: Thus (5) Widia, the prince of Ashkelon, thy servant, the dirt (under) thy feet, the groom of thy horse. (10) At the feet of the king, my lord, seven times and seven times verily I fall, both prone and (15) supine.

Now I am guarding the place of the king which is with me, and whatever the king, my lord, has sent to me (20) I have heard very attentively. Who is the dog that does not hear to the words of the king, his lord, (25) the son of the Sun-god?

Let the king send to Birashshena say: Thus Baniti-[ . . . ]. From three years ago until now (5) thou hast caused me to be paid. Is there no grain nor oil nor wine which thou canst send? What is my offense that thou hast not paid me? (10) The children who are with me continue to learn.

To Rewashsha say: Thus Guli-Adad. Live well! (5) The children who are with me continue to learn. (10) The children who are with me continue to learn.

EA, No. 32029

The name Rewashsha is Indo-Aryan. 29 For a detailed study of this letter and the other letters found by Ernst Sellin at Taanach, see BASOR, No. 86, pp. 28-31. The letter was published by F. M. Th. Böhl, ZDPV, ii, pp. 321-27. The name Rewashsha is Indo-Aryan.

For this letter and its interpretation see BASOR, No. 87, pp. 32-38. It vividly characterizes the atmosphere of mutual suspicion and treachery which prevailed in Palestine in the early part of Akh-en-Aton's reign. Zimreda was prince of Lachish (Tell ed-Duweir) and Shipti-ba'lu was to succeed him in that capacity. As shown by his name, Pa'pu was an Egyptian official, perhaps the local commissioner at Lachish. 29 For a detailed study of this letter and the other letters found by Ernst Sellin at Taanach, see BASOR, No. 94, pp. 12-27. The tablets were first published, with some photographs, by F. Hrozný in Tell Tdanna (Denkschriften der Kaiserlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften, Phil-hist. Klasse, i, Vienna, 1904, Part iv), pp. 113 ff., and in Eine Nachlese auf dem Tell Tdanna, in Palastina (Denkschriften, liii, 1906, Part m), pp. 36 ff. They unquestionably belong to the fifteenth century B.C., and they may be dated roughly about three generations before the bulk of the Amarna Tablets. Rewashsha was prince of Taanach; his Egyptian name illustrates the extent of Egyptian penetration about a century after the initial conquest. The word here rendered "wizard" is Akkadian ummunu, which passed into Hebrew as ommanu and into later Phoenician as ummanu, always with the general sense of "learned, skilled man, expert." The diviners of Asherah appear in the time of Elijah (1 Kings 18:19 ff.) as "prophets of Asherah": they also figure in the Baal Epic of Ugarit.
Aramaic Letters

TRANSLATOR: H. L. GINSBERG

Letters of the Jews in Elephantine

"THE PASSOVER PAPYRUS"

A very defective strip of papyrus with writing on both sides. Text: Sachau, 6; Ungnad, 6; Cowley, 21. Date: 419 B.C.

[To] my brethren Yedo[niah]1 and his colleagues the Jewish garrison,2 your brother Hana[niah].3 The welfare of my brothers may God seek at all times.4

Now, this year, the fifth year of King Darius, word was sent from the king to Arsames5 saying, "Authorize a festival of unleavened bread for the Jews,6: This is the 14th at sundown until the 21st of Nisan. Bring into your closets anything you may have on hand and seal it up between those dates. By order of King Darius.

To my brethren Yedoniah and the Jewish garrison, your brother Hananiah.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE CULT OF YAHÔ

A very broad sheet of papyrus with 7 columns of Aramaic; traces of palimpsest. Text: Sachau, 17-19; Ungnad, 19; Cowley, 2i. Date: 419 or 400 B.C.7 See the special study of U. Cassuto in Kedem, 1, pp. 47-52.

On the 3rd of Phamenoth,8 year 5. This is the names of the Jewish garrison which (sic!) gave money to the God Yaho, [2 shekels] each.

(Lines 2-119, 120-135 name 123 contributors of both sexes.)

(120-125) Cash on hand with Yedoniah the son of Gemariah on the said day of the month of Phamenoth: 31 'arash, 8 shekels. Comprising: for Yaho 12 J, 6 sh.;9 for Ishunbethel10 7 l.; for Anarthbel10 12 J.

1A priest and head of the Jewish community (military colony) of Elephantine.
2 Apparently a secretary for Jewish affairs to Arsames. See n.4.
3 Literally "the gods," but with Hananiah this is obviously nothing but a fossilized formula.
4 Satrap of Egypt from 455/4 to at least 407.
5 The word πασχα in two ostraca from Elephantine may mean "passover (offering)." See Sukenik and Kutsher, Kedem, 1 (1942), 53-56.
6 This restoration is only correct if Hananiah's tradition, like rabbinic law, included under "leaven" fermented grain but not fermented fruit (wine). The Samaritans take a more rigorous view.
7 Depending on whether the fifth year is that of Darius II or of the native Egyptian king Amertarces (cf. Cowley, 35).
8 A month in the Egyptian calendar.
9 Since 1 kprash = 20 (light) shekels, this is the correct total for 123 contributions of 2 shekels each. The monies for the other two deities were settled of claim by oath

Ostracon. Published by A. Dupont-Sommer, RHR, cxxviii (1944), 28-39. The sender's name, Yehu, resembles the Palmyrene personal name Yhy, which in turn is connected with that of the Palmyrene god Yrbhl. His Aramean nationality is also betrayed by the gods he invokes, Mesopotamian deities favored by Arameans.

To my brother Haggai, your brother Yarho. The welfare of my brother (may) Bel and Nabu, Shamash and Nergal (seek at all times).

LETTER FROM ONE JEW TO ANOTHER OF SUPERIOR STATION

Ostracon. Published by A. Dupont-Sommer, RHR, cxxx (1945), 17-28.

To my lord Micaiah, your servant Giddel. I send you welfare and life. I bless you by Yaho and Khnub, Shamash and Nergal (seek at all times).

PETITION FOR AUTHORIZATION TO REBUILD THE TEMPLE OF YAHÔ

A well-preserved papyrus with writing on both sides, apparently a copy of one sent to Jerusalem. Text: Sachau, 1-2; doubtless contributed by non-Jews, Yedoniah (see n.1) acting as treasurer or banker for all the Arameans of Elephantine.

a Male divinity.
10 Probably female divinity.
11 A famous male deity of Elephantine. If the completion is erroneous, the writer in any case invokes another deity besides Yaho.
To our lord Bagas, governor of Judah, your servants Yedoniah and his colleagues, the priests who are in the fortress of Elephantine. May the God of Heaven seek after the welfare of our lord exceedingly at all times and give you favor before King Darius and the nobles and healthy at all times. Now, your servant Yedoniah and his colleagues depose as follows: In the month of Tammuz in the 14th year of King Darius, when Arsames (5) departed and went to the king, the priests of the god Khnub, who is in the fortress of Elephantine, conspired with Vidaranag, who was commander-in-chief here, to wipe out the temple of the god Yaho from the fortress of Elephantine. So that wretch Vidaranag sent to his son Nefayan, who was in command of the garrison of the fortress of Syene, this order, "The temple of the god Yaho in the fortress of Yeb is to be destroyed." Nefayan thereupon led the Egyptians with the other troops. Coming with their weapons to the fortress of Elephantine, they entered that temple and razed it to the ground. The stone pillars that were there they smashed. Five (10) "great" gateways built with hewn blocks of stone which were in that temple they demolished, but their doors are standing, and the hinges of those doors are of bronze; and their roof of cedar-wood, all of it, with the... and whatever else was there, everything they burnt with fire. As for the basins of gold and silver and other articles that were in that temple, they carried all of them off and made them their own.—Now, our forefathers built this temple in the fortress of Elephantine back in the days of the kingdom of Egypt, and when Cambyses came to Egypt he destroyed it. They knocked down all the temples of the gods of Egypt, but no one did any damage to this temple. (15) But when this happened, we and our wives and our children wore sackcloth, and fasted, and prayed to Yaho the Lord of Heaven, who has let us see our desire upon that Vidaranag. The dogs took the fetter out of his feet, and any property he had gained was lost; and any men who have sought to do evil to this temple have all been killed and we have seen our desire upon them.—We have also sent a letter before now, when this evil was done to us, (to) our lord and to the high priest Johanan and his colleagues the priests in Jerusalem and to Ostanes the brother of Anani and the nobles of the Jews. Never a letter have we sent to you. Also, from the month of Tammuz, year 14 of King Darius, to this day, we have been wearing sackcloth and fasting, making our wives as widows, not anointing ourselves with oil or drinking wine. Also, from then to now, in the year 17 of King Darius, no meal-offering, in[cen]se, nor burnt offering have been offered in this temple. Now your servants Yedoniah, and his colleagues, and the Jews, the citizens of Elephantine, all say thus: If it please our lord, take thought of this temple to rebuild it, since they do not let us rebuild it. Look to your well-wishers and friends here in Egypt. Let a letter be sent from you to them concerning the temple of the god Yaho (25) to build it in the fortress of Elephantine as it was built before; and the meal-offering, incense, and burnt offering will be offered in your name, and we shall pray for you at all times, we, and our wives, and our children, and the Jews who are here, all of them, if you do thus, so that that temple is rebuilt. And you shall have a merit before Yaho the God of Heaven more than a man who offers to him burnt offering and sacrifices worth a thousand talents of silver and (because of) gold. Because of this we have written to inform you. We have also set the whole matter forth in a letter in our name to Delaiah and Shelemiah, the sons of Sanballat the governor of Samaria. Also, Arsames knew nothing of all that was done to us. On the 20th of Marcheshvan, year 17 of King Darius.

ADVICE OF THE GOVERNORS OF JUDAH AND SAMARIA TO THE JEWS OF ELEPHANTINE

Text: Sachau, 4; Ungnad, 3; Cowley, 32.

Memorandum of what Bagas and Delaia said to me: Let this be an instruction to you in Egypt to say before Arsames about the house of offering of the God of Heaven which had been in existence in the fortress of Elephantine since ancient times, before Cambyses, and was destroyed by that wretch Vidaranag in the year 14 of King Darius: to rebuild it on its site as it was before, and the meal-offering and incense to be made on (10) that altar as it used to be.

PETITION BY ELEPHANTINE JEWS, PERHAPS TO ARSAMES

Text: Sachau, 4; Ungnad, 4; Cowley, 33.

Your servants Yedoniah the son of Ge[mariah] by name 1, Ma'uzi the son of Nathan by name 1, She[maiah the son of Haggai by name 1, Hosea the son of Yatom by name 1, (5) Hosea the son of Nathan by name 1, 5 men in all, Syenians who [hold proper[ty] in the fortress of Elephantine, say as follows: If your lordship is [favo]rable, and the temple of our[God Yaho [is rebuilt] in the fortress of Elephantine as it was for[merly built], (10) and n[o] sheep, ox, or goat are offered there as burnt offering, but (only) incense, meal-offering, [and drink-offering], and (if) your lordship giv[es] orders [to that effect, then] we shall pay into your lordship's house the s[um o]f... and a thousand] ar[abs of barley.

12 410 B.C. 13 So emend according to Cowley, 319.
14 Perhaps a mistake for "his feet out of the fetter."
15 No doubt the Johanan of Neh. 12:22, 23.
16 Perhaps the Anani of I Chron. 3:24; if Ostanes is an alternative name of one of the brothers mentioned there, or if "brother" here means merely "kinsman."
17 407 B.C.
18 Erro[neous anticipation of the following "because of." cf. also M. Vogelstein, JQR, xxxiv (1942), 89-92.
19 The well-known contemporary of Nehemiah.
20 The Mazdean Arsames was likely to react more favorably if no mention was made of burnt offering, since it involved the profaning of fire by contact with dead bodies.
21 See preceding note.
X. Miscellaneous Texts
The Authority of Ancient Documents

The Egyptians had a strong sense of past dignity and accomplishment, so that they constantly invoked the authority of previous times in order to give sanction to the present. In literature of various kinds, a frequent statement emphasized the fidelity of previous times in order to give sanction to the present. In the medical papyri, in which the prescriptions were given authority through the claim that there had been discovered an old document which went back to the days of Egypt's first dynasties, and which was also related to the gods or the temples. Thus an anatomical treatise in the Ebers medical papyrus was emphasized as:

BEING WHAT WAS FOUND IN WRITING UNDER THE FEET OF ANUBIS IN LETOPOLIS. IT WAS BROUGHT TO THE MAJESTY OF THE KING OF UPPER AND LOWER EGYPT: USAPHAIS, the triumphant.2

Similarly a section in the Berlin Medical Papyrus:

which was found among old writings in a box containing documents under the feet of Anubis in Letopolis in the time of (King) Usaphais... It was brought to the majesty of (King) Senedj, because of its efficacy.3

It was comforting to a man suffering from the itch to know that the prescription for his ailment had been "found during an inventory in the Temple of Wen-nofer," that is, Osiris.4 That has a matter-of-fact sound, but sometimes the claim bore a miraculous character, as in a remedy credited to the goddess Isis:

This remedy was found in the night, fallen into the court of the temple in Koptos, as a mystery of this goddess, by a lector-priest of this temple, when this land was in darkness, and it was the moon which shone upon every side of this scroll. It was brought as a marvel to the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Khufu, the triumphant.5

For praise of the sages of the past, see the passage on p. 415 above.

For the recopying of an older text, see the Memphite Theology on p. 4 above. For pious forgeries, cast back into the past, see the discussions of the two legends on pp. 29 and 31.

1 For example, pp. 22, 414, 418.
2 G. Ebers, Papyri Ebers (Leipzig, 1875). > ciii 1-2. This papyrus has been rendered into English by B. Eibell, The Papyri Ebers (Copenhagen and London, 1937). The manuscript dates from the early 18th dynasty (16th century B.C.), while Usaphais was a king of the 1st dynasty (perhaps 31st-30th century B.C.). The phrase "under his feet" puts the original document in the direct charge of an image of a god in his temple.
3 Berlin Pap. 3038, xv 1-4; W. Wreszinski, Der grosse medizinische Papyrus des Berliner Museums (Leipzig, 1909), 33. Senedj was of the 2nd dynasty (perhaps 29th-27th century B.C.).
5 British Museum Papyrus 10059. > cv 11-13; W. Wreszinski, Der Landemer medizinischer Papyrus des British Museum (Leipzig, 1912). 149. This papyrus is perhaps of the 21st dynasty (21st-20th century B.C.), Khufu of the 4th dynasty (27th-26th century B.C.).

The Interpretation of Dreams

A recently discovered hieratic papyrus gives a reference book for the interpretation of dreams. A few examples—out of more than two hundred—will show the nature of these interpretations. Very commonly the principle of similars is used, either similars of sound, that is, puns, or similars of situation, like the dreams which Joseph interpreted* (See Addenda).

The physical arrangement of the text is distinctive. The words, “if a man see himself in a dream,” are written once for each column of various dreams. Set in a column over against each dream is the word “good” or the word “BAD” (written in red), followed by the meaning of the dream.

The manuscript presumably comes from Thebes, and is dated to the Nineteenth Dynasty (about 1300 B.C.), although the editor cites evidence that its material may derive from the Twelfth Dynasty (2000-1800 B.C.). Papyrus Chester Beatty III, now British Museum 10683, extracts from recto, i-xi. Published in Hieratic Papyri in the British Museum. Third Series. Chester Beatty Gift, ed. by A. H. Gardiner (London, 1935), 1, 9-23; PIs. 5-8.

If a man see himself in a dream:

(iii 4) white bread being given to him— good: it means things at which his face will light up.1

(iv 3) seeing a large cat— good: it means a large harvest will come [to him.]2

(v 19) plunging into the river— good: it means cleansing from all evils.

(22) [seeing the] moon as it shines— good: forgiveness to him by his god.

(vii 11) seeing his face in a mirror— BAD: it means another wife.3

(13) seeing himself with a pain in his side— BAD: taking something away from him.

(28) seeing the catching of birds— BAD: it means taking away his property.4

(viii 5) looking into a deep well— BAD: putting him into prison.

For an indication that the Egyptians divined through an observation of the stars and the winds, see p. 377 above.

1 Pun: hedj “white,” and hedj “light up.”
2 Pun: miu “large cat,” and shemu “large harvest.”
3 Gardiner, the editor of the text, explains: “to see one’s face in a mirror is to discover a second self, which second self must naturally have a wife.”
4 Pun: ham “catching,” and nehem “taking away.”
Sumerian Love-Song

TRANSLATOR: S. N. KRAMER

Love-Song to a King

This little poem seems to be a love-song dedicated to Shu-Sin, the fourth ruler of the Third Dynasty of Ur, who reigned sometime about 2000 B.C. It was probably composed by a woman who belonged to the priestly order known as luḫur by the Sumerians and nattu4 by the Akkadians. Only one tablet inscribed with the poem has as yet been found; it was excavated in Nippur and dates from the first half of the second millennium B.C. Its text was copied and published by Edward Chiera as No. 23 of his Sumerian Religious Texts (1924). Only recently a scientific edition of the composition, including transliteration, translation, and commentary, was published by A. Falkenstein in Die Welt Des Orients (1947), 43-50.

'She gave birth to him who is pure, she gave birth to him who is pure,
The queen gave birth to him who is pure,
Abisimiti5 gave birth to him who is pure,
The queen gave birth to him who is pure.
O my (queen) who is favored of limb, my Abisimiti,
O my (queen) who is . . . d of head, my queen
Dabbatum,5
O my (lord) who is . . . d of hair, my lord Shu-Sin,'

1 The poem is written in the Emešal dialect of Sumerian, which is known to have been reserved for female deities, and no doubt also for priestesses.
2 Practically nothing is known of the specific duties of this priestly class, but cf. n. 4 below.
3 By and large our poem seems to consist of a number of four-line strophes, thus: lines 1-4, 5-8, 9-12, 15(?)-18(?), 19-22, and 23-26(?); difficult to fit in are lines 13-14 and line 27. The logical relationship between the various strophes, however, is not too clear. Thus the first strophe sings of the birth of Shu-Sin by Abisimiti; the second strophe seems to contain exclamatory lines exalting Shu-Sin, his mother Abisimiti, and perhaps his wife Dabbatum; in the third strophe the poet-priestess sings of the gifts presented her by Shu-Sin. The six partially destroyed lines which follow seem to contain a two-line plea to Shu-Sin and four exclamatory lines exalting the king. In the next four-line strophe the poetess probably sings temptingly of strong drink and sexual love. The last lines again seem to be exclamatory in character and leave one with the feeling that the poem is incomplete, unless perhaps we are to understand that die strophe contained in lines 19-22 was intended to be repeated after line 27.
4 Since "him who is pure" refers to Shu-Sin, our poem provides us with the name of King Shu-Sin's mother and of King Shulgi's wife (or, rather one of his wives); cf. n. 7 below.
5 Dabbatum who is addressed in this line by the poetess as "my queen," is probably the name of a luluḫur-priestess who may have become one of Shu-Sin's wives. In the excavations carried on in Erech before the war, there was found a precious necklace one of whose beads was inscribed with the words "Dabbatum, the luluḫur-priestess of Shu-Sin"; cf. Falkenstein's interesting comment, and particularly his suggestion that one of the duties of the luluḫur-priestess was to participate in a hieros-gamos with the divine king, as representative of the goddess whom she served (loc. cit., pp. 46 and 50).
6 The king's name is preceded by the god-determinative throughout the poem.

O my (lord) who is . . . of word, my son of Shulgi;4
Because I uttered it, because I uttered it, the lord gave me a gift,
Because I uttered a cry of joy, the lord gave me a gift,
A pendant of gold, a seal of lapis lazuli, the lord gave me as a gift,
A ring of gold, a ring of silver, the lord gave me as a gift.
O lord, thy gift is brimful of . . ., [lift] thy face[6] unto me,
O Shu-Sin, thy gift is brimful of . . ., [lift] thy face unto me."

... [l]ord... [l]ord . . .

Like her date wine sweet is her vulva, sweet is her date wine,
It lies at thy feet like a lion-cub, O son of Shulgi.10
O my god, of the wine-maid,10 sweet is her date wine,
Like her date wine sweet is her vulva, sweet is her date wine,
Sweet is her diluted drinks her date wine.
O my Shu-Sin who hast favored me, O my (Shu-Sin) who hast favored me, who hast fondled me,
O my Shu-Sin who hast favored me, O my beloved of Enlil, (my) Shu-Sin,
O my king, the god of his land!
It is a bedde of Bau.14

7 The poem provides us with the significant information that, in spite of the Sumerian King List, Shu-Sin, the fourth king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, is not the son of Bur-Sin, his immediate predecessor, but his brother, and that both Bur-Sin and Shu-Sin are the sons of Shulgi; cf. Falkenstein, loc. cit., p. 45.
8 Perhaps "eye" instead of "face" in this and the next line.
9 The punctuation assumes that lines 13-14 form a couplet and that lines 15-18 contain another four-line strophe; cf. n. 3 above.
10 The text does not have the expected "my" before "son of Shulgi."
11 Falkenstein may be right in suggesting that the "wine-maid" refers to the priestess herself.
12 The first two signs are hardly to be read (with Falkenstein) dun(q)-dun(q), since the third sign would then in all likelihood have been CA, not A; for a similar reason they are hardly to be read mim-im "words." Perhaps they are to be read sun-suS "teeth," though the context seems to ask for a word such as "lips."
13 "His" instead of the expected "thy."
14 For bedde as a technical term for a specific type of Sumerian composition, cf. p. 42 of this volume. As for the phrase "of Bau," it may imply that the priestess who composed this poem was in the service of the goddess Bau (also pronounced Baha, cf. p. 456 of this volume); for additional details, cf. Falkenstein, loc. cit., pp. 48-50.
Hittite Omen

TRANSLATOR: ALBRECHT GOETZE

Investigating the Anger of the Gods

Text: KUB, v, 7.

(2) In the temple of (god) Kismaras, (blank space), unfavorable. [We asked the temple officials and they said:] "The harilyalli vessel has not been poured out [for] 9 days, and the wine portion has been omitted." Bird omina, unfavorable. If it is only this, ditto. We asked them again and they said: "They omitted the fresh loaves." Bird omina, unfavorable. If it is only this, ditto. We asked them again and they said: "They continually omit the monthly festival of the third day (and) of the fourth day and [ . . . ]" Bird omina, unfavorable. If it is only this, ditto. So [we have] not yet [found the solution].

(7) In the Ea temple (god) Ea held the good symbol in his hand. It is (no longer) there. [ . . . ], unfavorable. If it is only this, bird omina, unfavorable.

We asked the temple officials and they said: "The foot of the Sun is broken." Bird omina, unfavorable. If it is only this, unfavorable.

Ditto: "The mountain on which (god) Kallis stands, that mountain was silver plated; the silver on that mountain is chipped off." Bird omina, unfavorable. If it is only this, ditto. The first bird omen was favorable, but afterward it was unfavorable. The monthly festival which they omitted, he will celebrate (it) as it should be. As a penalty they will give 1 sheep, bread (and) beer. The [ . . . ] festival which they omitted, they will make up for it to the double amount. Favorable.

(17) If (god) Hurianzipes [is angry] in the temple, let [the omen] be favorable. Unfavorable.

We asked the temple officials and they said: "The house [ . . . and] it is shaky." Is the god angry for that reason? Let the omen be favorable [ . . . ]. If it is only this, ditto, let the omen be favorable. Unfavorable.

(20) We asked the temple officials again and they said: "The [ . . . ] festival has been omitted; the cult stand is not adorned with discs." Is the god angry for that reason? Unfavorable. If it is only this, let the omen be favorable. Unfavorable.

With regard to what was unfavorably answered again—because they consecrated a belated (animal), is the god angry for that reason? Let the omen be unfavorable. Unfavorable. If it is only this, let the omen be favorable. Unfavorable.

(24) We asked the temple officials again and they said: "A dog came into the temple, he shook the table and the sacrificial loaves fell down. The daily ration of sacrificial loaves they cut considerably down." Is the god angry for that reason? Unfavorable.

If the god is angry only about the offences that have so far been ascertained by us, ditto, let the omen be favorable. Unfavorable.

We asked the temple officials and they said: "Two deficient people came into the temple. Bird omina, unfavorable.

If it is only this, ditto. Bird omina, unfavorable. We asked them again and they said: "Mutilated people walked about the temple." Bird omina, unfavorable. If it is only this, ditto. The first bird omen was favorable, but afterward it was unfavorable.

(30) The four pairs of monthly festivals which had been omitted—if the god did not feel revengeful because they had made the sacrifices already, [ . . . ] Bird omina, unfavorable.

They have already celebrated the four pairs of festivals. But as a penalty they will give 1 sheep, bread (and) beer and . . . . Favorable. It has already been given. Because they had omitted the daily (ration of) sacrificial loaves, they will give 30 sacrificial loaves. Bird omina, favorable.

Since a dog reached the table and ate the daily (ration of) sacrificial loaves, they will discard the table. For the daily (ration of) sacrificial loaves they will make up twofold and as a penalty they will give 1 sheep, bread (and) beer and Bird omina, favorable.

Since deficient and mutilated people walked about (the temple), the Hittite Old Woman will perform a rite for the god in the manner to which she is accustomed. Bird omina, favorable.

(reverse)

If (god) Ziparwas is not at all [angry in the temple . . . ]

We asked the temple officials and they said: "Three rhyta have been stripped of their precious stones, one rhyton is mutilated; 2 pairs of 'fruit' festivals . . . have not been celebrated." We asked the bird omina: Is the god angry for that reason? [ . . . ]

(10) If it is only this, ditto, let the bird omen be favorable. Unfavorable.

We asked them again and they said: "When the entreaty [was due], from 3 palaces they did not give
HITTITE OMENT

If it, . . . . Is the god angry for that reason? Bird omina, unfavorable.

We asked them again and they said: "The daily (ration of) sacrificial loaves, [for x days] they did [not] give it. When they brought up the gods from Dattassa [and . . . .], individual cult stands became separated." Is the god angry for that reason? Bird omina, unfavorable.

If it is only this, ditto, let the bird omina be favorable. Unfavorable.

If the Haitian Halkis is not at all angry in the temple, let the omina be favorable. Unfavorable.

(We asked) the temple officials (and they said): "The implements of the god which . . . . they have stripped of the silver, he has stripped of the silver. Two harisanal—one of gold and (one) of silver—they brought to Marassantiya, but did not bring (them) back. The festival of the mother-of-god has not been celebrated. For three days the daily (ration of) sacrificial loaves has been omitted. He has stripped the baldachin which the god had of its covering. The god had a quiver and there were 20 arrows in it; they are gone. The two iron handles of the shield are gone." If the god ditto, favorable.

If (god) SUMUKAN is not at all angry in the temple, let the omina be favorable. Unfavorable.

We asked the temple officials and they said: "One eyebrow of the god is fallen off. The bucks which he had harnessed—of one buck the horns have fallen off. The rhyta (set) with pearls are broken. The alabaster cup is broken. They have stripped the rhyta of their (precious) stones."

(The text stops here, although obviously its end had not yet been reached.)

6 The Hattic name is Kait; it is probably to be used here.

7 A god of fertility and patron of the animal life.
SUPPLEMENT TO

Ancient Near Eastern Texts
TRANSLATORS AND ANNOTATORS

W. F. Albright, Johns Hopkins University
Robert D. Biggs, University of Chicago
J. J. Finkelstein, Yale University
H. L. Ginsberg, Jewish Theological Seminary
Albrecht Goetze, Yale University
A. K. Grayson, University of Toronto
A. Jamme, WJF., The Catholic University
S. N. Kramer, University of Pennsylvania
William L. Moran, S.J., Harvard University
A. Leo Oppenheim, University of Chicago
Erica Reiner, University of Chicago
Franz Rosenthal, Yale University
John A. Wilson, University of Chicago
Contents of the Supplement

INTRODUCTION

ABBREVIATIONS 677

I. MYTHS, EPICS, AND LEGENDS

AKKADIAN MYTHS AND EPICS (A. K. Grayson) 501
The Creation Epic: Additions to Tablets V-VII 501
The Epic of Gilgamesh: Notes and Additions 503
Nergal and Ereshkigal: Additions 507
Atrahasis: Additional Texts 512
The Myth of Zu 514
Etana: Additions 517
A Babylonian Theogony 517

HITTITIAN MYTHS, EPICS, AND LEGENDS (Albrecht Goetze) 519
El, Ashertu and the Storm-god 519

II. LEGAL TEXTS

COLLECTIONS OF LAWS FROM MESOPOTAMIA AND ASIA MINOR (J. J. Finkelstein) 523
The Laws of Ur-Nammu 523
Sumerian Laws, YBC 2177 525
The Edict of Ammisaduqa 526

EGYPTIAN AND HITTITIAN TREATIES 529
Hittite Treaty (Albrecht Goetze) 529
Treaty of Suppiluliumas and Aziras of Amurru 529

AKKADIAN TREATIES FROM SYRIA AND ASSYRIA (Erica Reiner) 531
Treaty between Niqmepa of Alalakh and Ir-DIM of Tunip 531
Treaty between Idrimi and Pilliya 532
Treaty between Ashurnirari V of Assyria and Mati’ilu of Arpad 532
Treaty of Esarhaddon with Baal of Tyre 533
The Vassal-Treaties of Esarhaddon 534

DOCUMENTS FROM THE PRACTICE OF LAW 542
Additional Mesopotamian Legal Documents (J. J. Finkelstein) 542

ARAMAIC PAPYRI FROM ELEPHANTINE (H. L. Ginsberg) 548
Manumission of a Female Slave and Her Daughter, June 12, 427 B.C. 548
Marriage Contract of a Former Slave Girl Who Is Subject to Paramone, 420 B.C. 548

III. HISTORICAL TEXTS

EGYPTIAN HISTORICAL TEXTS (John A. Wilson) 553
Asiatics in Egyptian Household Service 553
The War against the Hyksos (Continued) 554

BABYLONIAN AND ASSYRIAN HISTORICAL TEXTS (A. Leo Oppenheim) 556
The Dedication of the Shamash Temple by Yahdun-Lim 556
The Story of Idrimi, King of Alalakh 557
The Banquet of Ashurnasirpal II
The Mother of Nabonidus ("The Family of Nabonidus," _ANET_, 311-12)
Nabonidus and His God
The Conquest of Jerusalem
The Assyrian King List
The Uruk King List from Kandalanu to Seleucus II
A Seleucid King List

PALESTINIAN INSCRIPTIONS (W. F. Albright)
A Letter from the Time of Josiah
Three Ostraca from Arad

_(IV. RITUALS, INCANTATIONS, AND DESCRIPTION OF FESTIVALS)_

V. HYMNS AND PRAYERS

SUMERIAN HYMNS (S. N. Kramer)
Hymn to Enlil, the All-Beneficent
Hymn to Enlil as the Ruling Deity of the Universe
Hymn to Ninurta as God of Vegetation
Hymn to Ninurta as God of Wrath
Ishkur and the Destruction of the Rebellious Land
Self-Laudatory Hymn of Inanna and Her Omnipotence
Hymn to the Ekur
Ur-Nammu Hymn: Building of the Ekur and Blessing by Enlil
The King of the Road: A Self-Laudatory Shulgi Hymn

VI. DIDACTIC AND WISDOM LITERATURE

SUMERIAN WISDOM TEXT (S. N. Kramer)
Man and his God: A Sumerian Variation of the "Job" Motif

AKKADIAN DIDACTIC AND WISDOM LITERATURE (Robert D. Biggs)
Akkadian Fable
Dispute between the Tamarisk and the Date Palm Akkadian Proverbs and Counsels
Proverbs
The Instructions of Shuruppak
Counsels of Wisdom
Akkadian Observations on Life and the World Order
_Ludlul Bel Netneqi, "I Will Praise the Lord of Wisdom"
The Dialogue of Pessimism
The Babylonian Theodicy
Akkadian Oracles and Prophecies
An Old Babylonian Oracle from Uruk
Oracles Concerning Esarhaddon
A Letter to Ashurbanipal
An Oracular Dream Concerning Ashurbanipal
Prophecies
CONTENTS

VII. LAMENTATIONS

SUMERIAN LAMENTATION (S. N. Kramer)

Lamentation over the Destruction of Sumer and Ur

(VIII. SECULAR SONGS AND POEMS)

IX. LETTERS

AKKADIAN LETTERS (William L. Moran, S.J.)

Divine Revelations (a-j)
The Substitute King
A Happy Reign
A Royal Decree of Equity
A Letter to a God
Punishment by Fire
Treaties and Coalitions (a-b)
"The God of My Father"
A Loan between Gentlemen
A Boy to His Mother
Divine Revelations (Appendix, k-x)

ARAMAIC LETTERS (H. L. Ginsberg)

Assignment to a New Lessor of Land Abandoned in the Egyptian Rebellion of 410 B.C.

X. MISCELLANEOUS TEXTS

SUMERIAN SACRED MARRIAGE TEXTS (S. N. Kramer)

Dumuzi and Inanna: Pride of Pedigree
Dumuzi and Inanna: Love in the Gipar
Dumuzi and Inanna: Courting, Marriage and Honeymoon
Dumuzi and Inanna: The Ecstasy of Love
Inanna and the King: Blessing on the Wedding Night
Dumuzi and Inanna: Prayer for Water and Bread
Dumuzi and Inanna: Prosperity in the Palace
"Lettuce Is My Hair": A Love-Song for Shu-Sin
"Life Is Your Coming": The King as Brother and Son-in-law
"The Honey-man": Love-Song to the King
"Set Me Free, My Sister": The Sated Lover

SUMERIAN MISCELLANEOUS TEXTS (S. N. Kramer)

The Curse of Agade: The Ekur Avenged
Ua-auga: A Sumerian Lullaby

CANAANITE AND ARAMAIC INSCRIPTIONS (Franz Rosenthal)

Building Inscriptions
Yehimilk of Byblos
Azitawadda of Adana
Kilamuwa of Ydy-Sam'al
Barrakab of YVy-Sam'al

Cultic Inscriptions
Ben-Hadad of Damascus
Kilamuwa of YVy-Sam'al
Contents

Zakir of Hamat and Lu'ath 655
Yehawmilk of Byblos 656
The Marseilles Tariff 656
The Carthage Tariff 657
The King of Kedar 657
Punic Ex-voto Inscriptions 658
Incantations 658
The Amulet from Arslan Tash 658
The Uruk Incantation 658
Political Documents 659
The Treaty between KTK and Arpad 659
Sepulchral Inscriptions 661
Ahiram of Byblos 661
Agbar, Priest of the Moon-God in Nerab 661
Tabnit of Sidon 662
Eshmun'azar of Sidon 662
South-Arabian Inscriptions (A. Jamme, W.J.F.) 663
Sabaean Inscriptions 663
Minaean Inscriptions 665
Qatabanian Inscriptions 667
Hadrami Inscriptions 669
Addenda 671
Index of Biblical References 683
Comprehensive Index 687
SUPPLEMENT TO
Ancient Near Eastern Texts
Akkadian Myths and Epics

TRANSLATOR: A. K. GRAYSON

Since the second edition of this volume was published there has been considerable improvement in our knowledge of Akkadian myths and epics. This improvement is due in part to continuing study of the texts already known and in part to new texts which have come to light. It is unfortunate that, due to his untimely death, Professor E. A. Speiser was unable to undertake the revision of his translations. The present writer, in assuming this task, has tried to follow Speiser’s style as much as possible. Thus no changes have been made in the previously published translations unless these were made necessary by recent research or newly discovered texts. The translations of passages which are still not clear have been left unaltered. All publications which have appeared in the intervening years have been taken into consideration with the exception of the abundant material now being made available for the Atrahasis Epic, an omission which will be explained in the section on that composition. One completely new text, A Babylonian Theogony, has been included.

The Creation Epic

ADDITIONS TO TABLETS V-VII

Research and new discoveries have filled some gaps in this composition and corrected some erroneous ideas. It is now widely held that the date of composition of the Creation Epic is later than the Old Babylonian period. Beyond this there is little agreement for while some would place its origin in the Kassite period, others would date it even later.

Among recent publications of overall significance must be included the composite cuneiform text of the epic edited by W. G. Lambert and Simon B. Parker, Enuma Etiš (Oxford, 1966). Also worthy of note is an article by W. G. Lambert, “A New Look at the Babylonian Background of Genesis” in The Journal of Theological Studies, xvi (1965), 287-300. New texts that have appeared come mainly from Ashur and Sultantepe. In the second edition of this volume Speiser was able to incorporate the Ashur material into the translations. The Sultantepe texts had only just begun to appear, however, and he was able to utilize very little of them. Thus most of the changes made in the translation have been occasioned by the Sultantepe material.

Since Tablets I-IV were previously well preserved only small changes were necessary. All of these changes have been incorporated in the body of die text. The new sources are:

A few changes have been made in the translation of Tablet IV which require comment. In line 19 the correct translation is “Images,” Akkadian lu-nu-ad as shown by STT, I, No. 3 and see R. Borger, AFO, xix (1959-60), 113. This constellation, which is also mentioned in IV, 23-26 and in Tablet V, has been discussed by B. Landsberger and Kinnier Wilson, JNES, xx (1961), 170-71. At the beginning of IV, 53 read with STT, I, No. 3: pa-tu-nu sap-qi. At the beginning of IV, 54 read with STT, I, No. 3: a-na-ha la i-du-u.

Tablet V

The major addition to our knowledge of the epic is in Tablet V. A large portion of the text was published many years ago by L. W. King, CT, xii, 22-25, but its identity as part of Tablet V was disputed. The recent discovery at Sultantepe of a duplicate, STT, I, No. 12, has virtually settled the argument. The sources for Tablet V were recently compiled, edited, and commented upon by B. Landsberger and J. V. Kinnier Wilson, JNES, xx (1961), 154-179. Some changes have been made in the first twenty-two lines of this tablet translated by Speiser. There follows what can be translated of the remainder of the tablet using the line numbering of the Landsberger and Kinnier Wilson edition.

"I [have appointed] a sign, follow its path, (23) . . . [ . . . a]pproach and give judgement."

(Lines 25-44 are too broken for translation. It is clear from the traces, however, that after completing his creation of the moon Marduk turned his attention to establishing the sun.)

After he [had appointed] the days [to Shamash], (45) [And had established] the precincts of night and d[ay],

[Taking] the spittle of Tiafm[at] Marduk created [ . . . ] . . .
He formed the c[louds] and filled (them) with [water].
The raising of winds, the bringing of rain (and) (50) cold,
Making the mist smoke, piling up her8 poison:
(These) he appointed to himself, took into his own charge.
Putting her head into position he formed the mountains,
Opening the deep (which) was in flood,
He caused to flow from her eyes the Euphrates (and) Tigris.
Stopping her nostrils he left . . . .

1 For a summary of the Sultantepe sources for the Creation Epic see 0. R. Gurney, AFO, xvn (1956), 353-36.
2 Tiamat’s.
3 Tiamat’s. Text: "his."
He formed at her udder the lofty mountains,
(Therein) he drilled springs for the wells to carry off
(the water).

Twisting her tail he bound it to Durmah,¹ [ . . . ] . . . Apsu at his foot,
(Thus) he covered [the heavens] (and) established the earth.
[ . . . ] . . . in the midst of Tiamat he made flow,
[ . . . ] his net he completely let out,
(He) created heaven and earth . . . ,
[ . . . ] their bounds . . . established.
When he had designed his rules (and) fashioned [his] ordinances,
He founded [the shr]ines (and) handed them over to Ea.

[Ea and Damkina [. . . ], (107)
They opened their mouths to [speak to the great gods], the Igigi:
"Formerly [Mard]uk was (merely) our beloved son,
Now he is your king, proclaim his title!" (no
A second (speech) they made, they all spoke:
"His name shall be Lugaldimmerankia,³ trust in him!
When they had given the sovereignty to Marduk,
They declared for him a formula of good fortune and success:
"Henceforth thou wilt be the patron of our sanctuarie;
Whatever thou dost command we will do."³
Marduk opened his mouth to speak,
To say a word to the gods, his fathers:
"Above the Apsu where you have resided,
The counterpart of Esharra which I have built (120
over you,
Below I have hardened the ground for a building site,
I will build a house, it will be my luxurious abode.
I will found therein its temple,
I will appoint cellas, I will establish my sovereignty.
When you come up from the Apsu for assembly,
You will spend the night therein, (it is there) to receive all of you.
When you descend from heaven [for assemblingly,
You will spend the night there[en] (it is there) to receive all of you.
I will call [its] name ['Babylon'] (which means) the houses of the great gods,⁶
I shall build it [with] the skill of craftsmen." (130' [When the gods], his fathers, h[ead] this [speech] of his,
[They put] the following question [to Marduk, the firstborn]:
"Over all that your hands have created,
Who will have thy [authority]?
Over the ground which your hands have created,
Who will have thy [power]?
Babylon, which thou didst give a fine name,
Ther[en] establish our [abode] forever!
[ . . . ], let them bring-our daily ration,
[ . . . ] our [ . . . ],
[After] the gods, his fathers, were satiated with his charms.

(Lines 90-106 are too mutilated for translation. In this passage the seating of Marduk on the throne with his weapons was described.)

¹ "Great Band." Cf. Tablet VII, 96.
² "King of the gods of heaven and underworld." Cf. Tablet VI, 140.
³ On this etymology cf. Landsberger and Kinnier Wilson, JNES, n (1961), 178.
The Epic of Gilgamesh

ADDITIONS TO TABLETS V-VIII AND X

Research and new finds have continued to increase our knowledge of the Epic of Gilgamesh. The recent discovery of a fragment of this epic at Megiddo in Palestine provides yet another indication of the diffusion of this popular composition and the appearance at Bogazköy of further pieces of die Hurrian and Hittite versions is also of interest in this respect. In recent years there have been significant additions to the Old Babylonian version as well as to the late recension of the epic. Bibliographical details of the new material will be given at the appropriate place. Here only new and significant studies of the work as a whole will be noted. Of particular importance is a revision of Schott’s translation of the epic into German published by W. von Soden, Das Gilgamesch-Epos (1958) as well as von Soden’s notes to this new edition in ZA, lxxx (1959), 209-35. Also noteworthy is the revised edition of A. Heidel’s, The Gilgamesh Epic and Old Testament Parallels (1949). An indication that interest in this literary composition is far from waning is the fact that the VII Rencontre Assyriologique Internationale held in 1958 was devoted to a discussion of the Gilgamesh Epic and the numerous and varied papers presented at that time were subsequently edited and published by P. Garelli, Gilgames et sa Légende (1960). In particular note the detailed bibliography compiled by L. de Meyer on pp. 1-30.

Tablet I

Sources for Tablet I have been slightly increased by the recent publication of four Neo-Babylonian fragments by W. G. Lambert, CT, xlvi, 17-20. CT, xlvi, 17 and part of CT, xlvi, 19 were utilized by Thompson in GETH but were not previously published in full. CT, xlvi, 18 and 20 were first published by D. J. Wiseman in Garelli, Gilgames et sa Légende, 126 and 124 respectively. Most changes and additions necessitated by the new pieces have been incorporated in the revised pages of the translation. In I ii 7 one may now read:

In the rampart of Uruk he [. . . ]

To footnote 8 on p. 73 (note to I ii 10) add: The interpretation of this line and its parallel, I ii 22, is still a crux. The suggestion of B. Landsberger, WZKM, lxvi (1960), 125, n. 49 to read ina pu-qi du-ri “His companions stand (read/), waiting for his command” is possible for I ii 10 (note that ina pu-qi du-ri is preserved in CT, xlvi, 19) but not for I ii 22 where the text reads: ina pu-ut-[i] su-ut-bu-u [. . . ]

In Bi.Or., xvm (1961), 62,1. M. Diakonoff has suggested that the designation of the harlot as samhatu is in fact a personal name. This suggestion does not take into account the fact that the plural of samhatu occurs in Tablet VI 164 as a synonymous parallel to harimati. Speiser’s translation of samhatu as “the lass” has therefore been maintained.

Tablet II

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

Some changes in the translation have been made in accordance with the suggestions of W. von Soden, ZA, lxxx (1959), 210-12.

Tablet III

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

A few changes have been made in the translation and these have been justified in the footnotes. On iii 24 and v 19 see E. A. Speiser, JCS, xx (1958), 41 E.
Tablet IV

The obverse of two Neo-Babylonian fragments published by W. G. Lambert, CT, xlvii, 21 and 22, has added slighdy to our knowledge of this tablet CT, xlvii, 22 was previously published by D. J. Wiseman in Garelli, Gilgames et sa Ugende, 124. The few minor changes have been incorporated in the body of the translation.

Tablet V

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

Our knowledge of Tablet V has been increased by the discovery of three Old Babylonian fragments which will be called A, B, and C. One of these (A), which was unearthed at Tell Harmal, is in such a terrible state of preservation that there would be no point in reproducing here the disconnected words and phrases that can be deciphered. It appears, however, that it describes the arrival of Gilgamesh and Enkidu at the cedar forest which is dealt with at the beginning of Tablet V in the late version. The text was published by J. J. A. van Dijk, Sumer, xiv (1959), 9-10 and Plates 3-4.

B

The second Old Babylonian fragment also comes from Tell Harmal and contains a fragmentary account of a dream which is similar in some respects to the dream described in V, 7-19. It is also reminiscent of the tale of the Bull of Heaven described in Tablet VI since a fight with a wild bull is narrated in the account of the dream. When the text begins someone, apparently Gilgamesh, is describing a dream to his companion, presumably Enkidu. This tablet was published by J. J. A. van Dijk, Sumer, xiii (1957), 66 and 91. Further see van Dijk, Sumer, xiv (1958), 114-21 and von Soden, ZA, LUI (1959), 215-19.

"Arise and look towardi  the mountain [. . .]! I am robbed of (my) divine sleep. My friend, I saw a dream—Oh how unfavorable how . . ., how disturbing! I seized a wild bull60 of the steppe, Bellowing he led up the earth, the dust darkened the sky. I gave way60 before him. He was seizing [. . .] strength, my flank, He tore out the [. . .] . . . He provided food [. . .] drank, [he] gave me [to drink] from his water-skin."

(The description of the dream ends and someone else, presumably Enkidu, now explains it.)

"The god, my friend, to whom we go, Is not a wild bull (although) his form is strange. The wild bull which thou didst see is radiant Shamash, In distress he will grasp our hands. The one who gave thee to drink from his water-skin, He is thy god who brings thee honor."

We should (therefore) join (with him), Lugalbanda.17 That we might do one thing, a deed which will not be made ignominious through death!18

The third Old Babylonian fragment was discovered at Tell Isafa and published by T. Bauer, JNES, xvi (1957), 254-262. It contains an account of the killing of Huwawa:

(overse)

[Gilgamesh said to Enkidu: "We will arrive" in . . . [ . . . ], The radiant beams80 will vanish in the confusion, The radiant beams will vanish and the brilliance become clouded."

Enkidu said to Gilgamesh: "My friend, (first) catch the bird. Then where will the young birds go?

Let us, (therefore), seek the radiant beams later, (For) like young birds they will run about in the grass. Kill him (Huwawa), then kill his servants!"

(reverse)

Gilgamesh heeded what his friend said. He took the axe in his hand, He drew the sword from his belt. Gilgamesh struck him (Huwawa) in the [neck], Enkidu, his friend, [. . . . . .].

At the third (blow) [Huwawa] fell. Confusion [. . . du]mbounded, [He struck] the watchman, Huwawa, to the ground.

For two leagues the cedars [resounded]. Enkidu killed with him [. . .] (10) Forest [. . .] cedars. En[kidu] killed [the watchman] of the forest, At whose word Saria11 and Lebanon [trembled], [All] the mountains became . . . [ . . . ]> All the hills became . . . [ . . . ]. He slew the [. . .] cedars, Those destroyed . . . [ . . . ] after he slew the seven, The net [. . .] the sword (weighing) eight talents, The . . .22 of eight talents, bearing these [he pressed] on into the forest18

He opened up the secret dwelling of the Anunnaki. (20) While Gilgamesh cut down the trees, Enkidu dug up the . . .22

17 The father and tutelary god of Gilgamesh.
18 Cf. von Soden, ibid. What Enkidu seems to be saying is that this is a cause worth dying for.
21 The melemmu are attributes of deities which overpower humans. See A. Leo Oppenheim, JASS, lxix (1943), 31-34. Here they belong to Huwawa.
22 HE-tam is apparently some kind of weapon.
23 Read [i-]u-urna with von Soden, loc. at., 219.
24 The meaning of ur-ma-zu-U is unknown.
E[nkidu] said to Gilgamesh:
“[... ] Gilgamesh, felled are the cedars.”

(The remainder of the speech is too fragmentary for translation.)

Tablet VI

Several Neo-Assyrian fragments which belong to this tablet and which are in the Museum of the Ancient Orient at Istanbul have recently come to light. These pieces were published and commented upon by R. Frankena in Garelli, Gilgames et sa Legende, 113-22. Most of the necessary changes and additions could be incorporated in the body of the translation. Note that in line 38 the translation “cuts” is based on the restoration mu-[in]-[i]-su-at. Cf. R. Frankena in Garelli, Gilgames et sa Legende, 120. When carried the water skin rubs and chafes the side. For line 40 see E. A. Speiser, JCS, xx (1958), 41 f. In line 89 instead of “Art thou the father?” one text has “Thou art not the father!” On bi-nam-ma “Please give” in line 94 cf. line 96 and W. G. Lambert, BWJ, 324 and CAD, 11 (B), 216 f. There follows a translation of lines 117-131.

When Anu [heard Ishtar’s] speech, [He gave] to [her the tether][a] of the Bull of Heaven, That Ishtar might lead him to Urug. When she reached the [gates] of Uruk, (12c) . . . [ ... ]

He went down to the river [ ... ] seven [ ... ] . . . the river . . .

With the snort of the Bull of Heaven pits were opened,
Into them fell one 27 hundred young men of Uruk;
With his second snort pits were opened,*8 Into them fell two hundred young men of Uruk;
With his third snort pits were opened, Into [one of them] fell Enkidu.
Enkidu escaped and [ ... ].

The Bull of Heaven [withdrew] before him, (13c) With the tip*9 of his tail [ ... ].

Tablet VII

Our knowledge of this tablet has been increased by the discovery at Sultantepe of a fragment which contains, in a very mutilated state, the remainder of the speech of Enkidu to the door. It was published by O. R. Gurney, JCS, vm (1954), 87-90 and the copy was reproduced as STT, I, No. 14. Also see Gurney’s corrections in AnSt, vm (1958), 245. The Sultantepe fragment fits into the gap just before the beginning of column iii (p. 86). The latter part of the Sultantepe text is duplicated by die obverse of a Neo-Babylonian fragment recently published by W. G. Lambert, CT, xlvii. 23. This piece also contains the beginning of column iii thus providing one line missing between the end of the Sultantepe fragment and the beginning of column iii. These pieces prove that K. 3588, Sm. 2132, and Rm. 2, 399 which were published in GETh, Plates 14-16 belong to Tablet VII. Further fragments of this tablet were published by W. G. Lambert, CT, xlvii, 24-26, CT, xlvii, 24 shows that 79-7-8, 320 (published in GETh, Plate 27) contains part of column iv. See further Landsberger, WZKM, lvii (1961), 8, n. 38. Yet another recent addition to the sources for Tablet VII was made by the publication of a tablet from Ur by C. J. Gadd, UET, vi, No. 394 and edited by Gadd, Iraq, xxvm (1966), 105-21. This tablet, which is probably from the Middle Babylonian period, is in a very poor state of preservation. It varies somewhat in content from the late recension. It duplicates the end of column ii of the late recension, now known from the Sultantepe fragment, and column iii and the beginning of column iv. But due to its poor state of preservation and the fact that it is not an exact duplicate of the late recension, it can only be used in a few instances to improve our understanding of the text. Changes and additions necessitated by the new sources have been incorporated into the body of the translation with the exception of a few passages. The first, a translation of which follows, fits into the large gap just before the beginning of column iii (p. 86). The lines have been numbered according to the Sultantepe fragment.

(After several mutilated lines Enkidu’s speech continues.)

“Now, O door, it is I who made thee, it is I who raised [thee],”

[ ... ] . . . thee.

May either a king who comes after me . . . thee, Or may a god [ ... ] . . . thee.

Let him destroy my name and place his own name (thereon).

He ripped out [ ... ] . . . he tore down.

While he was listening to his speech, with great haste his [ ... ],

While Gilgamesh was listening] to the speech of his friend, Enkidu, his tears [were flowing].

Gilgamesh opened his mouth to speak, saying to Enkidu: [ ... ] illustrious,

One who has wisdom [may say] strange things [ ... ].

[Wh]y, my friend, did thy heart speak strange things? [The dream] was most precious, but great is the terror.

[ ... ] are paralyzed like [ ... ].

[Yet though great] [are the fears], the dream is precious: For the healthy they released misery; [The dre]am left the healthy with woe.

[ ... ] and I will pray to the [great] gods.”

(There is a gap of approximately eleven lines before the duplicate UET, vi, No. 394 makes the text legible again.)

When daylight came

Enkidu lifted his head, weeping before Shamash,

Before the radiance of Shamash his tears flow:

“I pray to thee, Shamash, regarding the hunter, the rogue,

*9 For another interpretation of these lines see I. M. Diakonoff, BLoR, xviii (1961), 64.
To the non-hunter who did not allow me to find as much (game) as my friend,
May he not find as much (game) as his friend,

(Column iii 1-10 of the late recension follows immediately.)

Column iii 9-10 of the late recension is identical with UET, vi, No. 394:13 f. and thus both lines are now fully preserved. After iii 10 of the late recension UET, vi, No. 394:15-27 has a text similar to but not always identical with iii 11-22. The relevant portion of UET, vi, No. 394 is therefore translated separately here.

Thou shalt not enter into the tavern of young women,
Thy lovely bosom . . .
The place of thy festivities may the drunkard defile with vomit,
... all the troops
(The next four lines are too fragmentary for translation.)
The dust of the potter's crossroad shall be thy dwelling place,
The desert shall be thy bed,
The shadow of the wall shall be thy station,
[The bes]otted and the thirsty shall smite thy cheek!

The next several lines of UET, vi, No. 394 (28-39) are too mutilated for translation but are apparently similar to the broken lines of the late recension, iii 23-32. UET, vi, No. 394: 40-46 contains the speech of Shamash to Enkidu (cf. iii 33-48) and presumably the introduction of Enkidu's speech to the harlot. UET, vi, No. 394:47-67 is parallel to (but not always identical with) the end of column iii and iv 1-20 of the late recension. Due to the mutilated state of preservation of this portion of UET, vi, No. 394 it has not been deemed worthwhile to list here the variants from the late recension. In the translation restorations have been made wherever possible from UET, vi, No. 394 and from CT, xlivi, 24.

Tablet VIII

The discovery of a fragment at Sultantepe has considerably increased our knowledge of the beginning of this tablet. Unfortunately it is a tablet inscribed by a pupil who was in the process of learning the scribal art and there are numerous errors. The text was published by O. R. Gurney, JCS, vm (1954), 90-95 and the copy was reproduced by Gurney as STT, I, No. 15. Concerning the errors in the text also see I. M. Diakonoff, BLOr., xviii (1961), 64, n. 18. A tiny Neo-Babylonian fragment which duplicates a little of the Sultantepe text was recently published by W. G. Lambert as CT, xlivi, 27. The obverse of the Sultantepe fragment provides part of the missing first column of the Ninevite version and immediately precedes the beginning of the second column. The reverse of the Sultantepe text, allowing for numerous errors and discrepancies, duplicates the second column of the Ninevite version and adds a few more lines. The necessary changes have been made in the translation of column ii. In the translation of the obverse of the Sultantepe text given here, fragments of column i published in GETH have been incorporated. Also translated are the four new lines that the Sultantepe text provides for the end of column ii of the Ninevite recension.

When daylight came Gilgamesh said to his friend:
"Enkidu, thy [moth]er a gazelle, a wild ass thy father, [produce]d thee.
They whose mar is their tails reared thee, and the canteen Of the steppe and of all the pastures.

May the tracks of Enkidu in the Cedar Forest Weep for thee, may they not hush night and day.
May the elders of wide, ramparted Uruk weep for thee.
[May weep for thee]
The finger that is extended behind us in blessing.
May weep for thee
And echo the countryside as though it were thy mother.
May weep for thee [... . . .]
In whose midst we . . . . May weep for thee bear, lycena, [panther],
Tiger, hart, leopard, lion; oxen, deer, [ibex], (10)
And the wild creatures of the steppe.
May weep for thee the river Ula [ . . . ]
By whose banks we used to walk.
May weep for thee the pure Euphrates, [where we drew]

Water for the skin. May weep for thee
The warriors of wide, [ramparted] Uruk
[. . . ] we slew the Bull.... May weep for thee [... . . .]
[Who] in Eridu extolled thy name. May weep for thee [... . . .]
[Who] . . . extolled thy name. May weep for thee [... . . .]
[Who] provided . . . grain for thy mouth. May weep for thee [... . . .]
[Who] put salve on thy back. May weep for thee [...] [harlot]
[Who] anointed thee with fragrant oil. May weep for thee [... . . .]
[Of the h]arem who [brought to thee]
The wife and the ring of thy choice." May we[ep for thee [... . . .]
Their head-hair over thee [... . . .]!"

(The following four lines follow line 23 on p. 88)

Then Gilgamesh issued a call to the land: "O smith,
Coppersmith, goldsmith, engraver(85) Make my friend

[Then] he fashioned a statue for his friend,
The friend whose stature [... . . .]:
"[. . . .], of lapis is thy breast, of gold thy body, [... . . .]."

Lit.: "thy counsel." Or perhaps "a wife, a ring, thy counsel." (9)
(85) kabsarru is one who inscribes metal. See W. von Soden, 2A, i, iii (1959) 229.

[506] .
Tablet X

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

Another fragment of an Old Babylonian version of Tablet X was recently published by A. R. Millard, Iraq, xxvi (1964), 99-105 and CT, xxvi, 16. This piece is probably part of the same tablet as the "Meissner Fragment." Only the reverse is preserved and, if it does belong to the other Old Babylonian tablet, the text provides several more lines of columns iii and iv with a lacuna of undetermined size in between the two pieces.

(iii)

(The first line preserved is illegible.)

Gilgamesh [said] to [his] friend:

"What didst thou say, ale-wife [. . .]?

My heart [grieves] for my friend.

What didst thou say, ale-wife [. . .]?

My heart [grieves] for Enkidu.

Dwelling on the [sea]-shore, O ale-wife,

Thou dost see its depths, all [. . .].

Show (me) the way [. . .].

If it be seemly, the sea [I will cross]."

(10)

The ale-wife said to him, [to Gilgamesh]:

"*Gilgamesh, there has never been . . . [ . . . ]"

(There are traces of two more lines before a complete break.)

(iv)

(The first three lines preserved are unintelligible.)

The two of them discussed [. . .]

[. . .] spoke a word to him,

Sursunabu says to him, to Gilgamesh:

"The Stone Things, O Gilgamesh, bear me along,

That I might not touch the waters of death.

In thy anger thou didst smash them,

The Stone Things (which) I kept to help (me) across.

*Gilgamesh, [ta]ke the axe in thy hand,

Cut three hundred [punting-poles which are smooth.

[. . .] the lashes like a spear]."

(There are traces of one more line before a complete break.)

THE ASSYRIAN VERSION

The additions to the late sources for Tablet X have all been published by W. G. Lambert, CT, xli, 30, 32, 33. Some of these pieces were previously published in GETh and others by D. J. Wiseman in Garelli, Gilgamesh et sa Ugende, 124-26. An edition has been given by Gurney, AnSt, x (1960), 105-31. The Sultantepe tablet provides us with a much fuller version of the story but there are lacunae in it, some of which may be filled in from the Amarna tablet translated previously in this volume.

The beginning of the myth is very fragmentary and it is not absolutely certain that this small piece belongs to the tablet (see Gurney, loc. cit., 106). It appears to be a hymn in praise of a deity, presumably Ereshkigal.

(i)

I u/ill praise [. . . queen of mankind],

[. . .] continually.

I will praise [Ereshkigal, queen of mankind],

[. . .] continually.

^ . . . ] . . .

[. . .] favor.

[. . .] among all the goddesses.

[. . .] thou art merciful.

(8^)

[507]
(There is a lacuna of about thirteen lines in which the preparations for a banquet of the gods were probably described. See the Amarna version A.)

[Anu opened his mouth to say something to Kaka:]34

17 will send thee, Kaka, to the Land of no Return,
[To Ereshkigal. . . thou shalt say:]
[Thou art not able to come up,]
[In thy year thou canst not ascend to our presence,]
[And we cannot go down,]
[In our month we cannot descend to thy presence.]

(Therefore) let thy messenger come,]

[Let him remove (the dish) from the table, let him take thy share.]

[Whatever I give to him he will hand over all of it . . . to thee."

[Kaka descended the long staircase of the heavens.
When he reached the gate of Ereshkigal (he said):]

"Enter, Kaka, and may the gate bless thee!
He led [the god Kaka through [the first gate],
He led [the god] Kaka through [the second] gate,
He led [the god] Kaka through [the third] gate,
He led the god Kaka through the fourth gate,
He led the god Kaka through the fifth gate,
He led the god Kaka [through] the sixth gate,
He led the god Kaka [through] the seventh gate.
He entered her wide courtyard,
He bowed down, he [kissed] the ground in front of her.
He straightened up and standing there said to her:
"Anu, [thy] father, has sent me"
With these words: 'Thou art not able to come up,
In thy year thou canst not ascend to our presence,
And we cannot go down,]

In our month we cannot descend to thy presence.
(Therefore) let thy messenger come,
Let him remove (the dish) from the table, let him take thy share.
Whatever I give to him he will hand over all of it . . . to thee."

Ereshkigal opened her mouth to say something to Kaka:
"O messenger of Anu, our father, who has come to us,
Is it well with Anu, Enlil, and Ea, the great gods?
Is it well with Nammu and Nash, the pure god?
Is it well with the spouse of the mistress of the heavens?
Is it well with Nin["rta, mightiest] in the land?"

Kaka opened [his mouth] to say something to Ereshkigal:
"It is well with Anu, Enlil, and Ea, the great gods,
It is well with [Nammu and Nash], the pure (god),
It is well [with the spouse of the mistress of the heavens,
It is we[ll with] Ni[n"rta, mightiest] in the land."

[Kaka (again) opened his mouth to say something] to Ereshkigal:
"[. . . ] may it be well with thee!"

[Ereshkigal] opened her mouth to say something to Namtar, her vizier:
"o Nam[tar], my [vizier], I will send thee [to the heaven of Anu, our father.
Ascend, Namtar, the long [staircase of the heavens],
Remove (the dish) from the table, [take my share],
Whatever Anu gives to thee, bring it all to me.
"

(There is a large lacuna of about twenty-six lines in which Namtar's ascent to heaven and entrance into the presence of the upper deities was narrated. After the lacuna there is a section, part of which is translated below, in which it is narrated that all the gods except Nergal bowed to Namtar. Because of the insult Nergal must descend to the nether world to apologize to Ereshkigal. Ea gives him advice on how to conduct himself on his journey.)

[Ea opened his mouth to say something to Nergal]:

"[. . . ]"

[When he] arrived at . . .
[. . . ] the path . . .
[The gods] altogether were bowing before him,
[The great gods, the lords of destinies.
[He] was holding the authority, he was holding the authority [of the gods],
[The gods] who dwell in Ir[kalla].
Why dost thou not bow in his presence?
[. . . ] I keep squinting at thee,
Thou hast turned into an ignoramus.
[. . . ] thine eyes stare at the ground."

( Lines 12/-16/ are missing.)

[Nergal opened his mouth to say something to Ea]:

[. . . I will get up,
[. . . ] thou hast spoken.
[. . . ] . . . he/I will twine it double."

When Ea heard this he said to himself:
"I/ will do . . . send/rule:"

Ea opened his mouth to say something to Nergal:

Nether world.
"O traveller, dost thou wish to go on thy errand with a sword in thy hand?"

Descend to the forest of mesu-trees,
Cut down a mesu-tree, a hash[uru-tree, and] a supalatu-tree,
Break off a . . . [ . . . and] a staff." [He descended to the forest] of /ṣukku-trees,
[He cut down a mesu-tree, a hash[uru-tree, and a supalatu-tree,
He broke off a . . . and] a staff. (30')
He will make complete [ . . . ] and Ningishzida.

Like lapis lazuli he painted his [ . . . ],
Like gold he painted [his . . . ],
[He cut down a mesu-tree and a staff.

He (Ea) called to him to give him instructions:
"O traveller, dost thou wish . . . ?
Whatever instructions [ . . . ] . . . .
As soon as they bring thee a throne,
Thou must not go and sit on it; (40')
When a baker brings [thee] bread, [thou must not go and eat] his bread;
When a butcher brings [thee] meat, [thou must not go and eat] his meat;
When a brewer brings thee beer, thou must not go and [dr|m] the beer;
When water for (thy) feet is brought to thee, thou must not go and wash thy [feet];
When water for (thy) feet is brought to thee, thou must not go and wash thy [feet];

She will reveal to thee her body.
Thou must not . . . [what is normal for man and woman]."

Nergal [ . . . ]
(49')

(About twelve lines are missing. The end of the second column can be restored from the parallel in the Descent of Ishtar 1-10.)

[Nergal turned his face toward the Land of no Return,
[To the dark house, the abode of Irkalla,
[To the house which none leave who have entered it,]

(iii)
[To the road from which] there is no way back,
[To the house wherein the entrants] are bereft of light,
[Where dust is their fare and] clay [their food,
[(Where) they are clothed like bir]ds, with wings for garments,
[(Where) they see no light,] residing [in] darkness, [ . . . ] moaning

[ . . . they moan] like [d]oves.

[The porter opened his mouth to say something to Nergal:
"I will take back a report [about a traveller standing] at the gate."
(10)

[The porter went in to Ereshkigal to say something:
"O mistress, a certain traveller] has com[e to us,
[ . . . ], who will identify] him?"
(13)

(A few lines are missing. When the text is again legible, Ereshkigal is giving instructions to Namtar, her vizier.)

[" . . . ] seize him!"
[" . . . I will] identify him."
[ . . . / will loo] at h|im in the outer gate,
I will bring back [a report] to my mistress."
Namtar went to look at Erra [at the side* of the door.

Namtar's face turned pale* like a cut-down tamarisk,*
His lips turned dark like a bruised fyumtu-reed.
Namtar went to say something to his mistress:
"O mistress, wh[en] thou didst send me [to] thy father,
[When] I entered the courtyard of [Anu],
[The gods altogether] were bowed down humbly,
[The gods of the land . . . ] were bowed down."
(Five lines are missing.)

[Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speaf(,
[To say something] to [Namtar, her vizier]:
["Namtar, . . . ]

(20')

(Two lines are missing.

And I [ . . . ]
[Let him eat] the bread of the An[unnaki,
Let him drink the water of the Anunnaki.
Go, [bring] this god [into my presence]!"
(4"

[He led Nergal through the fir|st gate, that of N[edu*],
[He led Nergal through the second gate, that of K[ishar],
[He led Nergal through the third gate, that of Endashurimma], [509].

[He led Nergal through the fourth gate, that of Enurulla],
[He led Nergal through the fifth gate, that of Endukuga],
[He led Nergal through the sixth gate, that of Endushuba],
[He led Nergal through the seventh gate, that of Ennugi].

He entered [her] wide [courtyard],
He bowed down, he kissed the ground before her,
(saying):
"Anu, thy father, sent me..." (50')
(Ereshkigal replied): "Sit down on a throne...
Determine the verdicts...[... of the great gods],
The great gods which dwell in Irkalla."
As soon as [they brought him a throne],
He did not go and sit on it;
When a baker brought him bread, [he] did not go and eat the bread;
When [a butcher brought him meat, he] did not go and eat his meat;
[When a brewer brought him beer, he] did not go and drink his beer;
[When water for his feet was brought to him, he] did not go and wash his feet;
[(When) she (Ereshkigal) went into the bathroom, (60')
To put on her[... -garment],
[. . .] she revealed [her body].
[He, what is normal for man and woman...]
his heart.

(About ten lines are missing.)

(iv)
(The first three lines are too fragmentary for translation.)

[When Nergal [heard] this[...]
She [went] to the bathroom,
[To put on her [...]-garment,
. . . [she revealed her body].
He, what is normal for man and woman[...].
They [both] embraced [one another],
Passionately they got into bed.
The first day, the second day, they lay, [queen Ereshkigal and Erra];
The third day, the fourth day, [they lay, queen Ereshkigal and Erra];
The fifth day, the sixth day, [they lay, queen Ereshkigal and Erra];

When the seventh day came, Since Nergal was not there[...]
After him carried off[...]
"Release me, my sister[...]
[Do not] raise the alarm[...]
I will go and [come back] to the Land of no Return."

With regard to her, [... turned dark. (20')

[When the seventh day came, Since Nergal was not there[...]
After him carried off[...]
"Release me, my sister[...]
[Do not] raise the alarm[...]
I will go and [come back] to the Land of no Return."

With regard to her, [... turned dark. (20')

Ereshkigal [...]
[She went to the bathroom
. . . [she revealed her body].
She called [...]:
A throne[...]

"[Sprinkle the house with] water of [...]
Sprinkle the house with water of [...]
[To lie]."

(A few lines are missing.)

Tears were running down her cheeks.
"O Erra, my voluptuous mate!

51 Nergal is speaking.
52 Restore qu-bu-hu from v 38' and note gu-bu-uf} in the Amarni version B, 32. See Gurney, loc. at., 130.
53 Presumably Enmesharra, an underworld deity.
I was not sated with his charms (and) he has left me.
O Erra, my voluptuous mate,
I was not sated with his charms (and) he has left me."

Namtar opened his mouth to say something to Ereshkigal:
"[...][...] I will seize that god,
[... that he might kiss thee."

(v)

Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
To say something to Namtar, his vizier:
"[...][...]
Set your face toward the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
[...]
I will seize that god,
[...] that he might kiss thee."

(Ereshkigal opened her mouth to speak,
To say something to Namtar, her vizier):
"Go, Namtar, ...
Set your face toward the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
(Say): 'Since I, thy daughter, was young,
I have not known the play of maidens,
I have not known the frolic of young girls.
[That god whom thou didst send and who had intercourse with me,
Let him lie with me,
Send [that god] to me that he might be my husband,
That he might lodge with me.
I am sexually defiled, I am not pure,
I cannot determine the verdicts of the great gods,
The great gods who dwell in Irkalla.
If thou dost not send [that god],
According to the ordinances of Irkalla and the great underworld,
I shall send up the dead that they might devour the living.
I shall make the dead more numerous than the living."

Namtar ascended the long staircase of the heavens.
When he reached the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
Anu, Enlil, and Ea looked at him and (said):
"Why dost thou come, Namtar?"

"Your daughter has sent me,
With these words: 'Since I, thy daughter, was young,
I have not known the play of maidens,
I have not known the frolic of young girls.
[That god whom thou didst send and who had intercourse with me,
Let him lie with me,
Send [that god] to me that he might be my husband,
That he might lodge with me.
I am sexually defiled, I am not pure,
I cannot determine the verdict[s of the great gods],
The great gods who dwell in Irkalla.
If thou dost not send [that god],
I shall send up [the dead that they might devour] the living,
[That he might lodge with me]."

Ea opened his mouth [to speak], to say something [to Namtar]:
"Na[mtar, come in]to the cour[tyard of Anu]."

When he entered [the courtyard of Anu],
All of [the gods were humbly] bowed down [...],
[The god[s] of the land were b[owed down ...].
[He went straight up to] one, [but did not] recognize that god,
He went straight up to [a second (and) thir]d, but did not recognize that god.
N[amt]ar went to say something to his mistress:
"My mistress, [in the heaven of] Anu, thy father, to which thou didst send me,
My mistress [there was a certain god] who was bald,
Twitching, lame ..., sitting in the assembly of all the gods."
"Go, seize that god, bring (him) to me!
Ea, his father, has sprinkled him with spring water,
So that he is bald, twitching, lame ..., As he sits in the assembly of all the gods."

Namtar ascended the long staircase of the heavens.
When he reached the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
Anu, Enlil, and Ea looked at him [and (said)]:
"Why dost thou come, Namtar?"

"Your daughter has sent me
With these words:
'Seize that god and bring (him) to me!'
Ea, his father, has sprinkled (him) with spring water,
So that he is bald, twitching, lame ...
[As he sits in the assembly of all the gods]."

Namtar ascended the long staircase of the heavens.
When he reached the gate of Anu, Enlil, and Ea,
Anu, Enlil, and Ea looked at him [and (said)]:
"Why dost thou come, Namtar?"

He went straight up to one, but did not recognize [that god],
He went straight up to [a second (and) third], but [did not recognize that god],
He went straight up to [a fourth (and) fifth], but [did not recognize that god], [...] opened his mouth to speak, to say something to Ea:
"[... Na]mtar, the messenger who came [to us],
[Let him] drink [water], let him bathe,
Let him anoint [his body]."

(About six lines are missing in which it was narrated that Namtar found Nergal/Erra. In the following broken section, which is translated below, Namtar instructs Nergal that he must give up a piece of clothing or some other object at each of the seven gates to the nether world. Cf. the Descent of Ishtar.

(vi)

"May he not remove [...]"

55 Nergal/Erra must be speaking.
"Erra, I shall make thee go [ . . . ] upon him [ . . . ], I shall kill thee, I shall [ . . . ]"

"Namtar, thy task to [ . . . ]"

All the ordinances of the great underworld I will reveal to thee.

When [thou] hast departed from this place, I shall provide a throne for [thee to carry],[57] for [thee to carry],[57] for [thee to carry],[57] for [thee to carry],[57] for [thee to carry],[57] for [thee to carry], for [thy breast]."

[Erra] took his heart [the speech of Namtar], he . . . his . . . and drew his bow.

[Nergal] descended the long staircase of the heavens.

When he re(ached) the gate of Ereshkigal (he said):

"Open [for me], O porter, the gate!"

The porter of the gate hung up [his throne at] the gate,

He did not let him take [it] away.

The second (porter) of the gate did the same to his . . . .

The third (porter) of the gate did the same to his . . . .

The fourth (porter) of the gate did the same to his . . . .

The fifth (porter) of the gate did the same to his . . . .

[The sixth (porter) of the gate] did the same to his . . . .

[The seventh (porter) of the gate] did the same to his . . . .

He entered her wide courtyard,

He went up to her and laughed.

He seized her by her coiffure,

He [dragged] her from [the throne].

He seized her [by] her locks,

. . . love of his heart.

They both embraced one another,

Passionately they got into bed.

The first day, the second day, they lay, queen Ereshkigal and Erra.

The third day they lay, queen Ereshkigal and Erra.

The fourth day they lay, queen Ereshkigal and Erra.

[The sixth day] they lay, queen Ereshkigal and Erra.

[The seventh day] came, [Anu opened his mouth] to speak, To say something [to Kaka, his vizier]:

I will send thee, [Kaka, to the Land of no Return],

[To the house of Ereshkigal], who dwells in Irkalla.

[With these words: That god] whom I sent to thee,

[He shall dwell with thee for] ever.

. . . those above,

. . . those below."

(The remainder of the text is missing.)

Atrahasis

Our knowledge of this epic has increased tremendously since the publication of the revised edition of this volume. The improvement of our understanding is due in large part to the article by I. Laessöe, "The Atrahasis Epic: A Babylonian History of Mankind," Bi.Or., xiii (1956), 90-102 in which the numerous fragments of the composition are placed in their proper sequence. Of major importance as well has been the discovery and publication of hand copies of the greater part of the Old Babylonian version of the epic by W. G. Lambert and A. R. Millard in CT, xlvi. In this latter publication the two authors have promised that their edition of the epic is forthcoming. It would be improper for the present author to anticipate this publication by attempting to present here a translation of the new texts. Therefore CT, xlvi will not normally be considered in this revision but all other recent publications will be taken into account. One major discovery resulting from recent research is that Speiser's so-called "Creation of Man by the Mother Goddess" which was translated on pp. 99 f. is in fact an integral part of the Atrahasis Epic.

Using Laessöe's analysis as a basis there are, besides the Sumerian,[50] four recensions of this epic, one Old Babylonian, one Middle Babylonian, and two Neo-Assyrian (which will be referred to as I and II) as well as fragments of other recensions. The Old Babylonian recension was inscribed on three tablets and described the creation of mankind, the flood which was sent to destroy the people who had been making an uproar, and the survival of Atrahasis with family and beasts in the ark. Only a tiny fragment of the Middle Babylonian recension (Speiser's fragment X) has been preserved and the narration concerns the building of the ark. The Neo-Assyrian version I (Laessöe's "Babylonian" recension—see loc. cit., 99 and 101) was inscribed on at least three tablets and differs considerably from the other recensions. The first tablet is apparently the so-called "Syllabic Alphabet"[50] which begins with the syllables me-me-par-par and which, according to Gadd,[52] was regarded by the compiler of this series as the first attempts at human speech and therefore added to the epic in which the creation of mankind was described. The second tablet contained a mythological text in which the creation of mankind was narrated in a manner similar to but not identical with the other recensions of the Atrahasis Epic. The third tablet has not been identified with certainty but since it began with the words "When god... man" (the introductory phrase to the other recensions and the title of the Atrahasis Epic) it, as well as perhaps subsequent tablets, certainly contained a version of the Atrahasis Epic. There are fragments, including Speiser's fragment C, which may belong to the third or subsequent tablets of this version. The Neo-Assyrian version II (Laessøe's "Assyrian" recension—see loc. cit., 99 and 101) was inscribed on two tablets, only the first of which has been identified (Speiser's fragment D). Only a small part of the narrative is preserved and it concerns the creation of mankind and the events leading up to the flood.

OLD BABYLONIAN VERSION

A and B

The first of the three tablets of the Old Babylonian version is the text Speiser called "Creation of Man by the Mother Goddess" which has been discussed under that heading in this section. The second and third tablets are Speiser's fragments A and B respectively. No change has been made in Speiser's translation of 6 but the understanding of A has been improved by Laessøe's study in Bi.Or., xm (1956), 90-94. Some corrections have been incorporated in the body of the former translation but it should be noted that more is legible at the end of column vii.

By task will be [. . .] (394)

May it [and its . . .] examine?*

Shullat and [Hanish].

May they go [first].

May Irfrakal root out] the mooring poles,

May [Ninurta] go [on],

Bursting the dikes].

(The remainder of the column is missing.)

MIDDLE BABYLONIAN VERSION

X

Speiser's fragment X is not Old Babylonian, as stated in the last edition of this volume, but Kassite or Middle Babylonian. See W. G. Lambert, JSS, v (1960), 114, η. 1.

NEO-ASSYRIAN VERSION I

C

The nature of this recension and the tablets, including perhaps Speiser's fragment C, which belong to it have been discussed above. A minor change has been made in Speiser's translation of C (line 16) in accordance with a suggestion of W. G. Lambert, JSS, v (1960), 114, η. 8.

NEO-ASSYRIAN VERSION II

D

The only part of this two tablet version which has been identified is Speiser's fragment D which comes from the first tablet As Laessøe, loc. cit., 96-98, has pointed out the obverse and reverse of this fragment have been mistakenly identified and the sequence, as found in Speiser's translation, should be reversed. Thus Speiser's column numbers i, ii, and iii should be vi, v, and iv and arranged in numerical order. Further, the column of this fragment called "iv" by Speiser and translated on p. 100 as a separate myth is, as Laessøe, loc. cit., 98 has argued, an integral part of the Atrahasis Epic and should appear at the beginning of the translation of fragment D on p. 105 as column iii. Columns i and ii of D are missing. A few changes have been made in Speiser's translation in accordance with recent research.

E

A fragment which is almost certainly from a late recension of the Atrahasis Epic is BM, 98977 + 99231 and it will henceforth be referred to as fragment E. It was recently published by W. G. Lambert, JSS, v (1960), 113-22. On the obverse is found a narration of how Ea informed Atrahasis of the coming flood and on the reverse is found a description of the flood itself. In both cases the text is similar to but not identical with parts of the eleventh tablet of Gilgamesh and the content of the reverse is also to be compared with the end of fragment A translated above.

(395)

[. . .] [I heard] thee come in [and]

[. . .] ... which is like [thy fo]otsteps.

(Atrahasis) bowed, knelt down, (then) stood up [, . . .]

He opened [his mouth] to speak: [. . .] I heard thee come in and [. . .] which is like thy footsteps.

[. . .] I heard thee come in and [. . .] which is like [thy] footsteps.

[. . .] as seven years.

[. . .] . .

[. . .] thy . . . mounted I have seen thy face.

[. . .] your [. . .] speak to me.”

[. . .] opened his mouth to speak,

[To sa]ly to the reed-hut:

[. . .] reed-hut, reed-hut!

[. . .] [I]isten to me!”

(The remainder of the obverse is too broken for translation.)

(10)

. . . and he called the [boat].
Adad rode on the four winds, [his] mules:
South wind, north wind, east wind, west wind,
... the hurricane, the tornado, the thunderstorm,
The dreadful wind, the ... united for the onslaught.
... the south wind arose at his side,
The west wind blew at his side, (10)
... came ... .

... the chariot of the gods ... [....]
Ravages, slaughters, crushes [....]
Ninurta goes on, [bursting] the dikes,
Erakal roots up the mfooring poles.
... with his claws the heavens [....]
Ishtar like a pot went to pieces.76
[....] the flood goes forth,
[....] destruction approaches mankind.73

[....] ... the flood,
[....] is harassed.
[....] her children are carried off by her (own) command. (22)

(The remainder of the text is too broken for translation.)

The Myth of Zu

Our knowledge of the Myth of Zu has increased considerably in the last few years due to discoveries at Sultantepe and the publication of CT, XLVI. All of the new material relates to the late recension of which we now have most of Tablets I and II and a few fragments of Tablet III (?). There is a Sumerian tale about Zu which, although still not fully understood, seems to have some affinity with the Akkadian story. The texts are UT, vi, No. 2 and AASOR, xxm (1943-44), No. 41. Cf. M. Civil, RA, LX (1966), 92.

When Speiser prepared his translation for Tablet II of the late recension he had only the fragmentary text, LKA, No. 1. In order to present a meaningful translation, therefore, he made a conflation of the Old Babylonian versions and the LKA (Ebeling) version which appeared on pp. 111 f. and in the Addenda of the second edition. Since we now have an almost complete text for Tablet II of the late recension it has been considered advisable to present both versions separately. Therefore all of the material that came from LKA, No. 1 has been withdrawn from the translation of the Old Babylonian version on pp. 11 f. and the now almost complete Tablet II of the late recension will be presented here. The points of contact between the two texts will be obvious to the reader. In the Addenda to the second edition of this volume Speiser presented a translation of Tablet III of the Old Babylonian version which was in reality again a conflation of the Old Babylonian version and LKA, No. 1. With 73 A scribal note indicates there is a break in the original tablet.

75 Lambert, loc. cit., regarded lines 18-19 as a cry of Ishtar and translated: ‘[....] take away the flood! [....] for the peoples! Summon the mighty one!’ The present author has taken i-ta-fa-a as a present Gt of asu (and not an imperative of nasi) and i-ba-a as a present G (and not imperative) of ba-’u. Cf. MuJI17m 69.4kækkf “Er-ra ma-ta i-ba(-)”. The sword of Irra will overrun the land for three years,” CT, xxxix, 33-46 and CT, XL, 46-44 and cf. CAD, n (B), 180. For ja-lu, “divine weapon” (von Soden, AHu, 456 f.), in the sense of “destruction” note [a-lu-lu — na-as-pa-nu] CT, xxx, 9:11 and cf. E. F. Weidner, AJo, Beiheft XII (1959), 30, note to line 9.

ASSYRIAN VERSION

Tablet I

New sources for Tablet I are: W. G. Lambert, CT, XLVI, 36 (K. 7257 given in transliteration by E. Reiner, RA, LI [1957], 107-08), 37, 39 (DT. 292—joins K. 3454 + 3935—published in translation by E. Reiner, RA, XLVIII [1954], 146), 40 (Sm. 1897—only variants from it given by E. Reiner, RA, XLVIII [1954], 146).

All of the new material for Tablet I has been incorporated in the translation on pp. 112 f. with a few exceptions. The beginning of column 1 is now preserved:

The son of the king of inhabited places,
The illustrious, beloved of Mami,
The strong one, the god, child of [Enli], I will ever praise.
Ninurta, the illustrious, beloved of Mami,
[The strong] one, the god, child of Enil, I will ever glorify.

[(He is): The olfsp]ring of Ekur, foremost among the Annunaki, Strength of Eninnu,
[He who made] the animal-stalls (and) founded houses, streets and cities;
The hero, [experienced in battle, the active fighter
[Whose] tireless attack the savage [demons] fear;
[....] the strong one, praise of his might,
[Who] bound his [enem]ies (and) tied up the Stone Things;
[Who vanquished the f]ugitive Zu with his weapon,
[Who subdued the K]usarikk]u in the midst of the sea;
[....] ... goes, moves with his weapon,
[....] directs strife (and) battle,
[....] the shrines were made,
[....] Igigi.

(The remainder of the column is missing.)
(In column iii, p. 113, after a gap of about seven lines a few more lines are now legible):

[....] ... Anu says:

(105)

And will appoint (him) in the Assembly as the vanquisher of Zu.

74 Read: ir-mu-u.
75 mu-um-mil-lu a-gu-uff-hu lit.: “One who pronounces in the belt.” mu-um-mil-lu has been derived from me-lulu on which see B. Landsberger, WZKM, LV (1960), 119, n. 30 and cf. W. von Soden, AHu, 644 and CAD, l/i (A), 159-60.
76 A mythological monster.
Yea, I will find a god
And appoint (him) in the Assembly as the vanquisher of Zu."

When the Igigi heard this speech of his,
The Igigi trembled and kissed his feet.
Ninigiku" opened his mouth to speak,
To say something to Anu and Dagan.

(Column iii ends at this point and column iv is entirely missing.)

Tablet II

The new material for this tablet has necessitated an entirely new translation. When the narration begins, Mami is speaking.

"... to appoint a time;
... send forth brilliance.
Let thy saluteificentZh advance aggressively towards him and the word of his mouth went forth to him,
[The hero] Ninurta [answered] Zu:

"I [am... ] and the god of Duranki,
[53] received wide [understanding] (from) Ea, king of the Destinies.
I have come [to thee] to fight with thee."
When Zu heard the word of his mouth,
In the midst of the mountain range he let loose a piercing shriek.
There was darkness, the face of the mountain was covered,
Ninurta, the light of the gods, entered the gloom.
Adad ..., roared, his thunder pursued Zu,
In the midst of the conflict, (in the midst of) the war,
He launched fourteen storm floods,
Dressed in armor he bathed in blood,
Clouds of death sent rain, the lightning flashes were arrows.

He stood in their midst while the battle roared,
The strong, the illustrious, the child of Mami,
The hope of Anu and Dagan, the beloved of Ninigiku,
He loaded [the...] of the bow with an arrow,
For the breast of the bow he loosed the arrow at him,
He was wroth, he raged (and) departed for his (Zu's) mountain.
My lord hitched the Seven-of-the-Batde, (30)
The hero hitched the seven ill winds,
The seven whirlwinds which stir up the dust,
He launched a terrifying war, a fierce conflict.
While the gale at his side shrieked for strife,
Zu and Ninurta met on the mountainside.
When Zu saw him he raged at him,
He ground (his teeth) like a demon, his brilliance covered the mountain,
He roared like a Hon seized with anger,
In his rage he called [to the hero]:
"I have carried off everyone of the norms,
And (therefore) the decrees of all the gods I direct;
Who art thou to come to fight with me?
Explain thyself!"
He advanced aggressively toward him and the word of his mouth went forth to him,
[The hero] Ninurta [answered] Zu:

"I [am... ] and the god of Duranki,

The hope of Anu and Dagan, the beloved of Ninigiku,
He loaded [the...] of the bow with an arrow,
From the breast of the bow he loosed the arrow at him,
He was wroth, he raged (and) departed for his (Zu's) mountain.
My lord hitched the Seven-of-the-Batde, (30)
The hero hitched the seven ill winds,
The seven whirlwinds which stir up the dust,
He launched a terrifying war, a fierce conflict.
While the gale at his side shrieked for strife,
Zu and Ninurta met on the mountainside.
When Zu saw him he raged at him,
He ground (his teeth) like a demon, his brilliance covered the mountain,
He roared like a Hon seized with anger,
In his rage he called [to the hero]:
"I have carried off everyone of the norms,
And (therefore) the decrees of all the gods I direct;
Who art thou to come to fight with me?
Explain thyself!"
He advanced aggressively toward him and the word of his mouth went forth to him,
But the arrow could not approach Zu, it turned back,
(For) Zu called to it:
"O arrow that [has] come, return to thy canebrake,
Stave [of the bow] (return) to thy wood,
(Return, bow-)gut, to the sheep's rump, return wings to the birds!"

While he bore the [Tablet of De]stinies of the gods in his hand,
. . . [the arrows] could not approach his body.
The battle was stilled, the conflict ceased,
The weapons were stopped, in the midst of the mountain
They vanished not Zu.

He (Ninurta) called to Adad and gave him instructions:
"Repeat to him, to Ea Ninigiku, the deeds which thou hast observed:
'O lord, Ninurta was encircling Zu,
Ninurta was girding up the dust of destruction;
He loaded [the . . .] of the bow with an arrow,
He drew the bow and loosed the arrow at him,
But the arrow could not approach Zu, it turned back,
(For) Zu called to it:
'O arrow that has come, return to thy canebrake,
Stave of the bow (return) to thy wood,
(Return, bow-)gut, to the sheep's rump, return wings to the birds!"

While he bore the Tablet of Destinies of the gods in his hand,
. . . the arrows could not approach his body.
The battle was stilled, the conflict ceased,
The weapons were stopped, in the midst of the mountain
they vanished not Zu."

Adad, the prince, took the report,
The news of the fight he bore to Ea Ninigiku.
Whatever the lord had spoken to him he repeated to Ea:
"O lord, Ninurta was encircling Zu,
Ninurta was girding up the dust of destruction;
He loaded [the . . .] of the bow with an arrow,
He drew the bow and loosed the arrow at him,
But the arrow could not approach Zu, it turned back,
(For) Zu called to it:
'O arrow that has come, return to [thy] canebrake,
Stave of the bow (return) to thy wood,
(Return, bow-)gut, to the sheep's [rump], [return] wings to the birds!'"
Take the . . . weapon to the back of thy darts,
[Cut off] [his] pinions, scatter (them) [to the right and left].

When he sees his wings (the sight) will rob him of speech:
"Wing to wing!" he will cry, [fear] him no (longer).

Draw thy bow (and) from its breast let fly the arrows [like lightning],
Let pinions (and) wings dance like bloody things.

Let pinions (and) wings to a secret place,
Toward Ekur, to thy father Enlil.

Let built [shri]nes appear,
Let thy sovereignty (again) enter [Ekur], (M

When the norms [return] to the father who begot
The seven ill winds,
The hero hitched the seven ill winds,
The seven whirlwinds which stir up the dust.  (150)

Fragmentary descriptions of the subsequent battle which took place between Ninurta and Zu have been recently published. Presumably these pieces come from Tablet III of the epic. The fullest account is found in the two duplicates, STT, I, Nos. 23 and 25. Mention is made of a theogony which came from Dunnu, an obscure Babylonian city. Other theogenees are known in Akkadian literature, such as the famous one which begins the Epic of Creation, but these are usually confabulations of various traditions from different cities. The present text apparently contains the tradition of only one city. The gods are paired, male and female, the first two being Hain, an otherwise unknown male deity, and Earth. These two brought into existence the next pair of deities, Amakandu and Sea, as well as the city, Dunnu. In the subsequent lines of the text is found the stereotyped account of how, by means of incest and murder, one divine pair succeeded another. Only the names of one more pair, Lahar and River, are completely preserved. The names of the male consorts of Ga'um and Ningishzida are missing. The dates upon which each new god took control are given and these were obviously related to important festivals of the city, Dunnu.

They planned the city [. . .],
The [. . .] gods [la]id [the foundation].
They planned the [sK]rine, not [. . .],
The [. . .] gods laid its foundation.

May [the city] be the nest, the resting place of (mankind),
May [the kwa]q the shepherd, they [. . .],
May Etana be the builder, they [. . .],
. . . the staff[f . . . ]  (8)

Etana

ADDITIONS

No new texts have come to light for this myth but a hand copy of the Middle Assyrian Version (previously utilized in the translation) has been published by E. Ebeling, LKA, No. 14. A recent study by W. von Soden, WZKM, LV (1959), 59-61 has shed further light on the interpretation of the tale and a few changes have been made in the former translation. The study of von Soden enables us to present here a translation of the first eight lines of the Neo-Assyrian Version. The city referred to in these lines is certainly Kish since it was, according to the Sumerian King List, the city to which the kingship first descended after the flood and Etana was a king of that city.

They planned the city [. . .],
The [. . .] gods [la]id [the foundation].
They planned the [sK]rine, not [. . .],
The [. . .] gods laid its foundation.

May [the city] be the nest, the resting place of (mankind),
May [the kwa]q the shepherd, they [. . .],
May Etana be the builder, they [. . .],
. . . the staff[f . . . ]  (8)

A Babylonian Theogony

Recently a document unique in Akkadian literature was published by A. R. Millard, CT, xlv, No. 43 and translated by W. G. Lambert with a discussion of Classical parallels by P. Walcot in Kadmos, iv (1965), 64-72. It is a late Babylonian copy of a theogony which came from Dunnu, an obscure Babylonian city. Other theogenees are known in Akkadian literature, such as the famous one which begins the Epic of Creation, but these are usually confabulations of various traditions from different cities. The present text apparently contains the tradition of only one city. The gods are paired, male and female, the first two being Hain, an otherwise unknown male deity, and Earth. These two brought into existence the next pair of deities, Amakandu and Sea, as well as the city, Dunnu. In the subsequent lines of the text is found the stereotyped account of how, by means of incest and murder, one divine pair succeeded another. Only the names of one more pair, Lahar and River, are completely preserved. The names of the male consorts of Ga'um and Ningishzida are missing. The dates upon which each new god took control are given and these were obviously related to important festivals of the city, Dunnu.

[. . . ] in the beginni[ng . . .]
[. . . ] and [. . .]

They [. . .] . . . their plough.
[With the cut of their plough they created Sea.

[Their]ly, they built the two Pillars of Dunnu.
[Ha]in bestowed the lordship in Dunnu on himself.
[Earth] turned her attention to Amakandu, her son, She said to him, "Come, I will make love to you!"

98 A name for the god of wild animals.
99 God of cattle.
Ama[kandu] married Earth, his mother; (10)
He killed Hain, his [father, and]
Laid [him] to rest in Dunnu, the city which he loved.
Then Amakandu [too]k the lordship of his father [and] [Ma]ried Sea, his sister, . . .
Lahar, son of Amakandu, went [and]
Killed Amakandu and in Dunnu,
In the . . of [hi]s father, he laid [him] to rest.
He married Sea, [hi]s mother.
Then Sea [too]k the lordship of his father [and]
Married Earth, her mother.
On the sixteenth day of the month Kislim he took the lordship and sovereignty.
(20)

[. . .] son of Lahar married River, his own sister.
He killed Lahar, his father, and Sea, his mother.
[. . .] laid them to rest . . .
On the first day [of the month . . . he took] the sovereignty and lordship for himself.
[. . ., son of . . .], ma[rr]ied Ga'um,100 his sister.
He . . . [. . .] earth

100Text: "Uaum." See Lambert, loc. at., 67.
El, Ashertu and the Storm-god

Text: KUB, XII, 61; KUB, xxx, nS + KUB, xxxvi, 37; KUB, mm, 34, 35. Literature: H. Otten, M10, 1 (1953), 125-50; H. A. Hoffner, RHA, LXXVI (1965), 5-16. This "Canaanite Myth" is only a fragment from a larger context. One may hope that more of it will turn up in the future.

(i) ".... Give thyself to me, then] I shall give myself to thee; I shall harass thee with my word, [with my spindle I shall prick thee. [.....] I shall stir thee up."
The Storm-god heard the words. (5) He went on his way and betook himself to the well-spring of the Malak-River. [He] came to El-kunirsha, the husband of Ashertu, and entered El-kunirsha's tent.

El-kunirsha beheld the Storm-god and asked him: "[Why] didst thou come?" Thus said the Storm-god: "When I entered thy house, (10) Ashertu sent out (her) maidens to me (saying), 'Come, sleep with me!' [When] I refused, she became aggressive and said to me as follows: 'Give thyself to me, [then] I shall give myself to thee; I shall harass thee with my word, (15) with my spindle I shall prick thee.' This is why I have come, my father. For, [with a message] I did not come, I have come to thee on my own. Ashertu is impugning thy virility. Although she is thy wife she keeps on sending to me: 'Come, sleep with me.'" El-kunirsha began to reply to the Storm-god: (20) "Go, sleep with her! Lie with my wife and humble her!"
The Storm-god hearkened to the word of El-kunirsha. With Ashertu he slept. The Storm-god said to Ashertu: "Of thy sons I slew 77, I slew 88." Ashertu (25) heard this humiliating word of the Storm-god and her mind got incensed against him. She appointed wailing-women and began to wail for 7 years. They keep eating (and) drinking....

(ii?) "... I shall listen ...[... and] I shall sleep with thee." [When El-kunirsha] heard these words, he said to his wife: "[···] the Storm-god, I shall turn him over to thee. (5) As thou pleasest, thus deal with him!"

ISHTAR heard those words. In El-kunirsha's hand she became a cup; she became a hapupil bird and roosted on his wall. Whatever words husband and wife speak, those ISHTAR (10) overhears. El-kunirsha and his wife went upon her bed and slept with each other. But ISHTAR flew like a bird across the . . . and found the Storm-god in the . . . (The column breaks off. Apparently ISHTAR tells the Storm-god of El and Ashertu's plot.)

(Of the other columns too little is preserved to yield a comprehensible context.)

¹This has been explained as Canaanite qone' ārs "(El), creator of the earth"; but there are still some details connected with this identification that are not yet dear.
²Ct Ugarit. 'Aïrat, Hebr. 'Aerōffîj.

⁸Used here as an ideogram; the pronunciation remains problematic.
Legal Texts
Collections of Laws from Mesopotamia and Asia Minor

TRANSLATOR: J. J. FINKELSTEIN

The Laws of Ur-Nammu

Ur-Nammu (2112-2095 B.C.) was the founding ruler of the 3rd Dynasty of Ur, the builder of the best preserved ziggurat in ancient Mesopotamia, whose reign inaugurated the last great period of Sumerian literary creativity. Although some contemporary examples of this creative effort have begun to come to light in recent excavations at Nippur, most of the literary and scholarly production of this period is known only from copies produced in the scribal schools in Nippur and Ur some two to three hundred years later, i.e., between 1800 and 1700 B.C. This is true of the two extant manuscripts of the Ur-Nammu Laws. Text A, Ni 3191, was copied in Nippur, and was edited by S. N. Kramer in Orientalia, XXIII (1954), pp. 40 if., with additional notes by A. Falkenstein, "ibid." pp. 49 ff. This tablet originally contained eight columns of writing, four on each side, but less than half of the original content is preserved. Almost all of the obverse, the better preserved face, is devoted to the prologue, so that very little legal material is preserved in this text. Text B consists of two fragments, U.7739 and U.7740, of what was once a single tablet, but the two fragments do not join. They were found in Ur, and like text A, were written by a student scribe during the Old Babylonian period. This text was edited by o. R. Gurney and S. N. Kramer in AS, xvi (1965), the Landsberger Festschrift, pp. 13-19. The editors thought that the tablet was intended to contain ten columns of writing—five on each face—of which only the obverse, one column on the reverse, plus one line on the next column were completed. The student scribe, for some unknown reason stopped at that point, and failed to complete the tablet. As will be indicated below, the present translator believes that the tablet was originally intended to contain eight columns rather than ten (like the A text), of which the four of the obverse and one on the reverse (col. v) plus one additional line were actually completed. (This opinion has since been confirmed by Dr. E. Sollberger of the British Museum who has kindly provided the present author with his notes by A. Falkenstein, amschhip of Ur to Nanna, (36-40) at that time did Ur-Nammu, son born of (the goddess) Ninsun, for his beloved mother who bore him, (41-42) in accordance with his (i.e., of the god Nanna) principles of equity and truth, . . . (lines 43-72 destroyed or fragmentary).

(col. ii 73-74) He set up the seven . . . (75-78) Nammanhi, the ensi of Lagash he slew. (79-84) By the might of Nanna, lord of the city (of Ur), he returned the Magan-boat of Nanna to the boundary (canal) (85-86) (and) made it famous in Ur*

(87-96) At that time, the field(s) had been subject to the nisqum-oSicvXy the maritime trade was subject to the seafarers' overseer, (col. iii) the herdsman was subject to the "oxen-taker," the "sheep-taker," and the "donkey-taker."4

(lines 97-103 destroyed) (104-113) Then did Ur-Nammu, the mighty warrior, king of Ur, king of Sumer and Akkad, by the might of Nanna, lord of the city (of Ur), and in accordance with the true word of Utu," establish equity in the land (114-116) (and) he banished malediction, violence and strife. (117-122) By granting immunity in Afyad to the maritime trade from the seafarers' overseer, to the herdsman from the "oxen-taker," the "sheep-taker," and the "donkey-taker," he (123-124) set Sumer and Akkad free.

(125-129) At that time, the . . . of Mar[ad] (and) Kazalflu[5] he____(130-134) [By] the might [of Nanna] (his) lord . . . he . . . (135-142) The copper . . ., the (wooden) . . . (three lines missing), the copper .. ., the wooden . . ., [these] seven . . ., he standardized. (143-144) He fashioned the bronze it7a-measure, (145-

3 N i g - s i - 3 d = mtlarum and n i g - g i - n a (restored) = lttum
4 This section recounted mainly the military achievements of Ur-Nammu.
5 While the exact meaning of some phrases in this section remains in doubt, Kramer appears justified in taking it as a series of economic abuses, i.e., in each of the enumerated activities there was present a semiofficial agent who exacted excessive or unwarranted revenues from the persons engaged in each activity.
6 Restoring (lines 110-111): [ i n i m - g ] l - n a [ "Utu] -a, as in the first line of the epilogue of the Lipit-Ishtar Laws (A/A, LH [1948], p. 23).
7 The line is untranslatable and partially destroyed, but it is assumed that it contained a verb denoting the correction of the abuses enumerated previously.
8 Restoring the line possibly as: Su - ba - a - [b - b a r ]; J u - b a r = Akk. (wa)Lt Hurum, "release, remit," is the exact word used in the Edict of Ammisaduga for the remission of debts and obligations, and is found elsewhere in similar contexts.
9 Two cities in Babylonia, north of Sumer; the restoration of these names here is possible on the basis of the traces in lines 127-128.

[523]
(150-152) At that time, the bank of the Tigris, the bank of the Euphrates ... (153-160 destroyed) ... (161) of the tablet, or at the very beginning of col. v on the reverse, since traces strongly suggest the beginning of a law-case with line 196, which will be considered here as § 1.

2: (206-215). . . . He shall plant for him, his . . . the planted . . . apple trees and cedars ... [he . . .] without the owner’s knowledge, . . . he shall bring in.

3: (216-221, destroyed)

4: (222-231 = B § 1). If the wife of a man, by employing her charms, followed after another man and he slept with her, they (i.e., the authorities) shall slay that woman, but that male (i.e., the other man) shall be set free.

5: (232-239 = B § 2). If a man proceeded by force, and deflowered the virgin (lit.: “undeflowered”) slave-woman of another man, that man must pay five shekels of silver.

6: (app. 240-244 = B § 3). If a man divorces his primary wife, he must pay (her) one mina of silver.

7: (app. 245-249 = B § 4). If it is a (former) widow (whom) he divorces, he must pay (her) one-half mina of silver.

8: (250-255 = B § 5). If (however) the man had slept with the widow without there having been any marriage contract, he need not pay (her) any silver.

9: (= 256-260 mostly destroyed)

10: (270-280). If a man had accused a(nother) man of . . . , and he (i.e., the accuser) had him (i.e., the accused) brought to the river-ordeal, and the river-ordeal proved him innocent, then the man who had brought him (i.e., the accuser) must pay him three shekels of silver.

11: (281-290 = B § 10). If a man accused the wife of a man of fornication, and the river-(ordeal) proved her innocent, then the man who had accused her must pay one-third of a mina of silver.

12: (291-301 = B § 11). If a (prospective) son-in-law entered the house of his (prospective) father-in-law, but his father-in-law later gave [his daughter (i.e., the prospective bride)] to another man, he (the father-in-law) shall return to him (i.e., the rejected son-in-law) two-fold the amount of bridal presents he had brought.

13: (302-312 = B § 12). (Only traces remain.)

14: (313-323, omitted in B). If [ . . . ] a slavewoman [for a male slave fled from the masters house] and crossed beyond the territory of the city, and (another) man brought her/him back, the owner of the slave shall pay to the one who brought him back two shekels of silver.

15: (324-330 = B § 13 + § 21). If a [ . . . ] cut off the foot (var.: limb) of [another man with his . . .] he shall pay ten shekels of silver.

16: (331-338, omitted in B). If a man, in the course of a scuffle, smashed the limb of another man with a club, he shall pay one mina of silver.

17: (339-344 = B § 22). If someone severed the nose of another man with a copper knife, he must pay two-thirds of a mina of silver.

18: (A 345-? = B § 23). If a man cut off the [ . . . ] of [another man] with a [ . . . ] he shall pay [x shekels(?) of silver].

---

9 Reading GAl.NI as sAnDaNa = Sandana | u with Falkenstein.
10 Reading ba ED UR ERE-n-a x in line 210.
11 Reading line 214 as 1 u-ga-i [-d a n u] - me-a, cf. the Nippur trial text, JAGS, LXXXVI (1967), p. 359, line 22'.
12 For this section and the next, cf. ibid., pp. 355, 369; and, for the link of the two mss. at this point, p. 360, note 15.
13 Where the copy of A line 252 shows TA, the photo rather favors the reading XE (followed by nu me-[a], making it almost certain that this line corresponds to lines 32-33 of text B col i.
14 i.e., if he then decides to divorce her; the situation of §§ 6'-7' governs this case as well, cf. JAGS, LXXXVI, p. 372, note 52.
15 In line 271 Kramer read the second sign as 1 u: kiššu, "sorcery," and compared this section with § 2 of the Laws of Hammurabi. But the sign, as copied shows more than ka X DAD (- u le), which prompted my own suggestion (JAGS, LXXXVI, 370, note 45) to read it as gurî (KA X GU) = Akk. damu, "blood, bloodshed, murder," and to compare it with § 1 of the Hammurabi Laws. But this also appears problematic as a result of comparing both mss., cf. the next note.
16 It is certain that other § 15 or § 16 is omitted in the Ur ms., but due to the lacunae in both texts, and to the evidence that their wording differs to some degree, it is difficult to ascertain which of the two has been omitted in B. The solution adopted here is based on the verb used in § 16, 21 1-r, “to smash, crush,” which is not found in B, where the verb used in all cases is ka us, "to cut off, sever." It is nevertheless certain that the two mss. "join" at around this point since text B ii 36 must be read as gur· p-ad · d-d u, “bone, limb,” and is consequently to be brought into some relationship to the gur· p-ad · d u of line 334 of the A text.
17 If Hammurabi § 199, where this sum applies when the victim is a "condemn dependent" (muikenu).
collections of laws from esopotamia and asia minor

19: (B § 24:4 - § 16). If he [nun|ed out| his to|oth| with [a . . . ] he shall pay two shekels of silver.22

20: (missing). (There is a gap of close to 30 lines, which contained not more than three sections, including § 20, § 21, and the beginning of § 21.)

21: (B §29). . . . he shall surely bring. If he has no slave-woman, he must surely pay ten shekels of silver. If he has no silver, he shall pay him (with) whatever possessions he (owns).23

22': (B§29). If a man's slave-woman, comparing herself to her mistress, speaks insolently to her (or: him), her mouth shall be scourged with 1 quart of salt.

22: (B § 35). If a man's slave-woman, comparing herself to her mistress, struck her . . . (rest missing).

23: (almost completely missing, possibly more than one section in the gap)

24 (B § 34). K a m an appeared as a witness (in a lawsuit), and was shown to be a perjurer,25 he must pay fifteen shekels of silver.

25: (B § 35). If a man appeared as a witness (in a lawsuit), but declined to testify on oath, he must make good as much as is involved in that lawsuit.

26: (B § 36). If a man proceeded by force, and plowed the arable field of a(nother) man, and he (i.e., the latter) brought a lawsuit (against him), but he (i.e., the squatter) reacts in contempt,26 that man will forfeit his expenses.

27: (B § 37). If a man flooded the field of a(nother) man with water, he shall measure out (for him) three 1dr of barley per 1 1/2 of field.27

28: (B § 38). If a man had leased an arable field to.

19: a(nother) man for cultivation, but he (the lessee) did not plow it, so that it turned into wasteland, he shall measure out (to the lessor) three 1dr of barley per 1/2 of field.28

(remainder of text largely destroyed)

Sumerian Laws YBC 2177

Since the publication of this text almost sixty years ago, it was thought to represent a part of the "lawcode" of some unknown ruler of the pre-Hammurabi period. In actual fact, however, the text is a student exercise executed in one of the scribal schools of Southern Mesopotamia (i.e., Sumer) some time during the Old Babylonian period, probably ca. 1800 B.C. The obverse of the tablet has never been published due to its very poor state of preservation, but from those lines of it which are still legible it can be ascertained that it consisted in considerable part of disconnected legal phrases and sentences revolving about a limited number of topics, such as pledges for loans, and loss of animals, and that it contained a number of repetitions. The text may therefore be described as a "forerunner" of the later formularies and vocabularies specializing in legal phraseology which were compiled for the scribal craft, such as ana ittisu (edited by B. Landsberger in Materialien zum sumerischen Lexikon, Vol. 1, Rome, 1937), and the first two tablets of the longer series known as HAR-ra: hubalitu (ibid., Vol. v, 1957). The present translation is limited to the reverse of the tablet, which contains a small number of "laws" or sections grouped around a few basic topics. None of these "laws" is completely articulated in the manner of those found in the better-known "codes," but the sense is often clear, so that the additional phraseology required to fill out the sense may be supplied within parentheses with some degree of confidence. In other instances, especially where the student scribe committed errors, or where the text is laconic or damaged, the legal sense can only be guessed at.

1: If (a man accidentally) buffeted a woman of the free-citizen class and caused her to have a miscarriage, he must pay 10 shekels of silver.

2: If (a man deliberately) struck a woman of the free-citizen class and caused her to have a miscarrriage, he must pay one-third mina of silver.

3: If (a boat captain) violated the itinerary to which he was committed, and (thereby) brought about the loss of the boat, he shall measure out to its owner as much as the boat . . . , (and) its hire of . . . 2

20: Cf. Hammurabi § 42, also Lipit-Ishtar § 8 (which concerns a date-orchard rather than a field).
4: If (a son) has said to his father and to his mother: "You are not my father; you are not my mother," he forfeits (his heir's rights to) house, field, orchard, slaves, and (any other) property, and they may sell him (into slavery) for money at full value.

5: (If) his father and his mother (say): "You are not our son," they will forfeit the estate.

6: (If) his father and his mother (say): "You are not our son," (col. v) [ . . . ] . . . [ . . . ] shall forfeit.³

7: If (a man) deflowered the daughter of a free citizen in the street, her father and her mother not having known (that she was in the street), and she (then) says to her father and her mother: "I was raped," her father and her mother may give her to him (forcibly) as a wife.⁴

8: If (a man) deflowered the daughter of a free citizen in the street, her father and her mother having known (that she was in the street) but the man who deflowered her denied that he knew (her to be of the free-citizen class), and, standing at the temple gate, swore an oath (to this effect, he shall be freed).

9: If a lion has devoured a straying ox, he (i.e., the herdsman or the person who hired it) must deliver the . . . in full, to its owner.⁶

10: If an ox caused the loss of a straying ox, ox for ox . . . . (remainder lost)⁴

The Edict of Ammisaduqa

It was the custom in Mesopotamia during the Old Babylonian period, but going back possibly to late Early Dynastic times, for the kings to proclaim an act of "justice" or "equity" (Sumerian n i g. s i. s a = Akkadian mišarum) at the beginning of their reigns and at intervals of seven or more years thereafter. Such acts, concerned mainly with the remission of debts and other obligations, as well as the reversion of land holdings to their original owners, were known heretofore from allusions to them in royal year-names, and references to them in certain private legal documents. The Edict of Ammisaduqa, the 10th ruler of the Hammurabi Dynasty in Babylon (1646-1626 B.C.), represents the only extant substantial text proper of such an edict, the only other one known being a fragment of a similar edict issued by Samsuiluna (1749-1712 B.C.), the great-grandfather of Ammisaduqa. There is good reason to believe, however, that the early law-"codes," such as those of Ur-Nammu, Lipit-Ishtar, the kingdom of Eshnunna, and the great "code" of Hammurabi incorporate within their texts at least some of the provisions of the misharum-acts proclaimed by them during the course of their reigns, and it is likely that the well-known "reform" inscription of Urukagina, the last king of Lagash of the Early Dynastic period (ca. 2350 B.C.), is a text of a closely related type.

As this manuscript provides the beginning of the text, it necessitated a new numbering of the paragraphs of the edict, Knus* § 1 becoming here § 3, etc.

1: (Text C). The tablet [of the decree which the land was ordered] to hear at the time that the king invoked a misharum for the land.

2: (5) The arrears of the farming agents, the shepherds, the sus[i][w]-agents of the provinces, and (other) crown tributaries—the . . . of their firm agreements and the promissory notes . . . of their payments are herewith remitted. (10) The collecting officer may not sue the crown tributary for payment.

3: The "market" of Babylon, the 'markets' of the country (side), the ra[b]ānun*-officer, which in the . . . tablet, are . . . to the collecting officer—(15) their arrears dating from the "Year in which King Ammidaditu re- mitted the debts which the land had contracted (= year 21 of Ammidaditu)" until the month of Nisan of the "Year: Ammisaduqa the king, Enlil having magnified his noble lordship, like Shamash (Text A) he rose forth in steadfastness over his country, and instituted justice for the whole of his people (= year 1 of Ammisaduqa)—because the king has invoked the misharum for the land, (25) the collecting officer may not sue the [ . . . ] for payment.

4: Whoever has given barley or silver to an Akkadian or an Amorite as an interest-bearing loan, or on the melqetum basis (30) [or . . . ], and had a document executed—because the king has invoked the misharum for the land, his document is voided; (35) (Text C) he may not collect the barley or silver on the basis of his document.

5: But if, commencing with the month of Addar II of the "Year in which King Ammidaditu destroyed the wall of Udimin constructed by Damqilishu" (= Year 37 of Ammidaditu), (40) he collected by constraint, he shall refund whatever he had received through collection.

[526]
He who does not (thus) make a refund (45) in accordance with the royal decree, shall die.

6: Whoever has given barley or silver to an Akkadian or an Amorite as an interest-bearing loan or on the melqetum basis, and in the document which he executed (50) perpetrated a deception by having it drawn up as a sale or a bailment and then persisted in taking interest, he (i.e., the debtor) shall produce his witnesses, and they shall indict him (i.e., the creditor) for taking interest; because he had distorted his document, his document shall be voided.

(55) A creditor may not sue against the house of an Akkadian or an Amorite for whatever he had loaned him; should he sue for payment, he shall die.

7: (Text A) If anyone had given barley or silver as an interest-bearing loan and had a document executed, (ii 30) retaining the document in his own possession, and then stated: "I have certainly not given it to you as an interest-bearing loan or on the melqetum basis; the barley or silver which I have given you, I have given (as an advance) for purchases, or for the production of profit, or for some other objective," the person who had received the barley or silver from the creditor shall produce his witnesses to the wording of the document which the lender had denied, and they shall speak (their testimony) before god. (ii 40) Because he (i.e., the creditor) had distorted his document and denied the (truth of the) matter, he must pay (to the borrower) six-fold (the amount he had lent him). If he (the creditor) cannot make good his liability, he must die.

8: (iii) An Akkadian or an Amorite who has received barley, silver, or (other) goods either as merchandise for a commercial journey, or as a joint enterprise for the production of profit, (5) his document is not voided (by the misharum act); he must repay in accordance with the stipulations of his agreements.

9: Whoever has given barley, silver, or (other) goods to an Akkadian or an Amorite either (as an advance) for purchases, for a commercial journey, or as a joint enterprise for the production of profit, (10) and had a document executed, (but) in the document he had executed, the creditor stipulated in writing that at the expiration of the term (of the contract) the money would accrue interest (15) or if he made any (other) additional stipulations, he (i.e., the obligee) shall not repay on the terms of the (added) stipulations, but shall repay (only) the barley or silver [on the terms of the (basic) document]. The (obligations of the supplementary) stipulations upon the Akkadian (20) or the Amorite are remitted.

10: [. . .] o Babylon, [the market of . . .], the market of Borsippa, [the market of . . .], the market of Isin, [the market of . . .], the market of Larsa, (25) [the market of . . .]as, the market of Malgium, [the market of Manki]sum, the market of Shitullum, [. . .] half (their) investment capital was given [them] (in the form of) merchandise out of the palace—the (other) half to be made up by them (i.e., the market associations of the named cities)—(30) any such merchandise shall be disbursed to them from the palace at the going price of the respective city.

11: If a (state) trading merchant, who customarily disposes of merchandise of the palace, made out a document in favor of the palace against the (collectable) arrears of crown tributaries as if he actually received (such) merchandise from the palace, and received (in turn) the (payable) document of the palace-tributary—thus no merchandise was actually given him from the palace in accordance with his document, nor did he receive (any funds) from the palace tributary—(40) because the king has remitted the arrears of the palace-tributary, (iv) that merchant shall declare on divine oath: "(I swear that) I have not received anything in payment from the palace-tributaries as stated in this document." After having (thus) declared, (5) he shall produce the document of the palace-tributary, they (i.e., the authorities and the principals) shall settle the accounts jointly, and out of the merchandise stipulated in the document made out by the merchant in favor of the palace they shall remit in behalf of the merchant as much as was stipulated by the document made out by the palace-tributary (10) in favor of the merchant.

12: The /«.n^w-agent of the land who (15) customarily receives [the carcasses] from the palace cattle-herdsmen, shepherds, and goatherds under divine oath, (and) who (21) customarily renders to the palace: For every cow carcass: one (quantity) of sinfews together with the skin; for every ewe-carcass: one-sixth . . . barley, together with the skin, plus 1% minas of wool; for every goat-carcass: one-sixth of [a shekel] of silver plus % a mina of goat-wool,—because the king has instituted the misharum for the land, their arrears will not be collected. The . . . (of) the /«.n^w-agent of the land (25) (the quotas) . . . will not be filled.

13: The arrears of the porter(s) which had been assigned to the collecting-agent for collection are remitted; they will not be collected.

14: (30) The arrears of the Suhu country consisting of sibsum-rents and/or half-share rents—because the king has instituted the misharum for the land, it is remitted; it will not be collected. (35) He (i.e., the collecting-agent) shall not sue for collection against the houses of Suhu (var.: the Suhian population).

15: The crop impost officer who customarily receives

---

[527]
the impost proportions of fields (planted to) [barley,] sesame, or minor crops belonging to the palace-tributaries, the . . . , the crown dependents, the infantrymen, the sergeants, or other special feudatories—(v) because the king has instituted the misharum for the land, it is remitted; it will not be proportioned (i.e., the impost shares of each crop will not be collected). (However,) the barley destined for sale or profit will be proportioned according to the customary ratio(s).

16: (5) The taverness(es) of the provinces who customarily pay silver (and/or) barley to the palace—because the king has instituted the misharum in the land, the collecting agent (10) will not sue for payment of their arrears.

17: A taverness who has given beer or barley as a loan may not collect any of what she had given as a loan.

18: A taverness or a merchant who [. . . ] (15) dishonest weight shall die.

19: The infantryman or the sergeant who has leased [a . . . field] for three years does not perform the [. . . ] service. (20) In the present [year], because the king has instituted the misharum in the land, the infantryman or the sergeant pays according to the (prevailing) ratio of his city . . . , a third or half (of the crop).

20: (25) If an obligation has resulted in foreclosure against a citizen of Numhia, a citizen of Emuṭbalum, a citizen of Idamaras, a citizen of Uruk, a citizen of Isin, a citizen of Kisurra, or a citizen of Malgium, (in consequence of which) he [placed] his own person, his wife (30) or his [children] in debt servitude for silver, or as a pledge—because the king has instituted the misharum in the land, he is released; his freedom (35) is in effect.

21: If a house-born slavewoman or male slave of a citizen of Numhia, a citizen of Emuṭbalum, a citizen of Idamaras, a citizen of Uruk, a citizen of Isin, a citizen of Kisurra, (vi) or a citizen of Malgium . . . whose price . . . , has been sold for money, or was (5) given over for debt servitude, or was left as a pledge, his freedom will not be effected.

22: (10) The raṭbanum or regional governor who gives barley, silver, or wool to the "house" of an infantryman or a sergeant for harvest labor, or for the performance of (other) labor, (15) as the result of force, shall die. (That) infantryman or sergeant may (at the same time) keep (lit.: "carry off") whatever had been given him.

7 Forcible seizure of a debtor or a member of his family (also of his chattels) by the creditor upon default on the debt.
8 Voluntary placement of a dependent or a slave by the debtor with the creditor on an antichretic basis covering only the interest on a debt.
9 i.e., the forcible hiring out of subordinates by their superior officers for harvest or other labor to third parties (on a profitable basis), even though their wages were hang paid, cf. Code of Hammurabi § 34. This section is not limited in force to the period of the misharum's effectiveness, but is a statement against such an abuse of authority for permanent effect.
Egyptian and Hittite Treaties

Hittite Treaty
(Translator: Albrecht Goetze)

TREATY OF SUPPILULIUMAS
AND AZIRAS OF AMURRU

Texts: Akkadian version: KUB, in, 7 + 122; KUB, iv, 94. Hittite version: KBo, x, 12, 12a, 13. Literature: E. F. Weidner, "Politische Dokumente aus Kleinasien (Bogazkêk-Studien, viii, 1923), 70-75; H. Freydank, MIO, VH (1960), 356-81; H. Klenge, OLZ, 1964, 437-45. The Hittite text which is followed here can be largely reconstructed by the Akkadian text; help is also afforded by parallel texts from Amurru and other Syrian countries.

Preamble

These are the words of the Sun Suppiluliumas, the great king, the king of the Hatti land, the valiant, the favorite of the Storm-god.

Historical Introduction

I, the Sun, (made you my vassal.) And if you, [Aziras, protect' the king of the Hatti land, your master,) the king of the Hatti land, your master, will 'protect' you in the same way.] (5) 'The way [you 'protect'] your own [soul, your own person, your own body] and your own land, ['protect' the soul of the king, the person of the king,] the body of the king and the [Hatti] land [in the same way!] In the days to come 'protect' [you, Aziras, the king of the Hatti land] and the Hatti land, [my sons and my grandsons.] 300 she[kels of refined gold,] (10) first class (and) pure, shall be the tribute to the king of the Hatti land per year. Let them weigh [it out with the weighing stones of the merchants of Hatti land. (And, you, Aziras, should come to the Hatti land to the Sun once a year.

Formerly, in fact, the king of the land of Egypt, (15) the king of the Hurri land, the king [of . . . , the king of the country Kinza, the king of the country Nuhassa, the king of the country Niya, the king of the country Alsi—(15) countries bordering on your territory [but] enemies [of the Sun], countries that are at peace (with you), [but] bordering on your territory—[(when) the country Kinza and the country] Nuhassa turn about [and go to wa[r with the Hatti land,) (20) [when the king of the Hatti land gives battle] against such a country—if (then) you, Aziras, on your own decision [do not] march out with troops (and) charioteers and on your own [decision] will not give battle—

(25) [or if] I, the Sun, send out to you, Aziras, either a prince or a notable [with] his troops (and) charioteers as aid, or (if) I send (them) out to another country to make an attack, [and if] (then) Aziras on his own decision (30) does not march out [with] troops (and) charioteers and you do not attack [such] an enemy—if you commit some [treachery and speak as follows]: "True, I am under a treaty [properly sworn to], but whether he is to vanquish his enemy or his enemy is to vanquish him, (35) this [I cannot] know in any way" [and if] you write to [such] an enemy: "[See! Troops (and) charioteer)s of the Hatti land [are coming to attack (you)]; so be on your guard!" [thereby] you will transgress the oath.

(40) [Out of] the troops (and) charioteers of the Hatti land [.....] Hatti land they must not seize a single man. [If you] on your own decision [will not let him go] and to the king of the Hatti land (45) [will not hand him over, thereby] you will transgress the oath.

[If] against the king of the Hatti land [.....] another enemy rises and [ravages the Hatti] land, [if against the king of the] Hatti [land somebody revolts] (50) [and you,] Aziras, hear about [it, if then] you on your own decision [with troops (and) charioteers] do not rush to the aid—[if] for you, Aziras, it is impossible to come yourself, send [either a son of yours] or a brother ofcepted] Aziras [in vassalage] and added him to his brethren.

[Then Azir[as . . . .] To [the Sun, the great king], his lord, he spoke as follows: "[. . .] together with my house [. . .] (30) I have surrendered and . . . .

(gap)

Military Clauses

(ii) . . . . He who [lives in peace] with the Sun (10) shall live in peace also with you. But he who is an enemy of the Sun, shall also be an enemy [with you]. When the king of [the Hatti land (is on a campaign) in the [Hurri] land, or in the land of Egypt, or [in the land Ka]raduniy[as,] or in the country Astata,] or in the country Alsi—(15) countries bordering on your territory [but] enemies [of the Sun], countries that are at peace (with you), [but] bordering on your territory—[(when) the country Kinza and the country] Nuhassa turn about [and go to wa[r with the Hatti land,) (20) [when the king of the Hatti land gives battle] against such a country—if (then) you, Aziras, on your own decision [do not] march out with troops (and) charioteers and on your own [decision] will not give battle—

(25) [or if] I, the Sun, send out to you, Aziras, either a prince or a notable [with] his troops (and) charioteers as aid, or (if) I send (them) out to another country to make an attack, [and if] (then) Aziras on his own decision (30) does not march out [with] troops (and) charioteers and you do not attack [such] an enemy—if you commit some [treachery and speak as follows]: "True, I am under a treaty [properly sworn to], but whether he is to vanquish his enemy or his enemy is to vanquish him, (35) this [I cannot] know in any way" [and if] you write to [such] an enemy: "[See! Troops (and) charioteer)s of the Hatti land [are coming to attack (you)]; so be on your guard!" [thereby] you will transgress the oath.

(40) [Out of] the troops (and) charioteers of the Hatti land [.....] Hatti land they must not seize a single man. [If you] on your own decision [will not let him go] and to the king of the Hatti land (45) [will not hand him over, thereby] you will transgress the oath.

[If] against the king of the Hatti land [.....] another enemy rises and [ravages the Hatti] land, [if against the king of the] Hatti [land somebody revolts] (50) [and you,] Aziras, hear about [it, if then] you on your own decision [with troops (and) charioteers] do not rush to the aid—[if] for you, Aziras, it is impossible to come yourself, send [either a son of yours] or a brother of
EGYPTIAN AND HITTITE TREATIES

yours with troops (55) [(and) charioteers to the aid of the king of the Hatti land. [.....]

(iii) [And if somebody presses Aziras hard ... or (if) somebody starts a revolt, (if) you (then) write to the king of the Hatti land: "send troops (and) charioteers to my aid!" (5) I shall hit that enemy for you.

[... ] because Aziras [...] and returned [to] the Sun in vassalage, I, the Sun, dispatched notables of the Hatti land, troops (and) charioteers of mine [from the] Hatti land down to Amurru land. (10) [If] they march up to towns of yours, treat them well and furnish them with the necessities of life. Before [the people of Amurru land] let them walk like brethren! Treat [the Hittites] well! But if any Hittite (misbehaves and) shows evil intentions towards Aziras and tries to get hold of either a town of his or a (piece of) land of his, thereby he will transgress the oath.

Dealings with Foreigners etc.

The deportees of these countries whom (20) the Sun moved—deportees of the Hurri lands, deportees of the country Kinza, deportees of the country Niya and deportees of the country Nuhassi—if from Hattusa somebody, man or woman, escapes and comes to your country, (25) you will not say as follows: "True! [I am under a treaty properly sworn to, but I can [not] know in any way where amidst my country these (people) hide." You, Aziras, will seize [them] (30) and hand [them] over to the king of the Hatti land.

[If ... ] before you, Aziras, somebody speaks [evil words concerning] the Sun, be it a [notable] or be it an (ordinary) subject of yours, (if) you, [Azir]as, will not seize [him] (35) and will not hand him over to the king of the Hatti land, thereby you will transgress the oath.

Also people of Amurru land who reside in the Hatti land, be it a notable or be it an (ordinary) subject of the country of Aziras, (40) or be it (that) you consider him a [subject] of the king of the Hatti land—if the king of the Hatti land returns him to you, keep him. But if the king of the Hatti land does not return it, he escapes and he comes to you, (45) [if ... ] you, Aziras, do not seize [him and do not hand him over to the king of the Hatti land, thereby you will transgress the oath],

(small gap)

(iv) And if a Hittite [... ] as a fugitive comes [into your country ... ] comes back [to ... , you will seize him and will hand] him over to the king of the [Hatti land... ].

(g+P)

(The rest of col. iv is too mutilated for translation. It is however recognizable that it closes with a list of gods called to serve as witnesses at the conclusion of the treaty.)
Akkadian Treaties from Syria and Assyria

TRANSLATOR: ERICA REINER

Before the discovery of the treaty of Esarhaddon with the vassal princes only a few treaties imposed by Mesopotamian sovereigns were known, and those were in a fragmentary state of preservation. The newly found Esarhaddon treaty not only increases the actually available textual material but also serves to restore and to increase the understanding of the previously known treaty fragments. Understandably, the parallelism with Biblical material has given rise to a vast literature which is listed in the bibliographies in the monographs of Hillers and McCarthy cited below. See also the recent Borger HKL i under the respective texts. Except for two treaties from Alalakh, only the treaties imposed by Assyrian kings are translated here. Mesopotamian treaties not translated here: Treaty between Shamshi-Adad V and Mardukzakirshumi I (published by Weidner, AJO, viii, 27ff.); Treaty between Sinshumilishir and Sinsharishkun and Nabuapaliddina (BRM, iv, 50, see Borger, JCS, xix, 75); fragment of a treaty (?) between 11um-gmlil of Uruk and an unknown king(?) (published by Falkenstein, Baghdader Mitteilungen, 11 (1963), 54 f.), identified by F. R. Kraus, BiOr., xxii (1965), 380 f.; Treaty between Sennacherib and an unknown king (published by Ebeling, Stiftungen und Vorschriften für assyrische Tempel [=VIOF, xxiii], 9), identified by Borger, HKL, i, p. 109. Literature: I. J. Gelb, The Vassal Treaties of Esarhaddon, BiOr., xix (1962), 55-62. D. J. McCarthy, S.J., Treaty and Covenant (Analecta Biblica xxi [1963]), Rome. D. R. Hillers, Treaty Curses and the Old Testament Prophets (Biblica et Orientalia, 16), Rome 1964. R. Franken, "The Vassal-treaties of Esarhaddon and the Dating of Deuteronomy," Oudtestamentische Studien, xiv (1965), 122-54.

Treaty Between Niqmepa of Alalakh and Ir-d'im of Tunip

Heading

Seal of Ir-6IM, king of Tunip.

Preamble

Text (of the agreement) sanctioned by an oath to the gods, between Niqmepa, king of Mukishhe [and Alalakh], and Ir-6IM, king of Tunip; Niqmepa and Ir-6IM have now established [this agreement] between them as follows:

1. [If anyone], whether [merchants, whether Suteans, .. [wants to sell], be it barley, (be it) emmer, (be it) oil, [−] . . . [he must not] sell [it without authorization].

2. [If in your land] there is [a plot against me, and] they plot² [to . . . , and you hear of it], you will search

¹ restore [i-dab]-hu-ba-a in line 11.
² Read a-na-mu-a, variant of annumā.
³ The lumma la clauses are here translated as "you must,"
⁴₁ restore the end of line 20: la [i-pa-al]-la-ru ib-bd-at-[H].

for them, [if] they say, ["

3. If someone from my land [plots against me], if you hear of it, you must⁸ [ . . . ] and you must not conceal it from me, and if he lives in your land, you must extradite him.

4. If any booty coming from my land is sold in your land,² you must seize it, together with the one who sells it, and hand it over to me.

5. If a fugitive slave, male or female, of my land flees to your land, you must seize and return him to me, (or), if someone else seizes him and takes him to you, [you must keep him] in your prison, and whenever his owner comes forward, you must hand him over to [him]. If (the slave) is not to be found, you must give him (the owner) an escort, and he may seize him in whatever town he (the slave) is found; (in any town where) he is not found, the mayor and five elders will declare under oath: "Your slave does not live among us and we do not conceal him"—if they are unwilling to take the oath, but (eventually) return his slave, [they go free], but if they take the oath and later he discovers his slave [among them], they are considered thieves and their hands are cut off, (moreover) they will pay 6,000 (shekels of) copper to the palace.

6. If a man, woman, ox, donkey, or horse [is found] in the house of somebody (and the owner) identifies it, but (the man in whose possession it was found) declares: "I have bought it," if he can produce the merchant, he goes free, but if he cannot produce the merchant, he who has identified it, . . . he will declare under oath: ["It is my . . ."], but if he is unwilling to take the oath, [he is considered a thief and his hands are cut off].

7. If you hold a man in custody, he may do (forced) labor with/for a [ . . . ]-man, (but) if he (the latter) [takes off] his fetters, shaves off his slavemark, [ . . . ] and they catch him, he is considered a thief. If he declares: ["The man is mine"] he will declare under oath as follows: ["(I swear) that the man is mine"]; if he is unwilling to take the oath, [he is a th]ief [ . . . ]. If the criminal, man, woman, or boy, does (forced) labor in his house, and (the owner?) seized him, he is considered a thief, and his (the-criminalTs) master will have him declare under oath: "I have captured him in the open country personally" […]

8. If a brigand from your land commits a robbery or breaks into a house or town in my land, and they seize him and [put him] in prison, whenever his (the robber's) owner [claims him], the owner of the house (broken into) will declare under oath: "I(!) have caught him as he was breaking and entering (lit.: at the breach or the … of the moat)," and he has to bring witnesses, and they can convict him and … him. But a slave cannot be made to take the oath, and he (the accused robber) goes free.

9. [If families from my land] enter your land to find subsistence, you must take them into custody in your land, and feed them, (but) whenever they want to [re-t]urn to my land, you must gather them and return them to [my land], and you must not detain one single family in your land.

10. If a man from your land enters my land to find subsistence, and says: "In my city [there is nothing] to [eat,]" […] if he is a criminal, […]

11. If there is a city or a […] they live with the people [in] my city, […]… you must seize them, … you must [not] seize them.

12. [If] (any) Hurrian (subject of) our lord becomes an enemy of the king of the Hurrians, I will not break the oath made with the king of the Hurrians, my lord, (unless) he releases me from these stipulations of the oath.

76. Seal of Niqmepa, king of Alalakh.

77. Whosoever transgresses these agreements, Adad, […] and Shamash, the lord of judgment, Sin, and the great gods will make him perish, [will make disappear] his name and (his) descendants from the lands, […] they will make him forsake his throne and scepter […]

Treaty Between
Idrimi and Pilliya

1. Tablet of agreement.

2. When Pilliya and Idrimi took an oath by the gods and made this binding agreement between themselves: they will always return their respective fugitives, (i.e.) if Idrimi seizes a fugitive of Pilliya, he will return him to Pilliya, and if Pilliya seizes a fugitive of Idrimi, he will return him to Idrimi. Anyone who seizes a fugitive, and returns him to his master, (the owner) will pay as prize of capture 900 (shekels of) copper if it is a man, one thousand as prize of capture if it is a woman. However, if a fugitive from Pilliya enters the land of Idrimi and nobody seizes him, but his own master seizes him, he need not pay a prize of capture to anyone. In whatever city (it is suspected that) they conceal a fugitive, the mayor and five elders will make a declaration under oath. From the very day on which Barattarna has sworn (this) oath by the gods together with Idrimi, from that day on it is decreed that fugitives have to be returned. Whoever transgresses this agreement, °IM, Shamash and Ishhara, and all the (other) gods will destroy him.

Treaty Between
Ashurnirari V of Assyria and Mati’i’lu of Arpad

Text and translation: E. Weidner, AFO, viii, 17 ff. The British Museum text 79-7-8,195, according to Bezold, Catalogue, p. 1716, belongs to the same tablet as Rm 120 + published by Weidner. The fragment, copied by Geers, is the bottom of the middle (possibly the right-hand) column of one side; it most likely represents the bottom of column v (possibly column iv) of the reverse, and contains four beginnings of lines of the end of one paragraph and the beginning of the first four lines of the next, beginning with: sum-mu *KI.MIN ina a-de-e […]

(break)

(may) Mati'ulu […] his sons and daughters, his officials, […] altogether [turn into …], his land altogether into wasteland, may his soil be [as narrow] as a brick of one cubit, not enough for his sons, [his daughters, his officials, the people of his land] to stand upon. May Mati'ulu [together with his sons,] daughters, officials, the people of his land [be …] like …, and he himself, together with the people of his land, be crushed like gypsum.

(10) This spring lamb has been brought from its fold not for sacrifice, not for a banquet, not for a purchase, not for (divination concerning) a sick man, not to be slaughtered for […] it has been brought to sanction the treaty between Ashurnirari and Mati’i’lu. If Mati’i’lu sins against (this) treaty made under oath by the gods, then, just as this spring lamb, brought from its fold, will not return to its fold, will not behold its fold again, alas, Mati’i’lu, together with his sons, daughters, officials, and the people of his land [will be ousted] from his country, will not return to his country, and not behold his country again. This head is not the head of a lamb, it is the head of Mati’i’lu, it is the head of his sons, his officials, and the people of his land. If Mati’i’lu sins against this treaty, so may, just as the head of this spring lamb is torn off, and its knuckle placed in its mouth, […] the head of Mati’i’lu be torn off, and his sons […] This shoulder is not the shoulder of a spring lamb, it is the shoulder of Mati’ilu, it is the shoulder of his sons, his officials, and the people of his land. If Mati’ilu sins against this treaty, so may, just as the shoulder of this spring lamb is torn out, and [ . . . ], the shoulder of Mati’ilu, of his sons, his officials, and the people of his land be torn out and [ . . . ] in [ . . . ].

5 I read: u i-fqa?r-bi-tu-1u.

¹ Reading in i 11 ana qi-ni-ti.

(iii)

(Y-o’ fragmentary) [ . . . ] if you conceal (or) protect (him/it), if you send it to another country, if you are not loyal to Ashurnirari, if your heart is not devoted to Ashurnirari, and Mati’ilu, together with [him/it], if you send it to another country, if you are not loyal to Ashurnirari, may Ishtar, the goddess of men, the lady of women, take away their "bow," cause their [sterility], . . . may they say, "Woe, we have sinned against the treaty with Ashurnirari, king of Assyria." (break)

(iv)

(If the Assyrian army) goes to war at the orders of Ashurnirari, king of Assyria, and Mati’ilu, together with his officials, his army, his chariotry, does not leave (on the campaign) in full loyalty, may the great lord Sin who dwells in Harran, clothe Mati’ilu, his sons, his officials, and the people of his land in leprosy as in a cloak so that they have to roam the open country, and may he have no mercy on them. Let there be no milk to suck for the oxen, asses, sheep, and horses in his land. May Adad, the canal inspector of heaven and earth, put an end to Mati’ilu, his land and the people of his land through hunger, want, and famine, so that they eat the flesh of their sons and daughters and it taste as good to them as the flesh of spring lambs. May they be deprived of Adad’s thunder so that rain be denied them. Let dust be their food, pitch their ointment, donkey’s urine their drink, rushes their clothing, let their sleeping place be in the corners (of walls). If Mati’ilu, his sons, or his nobles, who sin against this treaty—let the farmers of his land not sing the harvest song in the fields, no vegetation should spring forth in the open country and see the sunlight, [the . . . ] not draw water from the springs, may [ . . . ] be their food, [ . . . ] their drink, [ . . . ] . . . (break)

(v)

If our death is not your death, if our life is not your life, if you do not seek the life of Ashurnirari, his sons and his officials as your own life, and the life of your sons and officials, then may Ashur, father of the gods, who grants kingship, turn your land into wasteland, your people into . . . , your cities into ruin mounds, your house into ruins.

(8) If Mati’ilu sins against this treaty with Ashurnirari, king of Assyria, may Mati’ilu become a prostitute, his soldiers women, may they receive [a gift] in the square of their cities (i.e. publicly) like any prostitute, may one country . . . them to the next; may Mati’ilu’s (seed) be that of a mule, his wives barren, may Ishtar, the goddess of men, the lady of women, take away their "bow," cause their [sterility], . . . may they say, "Woe, we have sinned against the treaty with Ashurnirari, king of Assyria." (break)

(vi)

May [locusts] appear and devour his land, may [ . . . ] blind their eyes; let one thousand houses decrease to one house, let one thousand tents decrease to one tent, let only one man be spared in the city to tell about my feats.

(6) Be adjured by Ashur, king of heaven and earth; be adjured by Anu and Antu; be adjured by Enlil and Ninlil; be adjured by Ea and Damkina; be adjured by Sin and Ningal; be adjured by Shamash and Aja; be adjured by Adad and Shala; be adjured by Marduk and Zarpanitu; be adjured by Nabu and Tashmetu; be adjured by Ninurta and Gula; be adjured by Urash and Ninegal; be adjured by Zababa and Bau; be adjured by Nergal and Laz; be adjured by Madanu and Ningirsu; be adjured by Humhummu and Ishum; be adjured by Girra and Nusku; be adjured by Ishtar, Lady of Nineveh; be adjured by Ishtar, Lady of Arbela; be adjured by Adad of Kurba-il; be adjured by Adad of Alep; be adjured by Palil, who marches in front; be adjured by the Seven warrior gods; . . . (break)

Treaty of Esarhaddon with Baal of Tyre

Text and translation: R. Borger, Die Inschriften Asarhaddons Königs von Assyrien (AO, Beiheft 9), Graz 1956, § 69. For corrections and restorations see Borger, HKL, 1, p. 29 f. For restorations of the curses in column iv on the basis of parallels from the Vassal Treaties, see Borger, ZA, LIV, 189 f.

(i)

[Treaty of [Esarhaddon], king of Assyria, eldest son of [ . . . ], with Baal, king of Tyre, . . . (break)

(ii broken)

(iii)

. . . Esarhaddon . . . Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, . . . these cities which . . .

(6) [The royal deputy whom] I have appointed over

* The text has GUR.RA.L.
you,... the elders of your country, ... the royal deputy [...] with them ... the ships ... do not listen to him, [do not ...] without the royal deputy; nor must you open a letter which I send you without (the presence) of the royal deputy. If the royal deputy is absent, wait for him and then open it, [do not ...]

(15) If a ship of Baal or of the people of Tyre is shipwrecked off (the coast of) the land of the Philistines or anywhere on the borders of Assyrian territory, everything that is on the ship belongs to Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, but one must not do any harm to any person on board ship, they should list[st] their names [and inform the king of Assyria].

(18) These are the ports of trade and the trade roads which Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, [granted] to his servant Baal: (to wit): toward Akko, Dor, in the entire district of the Philistines, and in all the cities within Assyrian territory, on the seacoast, and in Byblos, (across) the Lebanon, all the cities in the mountains, all the cities of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, which Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, gave [to] Baal [...], [to] the people of Tyre, [...] [...], in their ships or all those who cross over, in the towns of Baal, his towns, his manors, his harbors, which [...], to [...] as many as lie in the outlying regions, as in the past [...]. Inland, in his district, in his manors [...].

(iv) [May Ninlil, who resides in Nineveh, "tie to you" a swift dagger]. [May] Ishtar, [who resides in Arbela, not grant] you [mercy and forgiveness]. May Gula, the great physician, [put illness and weariness in] your [hearts], an unhealing sore in your body, bathe [in your own blood as if in water]. May the Seven gods, the warrior gods, cause your [downfall] with their [fierce] weapons. May Bethel and Anath-Bethel deliver you to a man-eating lion. May the great gods of heaven and earth, the gods of Assyria, the gods of Akkad, and the gods of Eber-nari curse you with an indissoluble curse. May Baal-sameme, Baal-malage and Baal-saphon raise an evil wind against your ships, to undo their moorings, tear out their moor-pole, may a strong wave sink them in the sea, a violent tide against your ships, undo their moorings, tear out their mooring-pole, may a strong wave sink them in the sea, a violent tide [...] against you. May Melqart and Esh-pal, may a strong wave sink them in the sea, a violent tide against your ships, undo their moorings, tear out their mooring-pole, may a strong wave sink them in the sea, a violent tide [...] against you. May Melqart and Esh-pal, may a strong wave sink them in the sea, a violent tide [...] against you. May Astarte break your bow in the thick of battle, and have you crouch at the feet of your enemy, may a foreign enemy divide your belongings.

Tablet of the treaty established with Baal of Tyre.

The Vassal-Treaties of Esarhaddon

Heading

Seal of the god Ashur, king of the gods, lord of all lands, which is not to be altered;

Seal of the great ruler, the father of the gods, which is not to be contested.

1. (1) (This is) the treaty of Esarhaddon, king of the world, king of Assyria, son of Sennacherib, likewise king of the world, king of Assyria, with Ramataya, city-ruler of Urakazabanu, with his sons, grandsons, with all the people of Urakazabanu, (all the men under his command) young and old, from sunrise (east) to sunset (west), all those over whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, acts as king and lord; with you, your sons, yourgrandsons, all those who will live in the future after this treaty: (the treaty that he has made with you on behalf of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, the son of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria—)

2. (13) (the treaty) which he has made binding with you before Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Mercury, Mars, and Sirius; before Ashur, Anu, Enlil, and Ea, Sin, Shamash, Adad, and Marduk, Nabu, Nusku, Urash, and Nergal, (the goddesses) Ninlil, Sherua, and Belet-ili, Ishtar of Nineveh and Ishtar of Arbela; all the gods dwelling in heaven and earth, the gods of Assyria, the gods of Sumer and Akkad, the gods of every (foreign) country.

3. (25) You are adjured[4] by Ashur, the father of the gods, lord of all lands; you are adjured by Anu, Enlil, and Ea, you are adjured by Sin, Shamash, Adad, and Marduk, you are adjured by Nabu, Nusku, Urash, and Nergal, you are adjured by Ninlil, Sherua, and Belet-ili, you are adjured by Ishtar of Nineveh and Ishtar of Arbela,

1 At least nine copies of the treaty are extant among the fragments; apart from Ramataya, or Urakazabanu, names of six other rulers or lands are preserved, see Wiseman, Iraq, xx, p. 2.

2 All "you," "your," etc. in the translation are to be taken as plural.

3 The emendation tsakunu in line 24 is suggested by Frankena, loc. cit., p. 126, n. 2.

4 The last word of line 25 is restored as tam-[muj], see Frankena, loc. cit., p. 127.
you are adjured by all the gods of Nineveh, you are adjured by all the gods of Calah, you are adjured by all the gods of Arbel, you are adjured by all the gods of Calah, you are adjured by all the gods of Babylon, Borsippa, and Nippur, you are adjured by all the gods of Sumer and Akkad, you are adjured by all the gods of every land, you are adjured by the gods of heaven and earth.

4. (41) (This is) the treaty which Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has established with you before the great gods of heaven and earth, on behalf of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, the son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, who has designated and appointed him for succession. When Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, departs from the living, you will seat the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal upon the royal throne, he will exercise the kingship and lordship of Assyria over you. If you do not serve him in the open country and in the city, do not fight and even die on his behalf, do not always speak the full truth to him, do not always advise him well in full loyalty, do not smooth his way in every respect; if you remove him, and seat in his stead one of his brothers, younger or older, on the throne of Assyria, if you change or let anyone change the decree of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, if you will not be subject to this crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, your lord, so that he cannot exercise kingship and lordship over you—

5. (62) If you do not serve the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has presented to you and ordered you (to serve), on behalf of whom he has made this binding treaty with you, if you sin against him, lift your hands with evil intent against him, set afoot a rebellion, or wrong or evil plans against him, if you remove him from the kingship of Assyria, and help one of his brothers, younger or older, to take the throne of Assyria in his stead, and install another king, another lord over yourselves and swear the oath of loyalty to another king or lord—

6. (73) If you hear any wrong, unseemly, improper plans, which are improper or detrimental to the exercise of kingship by the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, whether they be spoken by his brothers, his father's brothers, his cousins, or any other member of his father's lineage, or by officials or governors, or by the court personnel, eunuchs or not, or by the army, or any human being whatsoever, and conceal it and do not come and report it to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal—

7. (83) If Esarhaddon departs from the living while his sons are minors, you will help Ashurbanipal, the crown prince designate, take the throne of Assyria, and seat Shamashshumukin, his dear brother, the crown prince designate of Babylonia, upon the royal throne of Babylonia, and entrust to him the rule over all of Sumer, Akkad, and Karduniash, and you will not hold back any gift that his father Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, gave him, but let him take it with him.

8. (92) If you do not always offer complete truth to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has presented to you, as well as to the brothers by the mother of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, concerning whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has established this treaty with you; if you do not treat them with proper loyalty, speak to them with a true heart, and serve them in the open country and in the city—

9. (101) If you sin against the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has ordered you (to serve), against the brothers by the mother of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, concerning whom he has established this treaty with you, if you lift your hands with evil intent against them, set afoot rebellion, or evil plans against them—

10. (108) If any (of you) hears some wrong, evil, unseemly plan which is improper or detrimental to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, whether they be spoken by his enemy or his ally, by his brothers, by his sons, by his daughters, by his brothers, his father's brothers, his cousins, or any other member of his father's lineage, or by your own brothers, sons, or daughters, or by a prophet, an ecstatic, a dream-interpreter, or by any human being whatsoever, and conceals it, does not come and report it to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria—

11. (123) If you do something wrong and evil against the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, whom Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has ordered you (to serve), if you seize him and kill him or hand him over to his enemy, if you remove him from the kingship of Assyria, and swear the oath of loyalty to another king or lord—

12. (130) If anyone instigates you to a revolt or rebellion against the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, concerning whom he has established (this) treaty with you, in order to kill, harm and destroy him, and you, upon hear-

2 The provisions of the treaty are translated, rather literally, as conditional clauses introduced by "if," depending on the apodosis beginning with 5 37 (line 414), see Frankena, loc. cit., p. 125.

3 Literally: "the bearded and the eunuchs," see CAD, Z, s.v. ziqnu in la ziqnu.
ing such a thing from anybody, do not seize the instigators of the revolt, do not bring them before the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, and if you, being able to seize and kill them, do not seize and kill them, do not eradicate their name and descendants from the country, or, being unable to seize and kill them, you do not inform the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, do not stand by and seize and kill the instigators of the revolt—

13. (147) If you side with the instigators of a revolt, be they few or many, and hear something, whether good or detrimental, and do not report it, do not come to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, and do not give him your full loyalty, if you establish this treaty before the gods who are placed (as witnesses), and swear by the laden table, by drinking from the cup, by the glow of fire, by water and oil, by touching one another’s breast, and (still) do not come and report to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, do not seize and kill the instigators of the revolt and the criminal persons, do not eradicate their name and descendants from the country—

14. (162) If either an Assyrian, subject of Assyria, a member of the court personnel, eunuch or not, or a citizen of Assyria, or a citizen of another country, or any living human being, holds prisoner the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal in the open country or inside the city and sets afoot revolt and rebellion, and you do not side with the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, and do not serve him, do not kill the persons who set afoot revolt in full loyalty, do not save the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal and his brothers by the same mother—

15. (173) If someone rebels against the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, concerning whom he has established this treaty with you, and you side with him, if, should they seize you by force, you do not escape and come to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal—

16. (180) If you reside in (this) country as huradu-soldiers, or as . . . , or enter it in a pirru-troupe and nurture evil thoughts in your hearts against the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, rebel against him, or set afoot against him rebellion and evil plans—

17. (188) If the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, is not your king and lord on the day when your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, departs from the living, if he cannot abase the mighty, lift up the lowly, kill him who is fit to be put to death, keep alive him who deserves to be kept alive, and you do not listen to whatever he orders, do not act according to his command, seek to place another king, another lord over him—

18. (198) If someone in the palace starts a revolt, whether by day or by night, whether on the road or in the hinterland, against Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, you must not listen to him; or, whether by day or by night, at an improper time, a messenger from the palace comes to the crown prince and says, “Your father has elevated you (to the throne), let Your Majesty come,” you must not let him go, he must not leave, you will keep him under severe guard until one of you who is devoted to his lord, and who is concerned about the house of his lord can go and find out (himself) about the king your lord in the palace, only after that may you follow the crown prince your lord to the palace.

19. (212) If you convene an assembly and take an oath with each other to give the kingship to one among you—

20. (214) If you help onto the throne one of his brothers, his uncles, his cousins, or any other member of his father’s lineage, whether they live in Assyria or have fled to another country, or someone from nearby palace . . . , or from outlying country . . . , or from large or small or . . . -s, or (anyone) young or old, from the wellborn citizens or from the clients (of noblemen), or from the court officials, eunuchs or not, from the slaves, from the bought servants, from among the Assyrians or among citizens of another country, or anyone from among living human beings, and give him the kingship and lordship over Assyria, if you do not help unto the throne of Assyria the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, so that he cannot exercise over you the kingship and lordship over Assyria—

21. (229) If you do not fight for the crown prince Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, if you do not die for him, if you do not seek to do what is good for him, if you act wrongly toward him, do not give him sound advice, lead him on an unsafe course, do not treat him with proper loyalty—

22. (237) If Esarhaddon departs from the living while his sons are minor, and one of the palace personnel, eunuch or not, kills the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, and usurps the kingship over Assyria, if you side with him, agree to be subject to him, do not rebel, do not start hostilities and do not make all other countries hostile to him, do not foment revolt against him, do not seize and kill him, and do not place the son of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal upon the throne of Assyria—

23. (249) Or, if the child is yet unborn, if you do not subject yourselves to the widow of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, or the wife of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, do not raise (the child) when he is born, do not

* On the oath by water and oil as a test for sincerity, see Deller, Biblica, XLVI (1965), 349 S.
place him upon the throne of Assyria, do not seize and kill the instigators of the revolt, do not eradicat their name and descendants from the country, do not shed blood for blood, do not avenge the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal; if you give the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, a deadly herb to eat, to drink, or to anoint himself, if you practice witchcraft against him, and bring the anger of his personal god and goddess upon him—

24. (266) If you do not love the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, as you do your own lives, if you slander his brothers by the same mother in front of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, speak evil things about them, lift your hands against their households, commit a sin against them, take away something from the gifts that their father, Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has given them or the property they have acquired, if the gifts in fields, houses, orchards, persons, equipment, horses, mules, donkeys, cattle, sheep, which Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has given to his sons do not remain theirs, if you do not speak in their favor before the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, so that they cannot live at his court and associate with you—

25. (283) This treaty which Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has established with you in a binding fashion, under oath, on behalf of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal and his brothers, sons by the mother of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal,

—(if) you do not say and do not give orders to your sons, grandsons, to your offspring, to your descendants, who will live in the future after this treaty, saying: "Keep this treaty, do not sin against this treaty with you, lest you lose your lives, deliver your land to destruction, and your people to be deported. Let this order, which is acceptable to god and man, be acceptable to you too, let it be pleasing to you. Let Ashurbanipal, the crown prince designate, be preserved to be lord over the land and the people, and later be called to kingship. Do not set over yourselves another king, another lord."—

26. (302) If anyone sets afoot a revolt or rebellion against Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, and seats himself upon the royal throne, if you rejoice at his (having taken over the) kingship, and do not seize and kill him, if, not being able to seize and kill him, you accept his kingship, swear an oath of vassalage to him, do not rebel against him, do not fight against him with full loyalty, do not make all other countries hostile to him, do not make razzias against him, do not defeat him, do not eradicat his name and descendants from the country, do not help the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal onto the throne of his father—

27. (318) If one of his brothers, his father's brothers, his cousins, his kin, or any member of his father's lineage, or a descendant of former kings, or any prince, governor, Assyrian or foreigner, involves you in a plot and tells you, "Denounce the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal to his father, speak wrong and evil things about him," (if) you (thus) cause strife between him and his father, and incite them to hate each other—

28. (328) A . . . who gives you orders (or) instigates you, saying, "I am able (to . . .) his brothers or the retinue who agitate before his father, and denounce him to his father,"—what Ashur, (Shamash, and . . .) have spoken was established, without Ashur and Shamash . . . your father, honor your brother and (thus) save your lives.

29. (336) If one of his brothers, his father's brothers, his cousins, his kin, or any member of his father's lineage, of the court personnel, eunuchs or not, whether an Assyrian or a foreigner, or any living human being, involves you in a plot and tells you, "Denounce his brothers by the same mother to him, create strife between them, alienate his brothers by the same mother from him," (and) you listen to him and speak evil of his brothers to him, alienate him from his brothers, if you let go free the person who has spoken such things to you, if you do not go and tell it to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, saying, "Your father has established a treaty under oath with us about (such things)—

30. (353) If you are subjects . . . the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, his brothers . . . the throne . . . and you, of [your] own accord do not turn hostile to them, do not [ . . . ] among them, saying, "Your father has established a treaty under oath about (this)"—

31. (360) If you, after your lord Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has departed from the living, and the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal has seated himself upon the royal throne, speak evil of his brothers or his [dear] brother to their brother, and instigate him, saying, "Lift your hand against them," if you estrange them from the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, speak evil rumors of them before Ashurbanipal, say to the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal that the rank that Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, has assigned them [is unfit so that] he removes them [from it—

32. (373) If you smear your face, your hands, or your throats with red paste which (is like) sapuru in the eyes of the gods, or tie it to the hem of your garments in order to avert the consequences of the oath—

{537}
33. (377) $\text{tf y}^\varphi_u \text{ t}$Y to reverse the curse, to avert the consequences of the oath, think up and carry out stratagems in order to reverse the curse, to avert the consequences of the oath, you and your sons who will live in the future will be adjured\textsuperscript{14} by this\textsuperscript{15} oath on behalf of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, son of your lord Esarhaddon, which will stay (in vigor) from today until after this treaty.

34. (385) If you, as you stand on the soil where this oath (is sworn), swear the oath with words and lips (only), do not swear with your entire heart, do not transmit it to your sons who will live after this treaty, if you take this curse\textsuperscript{16} upon yourselves but do not plan to keep the treaty of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, on behalf of the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, may your sons and grandsons because of this\textsuperscript{17} fear in the future, forever, your god Ashur and your lord, the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal.

35. (397) He who changes, neglects, transgresses, erases the words\textsuperscript{18} of this tablet, falsifies [...], the ... oath [...] of this treaty tablet [...]. (If) you do not respect as your own god Ashur, king of the gods, and the great gods, my lords, [...] or the image of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, or the image of Ashurbanipal, crown prince designate, or the image of ...-s, the seal [...] the crown prince designate [Ashurbanipal]— [...] [the tablet] sealed\textsuperscript{19} with the seal of Ashur, king of the gods, and placed before you—

36. (410) If you remove it, consign it to fire, throw it into water, bury it in dust, or by some trick destroy, annihilate, or turn it face down—

37. (414) May Ashur, king of the gods, who determines the fates, decree for you an evil, unpropitious fate, and not grant you fatherhood, old age, ... ripe old age.\textsuperscript{20}

38. (417) May Ninlil, his beloved wife, induce him to pronounce evil for you and may she not intercede for you.

38A. (418 ff.) May Anu, king of the gods, rain upon all your houses disease, exhaustion, $d\text{iu}$-disease, sleeplessness, worries, ill health.

39. (419) May Sin, the luminary of heaven and earth, clothe you in leprosy and (thus) not permit you to enter the presence of god and king; roam the open country as a wild ass or gazelle!

40. (422) May Shamash, the light of heaven and earth, not give you a fair and equitable judgment, may he take away your eyesight; walk about in darkness!

41. (425) May Ninurta, leader of the gods, fell you with his fierce arrow, and fill the plain with your corpses, give your flesh to eagles and vultures to feed upon.

42. (428) May Venus, the brightest among the stars, let your wives he in the embrace of your enemy before your very eyes, may your sons not have authority over your house, may a foreign enemy divide your possessions.

43. (431) May Jupiter, the exalted lord of the gods, not let you see the entrance of Bel into Esagila, may he put an end to your lives.

44. (433) May Marduk, the eldest son, determine a grievous sin and an indissoluble curse as your fate.

45. (435) May Zarpanitu, who grants offspring and descendants, eradicate your offspring and descendants from the land.

46. (437) May Belet-ili, the Lady of all creatures, put an end to birth giving in your land, so that the nurses among you shall miss the cry of babies in the streets.

47. (440) May Adad, the canal inspector of heaven and earth, put an end [to vegetation] in your land, may he avoid? your meadows and hit your land with a severe destructive downpour, may locusts, which diminish the (produce) of the land, [devour] your crops, let there be no sound of the grinding stone or the oven in your houses, let barley rations to be ground disappear for you, so that they grind your bones, (the bones of) your sons and daughters instead of barley rations, and not even the (first) joint of your finger should be able to dip into the dough, may the [...] eat the dough from your troughs. Mother shall [bar the door to] her daughter, may you eat in your hunger the flesh of your children, may, through want and famine, one man eat the other's flesh, clothe himself in the other's skin; let dogs and pigs eat your flesh, and may your spirit have no one to take care of and pour libations to him.

48. (453) May Ishtar, lady of battle, break your bow in a heavy battle, tie your arms, and have you crouch at the feet of your enemy.

49. (455) May Nergal, the warrior among the gods, extinguish your life with his merciless dagger, may he plant carnage and pestilence among you.

50. (457) May Ninlil, who resides in Nineveh, (lit.: may they tie with you) a swift dagger.

51. (459) May Ishtar, who resides in Arbela, not grant you mercy and forgiveness.

52. (461) May Gula, the great physician, put illness and weariness [into your hearts], an unhealing sore in...
53. (464) May the Seven gods, the warrior gods, cause your downfall with their fierce weapons.
54. (466) May [ . . . ] hand you over to a man-eating lion.
55. (469) May Ishtar [of . . . ], Ishtar [ . . . of ] Carchemish put a severe . . . into your heart, so that your blood dribbles down to the ground like rain.
56. (472) May the great gods of heaven and earth, who inhabit the world, all those that are named in this tablet, strike you down, look with disfavor upon you, curse you angrily with a baleful curse, on earth, may they uproot you from the living, below, may they deprive your spirit of water (libations), may they chase you away from both shade and sunlight so that you cannot take refuge in a hidden corner, may food and drink forsake you, and hunger, want, famine, and pestilence never leave you, may dogs and pigs drag around in the squares of Ashur the . . . of your young women, the . . . of your young men before your very eyes, may the earth not receive your body for burial, may the bellies of dogs and pigs be your burial place, your days should be somber, your years dark, may they decree for you an unrelied darkness, your lives should end in sighs and sleeplessness, may a flood, an irresistible deluge, rise from the bowels of the earth and devastate you, may all that is good be darkness, your lives should end in sighs and sleeplessness.

60. (521) May Ea, king of the apsu, lord of the springs, give you deadly water to drink, and fill you withdrops.
61. (523) May the great gods of heaven and earth make water and oil an abhorrence to you.
62. (524) May Girra, who provides food for young and old, burn your offspring and descendants.
63. (526) (Ditto, ditto).24 May all the gods who are named in this treaty tablet reduce your soil in size to be as narrow as a brick, turn your soil into iron, so that no one may cut a furrow in it.
64. (530) Just as rain does not fall from a copper sky, so may there come neither rain nor dew upon your fields and meadows, but let it rain burning coals in your land instead of dew.
65. (534) Just as lead does not resist fire, so may you not resist your enemies, but take your sons and daughters by the hand (and flee).
66. (537) Just as a mule has no offspring, may your name, offspring and descendants disappear from the land.
67. (540) Just as the "horn" of [the plow] is within it (the soil) and does not cut a furrow in the soil, [ . . . ] does not return to its [ . . . ], so may your offspring, and the offspring of your sons and daughters disappear from the face of the earth (variant?: from the land).
68. (545) May Shamash plow up your cities and districts with an iron plow.
69. (547) Just as this ewe is cut open and the flesh of its young placed in its mouth, so may he (Shamash?) make you eat in your hunger the flesh of your brothers, your sons, and your daughters.
70. (551) Just as (these) yearlings and spring lambs, male and female, are cut open and their entrails are rolled around their feet, so may the entrails of your sons and daughters be rolled around your feet.
71. (555) Just as a snake and a mongoose do not enter the same hole and do not live there, but plot of cutting each other's throat, so may you and your women not enter the same house, (not lie down in the same bed) but plot of cutting each other's throat.
72. (560) Just as bread and wine enter the intestines, so may they (the gods) let this oath enter your intestines and the intestines of your sons and daughters.

 Some copies add KI.MIN, or KI.MIN KI.MIN, i.e., "If you sin against this treaty of Esarhaddon, (all the gods named in this treaty)" at the beginning of many of the §§ 63-101.

akkad_treaties_from_syria_and_assyria your body, so that you bathe in [your own blood] as if in water.

From nasihiu, "to uproot," see Frankena, loc. cit., p. 132, also Deller, Orientallin, NS, xxxv, 308.

Read in line 484 ina UR, KU 5A. MES "(u-nu)" (or /e/) may-bar.M.x”-ku-nu.

R-to-re, at the end of line 519:
73. (563) Just as you can blow water out of a tube? so may they blow away you, your women, your sons, your daughters, may they make your rivers, your springs, and their wells flow backward.

74. (567) May they let go gold . . . from your land (uncertain).

75. (568) Just as honey is sweet, so may the blood of your women, your sons and daughters taste sweet in your mouths.

76. (570) Just as the . . . is . . . alive, so may, while you are alive, your flesh, the flesh of your women, your sons and daughters . . . be . . .

77. (573) May they break your bow and make you crouch at the feet of your enemies, may they make the bow refuse to bend in your hands, may they turn backward your chariots.

78. (576) Just as a stag is chased and killed, so may your avengers chase and kill you, your brothers, your sons.

79. (579) Just as a butterfly does not fit into (lit.: own) and does not return to its cocoon, so may you not return to your women in your houses.

80. (582) Just as a bird is caught by means of a decoy, so may they deliver you, your brothers, your sons, into the hand of your avengers.

81. (585) May they blacken your flesh/skin, the flesh/skin of your women, your brothers, your sons and daughters [with . . . ], pitch and naphtha.

82. (588) Ditto. Just as a harushu-beast is caught in a snare, so may you, your brothers, your sons and daughters be caught by the hand of your enemy.

83. (591) May your flesh, the flesh of your women, your brothers, your sons and daughters be used up like the flesh of a chameleon.

84. (594) Just as a honeycomb is pierced through and through with holes, so may holes be pierced through and through in your flesh, the flesh of your women, your brothers, your sons and daughters while you are alive.

85. (599) May they (the gods) let lice, caterpillars, and other field pests eat up your land and your district as if locusts.

86. (601) May they squash you as a fly in the hand of your enemies, may your enemies mash you.

25 The verb nabalkatu is used in speaking of the bow in Gossmann, ERA, i, 89 (p. 97 and p. 11): qasgtni faktu tibbali tuma [idtina cil] emuqin, for the reading see Frankena, JEOl, xvi, 42. I would translate this: “Our fine bow refuses (text: refused) to bend, and has become too hard (to string) for our strength (or: arms).” The compound bow used by the Assyrians had to be snapped back for stringing, and long diisue would have destroyed the resilience of the bow, so that it would have been impossible to bend it for stringing in preparation for shooting. The curse here refers to the same situation.

87. (603) Just as this bedbug stinks, so may your breath stink before god, king, and men.

88. (606) May they strangle you, your women, your sons and daughters, with a cord.

89. (608) Just as one burns a wax figurine in fire, dissolves a clay one in water, so may they burn your figure in fire, submerge it in water.

90. (612) Just as this chariot is spattered with blood up to its running board, so may they spatter your chariots in the midst of your enemy with your own blood.

91. (616) May they spit you like a spindle whorl, may they use you like women in the sight of your enemy.

92. (618) May they cause you, your brothers, your sons and daughters to go backward like a crab.

93. (621) May they surround you like an evil fire.

94. (622) Just as (this) oil enters your flesh, so may they make this oath enter your flesh, the flesh of your brothers, your sons and daughters.

95. (626) Just as one cuts off the hands and feet and blinds the eyes of those who blaspheme against the god or the lord, so may they bring about your end, may they make you sway like a marsh reed, may they tear you out like blood from the bandage of the enemy.

96. (632) If you abandon Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, or the crown prince designate Ashurbanipal, and disperse right and left, may swords consume the one who goes to the right, may swords consume the one too who goes to the left.

96A. May they [slaughter] you, your women, your brothers, your sons and daughters like kids.

97. (637) Just as squeak produced by this door pivot, so may you, your women, your sons and daughters never rest nor sleep, not even your bones should stay together.

98. (641) Just as the inside of (this) hole is empty, so may they make your insides be empty.

99. (643) When your enemy pierces you, may there be no wax, oil, zinzaruru or cedar balsam available to put on your wounds.

100. (646) Just as (this) gall is bitter, so may you, your women, your sons and daughters be bitter to each other.

101. (649) May Shamash clamp his bronze trap over you, throw you into a trap from which there is no escape, and not save you (from it).

26 The verb gullulu in line 628 (certainly neither gullulu, “to an,” nor quilulu, “to treat lightly”) must simply mean “to blind.”

27 The expression araru hatu in line 626 to be synonymous with hita hatu.

28 von Soden, AJo, xx, 82, proposed to read su'-e, for summe, “dove.” I prefer to read either su'-e, “millstone,” or, although the adjective annute in 55R presents a difficulty, KUS tfi, “door-pivot” (see CAD, E, s.v. eau).

[540]
102. (652) Just as this waterskin is slit and its water runs out, so may your waterskins be slit in a region of thirst and famine, and you die of lack of water.
103. (656) Just as (this) shoe is slit, [... so may your shoe be slit] in a terrain of thorns [...].
104. (662) May Enlil, lord of the throne, [...]
105. (663) May Nabu, who holds the tablets of fate of the gods, erase your name, and make your descendants disappear from the land.
106. (665) May the door [... in your face, may your doors [...]
Date (669) (Dated) the 16th day of the month Ajaru, in the eponymy of Nabu-bel-usur, governor of Khorsabad. Treaty established (by Esarhaddon) concerning Ashurbanipal, crown prince designate of Assyria, and Shamashshumukin, crown prince designate of Babylonia.

99 Read ta-he-pi with Deller, Orientalia, NS, XXXIII, 95.
Documents from the Practice of Law

Additional Mesopotamian Legal Documents

(Translator: J. J. Finkelstein)

(i) A Trial for Murder

Nanna-sig son of Lu-Suen, Ku-Enlilla son of Ku-Nanna the barber, and Enlil-ennam son of Adda-kalla, the orchard-keeper, murdered Lu-Inganna son of Lugal-uru, the nishakitu-priest.

(6) After Lu-Inganna son of Lugal-uru was dead, they (i.e., the murderers) told Nin-dada daughter of Lu-Ninurta, wife of Lu-Inganna, that her (husband) Lu-Inganna had been murdered. (13) Nin-dada daughter of Lu-Ninurta did not open her mouth; she kept it secret. Their case was brought to Isin before the king. Ur-Ninurta the king ordered that the case be tried by the Assembly of Nippur.

(20) Ur-gula son of Lugal-ibila, Dudu the bird-catcher, Ali-ellati the mul\enu,2 Puzu son of Lu-Suen, Eluti son of Tizzar-Ea, Sheshkalla the potter, Lugal-kam the orchard keeper, Lugal-azida son of Suen-andul, Sheshkalla son of Shara-HAR (var.: UKK-abi) addressed (the Assembly): (30) "As men who have killed a man, they are not (fit to be) alive; those three males and that woman should be killed in front of the (official) chair of Lu-Inganna son of Lugal-uru the nishatyu-priest" they said. (35) Shuqallium the GRIN GAL GAL of the infantry of Ninurta (and) Ubar-Suen the orchard-keeper then addressed (the Assembly): "Nin-dada daughter of Lu-Ninurta—granted that she killed her husband—(40) what can a woman do that she should be killed?,"8 they said. In the Assembly of Nippur they 4 [respond] and] addressed it thus: "A woman who does not treasure her husband—(45) she may surely have had intercourse with a stranger,8 (and) he would then murder her husband. Should he then let her know that her husband had been killed—why should she then not keep silent about him? (50) It is certainly she, who murdered her husband; her guilt exceeds that of the ones who (actually) killed a man," they said.

The Assembly of Nippur having (thus) resolved the issue, Nanna-sig son of Lu-Suen, Ku-Enlilla son of Ku-Nanna, the barber, Enlil-ennam son of Adda-kalla, the orchard-keeper, and Nin-dada daughter of Lu-Ninurta, the wife of Lu-Inganna, were condemned to execution. (Subscription:) A case before the Assembly of Nippur.

(ii) Dissolution of Partnership

Ashurpilah, trustee for the estate of Amur-Ishtar, Su'in-re'um, Ilibani, Ashurnishu, and Shulaban—the sons of (5) Amur-Ishtar (appearing)"in their own right—and representing Abshalim, daughter of Amur-Ishtar and Iddin-Adad their brother, (vs.) Ashurmuttabbil, Buzazu, and Ikupasha, sons of (10) Pushuken (appearing) in their own right, and representing Ahaha their sister, the abbess, and their brother Shue'a, empaneled us (as judges) respecting their mutual obligations. (15) They swore the oath by the "City" (i.e., Ashur) and we terminated their litigations, (namely): (Regardless) whether (in the past) Amur-Ishtar had acted as (lawful) agent for Pushuken, or whether Pushuken acted as agent (20) for Amur-Ishtar; whether either one had sent the other (goods for) deposit; whether either one had (25) received money of the other on outstanding deliveries; whatever (business involved in) an encased tablet bearing the seal of (either of) them; whatever was in transit, whatever either had stored in the other's warehouse—whether it was in the (30) "City" (i.e., Ashur), or in the "Country" (i.e., central Anatolia)—the sons of Amur-Ishtar, the daughter of Amur-Ishtar, the abbess, and the sons of Pushuken, the daughter of Pushuken, (35) the abbess,—none will return (in litigation) against the other for any cause whatever. Usanum son of Amur-Ashur, Kuluma'a son of Ashur-imitti, (40) Huni'a son of Ashur-imitti, Tabsil-Ashur son of Ashur-idi, Puzu-renna son of Enna-Ashur, Ashurtaklaku son of Alahum, Belanum son of Shu-Ashur, Idi-Ashur son of Dan-Ashur—these persons were those who terminated the litigation.

1 King of Isin, 1923-1896 B.C.
2 The social class consisting of crown dependents.
3 I.e., she was an accessory to, but not a direct participant in the act.
4 Presumably, the nine persons who first proposed the verdict, who were most likely the "elders" of the Assembly.
5 Based on the variant from a duplicate text.
6 Understanding L6.KUR as lamu and zu as lamatu in this context, cf. Code of Hammurabi §§ 153-154. As in CH 153, it is presumed that a wife would not be implicated in the murder of her husband unless she was in league with a paramour.
7 Probably referring to her murdered husband, as in line 14, rather than the murderers, who were three men.
(j) Acknowledgement of Liability for a Parental Obligation

Ashurtab empaneled us (as judges) against Ashurlamassi, and thus (spoke) Ashurtab to Ashurlamassi: (5) This tablet—does it bear the seal of your father, or does it (not) bear the seal of your father?" Thus (spoke) Ashurlamassi: "(It does bear) the seal of my father." Thus (spoke) Ashurtab: "You have brought me evidence of your liability (of the obligation) within six months. If I do not produce for you (this evidence within six months), I assume the debt. Month of Sha-sarate, (10) eponymate of a subordinate of Enna-Su'in. Witness (i.e., the judges): Abuziya son of Shu-Erra.

Later

Son of Shu-Su'in, [ . . . ] son of Ashur-Shamshi, Anina son of Shu-Su'in, . . . . . . .

(4) Marriage Contract

Laqipum has married Hatala, daughter of Enishru. In the country (i.e., Central Anatolia) Laqipum (5) may not marry another (woman)—(but) in the City (i.e., Ashur) he may marry a hierodule. If within two years she (i.e., Hatala) does not provide him with offspring, (10) she herself will purchase a slave woman, and later on, after she has will have produced a child by him, (15) he may then dispose of her by sale wheresoever he pleases. Should Laqipum choose to divorce her (text: "him"), he must pay (her) five minas of silver; (20) and should Hatala choose to divorce him, she must pay (him) five minas of silver. Witnesses: Masa, Ashurishti, ( . . . ) son of Ashur-Shamshi, Anina son of Shu-Erro.

(5) Inheritance of Priestly Office

Sinabushu son of Nanna-lu-ti having (formerly) conveyed the sealed titles of (his) office of incantancy-priest and his inheritance into the possession of Nannatum the nishakju priest—(7) two years having passed since the death of Sinabushu—Aba-Enlil-dim took possession of (these) sealed titles from the hand of Nannatum. In the future, any claims with reference to (these) sealed titles will be answerable by Aba-Enlil-dim.

Names of Witnesses: Month of Addar, 13th year of Samsuiluna.

(6) Sale of Temple Prerogatives

The term office(s) of anointer, brewer, and "chef" of the temple of Damu—fourteen days a year during the month of Marcheshwan—(5) the prebend of Damiqilishu son of Ana-Damu-taklaku, Puzur-Gula son of Ibku-Nisaba has (10) purchased from Damiqilishu. He has paid out its full sale price of 15 shekels of silver. That in the future (15) Damiqilishu and his heirs—as many as they may be—will not institute any claim with reference to (these) prebends, (20) he swore the oath by the king.

List of witnesses. Date: 45th year of Rim-Sin.

(y) Litigation over Inheritance

Text A

Concerning a house-plot of ¾-sar iu area within the cloister, adjoining the house of Lamassi the hierodule, the full share of a jointly held prior estate which Amat-Shamash daughter of Supapum (5) had bequeathed to her (adopted) daughter, the (natural) daughter of Sin-eribam, Nidnusha and Shamash-apili, sons of Iddinum (10) brought suit against the daughter of Sineribam, stating thus: "Amat-Shamash did not bequeath to you any house whatever, and executed no document in your favor; upon her death, you yourself drew up (such a document)," (15) that is what they stated. They (i.e., the litigants) pleaded before Sumu-Akshak. (For the purpose of hearing the testimony of) her (i.e., the defendant’s) male and female witnesses, the Standard of Shamash, the Saw of Shamash, and (20) the Serpent of the cloister, the hierodule, the full share of a jointly held prior estate which Amat-Shamash daughter of Supapum (5) had bequeathed to her (adopted) daughter, the (natural) daughter of Sin-eribam, Nidnusha and Shamash-apili, sons of Iddinum (10) brought suit against the daughter of Sineribam, stating thus: "Amat-Shamash did not bequeath to you any house whatever, and executed no document in your favor; upon her death, you yourself drew up (such a document)," (15) that is what they stated. They (i.e., the litigants) pleaded before Sumu-Akshak. (For the purpose of hearing the testimony of) her (i.e., the defendant’s) male and female witnesses, the Standard of Shamash, the Saw of Shamash, and (20) the Serpent of

A healing god, whose temple was located in Isin.

Sinabushu son of Nanna-lu-ti having (formerly) con-

Akk. qadistum, who, according to Middle Assyrian Laws § 40, may be married to a free arizen, but her status would probably have been inferior to that of a "first" wife under the circumstances envisaged in this contract.

* The translation assumes that the subject is the slavewoman, but it is equally possible that Hatala is the subject here also, which would configure better with the fact that it is she who was to provide the slavewoman to begin with, and presumably would also retain the right to sell her.
Ishhara entered the cloister. Her male and female witnesses having testified that she had, while still alive, bequeathed to the plaintiff the house and drawn up the document, the judges proceeded with the case; the judges pronounced the penalty to be imposed upon them (i.e., the plaintiffs); the judges cast ... upon them (30) Nidnusha, Shamash-apili, and the brothers of Amat-Shamash— as many as there may be— who held joint shares in the estate— may not re-institute suit against the daughter of Sin-eribam. If any among the brothers of Amat-Shamash— as many as may be so counted— should again (35) institute suit, since their case has been terminated, it is they (i.e., the plaintiffs) who will be held responsible.

A legal case before Shamash. Names of three or four judges.

Text B

(Ending lost) . . . (After) [Nidnusha and Shamash-apili], his brother, [the sons of] Iddinunim had instituted suit, and the judges tried the case in the temple of Shamash. (And) (5) drew up a non-contestable document in favor of Lamassi, Beltani, Iltani, and the daughter of Sin-eribam, Nidnusha son of Iddinunim once again filed suit. Sumu-Akshak the burgomaster of Sippar (10) and the judges of Sippar implemented judicial process: Because he had again filed suit in face of a duly executed non-contestable document, they (i.e., the authorities) shaved half his head hair, (15') pierced his nose, extended his arm(s) (and) marched him around the city. His contest and suit are terminated. Never again shall (20') Nidnusha son of Iddinunim bring suit against Lamassi, the totary of Shamash, daughter of Puzur-Akshak, Beltani, the totary of Shamash, daughter of Maniun, Iltani, the totary of Shamash, daughter of Irra-gamil, and the daughter of Sin-eribam, with respect to anything which Amat-Shamash, the totary of Shamash, daughter of Supapum had (25') bequeathed to them, from chaff to gold. He may not plead: "I have forgotten this." Nor shall the brothers of Amat-Shamash, as many as there may be, bring suit against them. Because Nidnusha (30') has terminated their case, Nidnusha will be held responsible for their (future) contest and suit.

They swore the oath by Shamash, Marduk, Sinmu-apili, as a priestess. Date: 15 Tishre, unknown year of Ammidiatana.

(8) Marriage Contract

Old Babylonian period. Text: BM 78296, CT, XLVIII, no. 50.

Sabitum daughter of Ibbatum— Ibbatum, her father, delivered her into the house of Ilushu-ibni, her father-in-law, (5) as wife to Warad-kubi, his son. 2 beds, 2 chairs, 1 table, 2 baskets, 1 millstone, 1 mortar, 1 siitu-measure, (10) 1 grinding-bowl—all these items which Ibbatum has given to Sabitum, his daughter, she brought into the house of Ilushu-ibni, her father-in-law. (15) Her bride-price of ten shekels of silver, (which) Ibbatum has received, having kissed her, he bound (the money) up in the sissihfu2 of her daughter, Sabitum; it was (thus) (20) returned to Warad-kubi.

Should Sabitum ever say to her husband Warad-kubi: "(You) are not my husband," They shall bind her and cast her into the water. (25) And should Warad-kubi ever say to his wife Sabitum: "(You) are not my wife," he shall weigh out her divorce money of one-third mina of silver. Emuq-Adad, her brother(!), (30) shall be responsible for her word.

Five witnesses, including the scribe. Date: 15 Tishre, unknown year of Ammimidadana.

(g) Judicial Disherson

(Ending lost) . . . (2') spoke thus, declaring: (3') "Shamash-nasir is not my brother; Avil-Nabium, my father, did not (4') adopt him," thus he declared. (5') Shamash-nasir thus responded to him, saying: (7') "Avil-Nabium, my father, while I was a small child, (8') took me in adoption and reared me, (9') I can produce my witness (to that effect)," thus he spoke. (10') In the presence of the judges they (thus) charged and replied to each other. (11') The judges examined their case and (12') requested of him2 his witness. Witness (13') was ushered into the presence of the judges, who then (14') listened carefully to their testimony and (15' - 16') dispatched them to the temple of Shamash in order to declare their testimony (under oath), (rev.) (1-2) In the temple of Shamash, the witnesses took the stand (before) the Golden Standard,3 his heralds,4 and (3)

1 Text: "his."
2 The hem of her garment, having legal and symbolic significance in the event of divorce. The bride-price money was in this instance transferred by the bride's father to the bride, for her husband's use but the principal remaining ultimately the property of the wife.
3 Text: "father."
4 Reading a-li\ mah-ra-ti-s. The emblems are here construed as plural.
thus declared their testimony, saying: (4-5) "Awil-Nabium took Shamash-nasir in adoption as a small child, (6) and reared him; we certify his being reared," thus they stated. (7) [Word] having been brought back to the judges, (8) [the judges] thereupon reinstated Shamash-nasir as the son of Awil-Nabium, and (9) his brother . . -nasir, they disinherited (10) . . .

(26x738) xxiv, No. 393, pp. 91 f.

Litigation over a House in Susa

Concerning the house which Abi-ili sold at full price to Kuk-adar in (the time of the viceroy) Temti-raptash and Kuduzulu the burgomaster, (5) Puzur-Teppuna, son of Abi-ili, and his heirs, rose up in litigation against Iqishuni (son of Kuk-Adar), (declaring) thus: "Our father's house was not sold to your father; (10) your tablet is forged." Many men were present and, acting as a court, imposed upon Iqishuni the oath by the god. In the temple of Innanna Iqishuni (15) pronounced the oath, saying: "Thou, O Innanna, knowest that I did not fabricate a forged document and that my father bequeathed this tablet to me." Iqishuni having thus sworn, (20) they cleared for him (his title to) the house. (21-47) Names of witnesses. (48 ff.) In the presence of these witnesses Iqishuni took the oath in the temple of Innanna; Puzur-Teppuna [and his heirs] caused him to take the oath [. . .] (and) they (the judges) cleared (for him title to) the house.

Trial for Assault

Bir-ilishu the Amorite infantryman struck the cheek of Apil-ilishu son of Ahushina, then denied it, saying: "I did not strike (him)." (6) The viceroy and the judges then remanded him to the Gate of Ishtar (where he was) to stand and swear (his denial), (n) (But) he turned away. As he would not pay (voluntary compensation), did not take the stand, and did not swear, he must pay 30 shekels of silver.1

4 witnesses.

(12) A Trial for Theft

Ishshunis and Belshunu—because Taribum had (5) trespassed... in the house of Ishshunis—arrested him. Taribum son of . . . , before the elders of the city confessed: "I am a thief." (10) Since he [confessed]: "I have committed theft,"3 the stolen goods having been found in his possession, the city elders, in the (presence of) the Axe of Sin4 and the Mace of Ishshakidissu,5 delivered him up to Ishshunis for penal servitude.

17 witnesses, including the viceroy (ja\anak\j\u).

Adoption

Yahatti-el is the son of Hallulam and Alitum. He shall rejoice in their joys (5) and commiserate in their miseries. Should Hallulam, his father, and Alitum, his mother (ever) say to their son Yahatti-el: "You are not our son," (10) they shall forfeit house and belongings. Should Yahatti-el say to Hallulam, his father, and to Alitum, his mother (15): "You are not my father; you are not my mother," they shall have him shaved, and shall sell him for money. (As for) Hallulam and (20) Alitum—regardless of how many sons they shall have acquired—Yahatti-el is primary heir, and he shall take a double share of the estate of Hallulam, his father. (25) His younger brothers shall divide (the remainder) in equal shares. Whichever (among the brothers) shall contest (this) against him, will (be deemed to) have eaten the taboo of Shamash, Itur-Mer, Shamshi-Adad, and Yasmah-Adad, (30) and shall pay three and one-third minas of silver, the penalty in a capital case.

Eighteen witnesses. Month of Hibirtum, 28th day; eponymy of Asqudum.

Litigation Concerning Inheritance.

Concerning the estate of the wife of Ammurapi, Abba‘el brought legal suit against his sister Bittatti, declaring thus: "The entire house belongs to me only; you,

1 Reading [fem\am] at the beginning of the line. The judges were not usually present at the oath procedure, which took place in the temple, and had to be duly informed afterwards of its proper execution.

8 lit.: "caused him to leave his father's house."

9 Reading the line: [. . .] Ie-e\<e\>r-tam c-me-da-am i-ti-qu-Sum; the causative of the verb might have been expected. An alternative rendering would be: [The court, in this manner,] (caused) him to suffer the penalty.

3 Compare Laws of Eshnunna § 42, CH §§ 202-205.
Bittatti, are not reckoned2 (as an heir) in (this) house." Thus (replied) Bittatti: "[...] in the city of Suwaruwa, [...] I am (indeed) reckoned (as an heir) in [the estate of] my mother; why8 have you then taken the extra share (of the estate)? You and I must (rather) divide our father's house equally."

They entered upon legal proceedings before King Niqmepa. Abia'du declared in testimony before King Niqmepa the king that Bittatti held (rights to) a share just cited. Were detailed to arrange the division of the house. Abba'el of the) house which he declines. That is what the king which he pleases; Bittatti shall then take that (portion of the estate of) my mother;

Tsevat,

Alalakh Tablets,

Assyriological Studies

p. 364. If the restoration in line 9 is accepted, it suggests that Abba'el had taken possession of the entire "house," was thereupon challenged unjustified, but is a peculiarity of the local scribes, cf. Aro,

JBL

LXXXII

(1963)

p. 300 f., cf. also JBL LXXXII (1963) for the Heb. cognate. The writing of the verb in this text as bdilatu is due to the peculiarities of Alalakh orthography even in the Old Babylonian period, cf. J. Aro, ARJ xvn (1956) 361, thus also M. Tsevat, HUCA xxix (1958) p. 112, whose understanding of the verb as relating to legal rights was disproved by Speiser in the references just cited.

Seal of Niqmepa (seal impression of Idrimi) Seal of Niqmepa (seal impression of Idrimi)1

Shatuwa son of Zuwa, citizen of Luba, asked Apra for (the hand of) his daughter to be his daughter-in-law, (5) and, in accordance with the rules of Aleppo, brought him the marriage gift. Apra (subsequently) committed treason,2 was executed for his crime, (10) and his estate was confiscated by8 the palace. Shatuwa came, in the light of his (rights to his) possessions—six ingots of copper and two bronze daggers—and took them (back). (15) And as of this day, Niqmepa (is considered to have) satisfied Shatuwa. For (all) future time, Shatuwa [will have no further] legal claim with reference to his possessions. Seven witnesses, including the scribe.

(16) Manumission and Marriage

As of this day, before witnesses, Gilben, chamberlain of the queen's palace, set free (5) Eliyawe his maid-servant, from among the women of the harem, and by pouring oil on her head, made her free, (saying:) (10) "Just as I am quit towards her, so is she quit towards me, forever."

Further, Buriyanu, the namuhas taken her as his wife, (15), and Buriyanu, her husband has rendered 20 (shekels) of silver into the hands of Gilben. Four witnesses.

(Inscribed on seal:) Should Buriyanu, tomorrow or the following day, refuse to consummate2 (his marriage) with Eliyawe—

(17) Will and Testament

As of this day, before witnesses, Yarimmanu spoke as follows: "Now therefore, (5) whatever I possess (and) that which Bidawe acquired together with me (to wit): my large cattle, my small cattle, my ass, my male slaves, my female slaves, my bronze bowls, bronze kettles, (10) bronze jugs, baskets, the field of Bin-Harasina (bordering) upon the Ra'abani stream—I have bequeathed to Bidawe, my wife.

And now therefore, my two sons (15)—Yatlinu, the elder, and Yahnamu, the younger—whichever of them shall bring a lawsuit against Bidawe, or shall abuse Bidawe, (20) their mother, shall pay 500 shekels of silver to the king; he shall set his cloak upon the doorbolt,1 and shall depart into the street. But whichever of them (25) shall have paid respect to Bidawe, his mother—to that one will she bequeath (the possessions).

Five witnesses and the name of the scribe.

1 Niqmepa was the son of Idrimi, kings of Alalakh in the first half of the 15th century BC.

8 Lit.: "became an evildoer (bel masiti)."
8 Lit.: "entered (the palace)."
1 Lit.: "man of the steppe," possibly a migrant agricultural laborer.
2 Lit.: "approach;"
8 The penalty is left unstated, and was to be understood.
1 I.e., in addition to the severe fine, he is disinherited, and must give up even the clothing on his back as he leaves the house.
(i5) Trial for Homicide

Before Ini-Teshup, king of Carkemish, Arishimiga, a merchant in the service of the king of Tarhudashshi, and the citizens of Ugarit met in trial. Arishimiga deposed thus: (5) "The citizens of Ugarit killed a merchant of the king of Tarhudashshi." And Arishimiga had not retrieved any of the goods belonging to the merchant then pay the full compensation for that merchant." (15) Arishimiga then took the oath, and the citizens of Ugarit shall enter no claim against Arishimiga in respect of the 180 shekels of their compensation payment. Which-ever (of them) does so enter a claim—(25) this document will prevail against him.

(ii) Adoption of the Son of a Prostitute

Innin-shum-ibni son of Nabu-ahhe-shullim came to Balta daughter of Nabu-ahhe-shullim, his sister, stating as follows: (5) "Give me your seventeen-day-old son Dannu-ahhe-ibni, that I will rear him, and he will be my son." Balta acceded to him, and gave him her seventeen-day-old son Dannu-ahhe-ibni for adoption. He then inscribed him as next-(heir-)in-line to his own son Labashi. For as long as Balta continues (10) to practice prostitution, Dannu-ahhe-ibni will grow up in her care. As soon as Balta goes to the house of a respectable citizen, he (i.e., Innin-shum-ibni) will pay Balta one-third shekel of silver for the feeding and rearing of Dannu-ahhe-shullim (and with) bread, beer, salt, cress, and musibtum-clothes.

(16) Innin-shum-ibni swore by Anu and Ishtar: "Verily, in good faith and as (your) brother, I will never give away Dannu-ahhe-ibni to Nabu-zer-lishir my brother, or to Eshritu my sister. Dannu-ahhe-ibni and Labashi together will serve the king and the "Mistress-of-Uruk."

Witnesses: six names including that of the scribe.

Date: Ninth of Tammuz, 32nd year of Nebuchadnezzar (=573/2 B.C.). (30) May Anu and Ishtar and the solemn oath of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, decree the destruction of whomssoever alters this agreement.

(20) Sale of Temple Benefice

Nana-iddin son of Parak-Anu son of Anu-ahhe-iddin, descendant of Kuzu, by his own will, has sold to Parak-Anu son of Nur son of Anu-ah-ushabshi, descendant of Ekur-zakir, the twelfth-part of the day for each day from the first day (of the month) to the thirtieth day, his prebend of the post of brewer before the gods Anu, Antum, Ishtar, Nana, Belit-sha-bit-resh, Sharriyahitum, and all the deities of their chapels, monthly throughout the year, the guqquanu-offerings on the days of the monthly festivals and all else that accrues to those prebends (which the seller owns) together with his brothers and all other shareholders, in perpetuity and at the full price of % mina of pure silver by the true stater-weights of Antiochus. Nana-iddin has received from the hands of Parak-Anu, the money of %th mina, the price of the total of those prebends; it is paid. Should any (future) claim arise with respect to those prebends, Nana-iddin son of Parak-Anu, vendor of those prebends, will clear it by paying twelve-fold to Parak-Anu son of Nur. (reverse 15) Joint responsibility for clearing those prebends (of other claims) in favor of Parak-Anu son of Nur, rests in perpetuity upon Nana-iddin, vendor of those prebends, and (upon) Parak-Anu, his son. The twelfth-part of the day, which is the prebend of the brewership, is the possession of Parak-Anu son of Nur son of Anu-ah-ushabshi descendant of Ekur-zakir, forever. (19-27) List of witnesses.

(28) Uruk, 12th day of the month of Tammuz, year 144—Antiochus (IV), king—July 21, 168 B.C.

On side of tablet: seal legend of five witnesses, followed by:

Seal of Nana-iddin, vendor of those prebends;
Seal of Parak-Anu, his son, guarantor.

1 i.e., she will be legally married.
2 i.e., the goddess Inanna/Ishtar.
Aramaic Papyri from Elephantine

TRANSLATOR: H. L. GINSBERG

MANUMISSION OF A FEMALE SLAVE AND HER DAUGHTER, JUNE 12, 427 B.C.

(1) On the 20th of Siwan, 1 that is the 7th day of Phamenoth, 2 the year 38 of King Artaxerxes 3—at that time, (2) Meshullam son of Zakkar, a Jew of the fortress Elephantine, of the detachment of Arpakhu said to the woman Tapmut (as she is called), (3) his slave, 4 who has on her right hand the marking "Of Meshullam," as follows: I have taken kindly thought of you (4) in my lifetime. I hereby declare you released at my death and likewise declare released the daughter Yehoyishma' (as she is called) whom (5) you have borne to me. 5 No son or daughter, close or distant relative, kinsman, or clansman of mine (6) has any right to you or to the daughter Yehoyishma' whom you have borne to me; 5 none has any right (7) to mark you or to deliver you as a payment of money. Whoever attempts such action against you or the daughter Yehoyishma' (8) whom you have borne to me 5 must pay you a fine of 50 karsh of silver by the king's weights. You (9) are released, with your daughter Yehoyishma', from the shade for the sun, 6 and no other man is master (10) of you or your daughter Yehoyishma'. You are released for God.

(11) And Tapmut and her daughter Yehoyishma' declared: We shall serve you (11) as a son or daughter supports his or her father (12) as long as you live; and when you die, we shall support your son Zakkar like a son Yehoyishma', from the shade for the sun, 7 and no other man is master of you or your daughter Yehoyishma'. You are released for God.

shall be liable to you and your son Zakkar for a fine (15) in the amount of 50 karsh of refined silver by the king's weights without suit or process.

Written by Haggai (16) the scribe, at Elephantine, at the dictation of Meshullam son of Zakkar, the witnesses herein being: 9 Atarparan son of Nisai (17) the Mede; witness Micaiah son of Ahio; witness Berechiah son of Miptah; witness Dalah son of Gaddul.

(Endorsement) Quit-claim written by Meshullam son of Zakkar to Tapmut and Yehoyishma'.

MARRIAGE CONTRACT OF A FORMER SLAVE GIRL WHO IS SUBJECT TO PARAMONE, 420 B.C.

(1) On (the first day of) 1 the month of Tishri, 2 that is Epiphii, 3 the year 4 of King Darius, 4 in the fortress Elephantine, said Ananiah son of Haggai, (2) an Aramaean 5 of the fortress Elephantine, (off) the detachment of [Iddin]-Nabu, to Zakkar son of Meshullam, an Aramean of Syene, of the same detachment, as follows:

(3) I have come to your house and asked you for your sister 6 the woman Yehoyishma' (as she is called) in marriage, and you have given her (4) to me. She is my wife and I am [her] husband from this day to eternity. I have paid to you as the bride price of your sister 6 Yehoyishma' (5) 1 karsh of silver; you have received it [and have been satisfied therewith. Your sister Yehoyishma' has brought into my house a cash sum (6a) of two karsh, (two) 2 shekels, and 5 hallurs of silver, . . . (Lines 6b-i3a, defective, a list of probably 12 articles of wool and linen with their respective values; 13b-i5a, 5 articles of copper with their respective values; 15b missing.) (15c) [Garments and articles of colpper

1. By the Babylonian calendar, adopted by the Persians.
2. By the Egyptian calendar.
3. Artaxerxes II (464-424).
4. Though she was acquired in marriage 22 years earlier by a contract (Brooklyn, 2) between her master and her husband, and though her daughter has issued from that marriage, she has remained in law her slave of her master, and her daughter has been born into that status.
5. In a proprietary, not biological, sense; see JAOS, lxxiv (1954), 157 f.
7. The k of the word šy (cf. the identical phrase in 1. 13) was omitted by haplography.
8. Similar arrangements, by which the manumitted slave is bound to render certain services to his master for the duration of the latter's life, were common in the Hellenistic world, in which they were known as paramone.
9. The witnesses' names are not signed by them but simply recorded by the scribe; cf. Jer. 32:12, "the witnesses who were recorded (hatypātim the better reading) in the deed." On other fifth century Aramaic deeds from Elephantine, the witnesses, or some of them, sign in their own hands. The transition to the latter practice was in progress.
10. Omitted in the original, apparently idiomatically.
11. Of the Babylonian calendar, adopted by the Persians.
12. Of the Egyptian calendar.
14. Jews are sometimes thus described in these documents, no doubt by reason of their language.
15. Legally speaking, not biologically; see p. 548b, note 5.
with the cash and the bride price: 7 seven (that is, 7) karsh, eight (that is, 8) shekels, and 5 hallurs of silver by the king’s (17a) weights, silver of 2 R 8 to the ten. (17b-2iaa, containers of palm leaves, reeds, wood, and stone and quantities of various sorts of oil—no values specified.9)

(21 cont.) If at some future date Ananiah should arise in the assembly and declare, "I divorce my wife Yehoyishma’; (22) she shall not be a wife to me," he shall become liable for divorce money. (He shall forfeit her bride price:10) he must surrender to her all that she brought into his house. Her dowry of cash (23) and clothing, worth karsh seven, shfekels eight, and hallurs 5 of silver, and the rest of the goods listed (above)11 (24a-b) he must hand over to her on one day and in a single act, and she may [leave him for where]ver [she will]. . . .

(24c) If, on the other hand, Yehoyishma’ should divorce her husband (25) Ananiah and say to him, "I divorce you, I will not be wife to you," she shall become liable for divorce money. [].10 (26) She shall sit by the scales and weigh out to her husband Ananiah 7 shekels and 2 R and shall leave him with the balance of her (27) cash, goods, and possessions, worth karsh 7, shekels 5+, and hallurs 5; and the rest of her goods, (28) which are listed (above), he shall hand over to her on one day and in a single act, and she shall depart for her father’s house.

If Ananiah should die having no male or (29) female child from his wife [Yehoyishma’], Yehoyishma’ shall be [mistress] of his [property: of his house, his goods, (30) his possession, [and all that he owns. Anyone who] attempts to banish Yehoyishma’ from his house, [goods, possessions], and all that [he] owns, [shall pay to [her a fine] of silver, (32) twenty karsh by [the king’s] weights, silver of 2 R to the 10,8 and shall accord [her] her due under this deed without lawsuit. (33) However, Yeh[oyishma’] is not permitted [to] acquire a husband other [than] Anani. Should she do so, (34) that shall constitute a divorce, and [the provisions for divorcement] shall be applied to [her]. (So, too,) if [Yehoyishma’] should die having no (35) [male] or female child by [her] husband Anani, [Anani] shall inherit from her her [cash], goods, possessions, and all (36) that she owns[s]. And [Anani] likewise [may] not take any woman [other than his wife Yehoyishma’] in marriage. Should he do [so, that shall constitute a divorce, and the provisions for divorcement shall be applied to him].

Further, Ananiah (38) may not omit to accord to his wife Yehoyishma’ the right of any of the wives of his fellows.18 Should (39) he fail to do so, that shall constitute a divorce, and he shall implement for her the provisions for divorcement.12 Neither may Yehoyishma’ (40) omit to accord to her husband Ananiah the right of any (husband).18 Should she fail to accord it to him, that shall constitute a divorce.

Further, (41) Zakurr may not say with reference to [his] sister, "I gave those [goods]s to Yehoyishma’ gratis; now I wish (42) to take them back." If he speaks [thus], no attention shall be paid to him; he is in the wrong.

This deed was written by Ma’uziah son of Nathan (43) at the dictation of Ananiah son of Haggai [and] Zakurr son of Meshullam, and the witnesses thereto are: (There followed the names of six witnesses and those of their fathers, making twelve names in all, of which nine are preserved, all of them Jewish, and all of them in the handwriting of the scribe.)

9. The bride price, though formally paid to the bride’s legal guardian, becomes part of her dowry; cf. p. 223, n. 6.
10. See p. 222d, n. 3.
11. So also in the contract abridged on pp. 222-23. Perhaps the value of such items, being relatively slight, was not expected to become a matter of serious dispute.
12. Moved up from 1. 25 to 1. 22. Cf. p. 223e top. For a full justification, see JAOS, LXXIV (1954), 159A-B.
13. 11. 21-28.
14. i.e., conjugal rights.
15. cf. p. 548d, n. 9.
III. Historical Texts
Egyptian Historical Texts
TRANSLATOR:

JOHN

Asiatics in Egyptian
Household Service
In the Thirteenth Dynasty (mid-eighteenth century B.C.) there is evidence for the presence of numerous Asiatics serving in Egyptian households. Whether they should specifically be called "slaves" is not certain, even if probable. Since there is no contemporaneous evidence for military capture of Asiatics, the Joseph story (Gen. 37:28, 36) may supply the solution, in a trade in Asiatics carried on by Asiatics themselves.
The present text deals with more than eighty servants of a single Theban household, of w h o m more than forty are stated to be Asiatic. There are many more women than men. A m o n g the males are "house-men," cooks, a brewer, and a tutor(?). T h e majority of the women worked in the weaving rooms. T h e adults are usually listed with an Asiatic name, followed by an Egyptian name. Again the analogy of Joseph's two names seems apt. O n e Asiatic has only an Egyptian name, followed by the entry: "It is his name." TTie children usually have only an Egyptian name.
Were they born in bondage?
The basic publication is William C. Hayes, A Papyrus of the Late Middle Kingdom in the Brooklyn Museum [Papyrus Brooklyn 35.1446] (Brooklyn Museum, 1955). A m o n g the chief commentaries are those by W . F . Albright, J AOS, LXXIV (1955), 222-33, a n d G. Posener, Syria, xxxiv (1957), 145-63.

(viii 1) The king's servant, Renes-seneb's son, Ankhu—he is called Hedjri—house-man.1
The maidservant, Iy's daughter, Sat-Gemeni—it is her name—hairdresser.
Her daughter, Renes-seneb—it is her name—child.
The king's servant, Iusni's son, Ashau—it is his name—
fieldhand.
(5) (The king's servant), Iy's son, Ibu—it is his name
—fieldhand.
The Asiatic, Seneb-Res-seneb—it is his name—cook.
The Asiatic woman, Rehui—she is called Kai-pu-nebi—warper of cloth. 2

Her son and Nefu's son, Res-seneb—he is called Renefres—child.
[The Asia]tic, [A]pra-Reshpu 3 —[he is called . . . ]— brewer.
(10) The Asiatic woman, Haiimmi—she is called . . . — weaver of linen.

The Asiatic woman, Menahem—she [is called . . . ]— weaver of linen.

An Egyptian, as always below in the absence of the word "Asiatic."
The nickname Hedjri or Hedjru probably meant "Hyena."
2 Commentators believe that both names are Egyptian.
3 (The god) "Reshpu Nourishes."
1

{553}

WILSON

The Asiatic woman, Sekratu4—she is called Wer-ditni-Nub—weaver of linen.
(The Asiatic woman), Immi-Sukru 5 —(she is called) Seneb-[Sen]-Usert—[weaver of] linen.
(15) (The Asiatic woman), Aduttu 6 —(she is called)
(The Asiatic woman), [Se]kratu—(she is called)
Sen[eb . . . ]—weaver of cloth.
(ix 17) The Asiatic woman, Akhati-mer7—she is called Henuti-pu-Wadjet—warper of linen.
The Asiatic, Tuti-uit8—he is called Ankh-em-hesut—house-man.
The Asiatic, Qui . . . —he is called Res-seneb—houseman.
(20) The king's servant, I i . . . — i t is his name—houseman.
The Asiatic woman, Shepra9—she is called Senebhenutes10—weaver of linen.
The Asiatic woman, Sukra-/£«/y—she is called MeritNub—warper of cloth.
The Asiatic woman, Asher—[she is] called Wer-Intef
. . . —weaver . . .
Her daughter, Senebtisy—it [is her name]—child.
(25) The Asiatic woman, An[ath . . . ]—she [is called]
Nub-em-mer-Kis—weaver of linen.
The Asiatic woman, Shamashtu—she is called Senebhenut . . . —warper of linen.
The Asiatic Isibtu—he is called Amen-em .. . —tutor.
The maidservant, Wewi's daughter, Irit—it is her name— . . .
The Asiatic [woman, . . . ]i-huti—she is called Menhesut— . . .
(30) Her daughter, Dedet-Mut...—[it is her name]— child.
Her son, Ankhu-seneb— . . . —child.
The Asiatic [woman], A k h . . . — . . . — . . . linen.
(x 33) The Asiatic [woman], Aduna—she is called Seneb-he[nut . .. ]— . . .
Her son Ankhu—he is called Hedjru 11 —child.
(35) The Asiatic woman, Baaltuya—she is called WahRes-seneb—wor\-stafj.
A name related to Issachar.
(The goddess) "Sukru is my Mother."
6 "Lady."
7 Perhaps abbreviated from Akhati-milkatu, "My Sister is Queen."
« "My Beloved is He."
'Related to the name Sapphira.
10 "Her Mistress is in Good Health."
11 See n. 1 above.
4

The Asiatic, Su .. . —he is called Ankhu-seneb—cook

A.

5


Her daughter Senebtisy—it is her name—child.
The Asiatic woman, Aqaba—she is called Res-seneb-wah—warper of linen.
[The maid servant], Senaa-ib’s daughter, Ren-seneb—it is her name—gardener.
Her [daughter], Henut-pu—it is her name—child.18
(xi 58) Her son, Anku—he is called Pa-Amu—child,14
The Asiatic woman, Anath . . . —she is called Iun-er-tan—warper of linen.
(60) The maid servant, Iiti—she is called Bebi-sherit’s daughter, lit—weaver . . .
The Asiatic woman, Ro-inet—she is called Seneb-h[enut]es—weaver of linen.
The Asiatic woman, Hiabi-ilu—she is called Neh-ni-em-khasut—workhouse (worker).
Her son, Abi . . . m—he is called Seneb-nebef.18
(ii 64) [The Asiatic woman, . . .] Ji-Baal—she is called Netjeri-em-sai—warper of linen.
. . . hau—it is her name—warper of cloth.
Her son, Res-seneb—it is his name.
The Asiatic woman, Sakar—she is called Nub-erdis—workman.
The king’s servant, Res-seneb—it is his name—houseman.
The Asiatic woman, Tjenatisi—she is called Peti-menti—workhouse (worker). . . .19

The War against the Hyksos

(Continued)

It is a fortunate chance that provides a new discovery which continues a known inscription. Ka-mose’s attack on the Hyksos was first known through a schoolboy’s tablet and then brought into monumental compass in the fragments of a stela (pp. 232-33). It now appears that this stela was the first of a pair erected at Karnak. In 1954, among the foundation slabs used under statues at Karnak, Labib Habachi discovered an essentially complete stela, which gives the continuation and conclusion of the Ka-mose story.

The stela is of the conventional shape, with a rounded top and the winged sun disk above. However, the first line simply continues a context from the lost final lines of the stela previously known. In a corner of the base is carved the figure of a man, it is her name—gardener.

The royal dhababiyeh.

[554]
metal, apart from moringa-oil, incense, fat, honey, i tren-vood, sesedjem-v/ood, wooden plants, (15) all their valuable timber, and all the good produce of Retenu.8 I seised them all. I did not leave a thing of Avaris, because it is empty, with the Asiatics vanished.

So your wishes have failed, miserable Asiatic, who had been saying: "I am a lord without peer. As far as Hermopolis and to the House of Hat-Hor9 are bringing tribute to Avaris in the two rivers."10 I shall leave it in desolation, without people therein, after I have destroyed their towns. I shall burn up their places, made into red mounds forever, because of the damage which they did in this (part of) Egypt, they who gave themselves over to serving the Asiatics, after they had abandoned Egypt, their mistress.11

I captured a message of his above12 the oasis, going south to Cush, upon a letter of papyrus. I found on it, in written words from the ruler of Avaris:—

("AA-user-Re, the Son of Re: Apophis,18 sending greetings to my son, the ruler of Cush.14 Why do you arise as a ruler without letting me know? Do you see what Egypt has done to me: the ruler who is in it, Ka-mose the Strong, given life, attacking me on my own soil, (although) I had not assailed him—just like everything that he has done to you? He picks out these two lands to persecute them, my land and yours. He has destroyed them. Come north. Do not falter. See, he is here in my hand, and there is no one who is waiting for you in this (part of) Egypt. See, I will not give him leave until you have arrived. Then we shall divide the towns of this Egypt, and our [two lands] will be happy in joy."

Wadj-kheper-Re the Strong, given life, who controls the commercial activities of the Hyksos. the Two Lands are under me, and the rivers as well. No way can be found for trespass against me, and I have not been neglectful of my army. The face of the northern was not averted;15 he became afraid of me while I was sailing south, before we had fought, before I had reached him. He saw my fiery blaze, and he sent (a dispatch) as far as Cush to seek protection for himself. I captured it on the way and did not let it arrive. Then I had it taken back again to him, left on the east side near Atfih.16 My strength entered into his heart, and his body was ravaged when his messenger told him what I had done to the Nome of Cynopolis,17 which had been his property. I despatched a strong brigade, which went overland to lay waste the Oasis of Bahariyah, while I was in Sako,18 in order to permit no rebel to be (30) to the rear of me.

I sailed south in strength of heart, joyful, destroying every rebel who was on the way. Oh what a happy journey south for the Ruler—life, prosperity, health I—having his army before him! There was no loss of them; no man missed his companion. Their hearts did not weep, as I besirred myself to the District of Thebes19 at the season of Inundation. Every face was bright; the land was in affluence; the river-bank ran wild; Thebes was in festival. Women and men came to see me. Every woman embraced her companion. There was no face with tears. I burned incense to Amon at the inner sanctuary and at the place where it is said: "Receive good things," just as he20 gives the sword to the Son of Amon—life, prosperity, health!—the enduring king, Wadj-kheper-Re, the Son of Re: Ka-mose the Strong, given life, (35) who has subdued the south and overthrown the north, who has taken over the land in strength, given life, stability and satisfaction, while his heart is glad with his }a, like Re forever and ever.21

[His] majesty issued a command to the Hereditary Prince and Count, the Privy Councillor of the Palace, the Headman of the Entire Land, the Sealbearer of the King of Lower Egypt, the Helmsman of the Two Lands, the Leader, the Overseer of Courtiers, and [Chief] Treasurer, the strong of arm, Neshi: "Have everything which my majesty has done by strength put upon a stela which occupies its place in Karnak in the Theban Nome forever and ever." Then he said to his majesty: "I will act [in conformance with] that which [my] lord [has commanded me]." Favors of the king's presence were decreed".

8 The "hundreds" of ships and the range of merchandise testify to the commercial activities of the Hyksos.
9 Perhaps Pathyris, modern Gebelein in Upper Egypt.
10 Two branches of the Nile in the Delta.
11 This tirade is against the Egyptians in Middle and Upper Egypt who had gone over to service for the Hyksos.
12 On higher ground than the oasis (of Khargeh)?
14 Or "the son of the ruler of Cush," one who had just succeeded his father as lung.
15 Apophis was unable to leave Ka-mose out of sight.
16 Aphroditopolis on the east bank was a northern point of Upper Egypt, about 55 miles south of Cairo. It must have been within Ka-mose's control.
17 The seventeenth Upper Egyptian nome, near modern Maghagha, about 90 miles south of Cairo.
18 Modern el-Quis of the Cynopolite Nome, about 125 miles south of Cairo. Bahariyah lies about 100 miles west of this. Ka-mose had pushed the Egyptian control about 80 miles north from Cusae (p. 232, 1.5) to Sako.
20 Amon.
21 End of the historical text. There follows the commissioning of the stela.
22 G. Posener, Revue d'Egyptologie, xvi (1964), 213-14, suggests that the accompanying figure of Neshi, carved on a royal stela, might be such an exceptional favor.
The Dedication of the Shamash Temple by Yahdun-Lim

On nine bricks found by A. Parrot in 1953 in Mari, we have the longest brick inscription ever to come out of Mesopotamian soil, 147 to 157 lines in five columns. It contains the dedication of the temple of Shamash by Yahdun-Lim, the father of Zimril-Lim, after his campaign to the Mediterranean Sea and the defeat of the temple of Shamash by Yahdun-Lim, the son of Yag(g)id-Lim, king of (the city of) Mari and of the Hana country, who digs canals, builds city walls, erects stelae mentioning (his) name, provides his people with superabundance, furnishes his country with everything (needed), the mighty king, the famous hero, on the occasion when Shamash was agreeable to his supplication and listened to his prayer.

Indeed, Yahdun-Lim did promptly come to the aid of Yahdun-Lim and while no other king residing in Mari had ever—since, in ancient days, the god built the city of Mari—reached the (Mediterranean) Sea, (ii) nor reached and felled timber in the great mountains, the Cedar Mountain and the Boxwood Mountain, he, Yahdun-Lim, son of Yag(g)id-Lim, the powerful king, the wild bull among the kings, did march to the shore of the sea, an unrivaled feat, and offered sacrifices to the Ocean as (befitting) his high royal rank1 while his troops washed themselves in the Ocean. He (also) entered the great mountains, the Cedar Mountain and the Boxwood Mountain, and felled such trees as boxwood, cedar, cypress, and *elammakku/ u-Xxt&%. He made (this) razzia, established (thus) his fame and proclaimed his power. He subjected that (entire) region on the shore of the Ocean, united it under (his) command, made it furnish him troops, (iii) He imposed a permanent tribute upon it and they are still bringing him their tribute.

In that same year the following kings rebelled against him: La'um, king of Samanum and the country of the Ubrabians, Bahlu-kulim, king of Tuttul and of the country Ammanum, Ajalum, the king of Abattum and the country of the Rabbeans; an army of Sumu-epuh from the country of Jamhad came to their help, in the town of Samanum, they all gathered against him, the center of nomads,2 (but) he (Yahdun-Lim) defeated these three kings of the nomads in a big battle. He routed their army and the army who had come to their help, made a massacre (among them). (Then) he erected piles of their corpses. He razed the walls of their (cities), turning them into mounds of rubble. The city of Haman (belonging to) the center of the Haneans, which all the sheikhs of Hana had built, he razed and (iv) made into mounds of rubble. He also defeated its king, Kasuri-hala, annexed their (the Haneans') country.

Then he built up the embankment of the Euphrates8 (in Mari) and erected (there) the temple of his lord Shamash for his (own) well-being; he made for him (Shamash) a temple of perfect construction in every aspect of craftsmanship, befitting his godhead, and installed him in this magnificent abode. He named this temple: Egiirzalanki (which means): "The-temple-which-is-the-pride-of-Heaven-and-Nether-World."

May Shamash who resides in this temple grant for ever to Yahdun-Lim, who built his temple, his beloved king, a mighty weapon (able) to defeat the enemies, a long and happy rule and everlasting years of abundance and happiness.

Whoever desecrates this temple, assigns3 it to evil and untoward purposes, does not reinforce its foundation, does not replace what has fallen down or (v) stops the food offerings (destined) for it, erases my name (in this inscription)—or gives orders for erasing it—, inscribes his own name not previously inscribed—or gives orders

---

1 In ii 10 the text is in disorder: *niqi Sarrutilu rabiam iqqi.

2 The inceptive implied in the expression *ummat TUK-mi-im is difficult to understand, and the connection with the ethnic designations *TUR.MES.-/-(i), *Ma-ar-mi-i, *TUR.MES.-/-(i)Ra/-/(na/ni/n'm/im) (see, recently, M. Biot in ARMT, XII, p. 34, n. 1) uncertain.

3 The proposed translation of *ilad Purattim tumuruma ganiir gamir fessod Purattim is based on the passage in another inscription of the same king (RA, XXXIII, p. 50, i 7 f.) which speaks of the repair work done on the embankment of the Euphrates.

4 The signs i-ku-pu-Sum cannot refer to a verb "abandonner," nor to *qdu. The translation given is a guess proposed to fit the context.
for writing it—or, prompts somebody else (to do these things) on account of the curses (inscribed here), be this man a king, or a general, or a mayor, or whoever else, Enlil who pronounces decisions for (all) the gods, should make the kingdom of this man smaller than that of all the other kings; Sin, the elder brother among the gods, his brothers, should curse him with the "Great Curse"; Nergal, the armed god, should break his weapon and not accept him (in the nether world when he appears there) slain (in battle). Ea, the master (lit.: king) of fates, should make his fate a bad one; the great lady, Aja the Bride, should forever represent his case in a bad light before Shamash; Bunene, the great plenipotentiary of Shamash, should end his life, eliminate every offspring of his, so that neither descendant nor progeny of his should ever live under the sun (text: Sun god).

The Story of Idrimi,
King of Alalakh

Found in 1939 at Atchana in Syria, the statue showing King Idrimi of Alalakh seated on his throne was not published until 1949 because of war conditions. An inscription of 101 lines indiscriminately covers the front of the figure, with a postscript of three lines incised on one side of the beard and whiskers. Publication: Sidney Smith, The Statue of Idrimi (London, 1949), pp. 14-23, with extensive commentary and a study of the historic background. Literature: W. F. Albright, BASOR, 118 (1950), pp. 14-20; A. Goetze, JCS, xiv (1950), pp. 226-231; J. Nougayrol, RA, xlv (1951), pp. 151-154; B. Landsberger, JCS, viii (1954), pp. 54-55. The present translation is to a considerable extent provisional since obviously a new edition of the text based on collations is needed to ascertain the correctness or probability of the numerous emendations and corrections proposed in the literature on the inscription. I have often accepted suggestions made by other scholars but these as well as my own attempts to extract meaning and continuity from the awkward formulation of the text are in need of confirmation. Words for which I did not dare offer even tentative translations are replaced by three dots. I have refrained from adding footnotes in support of my own translations because they would have been too numerous and too technical and, in the long run, would not have made the translations any more convincing. My purpose has been solely to add new guesses to the old ones and to aim at a readable translation capable of carrying what I consider the basic intent and mood of the original.

I am Idrimi, the son of Ilimilimma, the servant of Adad, of Hepat and of Ishtar, the Lady of Alalakh, my lady. An evil deed happened in Halab, the seat of my family, and we fled to the people of Emar, brothers of my mother, and we lived (then) in Emar. My brothers, who were older than I, stayed with me but none of them had the plans I had. I (said to) myself: "Whoever owns the seat of his family is a . . . (while) who does not is but a slave in the eyes of the people of Emar!" (So) I took with me my horse, my chariot, and my groom, went away and crossed over the desert country and even entered into the region of the Sutian warriors. I stayed with them (once) overnight in my . . . chariot, but the next day I moved on and went to the land of Canaan. I stayed in Ammia in the land of Canaan; in Ammia lived (also) natives of Halab, of the country Mukishkhi, of the country Ni' and also warriors from the country Ama'e. They discovered that I was the son of their overlord and gathered around me. There I grew up and stayed for a long time. For seven years I lived among the Hapiru-people. (Then) I released birds (to observe their flight) and looked into (the entrails of) lambs (and found) that after seven years Adad had become favorable to me. So I built boats, made . . . soldiers board them, approached the country Mukishkhi via the sea and reached shore below Mt. Casius. I went ashore and when my country heard of me they brought me cattle and sheep. And in one day, and as one man, the countries Ni', Ama'e, Mukishkhi and my city Alalakh turned to me. My brothers heard (about this) and they came into my presence. As soon as they had become reconciled with me, I established my brothers as such.

However, for seven years, Barattarna, the mighty king, the king of the Hurrian warriors, treated me as an enemy. In the seventh year, I sent Anuanda (as messenger) to King Barattarna, the king of the (Hurrian) warriors, and told (him) about the services of my forefathers when my forefathers had been in their (the kings') service and (when) what we had said was pleasing to the kings of the Hurrian warriors, and (that) they had made an alliance based on a solemn oath among themselves. The mighty king heard of our former services and of the oath they had sworn to each other—they had read the wording of the oath to him, word by word as well as (the list of) our services. He accepted my messenger (lit.: my greeting). I increased the gifts indicating my loyalty, which were heavy, and returned to him (his) lost household. I swore him a mighty oath as to my status as a loyal vassal.

And (so) I became king in charge of Alalakh. Kings from right and left came up to me and just as they used to bring presents upon presents for my forefather in . . ., I had them bring (them to me) in . . . And I . . . ed them. I took . . . soldiers and went up against the country of the Hittites and I destroyed seven of their fortified places', these are the... fortified places: Pashshakhe, Damarut-re'i, Hulahhan, Zise, Ie, Uluzina and Zaruna. The country of the Hittites did not mobilize (its troops), did not march against me, I could do what I wanted. I took prisoners from them, plundered their riches, possessions, and property, and distributed it to my soldiers, my auxiliary troops, my brothers, and friends. I myself took a share like theirs. Then I returned to the country of Mushkhi and entered (in triumph) into my city Alalakh.

I had a house built by means of the prisoners, the provisions, riches, possessions and property which I had brought down from the country of the Hittites; I made my throne like the throne of kings, my brothers like brothers of kings, my children like their children, and my guardsmen like their guardsmen. I made the Sutians within my country settle in secure settlements and those who did not want to live in settlements I made do so. And I placed my country on a firm footing and made my towns as they were before like .... As to the cultic regulations which the gods of Alalakh had established, and the sacrifices and offerings which our forefathers had performed for them, I have constantly performed them exactly as they had performed them and now I have entrusted (the responsibility for) them to my son Adad-nirari.

May the god of heaven extirpate every offspring of whosoever steals this statue of mine, and curse him, extirpate his sons and offspring also of his ... servants, may the gods of heaven and nether world destroy his kingship and his country. May Adad, the lord of heaven and nether world and (all) the great gods make the son and progeny of whosoever changes or erases it(s inscription), disappear from his country.

Sharruwa, is the scribe, ....

May the gods of heaven and nether world keep the scribe Sharruwa who has written (the text of) this statue in good health and protect him; they should be his ..., Shamash the lord of those above the earth and below, the lord of the spirits of the dead should be his caretaker. (Postscript on the right cheek of the statue): I was king for 30 years. I wrote my achievements on my statue. Let people [read it] and ble[ss me].

The Banquet of Ashurnasirpal II

On a sandstone block placed near the doorway to the throne-room of the palace of Ashurnasirpal in Calah was found in 1951 a figural representation with an inscription (total: 154 lines) in an unusual arrangement The upper part of the stone shows the king in a square recess, flanked by inscribed columns, under an awkwardly arranged row of divine symbols. The text, apart from its stereotyped titulary and historical summary, is mainly concerned with the building of the new capital Calah, the royal garden and the festival in celebration of the opening of the royal palace. While such ceremonies are repeatedly mentioned in Assyrian royal inscriptions (cf. Altorientalische Bibliothek 1, p. 124, iv 26 [Shalm. 1]); H. Winckler, Die Keilschrifttexte Sargons... PL 38, iii 37 ff.; R. Borger, Die Inschriften Asarhaddons, Königs von Assyrien, p. 63, Episode 23-49 (Di D. D. Luckenbill, The Annals of Sennacherib, p. 116, viii 74 ff.), our text is unique in giving us not only an enumeration of the foodstuffs used (inclusive of quantities) but also the number and provenience of the guests. Publication: D. J. Wiseman, "A New Stela of Assur-nasir-pal II" in Iraq, xrv (1952), pp. 24-44, Plates 2-6.

(i)

(This is) the palace of Ashurnasirpal, the high priest of Ashur, chosen by Enlil and Ninurta, the favorite of Anu and of Dagan (who is) destruction (personified) among all the great gods—the legitimate king, the king of the world, the king of Assyria, son of Tukulti-Ninurta, great king, legitimate king, king of the world, king of Assyria (who was) the son of Adad-nirari, likewise great king, legitimate king, king of the world and king of Assyria—the heroic warrior who always acts upon trust-inspiring signs given by his lord Ashur and (therefore) has no rival among the rulers of the four quarters (of the world); the shepherd of all mortals, not afraid of battle (but) an onrushing Rood which brooks no resistance; the king who subdues the uns submissive (and) rules over all mankind; the king who always acts upon trust-inspiring signs given by his lords, the great gods, and therefore has personally conquered all countries; who has acquired dominion over the mountain regions and received their tribute; he takes hostages, triumphs over all the countries from beyond the Tigris to the Lebanon and the Great Sea, he has brought into submission the entire country of Laqe and the region of Suhu as far as the town of Rapiqu; personally he conquered (the region) from the source of the Subnat River to Urartu.

I returned to the territory of my own country (the regions) from the pass (which leads to) the country Kirrure as far as Gilzani, from beyond the Lower Zab River to the town of Til-barî which is upstream of the land of Zamua—from Til-sha-abtani to Til-sha-sabtani—(also) Hirimu and Harrutu (in) the fortified border region of Babylonia (Karduniash). I listed as inhabitants of my own country (the people living) from the pass of Mt. Babite to the land of Hashmar.

Ashur, the Great Lord, has chosen me and made a pronouncement concerning my world rule with his own holy mouth (as follows): Ashurnasirpal is the king whose fame is power!

I took over again the city of Calah in that wisdom of mine, the knowledge which Ea, the king of the subterranean waters, has bestowed upon me, I removed the old hill of rubble; I dug down to the water level; I

Such a verbatim quotation of a divine utterance is extremely rare before the period of the Sargonids in Assyria.
heaped up a (new) terrace (measuring) from the water level to the upper edge 120 layers of bricks; upon that I erected as my royal seat and for my personal enjoyment 7 (text: 8) beautiful halls (roofed with) boxwood, Magan-ash, cedar, cypress, terebinth, tarpi’u and mehru (beams); I sheathed doors made of cedar, cypress, juniper, boxwood and Magan-ash with bands of bronze; I hung them in their doorways; I surrounded them (the doors) with decorative bronze bolts; to proclaim my heroic deeds I painted on their (the palaces’) walls with vivid blue paint how I have marched across the mountain ranges, the foreign countries and the seas, my conquists in all countries; I had lapis lazuli colored glazed bricks made and set (them in) above their gates. I brought in people from the countries over which I rule, those who were conquered by me personally, (that is) from the country Suhu (those of) the town Great [. . .], from the entire land of Zamua, the countries Bit-Zamani and [Kir]rure, the town of Sirqu which is across the Euphrates, and many inhabitants of Laqe, of Syria and (who are subjects) of Lubarna, the ruler of Hattina; I settled them therein (the city of Calah).

I dug a canal from the Upper Zab River; I cut (for this purpose) straight through the mountain(s); I called it Patti-hegalli (“Channel-of-Abundance”); I provided the lowlands along the Tigris with irrigation; I planted orchards at its (the city’s) outskirts, with all sorts of fruit trees.

I pressed the grapes and offered (them) as first fruits in a libation to my lord Ashur and to all the sanctuaries of the great gods: the temples of Ea-sharru (and) Dam-kina, of Adad (and) Shala, of Gula, Sin, Nabu, Belet-nathi, Sibittu (and of) Ishitar-kidmuri. In them I established the (sacred) pedestals of the(se), my divine lords. I decorated them splendidly; I roofed them with cedar beams, made large cedar doors, sheathed them with bands of bronze, placed them in their doorways. I placed figural representations made of shining bronze in their doorways. I made (the images of) their great godheads sumptuous with red gold and shining stones. I presented them with golden jewelry and many other precious objects which I had won as booty.

I lined the inner shrine of my lord Ninurta with gold and lapis lazuli, I placed right and left of it IM objects made of bronze, I placed at his pedestal fierce ulamgallu-dragons of gold. I performed his festival in the months Shabatu and Ululu. I arranged for them (the materials needed for) scatter and incense offerings so that his festival in Shabatu should be one of great display. I fashioned a statue of myself as king in the likeness of my own features out of red gold and polished stones and placed it before my lord Ninurta.

I organized the abandoned towns which during the rule of my fathers had become hills of rubble, and had many people settle therein; I rebuilt the old palaces across my entire country in due splendor; I stored in them barley and straw.

Ninurta and Palil, who love me as (their) high priest, handed over to me all the wild animals and ordered me to hunt (them). I killed 450 big lions; I killed 390 wild bulls from my open chariots in direct assault as befits a ruler; I cut off the heads of 200 ostriches as if they were caged birds; I caught 30 elephants in pitfalls. I caught alive 50 wild bulls, 140 ostriches (and) 20 big lions with my own [. . .] and stave.

(in)

I received five live elephants as tribute from the governor of Suhu (the Middle Euphrates region) and the governor of Lubda (S.E. Assyria toward Babylonia); they used to travel with me on my campaigns. 4

I organized herds of wild bulls, lions, ostriches and... male and female monkeys and had them breed like flocks (of domestic animals).

I added land to the land of Assyria, many people to its people.

When Ashurnasirpal, king of Assyria, inaugurated the palace in Calah, a palace of joy and (erected with) great ingenuity, he invited into it Ashur, the great lord and the gods of his entire country, (he prepared a banquet of) 1,000 fattened head of cattle, 1,000 calves, 10,000 stable sheep, 15,000 lambs—for my lady Ishtar (alone) 200 head of cattle (and) 1,000 sîhu—sheep—1,000 spring lambs, 500 stags, 500 gazelles, 1,000 ducks, 500 geese, 500 ^r°-geese, 1,000 mesu'-birds, 1,000 qaribu-buds, 10,-000 doves, 10,000 su'anunu-doves, 10,000 other (assorted) small birds, 10,000 (assorted) fish, 10,000 jerboa, 10,000 (assorted) eggs; 10,000 loaves of bread, 10,000 (jars of) beer, 10,000 skins with wine, 10,000 pointed bottom vessels with /^r°-seeds in sesame oil, 10,000 small pots with beer, 10,000 skins with wine, 10,000 (assorted) fish, 10,000 jerboa, 1,000 ^r°-geese, 1,000

The Mother of Nabonidus

On two stelae found in Harran, one in 1906 and one as recently as 1956, we have what appears, stylistically, as a tomb inscription of the mother of Nabonidus. The fact that two such objects are found in proximity seems, however, to suggest that they represent some atypical form of memorial tablets, since these stelae were placed, together with two likewise identical stelae of Nabonidus himself (see p. 562), in an architecturally oriented arrangement in or near the temple in Harran, the reconstruction of which is clearly the main concern of both texts. The present translation is based on the stela called Hi B by Gadd (see below) because it is better preserved and more complete than the stela found and first published by H. Pogson (H.A according to Gadd). Publication: C. J. Gadd, "The Harran Inscription of Nabonidus" in AnSt, VIII (1958), pp. 35-92, especially pp. 56-65. The older stela has been treated most recently by B. Landsberger, "Die Basaltstèle Nabonids von Eski-Harran" in Halî Edhem Hatha Kitabî (Ankara, 1947), pp. 115-151, Plates 1-3 (with literature on earlier discussion ibid., p. 120 f.).

I am Adad-guppi,1 the mother of Nabonidus, king of Babylon, a devotee of Sin, Ningal, Nusku and Sadarnunna, my gods, with whom (lit.: with whose godhead) I always, even since my childhood, took refuge, I who—(even) in the 16th year of Nabopolassar, king of Babylon, when Sin, the king of all gods, became angry with his city (i.e., Harran) and his temple, and went up to heaven and the city and the people in it became desolate—visited the sacred places of Sin, Ningal, Nusku and Sadarnunna in (the city and) remained devoted to them (lit.: to their godhead); I who have laid hold of the hem of the garment of Sin, the king of all gods, and have taken refuge with his great godhead every day and night; I who have been piously devoted all my lifetime to Sin, Shamash, Ishtar and Adad, who are in the heaven and in the nether world. For whatever precious possessions they have given me, I than\ed them with gifts day and night for months and years.

I laid hold of the hem of the garment of Sin, the king of all gods, my eyes were directed toward him day and night; I bowed down before him(!) in prayers and

---

1 The Gargantuan bill of fare given here provides us in spite of all its lexical difficulties with the basic features of a banquet menu. The list is structured as follows: (1) meat dishes (sheep, cattle, with some game; fowl consisting mostly of small birds with aquatic birds in the second place) and equal amounts of fish and jerboa with assorted eggs in large number; (2) bread; (3) beer and wine in equal amounts; (4) side dishes consisting mainly of pickled and spiced fruit, and seeds of a wide variety, also onion; (5) dessert (sweet fruits, nuts, honey, cheese) and savories, most of which cannot be identified yet. At the end, the list mentions perfumed oil and sweet smelling substances.

1 For the still unintelligible name of the mother of Nabonidus, see now W. Rollig, ZA, LVI (1964), p. 235, n. 39.
prostrations, saying: "If you would return to your city, all the black-headed people would worship your great godhead!" In order to appease (the anger of) my personal god and goddess, I did not permit apparel made of fine wool, gold and silver jewelry, any new garment, perfumes, and scented oil to touch my body; I was clad in a torn garment and when I left (my house) it was in silence, I constantly pronounced benedictions for them, the praise of my personal god and goddess was in my thoughts and I performed the services for them. I did not spare whatever precious possession I had but brought it to them (as votive offering).

From the 20th year of Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, when I was born, until the 42nd year of Ashurbanipal, the 3rd year of his son Ashur-etil-ili, the 21st year of Nabopolassar, the 43rd year of Nebuchadnezzar, the 2nd year of Awel-Merodach, the 4th year of Neriglissar, during (all) these 95 years in which I visited the temple of the great godhead of Sin, the king of all the gods in heaven and in the nether world, he looked with favor, accepted my vows.

Nabonidus, my only son, whom I bore, to kingship and entrusted him with the kingship of Sumer and Akkad, (also of) all the countries from the border of Egypt, on the Upper Sea, to the Lower Sea. Then I lifted my hands to Sin, the king of all the gods, [I asked] reverently and in a pious mood: (ii) "Since you have called to kingship [Nabonidus, my son, whom I bore, the beloved of his mother,) and have elevated his status, let all the other gods—upon your great divine command—help him (and) make him defeat his enemies, do (also) bring to completion the (re)building of the temple Ehulhul and the performance of its ritual!" In a dream Sin, the king of all the gods, put his hands on me saying: "The gods will return on account of you! I will entrust your son, Nabonidus, with the divine residence of Harran; he will (re)build the temple Ehulhul and complete this task. He will restore and make Harran more (beautiful) than it was before! He will lead Sin, Ningal, Nusku and Sadarnunna in solemn procession into the temple Ehulhul!"

I heeded the words which Sin, the king of all the gods, had spoken to me and I saw (them come true). Nabonidus, the only son whom I bore, performed indeed all the forgotten rites of Sin, Ningal, Nusku and Sadarnunna, he completed the rebuilding of the temple Ehulhul, led Sin, Ningal, Nusku and Sadarnunna in procession from Babylon (Shuanna), his royal city, installed (them again) in gladness and happiness into Harran, the seat which pleases them.

Out of his love for me who worships him and have laid hold to the hem of his garment, Sin, the king of all gods, did what he had not done before, had not granted to anybody else, he gave me (a woman) an exalted position and a famous name in the country. He added (to my life) many days (and) years of happiness and kept me alive from the time of Ashurbanipal, king of Assyria, to the 9th year of Nabonidus, king of Babylon, the son whom I bore, (i.e.) one hundred and four happy years (spent) in that piety which Sin, the king of all gods, has planted in my heart. My eyesight was good (to the end of my life), my hearing excellent, my hands and feet were sound, my words well chosen, food and drink agreed with me, my health was fine and my mind happy. I saw my great-great-grandchildren, up to the fourth generation, in good health and (thus) had my fill of old age.

Let me entrust to you, Sin, my lord, my son Nabonidus, king of Babylon ( Nun") (since) you have looked upon me with favor and have given me (such) a long life; he should not sin against you as long as he lives. Assign to him the favorable sedu and lamassu protective spirits whom you have assigned to me and who have made me reach ripe old age. Do not forgive him (easily) Kis trespassing and sins against your great godhead, may he (always) be in awe of your great godhead.

I have obeyed with all my heart and have done my duty (as a subject) during the 21 years in which Nabopolassar, the king of Babylon, the 43 years in which Nebuchadnezzar, the son of Nabopolassar, and the four years in which Neriglissar, the king of Babylon, exercised their kingship, (altogether) 68 years; I have made Nabonidus, the son whom I bore, serve Nebuchadnezzar, son of Nabapolassar, and Neriglissar, king of Babylon, and he performed his duty for them day and night by doing always what was their pleasure. He also made me a good name before them and they gave me an elevated position as if I were their real daughter, (break) And (for this reason) I have been making funerary offerings for them, performing and instituting for them permanent incense offerings, abundant (and) of sweet smell.

(Postscript:) She died a natural death in the 9th year of Nabonidus, king of Babylon. Nabonidus, king of Babylon, the son whom she bore, laid her body to rest [wrapped in] fine [wool garments] and shining white linen. He deposited her body in a hidden tomb with splendid [ornaments] of gold [set with] beautiful stones, [...] stones, expensive stone beads, [containers with] scented oil, and [...]-. He slaughtered fat rams and assembled into his presence [the inhabitants] of Babylon and Borsippa together with [people] from far off provinces, he [summoned even kings, princes] and governors from the [borders] of Egypt on the Upper Sea, to the Lower Sea, for the mourning and [...] and they made a great lament, scattered [dust] on their heads. For seven days and seven nights they walked about, heads hung low, [dust strewn], stripped of their attire. On the seventh day [...] all the people of the country shaved and cleaned themselves, [threw away] their (mourning) attire [...] [I had] chests with (new) attire [brought] for them to their living quarters, [treated them] with food [and drink], provided them richly with fine oil, poured scented oil over their heads, made them glad (again) and looking presentable. I provided them well for their [long] journey and they returned to their homes.

Nabonidus and His God

(o)

(This is) the great miracle of Sin that none of the (other) gods and goddesses knew (how to achieve), that has not happened to the country from the days of old, that the people of the country have (not) observed nor written down on clay tablets to be preserved for eternity, that (you), Sin, the lord of all the gods and goddesses residing in heaven, have come down from heaven to (me) Nabonidus, king of Babylon! For me, Nabonidus, the lonely one who has nobody, in whose (text: my) opened or shut), made, in execution of a command of his own father, the Divine Crescent, the words and the hearts of the people of Babylonia and Upper Syria, who are in my charge, turn (again) to me so that they began to serve me and to execute my command throughout all the distant mountain regions and inaccessible paths I was moving about.

[562]

Then the (predicted) term of ten years arrived, it happened on the very day which the king of the gods, the Divine Crescent, had (in the dream) predicted, i.e., the 17th day of Tashritu, of which it is said (in the hemerologies): a day on which Sin is gracious.

O Sin, lord of the gods, whose name on the first day (of his appearance) is "Weapon-of-Anu," (you who are able to illuminate (lit.: touch with light all) the heaven and to crush the nether world, who hold in your (text: the) hands the power of the Anu-office, who wield all the power of the Enlil-office, who have taken over the power of the Ea-office, holding thus in your (text: his) own hand all the heavenly powers; Enlil among the gods, king of kings, lord of lords, whose command they do not contradict, you who do not have to repeat your (text: his) order, of whose great awe the nether world and nether world are full, with whose sheen heaven and nether world are covered—who can do anything without you? You place religious awe of your great godhead in the heart of any country in which you desire to dwell and its foundation remains steadfast forever; you remove awe toward you from any country which you choose to destroy and you overthrow it forever. (Yuen) are the one whose utterance all the gods and goddesses living in heaven observe; they execute the command of the Divine Crescent, their own father, who wields the powers of heaven and nether world, without whose exalted command, which is given in heaven every day, no country can rest in security and no light can be in the world; the gods shake like reeds and the Anunnaki quiver; those who [bow down] before his divine command which cannot be changed ... [ ... ]

(iii)

[Before that moment] my visits to the diviner (or the dream expert [for the interpretation of signs] did not cease, (but) whenever I lay down to sleep, (my) dreams at night were confused, until the word [came true, the time] was full, the right moment had arrived which [Sin had foretold]. [Then I dispatched a messenger] from Tema [and he went to] Babylon, my lordly city. When they saw [him ... ] they took gifts and presents before him, the kings of the nearby regions came up (to Babylon) to kiss his (text: my) feet and those far off heard (about it) and were filled with awe of his (Sin's) great divine power. The gods and goddesses who had fled and withdrawn returned to give blessings. Then, my good fortune was found (again) in the victims used for the decisions of the diviner.

I arranged for my followers in the distant mountain regions (to live) in great plenty and abundance and I myself took the road home undisturbed.

(Thereupon) I carefully executed the command of his (Sin's) great godhead, I was not careless nor negligent but set in motion people from Babylon and Upper Syria, from the border of Egypt on the Upper Sea to the Lower Sea, all those whom Sin, the king of the gods, had entrusted to me, (thus) I built anew the Ehulhul, the temple of Sin, and completed this work. I (then) led in procession Sin, Ningal, Nusku and Sadarnunna, from Shanna (in Babylon), my royal city, and brought (them) in joy and happiness (into the temple), installing them on a permanent dais. I made abundant offerings before them and lavished gifts (on them).

I filled Ehulhul with happiness and made its personnel rejoice.

(Thus) I fulfilled the command of Sin, the king of the gods, the lord of lords who dwells in heaven, whose name surpasses that of (all) the (other) gods in heaven, (i.e.) of Shamash, who is installed by him, Nusku, Ishtar, Adad (and) Nergal who have (only) executed the command of the Divine Crescent, who surpasses them (all).

Whenever I armed myself with weapons and set my mind to do battle, it was (solely) to execute the command of the Divine Crescent (hence) whoever you be whom Sin will (later on) name to kingship and whom he will call "My son," [do visit] the sacred places of Sin, who dwells in heaven [whose command cannot be changed] and whose order needs no [repetition] and [he will assist you] with his weapon in [battle ... ].

The Conquest of Jerusalem

From the tablet which deals with the period from the last (21st) year of Nabopolassar to the eleventh year of his son and successor Nebuchadnezzar II, the section reporting on the events before and after the conquest of Jerusalem has been translated here. The preceding years saw the conquest of Hatti land by Nabopolassar and his son's annual campaigns through the West (conquest of Askelon, first year), the subsequent campaign against Elam (Year 9), a short rebellion (Year 10) and more campaigns in Hatti land. Publication: D. J. Wiseman, Chronicles of Chaldean Kings (626-556 B.C.) in the British Museum (London, 1956), BM 21946, pp. 66-75 and Plates 14-16, also Introduction, pp. 32-37. Literature: W. F. Albright, "The Nebuchadnezzar and Nergilissar Chronicles," BASOR, 143 (1956), pp. 423-435; J. Finegan, "Nebuchadnezzar and Jerusalem," JBR, xxv (1957), pp. 203-205; D. N. Freedman, "The Babylonian Chronicle," Biblical Archaeologist, xix (1956), pp. 50-60; J. P. Hyatt, "New Light on Nebuchadnezzar and Judean History," JBL, lxxv (1956), pp. 277-284; A. Malamat, "A New Record of Nebuchadnezzar's Palestinian Campaigns," IEJ, vi (1956), pp. 246-256; F. Nötscher, "Neue babylonische Chroniken und AT," Biblische Zeitschrift NF, 1 (1957), pp. 110-114; E. Vogt, "Die neubabylonische Chronik über die Schlacht bei Karkemish und die

{563}

BM 21946: r. 5-15 (Years 4 to 8 of Nebuchadnezzar II, 601-597 B.C.)

Year 4: The king of Akkad sent out his army and marched into Hatti land. [They marched] unopposed through Hatti land. In the month of Kislimu he took the lead of his army and marched toward Egypt. The king of Egypt heard (of it) and sent out his army; they clashed in an open battle and inflicted heavy losses on each other. The king of Akkad and his army turned back and [returned] to Babylon.

Year 5: The king of Akkad (stayed) in his country. He organized his chariots and many horses.

Year 6, month Kislimu: The king of Akkad moved his army into Hatti land. He dispatched his army from Hatti land, they raided the desert, took much booty from the land of the Arabs, (also) their herds and divine images in great number. In the month Addaru, the king returned to his country.

Year 7, month Kislimu: The king of Akkad moved his army into Hatti land, laid siege to the city of Judah (Ia-a-hu-du) and the king took the city on the second day of the month Addaru. He appointed in it a (new) king of his liking, took heavy booty from it and brought it into Babylon.

Year 8, month Tebetu: The king of Akkad (went) into Hatti land as far as Carchemish [ . . . ] from [ . . . ] and in the month Shabatu he returned to his country.

The Assyrian King List

There are three copies extant (apart from the small fragment KAV, 15) of the composition known today as "The Assyrian King List"; one was published by E. Nassouhi, "Grande Liste des rois d'Assyrie" in AfO, iv (1927), pp. 1-11, the two others by I. J. Gelb, "Two Assyrian King Lists" in JNES, xm (1954), pp. 209-30. The first comes from the Archaeological Museum in Istanbul (no reference to provenience known), the second from Khorsabad (DurSarru-ku) and the third is deposited in the Seventeenth-Day Adventist Theological Seminary in Washington, D.C., and is likewise of unknown origin. While the shape of the Istanbul tablet cannot be ascertained because of its bad state of preservation, the other two tablets are clearly in the form of amulet texts (see Erica Reiner, JNES, xix, [1960], pp. 148 if.). The contents are practically the same in all these instances but for the fact that the tablets were written at different periods and hence the sequences of the Assyrian kings are brought to differ-

(0) Tudiya, Adamu, Yangi, Kitlamu, Harharu, Mandaru, Imsu, Harsu, Didanu, Hanu, Zuabu, Nuabu, Abazu, Belu, Azarah, Ushpiya, Apiashal—Total: 17 kings living in tents.

Aminu (was) the son of Ilu-kabkabi, Ilu-kabkabi the son of Yazkur-ili, Yazkur-ili the son of Yakmene, Yakmene the son of Yakmesi, Yakmesi the son of Ilu-Mer, Ilu-Mer the son of Hayani, Hayani the son of Samanu, Samanu the son of Hale, Hale the son of Apiashal, (and) Apiashal the son of Ushpiya—Total: 10 kings who are ancestors.¹

Sulilu son of Amini, Kikkiya, Akiya, Puzur-Ashur, (I), Shallim-ahhe, Ilu-shuma—Total: 6 kings [mentioned on] brick (inscriptions); their (lists of) eponyms are missing?

Erishu (I) son of Ilu-shuma whose [ . . . ]; he ruled as king for 40 years.

Iknun son of Erishu; he ruled as king for [x years].

Sharru-kin (I) son of Iknun; he ruled as king for [x years].

Puzur-Ashur (II) son of Sharru-kin; he ruled as king for [x] years.

Naram-Sin son of Puzur-Ashur; he ruled as king for [x] years.

Erishu (II) son of Naram-Sin; he ruled as king for [x] years.

Shamshi-Adad (I), the son of Ilu-kabkabi, went away to Babylonia in the time of Naram-Sin; in the eponymy of Ibni-Adad, Shamshi-Adad came back from Babylonia; he seized Ekallate; he stayed in Ekallate for three years; in the eponymy of Atamar-Ishtar, Shamshi-Adad came up from Ekallate and removed Erishu, son of Naram-Sin, from the throne, ("), seized the throne, (and) ruled as king for 33 years.

Ishme-Dagan (I) son of Shamshi-Adad; he ruled as king for 40 (var.: 50) years.

Ashur-dugul, the son of a nobody, without right to the throne; he ruled as king for six years.

¹ i.e. their names are given in genealogical, not in chronological, sequence.

² Everything is uncertain in this sentence. Apparently the scribe gives here the reason why the lengths of the individual rules are not indicated.
During the lifetime of that same Ashur-dugul, son of a nobody, (the following) six kings, (likewise) sons of nobodies, ruled as kings in periods of less than one year.1 Ashur-apla-idi, Nasir-Sin, Sin-namir, Ibqi-Ishtar, Adad-salulu (and) Adasi.

Bel-bani son of Adasi; he ruled as king for ten years.

Libaya son of Bel-bani; he ruled as king for 17 years.

Sharma-DIM (I) son of Libaya; he ruled for 12 years.

^4-tar-Sin son of Sharma-DIM; he ruled for 12 years.

Bazaya son of ^4-tar-Sin; he ruled for 28 years.

Lullaya son of a nobody; he ruled as king for six years.

Kidin-Ninua son of Bazaya; he ruled as king for 14 years.

Sharma-DIM (II) son of Kidin-Ninua; he ruled as king for three years.

Erishu (III) son of Kidin-Ninua; he ruled as king for 13 years.

Shamshi-Adad (II) son of Erishu; he ruled as king for six years.

Ishme-Dagan (II) son of Shamshi-Adad; he ruled as king for 16 years.

Shamshi-Adad (III), son of Ishme-Dagan, brother of Sharma-DIM (II), son of Kidin-Ninua; he ruled as king for 16 (var.: 15) years.

Ashur-nirari (I) son of Ishme-Dagan; he ruled as king for 26 years.

Puzur-Ashur (III) son of Ashur-nirari; he ruled as king for [x] (variants: 14 and 24) years.

Enlil-nasir (I) son of Puzur-Ashur; he ruled as king for 13 years.

Nur-ili son of Enlil-nasir; he ruled as king for 12 years.

Ashur-shaduni son of [Nur-ili]; he ruled as king for one full month.

Ashur-rabi (I), the son of Enlil-nasir, removed [Ashur-shaduni,] seized the throne (and) [ruled as king for x years].

Ashur-nadin-ahhe (I) son of Ashur-rabi; [he ruled as king for x years].

(II)

His brother Enlil-nasir (II) removed him] from the throne (and) ruled as king for six years.

Ashur-nirari (II) son of Enlil-nasir (I or II); he ruled as king for seven years.

Ashur-bel-nisheshu son of Ashur-nirari (II); he ruled as king for nine years.

Ashur-rim-nisheshu son of Ashur-bel-nisheshu; he ruled as king for eight years.

Ashur-nadin-ahhe (II) son of Ashur-rim-nisheshu; he ruled as king for 10 years.

Eriba-Adad (I) son of Ashur-bel-nisheshu; he ruled as king for 27 years.

Ashur-uballit (I) son of Eriba-Adad; he ruled as king for 36 years.

Enlil-nirari son of Ashur-uballit; ditto ten years.

Arik-den-ili son of Enlil-nirari; ditto 12 years.

Adad-nirari (I) brother of Arik-den-ili; he ruled as king for 32 years.

Shulmanu-ashared (I) son of Adad-nirari; ditto 30 years.

Tukulti-Ninurta (I) son of Shulmanu-ashared; ditto 37 years.

While Tukulti-Ninurta was . . . , his son Ashur-nadin-apli seized his throne (and) ruled for three (var.: four) years.

Ashur-nirari (III) son of Ashur-nasir-apli; he ruled as king for six years.

Enlil-kudur-usur son of Tukulti-Ninurta; he ruled as king for five years.

Ninurta-apli-Ekur, the son of Ili-ihadda, a descendant of Eriba-Adad, went to Babylonia; he came back from Babylonia, seized the throne (and) ruled as king for three (var.: 13) years.

Ashur-dan (I) son of Ninurta-apli-Ekur; ditto 46 (var.: 36) years.

Ninurta-Tukulti-Ashur son of Ashur-dan ruled as king for less than a year?

His brother Mutakkil-Nusku fought with him and defeated him; he sent him away to Babylonia. Mutakkil-Nusku held the throne for less than a year;3 he (then) disappeared forever.

Ashur-rab-ishi (I) son of Mutakkil-Nusku; he ruled as king for 18 years.

Tukulti-apil-Esharra (I) son of Ashur-rab-ishi; he ruled as king for 39 years.

Ashared-apil-Ekur son of Tukulti-apil-Esharra; he ruled as king for two years.

3 The meaning of the word tuppu is still enigmatic; for the more recent pronouncements see Landsberger, JCS, vm (1954), 37 f. and 305 ff.; JNES, vm (1949), 265 f.; M. B. Rowton, JNES, x (1951). 186 ff.
Ashur-bel-kala son of Tukulti-apil-Esharra; he ruled as king for 18 years.

Eriba-Adad (II) son of Ashur-bel-kala; ditto 4 two years.

(iv) Shamshi-Adad (IV), the son of Tukulti-apil-Esharra, came from Babylonia; he removed Eriba-Adad, the son of Ashur-bel-kala, from the throne; he seized the throne (and) ruled as king for four years.

Shulmanu-ashared (II), son of Ashur-bel-kala; he ruled as king for 12 years.

Ashur-nirari (IV) son of Shulmanu-ashared (II); ditto six years.

Ashur-rabi (II) son of Ashur-nasir-apli; ditto 41 years.

Ashur-resh-ishi (II) son of Ashur-rabi; he ruled as king for five years.

Tukulti-apil-Esharra (II) son of Ashur-resh-ishi; he ruled as king for 32 years.

Ashur-dan (II) son of Tukulti-apil-Esharra; he ruled as king for 23 years.

Adad-nirari (II) son of Ashur-dan; he ruled as king for 21 years.

Tukulti-Ninurta (II) son of Adad-nirari; ditto seven years.

Ashur-nasir-apli (II) son of Tukulti-Ninurta; he ruled as king for 25 years.

Shulmanu-ashared (III) son of Ashur-nasir-apli; he ruled as king for 35 years.

Shamshi-Adad (V) son of Shulmanu-ashared; he ruled as king for 13 years.

Adad-nirari (III) son of Shamshi-Adad; he ruled as king for 28 years.

Shulmanu-ashared (IV) son of Adad-nirari; he ruled as king for ten years.

Ashur-dan (III) brother of Shulmanu-ashared; he ruled as king for 18 years.

Ashur-nirari (V) son of Adad-nirari (III); he ruled as king for 10 years.

(The earlier copy continues.)

Lulubu, the 20th day; eponym: Adad-bel-ukin, governor of the inner city of Ashur, in his second eponymy.

(The later copy continues.)

Shulmanu-ashared (V) son of Tukulti-apil-Esharra; he ruled as king for 5 years.

Written and checked against its original. A tablet of the rwaimuu-priest, Bel-shum-iddin, a native of Ashur. May Shamash take away him who takes (this tablet) away.

The Uruk King List from Kandalanu to Seleucus II

[x] years [. . . ]

Other name: [. . . ]

21 years: K[anda]lan
1 year: Sin-shum-lishir and Sin-shar-ishkun
21 years: Nabopolassar

43 [ye]ars: Nebuchadnezzar (II)
2 [ye]ars: Amel-Marduk
[x] + 2 years, 8 months: Neriglissar
[. . . ] 3 months: Labashi-Marduk
[x] + 15 years: Nabonidus
9 years: Cy[jus
[8 years: Cambysis]es
[36 years: Dari[jus (break)

(Rev.)

[whose] second name (is) Nidin-[el]
5 [y]ears: Darius (III)
7 years: Alexander
6 years: Philip
6 years: Antigonus
31 years: Seleucus (I)
22 years: Antiochus (I)
15 years: Antiochus (II)
20 [years]: Seleucus (II)
(break)

A Seleucid King List

[... ] Alexander (the Great) [... ]
Philip, the brother of Alexander [did ...].
For [x] years there was no king in the country. Antigonus, the commander of the army was [...].
Alexander, the son of Alexander* (was reckoned as king) for six years.
Year 7 is the first year (of Seleucus). Seleucus (I, Nicator) became king; he ruled for 25 years.
Year 31, month Elulu: king Seleucus (I) was killed in the West.*
Year 32: Antiochus (I, Soter), son of Seleucus (I) became king. He ruled for 20 years.
Year 51, month Ajaru, 16th (day): Antiochus (I), the great king, died.8
Year 52: Antiochus (II, Theos), son of Antiochus (I), became king. He ruled for 15 years.*
Year 66, month Abu: The following (rumor) was heard in Babylon:* Antiochus (II), the great king [has died].
(rev.)

[Year] 67: Seleucus (II, Gallinicus) [...]
[...] [Year] 87: Seleucus (III, Soter) [...]

1 The scribe uses, with the exception of the writings A-lik-sa-an-dar and H-lip-su, abbreviations to refer to the kings. Thus Seleucus is probably, Ar; in line 5 Alexander is rendered by A-lik. The translation consistently written Sierra and Antiochus An, Demetrius Di and Arsaces, names for the convenience of the reader.

2 The text uses the geographical name Hani in this context which in earlier Akkadian documents refers to Assyria. Since the king was killed on the European side of the Bosporus, the name Hani seems to have been used also to refer to the regions to the west of Assyria. See, however, Sachs, Iraq, xvi, 206.

3 The use of nam.mas4 for "to die" is characteristic of the chronicle style (see the "Synchronistic Chronicle") and underlines the continuity pointed out by Sachs (Iraq, xvi, 202 f.) with respect to the Sumerian formula mu x in.ag, "he ruled for x years."

4 The formulation here deviates from that in lines 7, 9, r. 8 and 10 so that it is very likely that the scribe intended to convey a special nuance (possibly: he did not rule for full 15 years).

5 The repeated references to events which happened outside Babylon by itelimme umma are quite unique; I know of no parallel.

6 Two dear but unintelligible signs (DIS IGI).

7 Attention should be drawn to the discussion and parallel passages offered by Sachs on p. 208. The latter show that the king was killed in the midst of his nobles called, respectively, 16.GAL.MES and A.SEG. The latter designation should be taken as variant writing for L6.A.SIG6 (clearly indicated as such in K.4395 v 10 in Babylonica, vii, p. 1.6) as seen already in W. J. Martin, Tribut und Tributleistungen . . ., Studia Orientalia, vm (1936), p. 32 f., and read mar damqi. The syllabic writings have been given in damqi (B1), AHw, 157b, from NA and NB texts but without the passages written 1L.A.SIG in ABL, 154:12 and 20, 304:11, Klauber, PRT, 44:5, ADD, 862:1. The related designation L6.A.KES occurs in Mari, Alalakh (MB) (see CAD, damqi mag. 3), Bogazkoy (see now G. Meyer, MIO, 1, 114 f.: 9, 24, 28) and NA (see AHw, loc. cit.). All these words refer either to a type of soldier or to a social class, according to time and region.
Palestinian Inscriptions

TRANSLATOR: W. F. ALBRIGHT

A Letter from the Time of Josiah

In 1960 J. Naveh excavated a fortress on the Mediterranean seven km. northwest of Jamnia and three km. south of the mouth of the Wadi Rubin (Nahal Soreq). The name then given the site turned out to be based on an erroneous reading of the ostracon in question. The life of the fortress could be dated within narrow limits by the typical late pre-exilic and early Ionian (Southwest-Anatolian Greek) pottery found on the site, as well as by historical considerations, which suggest a date about 660 BC. This would be just after the death of the Assyrian king Ashurbanipal and before the occupation of the Philistine Plain by Psammetichus of Egypt. The script of the ostracon is unfortunately quite slovenly, and it might be dated almost anywhere in the seventh century. The language is also uneven, and there are orthographic inconsistencies, but it is, in general, a fluent late pre-exilic Hebrew.

For the original publication see J. Naveh in IEJ, x (1960), pp. 129-139, and IEJ, XII (1962), pp. 89-113, and among more recent treatments especially F. M. Cross, Jr., BASOR, 165 (1962), pp. 34-46, and S. Talmon, BASOR, 176 (1964), pp. 29-38. My own independent treatment was worked out with a class at the Hebrew Union College in April, 1961, but never published, since Cross had meanwhile been able to study the original, as well as a number of different photographs. The results of his careful collation were also placed at my disposal subsequently. The present translation diverges from that of Cross at a number of points, which are explained in the notes.

Let my lord commander hear the case of his servant! As for thy servant, thy servant was harvesting at Hazarsusin (?). And thy servant was (still) harvesting as they finished the storage of grain, as usual before the Sabbath. While thy servant was finishing the storage of 1 Either the high military official who was at the time in charge of the annexed territory in southwestern Palestine or the official in charge of the royal harvests in the Coastal Plain; for both posts see 1 Chron. 27.

2 The context below indicates that the complainant was foreman of a small gang of men from a single town who were serving their tour of duty in the royal corvee.
3 In one of the photos I have, there are three clear horizontal parallel lines indicated in the supposed aleph, so I propose reading this name of a fortified town in the territory claimed by Simeon (e.g., 1 Chron. 4:31), which lay probably in the vicinity of Tell el-Fara'ah (Sharsheneh); see Abel, Geographie de la Palestine, 11, p. 344. This rich grain-producing area lay some forty miles south of Jamnia; both had been at that time in Philistine territory.
4 I prefer Naveh's original interpretation for many reasons: harvesting grain was a relatively long process which varied in time according to latitude and elevation; measuring grain (for which mdd is regularly used, not k,wl) took no time at all and was evidently included under 'am. Cf. also Ruth 2:21, "until they have finished all my harvest." Since the text is damaged in the middle of line 6 we cannot be sure that it did not read "[M] 'bd.[
5 This cannot well be 'asam, "granary" (probably "grain pit"), but may have been vocalized 'asim (like qastrar and tdstf, etc., referring to harvesting operations).
6 I propose vocalizing l-e-ySmam, literally "like daily."

Three Ostraca from Arad

During the excavation of the citadel mound of biblical Arad, in the extreme south of the hill country of Judah, south of Hebron and northeast of Beersheba, since 1962 hundreds of Hebrew and Aramaic ostraca have been found. The most important single find (1964) consisted of a group of seventeen ostraca, mostly in a good state of preservation, and probably all dating from shortly before the conquest of Judah by the Chaldeans and their allies in the late winter of 598/97. This date has subsequently been confirmed by the discovery of an ostracon mentioning steps which were to be taken against an expected Edomite raid. The value of the new material for political, administrative and especially religious history is considerable; it is exceeded only by the excavation of a local, but Yahwist sanctuary of the ninth-sixth centuries BC.

For publication of the three ostraca reinterpreted here see especially Aharoni, IEJ, xvi (1966), pp. 1-7, and BASOR, 184 (1966), pp. 13 ff. For over-all accounts of the work at Arad see especially Aharoni, The Biblical Archaeologist, xxxi (1968), 2-5.

[568]
32, with bibliographic data. My interpretation differs substantially from Aharoni's, but if correct supports his main theses and makes the ostraca directly relevant to the historical situation.

A\(^{16}\)

To my lord Eliashib:\(^{17}\) May Yahweh grant thy welfare!\(^{18}\) And (as) of now, give Shemariah half an aroura (of ground)\(^{19}\) and to Kerosi\(^{20}\) give a quarter aroura and to the sanctuary\(^{21}\) (give) what thou didst recommend to me. As for Shallum,\(^{22}\) he shall stay\(^{23}\) at the temple of Yahweh.\(^{24}\)

\(^{18}\) Perhaps written by the secretary of a high official in Jerusalem to the military commander of the southern mountain district.

\(^{17}\) Three seals of Eliashib son of Osh(i)yahu have also been excavated by Aharoni at Arad, and the same patronymic appears below in Ostmaq C. In my opinion there can be no reasonable doubt that the proposed vocalization "Eshyahu" is wrong and that the name is shortened from Ye'olahju just as Kenajahu (Comiah) was a short form of Yekpnyahu (Jeconiah), personal name of King Jeo\-harchi. If this is correct, Osh(i)yahu was king Josiah, and the southern commander was brother of Jeho\-akim and Zedekiah, and uncle of the young king Jeconiah, then probably on the throne. Josiah may have had many more sons than are recorded. Another shortened form of the same name was borne by Yaosh, military commander at Lachish a decade later, but we do not know what relationship, if any, may have existed between them.

\(^{19}\) This formula goes back at least to the Bronze Age (Amarna, Taanach), but it already meant "grant welfare" not "ask for peace."

\(^{16}\) The Hebrews of the Monarchy used Egyptian hieratic numerals, signs for weights and measures, etc.; see now Aharoni, BASOR, 184 (1966), pp. 13-19, and I. T. Kaufman, BASOR, 188 (1967), pp. 39-41. The hieratic symbol for half an aroura (an aroura was 100 cubits square, so half an aroura would be about a quarter of an acre) is identical with the Hebrew sign here (which has not yet been explained, so far as I know); cf. the other new symbol in the following line, which is blurred in the photo but may reflect the Egyptian hieratic symbol for a quarter aroura (an eighth of an acre). The ground in question could scarcely be inside the citadel; it may have been intended for a house and garden. (Suggested by Hans Goodicke and George Hughes.)

\(^{20}\) As pointed out by B. Mazar, Keroz was the name of a family of temple servants, so Kerozi probably means "the Kerozite." In this case Shemariah and Kerozi were presumably sent from Jerusalem to care for the sanctuary service at Arad; cf. notes 21-24.

\(^{18}\) In view of the syntax and the difficulty of the first translation, which presupposes a Hebrew that is both obscure and undiomatic, I have no hesitation in vocalizing we-lad-debir, referring to the sanctuary excavated at Arad, which could indeed be a debir.

\(^{21}\) A number of men bearing this name are known to have lived about this time, and the name was long popular in Israel. It had evidently been decided that Shallum should stay on in Jerusalem, where he was a priest or a temple servant, possibly identical with Jeremiah's uncle or a contemporary "keeper of the threshold."

\(^{22}\) Certainly ye\-leb, "he shall dwell," probably used in the sense of
"he shall/will stay, as in Gen. 20:1, where the verb is used of Abraham's continued travel back and forth between Kadesh and the Wall of the Prince along the frontier of Egypt. He could not "live" in the

On the 24th\(^{26}\) of the month Nahum delivered the oil into the hand of the Kittii.\(^{27}\)

To Eliashib—and (as) of now: Give the Kittiyim\(^{38}\) three baths\(^{37}\) of wine and write the exact date.\(^{28}\) And from what is left of the old wheat\(^{29}\) grind up\(^{30}\) one (\"or\")\(^{31}\) of wheat to make bread for them. Serve the wine in punch bowls.\(^{32}\)

To Nahum, and (as) of now: Go to the house\(^{34}\) of Eliashib, son of Oshiyahu,\(^{35}\) and get from him one (bath) of oil, and send it to m[e] in haste, sealing it with thy seal.

\(^{27}\) desert of north-central Sinai, and he is expressly said to have had his home at Gerar in southern Palestine.

\(^{28}\) Undoubtedly the temple in Jerusalem, from which the letter must have been sent to Arad.

\(^{35}\) This letter is an official memorandum, so the salutation is missing.
The apparent occasion for it is that the local mercenaries had been complaining about the food and drink supplied them.

\(^{29}\) The term probably refers to mercenaries from the Aegean, like the Cretans (Kretim) and Carians (Karim) mentioned in the Bible. The term "islands (or coasands) of the Kittin" which occurs several times in the Bible, shows that they were not limited to Cyprus. In fact, I have been deriving the name provisionally from Eg. Kfiyu, with roughly the same geographical extension.

\(^{31}\) This would be about 70 litres.

\(^{36}\) Literally "write the name of the day."

\(^{37}\) Almost certainly used of a good quality of wheat (such as the durum used in making macaroni) as well as of the flour ground from it. We have the same usage in modern Arabic qamh, "wheat," and the word was already borrowed in Old Egyptian from Canaanite in a similar sense. The reference to "what is left of the old wheat" suggests the late winter just before Jerusalem fell to the Chaldaeans (15/16 March, 597 s.c.).

\(^{30}\) Surely this word is merely denominative from re\-eb, "upper millstone."

\(^{32}\) The suggested "ephah" would amount to only half a bushel or so, which is incredibly low. A \"or of homer\" (originally a donkey load) would amount to about three or four bushels. Since a bushel of wheat weighs about 60 lbs. it could scarcely have been a full measure, unless the caravan donkeys of antiquity were much stronger than their moderen equivalents—the Damascus donkeys.

\(^{33}\) The aggan was a big mixing bowl (crater in Greek), in which wine was mixed with water or different wines were mixed. Evidently the Aegean mercenaries were used to drinking together from a crater and objected to Israelite practice.

\(^{34}\) Here we have another memorandum. The second paragraph was obviously added by Nahum's scribe (it is in a different hand) in order to keep the record straight.

\(^{35}\) Eliashib's house was also his office and storeroom.

\(^{36}\) See n. 17.

\(^{37}\) So read with Aharoni.

\(^{38}\) See n. 26.

\[^{569}\]
V. Hymns and Prayers
Hymn to Enlil, the All-Beneficent

This pious, devotional document was composed by a Sumerian temple poet in glorification of Enlil, his city Nippur, his temple the Ekur, and his wife Ninlil. Beginning on a narrative note relating how the all-commanding, all-searching, deeply revered Enlil set up his dwelling in the Duranki of Nippur (lines 1-13), the hymn continues with a portrayal of the city as the guardian of man's loftiest moral and spiritual values, and therefore as a fitting home for Enlil's dwelling, the Ekur (lines 14-40), and concludes with an exulting affirmation of the mystery and holiness of the rites and rituals of that noble shrine, as conducted by a highly qualified priesthood (lines 41-64). The poet next turns to Enlil and glorifies him directly and reverently as the founder and builder of the awe-inspiring, festival-celebrating Ekur to which all "lords and princes" bring sacrifices and prayers, and all foreign lands bring their heavy tribute (lines 65-90). The poet now delivers himself of a resounding magnificent of Enlil as the glorious shepherd of all mankind whom not even the gods—except for his trusty vizier Nusku—dare look upon (lines 91-109), and without whom civilized life would be inconceivable: there would be no cities and byres, no kings and high priests, no priestly and temporal officials, no irrigation and overflow, no fish and birds, no rain and vegetation, no procreation of man and beast (lines 110-130). Once again the poet then turns to Enlil directly and concludes his panegyric with a paean of glorification to the profound mystery of his deeds and actions (lines 131-138) and particularly to his unalterable, beneficent word that brings overflow from heaven and vegetation to the earth—the very "life of all the lands" (lines 139-154) and to his gracious, eloquent, and fate-decreeing Ninlil.

By 1961 more than a score of tablets and fragments inscribed with this hymn had become available, including five pieces in the Hilprecht Sammlung of the Friedrich-Schiller University that were copied by Dr. Inez Bernhardt under my guidance (cf. TuMNF, hi, pp. 11-12), and Adam Falkenstein was able to publish a fine trustworthy edition of the composition in SGL, i, pp. 5-79. Nevertheless there were still a number of gaps and misreadings, and most of these have been filled in and corrected by Daniel Reisman in the course of preparing a dissertation on Sumerian divine hymns, with the help of collations of some of the originals, a recently published Ur piece (cf. UET, vi, Part 1, comment to No. 65), and a number of still unpublished pieces in the University Museum and the Istanbul Museum of the Ancient Orient. The present translation utilizes the results of Reisman's study.

Enlil whose command is far-reaching, lofty his word (and) holy,
Whose pronouncement is unchangeable, who decrees destinies unto the distant future,
Whose lifted eye scans the land,
Whose lifted beam searches the heart of all the land—
When Father Enlil seats himself broadly on the holy dais, on the lofty dais,
When Nunamnir carries out to supreme perfection lordship and kingship,
The earth-gods bow down willingly before him,
The Anunnna humble themselves before him,
Stand by faithfully in accordance with (their) instructions.
The great (and) mighty lord, supreme in heaven (and) earth, the all-knowing one who understands the judgement,
Has set up (his) seat in Duranki—the wise one,
Made preeminent in princeship the uiur, the "great place,"
In Nippur the lofty bellwether of the universe he erected (his) dwelling.

The city—its "face" is awesome fear (and) dread,
Its outside not like its inside, it is by no means a powerful god can approach,
Its inside is (full of) cries of mutilation, cries of bloodshed.
It is a trap that serves as a pit and net against the rebellious land,
It grants not long days to the braggart,
Allows no evil word to be uttered against (the divine) judgment.

Hypocrisy, distortion, Abuse, malice, unseemliness, Insolence, enmity, oppression, Envy? (brute) force, libelous speech, Arrogance, violation of agreement, breach of contract, abuse of (a court) verdict, (All these) evils the city does not tolerate.

1 The author was no doubt a graduate of the famous Nippur edubba (academy), who joined the personnel of the Ekur in one capacity or another, perhaps even as a kind of "poet in residence." The major stylistic device which he utilized for poetic effect in this composition is cumulative parallelism.

2 Duranki “Bond of Heaven (and) Earth” is an epithet applied to the Ekur temple-complex.

3 As is clear from this hymn, the "word" of Enil could be most beneficent; it was by no means the all-destructive force generally assumed by earlier scholars (cf. JCS, xi, pp. 54-55).

4 It is not improbable that this hymn was actually composed on the occasion of an Enlil-Ninlil hieros-gamos ritual celebrated in the Ekur; Sumerian documents usually leave to the very end the purpose and occasion for which they were composed.

5 A more literal translation of lines 20-21 reads: That (whose) inside (is not like its) outside, the word that is not straight.

6 Inimical words, which is inimical and that which is not (well) established.

7 This rendering is a guess based on the context.

8 Literally "turning of the eyes."
Nippur, whose "arm" is a vast net,
Whose "heart" is the fast-stepping hurin-bird,8
Whose "hand" the wicked and evil cannot escape;
The city endowed with truth,
Where righteousness (and) justice are perpetuated,
Where clean garments are worn (even) at the quay,®
Where the older brother honors the younger brother, acts humanely (towards him),
Where the word of the elders is heeded, where it is repeated in fear,
Where the son humbly fears his mother, where eldership endures—
In the city, the holy seat of Enlil,
In Nippur, the beloved shrine of the father, the Great
Mountain,
The shrine of plenty, the Ekur, the "lapis lazuli" house,
he raised up out of the dust,
Planted it in a pure place like a (high) rising mountain,
Its prince, the Great Mountain, Father Enlil,
Set up (his) dwelling on the dais of the Ekur,
the lofty shrine. (40)
The house—its me (like) heaven cannot be overturned,
Its pure rites like the earth cannot be shattered,
Its me, (like) the me of the Abzu, none may gaze upon,
In its midst that is (as) mysterious (as) the distant sea,
the heavenly zenith,
Among its . . .-emblems, its starry emblems,
The dirga," the hoary me are carried out to perfection,
Its words are for utterance,
Its incantations are words of prayer,
Its words are gracious oracles that . . .
Of the rituals, so precious, (50)
Of the festivals overflowing with rich fat (and) milk,
The plans (and) their heart-rejoicing bliss are superb,
Every day a festival, at the break of dawn a grand harvest (feast),
The house of Enlil is a mountain of overflow,
Where beggarscavenger and idler are tabu.

The house—its en grows with it,
Its si is fit for the "peaceful hand,"12
Its Abzu-lustration priests are well suited for the rites,13
Their ➤ «A-priests are fit for the holy prayers,14

8 This is an eagle-like mythological bird.
9 This is what the literal meaning of the line seems to be.
10 This obscure word seems to be a parallel to me.
11 Perhaps literally "who reaches out the hand."
12 The sttu is an official of some kind; the word si is the second part of the word ensi that is a composite of the en and si(“) offices, (cf. e.g., nam-en and nam-si in PIR, v, Pl. xv, col. v, lines I ff.); the second part of the line is obscure.
13 The Abzu here refers no doubt to a water-shrine in the Ekur complex of Nippur, not to the Abzu of Eridu (cf. also line 75).
14 Litde is known about the n««A-priests.
SUMERI

As he sets up (his) dais in the mountain mist?\(^8\) He rotates it in heaven like a rainbow, He makes it roam about like floating cloud.

Heaven—he alone is its prince, earth—he alone is its great one, (\(^10^o\))
The Anunna—he is their exalted god, (Only) to his exalted vizier, the chamberlain Nusku, His command, the word that is in his heart, Did he make known, did he consult, Did he commission to execute (his) orders far and wide, Did he entrust the holy prayers in accordance with the holy me.

Without Enlil, the Great Mountain, No cities would be built, no settlements founded, (no) No stalls would be built, no sheepfold erected, No king would be raised high, no en born, No lumah, no nindingir would be chosen by the sheep omen.\(^19\)
Workers would have no controller, no supervisor, The rivers—their high flood-waters would not bring overflow, Their "backs" coming forth from the sea would not take a straight course, their "tails" would not be long.\(^20\)
The sea would not readily produce its bountiful treasure, The fish of the sea would lay no eggs in the canebrake, The birds of heaven would not spread (their) nests over the wide earth.
In heaven the rain-laden clouds would not open their mouths, (120) The fields (and) meadows are not filled with rich grain, In the steppe grass (and) herbs, its delight would not grow, In the garden, the wide mountain-trees would bear no fruit.
Without Enlil, the Great Mountain, Nintu would not put to death, would not kill,\(^21\) The cow would not "throw" its calf in the stall, The ewe would not bring forth the . . . -lamb in its sheepfold, Mankind, the teeming multitude, \(^8\) This line and the following two seem to refer to Enlil's cosmic seat in heaven rather than in the Ekur of Nippur.

\(^19\) The "Hi-mah," "lofty man," and "nindingir," "divine lady," are two high priestly classes about whose functions and duties, however, little is known.
\(^20\) That is, the main rivers and canals, because of their crooked course, would not provide enough water to supply the smaller canals and irrigation ditches.
\(^21\) Just why death is important to civilization is not clear, unless we assume that like modern man, they feared overcrowding and famine; nor is it clear why the mother goddess Nintu is thought by the Sumerian theologians to do the killing, unless it has something to do with sickly-born infants.

HYMNS

Would not lie down in their . . ., The beasts, the four-legged would bring forth no offspring, would not mount to copulate. (130)

Enlil, your immensely clever deeds are dismaying, Their meaning is a twisted thread that cannot be straightened, Entwined threads that cannot be separated, (Yet) your godship inspires confidence.
You are a mentor (and) adviser, a skilful lord, Who can understand your actions! Your me are cryptic me, Not (even) a god can behold your countenance.

You, lord Enlil, who are lord, god, (and) king, Who are the judge (and) decision-maker of the universe (140)
Your noble word is as weighty as heaven, you know no opposition, At your word, all the Anunna-gods are hushed
Your word—heavenwards it is a pillar, earthwards it is a (foundation) platform, Heavenwards it is a tall pillar reaching to the sky, Earthwards it is a platform that cannot be overturned. It approaches heaven—there is overflow, From heaven overflow rains down (on earth), It approaches the earth—there is luxuriance, From the earth luxuriance burgeons forth.
Your word—it is plants, your word—it is grain, (150)
Your word it is the flood-water, the life of all the lands,
The living creatures riding the . . .,
Breathe sweet breath by the grass (and) herbs. Enlil, you who are a faithful shepherd, you made known their ways.

She who has sweet graciousness, the star-covered, Mother Ninlil, the holy wife, whose word is gracious, [Garbed] in the holy wja-garment\(^22\), . . ., The faithful woman—having lifted (your) eyes (upon her) you took her in marriage, The attraction of the Ekur, the queen who knows what is seemly, The eloquent one who is elegant of speech, (160)
Whose words are sweet to the flesh, Has seated herself by your side on the holy dais, on the pure dais, Speaks eloquently with you, whispers (tender words) by your side, Decrees the fates in the "place where the sun rises." Ninlil, the queen of the universe, Cherished in the (songs of) praise of the Great Mountain, \(^22\) This is a garment that has something to do with the me.

The lofty one, whose words are firmly grounded,
Whose command and favor are unalterable,
Whose pronouncements is all enduring,
Whose plans "confirm the word"—
Oh Great Mountain Enlil, exalted is your praise.  (170)

Hymn to Enlil as the Ruling Deity of the Universe

This short hymn, designated by the scribe as an irshemma, begins with a passage consisting primarily of a stereotype list of Enlil's powers, virtues, and attributes, that make him and his wife Ninlil the sole rulers of the universe (lines 1-17). Following the portrayal of Enlil as a god of fertility (lines 18-22), the hymn concludes with a three-line passage whose contents may turn out to be of considerable significance, but whose meaning is unfortunately obscure and enigmatic (lines 23-25). Structurally there is little that is remarkable about the composition: except for lines 1 and 2 that show the typical repetition pattern, and the antithetically parallel lines 19 and 20, the hymn consists of descriptive lines that add up to a pious, impressive, though far from ecstatic portrait of the god.

The text was published in CT, xv, Plate 10, and was edited by H. Zimmern in AO, VII, 38; a translation was published in SAHG, pp. 76-77 (cf. comment in Bi. Or., xi, p. 173, note 21).

Lord who knows the destiny of the land, trustworthy in his [calling], Enlil who knows the destiny of the land, trustworthy in his calling,
Father Enlil, lord of all the lands, Father Enlil, lord of the rightful command,
Father Enlil, shepherd of the blackheads,
Father Enlil, insightful in his calling, Father Enlil, the wild ox who walks to and fro among men,
Father Enlil who sleeps lightly, Recumbent wild ox, unruffled bull,
Lord Enlil, the "merchant" of the wide earth, (10) Lord, whose wife is the "trader" of the Earth, Lord, who makes abundant the erin-fat, the nunuz-milk, Lord, whose dwelling place guides the cities, Whose sleeping place is "great" in accordance with instructions, From the mountain of sunrise to the mountain of sunset, There is no (other) lord in the land, you alone are king,
Enlil, in all the lands there is no queen, your wife alone is queen.

Mighty one, the rain of heaven, the water of the earth is under your care,
Enlil, the "shepherd-crook" of the gods is under your care.
Father Enlil you who make grow the plants, who make grow the grain,
Father Enlil, your rays scorch the fish in the sea, You make the birds multiply in heaven, fill the sea with fish,
Father Enlil you brought the noble . . . , poured the gigur upon the head;
Lord of the land, you brought the weapon of destruction, where is the gigur for the reign,
Father Enlil, the faithful "slaves" were changed into treacherous "slaves."

It is an irshemma-song.

Hymn to Ninurta as God of Vegetation

This is a rather rare type of lyrical hymn addressed to Ninurta as the deity in charge of fertility and vegetation. The poem begins with a four-line strophe typical of Sumerian hymnal compositions, in which the first two lines and second two lines are identical except that the epithet of the first half of the strophe is replaced by the proper name to which it belongs. Then follows at least three strophes of three lines each characterized by a simple, though not ineffective repetition pattern.

The text was published in SLTN, No. 62; a translation was published in SAHG, pp. 59-60 (cf. the comment in Bi. Or., xi, p. 171).

(1) Life-giving semen, life-giving seed, King whose name was pronounced by Enlil, Life-giving semen, life-giving seed, Ninurta whose name was pronounced by Enlil.

My king, I will pronounce your name again and again, Ninurta, I your man, your man, I will pronounce your name again and again. (10)

My king, the ewe has given birth to the lamb, The ewe has given birth to the lamb, the ewe has given birth to the good sheep, I will pronounce your name again and again.

My king, the mother-goat [has given birth] to the kid,

---

1 For a good, brief description of the irshemma genre of composition, cf. SAHG, pp. 22-23.
2 These are found virtually in identical form in bilingual Sumero-Akkadian texts right down to the Seleucid era.
3 This rendering assumes that im-te-na is a variant form of *me-te-na.
4 "Blackheads" is an epithet of the Sumerians from (at least) the time of the Third Dynasty of Ur.
5 The implications of the epithets "merchant" and "trader" (following line) as epithets of Enlil and his wife are obscure.
6 This rendering of Ninlil is a guess based on the context.
7 The word gigur usually denotes a kind of basket, a meaning that does not seem to fit the context here.

---

1 Ninurta was conceived and worshipped in a rather contradictory twofold aspect. As the deity in charge of the South Wind, he is the god of battle who destroys the rebellious land, and in accordance with some as yet unknown Sumerian myth, avenges his father Enlil. On the other hand Ninurta is "the farmer of Enlil," and as such is of course the god of fertility, prosperity, and long life. It is this latter aspect of Ninurta that the poet of this hymn exults in lyric song.
The king . . . .
As long as he was king
In the field grew the rich grain.
In the river flowed fresh water.

Lord Ninurta, when your heart was seized (by anger),
You spat venom like a snake,
Lord Ninurta, when your heart was seized (by anger),
You spat venom like a snake,
My king, when your heart was seized (by anger),
You, with power you are endowed.

Lord Ninurta who vanquishes the houses of the rebellious lands, great lord of Enlil,
You, with power you are endowed.

[My king], of the house of the foe you are its adversary,
Of his city, you are its enemy,
Lord Ninurta, of the house of the foe, you are its adversary,
Of his city, you are its enemy.

Ishkur and the Destruction of the Rebellious Land
This irshenna, that seems to have been composed by a temple poet eager to reassure the people of Sumer that Ishkur is on their side and will come to their aid against their enemies, may have a meaning parallel to nuna, "the disobedient" (cf. also line 131 of the "Hymnal Prayer of Enheduanna").
be divided into three parts. The first consists of an hymnal address to Ishkur, in which he is exalted as a noble radiant bull whose name reaches the zenith of the sky, so that even his father, the great Enlil, fears his roar (lines 1-14). The poet then introduces a speech to Ishkur by Enlil in which he commissions his son to fill up and harness the winds, and with his herald "Lightning" at the head to proceed to "the rebellious land" which he is to destroy by raining a torrent of hailstones on it (lines 15-24). In the third and very brief concluding section the poet proclaims reassuringly that the howling, roaring, Ishkur introduces a speech to Ishkur by Enlil in which he commissions whose name reaches the zenith of the sky, so that even his address to Ishkur, in which he is exalted as a noble radiant bull cally worded phrases (lines 22-25).

The text of this composition was published in CT, xv, Plates 15-16; the most recent translation was published SAHG, pp. 81-83 (cf. Bi. Or., xi, p. 173, note 24).

[Noble bull,] radiant your name [reaches heaven's zenith],
[Father] Ishkur, noble bull, radiant your name [reaches] heaven's [zenith], Ishkur, son of An,\(^1\) noble bull, radiant your name [reaches] heaven's zenith,
Lord of Ennigi,\(^2\) noble bull, radiant your name [reaches] heaven's zenith,
Ishkur, lord of overflow, noble bull, radiant your name [reaches] heaven's zenith,
Twin brother of the lord Enki,\(^3\) noble bull, radiant (your name reaches heaven's zenith),
Father Ishkur, lord who rides the storm, your name reaches heaven's zenith,
Father Ishkur, who rides the great lion, your name reaches heaven's zenith,
Ishkur, lion of heaven, noble bull, glorious, your name reaches heaven's zenith.
Your name\(^5\) has attacked the land again and again, (10)
Your radiance has covered the land like a garment,
At your roar, the great mountain Enlil lowers his head (in fear),
At your bellow, Ninlil trembles.

Enlil commissioned his son, Ishkur:
"My young one, fill up the winds before you, harness the winds before you,
Ishkur, fill the winds before you, harness the winds before you,
Let the seven winds be harnessed for you like a team, harness the winds before you,

Let the howling wind howl for you, harness the winds before you,
Let your vizier "Lightning" go before you, (harness)\(^6\) the winds (before you),
My young one, go, go joyfully, who is like you when approaching it! (20)
To the rebellious land, hated by the father who begot you, who is like you when approaching it! Take small stones, who is like you when approaching it! Take large stones, who is like you when approaching it! Rain down on it your small stones, your large stones, Destroy the rebellious land to your right, subdue it to your left."

Ishkur gave heed to the words spoken by his father who begot him,
Father Ishkur coming forth from the house is a howling wind,
Coming forth from the house, from the city, is a young lion,
Setting forth from the city he is a roaring storm.
It is an irshemma of Ishkur.

Self-Laudatory Hymn of Inanna and Her Omnipotence

The hymn begins with a triumphant pronouncement by the goddess of the vast powers and important prerogatives that Enlil, as head of the pantheon, turned over to her (lines 1-13). As the "wild cow" of Enlil, she continues exaltingly, she is privileged to enter at will Enlil's holy temple, the Ekur of Nippur—a privilege which was presumably denied to other gods (lines 14-20). She closes her paean of self-glorification with a list of her temples in all the more important cities of Sumer and Akkad (lines 21-33). Structurally, the composition may be divided into (1) an initial five-line strophe in which the first and second lines are virtually identical with the fourth and fifth lines,\(^7\) while the middle third line is a summary exclamatory statement of her unique power, which is repeated as the very last line of the composition; (2) an eight-line strophe characterized by cumulative parallelism; (3) a seven-line passage essentially narrative in character; a twelve-line strophe that, like the second strophe, obtains its effect by cumulative parallelism.

The text was published in VS, x, No. 199, col. iii, lines 8-41, and treated by H. Zimmern in his König Lipt-Ischtars Vergöttlichung, pp. 18-21; a translation of the text was published in SAHG, pp. 67-68 (cf. comment in Bi. Or., xi, p. 172 and note 16).\(^8\)

My father gave me heaven, gave me earth. (1)
I, the queen of heaven am I!
Is there one god who can vie with me!

\(^1\) In this line it is An who is said to be the father of Ishkur, while according to line 26, it is Enlil who is "his father who begot him"; this provides another example of the An-Enlil identification, cf., e.g., p. 580.

\(^2\) For the location of Ennigi, cf. Edzard, ZBB, p. 74, and note 360.

\(^3\) Enki's father is also An-Enlil.

\(^4\) The parentheses in this line indicate intentional omission by the scribe of the last part of the refrain because of lack of space.

\(^5\) "Name" seems to be used here in the same sense as "word."

\(^6\) For the parentheses in this line, cf. note 4.

\(^7\) Except of course for the typical epithet-proper name substitution.

\(^8\) The composition is inscribed on a four-column tablet containing several other compositions, and the line numeration of our translation does not correspond to that of the published text.
Enil gave me heaven, gave me earth,
I, the (queen of heaven am I)!\(^3\)

He has given me lordship,
He has given me queenship,
He has given me battle, (he has given me) combat,
He has given me the Flood, (he has given me) the tempest.

He has placed heaven on my head as a crown,\(^{10}\)
He has tied the earth on my foot as a sandal,
He has placed heaven on my head as a crown,\(^{10}\)
He has tied the earth on my foot as a sandal,

The gods are ..., I, a life-giving wild cow am I,

He has fastened the holy \(\wedge\text{-garment}\) about my body,
He has placed the holy sceptor in my hand.

The gatekeeper does not stop me,\(^{5}\)
When I enter the Ekur, the house of Enlil,
In Zabalom, the giguna* is mine,
In Girsu, the Eshdam is mine,
In Der, the Amashkugga is mine,
In Kish, the Hursagkalamma is mine,
In Umma, the Ibgal is mine,
In Agade, the Ulmash is mine.

It is a balbale-song of Inanna.\(^{14}\)

Hymnal Prayer of Enheduanna: The Adoration of Inanna in Ur

(lines 1-142), is a hymnal prayer to Inanna, purportedly uttered by Enheduanna, the daughter of Sargon the Great, founder of the Dynasty of Akkad, who appointed her as en, or high-priestess of Nanna (also known as Sin) the tutelary deity of Ur.\(^{1}\) The second, and very brief, section (lines 143-150) contains the author’s pronouncement that Enheduanna’s prayer had been accepted by the goddess, who was now made welcome in Ur by Nanna and her wing Ningal. The document is of significance for the religious and political history of Sumer, though unfortunately not a little of its content is ambiguous and obscure.

Enheduanna begins her orison to Inanna as the deity in charge of all the me;\(^{2}\) the divine norms, duties, and powers, assigned to all cosmic and cultural entities at the time of creation, in order to keep them operating harmoniously and perpetually (lines 1-8). She then proceeds to depict the more cruel, destructive, and vindictive aspects of the goddess: she is a venomous, thundering, flood-and-fire raining deity whose rites are unfathomable (lines 9-16); she is an awesome storm deity before whom all mankind trembles and quakes (lines 17-28); she is an irate, relentless, and intractable goddess of war before whom even the great gods flee in terror (lines 26-42); she is the cruel conqueror of Mt. Ebih and its rebellious people (lines 43-50);\(^{3}\) as the goddess of love, as well as war, she deprives the unsubmissive city of all propagation and vegetation (lines 51-57).

Following a brief chant of adoration of Inanna as a great, wise, merciful and life-giving goddess (lines 58-65), comes a long passage in which Enheduanna pictures the misery and suffering that have overtaken her (lines 66-108); it is this passage that is interspersed with what seem to be several references to political events. This is followed in turn by a brief prayer of the high-priestess to Inanna as her dear and powerful queen to keep her out of her bitter straits (109-121). Enheduanna then proceeds to invoke Inanna with a resounding magnificat that recounts her immense powers, and closes with a plea to the goddess to turn a friendly heart to her adoring, devout, and pious votary (lines 122-142). The composition concludes with Inanna’s acceptance of Enheduanna’s supplication (lines 143-150), and a summary three-line invocation of the goddess by the author-poet (lines 151-153).

The first major publication of the text of the composition was by Stephen Langdon in PBS, x/4, Nos. 3 and 4. Since then some fifty tablets and fragments inscribed with the text have been identified, one of the best preserved has been published recently in UET, vi, Part 2, No. 107 (cf. ibid., p. n, note 39). Translations and translations of part of the text were published by Langdon, PBS, x/4, pp. 260-4. *\(^n\)*d by M. Witzel, Kelskritische Studien, vi, pp. 73-89. A definitive edition of the text including all variants, together with a study of its poetic structure and literary significance, as well as a complete glossary, has been prepared by William W. Hallo and A. J. A. van Dijk, and will appear in the near future as a monograph published by Yale University Press.

Queen of all of the me, radiant light,
Life-giving woman, beloved of An (and) Urash,\(^4\)
Hierodule of An, much bejewelled,
Who loves the life-giving tiara, fit for \(\wedge\text{-ship},\)
Who grasps in (her) hand, the seven me

\(^{1}\) cf. for the present UET, vi, part 2, pp. 10-11, comment to Nos. 107-110. Note that Enheduanna’s prayer is not, as might perhaps have been expected, in the Enuma elish.

\(^{2}\) For the myth concerned with Inanna’s acquisition of the me from Enki, the god of wisdom, who had them under his care in the Abzu of Eridu, cf. SM, pp. 64-8.

\(^{3}\) For the myth of “Inanna and Mt. Ebih,” cf. SM, pp. 82-3, and UET, vi, part 2, p. 4, note 7. The name of the mountain is not actually stated in our text but there is little doubt that this is the mountain to which the passage refers.

\(^{4}\) That is, “Heaven (and) Earth.”

\(^{5}\) The seven me may refer to the me assigned to the seven leading

\([579]\)
My queen, you who are the guardian of all the great me,
You have lifted the me, have tied the me to your hands,
Have gathered the me, pressed the me to your breast.

You have filled the land with venom, like a dragon.
Vegetation ceases, when you thunder like Ishkur,6 (10)
You who bring down the Flood from the mountain,
Supreme one, who are the Inanna of heaven (and) earth,7
Who rain flaming fire over the land,
Who at the holy command of An, utters the (divine) words,
Who can fathom your great rites!
Destroyer of the foreign lands, you have given wings to the storm,
Beloved of Enlil you made it (the storm) blow over the land,
You carried out the instructions of An.

My queen, the foreign lands cower at your cry, (20)
In dread (and) fear of the South Wind,9 mankind
Brought you their anguished clamor,
Took before you their anguished outcry
Opened before you wailing and weeping,
Brought before you the "great" lamentations in the city streets.

In the van of battle, everything was struck down before you,
My queen, you are all devouring in your power,
You kept on attacking like an attacking storm,
Kept on blowing (louder) than the howling storm,
Kept on moaning (louder) than the evil winds,
Your feet grew not weary,
You caused wailing to be uttered on the "lyre of lament."

My queen, the Anunna, the great gods,
Fled before you like fluttering bats,
Could not stand before your awesome face,
Could not approach your awesome forehead.
Who can soothe your angry heart!

Your baleful heart is beyond soothing!
Queen, happy of "liver," joyful of heart, (40)
(But) whose anger cannot be soothed, daughter of Sin,
Queen, paramount in the land, who has (ever) paid you (enough) homage!
The mountain who kept from paying homage to you—vegetation became "tabu" for it,
You burnt down its great gates,
Its rivers ran with blood because of you, its people had nothing to drink,
Its troops were led off willingly (into captivity) before you,
Its forces disbanded themselves willingly before you,
The amusement places of its cities were filled with turbulence,
Its adult males were driven off as captives before you.

Against the city that said not "yours is the land,"
That said not "It belongs to the father who begot you,"
You promised your holy word, turned away from it,
Kept your distance from its womb,
Its woman spoke not of love with her husband,
In the deep night she whispered not (tenderly) with him,
Revealed not to him the "holiness" of her heart.
Rampant wild cow, elder daughter of Sin,
Queen, greater than An, who has (ever) paid you (enough) homage!
You who in accordance with the life giving me, great queen of queens, (60)
Have become greater than your10 mother who gave birth to you, (as soon as) you came forth from the holy womb,
Knowing, wise, queen of all the lands,
Who multiplies (all) living creatures (and) peoples—
I have uttered your holy song.
Life-giving goddess, fit for the me, whose acclamation11 is exalted,
Merciful, life-giving woman, radiant of heart, I have uttered it before you in accordance with the me.
I have entered before you in my holy gipar,12
I the en, Enheduanna,
Carrying the musab-basket,13 I uttered a joyous chant,
(But now) I no longer dwell in the goodly place you14 established.

Came the day, the sun scorched me (70)
Came the shade (of night), the South Wind overwhelmed me,

---

6 The Sumerian storm-god.
7 "The Inanna of heaven (and) earth" is a rather strange expression, but that is what the text seems to say.
8 This statement seems to contradict the myth mentioned in note 2, according to which it was Enki who presented the me to Inanna; there may therefore have been other versions of the tale. The "instructions of An," in line 19, on the other hand refer no doubt to the "word" of An (and) Enlil—the two gods are often identified and treated as one and the same deity in the post-III literary documents—that was often destructive in character, since the leading deity of the pantheon had the unpleasant duty of carrying out the not infrequently unfavorable decisions of the gods.
9 This usually refers to Ninurta, the god of the South Wind, but here it seems to allude to storms in general.
10 The text actually has "her" instead of "your."
11 Literally: "greatly uttered (words)."
12 For the gipar, cf. now CAD, s.v.
13 For this ritual basket, cf. Iraq, x, p. 97.
14 Perhaps better "I established."
My honey-sweet voice has become strident,
Whatever gave me pleasure has turned into dust.
Oh Sin, king of heaven, my (bitter) fate,
To An declare, An will deliver me,
Pray declare it to An, he will deliver me.
The kingship of heaven has been seized by the woman (Inanna),
At whose feet lies the flood-land.
That woman (Inanna) so exalted, who has made me tremble together the city (Ur),
Stay her, let her heart be soothed by me.
I, Enheduanna will offer supplications to her,
My tears, like sweet drinks.
I, Enheduanna will offer supplications to her,
Let not Ashimbabbar (Sin) be troubled.
That house (the Eanna) whose charm was irresistible, Feared not the great An,
Has seized the Eanna
She (Inanna) has changed altogether the rites of holy An,
That house she has turned over to destruction,
Her ... that she brought there has ...
May An give over (to punishment) the rebellious lands
I, accustomed to triumph, have been driven forth from Eunuchs makes them captive.
I, what am I among the living creatures!
May An give over (to punishment) the rebellious lands
that hate your (Inanna's) Nanna,
May An split its cities asunder,
May Enil curse it,
May not its tear-destined child be soothed by her mother,
Oh queen who established lamentations
Your "boat of lamentations," has landed in an iminical land,
There will I die, while singing the holy song.

As for me, my Nanna watched not over me,
I have been attacked most cruelly.
Ashimbabbar has not spoken my verdict.
But what matter, whether he spoke it or not!
I, accustomed to triumph, have been driven forth from (my) house,
Was forced to flee the cote like a swallow, my life is devoured,
Was made to walk among the mountain thorns,
The life-giving tiara of ^n-ship was taken from me, Eunuchs were assigned to me—"These are becoming to you," it was told me.
Dearest queen, beloved of An,
Let your holy heart, the noble, return to me,
Beloved wife of Ushumgalanna (Dumuzi),
Great queen of the horizon and the zenith,
The Anunna have prostrated themselves before you. Although at birth you were the younger sister,
How much greater you have become than the Anunna, the great gods!
The Anunna kiss the ground before you.
It is not my verdict that has been completed, it is a strange verdict that has been turned into my verdict,
The fruitful bed has been abolished;
(So that) I have not interpreted to man the commands of Ningal.
For me, the radiant en of Nanna,
May your heart be soothed, you who are the queen beloved of An.
"You are known, you are known"—it is not of Nanna that I have recited it, it is of you that I have recited it.
You are known by your heaven-like height,
You are known by your earth-like breadth,
You are known by your destruction of rebel-lands,
You are known by your massacring (their) people,
You are known by your devouring (their) dead like a dog.
You are known by your fierce countenance.
You are known by the raising of your fierce countenance,
You are known by your flashing eyes.
You are known by your contentiousness (and) disobedience,
You are known by your many triumphs"—
It is not of Nanna that I have recited it, it is of you that I have recited it.

This is assumed to be the meaning of en-na, cf. also BE, xxx, No. 4. rev. 17.

581
My queen, I have extolled you, who alone are exalted, Queen beloved of An, I have erected your daises, Have heaped up the coals, have conducted the rites, Have set up the nuptial chamber for you, may your heart be soothed for me, Enough, more than enough innovations, great queen, have I made for you.
What I have recited to you in the deep night, The gala-smgtr will repeat for you in midday. (140) It is because of your captive spouse, your captive son, That your wrath is so great, your heart so unappeased.
Nanna who came forth in wonder true, How she carried (her) beauty—like the rising moon—
To the hierodule whose command is noble, Greeted her at the doorsill (of the temple). (150)
The poem was edited by the writer in RSO, xxxn (1957), 95-102. The translation does not offer too many difficulties; by and large there are but few lexical and grammatical problems. Nevertheless much of its contents remains obscure—the names of the buildings and structures that constitute the larger part of the first song are still unidentifiable in the main, and the laconically worded religious implications of the remaining songs are puzzling and elusive.

Hymn to the Ekur

This rather tersely worded, enigmatic hymn to the Ekur ("Mountain House"), Enlil's renowned temple in Nippur, is inscribed on an excellently preserved tablet excavated some seventy years ago at Nippur, and now in the University Museum. It consists of four songs, each characterized by a special refrain. The first, second, and third songs are designated by the poet as sagidda, kiuruguda, and sagarras; the fourth is left undesigned, probably accidentally. The first, third, and fourth songs, but not the second, are followed by antiphons.

The tablet, like the vast majority of Sumerian literary tablets, dates from the first half of the second millennium B.C., but may have been composed as early as about 2000 B.C. The so of sagidda and sagarras means "string," and points to the accompaniment of the song by musical instruments. The rubric kiuruguda, on the other hand, probably refers to some liturgical participation by the worshippers.

---

23 This probably refers to some disaster in Erech.
24 This rendering of gu-en-na (note that this may be a variant form of utgir) is based on the context.

---

1 For an ancient map of Nippur, with the Ekur and perhaps some of the gates mentioned in the hymn, cf. HBS, pp. 232-36; cf. also the description of the Ekur in the Ur-Nammu hymn (pages 583-84) and in the Enlil hymn (pages 573-76).
2 The tablet, like the vast majority of Sumerian literary tablets, dates from the first half of the second millennium B.C., but may have been composed as early as about 2000 B.C.
3 The so of sagidda and sagarras means "string," and points to the accompaniment of the song by musical instruments. The rubric kiuruguda, on the other hand, probably refers to some liturgical participation by the worshippers.
4 For some of the structures listed in lines 6 ff., cf. Falkenstein,
For him who in the (house) of Ninurta had commanded,
The house rose like the sun;
(40)
For him who in the (house) of the son, the prince,
the prince,
It is a viuruguda-song.

The house, in accordance with the great me, raised high its head,
In its midst is the mountain of the aromatic cedar;
The house of Ninlil, in accordance with the great me,
raised high its head,
In its midst is the mountain of the aromatic cedar;
The house of Ninurta, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
(60)
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
Is worthy of Ninlil, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
The offspring of Ninlil, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
The hero Ninurta, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
The court of Enlil
In its midst is the mountain of the aromatic cedar;
The court of Enlil, in accordance with the great me,
raised high its head,
In its midst is the mountain of the aromatic cedar;
The house of Enlil, in accordance with the great me,
raised high its head,
It is a [sagar]ra-song.
The [house] in which he rejoiced with them—
Is its antiphon.
Its king, in the house "Faithful Sonship," is worthy of Enlil, the king;
The hero Ninurta, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
The offspring of Ninlil, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king;
The son, the prince of the Ekur, in the house "Faithful Sonship,"
Is worthy of Enlil, the king.

Ur-Nammu Hymn: Building of the Ekur and Blessing by Enlil

This composition, designated by the scribe as a "tigi of Enlil"1 is divided into two songs: a sagidda and a sagarra. The first begins with a poetic statement of the selection by Enil of Ur-Nammu as king of Sumer (lines 1-6), and of his commission to restore the Ekur (lines 7-14). There follows a description of the rebuilding of the Ekur, die decoration of its gates with mythological scenes, and the building of the giguna2 (lines 15-30). Ur-Nammu then turned his attention to the Gagishshua, the shrine of Enlil’s wife, Ninlil, and provided the divine couple with their needs, so that they live there in happy bliss (lines 31-35). All of which moves Enlil to pronounce a blessing on the faithful king (lines 36-38).

1 For the /gi-genre of composition, cf. SAHG, pp. 20-21, but note that the rendering "Pauken-lied" is probably unjustified; more likely it is a lyre-accompanied song.

The second song begins with Enlil’s blessing given in direct speech by the god to the king—Ur-Nammu will reach the summit of power, temporal and religious, and his fame and name will fill the universe (lines 40-51). The poet then continues with a eulogy of Ur-Nammu as the mighty victor over his enemies with the help of Enlil’s divine weapons (lines 52-57); as the destroyer of evil cities and oppressors (lines 58-61); as the one who carries on raging attacks against injustice. The poet concludes by depicting Ur-Nammu on his “dais of kingship” in his capital Ur.

The text was published in SKT, No. 11; a translation was published by Falkenstein in SAHG, pp. 87-90 (cf. Bi. Or., xvn, pp. 173-74, note 27, and ZA, LII, 81-82), and a detailed edition of the text was published in ZA, LIII, 106-18.4

Lofty Enlil, [whose decision is unalterable] . . . ,
The lord of great princeship . . . ,
Nunamnir,8 the god who . . . ,
Lifted (his) eyes over the people [looked with favor upon Ur-Nammu], the shepherd;
Enil, the Great Mountain, [chose] him from among all his people,[Filled] with fearsome awe the confirmed shepherd of Nunamnir.

[To restore] the brickwork of the Ekur in accordance with the me,
Enil, the Great Mountain, who [makes glorious] his lofty shrine, the Ekur, like the light of day,
Set his . . heart,
Commissioned Ur-Nammu, the shepherd, to lift the head of the Ekur heaven-high, (10)
Exalted the king [in] the land, lifted (his) head heaven-high.

Ur-Nammu Hymn: Building of the Ekur and Blessing by Enlil

Of Enlil, his favorite—
Is its (sic) antiphon.

For this structure, cf. CAD, s.v. 3

3 For this structure, cf. CAD, s.v.

4 The translation here presented differs considerably from that in ZA, LIII (the reasons for these differences will be readily apparent to the cuneiformist).

5 This is another name for Enil found frequently in the literary texts; its meaning is not quite certain.
The Sumerians, enjoying days of prosperity,
Rejoiced greatly with him,
Laid firm (its) foundations, filled in (its) holy terrace.
The enqum- and ningum-pnest duly exalt it.\(^6\)

The house that Enki had adorned beautifully,\(^7\)
Ur-Nammu, the shepherd, raised the head of the lofty Ekur in Duranki (Nippur) heaven-high, (20)
(So that) the people, all of them, stood before it in awe.

(Of the) Lofty Gate, Great Gate, Gate of Peace, High-rising Mountain, (and) Gate of Uncut Grain,\(^8\)
He (Ur-Nammu) decorated their front with electrum (and) chaste silver:
The Imdugud killed a lion,
The A
\[\text{sn}-\text{bird} seized the evil man\(^8\)
The doors, the lofty, he filled them with seemly beauty,
The lofty house he made awe-inspiring—
It was wide in extent, it was most awesome,
The storied mountain, the giguna, as a dwelling place for the Great Mountain (Enlil),
He established in its (the Ekur’s) midst, like a lofty tower, \(^30\)

The Gagishshua, the lofty palace where he decrees the great decisions,
He beautified fittingly for Ninlil, the great queen,
Enlil and Ninlil were happy there,
In its dining halls, the faithful man, the chosen of Nunamnir,
He multiplies all things noble, the Ekur was in joy.

They (Enlil and Ninlil) looked favorably upon Ur-Nammu, the shepherd,
The Great Mountain (Enlil) decreed a great fate for Ur-Nammu, into distant days,
Exalted (his) might over his "blackheaded ones" (the Sumerians):
It is a sagidda.

"I, Nunamnir, whose life-giving commands (and) decisions are unalterable—
You have made my lofty Ekur resplendent,
With brilliant facades you have raised it heaven-high,
Faithful man of valor, you made it resplendent in the Land (Sumer),
Ur-Nammu—of "\(\text{\textit{H}}\)-ship and kingship, may you be their acme,
May your name extend to the zenith of heaven, the depths of Hades."

My king—the lofty mace that in the enemy-land heaps up the rebels in piles, that overwhelmed the rebellious land,
Ur-Nammu, the shepherd—the lofty mace that in the enemy-land heaps up the rebels in piles that overwhelmed the rebellious land,
He, the lord Nunamnir has given it to him,
That he might crush the foreign land, become a (man) of might.

He the lord Nunamnir has given it to Ur-Nammu, the shepherd,
That he might crush the foreign land, become a (man) of might.

He destroyed the cities, the evil,
He cleared them of the oppression of the "lofty,"
Ur-Nammu, the shepherd, destroyed the cities, the evil, (Cleared them of the oppression of the "lofty."
His approach is fierce against those who pervert justice,
His storming rage overwhelmed the evil ones,
Ur-Nammu, the shepherd—his approach is fierce against those who pervert justice,
His storming rage overwhelmed the evil ones.

He planted firmly the dais of kingship,
Made it resplendent in Ur,
Ur-Nammu, the shepherd, clothed it with awe, he lifted high his head—the king of the Land,
In the place of Enil, his king, it was [presented to him] as a gift,
A (good) fate has he decreed, he is *bles\(\text{ssed}^{\}\)
In his [city] Ur-Nammu [is exalted]
It is a sagarra. A tigi of Enil.

The King of the Road: A Self-Laudatory Shulgi Hymn

This rather unusual hymn, that is partly narrative in character, is of considerable significance not only for the nature and role of the institution of kingship in Sumer, but also for such little known aspects of its cultural life as communications and athletic prowess. It begins with a hyperbolic itemizing of Shulgi’s virtues and endowments including those granted him as a favorite of the great gods, that is typical of Sumerian royal hymnography, except that, rather surprisingly they include love of the road and a passion for speed (lines 1-19). Moreover, following another brief, typical eulogistic passage (lines 20-26), Shulgi elaborates on his great interest in travel, claiming that he saw to it that the roads of the land were always in good repair, and that he constructed on them resthouses for the weary traveller (lines 27-35). He then asserts that, eager to establish his name and fame as a champion runner, he made a journey from Nippur to Ur, a distance of fifteen "double hours"—roughly about 100 miles—as if he had done so to the accompaniment of music and song (lines 46-54). After resting, bathing, and eating in his palace, he returned to Nippur in spite of a raging hailstorm, and thus could celebrate the tific-feasts in both Ur and Nippur on one and the same day (lines 55-78). There in Nippur, moreover he banqueted with the sun-god Utu, and his (Shulgi's) divine spouse, the fertility goddess Inanna (lines 79-85). There, too, An invested him with the royal insignia, so that he became a mighty king whose power and glory were exalted in the four corners of the universe (lines 86-101).

Well-nigh the entire text of the hymn was available as early as 1944, cf. SLTN, p. 27, comment to Nos. 81-83, where the pertinent bibliographical references will be found, as well as a brief sketch of its contents. In 1952, Falkenstein published an edition of the hymn in ZA, L, 61-81, based on fourteen tablets and fragments, three more than were identified in SLTN. There were still a number of gaps and misreadings in the text, however, and these have been filled in and corrected by Jacob Klein, in the course of preparing his dissertation on Shulgi hymnography, with the help of several recently published Ur pieces, and a number of still unpublished duplicates in the University Museum. The present translation utilizes the results of Klein's study.

I, the king, a hero from the (mother's) womb am I, (1) I, Shulgi, a mighty man from (the day) I was born am I,

A fierce-eyed lion, born of the ushumgaV am I,

I, Shulgi, a mighty man from (the day) I was born am I,

And from Nippur to Ur, (40) I resolved to traverse as if it were (but a distance) of one danna.

Like my heroism, like my might, (20) I am accomplished in wisdom (as well),
I vie with its (wisdom's) true word,
I love justice,
I do not love evil,
I hate the evil word,
I, Shulgi, a mighty king, supreme, am I.

Because I am a powerful man rejoicing in his "loins," I enlarged the footpaths, straightened the highways of the land,
I made secure travel, built there "big houses,"
Planted gardens alongside of them, established resting-places,
Settled there friendly folk,
(50) So that who comes from below, who come from above,
Might refresh themselves in its cool (shade),
The wayfarer who travels the highway at night,
Might find refuge there like in a well-built city.

That my name be established unto distant days that it leave not the mouth (of men),
That my praise be spread wide in the land,
That I be eulogized in all the lands,
I, the runner, rose in my strength, all set for the course,
(And) from Nippur to Ur,
I entered the Ekishnugal, (59)

The mighty king of Nanna am I,
The open-jawed lion of Utu am I,
Shulgi chosen for the vulva of Inanna am I,
A princely donkey all set for the road am I,
A horse that swings (his) tail on the highway am I,
A noble donkey of Sumugan eager for the course am I,
The wise scribe of Nidaba am I.

Like my heroism, like my might, (20)
I am accomplished in wisdom (as well),
I vie with its (wisdom's) true word,
I love justice,
I do not love evil,
I hate the evil word,
I, Shulgi, a mighty king, supreme, am I.

Because I am a powerful man rejoicing in his "loins,"
I enlarged the footpaths, straightened the highways of the land,
I made secure travel, built there "big houses,"
Planted gardens alongside of them, established resting-places,
Settled there friendly folk,
(20) So that who comes from below, who come from above,
Might refresh themselves in its cool (shade),
The wayfarer who travels the highway at night,
Might find refuge there like in a well-built city.

That my name be established unto distant days that it leave not the mouth (of men),
That my praise be spread wide in the land,
That I be eulogized in all the lands,
I, the runner, rose in my strength, all set for the course,
(And) from Nippur to Ur,
I entered the Ekishnugal,

The mighty king of Nanna am I,
The open-jawed lion of Utu am I,
Shulgi chosen for the vulva of Inanna am I,
A princely donkey all set for the road am I,
A horse that swings (his) tail on the highway am I,
A noble donkey of Sumugan eager for the course am I,
The wise scribe of Nidaba am I.

Like my heroism, like my might, (20)
I am accomplished in wisdom (as well),
I vie with its (wisdom's) true word,
I love justice,
I do not love evil,
I hate the evil word,
I, Shulgi, a mighty king, supreme, am I.

Because I am a powerful man rejoicing in his "loins,"
I enlarged the footpaths, straightened the highways of the land,
I made secure travel, built there "big houses,"
Planted gardens alongside of them, established resting-places,
Settled there friendly folk,
(50) So that who comes from below, who come from above,
Might refresh themselves in its cool (shade),
The wayfarer who travels the highway at night,
Might find refuge there like in a well-built city.

That my name be established unto distant days that it leave not the mouth (of men),
That my praise be spread wide in the land,
That I be eulogized in all the lands,
I, the runner, rose in my strength, all set for the course,
(And) from Nippur to Ur,
I entered the Ekishnugal, (59)

The mighty king of Nanna am I,
The open-jawed lion of Utu am I,
Shulgi chosen for the vulva of Inanna am I,
A princely donkey all set for the road am I,
A horse that swings (his) tail on the highway am I,
A noble donkey of Sumugan eager for the course am I,
The wise scribe of Nidaba am I.

Like my heroism, like my might, (20)
I am accomplished in wisdom (as well),
I vie with its (wisdom's) true word,
I love justice,
I do not love evil,
I hate the evil word,
I, Shulgi, a mighty king, supreme, am I.

Because I am a powerful man rejoicing in his "loins,"
I enlarged the footpaths, straightened the highways of the land,
I made secure travel, built there "big houses,"
Planted gardens alongside of them, established resting-places,
Settled there friendly folk,
(20) So that who comes from below, who come from above,
Might refresh themselves in its cool (shade),
The wayfarer who travels the highway at night,
Might find refuge there like in a well-built city.

That my name be established unto distant days that it leave not the mouth (of men),
That my praise be spread wide in the land,
That I be eulogized in all the lands,
I, the runner, rose in my strength, all set for the course,
(And) from Nippur to Ur,
I entered the Ekishnugal, (59)

The mighty king of Nanna am I,
The open-jawed lion of Utu am I,
Shulgi chosen for the vulva of Inanna am I,
A princely donkey all set for the road am I,
A horse that swings (his) tail on the highway am I,
A noble donkey of Sumugan eager for the course am I,
The wise scribe of Nidaba am I.

Like my heroism, like my might, (20)
I am accomplished in wisdom (as well),
I vie with its (wisdom's) true word,
I love justice,
I do not love evil,
I hate the evil word,
I, Shulgi, a mighty king, supreme, am I.

Because I am a powerful man rejoicing in his "loins,"
I enlarged the footpaths, straightened the highways of the land,
I made secure travel, built there "big houses,"
Planted gardens alongside of them, established resting-places,
Settled there friendly folk,
(20) So that who comes from below, who come from above,
Might refresh themselves in its cool (shade),
The wayfarer who travels the highway at night,
Might find refuge there like in a well-built city.

That my name be established unto distant days that it leave not the mouth (of men),
That my praise be spread wide in the land,
That I be eulogized in all the lands,
SUMERIAN HYMNS

Slaughtered there oxen, multiplied (the slaughtering of) sheep,
Made resound there the drum and the timbrel,
Took charge there of the fint/-music, the sweet.

I, Shulgi, the all bountiful, brought there bread-offerings,
Have inspired dread from (my) royal seat like a lion,
In the lofty palace of Ninegal, I rested (my) knees, bathed in fresh water,
Like an owl (and) a falcon I arose, (60)
Returned to Nippur in my . . . .

On that day, the storm howled, the tempest swirled,
Northwind (and) Southwind roared eagerly,
Lightning devoured in heaven alongside the seven winds,
The deafening storm made the earth tremble,
Ishkur thundered throughout the heavenly expanse,
The winds on high embraced the waters below,
Its (the storm’s) little stones, its big stones,
Lashed at my back.

(But) I, the king was unafraid, uncowed, (70)
Like a young lion (prepared to) spring I shook myself loose,
Like a donkey of the steppe, I covered up my ...,
My heart full of happiness travelling all alone,
Like Utu eager (to come) home,
I traversed the journey of 15 danna (in distance),
My sagursag gazed at me (in wonder),

Literally: “he who multiplies (all) things.”
It is uncertain to whom Ninegal, “Queen of the Palace” refers to; it is often an epithet of Inanna.
Ishkur is the storm-god.
Literally: “the heaven the wide.”
This is a stereotype description of hail.
This is a class of temple personnel, probably castrates.

As in one (and the same) day I celebrated the *fe/-feasts in (both) Ur (and) Nippur.

With valiant Utu my brother and friend,
I drank strong drink in the palace founded by An, (80)
My minstrels sang for me the seven tigi-songs.
By the side of my spouse, the maid Inanna, the queen,
the “vulva” of heaven (and) earth,
I sat at its (the palace’s) banquet.
She spoke not my judgment as a (final) judgment,
Wheresoever I lift my eyes, thither I go,
Wheresoever my heart moves me, thither I proceed.

An set the holy crown upon my head,
Made me take the scepter in the "lapis-lazuli" Ekur,
On the radiant dais, he raised heaven high the firmly founded throne,
He exalted there the power of (my) kingship. (90)
I bent low all the lands, made secure the people,
The four-corners of the universe, the people in unison,
call my name,
Chant holy songs,
Pronounce my exaltation (saying):

"He that is nurtured by the exalted power of kingship, Presented by Sin, out of the Ekishnugal,
With heroship, might, and a good life,
Endowed with lofty power by Nunamnir, Shulgi, the destroyer of all the foreign lands, who makes all the people secure,
Who in accordance with the me of the universe, (100)
Shulgi, cherished by the trusted son of An (Sin)!"
Oh, Nidaba, praise!20

The meaning of this line in the context is obscure.
This is another name for Enil.
This is a typical hymnal last line; Nidaba is the goddess of writing and literature.

{586}
VI. Didactic and Wisdom Literature
Man and his God

A SUMERIAN VARIATION OF THE "JOB" MOTIF

This "lamentation to a man's god," as the ancient author himself describes it, is an edifying poetic essay composed, no doubt, for the purpose of prescribing the proper attitude and conduct for a victim of cruel and seemingly undeserved misfortune. The Sumerians, like all peoples throughout the ages, were troubled by the problem of human suffering, particularly relative to its rather enigmatic causes and potential remedies. Their teachers and sages believed and taught the doctrine that man's misfortunes were the result of his sins and misdeeds. They were convinced, moreover, that no man is without guilt; as our Sumerian poet-theologian puts it: "Never was a sinless child born to its mother."

In spite of surface appearances to the contrary, therefore, there are no cases of unjust and undeserved human suffering; it is always man who is to blame, not the gods. But the truth of such theological premises and conclusions is by no means readily apparent, and in moments of adversity, more than one sufferer must have been tempted to challenge the fairness of the divine order, that one of the sages of the Sumerian academy, the edubba, composed this instructive essay.

The main thesis of our poet is that in cases of suffering and adversity, no matter how seemingly unjustified, the victim has but one valid and effective recourse, and that is to continually glorify his god and keep wailing and lamenting before him until he turns a favourable ear to his prayers. The god concerned is the sufferer's "personal" god, that is the deity who, in accordance with the accepted Sumerian credo, acted as the man's representative and intercessor in the assembly of the gods. To prove his point our author does not resort to philosophical speculation and theological argumentation. Instead, with characteristic Sumerian pragmatism, he cites a case: Here is a man, unnamed to be sure, who had been wealthy, wise and righteous, or at least seemingly so, and blest with both friends and kin. One day sickness and suffering overwhelmed him. Did he defy the divine order and blaspheme? Not at all! He came humbly before his god with tears and lamentation, and poured out his heart in prayer and supplication. As a result his god was highly pleased and moved to compassion; he gave heed to his prayer, delivered him from his misfortunes and turned his suffering to joy.

"This dogma was in line with the accepted world-view of the Sumerian theologian, according to which the gods in control of the cosmos planned and instituted evil, falsehood and violence as part and parcel of civilization; cf. S. N. Kramer, The Sumerians, pp. 125 ff.

"The notion of a personal god was evolved by the Sumerian theologians in response to the feeling that the leading deities of the pantheon were too distant and aloof from the individual man, and that the latter should therefore have an intermediary, a kind of "good angel," to intercede on his behalf when the gods assembled (probably every New Year's Day) to judge all men and decide their fates; cf. especially H. Frankfort, et al., Intellectual Adventure of Ancient Man, pp. 203-04. Just how these personal gods were selected by the individual or head of a family is uncertain, but we actually have the names of the "personal" deities of a number of Sumerian rulers from the second half of the third millennium B.C.

Structurally speaking, our poetic tract may be tentatively divided into five sections. First comes a brief introductory exhortation that man should praise and exalt his god and soothe him with lamentations (lines 1-9). The poet then introduces the unnamed individual who, upon being smitten with sickness and misfortune, addresses his god with tears and prayers (lines 10-20 plus). There follows the sufferer's petition which constitutes the major part of the poem (lines 26 minus-116). It begins with a description of the ill treatment accorded him by his fellow men—friend and foe alike (lines 26-55); continues with a lament against his bitter fate, including a rhetorical request to his kin and to the professional singers to do likewise (lines 56-95); and concludes with a confession of guilt and a direct plea for relief and deliverance (lines 96-116). Finally comes the "happy ending," in which the poet informs us that the man's prayer did not go unheeded, and that his god accepted the entreaties and delivered him from his afflictions (lines 117-129). All this leads, of course, to a further glorification of his god (lines 130-end).

Two pieces belonging to this composition were first published in STVC, Nos. 1 and 2, but the text was there assumed to be a collection of proverbs rather than a connected essay. Later I identified three other pieces, one in the University Museum, and two in the Istanbul Museum of the Ancient Orient, and these were published in Supplement to VT, i: 2 (1960), pp. 172-82, together with a transliteration and translation of the text, which could now be recognized as an essay concerned with the problem of human suffering and what to do about it. Still later, E. I. Gordon identified another small piece in the University Museum; this was published in Bi. Or., xvi, pp. 149 ff., where the reader will also find a number of useful bibliographical details.

Let a man utter constantly the exaltedness of his god,
Let the young man praise artlessly the words of his god,
Let the inhabitant of the straightforward land moan,
In the house [of] song let him interpret . . . to his woman-friend and man-friend,
Soothe [his] heart,
Bring forth . . ., utter . . ., Measure out . . .,
Let his lament soothe the heart of his god,
(For) a man without a god would not obtain food.

The young man—he uses not his strength for evil
in the place of deceit,
(Yet . . ., sickness, bitter suffering . . . d him,
. . ., fate, . . . brought . . . close to him,
Bitter . . . confused its . . ., covered his . . .,
. . . placed an evil hand on him, he was treated as . . .
. . . of his god,
. . . in his . . . . he weeps,
. . . he directed a . . .,

{589}
Sumerian Wisdom Text

Speaks [tearfully] to him of his suffering . . . ,
. . . in his . . . wrath,
. . . s . . . .
(approximately 5 lines destroyed)

"I am a young man, a discerning one, (yet) who respects me prospers not,6
My righteous word has been turned into a lie,
The man of deceit has conspired against me,
(And) you, my god, do not thwart him,
You have doled out to me suffering ever anew,
I entered the house, heavy is the spirit,
I, the young man, went out to the street, oppressed is
With me, the valiant, my righteous shepherd has become Angered you, stormed about, planned evil.
I, the wise, why am I bound to the ignorant youths?
I, the discerning, why am I counted among the ignorant?
Food is all about, (yet) my food is hunger,
On the day shares were allotted to all, my allotted share was suffering.
The brother . . . quarrelled, planned [evil],
[He . . . s] my . . . ,
Raises up . . . ,
Carries off . . . ,
Writ[es on clay] . . . the wise . . . ,
Seeks out the . . . of the journey,
Cuts down like a tree the . . . of the road,
. . . [ . . . s ] the supervisor,
. . . [ . . . s ] the steward.

My god, [I would stand] before you,
Would speak to you . . . , my word is a groan,
I would tell you about it, would bemoan the bitterness of my path,
[Would bewail] the confusion of . . . .

Let the wise . . . in my plans, lament will not cease,

I . . . to my friend,
I . . . to my companion.

Lo, let not my mother who bore me cease my lament before you,
Let not my sister [utter] the happy song and chant,
Let her utter tearfully my misfortunes before you,
Let my wife voice mournfully my suffering,
Let the expert singer bemoan my bitter fate.

My god, the day shines bright over the land, for me the day is black,
The bright day, the good day has . . . like the . . .,
Tears, lament, anguish, and depression are lodged within me,
Suffering overwhelms me like one who does (nothing but) weep,
(The demon of) fate in its hand . . . s me, carries off my breath of life,
The malignant sickness-demon bathes in my body,
The bitterness of my path, the e[vil] of [my . . . ],
. . . s the kindly . . . ,
. . . s the unsettled . . .
I who am not the . . . of the . . .,
I who am not the . . . of the . . .,
[L]ike . . . I . . . before you,
(lines 80-94 largely destroyed)
. . . 7 weep not.

My god, you who are my father who begot me, ///// up my face,
Li[e an innocent cow, in pity . . . the groan,
How long will you neglect me, leave me unprotected?
Like an ox, . . .
(How long) will you leave me unguided? (10^o)

They say—the sages8—a word righteous (and) straightforward:
'Never has a sinless child been born to its mother,
. . . a sinless workman has not existed from of old.'

My god, the . . . of destruction which I have . . . d against you,
The . . . of . . . which I have prepared before you,
Let them not . . . the man, the wise; utter, (my god),
words of grace upon him,
(When) the day is not (yet) bright, in my . . . , in my . . . , make me walk before you,
My impure (and) my lack-lustre . . . —touch their . . .

Utter words of grace upon him whom you . . . d on the day of wrath,
Whom you . . . d on the day . . . —pronounce joy upon him. (110)

* Literally: 'the wise men of valor.'
My god, now that you have shown me my sins . . . ,
In the gate of . . . , I would speak . . . ,
I, the young man, would confess my sins before you.

May you rain upon the assembly . . . like a cloud,
May you . . . in your chamber my groaning mother . . .
Me, the valiant, may you . . . in wisdom my groaning . . . ."

The man—his bitter weeping was heard by his god,
When the lamentation and wailing that filled him had soothed the heart of his god for the young man,
The righteous words, the artless words uttered by him, his god accepted,
The words which the young man prayerfully confessed,

Pleased the . . . , the flesh of his god, (and) his god withdrew his hand from the evil word,
. . . which oppresses the heart, . . . he embraces,

The encompassing sickness-demon, which had spread wide its wings, he swept away,
The . . . , which had smitten him like a . . . , he dissipated,
The (demon of) fate, who had been placed (there) in accordance with his sentence, he turned aside,
He turned the young man suffering into joy,
Set by him the . . . good . . . spirit (as a) watch (and) guardian,
Gave him . . . the tutelary genii of friendly mien.

[The man uttered] constantly the exaltedness of his god,
Brought forth . . . , made known . . . ,
(lines 132-137 destroyed)
. . . may he return for me,
. . . may he release,
. . . may he set straight for me."

The antiphon of the lamentation to a man's (personal) god.

*The meaning of this fragmentary line is quite uncertain; but may belong with the preceding lines rather than the following.

"It is quite uncertain which of the preceding lines formed the antiphon.
Akkadian Fable

DISPUTE BETWEEN THE TAMARISK AND THE DATE PALM

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 151-64. An Old Babylonian version of this contest, which differs in some respects from this text and the other Ashur text translated here, is preserved. See Lambert, BWL, pp. 155 f. It begins with a phrase familiar as the opening line of Sumerian literary texts from at least 2600 B.C. on: "In long-ago days, in far-off years," followed by a mythological introduction.

I

The tamarisk [opened] his mouth [saying],
"My flesh compared with [your] flesh [is . . . ]
My precious, fine climbing-belt [ . . . ]
[You] are like a slave girl who be[trays] her mistress."

The [date palm] answered proudly
". . . your pods with a rod [ . . . ]
When we call on a god [your] flesh [/> only good] against sin.
The tamarisk does not know the best of the . . . or the best of [ . . . ]."

Ditto (Tamarisk speaks). "I am better than you, a master of every craft. The farmer . . .]
All he has, the farmer has cut from the crooks of me, [ . . . ]
He makes his spade from my trunk and with the spade made from me
He opens the irrigation canal so the field gets water.
I have [ . . . ]
And for the moisture of the soil, the grain . . .

I thresh, and grain, on which people thrive, I thresh."

Ditto (Date palm speaks). "I am better than you, a master of every craft. The farmer . . .]
All he has: reins, whips, rope1 for the team and the see[der-plow]2
Harness, . . . , rope for the . . . , net for the wagon,
. . . the farmer's equipment, all there is of it, . . .
[ . . . ]."

Ditto (Tamarisk speaks). "Think of the equipment made from me in the king's palace. What . . .]
[In] the king's house. The king eats from a dish made from me, from a cup [made from me the queen drinks],
With a spoon made from me the warriors eat, from a trough made from me [ . . . ]
(And) the baker scoops out the flour. I am a weaver [beating up] the thread (and thus)
I clothe the people . . .
The . . . of the god. I am the chief exorcist and (ritually) renew the temple. [I am] indeed a fine thing
[And] can have no equal."

(1)

Ditto (Date palm speaks). "At the place of the offering to the god Sin . . . Sin the noble . . .]
The king cannot make a libation anywhere where I am not present, in . . .
Rites are performed with me, my leaves heaped up on the ground, . . .
Then the palm is also a brewer; . . [ . . . ]."

Ditto (Tamarisk speaks). "Come, let us go, you and I, to the city of Kish. . . .]
There are signs of me where the scholar works.
The [ . . . ] are not full [of . . . and]
Not full of incense. The qadishtu-woman sprinkles water and [ . . . ]
Takes [the . . . ] and they worship and hold a festival.
Then [ . . . ]
Is for the hand of the butcher and his leaves . . [ . . . ]."

Ditto (Date palm speaks). "Come, let us go, you and I, to the city of [ . . . ] Wherever there are sins, there is work for you, O Tamarisk. The carpenter with . . .
And he respects me and daily praises [me]."

(Tamarisk speaks). "Who . . .]
I bear. The shepherd boy [uses] great staves [of me]
Splits the . . . , like a reed worker who [ . . . ]
I shall rejoice in the greatness of my strength [ . . . ]
I have made you into something effective, very strong [ . . . ]."

1 Reading KU as £5 rather than T-JG. Date palm fibers were widely used for making various kinds of ropes and cords.
2 Reading y-pi-in-nil.
(Date palm speaks). "I am better than you. Six times I excel, seven times I [. . . ]
I am one who alternates3 with the goddess of grain.
For three months [. . . ]
The orphan girl, the widow, the poor man, [. . . ]
Eat without stint my sweet dates [. . . ] broken4

(rest of text damaged or destroyed)

II

In long-ago days, in far-off years*
The Fates dug the rivers;
The gods of the lands, Anu, Enlil, and Ea convened an assembly.
Enlil and the (other) gods took counsel,
Among them was seated Shamash,
Among them was seated the great lady among
the gods.
Once there was no kingship in the lands
And the rule was given to the gods.

(two lines unintelligible)
The king planted
A palm in his palace.
With it he planted a . . . tamarisk.
In the shade of the tamarisk a dinner
Was given and in the shade of the palm
The opening of . . . the way of the king.
Each other's worth [they insulted];
The tamarisk and the date palm [had a dispute].
The tamarisk (spoke) thus, "Z . . . greatly.
If the date palm is so wonderful . . .
"You, tamarisk, are a useless tree.
What are your branches? Only wood without any fruit at all!
My fruit is . . .
The gardener speaks well of me,
Of use to both slave and official.
My fruit makes the infant grow;
Grown men (also) eat my fruit."
. . . the equal of the king . . .
The equipment in the king's palace—
What made from me is to be found in the king's palace?
The king eats from a table made of me,
The queen drinks from a cup made of me.
I am a weaver and beat up the threads. [. . .]
I am the chief exorcist and purify [the house]."

(rest of text fragmentary or destroyed)

1 Perhaps referring to the difference in seasons for the ripening of grain and dates.
2 Scribal note indicating the tablet he copied from was broken.
3 This is an emendation based on similar passages.

Akkadian Proverbs and Counsels

PROVERBS

I

(4) My well does not tire (of giving water); my thirst is not too great for it. . . . (6) I am going!* shares in business; loss is unending. (7-8) You have gone. So what? You have stayed. So what? You have stood. So what? You have returned. So what?

II

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 276 f.

(8-10) And a man, so long as he does not toil, will have nothing. Who will give him something for . . . ? (13-15) He who has neither king nor queen—who is his master? He is either an animal or one who lies down

III

A. K4347+H16161_

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 239-50. The proverbs are given here according to the line numbers of Lambert

(ii 9-10) Eat no fat and you will not have blood in your excrement, (n-14) Commit no crime, and fear [of (your) god] will not consume you. (15-17) Speak no wrong and then grief [will not] reach your heart. (18-21) Do [no] evil, and then you will not experience lasting misfortune. (22-25) A scorpion stung a man. What did he get for it? [A common] informer caused a man's death. What good did it do him? (40-42) Has she become pregnant without intercourse? Has she become fat without eating? (43-44) Intercourse brings on lactation. (45-47) If I store up things, they will be robbed. If I use them up too fast, who will give anything to me? (iii 3-6) Does the reed-bed get the price of its reeds or the meadow the price of its grass? (7-10) The strong man makes his living by the work of his arms, but the weak man by selling his children. (14-16) My vagina is fine, yet it is said among my people that it is useless for me. (19-20) Do you strike the face of an ox with a thong when he is already walking? (21-24) My knees are in constant motion, my feet are tireless, yet a dull-witted person pursues me with trouble. (25-29) I am an ^«/«-donkey, yet I am yoked to an ass; I draw a chariot and suffer from the driver's stick. (50-55) I live in a house made of baked bricks (set in) bitumen, yet a lump of clay drops upon my head. Last year I ate garlic and this year my belly became inflamed, (iv 7-8) (As was) yesterday's (53-57) The enemy will not depart from the gate of a city whose weapons are not powerful, (v 10-13) Like an old oven, it is hard to change you. (14-17) You went plundered your territory. (39-40) Would you pay money [for] a pig's squeal?

B. Sm. 61

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 258 f.

(2-4) If oil is poured inside a (reed) staff, no one will know. (5-6) To give something is up to a king, to do good is up to a cup-bearer. (7-8) To give is up to a king, to do favor is up to a steward. (16-17) A resident alien in another city is a slave.

C. K. 15227 and 80-7-19, 130

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 257 f.

(11-13) A stranger's ox eats grass, but one's own ox lies down in hunger.

D. BM 98743

(5-10) A thing which has not occurred since time immemorial: a young woman broke wind in her husband's embrace.

E. VAT 10810

(6-7) The unlearned is a cart. The ignorant is his road. (10-12) Bride, (as) you treat your mother-in-law, so will women (later) treat you.

F. BM 56607

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 270 f.

(col. A 7-8) If the beer mash is sour, how can the beer be sweet? (9) A bucket floats in the river.

G. K. 8338

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, p. 255.

A variant of this proverb is attested in a collection of Sumerian proverbs from about 2600 B.C. See W. G. Lambert, "Celibacy in the World's Oldest Proverbs," BASOR, 169, p. 63 f. The old Sumerian version may be translated: "He that supports no wife, he that supports no son, may his misfortunes be multiplied."

The one who does not support a wife, who does not support a son, is a dishonest person who does not support himself.

IV

When ants are struck, they do not take it (passively), but bite the hand of the man who strikes them.

Text: R. F. Harper, ABL, 403, lines 4-7, 13-15; 652, lines 10-13. Translation: Lambert, BWL, p. 281. The first two of these proverbs are quoted by Ashurbanipal in a sarcastic letter to the Babylonians. For parallels in Ahiqar, see most recently Lambert, BWL, p. 281. The third proverb is from the time of Esarhaddon.

A common saying is: "When a potter's dog enters the kiln it will bark at the potter."

A common saying is: "In a court of law the word of a sinful woman prevails over her husband's."

As they say: "Man is the shadow of a god, and a slave is the shadow of a man; but the king is the mirror of a god."

THE INSTRUCTIONS OF SHURUPPAK

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 92-5. This text contains the advice given by Shuruppak, who survived the Flood, to his son Ziusudra (Utnapushtu in the Akkadian version). It is known in Akkadian from only a small fragment, but it is attested in Sumerian before 2500 B.C. (see R. D. Biggs, JCS, xx, p. 78, and M. Civil and R. D. Biggs, RA, LX, pp. 1-5). It is thus one of the oldest known pieces of Mesopotamian literature. The Akkadian version probably began, as does the Old Babylonian Sumerian version (see Ur Excavation Texts, vi, 169 and S. N. Kramer, Iraq, xxv, pp. 174 f.), with "On a faraway day, on a faraway night, in a faraway time." The translation is restored freely from the Sumerian versions. To judge from the Sumerian versions, the composition was originally several hundred lines in length.

Shuruppak [son of Uburtutu gave instructions], (1) To Utnapushtu [his son he gave instructions, saying], "My son, [I will give you instructions, take my instructions]; Utnapushtu, [I will give you instructions], [Do not neglect] my instructions. [Do not disobey] the words [I have spoken to you]. [One should not buy an] ass who [brays (too much)].1 [One should not locate] a cultivated field on a road [way J]. [Do not . . .] your field.

1 Reading (la) mu-taš-šu-u.
In your cultivated field [do not . . .]. (10)
Do not harm the daughter of a free man, for the courtyard will find out about it.”

COUNSELS OF WISDOM
Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 96-106.

Do not talk [with a talebearer], (21)
Do not consult [with a . . .] . . . who is an idler;
Because of your good qualities, you will be made into an example for them.
Then you will reduce your own work, forsake your path,
And will let your wise, modest opinion be perverted.
Let your mouth be restrained and your speech guarded;
(That) is a man's pride—let what you say be very precious.
Let insolence and blasphemy be an abomination for you;
Speak nothing profane nor any unjust report.
A talebearer is looked down upon.
Do not set out to stand around in the assembly.
Do not loiter where there is a dispute,
For in the dispute they will have you as an observer.
Then you will be made a witness for them, and
They will involve you in a lawsuit to affirm something that does not concern you.
In case of a dispute, get away from it, disregard it.
If a dispute involving you should flare up, calm it down.
A dispute is a covered pit,
A . . . wall which can cover over its foes.
It brings to mind what one has forgotten and makes an accusation against a man.
Do not return evil to your adversary;
Requite with kindness the one who does evil to you,
Maintain justice for your enemy,
Be friendly to your enemy.

Give food to eat, beer to drink,
Grant what is requested, provide for and treat with honor.
At this one's god takes pleasure.
It is pleasing to Shamash, who will repay him with favor.
Do good things, be kind all your days.
Do not honor a slave girl in your house;
She should not rule [your] bedroom like a wife.
. . . ., do not give yourself over [to] slave girls.
If she goes up your . . . ., you will not go down.
Let this be said [among] your people:

"The household which a slave girl rules, she disrupts."
Do not marry a prostitute, whose husbands are legion,
An ishtaritu-ujomzn who is dedicated to a god,
A ulmeshitu-woman whose . . . is much.
When you have trouble, she will not support you,
When you have a dispute she will be a mocker.
There is no reverence or submissiveness in her.
Even if she is powerful in the household, get rid of her,
For she pricks up her ears for the footsteps of another man.
Variant: Whatever household she enters (as wife) will be scattered and the one who marries her will not be stable.

My son, if it be the wish of a ruler that you belong to him,"
If you are entrusted with his closely guarded seal
Open his treasure house (and) enter it,
For no one but you may do it.
Uncounted wealth you will find inside,
But do not covet any of that,
Nor set your mind on a secret crime,
For afterwards the matter will be investigated
And the secret crime which you committed will be exposed.
The ruler will hear of it (and) will . . . ,
His happy face will . . . , (90)
(40)

Do not speak ill, speak (only) good.
Do not say evil things, speak well of people.
He who speaks ill and says evil—
People will waylay him because of his debt to Shamash.
(130)

Do not talk too freely, watch what you say;
Do not express your innermost thoughts even when you are alone.
What you say in haste you may regret later.
Exert yourself to restrain your speech.
Worship your god every day.
Sacrifice and (pious) utterance are the proper accompaniment of incense.
Have a freewill offering for your god,
For this is proper toward a god.
Prayer, supplication, and prostration
Offer him daily, then your prayer will be granted, (140)
And you will be in harmony with your god.
Since you are learned, read in the tablet:
"Reverence begets favor,

Lit.: 3,600.
Lit.: his head is small.
See CAD, sub abru adj.

Lit.: your lips.
Lit.: your staff.
Sacrifice improves life
And prayer dispels guilt.
He who worships the gods is not slighted by [ . . . ],
He who worships the Anunnaki will thus prolong [his days]."

With a friend or comrade do not speak [evil things].
Do not say unworthy things, [speak] what is good.
If you have promised something, give [ . . . ], (150)
If you have created trust, you should [ . . . ],
[And fulfill] the wish of a comrade.
[If] you have created trust in friends [ . . . ]
[Since] you are learned, [read in the tablet]:
(rest of text fragmentary)

Akkadian Observations on Life and the World Order

"I WILL PRAISE THE LORD OF WISDOM"

I will praise the lord of wisdom, the [deliberative]
Who lays hold of the night, but frees the day,
Marduk, the lord of wisdom, the [deliberative] god,
Who lays hold of the night, but frees the day,
Whose fury surrounds him like a storm wind,
But whose breeze is as pleasant as a morning zephyr,
Whose anger is irresistible, whose rage is a devastating flood,
But whose heart is merciful, whose mind forgiving,
The . . . of whose hands the heavens cannot hold back,
But whose gentle hand sustains the dying, (10)
Marduk, the . . . of whose hands the heavens cannot hold back,
But whose gentle hand sustains the dying,
(long break)
The lord [ . . . ] the confusion (41)
And the warrior Enlil[ . . . ] his . . .
My god has forsaken me and disappeared,
My goddess has cut me off and stayed removed from me.
The benevolent spirit who was (always) beside [me]
has departed,

My protective spirit has flown away and seeks someone else.
My dignity has been taken away, my manly good looks jeopardized,
My pride has been cut off, my protection has skipped off.
Terrifying omens have been brought upon me,
I was put out of my house and wandered about outside. (50)
The omens concerning me are confused, daily there is inflammation.
I cannot stop going to the diviner and dream interpreter.
What is said in the street portends ill for me.
When I lie down at night my dream is terrifying.
The king, the very flesh of the gods, the sun of his peoples,
His heart is enraged (with me) and cannot be appeased.
Even though I stand praying they . . . against me.
They gather together telling things that ought not be said.

Thus the first, "I have made him want to end his life."
The second says, "I made him vacate his post." (60)
Likewise the third, "I shall take over his position."
"I will take over his house," says the fourth.
The fifth . . .
The sixth and seventh will pursue his . . .
The group of seven has assembled their forces,
Merciless as a storm demon, they are like . . .
They are one in flesh, united in purpose.
Their hearts rage against me and they are ablaze like fire.
They agree on slander and lies about me.
They have sought to muzzle my respectful mouth. (70)
I, whose lips always prattled, have become like a mute.
My hearty shout is [reduced] to silence,
My proud head is bowed to the ground,
Fear has weakened my brave heart.
Even a youngster has turned back my broad chest.
My arms, (though once) strong, are . . .
I, who used to walk like a proud man, have learned to slip by unnoticed.

Though I was a respectable man, I have become a slave.
To my many relations I have become like a rechuse.
If I walk the street, fingers are pointed at me; (80)
If I enter the palace, eyes blink.
My own town looks on me as an enemy;
Even my land is savage and hostile.
My friend has become a stranger,
My companion has become an evil person and a demon.
In his rage my comrade denounces me,
Constantly my associate furbishes his weapons.

1 Or read "warrior of Enlil," i.e. Ninurta.
2 Reading u-ba(-)na-a-ri. See CAD, p. 3 sub faba.ru.
3 Lit.: brother.
My close friend has brought my life into danger; My slave has publicly cursed me in the assembly. . . . the crowd has defamed me.
   (90)
When someone who knows me sees me, he passes by on the other side. My family treats me as if I were not related to them, The grave is ready for anyone who speaks well of me, But he who speaks ill of me is promoted. The one who slanders me has the god's help; The . . . who says "god have mercy" when death is imminent Without delay becomes well through his protective god. I have no one to go at my side, nor have I found anyone understanding. They divided all my possessions among foreign riffraff. They stopped up the source of my canal with silt. They have stopped the joyous harvest song in my fields, And silenced my city like an enemy city. They have let another take over my duties, They appointed someone else to be present at the rites (where I should be). By day there is sighing, by night lamentation, The month is wailing, the year is gloom. I moan like a dove all day long. [Instead of singing a] song I groan loudly. My eyes are . . . [through] constant weeping, My lower eyelids are swollen [from ceaseless] tears. (110)

Tablet II
I survived to the next year; the appointed time passed. (1)
I turn around, but it is bad, very bad; My ill luck increases and I cannot find what is right. I called to my god, but he did not show his face, I prayed to my goddess, but she did not raise her head. Even the diviner with his divination could not make a prediction, And the interpreter of dreams with his libation could not elucidate my case. I sought the favor of the zaqiqu-spirit, but he would not enlighten me; The exorcist with his ritual could not appease the divine wrath against me.

What strange conditions everywhere! When I look behind (me), there is persecution, trouble. Like one who has not made libations to his god, Nor invoked his goddess when he ate, Does not make prostrations nor recognize (the necessity of) bowing down, In whose mouth supplication and prayer are lacking, Who has even neglected holy days, and ignored festivals, Who was negligent and did not observe the gods' rites, Did not teach his people reverence and worship, But has eaten his food without invoking his god, And abandoned his goddess by not bringing a flour offering, Like one who has gone crazy and forgotten his lord, Has frivolously sworn a solemn oath by his god, (like such a one) do I appear. For myself, I gave attention to supplication and prayer: My prayer was discretion, sacrifice my rule. The day for worshipping the god was a joy to my heart; The day of the goddess's procession was profit and gain to me. The king's blessing—that was my joy, And the accompanying music became a delight for me. I had my land keep the god's rites, And brought my people to value the goddess's name. (30)

I made the praise for the king like a god's, And taught the people respect for the palace. I wish I knew that these things would be pleasing to one's god! What is good for oneself may be offense to one's god, What in one's own heart seems despicable may be proper to one's god. Who can know the will of the gods in heaven? Who can understand the plans of the underworld gods? Where have humans learned the way of a god? He who was alive yesterday is dead today. One moment he is worried, the next he is boisterous. (40)

One moment he is singing a joyful song, A moment later he wails like a professional mourner. Their condition changes (as quickly as) opening and shutting (the eyes). When starving they become like corpses, When full they oppose their god. In good times they speak of scaling heaven, When they are troubled they talk of going down to hell. I am perplexed at these things; I have not been able to understand their significance. As for me, exhausted, a windstorm is driving me on! Debilitating Disease is let loose upon me: (50)

An Evil Wind has blown [from the] horizon,
Headache has sprung up from the surface of the underworld,
An Evil Cough has left its Apsu,
The Irresistible Demon has left E[ur],
[The Lamashstu-demon came] down from the Mountain,
Cramp set out [with . . . ] the flood,
Weakness breaks through the ground along with the plants.
[They all joined in] and came on me together.
[They struck] my head, they enveloped my skull;
[My] face is gloomy, my eyes flow. (60)
They have wrenched my neck muscles and made (my) neck limp.
They struck [my chest,] beat my breast.
They affected my flesh and made me shake,
[In] my epigastrium they kindled a fire.
They churned up my bowels, . . . [they] . . . my . . .
Causing the discharge of phlegm, they tired out my [lungs].
They tired out my limbs and made my fat quake.
My upright stance they knocked down like a wall,
My robust figure they laid down like a rush,
I am thrown down like a . . . and cast on my face. (70)
The alu-demon has clothed himself in my body as with a garment;
Sleep covers me like a net.
My eyes stare straight ahead, but cannot see,
My ears are open, but cannot hear.
Feebleness has overcome my whole body,
An attack of illness has fallen upon my flesh.
Stiffness has taken over my arms,
Weakness has come upon my knees,
My feet forget their motion.
[A stroke] has got me; I choke like someone prostrate.
Death has [approached] and has covered my face.
If someone is concerned about me, I am not even able to answer the one who inquires.
[My . . . ] weep, but I cannot control myself.
A snare is laid on my mouth,
And a bolt keeps my lips barred.
My "gate" is barred, my "drinking place" blocked,
My hunger is . . . , my windpipe constricted.
I eat grain as though it were a vile thing,
Beer, the sustenance of mankind, is distasteful to me.
My malady is indeed protracted. (80)
Through not eating, my looks have become strange,
My flesh is flaccid, and my blood has ebbed away.
My bones look separated, and are covered (only) with my skin.
My flesh is inflamed, and the . . . -disease has afflicted me.

I have taken to a bed of bondage; going out is a pain;
My house has become my prison.
My arms are powerless—my own flesh is a manacle,
My feet are fallen flat—my own person is a fetter.
My afflictions are grievous, my wound is severe.
A whip full of needles has struck me, the goad that pricked me was covered with barbs.
All day long the tormentor torments [me],
And at night he does not let me breathe easily for a minute.
Through twisting my joints are parted,
My limbs are splayed and knocked apart.
I spent the night in my dung like an ox,
And wallowed in my excrement like a sheep.
My symptoms are beyond the exorcist,
And my omens have confused the diviner.
The exorcist could not diagnose the nature of my sickness,
Nor could the diviner set a time limit on my illness.
My god has not come to the rescue nor taken me by the hand;
My goddess has not shown pity on me nor gone by my side.
My grave was waiting, and my funerary paraphernalia ready,
Before I was even dead lamentation for me was finished.
All my country said, "How he is crushed!"
The face of him who gloats lit up when he heard,
The news reached her who gloats, and her heart rejoiced.
I know the day for my whole family,
When, among my friends, their Sun-god will have mercy. (120)

Tablet III

His hand was heavy upon me, I could not bear it. (1)
My dread of him was alarming, it [ . . . me ]
His fierce wind® brought on a destructive flood.
His stride was . . . , it [ . . . . ]
. . . the severe illness does not [leave] my person,
I forget wakefulness, it makes [my mind] stray.
Both day and night I groan,
Whether awake or dreaming I am equally miserable.
A remarkable young man of outstanding physique,
Splendid in body, clothed in new garments—
Since in waking moments . . .
Clad in splendor, robed in dread,
(The rest of the first dream is mainly destroyed.)
A second time [I had a dream,]
And in the dream I had at night

8 Reading iffanni. See CAD, sub fillA.
9 Reading labiat. See CAD, sub xiqtu A.
10 See AHtu, sub erutu.

{598}
A remarkable priest\[1\] was . . .
Holding in his hand a piece of purifying tamarisk wood.
"Laluralimma, resident of Nippur,
Has sent me to purify you."
The water he was carrying he poured over me,
Recited the life-restoring incantation, and massaged [my body],
A third time I had a dream,
And in the dream I had at night
A remarkable young woman of shining countenance,
. . . . . . equal to a god.
A queen of the peoples . . .[. . .]
She entered and [sat down . . .]
"Fear not," she said, "I [will . . . you]."
. . . had a dream [. . .
She said, "Be delivered from your very wretched state, Whoever has had a vision during the night."
In the dream Urnindinlugga, [. . .] A bearded young man wearing a head covering, (40)
An exorcist, carrying a (cuneiform) tablet,
"Marduk has sent me.
To Shubshi-meshre-Shakkan I have brought prosperity,
From Marduk's pure hands I have brought prosperity."
He (Marduk) had entrusted me into the hands of my ministrant.
[«] waking hours he sent a message
And showed his favorable sign to my people.
In the . . . sickness [. . .]
My illness was quickly over and [my . . .] broken.
After the mind of my Lord had quietened (50)
And the heart of merciful Marduk rejoiced,
[After he had] received my prayers [. . .]
To whom turning is pleasant.
(4)

(599)
He wiped away the . . . and cleansed its filth. (j)
My gloomy appearance was made light. (k)
Beside the river, where people's lawsuits are decided, (l)
Half my body was stricken, but I was freed from the fetters.\(^{16}\) (m) (n)
I proceeded along the Kunush-kadru Street—free (from my afflictions). (o)
He who has done wrong in respect to Esagil, 17 let him learn from me! (p)
It was Marduk who put a muzzle on the mouth of the lion who was eating me. (q)
It was Marduk who took away the sling of the one who was pursuing me and turned back his sling-stone. (r)
(The rest of the text is badly damaged or destroyed.)

Tablet IV
The Lord . . . me,  (i)
The Lord took hold of me,
The Lord set me on my feet,
The Lord restored me to health,
He rescued me [from the pit],
He summoned me [from] destruction,
[. . .] he pulled me from the Hubur river,
[. . .] he took my hand.
[The one who] (once) struck me down,
Marduk, (now) raised me up. (10)
He struck the hand of the one who struck me;
It was Marduk who made him drop his weapon.
(a number of lines damaged and missing)
The feast of the Babylonians . . .[. . .]
The grave I had made . . . at the banquet.
The Babylonians saw how [Marduk] restores to health,
And all mouths proclaim [his] greatness: (30)
Who would have thought that he would see his Sun?
Who would have thought that he would walk along his street?
Who but Marduk could have restored the dying to life?
Apart from Sarpanitum which goddess could have granted life?
Marduk can even restore to life someone already in the grave,
Sarpanitum knows how to save from destruction.
Wherever the earth is laid, and the heavens are extended,
Wherever the sun god shines, and the fire god blazes,
Wherever water flows and winds blow,
Creatures whose clay Aruru took in her fingers,\(^{18}\) Those endowed with life, who walk about,

Humanity, all of it, gives praise to Marduk!
[. . .] . . . who give utterance,
[. . .] may he rule all the peoples,
[. . .] shepherd of all inhabited places.
[. . .] the beneficial waters from the deep,
[. . .] the gods [ . . ]
[. . .] the extent of heaven and [earth].

(some lines damaged or destroyed)
[. . .] which with my prayers [. . .] (76)
[With] prostration and supplication [// entered] into the temple Esagil.
[I who went] down to the grave have returned to the "Gate of the [Sun Rise]."\(^{19}\)
In the "Gate of Prosperity" prosperity was [given to me].
In the "Gate of the . . . Guardian Spirit" a guardian spirit came [up to me], (80)
[In the] "Gate of Well-being" I found well-being,
In the "Gate of Life" I was granted life,
In the "Gate of the Sun Rise" I was reckoned among the living,
In the "Gate of Splendid Wonderment" the omens concerning me were very plain,
In the "Gate of Release of Guilt" I was released from my bond,
In the "Gate of Worship" my mouth made inquiry,
In the "Gate of Resolving of Sighs" my sighs were resolved,
In the "Gate of Pure Water" I was sprinkled with water of purification,
In the "Gate of Well-being" I communed with Marduk,
In the "Gate of Exuberance" I kissed\(^{20}\) the foot of the goddess Sarpanitum.

I persisted in supplication and prayer before them,
Sweet incense I placed before them,
I presented an offering, a gift, accumulated donations,
I slaughtered fat oxen, and butchered fattened sheep,
I repeatedly libated honey-sweetened beer and pure wine.
The protecting genius and guardian spirit, divine attendants of the brickwork of Esagil,
[With] libation I made their hearts glow,
[With] the many [meals] I made them joyful.
[The threshold, the bolt] socket, the bolt, the doors,
[I offered] oil, butter, and choicest grain. (\(^{10}\))
[. . .] . . . the rites of the temple.

THE DIALOGUE OF PESSIMISM

\(^{19}\) A number of these gates are known from other texts referring to Babylon. See Lambert, BWL, p. 301.

\(^{20}\) Or, reading an-na-bi\(\) (see CAD, A/i, p. 9), translate "I fell at."
(I) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." "Quickly, get me a chariot and hitch it up so that I can drive to the palace." "Drive, master, drive [ . . . ] will be for you; [ . . . ] will show favor to you." (5) "No, servant. I will not drive to the palace." "Do not drive, master, do not drive. [ . . . ] will send you [ . . . ] and will make you take a [road] that you do not know; he will make you suffer agony [day and night]."

(II) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." "Quickly, get me water (to wash) my hands and give it to me so that I can dine." "Dine, master, dine. Continental dining expands the mind. [ . . . ] is his god's food; Shamash accompanies (the one with) washed hands." "No, servant. I will not dine." (15) "Do not dine, master, do not dine. To become hungry (and then) to drink is best for man."

(III) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." "Quickly, get me a chariot and hitch it up so that I can drive to the open country." "Drive, master, drive. A hunter gets his belly filled. (20) The hunting dogs will break the bones (of the prey), the hunter's falcon will alight, the fleeting wild ass will get its fill in the [open country]." "No, servant. I will not [drive] to the open country." "Do not drive, master, do not drive. (25) The hunter's idea changes; the hunting dog's teeth will get broken, the home of the hunter's falcon is in the [ . . . ] of the wall of his house and the habitat of the fleeting wild ass is the steppe."

(IV) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." (30) "I am going to set up a [household and have] children." "Do have some, [master], do have some. [The man who sets] up a household [ . . . ] a door called 'The Snare.' [ . . . ] robust, two-thirds a weakling." "[ . . . ] I will burn, go and return. (35) I shall wait for my adversary (in a legal case)." "So wait, master, wait." "So, so, I will set up a household." "Do not establish a household. One who does this breaks up his father's household."

(V) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." (40) "I will do something dishonest." "So, do, do. Unless you do something dishonest, where will your clothing come from? Who will give you something to fill your belly?" "No, servant, I shall not do anything dishonest." "The man who does something dishonest is either killed or flayed, (45) either has his eyes put out, or is captured, or is imprisoned."

(VI) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." "I am going to make love to a woman." "So make love, master, make love. The man who makes love to a woman forgets sorrow and worry." "No, servant, I will not make love to a woman." (50) "Do not make love, master, do not make love. A woman is a pitfall, a hole, a ditch, a woman is a sharp iron dagger that slits a man's throat."

(VII) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." "Quickly, get me water (to wash) my hands, please, (55) so I can sacrifice to my god." "Sacrifice, master, sacrifice. The mind of the man who sacrifices to his god is at ease. He is making loan upon loan." "No, servant, I will not sacrifice to my god." "Do not sacrifice, master, do not sacrifice. (60) You get your god to follow you about like a dog, whether he wants you to perform rites or (says) 'Do not consult your god,' or anything else."

(VIII) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." "I am going to make loans." "So, make loans, master, make loans. The man who makes loans—his grain remains his grain and the interest is in addition." (65) "No, servant, I will not make loans." "Do not make loans, master, do not make loans. Making loans is as [easy] as making love, but repaying them is as hard as bearing a child. They will use up your loan and keep complaining about you without stopping and will make you lose your interest as well."

(IX) "Servant, listen to me." "Yes, master, yes." (70) "I will do a good deed for my country." "So do, master, do. The man who does a good deed for his country has his good deeds put in the [ . . . ] of Marduk." "No, servant, I will not do a good deed for my country." (75) "Do not do it, master, do not do it. Go up to the ancient ruin and let you go first." "Then (I swear that) my master and let you go first." "Then (I swear that) my master will not outlive me by even three days."

THE BABYLONIAN THEODICY

Text and translation: Lambert, BWL, pp. 63-91. Modern understanding of this poem is due in large measure to the penetrating study of B. Landsberger, ZA, XLIII, pp. 32-76.

The Theodicy is an acrostic poem of twenty-seven stanzas of eleven lines each, not all of which are preserved, and takes the form of a dialogue. The acrostic reads: a-na-[u] sa-ag-gi-tl-[/-na-am-aj]-b-bi-ib ma-ds-ma-su a-ra-bu la i1qi & sar-ri, c1 Saggil-kinam-ubbib, the exorcist, am an adorant of the god and the king.

Sufferer I

O sage [ . . . ] come, [let] me tell you. (1) [ . . . let] me inform you.

1 See CAD, sub samu.v.
2 See Lambert, BWL, p. 324.
3 Ibid.
4 Reading i-seb-[bi ina ED]IN. Cf. CAD, sub a'ifannu.
5 See CAD, sub aladu, p. 288.
6 Lit.: eat your grain.
[...] ...[...] ...you,
I [...], who suffered greatly, will not cease to reverence you.
Where is the wise man of your caliber?
Where is the scholar who can rival you?
Where is the counsellor to whom I can relate my trouble?
I am finished. Anguish has come upon me.
When I was still a child, fate took my father;
My mother who bore me went to the Land of No Return.
My father and mother left me without anyone to be my guardian.

Friend II
Respected friend, what you say is sad.
Dear friend, you have let your mind dwell on evil.
You have made your good sense like that of an incompetent person;
You have changed your beaming face to scowls.
Our fathers do indeed give up and go the way of death.
It is an old saying that they cross the river Hubur.
When you look upon all of mankind... it is not... that has made the impoverished first-born rich.
Who prefers as a favorite the rich man? (20)
He who looks to his god has a protective spirit;
The humble man who fears his goddess accumulates wealth.

Sufferer III
My friend, your mind is a spring whose depth has not been found,
The high swell of the sea, which does not subside.
I will ask you a question; listen to what I say.
Pay attention for a moment; hear my words.
My body is... hunger is my fear;¹
My success has vanished, my stability has gone.
My strength is weakened, my prosperity has ended,
Moaning and trouble have darkened my features. (30)
The grain of my fields is far from satisfying [me],
Beer, the people's sustenance,... is far from being enough for me.

Can a life of happiness be assured? I wish I knew how!

Friend IV
What I say is restrained, ...[...]
But you [...] your reason contrarily.
You make [...] diffuse and irrational,
You [turn] your select... blind.
As to your persistent unending desire for [...] [The former] security... [is...] by prayers.
The appeased goddess returns with [...] (40)
¹ Reading ha-a-ti with von Soden, Altu, sub hatu.
² Reading nab-lat. See Altu, sub nablatu.

[...] without setting things aright, takes pity on [...] Ever seek the [correct standards] of justice.
Your... the mighty one, will show kindness, [...] will grant mercy.

Sufferer V
I have bowed to you, my [comrade], I have taken your...[...]
[...]... the utterance of [...] [your...].
[...]... come, let me [say something to you].
The onager, the wild ass, who filled itself with...
Did it pay attention to the giver of assured divine oracles?
The savage lion who devoured the choicest meat, (50)
Did it bring its flour offering to appease the god-dess's anger?
... the prominent person who has multiplied his wealth,
Did he weigh out precious gold for the goddess Mami?
[Have I] withheld offerings? I have prayed to my god,
I have pronounced the blessing over the goddess's regular sacrifices, ...

Friend VI
O date palm, tree that gives wealth, my precious brother, Endowed with all wisdom, jewel of [...] You are as stable as the earth, but the plan of the gods is remote.
Look at the superb wild ass on the [plain;]
The arrow will turn to the gorer who trampled down the fields. (60)
Come, consider the lion that you mentioned, the enemy of cattle,
For the deed which the lion did the pit awaits him.
The opulent prominent person who heaps up goods
Will be burned to death by the king before his time.
Would you wish to go the way these have gone?
Rather seek the lasting reward of (your) god!

Sufferer VII
Your mind is the north wind, a pleasant breeze for the people.
Dearest friend, your advice is good.
Just one word would I put before you.
Those who do not seek the god go the way of prosperity, (70)
While those who pray to the goddess become destitute and impoverished.
In my youth I tried to find the will of my god;
With prostration and prayer I sought my goddess.
But I was pulling a yoke in a useless corvee.
My god decreed poverty instead of wealth (for me).
A cripple does better than I, a dullard keeps ahead of me.
The rogue has been promoted, but I have been brought low.
Friend VIII
My just, knowledgeable friend, your thoughts are perverse.
You have now forsaken justice and blaspheme against your god's plans.
In your mind you think of disregarding the divine ordinances.
[. . . ] the sound rules of (your) goddess.
The clever plans of the god [are . . .] like the center of heaven,
The decrees of the goddess are not . . .
. . . humanity has learned well,\(^b\)
Their ideas [ . . . ] to mankind;
To grasp the way of a goddess [ . . .]
Their reason is close at hand [ . . .]

(stanzas IX-XI11 lacking or badly damaged)

Sufferer XIII
I will abandon my home [ . . . ] \(^{133}\)
I will desire no property [ . . . ]
I will disregard my god's regulations and trample on his rites.
I will slaughter a calf and will . . . the food,
I will take the road and go to distant places,
I will dig a well and let loose a flood,
I will roam over the remote open country like a robber.
I will go from house to house to ward off my hunger;
I will search in hunger and roam the streets.
Like a beggar I will [ . . .] inwards [ . . .]
Happiness is far away . . . [ . . .]

(stanza XIV badly damaged)

Sufferer XV
The daughter speaks [unjust things]\(^a\) to her mother.
The fowler who casts [his net] is fallen.
All in all, which person [has] success?
The many wild creatures which . . . [ . . .]
Which among them has [ . . . ]?
Should I seek a son and daughter [ . . . ]?
May I not lose what I find . . . [ . . .]

Friend XVI
Humble and submissive one . . . [ . . .]
Your will ever submits [ . . .] precious.

(rest of stanza damaged or missing)

Sufferer XVII
The crown prince is clothed in [rags]
The son of the destitute and naked is clad in [fine garments]

\(^a\) See CAD, sub apdu.
\(^b\) Restoring la it-ta.

The one who keeps watch over the malt (as it dries)
[accumulates] gold.
The one who measures out the red gold must bear the
[. . .]
The one who (normally) eats only vegetables\(^2\) [eats]
the dinner of a noble.
The son of the important and the rich has only a carob to eat.
The rich man is fallen. [His wealth] is far away.

(stanzas XVIII and XIX badly damaged)

Friend XX
You have let your cunning mind go astray. \(^{212}\)
[. . .] you have scorned wisdom, [. . .] you despise what is proper, you profane the ordinances.
[. . .] . . . the carrying-hod is far away from him.
[. . .] is made into a person of influence,
[. . .] is called a savant;
He is looked after and gets what he wants.
Follow in the way of the god, observe his rites,
[. . .] is considered righteousness. \(^{220}\)

(stanza XXI badly damaged)

Friend XXII
As for the rogue whose favor you want, \(^{235}\)
His . . . soon vanishes.
The rogue who has acquired wealth [in a manner] which is against the will of the gods
Is persecuted by a murderer's weapon.
Unless you seek the will of the god, what success can you have?
He that bears his god's yoke never lacks food, even though it be sparse. \(^{240}\)
Seek the favorable breath of the god,
What you have lost in a year you will make up in a moment.

Sufferer XXIII
I have looked around in the world, but things are turned around.
The god does not impede the way of even a demon.
A father tows a boat along the canal,
While his son lies in bed.
The eldest son makes his way like a lion,
The second son is happy to be a mule driver.
The heir goes about along the streets like a peddler,
The younger son (has enough) that he can give food to the destitute.

\(^2\) Meat was rarely eaten except on the occasion of major festivals, and was probably very rarely eaten by the poor.
The rich and opulent treat me, as a youngest brother, with contempt.

Friend XXIV
O wise one, O savant, who masters knowledge,
Your heart has become hardened and you accuse the god wrongly.
The mind of the god, like the center of the heavens, is remote;
Knowledge of it is very difficult; people cannot know it.
Among all the creatures whom Aruru formed
Why should the oldest offspring be so ... ?
In the case of a cow, the first calf is a runt, (260)
The later offspring is twice as big.
A first child is born a weakling,
But the second is called a mighty warrior.
Though it is possible to find out what the will of the god is, people do not know how to do it.

Sufferer XXV
Pay attention, my friend, understand my clever ideas,
Heed my carefully chosen words.
People extol the word of a strong man who has learned to kill
But bring down the powerless who has done no wrong.
They confirm (the position of) the wicked for whom what should be an abomination is considered right (270)
Yet drive off the honest man who heeds the will of his god.
They fill the [storehouse] of the oppressor with gold,
But empty the larder of the beggar of its provisions.
They support the powerful, whose ... is guilt,
But destroy the weak and trample the powerless.
And as for me, an insignificant person, a prominent person persecutes me.

Friend XXVI
Narru, king of the gods, who created mankind,
And majestic Zulummar, who pinched off the clay for them,
And goddess Mami, the queen who fashioned them,
Gave twisted speech to the human race.
With lies, and not truth, they endowed them forever. (280)
Solemnly they speak favorably of a rich man,
"He is a king," they say, "riches should be his,"
But they treat a poor man like a thief,
They have only bad to say of him and plot his murder,
Making him suffer every evil like a criminal, because he has no . . .
Terrifyingly they bring him to his end, and extinguish him like glowing coals.

Akkadian Oracles and Prophecies
AN OLD BABYLONIAN ORACLE FROM URUK

This text, found in the palace of Sin-kashid of Uruk (about 1850 B.C.), apparently refers to the revival of Uruk under the Sin-kashid dynasty, and it may be he who is addressed (albeit in the third person) at the beginning and the end of the text. The "I" of the text, who is not identified, does not disclose the means of the goddess's appearance to him, but quite possibly it was in a dream. The text, which has many grammatical inconsistencies, is so poorly preserved at the end that most of the goddess's final speech, obviously the most important, is unintelligible.

The faithful shepherd, whose name is good, whose guardian angel is permanent, entered the temple Eanna—from now on well-being will be before him, vigor behind him. (6) From a day Nanaya2 visited me and had me sit down in the doorway of the god Sin, her father: She spoke, saying: (10) "Until I have established a faithful shepherd and revived dead Uruk you shall grind the ration of Uruk. Great Uruk will be given to me. Town and temple I will take over (15) when the faithful shepherd has been designated for the land." I spoke saying: "Dead Uruk has revived and the faithful shepherd concerning whom a command came from you (20) has been established . . . ." She spoke saying: "When I reestablish Uruk ..., and as for the faithful shepherd ..., to me . . . . (25) Sit down, do not move . . . ., keep the . . . ." The words which Ishtar said to me—Let my lord pay attention to what I say. Let him retain my words (30) so he may attain the wishes of the god.

1 For prophecies from Man see pp. 623-25, 629-31.
2 A goddess of love who is probably a form of Ishtar. She is apparently referred to as Ishtar below in line 27.
3 Reading «(!). The same emendation is made in several other lines.
ORACLES CONCERNING ESARHADDON

(i 5) [Esarhadd]don, king of the lands, fear not! That wind which blows against you—I need only say a word and I can bring it to an end. Your enemies, (10) like a (young) boar in the month of Simanu, will flee even at your approach. I am the great Belet—I am the goddess Ishtar of Arbela, she who (15) has destroyed your enemies at your mere approach. What order have I given you which you did not rely upon? I am Ishtar of Arbela. (20) I shall lie in wait for your enemies, I shall give them to you. I, Ishtar of Arbela, will go before you and I am Ishtar of Arbela! (20) I shall lie in wait for your enemies, I shall give them to you. I, Ishtar of Arbela, will go before you and I am Ishtar of Arbela. (25) Fear not! You who are paralyzed (saying), "Only in crying Woe can I either get up or sit down."

(This oracle is) from* the woman Ishtar-latashiat (30) of Arbela.

O king of Assyria, fear not! The enemy of the king of Assyria I will deliver to slaughter, (i 34-40 and ii 1-8 are too fragmentary for translation.)

(This oracle is) from the woman Sin-qisha-amur of Arbela.

(11) I rejoice over Esarhaddon, my king; Arbela rejoices! (This oracle is) from the woman Rimute-allate of the town Darahuya (15) which is in the mountains.

(16) Fear not, Esarhaddon! I, the god Bel, am speaking to you. (20) I watch over your inner heart* who are (now) behind will (soon) be the leaders. I am your good shield. O Esarhaddon, legitimate heir, son of the goddess Ninlil! I am . . . for you. With my own hands, your foes (10) I shall annihilate, (lines II and 12 obscure) O Esarhaddon, in the city Ashur I shall grant you long days, endless years. O Esarhaddon, in Arbela I am your good shield. O Esarhaddon, legitimate heir, son of the goddess Ninlil, I am thinking of you. I love [you] very much, (lines 26-39 obscure)

(v 1-3 obscure) I will cut to pieces before him those who speak . . . blasphemies, (lines 8 and 9 obscure)

(10) (This oracle is) from the woman Ishtar-bel-dayani, the . . . of the king.

(12) I, the Lady of Arbela, [say] to the king’s mother: "Because you have complained against me saying 'He who is at the right and he who is at the left? you hold on your lap, but where is my own offspring? You make him run about (unprotected) in the open country!'"

Now, O king, fear not! Yours is the kingship! Yours is the might! (24-25) (This oracle is) from the woman Belit-abisha of Arbela.

(26) Greeting to Esarhaddon, king of Assyria! Ishtar of Arbela has gone out to the open country. Greeting to her son (i.e., the king)! You will send into the city . . . (lines 31-35 and vi 1-4 destroyed or badly damaged)

(vi 4) [. . . with which Ishtar] of Arbela fills his arms. Why did you not act on the earlier oracle which I gave you to you? Now you should act on this later one. Praise me! When the day declines, let them hold torches facing (me). Praise me! (20) I will make the riffraff go out of my palace. You shall eat the best food and drink the best water. You shall live well in your palace. Your son and your grandson will exercise rule on the lap of the god Ninurta.

(30) (This oracle is) from the man La-dagal-il of Arbela.

A LETTER TO ASHURBANIPAL

midwife* who helped at your birth), (25) the one who gave you suck, who has established your rule under the wide heavens for many days, endless years; from a golden chamber in the heavens I will watch. I will light a lamp of elmeshu-stone for Esarhaddon, king of Assyria. (35) I will watch him like my very own crown. Fear not, O king! Because I have spoken to you (in an oracle), (40) I will not abandon you. (iv 1) Because I have encouraged you, I shall not let you come to shame. I will help you cross the river safely. (5) O Esarhaddon, legitimate heir, son of the goddess Ninlil! I am . . . for you. With my own hands, your foes (10) I shall annihilate, (lines II and 12 obscure) O Esarhaddon, in the city Ashur I shall grant you long days, endless years. O Esarhaddon, in Arbela I am your good shield. O Esarhaddon, legitimate heir, son of the goddess Ninlil, I am thinking of you. I love [you] very much, (lines 26-39 obscure)

(v 1-3 obscure) I will cut to pieces before him those who speak . . . blasphemies, (lines 8 and 9 obscure)

(10) (This oracle is) from the woman Ishtar-bel-dayani, the . . . of the king.

(12) I, the Lady of Arbela, [say] to the king’s mother: "Because you have complained against me saying 'He who is at the right and he who is at the left? you hold on your lap, but where is my own offspring? You make him run about (unprotected) in the open country!'"

Now, O king, fear not! Yours is the kingship! Yours is the might! (24-25) (This oracle is) from the woman Belit-abisha of Arbela.

(26) Greeting to Esarhaddon, king of Assyria! Ishtar of Arbela has gone out to the open country. Greeting to her son (i.e., the king)! You will send into the city . . . (lines 31-35 and vi 1-4 destroyed or badly damaged)

(vi 4) [. . . with which Ishtar] of Arbela fills his arms. Why did you not act on the earlier oracle which I gave you to you? Now you should act on this later one. Praise me! When the day declines, let them hold torches facing (me). Praise me! (20) I will make the riffraff go out of my palace. You shall eat the best food and drink the best water. You shall live well in your palace. Your son and your grandson will exercise rule on the lap of the god Ninurta.

(30) (This oracle is) from the man La-dagal-il of Arbela.

A LETTER TO ASHURBANIPAL

* li: from the mouth of.

* With a single exception, all oracles quoted in this text come from women.

* li: the beams of your heart.
AN ORACULAR DREAM CONCERNING
ASHURBANIPAL

(v 46) The goddess Ishtar heard my anxious sighs and said "Fear not!" and gave me confidence, (saying) "Since you have lifted your hands in prayer and your eyes have filled with tears, I have had mercy." During the night in which I appeared before her, (50) a iabrti-priest lay down and had a dream. He awoke with a start and then Ishtar caused him to see a nocturnal vision. He reported to me as follows: "The goddess Ishtar who dwells in Arbelah came in. Right and left quivers were suspended from her. She was holding a bow in her hand, (55) and a sharp sword was drawn to do battle. You were standing in front of her and she spoke to you like a real mother. Ishtar called to you, she who is most exalted among the gods, giving you the following instructions: 'Wait with the attack; (for) wherever you intend to go, I am also ready to go.' You said to her, 'Wherever you go, I will go with you, O god of goddesses!' She repeated her command to you as follows: 'You shall stay here where you should be.' (65) Eat, drink wine, make merry, praise my divinity, while I go and accomplish that work to help you attain your heart's desire. Your face will not be pale, nor your feet shaky, and you need not wipe off your (cold) sweat in the height of battle.' She wrapped you in her lovely babysling, protecting your entire body. Her face shone like fire. Then [she went out in a frightening way] to defeat your enemies, (75) against Teumman, king of Elam, with whom she was angry."

PROPHECIES

For the view that these "prophecies" should be considered simply omen apodotes rather than prophecies, see R. D. Biggs, Iraq, xxiii, pp. 177 ff. W. W. Hallo, IEJ, vii (1957), pp. 233-42, proposes that they be considered apocalyptic texts. Note that this text, like CT, xiii, 50 and duplicates (see Grayson and Lambert, JCS, xviii, pp. 16-19, and Biggs, Iraq, xxiii, pp. 177-28), begins (col. i 1-8) with a mythological introduction in the style of an omen protasis.

[That ruler's days will be short. That land [will have another ruler]. (1)

A ruler will arise, he will rule for eighteen years. The country will live safely, the interior of the country will be happy, the people will have abundance. The gods will make beneficial decisions for the country, favorable winds will blow. The date palm and the furrow will bring in good yield. Shakkan^ and Nisaba^ will . . . in the land. There will be (favorable) rain and high water, the people of the land will observe a festival. That ruler will be killed in an uprising.

A ruler will arise, he will rule for thirteen years. (8) There will be an attack of Elam against Akkad, and The booty of Akkad will be carried off. The temples of the great gods will be destroyed, the defeat of Akkad will be decreed (by the gods). There will be confusion, disturbance, and unhappy events in the land, and

The reign will diminish (in power); another man, whose name is not mentioned (as a successor) will arise, and

Will seize the throne as king and will put to death his officials. He will fill with the corpses of half the army the lowlands of Tupliash, Plain and level ground, and

The people of the land will experience a severe famine.

A ruler will arise, his days will be few, and he will not rule the land. (19)}
A ruler [will arise], he will rule for three years. (20)
The canals [of that land] will fill up with silt,
(rest of column damaged or destroyed)

[A ruler will arise, he will rule for ... years].
(Several lines destroyed)
That king [will rule] all the regions. (2)
His people will [have] abundance and . . . .
The regular offerings for the Igigi-gods which had ceased he will re-establish, the gods [will . . . .]
Favorable winds will blow, [there will be] abundance, and . . . . in [the land.]
Cattle [will lie down] safely in the open.
The vegetation of winter [will last] through the summer,
the vegetation of summer will last through the winter.
The offspring of the domestic animals [will thrive].

A ruler will arise, he will rule for eight years.
(rest of obverse destroyed)

A ruler will arise, he [will rule] for three years. (2)
The remainder of the people [will return to their homes].
Abandoned cities will be re-inhabited. [. . . .]

There will be rebellions, and then [. . . .]
For Akkad [there will be] enmity, [. . . .]
The rites of Ekur and of Nippur will [be transferred] to [another] country.
The . . . of Enlil will [return] to Nippur.
That ruler [will defeat] the land of Amurru.

A ruler will arise, he will [rule] for eight years. (10)
The temples of the gods [will be restored], at the advice [of the king]
The rites of the great gods [will be restored].
[There will be] (favorable) rain and high water in the land.
The people who have experienced evil [will experience good].
The rich will become poor, the poor will become rich.

The one who was rich will stretch out his hand to the poor.
. . . ., the mother will speak what is right to her daughter.
[The elders] will sit and will give advice to the land.
[Locusts will arise] and devour the land, the king will [bring] hard times upon his land.
(rest of text too damaged for translation)

* Reading [BURCRQLA 2[1]))-ma.
VII. Lamentations
Lamentation over the Destruction of Sumer and Ur

This outstanding composition, that is of no little significance for the history of Sumer as well as for its religion and culture, consists of over 500 lines, of which about 400 are fairly well preserved. It is divided into five Ēruğû, or stanzas, of unequal length. The first of these, which consists of 115 lines, begins with a detailed account of the tragic fate decreed by the four leading deities of the Sumerian pantheon—An, Enlil, Enki, and Ninursag—for Sumer and its people: the subversion of the rules for the history of Sumer as well as for its religion and culture, that were concerned with the institution of kingship; the destruction of cities and houses, of stalls and sheepfolds; the drying up of rivers and canals and the sterility of the fields and steppe; the disruption of family life; the removal of kingship to a foreign land; the suppression of oracles, the ill-treatment by Nanna himself of his temple and people, leading to the expulsion of the inhabitants of Ur and the introduction of foreign offerings into its shrines by the Su-people1 and the Elamites who took their place; the seizure of the terrified Ibbi-Sin and his forcible abdication to Elam whence he never returned to his homeland; the cessation of all travel and commercial intercourse between the ruined cities; the massacre of the inhabitants; the discontinuance of all sowing and plowing in field and steppe, as well as all activities concerned with animal husbandry; the wasting away of all growth from marsh and swamp, from orchard and garden; the utter prostration of Ur, the city famed for its lordship and kingship (lines 1-57).

The poet next turns to the bitter events that followed in the wake of the cruel decision taken by the gods against Sumer: seven of Sumer’s leading deities turned against the land and brought harm to it, each in his own fashion (lines 58-64); the land was overtaken by a calamity the like of which was unknown to man, one that brought terror and chaos in its wake, namely, the deluge-like invasion of the Gutians who laid waste everything in their path (lines 65-80), bringing with them bloody days of wreckage when even heaven and earth were consumed and utter darkness held sway and the dead of Sumer lay heaped up on land and filled the Euphrates (lines 81-97); those who succeeded in escaping with their lives abandoned wife and child, home and property (98-102); Sumer was in a state of utter anarchy, its king lived in fear and anguish in his palace, and all about it was nothing but death and destruction (lines 103-115).

In the second Ēruğû, the poet takes up the destruction of Sumer city by city from north to south, thus2: Kish and Hurush, that suffered drought and famine (lines 119-122); Kazallu that suffered drought and famine and was abandoned by its tutelary deity Lugalmardia (lines 136-138); Lisan deprived of its quays because of the dearth of water (lines 139-141); Nippur and its shrine Duranki, smitten by its own great god Enlil (lines 142-145); Kesh and Adab which the Gutians took over as their own (lines 146-151); Zabalam and its destroyed giguna, and Erech from whose Eanna-temple Inanna herself was carried off into captivity (lines 152-157); Umma and its shrines Siggursag and Ninnah forsaken by its tutelary deities (lines 158-161); the Lagash complex (Girsu, Ninnar, Kinurshe, Nina) burned and looted by the Elamites (lines 162-187); the settlements of the Edanna of Nanna whose fleeing inhabitants were destroyed by wild beasts (lines 188-190); Gaesh, a sacred suburb of Ur, whose statues, dais and throne were broken to bits (lines 191-198); Ashashu, whose “assembly house was emptied” (lines 199-202); Abrig, destroyed like a stall (lines 203-208); the ēgidda (of the city Ennig) smitten by its tutelary deity Ninazu (lines 209-212); Gishbanda abandoned by Ningishzida and Azimua, its two city-gods (lines 213-216); HA abandoned by Asarluhi and Lugalbanda (lines 217-223); Eridu abandoned by Enki and crushed by the Gutians (lines 224-233);3 Ur, the capital, destroyed by the Elamites and the Tidunmutes4 (lines 254-263); Kasiga, the city destroyed by the Elamites, whence the fettered Dumuzi departed to the nether world accompanied by the wailing “queen” (lines 266-282).

Following a break of 11 lines, part of which began the third Ēruğû, we find the poet turning from Sumer as a whole to Ur, its capital. He bewails the suffering of its people, king, and priests through famine: there was no grain, beer, or cattle for food and sacrifices (lines 297-318); the canals were dry, the quays were desolate, and no offerings could be sent to Nippur for the ritual feasts and celebrations (lines 319-329); the stalls of Nanna were despoiled, and its sacred cows were carried off by the barbarous enemy so that there was not fat and milk for the temple (lines 330-339). All this, according to our poet, was too much for Ur’s city-god, Nanna-Sin, who now turns to his father Enlil and pleads with him to look with favor on Ur, multiply its people once again, and restore its rights and prerogatives (lines 340-356).

But Enlil’s answer, which begins the fourth Ēruğû, was cold and stern: Sin, he says, should pay no heed to Ur and its lamentful dirges (lines 360-365); its destruction had been decreed in the assembly of the gods and this decision cannot be altered—Ur had its day of “kingship” and now this must go to some other place, since there is no everlasting “regn of kingship” (lines 366-372). Ordered to leave his city, the dejected and anguished Nanna-Sin departed from Ur followed by his hastily dressed wife Ningal and the Anunnas (lines 373-379). Whereupon the city was given over to carnage and massacre at the hands of the heavily armed enemy (lines 392-396), while famine took its toll of those who did not succumb to the foe (lines 392-396). This was more than the people could bear—they threw down their weapons and after taking counsel among themselves, decided to open the gates to the enemy (lines 397-407).5 In rushed the Elamites and crushed the city and its people (lines 408-411); they took over the Ekištûnumgal, destroyed its statues, shrines, and thrones, and slaughtered its sacred cattle (lines 412-419); they split asunder its hallowed palm trees together with their fronds and dates, despoiled the sacred Magan-reeds,6 and

1 Much of this long passage is unfortunately obscure.
2 The Tidnum people are Amorites, cf., e.g., J. R. Kupper, Let Nomades en Mesopotamie, pp. 156-57.
3 This passage too, is enigmatic in large part.
4 We have here a rare example of a record of rebellion and treason in Sumer.
5 Magan is often identified with Egypt.

1 For the still unidentified Su-people, cf. now Edzard, ZBB, p. 48 ff.
2 For the cities, temples, and gods in this Ēruğû, cf. Edzard, ZBB (index to place names and god-names); Sjöberg’s forthcoming study on the Temple Hymns (now in press as a volume in the series Texts from Cuneiform Sources, J. J. Augustin, publisher), and Jacobsen, Iraq, xxi, pp. 174-85.
carried off the wealth accumulated in the storehouses (lines 42a-426); they breached its parapets, hurled down its statues of cattle and ushnu-gal-dr&goris (lines 427-431); made the temple desolate and unfit for holy rituals by breaking down its doors, hinges, bolts and locks (lines 432-445); dismantled the lofty dubla where the judges held court, violated Nanna-Sin’s holy vessels, bed, and statues, and carried off into captivity its lustration-priests (lines 432-456).

Overwhelmed by this terrible destruction of his city and temple, the suffering Nanna-Sin once again comes before his father Enlil with the plea that he turn his inimical look into a friendly one (lines 457-465). This time Enlil’s response is favorable and he pronounces a blessing for the restoration of Ur and the Ekishnugal (lines 466-475). Whereupon the people gather once again in Ur from all over the land (lines 476-479), and Nanna-Sin proudly reenters his city and temple together with his wife Ningal (lines 480-484). The fifth kirugu begins with a plea by the poet addressed to the bitter, destructive storm to leave Ur and attack Sumer’s enemies instead: Tidnum, Gutium, and Anshan (lines 490-500). Following a break of an unknown number of lines, the composition concludes with a fragmentary and obscure seven-line passage that seems to continue with the blessing of Ur and its people.

All in all there are now more than thirty tablets and fragments inscribed with portions of this lamentation. Not a few of these had been published between the years 1914 and 1944, but because of the numerous gaps, it had been mistakenly assumed that the pieces belonged to two different compositions, a so-called “Ibbi-Sin” lamentation, and a “Lamentation over the Destruction of Sumer and Akkad.” It is only with the publication of eleven new tablets and fragments in UET, vi, Part 2, that the text of the composition as a whole could be reconstructed, and then it became clear that it was actually a single composition beginning with a lament over the destruction of Sumer as a whole and continuing with a lament over the destruction of Ur and its temple, the Ekishnugal, and ending on a note of deliverance and salvation.

A detailed edition of the text is planned by Gadd and Kramer for a forthcoming issue of Iraq; the present translation is based on this study.

That the day be overturned, that "law and order" cease to exist—

The storm is all devouring like the Flood—
That the me of Sumer be overturned,
That a favorable reign be withheld,
That cities be destroyed, that houses be destroyed,
That stalls be destroyed, that sheepfolds be wiped out,
That its (Sumer’s) oxen no longer stand in their stalls,
That its sheep no longer spread out in their sheepfold,
That its rivers flow with bitter water,
That its cultivated fields grow weeds,
That its steppes grow wailing plants,
That the mother care not for her children,
That the father says not "Oh my wife,
That the young wife rejoice not in (his) lap,
That the young child grow not sturdy on (their) knee,
That the nursemaid chant not a lullaby,
That the home of kingship be changed,
That the seeking of oracles be suppressed,
That that kingship be carried off from the land,
That its face be directed to inimical soil,
That in accord with the command of An (and) Enlil, "law and order" cease to exist—
(All this was) after An had frowned upon all the lands.

After Enlil had set his (friendly) face to inimical soil,
After Nintu had prostrated her (own) creatures,
After Enki had overturned (the course of) the Tigris (and) Euphrates,
After Utu had cursed the roads (and) highways—
That the me of Sumer cease to exist, that its rules (of conduct) be changed,
That the me of kingship (and) reign of Ur be overwhelmed,
That the princely son stretch a defiling hand on his Ekishnugal,
That Nanna show no respect for his people as numerous as ewes,
That of Ur, its shrine of the great offerings, the offerings be changed,
That its people no longer inhabit its dwellings, that it be made inimical soil,
That the Su-people (and) the Elamites, the enemies, inhabit their dwellings,
That its shepherd (living) in terror in the palace be seized by the foe,
That Ibbi-Sin be brought to the land Elam in a trap—From Mt. Zabu11 on the "breast" of the sea, to the boundary of Anshan—
That like a sparrow which has fled its "house," he return not to his city,
That the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates in their entirety, grow sickly plants,
That no one tread the highways, that no one seek out the roads,
That its well-founded cities (and) hamlets be counted as ruins,
That its teeming blackheaded people be put to (slaughter by) the mace,
That the cultivated fields be not hoed, that no seeds be implanted in the soil,
That its shout (and) song resound not in the . . . (and) steppe,
That the stalls provide not fat (and) cheese, that no dung be implanted in the soil,

8 Anshan here may refer to Elam as well.
9 For bibliographical details, cf. UET, vi, part 2, p. 1 (comment to Nos. 124-141); a study of part of the first kirugu was published by Falkenstein in WO, v, pp. 377-84 (cf. also SAHG, No. 37): a study of the third kirugu was published by C. J. Gadd in Hebrew and Semitic Studies Presented to Godfrey Rolles Driver, pp. 59-71.
10 Lines 22-26 seem to be parenthetically inserted in this passage which is a good example of the cumulative parallelism utilized throughout this composition.
11 The location of Mt. Zabu is not too clear from the text, but it is somewhere to the east of Elam.
That the shepherd twirl not the Su^ur\textsuperscript{12}-reed in the 'holy sheepfold,
That the hum of the turning of the churn resound not in the sheepfold,
That on the steppe the cattle large and small become scarce, that all living creatures come to an end,
That the fourlegged creatures of Sumugan\textsuperscript{13} implant no dung in the soil,
That in the marshes ..., that they "have no name,"
That in the swamps ... that they "have no name,"
That in the orchards and gardens there be no new growth, that they waste readily away,
That Ur, the great wild ox which steps forth confidently (in combat), which is secure in its own strength,
My city of lordship and kingship, built on pure soil,
Like an ox to be thrown instantly by the nose-rope, be fastened neck to ground,
An, Enlil, Enki, (and) Ninhursag decreed (as) its fate—
The fate decreed by them can not be changed, who can overturn it!
The word commanded by An (and) Enlil, who can oppose it!

An has made the Sumerians tremble in their dwelling places, the people are terrified,
Enlil has made the day break bitter, has struck the city dumb,
Nintu, the mother of the Land, has brought ... into it,
Enki has deprived the Tigris (and) the Euphrates of water,
Utu has banished justice (and) truth from the mouth (of men),
Inanna has given the battle (and) combat to the rebellious land,
Ningirsu has emptied out Sumer like milk,

On the Land fell a calamity, one unknown to man, One that had never been seen (before and) for which there were no words, one that could not be withstood,
On all the lands, the terrified, a disruptive hand was placed,
In their cities their city-gods stood aside,
The people, the terrified, could hardly breathe, The storm fettered them, it returns not the "day" to them,
The "returned day" that it obtained for them came not as a ... day,

Enlil, in order to destroy the righteous houses, to decimate the righteous,
To set an evil eye on the sons of the righteous, the noble—
On that day Enlil brought down the Guti from the mountain-land,
Whose coming is the Flood of Enlil, that none can withstand,
They filled the steppe with great winds of the steppe..., They laid waste to the [steppe] (and) whatever flourished in it, none could travel there,
They ... in the dark, dark, days,
They overwhelmed readily the bright day with tumult,

(It was a) day (when) mouths were drenched (and) heads wallowed in blood,
A day (when) the harrow sent forth from above wrecked the city (as if) with a pickaxe,
On that day Heaven was crushed, Earth was smitten, the face was blinded by the storm,
Heaven was darkened, was overcast with shadow, it was turned into the nether world,
Utu lay (motionless) on the horizon, ...,
Nanna lay in ... was terrified.

(80)

[The father] turned away [from his wife], he said not "Oh my wife,"
[The mother abandoned her child] she said not "Oh my child,"
[Who had fields (and) acres abandoned his fields (and) acres], he said not "Oh my fields (and) acres,"

(100)

Who had a well-built house abandoned his house, he said not "Oh my house,"
The man of possessions forsook his possessions.

On that day a defiling hand was placed over the kingship of the land,
Its tiara (and) crown worn on the head were both ..., All the lands ... their submission and respect,
Of Ur, the shrine of great offerings—its offerings [were changed].
Nanna overturned] his people as numerous as [ewes],
Its king was depressed in his splendid palace,
Ibbi-Sin was filled with gloom in his splendid palace,
He shed bitter tears in his heart-rejoicing "house of life."

(100)

The Flood crushes the earth, wipes out everything, It roared like a great storm over the earth, who could escape it!

\textsuperscript{12} lukjur usually means "lance."
\textsuperscript{13} Sumugan is the god of the steppe-animals.
To destroy all the cities, to destroy all the houses,
To make the liar superior to the honest man,

The first kirugu.
The storm is all devouring like the Flood.
The antiphon to the \textit{\textbar{irugu}}.

On Hursagkalamma, the house of Kish, an evil hand was placed,
Zababa [forsook his beloved dwelling],
Mother Bau [wept bitterly for her holy] house (\textbar{and}) [city],
"Oh my destroyed city, my destroyed house" bitterly she cried.

\begin{footnotesize}
\text{\textbar{about} 3 lines destroyed}
\end{footnotesize}

On Kazallu, the awe-inspiring city, a disruptive hand was placed,
[N]umushda forsook his beloved dwelling,
His spouse Namrat, the kindly woman, wept bitter tears,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.

Its river has become empty, it poured no water,
Like a river cursed by Enki, it came to an end at its source,
In the fields there was (neither) grain (nor) vegetation,
the people had nothing to eat,
Its orchards (and) gardens were parched like an oven,
their \textit{\textbar{produce perished}},
The cattle large (and) small, the four-legged creatures waved not (their) tails,
The four-legged creatures of Sumugan found no rest.

Lugal[marda] stood aside from his city (Marda), Ninzuanna forsook her beloved dwelling,
"Oh her destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.

Isin, no longer a "quay-shrine," was \textit{\textbar{deprived of water}}.
[Nin]isinna, the mother of the Land wept bitter tears,
"[Oh] her [destroyed city] destroyed house," bitterly she cried.

Enlil smote Duranki with the mace,
Before Enlil a lament was set up in his city, the shrine
Nippur,
Mother Ninlil, the queen of the \textbar{fjur};\textsuperscript{14} wept bitter tears,
"[Oh] her destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.

On Kesh, built all by itself on the high steppe, a devastating hand was placed,

\begin{footnotesize}
\text{\textbar{Adab}, that city stretched along the river, was} \textit{\textbar{uprooted}},
The "snake of the mountain" made his bed there, it was turned into a rebellious land,
The Gutians multiplied (their) offspring there, brought forth (their) seed there,
Nintu wept bitter tears for her creatures, \textbar{150}
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.
\end{footnotesize}

At Zabalam a devastating hand was placed on the holy \textbar{gigua}, Inanna was carried off from Erech, was brought to enemy territory,
The enemy looked on the Eanna, the holy \textbar{gipar-shrine},
Its holy \textbar{gipar of ?\textbar{ship} was} suppressed,
[Its \textbar{en}] was carried off from the \textbar{gipar}, was brought to enemy territory,
"[Oh] her destroyed [city], destroyed house," bitterly she cried.

In [Umm]a a bitter storm blew over Sigkursag,
[Shara] forsook [E]mah, his lofty dwelling place,
[Nin]mul wept bitter tears in her destroyed city,
"Oh my [house] whose riches have not been returned," bitterly she cried.

Girsu, the city of heroes, was turned into a cowardly place,
Ningirsu forsook the Eninnu,
Mother Bau wept bitter tears in her house Urukug,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.

On that day the word—who knows its meaning?—attacked like a storm,
The word of Enlil that winds to the right, \textbar{nows the left},
Enlil who decrees the fates, this is what he did:
Enlil brought down Elam, the foe, from the mountain,
He made Nanshe the princely daughter, dwell in a strange city,
He put Ninmar to the flames in (her) shrine Guabba,
Its silver (and) lapis lazuli is carried off in big boats,
The queen—her possessions attacked and at an end—
the holy Ninmar,
On that day \textbar{cuits . . . like . . . Turned over Lagash to the hand of Elam.}

On that day, the queen—her "storm" caught up with her,
Bau, as if she were a mortal—her "storm" caught up with her,
"Woe is me! The storm has turned it (Lagash) over into his hand,
The storm that destroys cities has turned it over into his hand,
The storm that destroys houses has turned it over into his hand."

Dumuzi-Abzu was terrified in his house Kinirsha
Kinirsha, his city of "princely-sonship" was turned to ruins.
Nanshc—Her city Nina was delivered to the enemy,
Sirara—her beloved dwelling place, was given over to misfortune,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried,
Its holy gipar of en-ship was suppressed,
Its en was carried off from the gipar, was brought to enemy territory,
On the bank of the Idnun of Nanna a heavy arm was placed,
The settlements of the Edanna of Nanna were destroyed like a distended stall,
Those who fled from it were devoured by the wild beasts like fleeing kids.
Gaesh was poured out like milk by the enemy,
they destroy it utterly,
Its (well) made statues fair of form, they shatter,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried,
Its gipar of en-ship was suppressed,
Its en was carried off from the gipar, was brought to enemy territory,
Its dais stretching to heaven was filled with lament,
Its heavenly throne stood there no longer, (its) head was glorious no longer.
Like a palm tree it was cut to pieces, it was completely shattered.
Ashshu that house stretched along the river was uprooted,
The ... of Nanna was seized by the enemy, The house was made into a "debtor's house,"
The assembly house was emptied,
Abrig ... was destroyed like a distended stall,
Nin-e-HA, terrified, shed bitter tears,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried. (200)
Eridu the city overflowing with "great" waters, was deprived of drinking water,
In its outskirts, the steppe built up with houses . . . ,
The righteous [have been led off] to slaughter, . . .
"I, the young man, whom the storm had not . . . ,
I, whom the storm had not destroyed, whose attractiveness had not been brought to an end . . . ,
'Who like . . . are fair of body, have been [struck down],
Who like . . . paint the eyes (with kohl), have been [struck down],
Who like . . . have irrigated the plants, have been [struck down],
The Gutians, the destroyers, are crushing (us).'
"We who like . . . are fair of body, have been [struck down],
We who were in charge of . . . [during the day] were [eclipsed] by shadows,
We who were in charge of . . . [during the night] were . . . by the storm,
Who was in charge during the day, how shall we receive him among our weary ones! (24°)
Who was in charge by night how shall we let him go astray among our sleepless ones!
Oh Enki, your city has been cursed, it has been made into enemy territory,
Why do you reckon us among those who have been displaced from Eridu!

She fled like a dove from (her) cote, brought . . . into the steppe,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.
Gishbanda that house full of lamentation and wailing was destroyed,
Ningishzida abandoned Gishbanda,
Azimu, the queen of the city, wept bitter tears,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.
On that day, the Southwind the men of . . . were quartered there,
To destroy HA, the men of . . . were quartered there,
Nin-e-HA, terrified, shed bitter tears,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried. (220)
Asarluhi hastily put on a garment . . . ,
Lugalbanda abandoned his beloved dwelling place,
"Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly he cried.

{615}
Why do they (the Gutians?) destroy those among us upon whom like... no hand had [ever] been laid!
Why do they crush those among us who like... had (never) been... !"
After [Enki] had set his face towards an inimical land,
He planted for the... "evil tree"
... have risen up, have called on their cohorts,
Enki forsook the house of Eridu,
Damgalnunna, the mother of the lofty house, wept bitter tears,
"Oh my [destroyed city], destroyed house" bitterly
she cried,
Its gipar of <2>ship was suppressed,
Its en was carried off from the gipar, was brought to enemy territory,
In Ur, no one took charge of food, no one took charge
of water,
Who was (formerly) in charge of food, stood away from the food, pays no heed to it,
Who was (formerly) in charge of water, stood away from the water, pays no heed to it,
Below, the Elamites are in charge, slaughter follows in their wake,
Above, the Halma-people, the "men of the mountains," took captives,
The Tidnumites daily fastened the mace to their loins,
Below, the Elamites like those who bring forth woe, brandish their weapons,
Above, like chaff blown about by the wind, the steppe ....
Ur, the great wild ox that (formerly) stepped forth confidently (in combat), has been made prostrate.
Enlil, he who decrees the fates, this is what [he did]:
For a second time he brought down the Elamites, the "men of the mountain" from the mountain,
The house, the foremost, having been ....
While Kisiga was being destroyed, its ten men, ...
Escaped not; three days (and) three nights did not pass,
the city was broken up by the pickaxe, Kisiga—Dumuzi [depa]rted from it as a substitute, his hands were [fettered].
By the house, the... of [Emu]sh [spoke to him]:
"Rise, set sail... rise, set sail,...]
... has brought, rise, set sail..."
The large... she caused to set sail..., The small... [she caused to set sail] like one-eyed kids,
From her possessions she sailed forth, she descends to the nether world,
The dirge of the nether world where no one (willingly) sets foot, loudly [she uttered:]
"I the queen have [sailed] away from my possessions, the maid has been [stationed] [th]ere,
From my lapis lazuli place I have [sailed] away, the maid has been stationed [th]ere,
There the maid-ship of man,
... who will... for me!
There the maid-ship of Elam,
... who will... for me!
Oh my destroyed city, destroyed house," bitterly she cried.
(280)
In Ur no one took charge of food, no one took charge
of water,
Its people, like water poured from a well...,
They (no longer) had confidence in themselves, [gone]
was their strength.
Enlil made Famine, who brings nothing but harm,
dwell in the city,
That which brings destruction to cities, that which brings destruction to houses, he made dwell in the city,
That before which no one can stand firm, the weapon,
he made dwell in the city,
The dizziness caused by the unsated heart he made
dwell in the city.
Ur, like a single reed drops (its) head, is helpless,
Its people, like fish caught by hand—their life is departed,
Its lowly (and) noble lie spread about, none can rise,
For its king there was no bread to eat in the lofty Dubla,
The king who ate (only) fine bread was overcome by
...,
The sun set on him, ... he [nows ...,
In his brewery there was no beer, its... was no more,
In his palace there was no bread to eat, it was no longer fit to live in,
His lofty ganun was not filled with grain, its "life" is not brought there,
In the granaries of Nanna there was no grain, (310)
The evening meals of the gods were suppressed,
In their great dining-halls wine (and) honey came to an end,
The... used to feed the oxen, feed the sheep, lay in the meadow,
In its lofty oven oxen (and) sheep are not prepared...,
Of the Bursag, the pure "arm" of Nanna, its "hum"
ceased,
That house where commands were shouted like an ox—
its silence is overwhelming,
Like holy... it makes no sound, far removed is its...
Its grinding mortar (and) pestle lie inert, no one bends before them,

For this building, cf. e.g., Fig. 8 (p. 139) of Woolley’s Excavations at Ur, where it is called e-nun-mah.
SUMERIAN LAMENTATION

The "lapis lazuli" quay of Nanna was deprived of water,
The water at the boat's prow returned no echo, it fell not at . . . .

On the small . . . of Nanna dust was heaped high,
All (kinds of) grasses grew there, all (kinds of) grasses grew there, . . . grew,
The boats (and) barges ceased (to come to) the lapis lazuli quay,
On your river so well-suited for barges, they sail not,
On your river so well-suited for barges, they sail not,
The offering-boats of the father who begot him, no offerings were carried to him,
Its bread (and) bread-offerings were not brought to Nippur,
Its river is empty, no barge moves on it,
No foot trod all its banks, long grasses grew there.

Of the widespread stalls of Nanna—torn down were their hedges,
The garden huts were despoiled . . . ,
The silam-cows [were] taken from their young, were carried off to enemy territory,
The cows fed on the . . . -plant forsook the steppe, their unknown terrain.
Gaau (the deity) who loves cows hurled (his) weapon on the ewe,
Shunidu (the deity) who heaps up fat (and) cheese, did not heap up fat (and) cheese,
Its fat—those who knew not fat, stir it,
Its milk—those who knew not milk, pour it,
In its sheepfold, they who stir the churn speak not loudly,
Of its heavy braziers . . . its fire is extinguished.

Sin wept before his father Enlil, "Oh my father who begot me, what has my city done to you, why have you turned against it!
Oh Enlil, what has Ur done to you, why have you turned against it!
The offering-boats carried no offerings to the father who begot him,
Did not bring your bread (and) bread-offerings to Enlil in Nippur,
The ens (who lived) outside the city, the en's (who lived) inside the city have been carried off by the wind (of desolation),
Ur, like a city crushed by the pickaxe, was counted among the ruins,
The Kiur, the place where Enlil relaxes, has become a desolate shrine.
Oh Enlil, gaze upon your city full of desolation,
Gaze upon your city Nippur, full of desolation,

Ur—(even) its dogs snuff not at the base of its walls,
Oh my father who begot me, turn my city from its loneliness back to your arms,
Oh Enlil, turn my city from its loneliness back to your arms,
Turn my Ekishnugal from its loneliness back to your arms,
Let Ur (once again) bring forth offspring, let the people multiply for you,
May the me of Sumer that had ceased to exist, be restored for you."

The third \irugu.
Oh righteous house, righteous house! Oh its man, its man!
Its antiphon.

Enlil answers his son Sin:
"The desolate city—in its midst there was uttered (nothing but) laments (and) dirges,
In its midst there was uttered (nothing but) laments (and) dirges,
In its midst its people spend (their) days in lament,
Oh my son, you are its . . . noble son, what have you to do with its tears!
Oh Nanna, you are its . . . noble son, what have you to do with its tears!

The verdict of the assembly cannot be turned back,
The word commanded by Enlil knows no overturning,
Ur was granted kingship, it was not granted an eternal reign,
Since days of yore when the land was founded to (now) when people have multiplied,
Who has (ever) seen a reign of kingship that is everlasting! (37°)
Its kingship, its reign has been cut off, he is aggrieved!
Oh my Nanna, be not aggrieved, depart from your city.

Then, of my king the noble son—his spirit was heavy.
The Lord Ashimbabbar" the noble son, was anguished,
Nanna, who loved his city, departed from the city,
Sin who loved Ur (no longer) dwelt in his house,
Ningal . . . , in order to go from her city to enemy territory,
Hastily [put on] a garment, departed [from her house],
Ur—its Anunna went outside (the city),
Ur—its . . . approached . . . ,
Ur—its trees were sickly, [its] [re]eds were sickly,

16 The usual rendering "wild cow" for silam does not seem to fit the context.
17 This is another name for Nanna-Sin.
By its walls, as far as they extend in circumference, laments were uttered,
At the . . . , the weapon makes all cower before it,
In Ur, the large axes were havoc before them,
The spear, "the might of battle" is hurled straight (to its mark),
The large bows, the throw-stick, the sling are all devouring,
The "head" arrows filled their bodies like heavy rain,
The large stones that of themselves (strike) afar, crush the bones,
Daily the evil wind brings them back against the (people of the) city,
Ur that relied on its lions, was given over to carnage,
Its people were turned over to the power of the enemy,
The (people of the) city who did not succumb to the weapons were overcome by famine,
Famine filled the city like water, there was no respite from it,
Famine bends low their faces, it swells their sinews,
Its people were filled with thirst, short is (their) breath,
Its king gasped for breath in his splendid palace,
Its people threw down the . . . , hurled the weapons to the ground,
Raised their hands to their necks, wept,
Take counsel among themselves, speak out eloquently:
"Woe is us, what can we say, what can we add! (400)
Until when will we perish in the mouth of destruction!
Ur—inside it is death, outside it is death,
Inside it we die of famine,
Outside it we are killed by the weapons of the Elamites,
Ur has been carried oil by the enemy, let us not die . . . "
. . . they acted in unison,
They loosened the bolts of its gates, its doors stand (open) to the day,
Elam trampled over it like the onrushing high waters,
Ur is shattered by the weapon like a (potter's) vessel,
Its refugees cannot hasten (to escape), they are pressed tight to the side of the wall,
Like fish writhing in thirst, their life is carried off.
The Ekishnugal of Nanna is inhabited by the enemy,
Its heavy . . . they shatter,
Its divine statues that filled the shrines they cut to pieces,
Nineaiga, a goddess in charge of fat and milk,

   Its throne was hurled down in front of it, it "sat" in the dust,
   Its noble cows were seized by their . . . horns, their horns were cut off,
   Its choice oxen (and) well-fed sheep were struck down by the weapon,
   Were cut to pieces like cedars, were completely shattered.
The palm-tree (covered with) mighty copper, the might of heroship,
Was torn down like rushes, was plucked like rushes,
(Its) top was trampled in the dust, it had no one to lift it,
Its fronds were cut to pieces, were smashed to bits,
Its bunches of dates were swept away,
The magan-reeds planted by the holy river were despoiled,
The immense tribute that had been stored away was carried off by the enemy,
The house—its fastening ropes were felled, its parapets were breached,
Its cattle standing to the left and right, its embracing (ones),
Like hero smiting hero, were hurled down in front of it,
Its awesome usumgal with wide open mouth, with body of lion,
Were hurled to the ground like captured wild oxen, were carried off to enemy territory,
The holy dwelling of Nanna, the forest fragrant with cedar—its fragrance has come to an end,
Its . . . ,
Its awe-inspiring house where sweet fat . . . , was destroyed,
(Formerly) it had filled the lands like sunlight, (now) it has become dim as the evening star,
Its doors [adorned with] the heavenly stars, its . . . ,
The large bronze bulug . . . .
Its . . . ,
Its hinges . . . . ,
[Its] locks (and) [bol]ts do not . . . ,

   (lines 441-444 too fragmentary for translation)
In the house filled with . . . lofty . . . , the holy feasts were . . .,
In the lofty Dubla, the place where fates are decreed, no words were . . . ,
Its judges' seats were not set up, no verdicts were directed,
Lai threw down the scepter, from his hand . . . ,
In the holy sleeping chamber of Nanna . . . ,
The holy kettles that no one (was permitted) to look upon, the enemy looked upon,
The fruitful bed was not set up, no "lapis lazuli" grass\textsuperscript{20} was gathered,
Its divine statues that filled the shrines were cut to pieces,
Its commissaries, diviners (and) accountants did not fulfill (the) . . . ,
Its wild oxen that were standing on their pedestals were carried off by the foe,
The holy «igw-priests of the purifying lustrations, its linen-wearers,
Their . . . is come to an end, they were carried to an enemy city.

Sin brought his suffering heart to his father,
Made a genuflection before Enlil, the father who begot him:
"Oh my father who begot me, until when will you look inimically upon my account! Until when . . . !
On the lordship and kingship that you have given (me), you have . . . ,
Father Enlil, you whose instructions are righteous,
Father Enlil, the fate you have decreed me has not been . . . » (Instead of) the . . . the scepter of lordship, the bejewelled,
. . . I dress in rags,
On the oppressed heart that you have made tremble like a flame, cast a friendly eye."

Enlil speaks a friendly word to his son Sin:
"My son, the city has brought you with it prosperity (and) joy, you have been in possession of it for a time,
Turn the great wall (and) rampart of the destroyed city to . . . ,
The time of black, black days that has come upon you has been . . . ,
Build confidently the . . . of your dwelling place, Etenigurru,\textsuperscript{21} May Ur be built in joy, may (its) people bow before you,
At its base may there be abundance, may Ashnan dwell by its side,
At its crown may there be joy, may Utu rejoice by its side,
Its dining table, may the abundance of Ashnan embrace, May Ur, the city blessed by An, be restored for you."

At the friendly speech of Enlil, it (Ur) lifted "neck to heaven,"
For Nanna (the people of) the land, below (and) above gathered, \textsuperscript{20} The precise meaning here intended by the poet for "lapis lazuli" is not clear.
\textsuperscript{21} This is the ziggurat terrace of Ur.
IX. Letters
Divine Revelations

With the exception of the last (j), all the letters are from the Man archives. Because of their importance for the history of prophecy they are already the subject of a considerable literature; see especially: F. M. T. de Liagre Böhl, Opera Minora (Groningen-Djakarta, 1953), 63-80; A. Malamat, Eretz-Israel, iv (1956), 74-84; v (1958), 67-73; Supplement to VT, Vol. xv (Leiden, 1966), 207-227; Eretz-Israel, vm (1967), 231-240; Martin Noth, Gesammelte Studien zum Alten Testament, Theologische Bücherei, vi (Munich, 1957), 230-47; H. Schult, ZDPV, lxxxii (1966), 282-32; H. Schmölzel, TLZ, lxxxvi (1951), 53-58; W. von Soden, WO, 1/5 (1950), 397-403; C. Westermann, Basic Forms of Prophetic Speech, trans, by Hugh Clayton White (Philadelphia, 1967), 115-28; Forschung am Alten Testament, Gesammelte Studien, Theologische Bücherei, xxiv (Munich, 1966), 171-88; H. W. Wolff, The Interpretation of Dreams in the Ancient Near East, Transac. Amer. Phil. Society, Vol. XLVI/3 (Philadelphia, 1956), 195; A. Malamat, Eretz-Israel, iv (1956), 81-83.—The writer is known both as the governor of Nahur (cf. Nahor, Gen. 11:26) on the upper Habur, and as an official at the temple of Dagan and (15) prostrated myself. As I was prostrate, Dagan opened his mouth and spoke to me as follows: 'Did the kings² of the Yaminites³ and their forces make peace with the forces of Zimri-Lim (20) who moved up here?' I said, 'They did not make peace.' Just before I went out he spoke to me as follows: 'Why are the messengers (25) of Zimri-Lim not in constant attendance upon me, and why does he not lay his full report before me?²⁴ Had this been done, I would long ago have delivered (30) the kings² of the Yaminites⁶ into the power of Zimri-Lim.⁸ Now go, I send you. Thus shall you speak to Zimri-Lim, saying: (35) "Send me your messengers and lay your full report before me, and then I will have the kings² of the Yaminites⁸ [c06]|ed” on a fisherman’s spit? and I will lay them before you.""(40) This is what this man saw in his dream and then recounted to me. I now hereby write to my lord; my lord should deal with this dream. (45) Furthermore, if my lord so desires, my lord shall lay his full report before Dagan and the messengers of my lord shall be constandy on their way to Dagan. (50) The man who told me this dream was to offer a pagrum-szcTcz² to Dagan, and so I did not send him on. Moreover, since this man was trustworthy,⁴ I did not take any of his hair or the fringe of his garment.¹⁰

Speak to my lord: Thus Kibri-Dagan your servant. (5) The day I dispatched this tablet of mine to my lord, Malik-Dagan, a man from Shakka, ca(m)e and spoke to me as follows: 'In a dream of mine I was on going in the company of a(nother) man (10) from the fortress of Sagaratam, in the Upper District, to Mari. On my way¹ entered Terqa, and right after entering I entered the temple of Dagan and (15) prostrated myself. As I was prostrate, Dagan opened his mouth and spoke to me as follows: 'Did the kings² of the Yaminites³ and their ¹ ina piniqa, lit., "before me," which has been taken by Dossin and von Soden to mean that in his dream Malik-Dagan saw himself entering Terqa. Our translation follows Malamat; the viewpoint of the preceding lines is not that of a spectator, but the subjective one of consciousness and intention. The meaning "on the way" for ina pant is otherwise unattested, and may therefore be a West Semiticism. The route from Sagaratam to Mari would pass through Terqa, which was located on the Euphrates above Mari.

² The Yaminite "kings," who were sheiks, are mentioned elsewhere in a number of Mari letters. The term seems to imply a military role within the tribal confederation during a time of crisis; see J. R. Küpper, Les nomades en Mesopotamie au temps des rois de Mari (Paris, 1937), 59.

³ DVMV.Mii-ia-mi-na, lit., "sons of the right (= south)"; for read-

Text: G. Dossin, RA, xxi (1948), 128, 130. Translations: G. Dossin, ibid., 129, 131; W. von Soden, WO, 1/5 (1950), 398-99; A. Leo Oppenheim, The Interpretation of Dreams in the Ancient Near East, Transac. Amer. Phil. Society, Vol. XLVI/3 (Philadelphia, 1956), 195; A. Malamat, Eretz-Israel, iv (1956), 81-83.—The writer is known both as the governor of Nahur (cf. Nahor, Gen. 11:26) on the upper Habur, and as an official at the court of Mari. It is in the latter capacity that he seems to have sent this letter to the king Zimri-Lim, who must therefore have been absent from Mari. Hence our tablet, unless it was sent this letter to the king Zimri-Lim, who must therefore

Speak to my lord: Thus Kibri-Dagan your servant. (5) Dagan and Ikrub-El are safe and sound;¹¹ the citty ing the logogram DUMUMER as Akkadian (maru) and not as West Semitic (band) or the like, and hence the possibility of comparison with the biblical Benjaminites), see H. Tadmor, JNES, xvii (1958), 230, n. 12, and G. Dossin, RA, lii (1958), 60-62.

* Cf. "A Letter to a God" below.

* "Deliver into the power," ana qot X mul&m, lit., "to fill into" the hands of X," should be compared with biblical natan 'yod, "he gave into the hand," in the oracles of Yahweh's wars (Deut. 2:24; 3:2; Josh. 6:2; 8:1, etc.).

*Dossin restores [lu-pa-d]I-Ii-il-Iu-ni-ta-ma and translates, '1 shall lead them away'; von Soden restores [lu-la-aj-ij-li-il-lu-nu-ti-ma] and translates, '1 shall make them writhe'; Malamat restores [lu-la-aj] b-li-il-lu-nu-ti-ma, which is followed here.

* Following Dossin's reading "flu-u-flu-al" and accepting his comparison with filfat dagim in Job 40:31, which however is hardly a harpoon, but rather (again with Malamat) an instrument for cooking. W. von Soden reads "su-us-su-ul, "basket."

* This may be some kind of sacrifice associated with the cult of the dead; cf. Ugar. pgr, "mortuary-offering," and see below, n. 23.

* Reading t&kAu with A. Leo Oppenheim, JNES, xi (1952), 131.

* The lock of hair and the fringe of the garment were used for purposes of identification; see also letter b, and cf. 1 Sam. 24:5,11.

* Reference is to the cult-statues in their sanctuaries. The latter deity, who also appears in the West Semitic form Yakrub-El, is peculiar to Terqa. He is either an apotheosized tribal hero or a form of Terqa and] the district are safe and sound. (A badly preserved line and a break of about six lines.) (rev.) He saw the following (dream): "You (pi.) shall not (re-) build this deserted house. If this house is (re)built, I will make it collapse into the river." (5') The day he saw this dream, he said nothing to anyone.22 The next day he again saw the following dream: "It was a god. You (pi.) shall not (re)build this house. (10') If you (re)build it, I will make it collapse into the river." I now hereby (15') dispatch to my lord the fringe of his garment and a lock from his head. From that day [this] servant has been ill.

c
Text: J. R. Kupper, ARM, xm, No. 113 (transliteration only). Translation: *ibid. The same correspondents and introduction as in b.

Furthermore, a man repeated the dream... [saying]: [x] thousand men... (10') in the fortified cities of [Ma]ri, Terqa, and [Sal]garatum (three badly preserved lines). (16') [This man repeated this dream of his, and then [sh]ifted the responsibility onto me, saying, "Write to the ki[ng]."

For this reason I wrote to my lord.

d
Text: J. R. Kupper, ARM, xm, No. 114 (transliteration only). Translations: *ibid.; A. Malamat, Supplement to VT, xv, 219. The same correspondents as in b and c; introduction omits reference to the gods and city.

(5) The day I sent this tablet of mine to my lord, a man's wife came to me before the darkness of the mountain (sundown) and (10) spoke to me on the news about Babylon as follows: "Dagan sent me. Write to your lord. He is not to worry, nor is he even to worry. (15) [Ha]mmurabi [the king of Babylon]..." (rest of tablet almost entirely illegible).

e

Moreover, the day I sent this tablet of mine to my lord, [an ecstatic] of Dagan (10) came and addressed me as follows: "The god sent [me]. Hurry, write to the king [ng]. They are to offer the mortuary-sacrifices... of El, so called ("El blessed") perhaps because the god was represented in a gesture of blessing.

for the sha[de] of Yahdun-Lī[m]."15 This is what this ecstatic (20) said to me, and I have therefore written to my lord. Let my lord do what pleases him.

f

I have not been remiss in harvesting the barley of the district and storing it in the granaries. (10) [Moreover], with regard to the construction of the new gate, [...] the ecstatic came here earlier, [the wor] (15) [was started] and [we set about] the construction of that gate.16 [Now15] the day I sent this tablet of mine to my lord, (20) this [ec]static returned here and addressed [a wor][d] to me, giving me [an ulti]matum: "If you (pi.) do not build that gate, (25) [a la]mentation will be held!19 You are not numerous enough!" [Th]is is what this ecstatic [sa]id to me. Besides, I am [wor]ied for the har[vest]; (30) I cannot turn my neck.20 [Heaven forbid that]21 my lord should say [...]
Akkadian Letters

(Beginning broken.) [With regard] to the zuufy-um of the  and the cattle about which Abi-[. . .] said to me in the presence of Zu-Hadnim, "Hand over the Zu-[rum in the presence of the kin[gs and . . . ,] saying, "In the future he is not to break the agreement with me." I provided witnesses against him. My lord should know this.

At the (inspection of) the omen Adad the lord of Kallassu [spoke] as follows: "Am I not (10) Adad the lord of Kallassu who reared him between my thighs and restored him to the throne of his father's house? If he does not give (it), I am the lord of throne, territory, and city, which I restored him to the throne of his father's house? I again gave him a dwelling-place. Now, since I (15) the lord of Kallassu who reared him between my thighs, I should receive from him an hereditary property. (20) he grants my request, I will give him throne upon throne, house upon house, territory upon territory, city upon city; even the land from east to west will I give upon city; even the land from east to west will I give.

Speak to my lord: Thus Mukannishum your servant. [More]over, the apilum of Adad the lord of Halab (Aleppo) came [to Abu]-Halum and said, "[Wri]te to your lord (break)." (Edge of tablet) "[... from the east] to the west (it is /) who will give him." [This] is what Adad the lord of Halab said in the presence of Abu-Halum. My lord should know this.

Text: J. Bottero, ARM, xm, No. 23 (transliteration only). Translations: ibid.; A. Malamat, Supplement to VT, xv, 214-15. The writer was a high official at Mari; he writes to Zimri-Lim.

Speak to my lord: Thus Mukannishum your servant. (5) I offered a sacrifice to Dagan for the life of my lord, and then the apilum of Dagan of Tut[tul][28] arose and spoke as follows: "O Babylon! How must you be constantly treated? (10) I am going to gather you into a net . . . I will d[eli]ver into the power of Zimri-Li[m] the houses of the seven confederates[30] and all their possessions. Moreover, the apilum of D[agan] . . . he s[poke] as follows (rest destroyed).

Text: ABL, v. No. 437. Translations: L. Waterman, Royal Correspondence of the Assyrian Empire, Vol. 1 (Ann Arbor, 1930), 302-05; B. Landsberger, Brief des Bischöfs von Esagila an König Asarhaddon, Med. d. |onin|, Neder. |ad| v. Weten\schappen, Afd. Letter'unde, NR xvii/6 (Amsterdam, 1965), 46-49. See also W. von Soden, Festschrift V. Christian (Vienna, 1956), 103-04, with references to earlier literature. The writer, who is well known from other reports to Esarhaddon, the one addressed in this letter, served as a kind of ambassador at large. For a penetrating description of his fanaticism and often bizarre theology, see Landsberger, Brief des Bischöfs . . . , 38-57.

meaning, "tent-shrine" (cf. Heb. miš‘-dn); cf. however II Sam. 24: 18 if. (David's altar at the threshing-floor of Araunah).

The translation assumes an erroneous use of the indicative in iqibikum and inasassar; von Soden reads awatum la (ilim) . . . "the apilum spoke the word of (the god) to you . . . why did you not . . ."

Either the Tuttul (Hit) on the Euphrates below Mari, an ancient center of the worship of Dagan, or the one (of two?) west of Mari; see Malamat, Supplement to VT, xv, 216, n. 2.

(minam) te-et-te-ne-e-pē-el is hardly active (Gtn; so Bottero and Malamat), which would be written te-te-ne-(ep)-pi-e (teteneppel), but rather passive (Nin, teteneppes).

"If a n-[m], apparently "your god is a wild-ox," but this yields little sense, and even less if, as Bottero now seems to think (cf. Malamat, Supplement to VT, xv, 218, n. 1), the signs in question belong in the previous line.

The seven (= all) confederates are the allies of Hammurabi; see below, "Treaties and Coalitions," letter h.

{ 625 }
[To the king] my [lord] your servant [Mar-Ishtar].

[Greetings] to the king my lord. [May Nabu and Bel] bless [the king] my lord. [A long life], health and happiness may [the great gods] (5) grant the king my lord. [Damqi], the son of the bishop of Ak[kad],36 [. . .] of the land of Ashur and Babylon [. . .] exercised hegemony over the universe. He [and his queen] have . . . [. . .]; (10) the substitution37 for the king my lord, [the queen-mother] (and) the . . . of Shamash-shum-ukin [he . . .]. For their redemption he went to (his) fate. We built the mausoleum, he (and) his queen (15) were outfitted in their finery, solemnly laid in state, buried, (and) mourned. The burning (of magical figurines) has been performed; all (evil) portents have been rendered ineffective; many rituals against (evil) portents, (the ceremonies) "House of [ritual] bathing," "House of dipping in water," (as well as other) incantation-rituals (and) lamentations for the pacification of the gods, (20) have been carried out punctiliously, in the traditional formulae of the scribal guild. For the information of the king my lord.

I have heard that (even) before these ceremonies (of enthronement), the prophetess38 prophesied, (and) to Damqi, the bishop's son, she said: (25) "You shall bear my kingship." (reverse) Moreover, the prophetess said to him in an assembly of the people: "I have indicated the . . .39 of my lord, I have turned you over (to the assembly)."

The apotropaic (5) rituals which were performed went perfectly. The king my lord should be exceedingly gratified. (Of course) the Akkadians were frightened, (but) we reassured them (and) they calmed down. I heard (too) that the bishops and the high (temple-) officials of Akkad were frightened. (10) (Thus) have Bel and Nabu (and) all the great gods prolonged the life of the king my lord. However, during the eternity of the eclipse and the conjunction of the gods he (the king) must not in fact go to the (palace?) limits.

If it is acceptable to the king my lord, (15) a commoner should be appointed to the bishopric as previously. He should offer the daily sacrifices before the high-altar; on the days of the monthly-feasts and (the feast) of the "Greeting of the temple" he should pour out the incense on the censor-stands [before] the Lady of Akkad, (and then) should (the moon) bring about an eclipse (and with it) affe[ct] Akkad, (20) [. . .] he should serve as the king's substitute. (21-25 fragmentary) Whoever is acceptable to the king my lord, the king my lord should appoint in his (Damqi's) place.

38 Akkad (ian) = Babylon (ian) in this and the following letter.
37 The substitute-king took on himself all the evil portents which would otherwise have affected the king himself.
39 rpqintu (masc. raggimu), lit., "shouter."
30 [a]-ti tu lar-rī-iq-tu; see Landsberger, Brief des Bischofs . . ., 48, n. 84. partly transliterated); F. M. T. de Liagre Böhl, Afgadian Chrestomathy, i (Leiden, 1947), No. 94 (with conjectured restorations not indicated as such). Translations: L. Waterman, Royal Correspondence . . . , 1, 2-5; E. Ebeling, AOT, 328 (with references to earlier literature). See also K. Deller, RA (future number).

The letter is addressed to Assurbanipal.

To the king [my lord] your servant Adad-shum- [ usur]. Greetings to the king [my lord]. May Nabu and Marduk bless the king [my lord] (5) most richly. Ashur the king of the gods has pronounced the name given parental care, not sold off or given as pledges for the payment of debts, of heaven and earth have brought about (15) in the time of the king my lord.

Old men dance,48 young men sing, Women and maidens are glad and make merry.46 Wives they take, deck with ear-[ri]ngs9

(20) Beget sons and daughters—the offspring are instructed.48 Whom his crime had condemned to death, the king my lord has let live; [who] was held prisoner many [ye]-ars, is set free;48 [who] were sick many days, have recovered, (reverse) The hungry have been sated; the lice-infested60 have been anointed; the naked have been clad in garments.60a

A Royal Decree of Equity

Speak to Etel-pi-Marduk: Thus Samsu-iluna. The king my father ḫ[x ///l] (5) In order to [. . . ] the land, I have taken [my seat] on the throne of [my father's] house. Moreover, in order to bol[ster up] the ten[ant(s)], [I ha]ve remitted (10) the arrears of the [. . . ], the tenant-farmers (and) [the shepherds]; [the debt]-tablet[s] of the soldier, the fisherman, and the musū-emu61 (15) I have broken,52 and I have established equity in the land. In the land of [. . . ] no one is to make demands on the house83 of a soldier, a fisherman, or a musū-emu. (20) As soon as you re[ad] my tablet, you and the elders of the land under your command are to come up here and have an audience with me.

A Letter to a God

Text (transliteration only) and translation: G. Dossin, Syria, xix (1938), 126. Letters to gods, of which another example from Man is ARM, 1, No. 3, are also known from Sumerian sources; they are attested in Akkadian as late as the seventh century B.C. For the Akkadian material, see E. A. Speiser, "Ancient Mesopotamia," in The Idea of History in the Ancient Near East (New Haven, 1955), ed. Robert C. Dentan, 60-67 (with references to earlier literature); A. Leo Oppenheim, JNES, xix (1960), 133-47.

Speak to Ida (the river-god) my lord: Thus Zimri-Lim your servant. I herewith send a gold cup to my lord. At an earlier date I wrote my report to my lord;54 my lord reveal[ed] a sign.88 May my lord (10) make the sign which he revealed come true for me. Moreover, may my lord not neglect to protect my life, may my lord not turn [his face elsewhere, (15) besides me may my lord have need of no one el[se].

Punishment by Fire

Text: G. Dossin, Symbolae ad iura orientis antiqui pertinentes Paulo Koschaker dedicatae, Studia . . . ad iura orientis antiqui pertinentia, VoL xi (Leiden, 1939), 113. Translation: ibid., 115. The writer was the king of Carchemish.

Speak to Zimri-Lim: Thus Yatar-Ami your son.86 Now as to these two men from here (5) whom I sent to

The meaning of this term is disputed; for one view, see above 166, n. 44. H. Petschow, ZA, lvii (1965), 150: dependent on crown, but free in the city, and therefore seldom distinguished from aulīum, the free-man.

54 ana bitim lasium, lit., "to call at the house," is a legal expression with the broad meaning of demanding something (or a service or a person) from a family; see K. Yaron, Orientalia NS, 34 (1965), 24-27.

55 The nature of the sign is not clear; B. Landsberger, WO, 111/3-4 (1966), 73, n. 97, who notes here a certain similarity to the biblical conception of sign, has suggested dreams.

56 Contrary to general usage, the filial relationship does not mean that Yatar-Ami was a vassal of Zimri-Lim, but is amply an expression of respect.

{ 627 }
Treaties and Coalitions

Text: J. Laessoe, Det første assyriske Imperium, et Aspekt (Copenhagen, 1966), 84-86. Translations: J. Laessoe, People of Ancient Assyria (London, 1963), 147-48, revised and completed in Det forste . . . , 83, 87. The writer is the king of Assyria who ousted the dynasty of Yahdun-Lim from Mari; he here writes to a vassal in Shemshara (ancient Shusharra) in the Zagros Mountains to the east, where this tablet was found.

Speak to Kuwari: Thus Shamshi-Adad. Surely you have heard about the hostility of Yashub-Addu (5) the Ahzaean.92 Prior to this he had followed93 the man of the Shimurraeans, deserted the man of the Shimurraeans and followed the man of the Tirukkaeans. He deserted the man of the Tirukkaeans and (10) followed the Ya'ilanum (tribe). He deserted the Ya'ilanum (tribe) and followed me. Even me he deserted and has been following the man of Kakmu. Moreover, to all (15) these kings he has sworn an oath. It is scarcely three years since he became an ally and an enemy of these kings.

When he became an ally, (20) he swore an oath to me in the temple of Adad of Arrapha. Again, on the bank of the (Lower) Zab, in A'innum, he swore an oath to me; moreover, I swore an oath to him.94 Twice he swore an oath to me. (25) From the time he took the hem of my garment, I never collected any silver, oxen, sheep, or grain from his land; (30) I did not seize a single town in his land. (Nevertheless), having now become my enemy, he has been following the man of Kakmu. He becomes the ally of a king and (35) and swears an oath, (then) he becomes the ally of (another) king and swears an oath, while becoming an enemy of the first king with whom he was allied. His alliance with, and then hostility to, the king he is allied with [take place] within two months. With me [he was allied] for [x] months, and again he is host[i]le. (45) I have now arri[ved][95] (and been here) these [x] months, but he has given me no help. When he moves up (for battle), you will he[ar][96] all that I am doing in his land.97

The God of My Father

Text (transliteration only) and translation: G. Dossin, Syria, xix (1938), 117. The letter is addressed to Zimri-Lim; this excerpt, the only part published, tells much about political power before Hammurabi imposed the pax babylonica.

(22) Moreover, with regard to what my lord wrote here to the kings, saying, "Come to the sacrifice in honor of Ishtar," I gathered the kings to Sharmaneh and conveyed this message to them: "There is no king who is strong just by himself. Ten (to) fifteen kings are following98 (25) Hammurabi the man of Babylon; so, too, Rim-Sin the man of Larsa; so, too, Ibal-pi-el the man of Eshnunna; so, too, Amut-pi-el the man of Qatna; and (and) twenty kings are following Yarim-Lim the man of Yamhad."99

a
A Loan between Gentlemen

Speak to Muarih: the commissioner: Greetings to you. As to your writing here and saying: "He has acquired your servants from the hands of Hehea the Egyptian for 400 shekels of silver, but there are 140 shekels of my own money (10) which are outstanding. Moreover, he has now entered the temple and indeed said under oath (that) in fact he had not handed over your servants. I (still) have (15) their ransom money."—I shall give (you) the money you personally disemburse, and he has returned my servants to me, so give (20) your 80 shekels and do not put interest (on a loan) between us. We are each of us gentleman.

Divine Revelations

APPENDIX

The following letters from G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi, 1967) were published too late for inclusion in the original manuscript. They are arranged, as above, according to the distinction of laity (k-t), ecstatics (see p. lines 22 ff.), apilum/apiltum (u-w), and—a new category—gamtum (x). A translation of a selection of these letters by G. Dossin may be found in La divination en Mesopotamie ancienne et dans les régions voisines. XIV* Rencontre Assyriologique Internationale (Paris, 1966), 82-85 (hereafter, La divination). Our disagreements in readings and interpretation are not noted here; for a discussion of them together with a fuller treatment of these new texts, see the translator’s article in Biblica, L (1969), 15-56.

k

Text: G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi), No. 4. The writer of the letter was the daughter of Yarim-Lim of Aleppo, who helped Zimri-Lim regain the throne of Mari (see n. 26). She sends this and letters l-o, t to her husband. That the words of the unnamed man and woman, who are so prominent in this letter, were considered revelations in some sense is clear from their being designated "word, utterance" (with oracular significance, Akk. i-gerr&m, lines 6, 10) and, implicitly, "signs, portents" (line 4). However, why they were so esteemed remains obscure.

Speak to my lord: Thus Shibtu your maid-servant. For a report on the campaign my lord is waging, I inquire (5) of a man and a woman . . . , for the signs, reading (ina fubatiya) gu-ul-lu-lim u lu-uf-fi: on gullulum, rather than guululum, see B. Landsberger, WZKM, lvii (1961), 11, n. 47; luufi is taken as the §-inf. of luuff. Unless the first ina in luuffina, ina bitini innakxodu, is a ample mistake and to be ignored (translate then: "wool in our house is consumed like bread"), it must be taken as a conjunction in a probably very colloquial use (so the translation).

Reading [x->x] le-qit-lum [§-inf]-e-bu; leqitum is an error for leqatum. Probably two signs (BAR.KI?); unintelligible. and the (oracular) word was very favorable to my lord. Similarly, I inquired of the man and woman with regard to Ishme-Dagan, (10) and the (oracular) word concerning him was not favorable. As to the report on him, he has been placed under the foot of my lord. Thus they (spoke): "My lord raised the humasum to Ishme-Dagan, (15) saying, 'I shall beat you (in a contest) with the humasum. Just wrestle and I shall beat you in wrestling.'" Thus I (spoke): "Is my lord approaching battle?" Thus they (spoke): "(20) No battle will be fought. Right after arriving his (Ishme-Dagan’s) auxiliary troops will be scattered, (25) and they will cut off the head of Ishme-Dagan and then put it under the foot of my lord. Thus my lord will say: 'The army of Ishme-Dagan is large, and if I [amV], (30) will his auxiliary forces be scattered from him? They have hemmed in my own auxiliary forces.' It is Dagan, Adad, Itur-Mer and Belet-ekallim—and Adad is indeed the lord of decision—who are marching at the side of my lord. Thus they are constantly . . . (34) They do not accept . . . [Be]fore my lord his army will be scattered."

I am not making them speak. They speak on their own, and on their own they ag[ree]). (40) Thus they (spoke): "The auxiliary forces of Ishme-Dagan are (made up of) captives. With acts of treason and treachery they are constantly . . . (35) Heaven forbid that my lord should s[ay] this, 'With arms I [must defeat them].'

Speak to my lord: Thus Shibtu your maid-servant. The palace is safe and sound. (5) In the temple of Annunitum, on the third day (of the month), Sulebhum went into a trance. Thus (spoke) Annunitum: "O Zimri-Lim, with a revolt (10) they would put you to the test. Guard yourself. At your side put servants, your controllers whom you love. (16) Station them so they can guard you. Do not go about by yourself. (20) And as for the men who would put you [to the test], I shall deliver [th]ese men into your hand." Now I have hereby dispatched to my lord the ha[ir and fringe] (25) of the cu[lt-player]. are safe and sound. (5) Moreover, Kakkalidi had the following vision in the temple of Itur-Mer: Two huge transports were blocking the river, and the king with the soldiers (10) was already on board in the center. Those on the right and the left were [shouting]. Thus they (spoke): "Kingship, [seat] and throne, (15) the upper and lower region" have been given to Zimri-Lim. And the soldiers to a man were answering: "To Zimri-Lim alone have they been given." These transports to the gate of the palace . . . (break).

P

Text: G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi), No. 50. Translation: G. Dossin, La divination, 84. The writer of the letter is known as a woman of some means and high position at the court of Mari. A disturbing dream of years back has returned, and this is made all the more ominous by a recent warning of an ecstatic which indicates the king is in danger.

Speak to my lord: Thus Addu-duri your maid-servant. Since the peace of your father's house I have never had this dream. These were my signs before. In my dream I entered the temple of Belet-ekallim and Belet-ekallim (10) was not in residence nor the statues before her present. And I saw this and went on weeping. This dream of mine was in the evening-watch. Again (I dreamt) and Dada, the priest (15) of Istar-pisra was on duty in the gate of Belet-ekallim, and an eerie voice was crying this over and over, saying: "Come back, O Dagan! (20) Come back, O Dagan!" This it was crying over and over. Moreover, the ecstatic arose in the temple of Annunitum and thus (spoke), saying: "O Zimri-Lim, do not go on an expedition. (25) Stay in Mari, and then I alone will take responsibility." My lord must not be negligent in guarding himself. (30) I myself hereby seal my hair and fringe and send (them) to my lord. 80

Q

Text: G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi), No. 51. Translation: G. Dossin, La divination, 84.

Speak to my lord: Thus Addu-duri. Iddin-ili, the priest (5) of Itur-Mer, saw a dream. Thus he (spoke): "In my dream Belet-biri stepped up to me and (10) spoke as follows. Thus she (spoke): 81 is [his] king, and the rule is his permanent possession. (15) Why does he keep going up again and again to the family-house? Let him guard himself." Now my lord must not be negligent in guarding himself.

F

Text: G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi), No. 94. The writer seems to have lived with the king's daughter in the palace of the ruler of Iłansura, a vassalage of Mari. She addresses the king in ARM, x, 95 as "the Star," a form of address confined elsewhere to his family, and hence she must have been quite close to the king.

[Speak] to my lord [the Star]: Thus Shibat[um] your maid-servant. . . 82 (rev.) . . . (5') In the dream (it went) thus: A man of [ . . ] stepped up and thus he (spoke): "Let the girl, the daughter of . . . pahim, . . . Tagidnate, be summoned." This he said to me. Now, (10') let my lord have the har[pis]pex look into the matter, and if this [dr]eam was s[e]en, my lord, have confidence in this girl and let her be summoned. And may the health of my lord . . .

S

Text: G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi), No. 100. Translation: G. Dossin, La divination, 84-85. Unfortunately, the identity of the writer of the letter is unknown. This might help explain where and why the god Dagan is so easily accessible to her.

Speak to my lord: Thus . . . nana, your maid-servant. When I lived in Ganibatum, I went Kukkimkhiya to Rubben, and on her way they made off with her. But Dagan, your lord, protected me and no one touched me. Dagan said this to me. Thus he (spoke): (10) "Did you head up (or) down?" Thus I (spoke): "Down, and I came here and did not find my girl. When (15) my lord went to Andariq, the very image of my girl appeared here with Sammetar, and I went to him and he gave [me] his consent. (20) Again he broke faith with me and did not give me my girl." Dagan said this to me. Thus he (spoke): "Until the time Zimri-Lim frees your girl, no one (25) will release (her) to you." Now, in accordance with the wrath of Dagan, my lord must not detain my girl.

81 Reading [foo-nu-ou-ad-du -tum] meaning deduced from context.
82 This refers to the restoration of the dynasty when the Assyrians were expelled.
83 This is the first of the three watches into which the night was divided. The significance of this detail escapes us.
84 An Istar figure known only from Mari texts; see J. Bottero, ARMT, vii, p. 343.
85 The apparent failure to send the hair and fringe of the ecstatic is probably to be explained by ARM, vii, 45 where we find the priest Akhum reported to have given the hair and fringe of an unnamed ecstatic to the governor of Mari. Addu-duri sends the legal symbols on her own, probably to show the king how serious she considered the matter.
86 A Mesopotamian goddess after whom one of the months in the Mari calendar was named. The significance of her appearance here is not clear.
87 Probably the family grave or sanctuary where cult was shown to ancestors.
88 Or perhaps Shimatum.
89 The obverse, which is badly damaged, does not seem to deal with the subject of the dream except perhaps indirectly. If iulum on the last line of the reverse refers to the king's health, and not to greetings from him, then the dream may deal by implication with this subject and perhaps the girl was supposed to be endowed with healing powers.
90 A city between Terqa and Emar on the Middle Euphrates; see M. Burke, RA, LV (1961), 147-151.
91 Since she does not seem to have accompanied the girl, this can only mean that the kidnapers did not come into Ganibatum.
92 That is, go north into the Upper Country, or south towards Mari. She seems to have got at least as far as Terqa where this letter seems to have been written.
Text: G. Dossin, ARM, χ (TCL, xxxi), No. 117. The identity of the writer of the letter is uncertain.

Speak to Addu-duri, my mistress: Thus Timlu yo[u]r maid-servant. Let it be a sign that at the time of . . .

(5) Yar'ib-Abba expelled me from Kasapa and I cam[e and] said [this] to you. Thus I (spoke): "I had a [dre]jam about yo[u, and] (10) in my dr[eam] Annum . . .\n
Text: G. Dossin, ARM, χ (TCL, xxxi), No. 9. The prophet mentioned on the obverse is otherwise unknown. He intervenes, not as the bearer of a revelation, but in his own name and authority; cf. above letter f. The very poor condition of the tablet makes it impossible to determine just what the issue is. On the reverse, which is in no better condition, someone (the prophet of the obverse?) seems to tell of an experience in which he witnessed a meeting of the gods of the circle of Ea. Again the point at issue is most obscure.

Speak to my lord: Thus Shibtu your maid-servant. The palace is safe and sound. (5) Qishti-Diritim, the prophet of Diritum, (10) no one . . . To Zimri-Lim alaitum has been gi[ven]\n
\n\n
Text: G. Dossin, ARM, χ (TCL, xxxi), No. 81. Inibshina was a daughter of Zimri-Lim and dedicated to the god Adad as an ugubatu-priestess\n
The prophetess probably delivered her oracle publicly, though no temple is mentioned. In view of letter n, the god inspiring her was probably Anunnitum.

Speak to the Star: Thus Inibshina. Ininbana the prophetess (5) arose and spoke as follows, saying: "O Zimri-Lim, the city Sharrakiya (10) \[shall give to\] its enemies and those [en]circling it. . . (16) I hereby give you my hair and fringe. Let them declare (me) free (of legal claims)." I now hereby send (20) the hair and the fringe to the Star. Let the Star [have] an omen taken so that he may act in accordance with his omens. Let the Star guard himself.

X

Text: G. Dossin, ARM, x (TCL, xxxi), No. 80. Translation: G. Dossin, La divination, 83.

Speak to the Star: Thus Inibshina. Earlier Shelebum the cult-player (5) gave [me] an oracle and I wrote to you. Now the qamatum of Dagan of Terqa came here and spoke as follows. (10) Thus she (spoke): "The peace-moves of the man of Eshnunna are sheer deception. Under the straw the water courses, but (15) I am going to gather him into a net which holds fast. I shall put an end to his city, and his property, which from ancient times has not been destroyed, I shall destroy," (20) This she said to me. Now guard yourself. Without an omen do not enter the city. (25) Here is what I hear: "He keeps moving about by himself." You are not to keep moving about by yourself!\n
\n\n
108 A goddess named after the town of Khishamta between Mari and Terqa.

109 Reading [\(\ldots\)] wa-ar-kt-ka-
110 ma \[\ar-l\frak{a} i-a-hu  a \{t\[a-as\}a i-
111 [i-a]-a-t-tu-u in lines 8-11; lines 12-13 are unintelligible.

113 This request we understand as implicitly one for the consultation of the haruspex, whose response, she is sure, will confirm her oracle, and thus clear her of the claims symbolized by the hair and fringe.

114 The expression refers to the activity of the haruspex, who examined the liver or other exta.

115 The term (read qa-bat-tum) is new and from the nature and style of her message she would seem to be a type of prophetess.

116 This is clearly a proverb and its meaning is that one cannot trust appearances, like the flotsam lying so quiedy on the surface while underneath flows the current.
Assignment to a New Lessor of Land Abandoned in the Egyptian Rebellion of 410 B.C.

This is one of a collection of documents and fragments of documents, written on leather and enclosed in a leather bag, which were acquired by the late Ludwig Borchardt in Egypt. They were first studied by a group of scholars who were living in Berlin in the early 1930's. A typewritten study by those scholars was acquired by the Bodleian Library (Oxford) from Borchardt's executors together with the documents in 1943-44 and was utilized by G. R. Driver, who published them as Aramaic Documents of the Fifth Century B.C. in 1954 and, in a revised edition, but without the fragments and without the photographic plates, in 1957. This particular letter, numbered VIII by Driver, had meanwhile been published in Bulletin of the Faculty of Arts, Cairo, x/2, 113-30, by Murad Kamil, who had had access to a photograph of it.

The sender of the letter, Arsames, was the Persian satrap of Egypt (and of Babylonia and Transseuphrates as well?) in the last two decades of the fifth century B.C. It may have been written less than a year after the rebellion to which it refers, and it probably originated in Babylon, which is named in some of the other letters. Arsames is known (see p. 492a) to have been absent from Egypt during, and for a couple of years after, the rebellion.

(inside)

(1) From Arsames to Nakht-Hor the Comptroller and his colleagues.

Now, Petosiri (as he is called), a forester, a servant of mine, has written to me as follows: "In the matter of [my father] Pamun (as he [was called]). When [2] the rebellion occurred in Egypt, in the course of it my father the said Pamun (as he was called) perished and the farm occupied by him, measuring a seed requirement of 30 ardabs, was abandoned; for our staff perished] to a man. [Therefore, let them assign] (3) the farm of my father Pamun to me. Take thought on my behalf: let them assign it to me to occupy."

Arsames, therefore, commands thus: If the facts accord with the above statement of Petosiri in his letter to [me concerning] his father the said [Pamun] (4) (as he was called)—if he did perish together with [his] staff when the rebellion occurred in Egypt, [and] the farm of his father [the said] Pamun, measuring a seed requirement of 30 ardabs, was abandoned—and if it has (5) not been (re)joined [to my estate] and assigned by me to another servant of mine, then I hereby assign the farm of the said Pamun to Petosiri. You for your part advise him (thus): Let him occupy it and let him pay (6) the land-tax to my estate just as it was formerly paid by his father Pamun.

(7) Artobi is cognizant of this order; Rasht is the clerk.

---

iLit.: "There is."

* Lit.: "his."

A conventional manner of indicating acreage, not limited to cultivated land. For Akkadian parallels, see CAD, ii, 294b (lowest third), xxii, 928-93a. For biblical parallels, cf. Lev. 27:16; I Ki. 18:32; Isa. 5:10 (sertt homer, usually mistranslated as if it were homer zercC, can only mean "an area requiring a homer of seed," [so rightly Targum], as in Lev. 27:16). For Roman Palestine, cf. e.g. Mishnah Baba Bathra 7:1-2.

Nby by the Neo-Babylonian nile biti, not from the ordinary Aramaic nym, "women."

* Plural; cf. 1. 1.
X. Miscellaneous Texts
Dumuzi and Inanna

PRIDE OF PEDIGREE

This poem, which consists largely of a dialogue between Inanna and Dumuzi, begins with a boastful address by the goddess intended to impress her husband-to-be with the importance of her family for his well-being (lines 1-6). Dumuzi's answer, gentle but firm, is that his family is as good as Inanna's (lines 7-22). But this little quarrel serves only to arouse their passion for each other and they proceed to indulge their love (lines 23-30). There follows a tender and poetic tête-à-tête between the two which seems to further stimulate their love, but the passage is allusive and metaphorical in character, and its meaning is far from clear (lines 31-45).

"Without my mother, you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain,
Young man, without my mother, you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain,
Without my mother Ningal, you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain,
Without the 'Lady of the Holy Reed' you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain,
Without Father Sin, you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain,
Without my brother Utu, you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain.
Without my mother, you would be driven into street (and) . . . -plain,
Young lady, do not start a quarrel,
Inanna, let us talk it over,
Inanna, let us talk it over;
Ninegalla, let us take counsel together. (10)

My father is as good as your father,
Inanna, let us talk it over;
My mother is as good as your mother,
Ninegalla, let us take counsel together;
Geshtinanna is as good as . . .,²
Inanna, let us talk it over;
I am as good as Utu,
Ninegalla, let us take counsel together;
Enki is as good as Sin,
Inanna, let us talk it over; (20)
Sirtur is as good as Ningal,
Ninegalla, let us take counsel together."

The word they had spoken, it is a word of desire,*
With the starting of a quarrel comes the desire of her heart.
He of the shuba-stones, he of the x/iw-as tones, plows the shuba-stones*
Amaushumgalanna, he of the shuba-stones, plows the shuba-stones,
He of the shuba-stones . . .,
He of the shuba-stones . . .,
... who fills the water of the roof, fills for her the water of the roof,
... who fills the water of the walls, fills for her the water of the walls. (30)

[His] wife, [the hierodule], says to Amaushumgalanna:
"[Plow] the shuba-s tones, plow the shuba-s tones, who (else) will plow them for her?²⁵
Amaushumgalanna, plow the shuba-sx.orit.sy who (else) will plow them for her?
Of the \(na\)-shuba-stones, of the \[na-shuba-stones\], their small ones on the . . . -face of the melam,
Of the \[na-shuba-stones\], of the \[na-shuba-stones\], their large ones are the holy breast of the melam."

Amaushumgalanna answers the hierodule:
"Who is a hierodule, my wife who is a hierodule,
Holy Inanna, he who is not — will plow them for her.
He of the na-shuba-stones, he of the na-shuba-stones plows the shuba-stones, Amaushumgalanna, he of the na-shuba-stones plows the shuba-stones. (40)
"Plow the shuba-stones, plow the shuba-s tones, who (else) will plow them for her?²⁶
Amaushumgalanna, plow the shuba-stouts, who (else) will plow them for her?
Of him who was made for me, of him who was made for me, his beard is lapis lazuli,
Who was made by An for me, his beard is lapis lazuli; . . . his beard is lapis lazuli; . . . his beard is lapis lazuli."

¹ Ninegalla, "queen of the palace" (cf. also lines 14, 18, and 22), is an epithet of Inanna.
² Dumuzi is probably comparing his sister Geshtinanna to Inanna's sister (the name is only partially preserved), although Inanna had not mentioned the latter.

³ Lines 23 and 24, if the translation is correct, contain what seems to be a proverbial comment on the psychological value of a lover's quarrel.
⁴ The obscure references to plowing the shuba-stones in this line and lines 26, 27, 28, 32, 33, 39, 40, 41, and 42 and to the na-shuba-stones in lines 33, 34, 35, 39 and 40 are probably metaphorical expressions for sexual intercourse.
⁵ In lines 32, 33, 38, 41, 42 the "her" probably refers to Inanna, although it is the goddess who is speaking, and we might therefore have expected "me" instead.
⁶ Lines 41-45 are all assumed to be part of Inanna's speech and her queries (lines 41-42) therefore remain unanswered by Dumuzi.
It is a durgar of Inanna. Written with a tablet reed, with a reed.8

LOVE IN THE GIPAR

This narrative poem is divided into two stanzas by the rubric sa-gid-da-am (line 25). The first six lines are quite obscure; the remainder of the first stanza is taken up with a detailed account of Inanna’s bedecking the various parts of her body with precious stones, jewels, and ornaments, which she selects from what seems to be a treasure-heap brought to her by a “date-gathering” devotee. The second stanza tells of the meeting between the bejeweled Inanna and Dumuzi in the Eanna of Erech, a meeting which so fills Inanna with desire and passion that she sends a special messenger to her father (no doubt the god Sin) with the request that he (that is, perhaps, her father) make her house “long” so that she and her lover can take their pleasure in it.

For a transliteration and translation of the text which was published in TRS, No. 70, cf. PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, pp. 495-97.

. . . .
Holly Inanna . . .
He who gathers the dates, . . . the date palm,
Who gathers the dates, . . . the date palm for Inanna,
He brought her water, he brought her water, for the seed, the black,
He brought Inanna a heap (of precious stones) by the water for the seed, the white.
He brought her, he brought her, he brought a heap of (precious) stones to pick from,
He brought the maid Inanna, he brought her a heap of (precious) stones to pick from,
Of the heap—he gathers the lapis lazuli (stones) onto its "breast."
Of the heap, for Inanna he gathers the lapis lazuli (stones) onto its "breast." (10)
She picks the buttocks-stones, puts them on her buttocks,
Inanna picks the head-stones, puts them on her head,
She picks the duru-lapis lazuli stones, puts them on her nape,
She picks ribbons1 of gold, puts them in her hair of the head,
She picks the narrow gold earrings, puts them on her ears,
She picks the bronze eardrops,2 puts them on her earlobes,
She picks "that which drips honey," puts it on her face,
She picks "that which covers the princely house," puts it on her nose,’

1 For the durgar genre of poetic compositions cf. line 620 of Proto Lu, Landsberger manuscript as completed by M. Civil.
2 The subscription contained in line 47 is unique, as far as I know.
3 "Ribbons" attempts to render nig-sal-la, perhaps literally "narrow things."
4 "Eardrops" attempts to render i-g-su-u-b-ag-a, "that which pressers."
5 The objects mentioned in lines 18 and 19 cannot be identified from the literal meaning of the descriptive phrases used for them.

For whom the heap of lapis lazuli stones had been gathered—the en met her,
Inanna for whom the heap of lapis lazuli stones had been gathered—Dumuzi met her,
In the "navel of heaven," the house of Enlil, the en met her,
In the Eanna, Enlil’s herdsman Dumuzi met her,
Who was standing at the lapis lazuli door of the gipar—the en met her,
Who was standing by the narrow door of the storehouse of Eanna—Dumuzi met her.
When to the "breast" of the heap she returned them,4 When Inanna, to the "breast" of the heap, she returned them,
The woman . . . her ilulamma-song.
The maid, singing, sent a messenger to her father, Inanna, dancing, sent a messenger to her father: "My house? my house, let him make it 'long' for me, I the queen—my house, my house let him make it 'long' for me,
My gipar-house let him make it 'long' for me,
The people will set up my fruitful bed, (40)
They will cover it with plants (the color of) duru-lapis lazuli,
I will bring there my sweetheart,
I will bring there Amaushumgalanna,
He will put his hand by my hand,
He will put his heart by my heart,
His putting of hand to hand—its sleep is so refreshing,
His pressing of heart to heart—its pleasure is so sweet."

COURTING, MARRIAGE, AND HONEYMOON

The text was published in SLTN, No. 35; the transliteration, translation, and a very brief commentary were published in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, pp. 497-99.

(1) The beginning of this Dumuzi-Inanna myth is fragmentary, and little can be made of its contents; it seems to begin with an account of a marriage ceremony, and continues with an address of obscure meaning in the Emešal dialect by a female deity, presumably Inanna. The narrative seems to begin again with col. 20, but it is not until line 25 that the text becomes intelligible, we then learn that Dumuzi has come to Inanna's house with gifts of fat, milk, and beer, and pleads for admission [col. i 25-31].

The shepherd carried fat by hand, Dumuzi carried fat and milk at the side, He carried fat and milk in small pitchers at the side, He carried milk and beer in ... at the side, My lord speaks by the house.

It is not until line 25 that the text becomes intelligible, going for advice to her mother who urges her strongly not to fail to take along her dowry and seal [col. ii 12-17]; she opens the door for Dumuzi and they embrace and cohabit [col. ii 18-22].

The hierodule . . .

Directed her feet to the mother who gave birth to her. "Your Lo, the youth . . .

Lo, the youth, he . . . for you, Lo, the youth, he is your father, Lo, the youth, he is your mother, His mother has ... like your mother, His father has ... you like your father, Open the house, my queen, open the house."

Inanna, at the command of her mother, Bathed, anointed herself with goodly oil, Covered her body with the noble /««garment, Took . . ., her dowry, Arranged the lapis lazuli about (her) neck, Grasped (her) seal in her hand.

The lady directed her step, Opened the door for Dumuzi, In the house she came forth to him like the light of the moon, Gazed at him, rejoiced for him, Embraced him . . . .

(What follows then is entirely obscure since the remainder of col. iii and much of col. iv are largely destroyed, except for a passage in which Dumuzi is addressing some individual or deity whom he is placing in charge over a city described as an "assembly" city, with instructions to refrain from certain actions (presumably) harmful to his wife, [col. iv 6-17].)

It is an [assembly city], your city is an assembly city, I have put you in charge over the assembly city, Your city . . . it is an assembly city, I have put you in charge . . ., I did not put my mother ... in charge of it, I did not put [my] brother ... in charge of it, I did not put my sister Geshtinanna in charge of it, It is you ... whom I have put in charge of it. Do not lay a hand on my wife, Do not . . ., Do not build . . ., Do not . . .

THE ECSTASY OF LOVE

The formal structure of this tender and ardent love song is rather unusual. It consists of two soliloquies by the goddess separated from each other by a brief tête-à-tête between the goddess and her lover Dumuzi; the first soliloquy and its ensuing tête-a-tête make up the first stanza, designated by the scribe as a sugidda, while the second soliloquy takes up the entire second stanza, designated by the scribe as a sagarru. In Inanna's first soliloquy (obv. lines 1-8), the goddess relates that one night, while she was innocently singing and dancing about, presumably in heaven, Dumuzi met her, held her hand, and embraced her. There follows a brief dialogue between them consisting of Inanna's plea (obv. lines 9-12) to Dumuzi to let go of her since on coming home she will have to deceive her mother and she does not know how, and Dumuzi's suggestion (obv. lines 13-22) to tell her mother that she whiled away the hours with a girl friend in the public square, an excuse that will enable them to spend the night making love by the moonlight. The extant part of Inanna's second soliloquy which is rather elliptical and allusive, begins with an exulting pronouncement of her arrival at the "gate" of her mother Ningal accompanied by Dumuzi who "will say the word" to her, that is, no doubt, ask for her daughter's hand (rev. lines 4-13); it concludes with an ecstatic eulogy of her husband-to-be and the fertility insured by their sacred marriage (rev. lines 14-21).

For a transliteration and translation of the text which was published in TuMNF, ii, No. 25, cf. PAPS, Vol 107, No. 6, pp. 499-501.

(Obverse) Last night, as I, the queen, was shining bright, Last night, as I, the queen of heaven, was shining bright, As I was shining bright, as I was dancing about, As I was uttering a song at the brightening of the oncoming night, He met me, he met me, The Lord Kuli-Anna1 met me,

Starting with this line, we find Dumuzi called by different names,
The lord put his hand into my hand, Ushumgalanna embraced me.

"Come now," wild bull, set me free, I must go home,
Kuli-Enlil, set me free, I must go home, (10)
What shall I say to deceive my mother!
What shall I say to deceive my mother Ningal!"

"Let me inform you, let me inform you.
Inanna, most deceitful of women, let me inform you:
My friend took me with her to the public square,
Entertained me there with music and dancing. Her chant, the sweet, she sang for me.
She took me with her to the public square,
Inanna, most deceitful of women, let me inform you:"

"Let me inform you, let me inform you.
I am come to Ningal's gate,
I am come to our noble,
The lord Dumuzi is noble
To my mother Ningal he will say the word, (10)
He will sprinkle cypress oil on the ground,
To my mother he will say the word, (10)
My lord is seemly
The lord is seemly for 'queenship,' (10)
He will sprinkle cypress oil on the ground,
To my mother he will say the word,
Whose word brings deep joy.
He who is well-suited for 'queenship,' (10)
He will sprinkle cypress oil on the ground,
He whose dwelling is fragrant,
Whose word brings deep joy.
My lord is seemly for the holy lap,
Amaushumgalanna, the son-in-law of Sin,
The lord is seemly for the holy lap,
Amaushumgalanna, the son-in-law of Sin.
My lord, sweet is your increase,
Tasty your plants (and) herbs in the plain,
Amaushumgalanna, sweet is your increase,
Tasty your plants (and) herbs in the plain.

It is a sagarra. A tigi-song of Inanna.

Inanna and the King

BLESSING ON THE WEDDING NIGHT

This poem is an epithalamion in the Emesal dialect which is in some respects a companion piece to the last stanza of the Inanna hymn that celebrates the hieros-gamos between King Iddin-Dagan and the goddess. The poet begins with an address, probably to the goddess Inanna, informing her that Gobil had purified for her "the great shrine" in her Eanna temple, and that the king had erected an altar and carried out the lastration rites for her (col. i 1-12); this is followed by a prayer that in the evening when "the day had gone to sleep," and it was time for the goddess "to caress the lord" in the favored sleeping place, she should give the king life and the staff and crook (col. i lines 13-17). The poet then sings of the preparation of the "sleeping place" of kingship and queenship which "rejoices the heart" and "sweetens the lap" (col. i lines 18-31). After a break we find Inanna speaking to the king (?) "words of life, words of long days" (col. ii lines 1-3). Following which Ninshubur takes him by his right forearm(?), leads him to Inanna's lap, and asks her to bless him with everything essential for the well-being of the king and his people: a good reign, a firmly founded throne, a well-governing scepter, a staff and crook for the control of Sumer and Akkad and the lands beyond (col. ii lines 4-18); she should grant him, too, that "he (the king) like a farmer set the fields in order, like a faithful shepherd multiply the sheepfolds" (col. ii lines 19-20); and that under his reign, the land should have all it need: plants and grains, overflow by the rivers, late grain in the fields, fish and birds in the marshes, fresh and mature reeds in the canebrake, "mashgur-trees" in the plains, deer and wild-goats in the forest, honey and wine in the well-watered gardens, vegetables in the trenches (between the furrows), long life in the palace, high water brought by the Tigris and Euphrates to make verdant their banks and watered acres, grain heaps and mounds piled high by the goddess Nidaba (col. ii line 18-col. iii line 4). Following a further request by Ninshubur that the king be allowed to spend a long time in Inanna's lap (col. iii lines 5-6), the king proceeds with "lifted head" to the lap of Inanna and is embraced by her (col. iii lines 7-12).

The text of this composition was published in CT, XII, No. 4. The transliteration and translation by the writer is published in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, pp. 501-03.
She craves it, she craves it, she craves the bed,
She craves the bed of the rejoicing heart, she craves the bed,
She craves the bed of kingship, she craves the bed,
She craves the bed of the sweet lap, she craves the bed,
She craves the bed of queenship, she craves the bed.

By his sweet, by his sweet, by his sweet bed,
She craves the bed of the rejoicing heart, she craves the bed,
By his sweet bed of kingship, by his sweet bed,
By his sweet bed of the sweet lap, by his sweet bed,
By his sweet bed of queenship, by his sweet bed,
He covers [the bed] . . . for her, covers the bed for her,
He covers [the bed] . . . for her, covers the bed for her: (30-3')

(col. ii)

[To] the k[ing] ... , The beloved speaks on his sweet bed,
Speaks to him words of life, words of "long days."

Ninshubur, the trustworthy vizier of the Eanna,
Took him by his right forearm,
Brought him blissfully to the lap of Inanna:
"May the lord whom you have called to (your) heart,
The king, your beloved husband, enjoy long days at your holy lap, the sweet,
Give him a reign favorable (and) glorious,
Give him the throne of kingship on its enduring foundation,
Give him the people-directing scepter, the staff (and) the crook,
Give him an enduring crown, a diadem which ennobles the head,
From (where) the sun rises, to (where) the sun sets,
From south to north,
From the Upper Sea to the Lower Sea,
From (where grows) the halub-tree to (where grows) the cedar,
Over all Sumer and Akkad give him the staff (and) the crook,
May he exercise the shepherdshep of the blackheads (wherever) they dwell,
May he make productive the fields like the farmer,
May he multiply the sheepfolds like a trustworthy shepherd. (20)

Under his reign may there be plants, may there be grain,
At the river, may there be overflow,
In the field may there be late-grain,
In the marshland may the fish (and) birds make much chatter,

---

Dumuzi and Inanna

PRAYER FOR WATER AND BREAD

This rather obscure and heterogeneous composition designated as a sir-nam-sub 'inanna-kam,' is divided into four sections of uneven length. In the first, which consists entirely of a monologue by Inanna (lines 1-18), the goddess speaks of journeying to the Abzu, and to Eridu and its shrines and gods, bringing with her animals and trees. The second section, too, is a monologue by Inanna (lines 19-35), in it the goddess tells of her bringing water (probably) to the marshland, and boasts of her prowess in battle and of uttering a challenge to Utu, Nanna, and Sud. The third section (lines 36-47) seems to be a narrative passage concerned primarily with the Euphrates, whither Enki, Damgalnunna and Asarluhi had gone, presumably with Inanna, and where Enlil was eating and drinking. The fourth section (lines 48-77), obscure as it is, is of significance for the Dumuzi-Inanna marriage ceremony. Following what seems to be a brief soliloquy by Inanna, concerned with the preparation of a marriage bed, presumably by the king (lines 48-51), the "linen weavers" address the king, before whom food and drink had been placed, as Dumuzi, announce to him in riddle-like phrases the presence of Inanna, and invite him to approach the goddess, as well as the place in the 's'hrine where Enlil seems to have been stationed (lines 52-65). Inanna then seems to pronounce a prayer for the life and rule of the king (lines 66-69). The composition closes with a plea to Inanna, perhaps by the king himself, to give him her breast from which he will drink as a symbol of the fertility of the land (lines 70-77).8

---

1 For this rubric cf. Falkenstein, ZA, XLIX, 86, note 4.
2 The real meaning and implication of this section are quite obscure, and it is difficult to relate it to what precedes and follows.
3 The assumed shift of speakers in this passage (Inanna for lines 48-51, the "linen-weavers" for lines 56-65, Inanna for lines 66-69, the king for lines 70-77) is far from assured.
When I proceeded, when I proceeded,

When I, the queen, proceeded to the Abzu,
When I, the queen of heaven, proceeded to the Abzu,
When I proceeded to the Abzu, the princely house,
When I proceeded to Eridu, the goodly,
When I proceeded to the E-Engurra,
When I proceeded to Enlil's house, Eanna,4
When I proceeded to . . .
When I proceeded to the large jars reaching heavenward,

When I proceed to the . . . jars . . . by the pure . . . ,
When I proceeded to the . . .
When I proceeded to Enki who . . .
When I proceeded to Damgalnunna who . . .
When I proceeded to Asarluhi who . . .
I brought along a dog, brought along a lion.
I brought along boxwood, brought along halub-wood,
I, the queen of heaven too along the light winds.

When I go forward, when I go forward,

As one who brings forth water, I come, as one who brings forth water, I come. (20)
[1] the queen, as I proceed to the marshland,
Of the marshland as its . . ., I come.
When I proceeded to the "mouth" of the battle, As one who brings forth its brightest light, I come.
When I proceeded to the front of the battle, As one who brings forth its brightest light, I come.
When I take my stand at the rear of the battle, As one who . . ., I come.
When I enter Enlil's house, As its outstanding "woman of the |ur," I come. (30)
I uttered angry words against the foreign lands,
Seated my husband before me,
Uttered a challenge in the house of the gods,
Uttered a challenge against Utu, against Nanna,
Uttered a challenge against Sud . . .

The river, the river—good like the vast river, like the . . ., good like the city—there is nothing so good,
The river, the princely river—(good) like the vast river, The river, the Euphrates—(good) like the vast river The . . . o/ the Euphrates—(good) like the vast river,

. . . , who . . . li|e . . . ,

Good like the . . ., good like the city, there is nothing as good,

4 The Eanna of Enlil seems to refer to a shrine located in Eridu, not in Erech.
Inanna in which, following a fragmentary, obscure passage (col. i lines 1-21), she proceeds to recount her appointment of Dumuzi to die "godship" of Sumer, her bridal preparations for the ensuing marriage, and the singing and rejoicing which accompanied their union (col. i line 22-col. ii line 9). The text as well as the transliteration and the translation was published in PAPS, Vol 107, No. 6, pp. 505-08.

"I gazed on all the people,
Called Dumuzi to the godship of the Land.
Dumuzi, the beloved of Enlil,
My mother holds ever dear,
My father exalts him.
I bathed, scoured myself with soap,
(And) after putting a linen cloth over the (freshly) bathed s\in,
I arranged my garments as the garments of power,
I make fast for him the noble pa/a-garment, (30)

... Toward the ...

The queen . . .
... the house . . . lapis lazuli . . .,
My house (and) shrine in prayer . . .,
In holy prayer, . . .,
I am . . . the queen of heaven,
The gala chants there (his) song,
The singer brings (his) . . . hymn,
The bridegroom [rejoices] by my side,
The wild bull Dumuzi [rejoices] by my side."

The text continues with a brief and fragmentary narrative passage ending with a statement by the poet that Inanna composed a song to her vulva (col. ii lines 10-17).

Who has . . .,
The little . . .,
. . . Nippur . . .,
. . . the son of . . .,
The . . ., the queen . . . ex[alts him],
The gala [chants there] (his) song,
Inanna ex[a]lts him,
[Composes] a song about her vulva:

(The song itself follows: Inanna compares her vulva to, among other things, fallow land, a field, and a hillock, and ends by asking who will plow it for her (col. ii lines 18-28)).

"The vulva it is . . .,
Like a horn it . . . at the large wagon,
It is the 'Boat of Heaven,' fastening ropes . . .,
Like the new crescent, passion . . .,
It is fallow land, in the plain . . .,
It is a field, which the «z-bird . . . the «z-bird,

It is a high field, my . . .,
As for me, my vulva is a . . . hillock, —for me,
I, the maid, who will be its plower?
My vulva is . . . wet ground for me,
I, the queen, who will station there the ox?"

(To this query comes the answer given probably by Dumuzi himself, that it is he, the king Dumuzi, who will plow it for her, and, accordingly, in the very next line Inanna urges him to do so (col. ii lines 29-31)).

"Lady, the king will plow it for you, Dumuzi, the king, will plow it for you."
"Plow my vulva, my sweetheart."

(Following another fragmentary passage pertaining to the sexual union of the couple comes a detailed description of the ensuing vegetation (col. ii line 31-col. iii line 11)).

[Inanna] bathed (her) holy lap,
The queen of the palace, the holy . . .

(about 11 lines destroyed)

Inanna rejoicing in his house,
Utters a plea to the king:
"Make yellow the milk for me, my bridegroom, make yellow the milk [for me],
My bridegroom, I will [drink] with you the fresh milk.
Wild bull Dumuzi, make yellow the milk for me, (20)
My bridegroom, I will [drink with you] the fresh milk.
The milk of the goat [make flow in] the sheepfold for me,
With the . . . cheese fill my holy churn,
Dumuzi, the milk . . ., the . . . 'cheese of heaven,'
Of the . . . 'cheese of heaven,' its milk . . .,
Its cream is good beer . . .,
Lord Dumuzi, I will [drink] with you the fresh milk.

{643}
My husband, the goodly storehouse, the sheepfold . . . ,
I, Inanna, will preserve for you,
I will [watch] over your house of life. (30)
The brilliant, the place which enraptures the Land,
The house where the fate of all the lands is decreed,
Where the breath of life is ordained for the people,
I, the queen of the palace, will preserve it for you,
I will watch over your house of life.
The house of life, the storehouse which gives long life,
(I, Inanna will) preserve [for you],
[I will watch over your house of life]."

(four lines destroyed)
The heart...
Ningal speaks up with authority (saying);
"I will give you life unto distant days; (10)
Dumuzi, the desire and love of Inanna,
I will preserve it for you,
I will watch over your house of life.
The house whose awesomeness covers the land,
The house in whose midst are the holy rites,
The house whose . . . are most becoming,
. . . with cream, beer, cheese, (and) fat,
. . . I will station for you there."

(The myth ends with what is probably a narrative passage, but the text is fragmentary and unintelligible.)

"Lettuce Is My Hair"
A LOVE-SONG FOR SHU-SIN

This text consists of a song purportedly chanted by a lu|ur-priestess in connection with the hieros-gamos between Shu-Sin, in the role of Dumuzi, and the goddess Inanna, whom she may have represented in the ceremony. The hierodule first sings of her lettuceMike hair that seemed to have been especially set for the occasion (lines 1-8). She then sings of her coming before Shu-Sin, himself, but unfortunately this passage is largely destroyed (lines 9 ff.). She concludes with an ecstatic and loving invocation of the king ending in a wishful blessing for his life (lines 18-22).1

The text, transliteration and translation have been published in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, p. 508 and Fig. 5.

My hair is lettuce, [planted] by the water,
It is tisâ••a/-lettuce, [planted] by the water,
My nurse has . . . high,

1 For this priestess, cf. the introduction to "Love Song to a King," p. 496.
2 For the hieros-gamos ceremony, cf. PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, pp. 489-90.
3 The comparison of hair with lettuce may have had "fertility" significance.
4 Note the designation of Shu-Sin, the husband-to-be as "brother."
5 Note the rather extravagant imagery in the description of Shu-Sin as "silver (and) lapis lazuli" (line 19).

Has made my hair into a . . .,
 Has piled up its small locks,
My attendant arranges it,
The attendant (arranges) my hair which is lettuce, the most favored of plants.
The brother brought me into his life-giving gaze,
Shu-Sin has called me to (his) refreshing . . ., (10)
. . . without [end],

(about 5 lines destroyed)
You are our lord, you are our lord,
Silver (and) lapis lazuli—you are our lord,
Farmer who makes the grain stand high,—you are our lord, (20)
For him who is the honey of my eye, who is the lettuce of my heart,
May the days of life come forth, [may] my Shu-Sin. . .
It is a balbale of Inanna.

"Life Is Your Coming"

THE KING AS BROTHER AND SON-IN-LAW

This poem seems to be a song chanted by a chorus of lu|ur-priestesses to Shu-Sin, probably on the occasion of a hierosgamos celebration. It begins with a passage consisting primarily of a series of epithets of the king, some of which, such as "the ensi of the magur-boat," and "the nubanda of the chariot," are rather unusual and unexpected (lines 1-12). The remainder of the song (lines 13-16) is a jubilant invocation to the king as the bridegroom bringing life and abundance to the "house."
The texts from which this poem was pieced together were published in UET, vi, Part 2, No. 122, and in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, Figs. 5 and 9; the transliteration and translation were published in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, p. 510.

The heart of . . .
You are our brother, [you are our] . . .,
[You are] the . . . brother of the palace,
You are our ensi2 of the magur-boat,
You are our nubanda2 of the chariot,
You are our . . . of the . . . chariot,
You are our city father and judge,
You are the son-in-law of our father,
Brother, you are the son-in-law of our father
You are our most prominent of the sons-in-law,
Our mother5 provides you with all that is good.

Your coming is life,
Your entering the house is abundance,

1 Note, however, that the king's name is not mentioned in the text.
2 The title ensi usually refers to the governor of a city.
3 The title nubanda usually designates a high palace official.
4 "Father" in this and the following line may refer to the god Nanna-Sin, if the singers are speaking for Inanna, who was his daughter.
5 "Our mother" may refer to Ningal, the wife of Nanna-Sin, and mother of Inanna.
Lying with you is the greatest joy,
My sweet . . . .
It is a balbale of Inanna.

"The Honey-man"

LOVE-SONG TO A KING

This song, too, was no doubt chanted by a /«êr-priestess in connection with the hieros-gamos, although the name of the participating king is not mentioned in the text. Instead, he is described in sensuous, concrete, fertility imagery: he is lettuce planted by the water, a well-stocked garden, luxuriant grain in the furrow, a fruit-bearing apple tree, and above all, a "honey-man" who sweetens her body, or rather that of the goddess Inanna whom she represents. Structurally, the poem may be divided into three parts: (1) an initial four-line strophe characterized by "vegetation" symbolism and an identical refrain for three of its lines; (2) a four-line "honeyman" strophe with an identical refrain for three of its lines; (3) a summary two-line strophe ending in the refrain characteristic of the first strophe.

The text was pieced together from tablets published in TRS, xv, No. 20, and UET, vi, Part 1, No. 121. A transliteration and translation were published in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, pp. 508-09.

He has sprouted, he has burgeoned, he is lettuce planted by the water,
My well-stocked garden of the . . . plain, my favored of the womb,
My grain luxuriant in its furrow—he is lettuce planted by the water,
My apple tree which bears fruit up to (its) top—he is lettuce planted by the water.

The "honey-man," the "honey-man" sweetens me ever,
My lord, the "honey-man" of the gods, my favored of the womb,
Whose hand is honey, whose foot is honey, sweetens me ever.
Whose limbs are honey sweet, sweetens me ever.
My sweetener of the . . . navel, [my favored of the womb],
My . . . of the fair thighs, he is lettuce [planted by the water]. (10)
It is a balbale of Inanna.8

"Set Me Free, My Sister"

THE SATED LOVER

As far as can be determined at present, the extant part of this poem consists of several speeches. Lines 21-22 end an address to Inanna by some female deity informing her of some of the virtues and prerogatives presented to her. This is followed by a soliloquy on the part of Inanna reminiscent of "Inanna and Dumuzi: The Ecstasy of Love" in which she chants of meeting her beloved, further designated here as "brother," and "my brother of fairest face," and uniting with him in love so much so that he became "sated" (lines 23-34). The remainder of the poem (lines 35-38) consists of the lover's plea to Inanna, to "set him free," so that he can return with her to the palace where she will be treated as a "young daughter" by the father.4

A transliteration and translation of the poem, as well as the texts on which it is based, were published in PAPS, Vol. 107, No. 6, pp. 509-10, and Figs. 6, 7, and 8.

... sweet allure,
My holy Inanna, I presented to you."

"As . . . the beloved of my eye,
My beloved met me,
Took his pleasure of me, rejoiced together with me.
The brother brought me to his house
Made me lie on its . . . honey bed,
My precious sweet, having lain by my heart,
In unison, the 'tongue-making' in unison,
My brother of fairest face, made 50 times. (30)
I . . . for him like a weaking,
I set it up for him in the . . . together with . . . from the earth,
My brother who . . . in his anger,
My precious sweet is sated with me."

"Set me free, my sister, set me free,
Come, my beloved sister, I would go to the palace,
You will be a little daughter before my father,
I will set free for you . . . ."

It is a balbale of Inanna.

2 Note, however, the rather surprising fact that it is not written in the Eomesal dialect.
3 The text actually reads "they are two balbale of Inanna," since one of the tablets was inscribed with another poem (not translated here).
The Curse of Agade

THE EKUR AVENGED

This rather unusual "historiographic" document, first composed (probably) about 2000 B.C. by a Sumerian theologian-poet with a reflective and inventive turn of mind, is of significance for the history of religious thought. Its central theme concerns national catastrophe as a direct consequence of divine wrath kindled by a defiant act on the part of man. In the case of Sumer, the disastrous catastrophe came in the guise of a humiliating and destructive invasion by the barbarous, ruthless Gutians from the Zagros ranges, that brought confusion and anarchy in the land for about a century or so. This cruel event preyed on the hearts and minds of the more thoughtful and literate of the Sumerians, and pressed for an explanation within the framework of the Sumerian world view. It is this need for a satisfying rationale which seems to have led to the composition of the document by a deeply religious poet imbued with the conviction that it was the desecration of Sumer's holiest shrine by a bitter and defiant king which led to the calamity that overwhemed the king's capital city and the land as a whole.

The culprit chiefly responsible for this catastrophe, according to our author, was Naram-Sin, the fourth king of the Dynasty of Akkad, that ruled from its capital, the still unlocated city of Agade. The founder of the dynasty was Sargon the Great, Naram-Sin's grandfather. According to our author, Sargon's rise to power was due to Enlil, the leading deity of the Sumerian pantheon, who turned over both the temporal and religious control of Sumer, after Kish and Erech, its two great political centers, had been destroyed by the angered god (lines 1-6). But it was primarily the goddess Inanna who devoted all her efforts to make Agade a prosperous and affluent city whose sway over Sumer, and indeed over virtually the entire ancient world, was supreme and unchallenged, and especially so when Naram-Sin began his reign (lines 7-53).

But then, our author continues, Inanna, acting, it seems, in accordance with "the word of the Ekur," that is preissubtly, the word of Enill, abandoned her shrine Eilmash in Agade and turned inimical to the city (lines 54-63). At the same time some of the other gods—Ninurta, Utu, and Enki—deprived the city of the powers and endowments they had conferred upon it, and Agade became weak and impoverished (lines 64-84). At first Naram-Sin, according to our author, accepted this cruel fate in humility and self-abasement, especially after he had a highly mysterious vision concerned with the Ekur (lines 85-90). But when after seven years of this contrite behavior, he sought an oracle from the Ekur in Nippur, and was not granted his request his humility turned to defiance (lines 91-98). He mobilized his troops and proceeded to devastate the Ekur, desecrate its holy places, and deploil it of its possessions (lines 97-144).

But no sooner had he done so, our document continues, than the angered Enil began to avenge the destruction of his beloved Ekur. He brought down from their mountain lairs, the Gutians, an uncivilized, uncontrollable, multitudinous horde who spread over the land like swarming locusts, and brought about the suspension of all avenues of communication by land or sea (lines 145-169). Cities became desolate; fields and gardens were abandoned; famine raged, and death stalked the inhabitants of Sumer (lines 170-191). The land was filled with wailing, lamenting, hair-tearing, and bodily laceration, and Enil turned a deaf ear to the people's suffering; he went into his cella, and laid himself down to sleep (lines 192-208). It was then that some of the great gods of Sumer decided to mollify Enil, and thus presumably save Sumer from total destruction, by pronouncing a terrible oath against Agade, dooming her to a fate worse than that inflicted by her on Nippur: she would become a city deprived of all human friendship and filled with wailing and lamentation; all its holy places would be destroyed, and starvation and desolation would be rampant; she would become a place unfit for human habitation (lines 209-269). And, concludes our author, that is just what happened: Agade was destroyed, and became a desolate uninhabitable ruin.

So much for the contents of this remarkable composition. Stylistically, the author depends primarily on cumulative parallelism for poetic effect; there is virtually no repetition of lines, it was Enil (or the composite deity An-Enil) who, according to the Sumerian theologians, carried out the decrees of the divine assembly to transfer the political power from one city to another, cf., e.g., Enil's response to Nanna-Sin's plea for his city Ur in the "Lamentation Over the Destruction of Sumer and Ur," lines 361-372 (see pages 611-19). There is no way, knowing whether this assertion had any basis in fact, or whether, as seems more probable, it was sheer imagination on the part of the author.

The city is not actually mentioned by name, but it seems hardly likely that "the house" and "the built house" of lines 93-94 refer to any other temple than the Ekur of Nippur.

These "great gods" were Sin of Ur, Enki of Eridu, Inanna of Erech, Ninurta of Nippur, Iskur of Ennigi, Utu of Larsa, Nidaba, the patron deity of writing, and Nusku, Enil's vizier in the Ekur. But just why the author selected these, and only these deities to pronounce a curse against Agade, or why he listed them in that special order is not too clear. But note the fact that Nanna-Sin of Ur is first on the list, which may be taken as further proof that our document was first composed sometime during the Third Dynasty of Ur, when that city was the capital of Sumer.

The delivery of Sumer from the Gutians is nowhere referred to in the composition, but it is not unreasonable to surmise that this took place soon after the avenging of the Ekur and the destruction of Agade.

The total destruction of Agade is confirmed by the fact that the city is not mentioned in any of the thousands of Ur III documents published to date.
the device so characteristic of Sumerian hymnography. Nor does it make use of long speeches, static epithets, recurrent formulas, and other stylistic techniques that are earmarks of the Sumerian myth or epic tale. Next to parallelism, our poet's major poetic device is the simile. Similes of one kind or another are formulas, and other stylistic techniques that are earmarks of the device so characteristic of Sumerian hymnography.

Fragments belonging to this composition began to be published as early as 1914. By 1944 close to a score of pieces inscribed with parts of the document had been copied and published, but its true character remained unrecognized, primarily because most of the pieces belonged to the first half of the composition. Since much of the available text spoke of the destruction, devastation, and desolation of Agade, it was taken to be a lamentation over the destruction. In 1956, however, I had the opportunity of working in the Hilprecht Samm lung of the Friedrich Schiller University in Jena, where I identified seven pieces belonging to the composition; one of these was of very special importance, since it contained the last 138 lines, and thus made it possible to recognize the true nature of the composition. The publication of this new material enabled the eminent Heidelberg cuneiformist, Adam Falkenstein to publish an excellent transliteration of the document based on all the published material. There were still, however, quite a number of gaps and misreadings, and most of these could be filled in and corrected with the help of the still unpublished Nippur pieces which Adele Feigenbaum, a graduate student in the Department of Oriental Studies in the University Museum is now in the process of studying and copying as part of her dissertation for the degree of Ph.D. The translation here presented is based on the transliteration prepared by her for this purpose.

After the frowning forehead of Enlil
Had killed (the people of) Kish like the "Bull of Heaven,"

After he had ground the house of Erech into dust, like a giant bull,
After in due time, to Sargon the king of Agade,
From below to above, Enil
Had given him lordship and kingship,
Then did holy Inanna, the shrine of Agade,
Erect as her noble chamber,
In Ulmash did she set up a throne.

Like a "little fellow" building (his) house anew,
Like a young son, erecting the (wife's) chamber—
That everything be collected (safely) in the storerooms,
That their city be a firmly established dwelling place,
That its people eat "dependable" food,
That its people drink "dependable" water,
That the bathed "heads" make the courtyards joyous,
That the people beautify the places of festivity,
That the men of the city "eat" in harmony,
That the outsiders scurry about like "unknown" birds,
That Marhashi be turned to clay,

That in future days the giant elephant,
(And) the abrazzī, the beasts of distant lands,
Roam about all together in the midst of (its) boulevards,
(Also) the "princely" dogs,
the "asses" of the mountain,
long-haired "a/wm-sheep,
Inanna allowed herself no sleep.

In those days the dwelling of Agade were filled with gold,
Its bright-shining houses were filled with silver,
Into its granaries were brought copper, lead, (and) slabs of lapis lazuli,
Its silos bulged full of grain,
its old women were endowed with counsel,
Its old men were endowed with eloquence,
(And) the abrazzī, the beasts of distant lands,
Roam about all together in the midst of (its) boulevards,
(Also) the "princely" dogs,
the "asses" of the mountain,
long-haired "a/wm-sheep,
Inanna allowed herself no sleep.

"giant bull" in the following line may also refer to some mythological creature, but if so, no recognizable literary evidence pertaining to it has as yet been recognized.

14 "Heads" may refer to devotees of the temple. The Sumerian saq, "head," has a wide semantic range; usually it means "slave," but it can also mean "man" in general. Note, too, the initial saq in saq-ursag, a complex that designates a class of castrated devotees in the service of Inanna, the goddess of love.

15 Marhashi (also written Barhashi), was one of the more menacing enemies of the Agade Dynasty. The translation "into clay" is quite uncertain; there is a variant that reads 'Into the Bull of Heaven,' which is altogether unintelligible at the moment.

16 This is a word of uncertain meaning, perhaps it is the Indian humped bull.
Its little children were endowed with joyous hearts,
The nurse-raised children of the governors,
Played on the a/gwiwr-instruments.28
Inside, the city (was full of) ftgi-music,24 Outside it (was full of) reed-pipe (and) zam zam-music.28
Its quay where the boats docked were all abustle,
All lands lived in security,
Their people witnessed (nothing but) happiness,
Their king Naram-Sin, the shepherd, (40)
Stepped forth like the sun on the holy dais of Agade,
Holy Inanna opened its gates.
Holy Inanna forsook the shrine Agade,
Like a huge elephant...,
Like a huge bull...,
Like a fierce ushungal-dragon ...,
Its battles were [decreed] a bitter fate,
The kingship of Agade was prostrated,
Its future is extremely unhappy,
At the "month house" the treasures lay scattered about.
(Then) Naram-Sin in a vision ...,
He kept it to himself,82 put it not in speech, spoke with nobody about it,
Because of the Ekur,86 he dressed in sackcloth,
Covered his chariot with a boat-covering mat,
Loaded not his boat with ...,
Gave away everything desirable for Kingship.
Seven years Naram-Sin remained firm,84
Who had ever seen that a king should "put hand on head for seven years!"
(But then) seeking an oracle at the house,
In the "built" house there was no oracle,
Seeking an oracle a second time at the house,
In the "built" house there was no oracle.
(Whereupon) changing his line of action,
He defied the word of Enlil,
Crushed those who had submitted to him (Enlil),
Mobilized his troops,
Like a mighty man accustomed to high-handed (action),
He put a restraining hand on the Ekur,
Like a runner contemptuous of (his body's) strength,
He treated the giguna like thirty shekels.86
Like a bandit who plunders a city,
He erected large ladders against the house.
To destroy the Ekur like a huge boat,
To turn it into dust like a mountain mined for silver,
To cut it to pieces like a mountain of lapis lazuli,
To prostrate it like a city, ravaged by Ishkur, Against the house that was not a mountain where cedar was felled,
He forged great axes,
Sharpened double-edged "axes of destruction,"
Fixed copper spikes at the bottom of it,
Levelled it down to the "foundation" of the land,
Fixed axes at the top of it,
The house lay stretched "neck to ground," like a man who had been killed (in battle).
He tore up its /»«-trees,
The raining dust rose sky high. (He tore up its /»«-trees,
The Ekur—he
The "Gate of Peace" he broke down with the pickaxe,
At the "Gate of no Grain Cutting," he cut grain,
For the trees planted in the giguna-tree, and boxtree, its "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Nothing escaped their "arm,"
No one eluded their "arm."
The herald took not to the road,
The (sea)-rider sailed not his boat along the river.
In vast numbers, like locusts, they covered the earth,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
Their "arm" stretched out for him in the steppe like an animal-trap,
The commodities of their cities were bought up like good "words,"
Who slept on the roof died on the roof, (180)
Who slept inside the house was not brought to burial,
The people droop helplessly because of their hunger.49
By the
the "great place" of Enlil,
The cedar-cutter held back (his) speech in (deathly) silence. In its midst men by two's were devoured,
In its . . . men by three's were devoured,
Heads were crushed, heads were . . .,
Mouths were crushed, "heads" were turned to seeds,
The faithful "slaves" were changed into treacherous
"slaves,"61
The valiant lay on top of the valiant,
The blood of the treacherous flowed over the blood of the faithful.
Then did Enlil, out of his immense shrine,
Make a small reed-shrine,
From sunrise to sunset its treasures decreased,
The old women who were cut off from the day,62
The old men who were cut off from the day,
The chief galas, who were cut off from the year,
For seven days, seven nights,
Like "the seven lyres standing at the horizon," followed him (Enlil) about,
Like Ishkur played for him the shem, mezzi, and lits.69
(200)
The old women ceased not (crying) "Oh, my city,"
The old men ceased not (crying) "Oh, its men,"
The gala's ceased not (crying) "Oh, the Ekur,"
Its maidens ceased not tearing (their) hair
Its youths ceased not (their) maceration,
Their tears, the tears of the mothers and fathers of Enlil,64
They bring again and again in the awe-filled du\uM of holy Enlil.
Because of all this, Enlil entered (his) holy cella, lay down on (his) \atabba,26
Then did Sin, Enki, Inanna, Ninurta, Ishkur, (and) Utu, the great gods,

49 The rendering "droop" is a guess based on the context; "helplessly" attempts to render nt-bi-a, "of their own accord."
50 The meaning of the line and its implication are quite obscure.
51 This line is identical with line 25 of the Enlil hymn (except for the initial "Father Enlil") on page 576.
52 The implication of this and the five following lines is not dear.
53 For what litde is known about these musical instruments, cf. now Henrike Hartman, Die Musik der Sumerischen Kultur, pp. 91 ff.
54 "The mothers and fathers of Enlil" are listed in several literary documents (cf. especially Van Dyk, SGL, 11, pp. 151 ff.); presumably they had all died and gone to the nether world, where they were lamenting their fate.
55 The du\u of Enlil here seems to be located in Nippur; for further references to the duktt, cf. Edzard, "Worterbuch der Mythologie," p. 51.
56 The complex ka-tab-ba used with the determinative for leather, means "halter"; when used with the determinative for "reed" it designates a type of basket; here it is used with the determinative for wood, and its meaning is uncertain.
57 The rendering "comfort" is probably a low-grade silver.
58 "The mothers and fathers of Enlil" are listed in several literary documents (cf. especially Van Dyk, SGL, 11, pp. 151 ff.); presumably they had all died and gone to the nether world, where they were lamenting their fate.
59 The du\u of Enlil here seems to be located in Nippur; for further references to the duktt, cf. Edzard, "Worterbuch der Mythologie," p. 51.
56 The complex ka-tab-ba used with the determinative for leather, means "halter"; when used with the determinative for "reed" it designates a type of basket; here it is used with the determinative for wood, and its meaning is uncertain.
57 The rendering "comfort" is probably a low-grade silver.
May your wrestler rejoice not in his strength, may he lie in 'darkness.'
May famine kill (the people of) that city,
May the princely children who ate (only) the very best bread, lie about in the grass,
May your man who used to carry off the first fruits, eat the scraps of his tables,
The leather thongs of the door of his father's house,
May he munch these leather thongs with his teeth;
The leather thongs of the door of his father's house,
May the 'fox of the ruined mounds,' glide (his) tail;
May the evil ones, the ghosts of 'silent places'
May your palace built in joy, fall to ruins in anguish,
May the '«^K-birds of anguished heart' set up (his) nest,
In your city where you (no longer) sleep to (the sound of) //gi-music,
Where you (no longer) go to bed with a joyful heart,
May the oxen of Nanna, that (used to) fill the stalls,
Moan evermore like ghosts who roam the 'silent places';
May your canalboat towpaths grow (nothing but) tall grass,
May your wagon-roads grow (nothing but) the 'wailing-plant';
Moreover, on your canalboat towpaths, the places where the channel is narrow,
May no one walk among the wild goats, 'darting snakes of the mountain,'
May your steppe where grew the succulent plants,
Grow (nothing but) the 'reed of tears,'
Agade (instead of) your sweet-flowing water, may salt water flow (there),
May he who said 'I would sleep in that city,' not find a good dwelling there,
May he who said 'I would sleep in Agade,' not find a good sleeping place there.

(And) lo, with ITJu's bringing forth the day, so it came to pass!
Its canalboat towpaths grew (nothing but) tall grass,
Its wagon-roads grew (nothing but) the "wailing-plant."

Moreover, on its canalboat towpaths, the places where the channel is narrow,
No one walks among the wild goats and darting snakes of the mountain,
Its steppe where grew the succulent plants,
Grew (nothing but) the "reed of tears."
Agade, (instead of) its sweet-flowing water, salt water flowed (there),
He who said, "I would dwell in that city," found not a good dwelling place there.
He who said, "I would sleep in Agade," found not a good sleeping place there, Agade is destroyed! Praise Inanna.

UA-AUA

A SUMERIAN LULLABY

This composition, the only one of its kind thus far known from the Ancient Near East, probably consists entirely of a chant purported to be uttered by the wife of Shulgi, the preeminent and long-lived ruler of the Third Dynasty of Ur, who seemed to have been anxious and troubled by the ill-health of one of her sons. Being a mother's lullaby, one might have expected her to address her words directly to die child. This is true, however, only of the greater part of die poem (cf. lines 6-11, 19-23, 39-63, 92-100). In the other preserved passages she seems to soliloquize about her son in the third person (cf. lines 1-5, 24-28, 64-91), and in one passage she addresses Sleep personified (lines 12-18). In detail the contents of the composition may be sketched as follows:

The poem begins with a rather wistful and wishful soliloquy in which the mother seems to reassure herself that as she envisions it in the very chant she is uttering, her son will grow big and sturdy (lines 1-5). She then seems to try to buoy up her son's spirit with the promise of care and oncoming sleep (lines 6-11). Having mentioned sleep, she addresses it directly and urges it to close her son's wakeful eyes as well as his babbling tongue (lines 12-18). She now turns again to her ailing son, and promises to provide him with the sweet little cheeses that will serve to heal him, who is none other than the son of Shulgi (lines 19-23). He will also eat her well-watered lettuce, she continues (lines 24-26). She now sees herself—again while uttering her chant—providing him with loving wife and beloved child nursed and tended by a joyous nursemaid (lines 27-38).

Now anxiety about the illness of her son begins to dominate her mood, and in her next soliloquy addressed directly to her son whom she seems to see in her troubled fancy as dead and mourned by professional mourners and crawling insects (lines 39-50). Following a fragmentary passage in which sleep is mentioned once again (lines 51-56), we find the mother blessing her son with a wife and son, abundance of grain, a good angel, a happy and joyous reign (lines 57-63). Following another fragmentary and obscure passage which ends in two lines concerned with a palm-tree (lines 64-91), the mother turns once again to her son and future king, and admonishes him to stand by Ur and Erek, to seize and pinion the enemy, a dog who, unless cowed, will tear him to pieces (lines 92-100).

The composition is inscribed on a tablet (UM 29-16-8g) excavated by the University of Pennsylvania sometime between 1889

The rubric "Praise Inanna" indicates that this composition was dedicated to Inanna.

There is a bare possibility that this was the Queen Abisimti mentioned in the economic texts (cf. Jacobson's discussion in JCS, VII, pages 44-47).
and 1900. To judge from the script, the tablet dates to the first post-Sumerian period in the early second millennium B.C., but there is little doubt that the document was first composed during the reign of Shulgi, toward the end of the third millennium. Not unexpectedly, the text of this composition, which is only about half-preserved, proved to be difficult and obscure. After preparing a preliminary transliteration and translation, therefore, I sent them on to Thorkild Jacobsen and Michel Civil for comment. Not a few of their suggestions have been incorporated in the present translation. A detailed edition of the text is to appear in the forthcoming Festschrift to the Italian scholar Elorado Volterra, and the reader will find there an extensive philological commentary, as well as an appendix with a number of variant translations by Thorkild Jacobsen.

In my song of joy— he will grow stout,
In my song of joy— he will grow big,
Like the irina-tree he will grow stout of root,
Like the in-plant he will grow broad of crown.

Lord, from . . . you know . . .
Among those burgeoning apple trees by the river arrayed,
Who . . . will spread his hand on you,
Who lies there will lift his hand on you,
My son, sleep is about to overtake you,
Sleep is about to settle on you.

Come Sleep, come Sleep,
Come to my son,
Hurry Sleep to my son,
Put to sleep his restless eyes,
Put your hand on his (kohl)-painted eyes,
And (as for) his babbling tongue,
Let not the babbling hold back (his) sleep.

He will fill your lap with emmer.
I—I will make sweet for you the little cheeses,
Those little cheeses that are the healer of man,
The healer of man, the son of the Lord,
The son of the Lord Shulgi.

My garden is lettuce well-watered,
It is gfl-in-Mettuce . . .
The Lord will eat that lettuce.

In my song of joy—I will give him a wife,
[I will] give him [a wife], I will give him a [son],
The nursemaid, joyous of heart, will converse with him,
The nursemaid, joyous of heart, will suckle him; (30)
I—I will [take] a wife for my son,
She will [bear] him a son so sweet,
The wife will lie on his burning lap,
The son will lie in his outstretched arms,
The wife will be happy with him,
The son will be happy with him,
The young wife will rejoice in his lap,
The son will grow big on his sweet knee.

You are in pain,
I am troubled,
I am struck dumb, I gaze at the stars,
The new moon shines down on my face,
Your bones will be arrayed on the wall,
The "man of the wall" will shed tears for you,
The ^e^—goddess will pluck the harps for you,
The gekko will gash the cheek for you,
The fly will pluck the beard for you,
The lizard will bite his tongue for you,
Who "makes sprout" woe, will make it sprout all about you. (50)
Who spreads woe, will spread it all about you.

(lines 51-56 fragmentary)
May the wife be your support,
May the son be your lot,
May the winnowed barley be your bride,
May Ashnan, the ^a^—goddess be your ally,
May you have an eloquent guardian-angel,
May you achieve a reign of happy days,
May your feasts make bright the fore[head].

(lines 64-91 fragmentary)
And you, lie you in sleep!

Array the branches (of) your palm-tree,
It will fill you with joy like . . .
Stand at the side of Ur as a hulldubba-demon.
Stand at the side of Erech as . . .-demon,
Seize the mouth of the dog as a . . .-demon,
Pinion his "arms" as with a net of reeds,
Make the dog cower before you,
Lest he will rip your back like a sack.

(remainder of the text very fragmentary)
The Northwest Semitic inscriptions originating from the Near East—and to some degree also the Punic inscriptions from Northwest Africa and adjacent Phoenician colonies—are without exception of immediate interest to the student of the Old Testament, for either linguistic or historical reasons. Any selection, therefore, is arbitrary, and no claim is made that the inscriptions translated here are necessarily more important than some others which, for lack of space, have not been presented. For the sake of conciseness, the bibliographical references in connection with the individual inscriptions had to be severely restricted. A more generous hearing is accorded to recent publications. In general, publications conveniently available to the reader are noted. It was not possible, though in some cases it might have been desirable, to check the original inscriptions or consult photographs and reproductions other than those contained in the available publications.* (See Addenda.)

The transcription of proper names is often problematic and, as handled on the following pages, runs the whole gamut from certainty to mere guesswork. The vocalization of some names is made practically certain by contemporary vocalized transcriptions. Of some, it is fairly well indicated by their etymology. Then, again, there are names which admit several possible vocalizations. In some cases, the known Masoretic vocalization differs considerably from what can be assumed to have been the contemporary pronunciation. In such cases, the Masoretic vocalization has as a rule been adopted. For the sake of convenience, most of the proper names have been vocalized, and the interested reader will easily know into which of the aforementioned categories each vocalization belongs.

Dr. H. L. Ginsberg kindly looked over my original manuscript and provided helpful suggestions on doubtful points, not all of which, it should be noted, have been passed on here.

Building Inscriptions

YEHMILK OF BYBLOS

A house built by Yehimilk, king of Byblos, who also has restored all the ruins of the houses here.

May Ba’lshamem and the Lord of Byblos, whom Awariku* made powerful, king of the Danunites of Adana.

AZITAWADDHA OF ADANA

This unusually long inscription comes from a locality called Karatepe situated about thirty-eight miles southwest of Mar ash beside the River Jeyhan. Three versions of the Phoenician text, together with some Hittite versions, were discovered in 1946-47. They contain an autobiographical account which king Azitawadda composed on the occasion of the dedication of a citadel and city founded by him. The exact date of the inscriptions is still uncertain and depends on a further study of the archaeological and historical evidence. The text seems to antedate events described in the inscription of Kilamuwa (see no. 3), but at present a much later, eighth-century date cannot be ruled out.

One version of the inscription is written in four columns on four sides of a statue. Another version starts on a gate lion and is continued on two orthostats. The third version consists of three columns distributed over four orthostats and continued on the bases of the fourth and adjacent orthostats to a gate lion. Cf. the photograph published by Halet Qambel in Oriens, 1 (1948), p. 162, pi. i.

I am Azitawadda, the blessed of Ba’l, whom Awariku* made powerful, king of the Danunites of Adana. I have restored the Danunites. I have expanded the country of the Plain of Adana from the rising of the sun to its setting. In my days, the Danunites had everything good and plenty to eat and well-being. I have filled the storehouses of Pa’r. I have added horse to horse, shield to shield, and army to army, by virtue of Ba’l and the Gods (El). I shattered the wicked. I have removed all the evil that was in the country. I have set

* Or perhaps: “chief official (habaratyu) of Ba’l.”

* Awariku most probably was the father of Azitawadda.
up my lordly houses in good shape and I have acted kindly toward the roots of my sovereignty.3

I have been sitting upon the throne of my father. I have made peace with every king. Yea, every king considered me his father because of my righteousness and my wisdom and the kindness of my heart.

I have built strongholds in all the outposts at the borders in places where there were evil men, gang-leaders, none of whom had been subservient to the House of Mupsh. I, Azitawadda, placed them under-neath my feet. I have built strongholds in those places, so that the Danunites might dwell in peace of mind.

I have subdued powerful countries in the west which the kings who were before me had not been able to subdue. I, Azitawadda, subdued them. I have brought them (their habitants) down and established them at the eastern end of my borders, and I have established Danunites there (in the west). In my days, there was, within all the borders of the Plain of Adana, from the rising of the sun to its setting, even in places which had formerly been feared, where a man was afraid to walk on the road but where in my days a woman was able to stroll, peaceful activity * by virtue of Ba’l and the Gods (El). And in all my days, the Danunites and the entire Plain of Adana had plenty to eat and well-being and a good situation and peace of mind.

I have built this city. I have given it the name of Azitawaddiya, for Ba’l and Reshef-prm commissioned me to build it. I have built it, by virtue of Ba’l and by virtue of Reshef-pr/w, with plenty to eat and well-being and in peace of mind to be a protection for the Plain of Adana and the House of Mupsh, for in my days, the country of the Plain of Adana had plenty to eat and well-being, and the Danunites never had any night in my days.

Having built this city and having given it the name of Azitawaddiya, I have established Ba’l-Krntryl in it. A sacrifice(al order) was established for all the molten images: for the yearly sacrifice an ox, at the [time of plowing a sheep, and at the time of harvesting a sheep.

May Ba’l-Krntryl bless Azitawadda with life, peace, and mighty power over every king, so that Ba’l-Krntryl and all the gods of the city may give Azitawadda length of days, a great number of years, good authority, and mighty power over every king! And may this city possess plenty to eat and wine (to drink), and may this people that dwells in it possess oxen and small cattle and plenty to eat and wine (to drink)! May they have many children, may they be strong numerically, may they serve Azitawadda and the House of Mupsh in large numbers, by virtue of Ba’l and the Gods (El)!

If there be a king among kings and a prince among princes or a man who is (just) called a man who shall wipe out the name of Azitawadda from this gate and put down his own name, even if he has good intentions toward this city but removes this gate which was made by Azitawadda and makes for the (new) gate a (new) frame and puts his name upon it, whether he removes this gate with good intentions or out of hatred and evil, let Ba’lshamm and El-the-Creator-of-the-Earth and the Eternal-Sun and the whole Group of the Children of the Gods (El) wipe out that ruler and that king and that man who is (just) called a man! However, the name of Azitawadda shall endure forever like the name of sun and moon!

KILAMUWA OF Y’DY-SAM’AL

This autobiographical account, composed in connection with the dedication of a palace, was discovered in 1902 in modern Zinjirli in northwest Syria. It dates from the second half of the ninth century B.C. The text consists of two parts. In the first part, king Kilamuwa boasts of his success in foreign policy, and in the second part, he praises his domestic accomplishments. He states that he improved the position of the mkpm, possibly an oppressed sedentary element of the population, on whose undisturbed relations with another group, the b’rm, possibly referring to "wild" Bedouins, peace in his realm depended.

Y’dy, whose vocalization is uncertain, might be the capital city of the realm, to be vocalized Yu’addiya or the like (cf. Azitawadda-Azitawaddiya, which later on came to be known as Sam’al. The latter, however, might have been the name of a larger region or country.

I am Kilamuwa, the son of Hayya. Gabbar became king over Y’dy but he was ineffective. There was Bnmh but he was ineffective. There was my father Hayya but he was ineffective. There was my brother Sha’il but he was ineffective. There was my father Hayya but he was ineffective. But I, Kilamuwa, the son of Tm, what I achieved, the former (kings) did not achieve.

My father’s house was in the midst of mighty kings. Everybody stretched forth his hand to eat it. But I was in the hands of the kings like a fire that eats the beard, like a fire that eats the hand. The king of the Danunites (tried to) overpower me, but I hired against him the king of Assyria, (who) gave a maid for a lamb, a man for a garment.2

I, Kilamuwa, the son of Hayya, sat upon the throne of my father. Before the former kings, the mkkm went (cowed) like dogs. I, however, to some I was a father. To some I was a mother. To some I was a brother. Him

3 The roots may be the residential and capital cities of the realm, or the royal offspring. The decision would seem to lie with the Hittite text.

5 With reference to Prov. 3:10, H. L. Ginsberg points out that B’, as contrasted with 8’, has the concrete meaning of “corn.”

6 That is, an ordinary human being without titles of any sort

1 Many suggestions have been made to explain these two letters but the one considering them the name of Kilamuwa’s mother—to be corrected to Tammat—remains the most plausible one for the time being.

2 Kilamuwa apparently used a proverb in which a buyer boasts of a good bargain. He not only hired the mighty king of Assyria, but was able to do so cheaply.
who had never seen the face of a sheep, I made the possessor of a herd of cattle and a possessor of silver and a possessor of gold. He who had not (even) seen linen since his youth, in my days he was covered with byssus. I took the mbkbm by the head. They were disposed (toward me) as an orphan is to his mother.

If one of my children who shall sit in my place should damage this inscription, may the mskbm not respect the b'rrm, and may the b'rrm not respect the mbkbm!

Who he smashes this inscription, may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Hamman who belongs to Gabbar, and may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Samad who belongs to Zalman. His head may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Bel who belongs to Hatarikka. He who smashes this inscription, may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Hamman who belongs to Gabbar, and may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Samad who belongs to Zalman. His head may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Bel who belongs to Hatarikka. He who smashes this inscription, may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Hamman who belongs to Gabbar, and may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Samad who belongs to Zalman. His head may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Bel who belongs to Hatarikka. He who smashes this inscription, may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Hamman who belongs to Gabbar, and may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Samad who belongs to Zalman. His head may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Bel who belongs to Hatarikka. He who smashes this inscription, may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Hamman who belongs to Gabbar, and may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Samad who belongs to Zalman. His head may his head be smashed by Ba'l-Bel who belongs to Hatarikka.

BARRAKAB OF Y'DY-SAM'AL

This inscription of a remote successor of the afore-mentioned Kilamuwa was found in Zinjirli in 1891. It was set up about 730 B.C. A relief representing the same Barrakab is published in ANEP, no. 460. His seal and silver ingots are published in Ausgrabungen in Sendschirli, v (Berlin, 1943), pp. 73 and 119 f., pi. xxxviii (Staatliche Museen zu Berlin, Mitteilungen aus den orientalischen Sammlungen, 15). Bibliography: Ausgrabungen in Sendschirli (Berlin, 1893-1913), i, 2, pp. 66, iv, pp. 377-80, pi. LXXV (Staatliche Museen zu Berlin, Mitteilungen aus den orientalischen Sammlungen, n and 14); M. Lidzbarski, Handbuch der nordsemittischen Epigraphik (Weimar, 1898), p. 443 f., pi. xxiv: G. A. Cooke, A Text-Book of North-Semitic Inscriptions (Oxford, 1903), pp. 180-84; B. Landsberger, Sam'al (Ankara, 1948), P. 7.

I am Barrakab, the son of Panamu, king of Sam'al, servant of Tiglath-pileser, the lord of the (four) quarters of the earth.

Because of the righteousness of my father and my own righteousness, I was seated by my Lord Rakabel and my Lord Tiglath-pileser upon the throne of my father. The house of my father has profited more than anybody else, and I have been running at the wheel of my Lord, the king of Assyria, in the midst of mighty kings, possessors of silver and possessors of gold. I took my Lord, the king of Assyria, in the midst of mighty kings, possessors of silver and possessors of gold. I took my Lord, the king of Assyria, in the midst of mighty kings, possessors of silver and possessors of gold. I took my Lord, the king of Assyria, in the midst of mighty kings, possessors of silver and possessors of gold. I took my Lord, the king of Assyria, in the midst of mighty kings, possessors of silver and possessors of gold.

My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house. My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house. My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house. My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house. My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house. My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house.

My fathers, the kings of Sam'al, had no good house. They had the house of Kilamu, which was their winter house and also their summer house. But I have built this house.

Cultic Inscriptions

BEN-HADAD OF DAMASCUS

The stela with this inscription was discovered, apparently in 1939, in an ancient cemetery about four miles north of Aleppo, probably not in situ. It may, however, have originally been set up somewhere in the neighborhood of Aleppo. It dates from about 860 B.C. Bibliography: M. Dunand, Bulletin du Musee de Beyrouth, xiii (1939), pp. 65-76; vi (1942-43), pp. 41-45; W. F. Albright, BASOR, no. 87 (1942), pp. 23-29; W. F. Albright and G. Levi Delia Vida, BASOR, no. 90 (1943), pp. 30-34; H. L. Ginsberg, Louis Ginzberg Jubilee Volume (New York, 1945), pp. 159-71; A Jepsen, AO, xvi (1952), pp. 135-37.

A stela set up by Barhadad, the son of T'abrimmon, the son of Hezijon, king of Aram, for his Lord Melqart, which he vowed to him and he (then) heard his voice.

KILAMUWA OF Y'DY-SAM'AL

A smr (sheath, scepter?) fashioned by Kilamuwa, the son of Hayya, for Rakabel. May Rakabel give him a long life!

ZAKIR OF HAMAT AND LU'ATH

This historical inscription, dating from the early years of the eighth century B.C., was composed in connection with the dedication of a statue of Ilu-Wer, an avatar of Hadad. It was found in 1904 in a place about twenty-five miles southwest of Aleppo which in modern times is called Afis and which appears to have been mentioned in this inscription as Apish. Bibliography: H. Pognon, Inscriptions semitiques de la Syrie, de la Mesopotamie et de la region de Mossoul (Paris, 1907), pp. 156-78, pis. ix, x, xxxv, xxxvi; M. Lidzbarski, Ephemeres, HI (Giessen, 1909-15), pp. 1-11; C. C. Torrey, JASOS, xxxv (1915-17), pp. 354-64; M. Noth, ZDPV, LII (1929), pp. 124-41.

A stela set up by Zakir, king of Hamat and Lu'ath, for Ilu-Wer, [his god].

I am Zakir, king of Hamat and Lu'ath. A humble man I am. Be'elshamayn [helped me] and stood by me. Be'elshamayn made me king over Hatarikka (Hadrack).

Barhadad, the son of Hazael, king of Aram, united [seven of] a group of ten kings against me: Barhadad and his army; Bargush and his army; the king of Cilicia and his army; the king of 'Umq and his army; the king of Gurgum and his army; the king of Sam'al and his army; the king of Milidh and his army. [All these kings whom Barhadad united against me] were seven kings and their armies. All these kings laid siege to Hatarikka. They made a wall higher than the wall of Hatarikka. They made a moat deeper than its moat. But I lifted up my hand to Be'elshamayn, and Be'elshamayn heard me. Be'elshamayn [spoke to me] through seers and through diviners. Be'elshamayn [said to me]: Do not fear, for I made you king, and I shall stand by you and deliver you from all [these kings who] set up a siege against you. [Be'elshamayn] said to me: [/ shall destroy] all these kings who set up [a siege against you and made this moat] and this wall which [WHOEVER YOU ARE,] ruler and (ordinary) man, who might [continue] to do work on this altar and this engraved wor of gold and this portico, my name, Yehawmilk, king of Byblos, [you should put with] yours upon that work, and if you do not put my name with yours, or if you [remove] this [work and transfer this work from its foundation] upon this place and [ . . . , may] the mistress, the Lady of Byblos, [destroy] that man and his seed before all the Gods of Byblos.

THE MARSEILLES TARIFF

The two blocks of stone containing this inscription were found in Marseilles in 1845. The stone used for them is known to occur in the region of Carthage. Thus, it is possible that the document originally belonged to a temple in Carthage. However, the possibility that a similar kind of stone might also have been quarried in the neighborhood of Marseilles apparently has not yet been sufficiently explored. The date of the inscription is uncertain; it may date from the third century or the early part of the second century B.C. The text is carefully engraved. It is provided with a tide, and each paragraph begins with a new line. Bibliography: CIS, 1, no. 165, pi. xxxvii; M. Lidzbarski, Handbuch der nordsemitischen Epigraphische Texte. (Weimar, 1898), p. 428; pi. xi; id., Kanaanäische Inschriften (Giessen, 1907), pp. 47-51 (Altsemitische Texte., 1); G. A. Cooke, A Text-Book of North-Semitic Inscriptions (Oxford, 1903), pp. 112-22.

TEMPLE OF BA’L-[ZAPHON]

Tariff of payments set up [by the men in charge of] the payments in the time of [the lords Hilles]ba’l, the suffete, the son of Bod-tanit, the son of Bod[eshmun, and Hilles]ba’l, the suffete, the son of Bodeshmun, the son of Hillesba’l, and their colleagues.

For an ox, as a whole offering or a substitute offering or a complete whole offering, the priests shall have ten—10—silver (pieces) for each. In the case of a whole offering, they shall have, over and above this payment, meat [weighing three hundred—300]. In the case of a substitute offering, they shall have neck and shoulder joints (chuck), while the person offering the sacrifice shall have the skin, ribs, feet, and the rest of the meat.

For a calf whose horns are still lacing somewhat and . . . , or for a stag, as a whole offering or a substitute offering or a complete whole offering, the priests shall have five—5—silver [pieces] for each. In the case of a whole offering, they shall have, over and above this payment, meat weighing one hundred and fifty—150. In the case of a substitute offering, they shall have neck and shoulder joints, while [the person offering the sacrifice] shall have the skin, ribs, feet, [and the rest of the meat].

For a ram or a goat, as a whole offering or a substitute offering or a complete whole offering, the priests shall have one—1—shekel of silver and 2 zr for each. In the case of a substitute offering, they shall have, [over and above this payment, neck] and shoulder joints (chuck), while [the person offering the sacrifice] shall have the skin, ribs, feet, [and the rest of the meat].

Other guesses are knucklebones, or short ribs (G. Levi Delia Vida, RSO, xxxix [1964], p. 303 f.).

zr is the name of a small coin or, possibly, the abbreviation for such a coin, as ’a below is an abbreviation of the name of another unit smaller than zr.

(656)
joints, while the person offering the sacrifice shall have the skin, ribs, feet, and the rest of the meat.

For a lamb or for a kid or for a young stag, as a whole offering or a substitute offering or a complete whole offering, the priests shall have three quarters of silver and [2] zr [for each. In the case of a substitute offering, they shall have, over and above this payment, neck and shoulder joints, while the person offering [the sacrifice] shall have the skin, ribs, feet, and the rest of the meat.

For an ‘gnn bird or a ss (bird), as a complete whole offering or a Isf offering or a hat offering, the priests shall have three quarters of silver and [2] zr for each. [The person offering the sacrifice] shall have the meat.

[For any (other) bird or a holy oblation or a hunt offering or an oil offering, the priests shall have 10 V of silver for each [...].

For any substitute offering which they shall have to carry to the God, the priests shall have neck and shoulder joints, and for a substitute offering [...].

Upon a ca[e] and upon milk and upon fat and upon any sacrifice which someone is to offer as a meal-offering, [the priests shall have ...].

For any sacrifice which shall be offered by persons poor in cattle or poor in fowl, the priests shall have nothing [whatever].

Any citizen and any scion (of a noble clan) and any participant in a banquet for the God and anybody who shall offer a sacrifice [...], those men shall make payment per sacrifice as specified in a written document which was set up under [...].

Any payment which is not specified in this tablet shall be made according to the written document which [was also set up ... under Hillesba’l, the son of Bodtan]it and Hillesba’l, the son of Bodeshmun, and their colleagues.

Any priest who shall accept a payment contrary to what is specified in this tablet shall be fined [...].

Any person offering a sacrifice who shall not give the [money for] the payment [which is specified in this tablet ...].

THE CARTHAGE TARIFF

A number of fragments very similar in contents to the preceding Marseilles Tariff have also been found in Carthage itself over a number of years beginning with 1858. Three of those fragments, though not parts of the same monument, were recognized by J.-B. Chabot as belonging to identical texts, and Chabot’s reconstruction has been followed in this translation. The date of the Carthage Tariff is about the same as that of the Marseilles Tariff. Bibliography: CIS, 1, no. 167, pi. xxxviii; M. Lidzbarski, Handbuch der nordsemitischen Epigraphik (Weimar, 1898), p. 429; XII, id., Kanaanaische Inschriften (Gies- sen, 1907), p. 51 f.; G. A. Cooke, A Text-Book of North-Semitic Inscriptions (Oxford, 1903), p. 123 f.; P. Berger, RHR, LXI (1910), pp. 279-90; J.-B. Chabot, JA, series xi, vol. xvii (1921), pp. 177-84; Donner-Rollig, Nos. 74 and 75 (1, p. 16, n, p. 92 f.).

Tariff of payments set up by [the men in charge of the payments ...].

[For an ox, as whole offerings or substitute offerings], the priests [shall have] the skins, and the person offering the sacrifice the fat parts [...].

For a stag, [as whole offerings or substitute offerings], the priests [shall have] the skins, and the person offering the sacrifice the fat parts [...].

For a ram or a goat, as whole offerings or as substitute offerings, the priests shall have the skins of the goats, and the person offering the sacrifice shall have the ribs [...].

For a lamb or for a kid or for a young stag, as whole offerings or substitute offerings, the priests shall have the skins [...].

For any sacrifice which shall be offered by persons poor in cattle, the priest shall have nothing whatever.

For an ‘gnn bird or for a ss (bird), 2 zr of silver for each.

[For any substitute offering which he shall have to carry to the God, the priest shall have neck and shoulder joints [...].

[Upon any] holy [oblation] and upon a hunt offering and upon an oil offering [...].

Upon a ca[e (fodder)] and upon milk (fat) and upon a sacrifice as a meal-offering and upon [...].

Any payment which is not specified in this tablet shall be made [according to the written document [...].

Any priest who shall take [...].

Any person offering a sacrifice who [...].

Any person who shall trade [...], and who shall shatter this tablet [...].

Pds, the son of Eshmunhilles [...].

THE KING OF KEDAR

One of four silver bowls with brief Aramaic inscriptions found, it seems, around 1950 at Tell el-Maskhuta about twelve miles west of Ismailia in Egypt and dating from the fifth century B.C. Bibliography: I. Rabinowitz, JNES, xv (1956), pp. 1-9, and xviii (1959), p. 154 f.

Offered to Han-llat by Qaynu, the son of Gashm, king of Kedar.
PUNIC EX-VOTO INSCRIPTIONS

The first two of these stelae were discovered at Salamnibo between 1945 and 1950 and published by J.-G. F. Lavre in CIS, 1, Nos. 5684 and 5685; Pisc. xxviii and xxix. They appear to belong among the oldest Punic inscriptions known so far, possibly dating from about as early as 600 B.C. The other two stelae, dating from a considerably later period, were found at El-Hofra in Constantine in 1950 and published by A. Berthier and R. Charlier, Le Sanctuaire punique d’El-Hofra (Paris, 1955). Nos. 28 and 55, pp. 29-31, 49-51. Pisc. u A and un A. All of diem belong to a type of monument that over the last century and a half has become known in hundreds of specimens, most of them inscribed with basically identical inscriptions. A few of the texts contain the word ml which has been recognized as a cultic term denoting some kind of sacrifice. ml appears at times modified by such words as 'mr, "dm, "man" (?), or b'l ("Ba’al,” or "citizen,” or, rather unlikely, "instead of an infant"). Occasionally, one also finds other cultic expressions added, such as bshrm btm, of which the first, crucial element is most obscure and has again been thought to refer to human (infant) sacrifices. Whatever their precise significance, the relevance of these monuments and the inscriptions they bear to Canaanite cult practices characterized by the O.T terms molech (molech) and topeth seems quite well established and has been discussed extensively, cf. the following additional bibliography: J.-G. Fevrier, JA, ccxlix (1955), pp. 52-55; id., JA, ccxlii (1960), pp. 167-87; id., REI, NS, iv, 3 (ccxxiv) (1964), pp. 7-18; Donner-Rollig, No. 61 (1, p. 14,11, pp. 76-78); G. Levi Delia Vida, RSO, xxxix (1964), p. 303; (Jean and) Hoffjizer, Dictionnaire, pp. 45, 154, 325; S. Moscati, Rendiconti della Pontificia Accademia Romana di Archeologia, xxxviii (1965-66), pp. 1-8 (on the excavations in Mozia [Sicily]), Monte Sirai [Sardinia], and Tass Silq [Malta].

a. A stela of ml ml b'l made by Bodisi, the son of Melgargadd, for the Lord Ba’al Hammon.

b. A stela of ml ml b'l given by Magon, the son of Hanno, to Ba’al Hammon.

c. For the Lord, for Ba’al Hammon, ml ml bshrm, completely, vowed by ‘Afishshihar, because He heard his voice and blessed him.

d. For the Lord, for Ba’al Hammon, ml ml ‘mr (molkhomer), a vow vowed by A’borat, the daughter of [...].

Incantations

THE AMULET FROM ARSLAN TASH

The limestone plaque containing this inscription was purchased in 1933 at Arslan Tash, the ancient Hadatta. At the time, two such plaques were obtained but only one has been published so far. The language of the inscription is an undetermined Canaanite dialect; the writing is of an Aramaic type. It would seem to date from the seventh century B.C. According to the interpretation presented below, we have here the text of an incantation named after a certain Ssm, possibly a mythological being of Anatolian (or Egyptian?) provenance but not a full-fledged god such as is pictured on the reverse of the plaque. The incantation is directed against the winged sphinx and the she-wolf devouring a human being, both pictured on the obverse and collectively called the "stranglers," that is, female demons supposed to cause the death of infants and children. It may have been intended to facilitate childbirth and to make sure that the newborn infant would not fall prey to the "stranglers." However, the reading of the crucial passage at the end which is often translated: "May her womb be opened and may she give birth! ... When the sun rises, travail and give birth!", is based upon the doubtful reconstruction of missing words and upon an uncertain and, it seems, unwarranted emendation of what is actually written.

An incantation for the female flying demon. The "bond" of Ssm, the son of Phdrsh (?).

Take these and say to the strangling females: The house I enter you shall not enter, and the courtyard I tread you shall not tread. An eternal bond has been established for us. Ashshur has established (it) for us, and all the divine beings and the majority of the group of all the holy ones, through the bond of heaven and earth for ever, through the bond of Ba’al, the lord of the earth, through the bond of the wife of Hawron, whose utterance is pure, and her seven co-wives and the eight wives of Ba’al.

(Oil the sphinx:) To the female demon that flies in the dark chamber (say): Pass by, time and again, Lili[t]! (On the she-wolf:) To the robbing, slaying female (say): Go away! (On and around the deity:) Ss zt, may his [mouth] not (?) open ... Let the sun rise, eternally, eternally | *

THE URUK INCANTATION

A tablet inscribed with cuneiform characters originating from Uruk (Erech) was acquired by the Louvre in 1931. Already its first editor, F. Thureau-Dangin, tentatively determined its language as Aramaic. The date of the tablet is uncertain. It may possibly come from the third century B.C.

I have taken a (magic) bond from the wooden roof,* in silence, from the threshold of the gate. I have put it underneath my tongue. I have entered a house full of words, a tongue-tied table, a mixing bowl (full) of poison. When they saw me, the house full of words fell silent, the tongue-tied table was upset, the mixing bowl (full) of poison was poured out.

I have been successful, and I am successful ...[...], before adults and children, women and men, ... and those assembled and sitting at the gate, before so-and-so, from everything.

1 i.e., the amulets of this type. More than one was needed for effective protection. The indicated uncertainty of the interpretation lies in the spelling šk, instead of the expected š. The verb may be masculine or feminine (sg.), depending on whether the magician is addressed, or the woman who is to wear the amulets.
2 Torczyner: "The sun has risen, the morning shines."
3 Or, perhaps, "wall."
Remove, drive out pains! Defective one, be wh[ole]! Lame one, run! Find companions, excessive one! Finally, (you all) rise!

Speak, dumb one! Rise, silent one!

Who is angry, who is enraged, who is clothed in the garment of anger, (has) fire in his mouth, (has) mixtures (of spittle) underneath his tongue? So-and-so, the son of so-and-so, is angry and enraged, is clothed in the garment of anger, (has) fire in his mouth, (has) mixtures (of spittle) underneath his tongue. I am wise . . . .

I have taken a (magic) knot from [the threshold ?], soundless[ly], from the room [below the roof]. I have entered into the presence of so-and-so . . . . I have made him take off the garment of anger. I have clothed him in the garment of . . . . I have taken the fire from his mouth, the mixtures (of spittle) from underneath [his tongue]. My good things from his mouth [come forth], my evil things from his posterior [. . .], before adults and children, women and men, [. . . and those assembled] and sitting at the gate, and before so-and-so . . . .

[Remove, drive out pains!] Defective one, [be whole!]: Lame one, run! Find companions, excessive one! Finally, (you all) rise!

Speak, dumb one! Rise, silent one!

Political Documents

THE TREATY BETWEEN KTK AND ARPAD

The inscriptions containing this treaty originate from a locality called Sujin near Sfire, or, as seems more likely, from the village of Sfire itself, about sixteen miles southeast of Aleppo. The block of basalt on which the portion of the treaty designated Sfire I is inscribed was broken horizontally into two parts, with the loss of a few lines in between. In addition to the text inscribed upon the front and the back of the block (designated I A and I B, although it is by no means clear which is the recto and which is the verso), one side of it is also inscribed (Sfire I C). Another version is preserved in a very fragmentary fashion (Sfire II). It is similarly inscribed upon a stela reconstructed from a number of preserved fragments. Another portion of the treaty (Sfire III) has been recovered from nine fragments of a stela. In this case, only one inscribed side, apparently the verso, is preserved.

The treaty dates from about 750 B.C. The identity of Ktk has not yet been established. Ktk6 has been vocalized Kattika (Alh), and it has been identified with Kas/shuku or Urartu (Dupont-Sommer), Hatarikka-Hadach (Landsberger), Assyria (Dos-sin), and a locality named Kis(s)ik (Noth). Cf. also R. Degen, Die Welt des Orient, iv (1967), pp. 48-60.

The inscriptions became known to scholars in 1930, but no usable photographs or first hand studies of the originals were published until 1956-58. Bibliographical references, now largely obsolete, are given in F. Rosenthal, Die Sprache der palmyrenischen Inschriften (Leipzig, 1956), p. 5, 61, 2 (MVAG, XI); id., Die aramaische Forschung (Leiden, 1939), p. 13, fn. 5.

(Sfire I A)

A treaty of Barg'a'yah, king of Ktk, with Matti’el, the son of ‘Attarsamak, king of [Arpad; a treaty of the inhabitants of Barg'a'yah with the offspring of Matti’el, the son of ‘Attarsamak, king of Arpad; a treaty of Ktk [with a treaty of Arpad; a treaty of the inhabitants of Ktk [with a treaty of the inhabitants of Arpad; a treaty of . . . . and with all Aram and with Musr and with his (Matti’el’s) sons who will come up after him, and . . . ] all upper and lower Aram, and with anybody entering and leaving] the royal house, [all those who have h]ere set up this treaty.

This treaty concluded by Barg’a’yah is set up before . . . ] and Mulleshe (?), before Marduk and Zerapani, before Nabd and Tashmet, before Hurr and Nusja, before Nergal and Las, before Shamash and Nur, before S[in and Nikkal, before Nikkar and Kd’h, before all the Gods of Rhb and ‘dm, before . . . Hadad of A] lpepo, before Sibitti, before El and ‘Elyon, before Heaven [and Earth, before Abyss and Sources, and before Day and Night. Witnesses all [you] G[ods be for it]! Open your eyes to behold the treaty of Barg’a’yah [with Matti’el, [ing of Arpad!]

If Matti’el, the son of ‘Attarsamak, king [of Arpad,] is false to [the Gods of this treaty, and] if the offspring of Matti’el is false [to . . . (large break) . . . Seven rams shall tup] a ewe, and she shall not become pregeat. Seven years shall the worm eat. Seven [years shall] blight come upon the face of its land, and no grass shall sprout, so that nothing green can be seen and its vegetation does not [appear]. The sound of the cithara shall not be heard in Arpad and among its people, only . . . and only [mournful sound]s and lamentation. The Gods shall send every kind of devouring pest against Arpad and against its people. The mo[u]th of snakes [shall devour], the mouth of scorpions, the mouth of bears, the mouth of panthers® and moths and lice. [There shall be no] foliage. Defoliated; it will be laid waste. Its vegetation will not ripen. Arpad shall be a (desolated) mound for . . . and gazelles, foxes, hares, wild-cats, owls, . . ., and magpies. [This too]jn, and Mrbh, Mzh, Mbh, Shr'n, Tum', Bty'l, Bynn, . . ., 'rnh, Hzs, and 'dm* shall not be mentioned (ever after).

As this wax is consumed by fire, thus Arpad [and its dependencies] shall be consumed expensively], Hadad shall sow in them salt and water cress. And it shall not be mentioned (ever after).

This bandit and [...] is Matti'el. It is he himself.

As this wax is consumed by fire, thus M[atti'el] shall be consumed [by fire].

As this bow and these arrows are broken, thus Arpad [and its] and the mouth of scorpions, the mouth of bears, the mouth of panthers® and moths and lice. [There shall be no] foliage. Defoliated; it will be laid waste. Its vegetation will not ripen. Arpad shall be a (desolated) mound for . . . and gazelles, foxes, hares, wild-cats, owls, . . ., and magpies. [This too]jn, and Mrbh, Mzh, Mbh, Shr'n, Tum', Bty'l, Bynn, . . ., 'rnh, Hzs, and 'dm* shall not be mentioned (ever after).

As this wax is consumed by fire, thus Matti'el shall be consumed [by fire].

As this calf is cut up, thus Matti'el and his nobles shall be cut up.

As [...] the wives of Matti'el and the wives of his offspring and the wives of his nobles shall wor] as slaves.

As [...] and have her face boxed, thus . . .[. . .]. (The text of the upper part of Sfire I B is quite similar to that in I A. The lower portion spells out, as does Sfire III, details of the obligations incumbent upon the parties to the treaty. Only three or four paragraphs seem reasonably clear so far.)

(Sfire I C)

[If . . .] they thus say and write whatever [I, Matti'el], have written as a reminder for my son [and the son of my offspring] and the wives of his offspring and the wives of his nobles shall wor] as slaves.

May he who observes the words of this stela be guarded by the Gods as to his day and as to his house.® But whoever does not observe the words of the inscription on this stela says: I shall efface some of its words, or I shall upset the good things and put down evil ones, on the day he will do so, that man and his house and all that is in it shall be upset by the Gods, and he (his house) be turned upside down, and that (man) shall not acquire® a name!

(Sfire II C)

(While most of the preserved text of Sfire II A and B permits a coherent translation where only the missing links can be supplied on the basis of Sfire I and III, the concluding portion is quite clear.)

[. . .] and he who intends to efface these inscriptions from the bethels where they are set up and says: I shall destroy the inscriptions, and tomorrow I shall destroy Kit and its king, but (who) himself is afraid to efface the inscriptions from the bethels and (therefore) says to someone who does not know: I shall hire (you), and commands (him) to efface these inscriptions from the bethels . . .[. . .].

[But if they observe this treaty . . .], the God[s of the treaty] in this inscription [shall guard] Matti'el, his son, the son of his son, his offspring, all the kings of Arpad, all his nobles, and their people, as to their houses and their days.

(Sfire II C)

[. . .] or to your son or to your offspring or to one of the kings of Arpad and s[peaks] against me or against my son or against the son of my son or against my offspring in the manner of any one man who blows hot and speaks evil words, you must not accept from him the words (he says) to my detriment [and to the detriment of my son]. You must turn them over into my hands. Your son must turn (them) over to my son. Your offspring must turn (them) over to my offspring. The offspring of [anyone of the kings of Arpad must turn (them) over to me. Whatever is good in my eyes, I shall do to them. If you do not do so, you will have been false to all the Gods of the treaty in [this] inscription.

If one of my officials or one of my brothers or one of my eunuchs or one of the people under my control flees from me and becomes a fugitive and goes to Aleppo, you must not pro[vide f]ood for them, and you must not say to them: Stay peacefully in your place, and you must not cause them to be disdainful of me. You must placate them and return them to me. If not, they shall [remain] in your land to be quiet there until I come and placate them. If you cause them to be disdainful of me and provide food for them and say to them: Stay where you are and pay no attention to him, you will have betrayed this treaty.

When I send my messenger to anyone of the kings around me or to anyone who is a friend of mine, to (exchange) greetings or for any of my business, or he sends his messenger to me, the road shall be open to me. You must not (try to) exercise control over me in this respect and you must not contest [t]es use with ® Read, perhaps, bn lmq whfn/q. Ngh, the croaking of the raven (cf. Syriac and the corresponding Arabic n'q), is the harbinger of bad news. Mq at first sight suggests its ordinary meaning of “disease.” However, it may mean here some other kind of ominous noise (“crushing?”).

® Or, wasps and ants? In Sfire II A q, lions seem to be mentioned in the same context, offering a good parallel to panther. But here, among reptiles and insects, bears and panthers are strangely out of place.
® Qbn may be an adjectival ending in -n, from the root (Arabic) qdb, (Hebrew) qdb.
® These seem to be twelve dependencies of Arpad.
® That is, his life and property, unless the meaning is: “during his own lifetime and that of his posterity.”
®® This translation presupposes, of course, a form of rhdb with infixed /, which is not normal in these inscriptions and in Aramaic.
®®® Not just an ignoramus but someone who is unaware of the curse awaiting the destroyer of the inscription.

(660)
...and its inhabitants, whoever brings «/»[... k]ings of Arpad [...] you will have betrayed this treaty.

If [...] and they bribe whatever king who [...] all that] is beautiful and all that is go[od ...].

Sepulchral Inscriptions

AHIRAM OF BYBLOS

A sarcophagus made by [It]tobal, the son of Ahiram, king of Byblos, for Ahiram, his father, as his eternal (dwelling-)place.

If there be a king among kings and a governor among governors and an army commander up in Byblos who shall uncover this sarcophagus, let his judicial staff be broken, let his royal throne be upset! May peace flee from Byblos, and he himself be wiped out!

*Written by (before ?). . . .

AGBAR, PRIEST OF THE MOON-GOD IN NERAB

Belonging to Agbar, priest of Sahr, in Nerab. This is his picture.

Because of my righteousness before him, he gave me a good name and prolonged my days. On the day I died, my mouth was not closed to words, and with my eyes, what do I see? Children of the fourth generation, who wept for me, being distraught.

They did not place with me a vessel of silver and bronze. With my garments they placed me (here), lest my mouth was not closed to words, and with my eyes, what do I see? Children of the fourth generation, who wept for me, being distraught.

Whoever you are who shall do wrong and remove me, may Sahr, Nikkal, and Nusk cause him to die a miserable death, and may his posterity perish!
TABNIT OF SIDON

This inscription, which was excavated in 1887, dates, as is now generally held on historical and archaeological grounds, from Achaemenid times, apparently, the early fifth century (cf. also no. 4, n. 4). Bibliography: M. Lidzbarski, Handbuch der nordsemitischen Epigraphie (Weimar, 1898), p. 417, pi. iv; id., Kanaan’aische Inschriften (Giessen, 1907), p. 15 f.; G. A. Cooke, A Text-Book of North-Semitic Inscriptions (Oxford, 1903), pp. 26-30; C. C. Torrey, JAOS, LVII (1937), pp. 405-07.

I, Tabnit, priest of Astarte, king of Sidon, the son of Eshmun’azar, priest of Astarte, king of Sidon, am lying in this sarcophagus.

Whoever you are who might find this sarcophagus, don’t, don’t open it and don’t disturb me, for no silver has been given me, no gold and no jewelry whatever has been given me! Only I (myself) am lying in this sarcophagus.

Don’t, don’t open it, and don’t disturb me, for such a thing would be an abomination to Astarte! But if you do open it and if you do disturb me, may (you) not have any seed among the living under the sun or resting-place together with the shades!

ESHMUN’AZAR OF SIDON

Eshmun’azar’s great sarcophagus was found near Sidon in 1855. It is dated about fourteen years later than the preceding inscription. Bibliography: CIS, 1, no. 3, pi. 11; M. Lidzbarski, Handbuch der nordsemitischen Epigraphie (Weimar, 1898), pp. 417 f., pi. iv; id., Kanaan’aische Inschriften (Giessen, 1907), pp. 16-19; G. A. Cooke, A Text-Book of North-Semitic Inscriptions (Oxford, 1903), pp. 30-39; C. C. Torrey, JAOS, LVII (1937), pp. 397-410.

In the month of Bui, in the year fourteen—14—of the reign of Eshmun’azar, king of Sidon, the son of king Tabnit, king of Sidon, king Eshmun’azar, king of Sidon, spoke as follows:

I have been snatched away before my time, the son of a number of restricted days, an orphan, the son of a widow. I am lying in this casket and this grave, in a place which I (myself) built.

Whoever you are, ruler and (ordinary) man, may he not open this resting-place and may he not search in it for anything, for nothing whatever has been placed into it! May he not take the casket in which I am resting, and may he not carry me away from this resting-place to another resting-place! Even if people good you, do not listen to their talk, for any ruler and any man who shall open this resting-place or who shall take up the casket in which I am resting or who shall carry me away from this resting-place—may they not have a resting-place with the shades, may they not be buried in a grave, and may they not have son and seed to take their place! And may the Holy Gods abandon them to a mighty ruler who (might) rule them, in order to cut down that ruler or man who shall open this resting-place or who shall take up this casket, as well as the seed of that ruler or those men! May they have no root down below and no fruit up on top, and may they be cursed among the living under the sun, for I am to be pitied. I was snatched away before my time, the son of a number of restricted days, an orphan, the son of a widow, I am.

For I, Eshmun’azar, king of Sidon, the son of king Tabnit, king of Sidon, the grandson of king Eshmun’azar, king of Sidon, and my mother, Amo’ashhtar, priestess of Astarte, our mistress the queen, the daughter of king Eshmun’azar, king of Sidon, (we are) the ones who built the houses of the gods, the house of [Astarte] in Sidon-by-the-Sea, and we (also) established Astarte in Shamem-Addirim. We are the ones who built a house for Eshmun, the Holy Prince, (at) the YdU Spring in the mountain, and we established him in Shamem-Addirim. We are the ones who built houses for the gods of Sidon in Sidon-by-the-Sea, a house for the Lord of Sidon and a house for ’Ashtart-Shem-Ba’il. Furthermore, the Lord of Kings gave us Dor and Joppa, the mighty lands of Dagon, which are in the Plain of Sharon, in accordance with the important deeds which I did. And we added them to the borders of the country, so that they would belong to Sidon forever.

Whoever you are, ruler and (ordinary) man, may he not open it and may he not uncover me and may he not carry me away from this resting-place and may he not take up the casket in which I am resting, lest these Holy Gods abandon them and cut down that ruler and those men and their seed forever!

1 Or perhaps: “may they not have any stately appearance.”
2 Nis may actually belong in the beginning of the next paragraph and reflect an attempt to start that paragraph as follows: “For we, I . . . .” The remainder of this paragraph is out of place here.
3 For these sections of Byblos, cf. O. Eissfeldt, Ras Shamra und Sanschafan (Halle, 1939), pp. 62-67, 109-27 (Beiträge zur Religionsgeschichte des Altertums, 4).
4 In related Phoenician inscriptions, this title refers to the Ptolemaic ruler, but it occurs already in a seventh-century Aramaic papyrus from Egypt and there refers to the king of Egypt. Here, it would seem to refer to the Achaemenid king.
The historical period of South Arabia begins, according to common opinion, with the eighth century B.C., and is definitively concluded by the Moslem occupation in the first half of the seventh century A.D. Its inscriptions are chiefly in the dialects spoken in the four great kingdoms of Saba', Ma'in, Qatabän, and I'adramawt. Exclusively historical texts have been excluded from this collection; they require a long commentary, for many important historical facts are still uncertain. In addition, South-Arabic studies are still in the period of decipherment; consequently the translations must be accompanied by critical remarks and explanations. For all the South-Arabian divinities, see my paper Le pantheon sud-arabe presaïmique d'ápres les sources épigraphiques, in he Museum, LX (1947), pp. 57-147.

In addition to abbreviations listed on pp. xix-xxi the following appear frequently in notes on these translations:

CHI Corpus Inscriptionum Semiticarum, Pars Quarta, Inscriptiones Himyariticæ et Sabæææ continens (i-m), Paris, 1889-1929.
RH Rhodokanakis, Studio zur Lexicographie und Grammatik des Altisildarabischen, (Leipzig, 1943), pp. 142-43)

Yada'il Darith, son of Sumlu'alay,1 mu'arrīb2 of Saba', walled 'Awram, the temple of 'Ilumquh, when he sacrificed to 'Attar and [when] he established the whole community [united] by a god and a patron and by a pact and a [secret] treaty.2 By8 'Attar and by Hawbas6 and by] 'Ilumquh.10

2. On the top of Jebel el-Falag (near Mareb), is a beautiful votive stela, on the lower part of which a boustrophedon inscription commemorates the reason for its erection by a man who was granted transport for an important building. Glaser 737 = Glaser 1099 = M. Hofner-N. Rhodokanakis, Zur Interpretation altisildarabischer Inschriften, in WZKM, XLIII (1936), pp. 212-13 = RES 4635 = Jamme 538.

1. South-Arabian Inscriptions

2. In addition to abbreviations listed on pp. xix-xxi the following appear frequently in notes on these translations:

CHI Corpus Inscriptionum Semiticarum, Pars Quarta, Inscriptiones Himyariticæ et Sabæææ continens (i-m), Paris, 1889-1929.
RH Rhodokanakis, Studio zur Lexicographie und Grammatik des Altisildarabischen, (Leipzig, 1943), pp. 142-43)

Yada'il Darith, son of Sumlu'alay,1 mu'arrīb2 of Saba', walled 'Awram, the temple of 'Ilumquh, when he sacrificed to 'Attar and [when] he established the whole community [united] by a god and a patron and by a pact and a [secret] treaty.2 By8 'Attar and by Hawbas6 and by] 'Ilumquh.10

2. On the top of Jebel el-Falag (near Mareb), is a beautiful votive stela, on the lower part of which a boustrophedon inscription commemorates the reason for its erection by a man who was granted transport for an important building. Glaser 737 = Glaser 1099 = M. Hofner-N. Rhodokanakis, Zur Interpretation altisildarabischer Inschriften, in WZKM, XLIII (1936), pp. 212-13 = RES 4635 = Jamme 538.

«- Bi'attar, he of [the family of] Ha'il,3 son of 'Iqawwam,4 (1) he of [the clan of] Barahum, erected [and] built the šobk of 'At5 - tar and Sami6 and of Dat-Himyam7 and of Waddum, when he was appointed for transport for the building of the entrance court

Yata'am Bayyin, son of Suhustinabols, alay, mukarrib of Saba', erected the stela of the two gates of Niimmum9 when he hunted the hunting by itr and by pits.8

4. The funeral stela was in common use among the South-Arabian peoples. On this stela, found at Mareb in 1947, the "identity card" of the person is engraved on the top above the depression in which a human head is shown in relief. Fakhry 13 = A. Fakhry, An Archaeological Journey to Yemen (March-May, 1947), HI (Cairo, 1951), pi. XI and xu, and 1 (1952), p. 101 = G. Ryckmans, Epigraphical Texts [in French], t. 11 of A. Fakhry, An Archaeological Journey (Cairo, 1952), p. 11 = my paper, Inscriptions sud-arabes de la collection Ettore Rossi (En appendice, la collection Tazzier), note 6 (to be printed).

9 wdm name of the lunar god venerated in Ma'in as "love." 8 m'lmt, m'lmt. M. Höfner-N. Rhodokanakis (p. 213, note 2) relate this word to Ethnicum elim and to Hebrew el'mmm, known in the dialect of Dajlah: "to want, wish, plan" (Landberg, 1912, p. 51 B). The last five words were already published a few months before by N. Rhodokanakis, Altsuidarabische Inschriften, in AOT, p. 465; cf. G. Ryckmans, La confession publice des peres en Arabe Meridionale preislamique, in Le Museon, lviii (1945), pp. 1-14 passim.

10 of Sumhu' alay and [for] the building [which] he planned and made strong.12

11 of Sumhu' alay and [for] the building [which] he planned and made strong.12

12 of Sumhu' alay and [for] the building [which] he planned and made strong.12

1. cf. H. von Müller-N. Rhodokanakis, Eduard Glasers Reise nach Marīb (Vienna, 1913), p. 92 A.

2. The last five words were already published a few months before by N. Rhodokanakis, in WZKM, xxviii (1914), p. 112 = RBS 36/25 A.

4. The funeral stela was in common use among the South-Arabian peoples. On this stela, found at Mareb in 1947, the "identity card" of the person is engraved on the top above the depression in which a human head is shown in relief. Fakhry 13 = A. Fakhry, An Archaeological Journey to Yemen (March-May, 1947), HI (Cairo, 1951), pi. XI and xu, and 1 (1952), p. 101 = G. Ryckmans, Epigraphical Texts [in French], t. 11 of A. Fakhry, An Archaeological Journey (Cairo, 1952), p. 11 = my paper, Inscriptions sud-arabes de la collection Ettore Rossi (En appendice, la collection Tazzier), note 6 (to be printed).

5. A large number of Sabaean texts are dedicatory inscriptions. The present text from Mareb tells of the offering of a bronze statue; it probably mentions the judicial clearing of a man who was falsely considered as a member of a conspiracy, although he had resisted the propaganda made by 'Awsum. This text also mentions the punishment of a girl ordered by the divinity. University Museum (Pennsylvania) 30-47-96 = photograph published by L. Legrain, Au pays de la reine de Saba, in Gazette des Beaux-Arts, xxxvi (1934), p. 66, fig. 2 = translation proposed by G. Ryckmans, in Le Museon, xlvi (1935), pp. 164-68 (= RBS 4239) and corrected by K. Mlaker, Die Hierodulenlisten von Ma'in (Leipzig, 1943), pp. 56-57 and notes p. 67.

6. The public confession was known among the South-Arabian peoples.1 The present text in relief on a bronze tablet from Medinet Harem2 mentions five transgressions, all of which concern ritual sexual purity. Glaser 1789 = Museum of Vienna 6 = CII 523 = N. Rhodokanakis, Altsudarabische Inschriften, in AOT, p. 465; cf. G. Ryckmans, La confession publique des peres en Arabe Meridionale preislamique, in Le Museon, lviii (1945), pp. 1-14 passim.

1. cf. H. von Müller-N. Rhodokanakis, Eduard Glasers Reise nach Marīb (Vienna, 1913), p. 92 A.

2. The last five words were already published a few months before by N. Rhodokanakis, in WZKM, xxviii (1914), p. 112 = RBS 36/25 A.

5. A new example is Jamma 525.

6. In the eastern part of Beled Hamdan.
(1) Harim, son of Tawban, avowed and did (2) pence-ance to a woman during a period illicit to him [or her]; and fondled a woman during her menses (4); and that he came together with a woman in childbed; and that he went without any purification and wore his clothes (6) without purification; and that he touched women (7) during their menses and did not wash himself; and that he (8) moistened his clothes with ejections. And he may be rewarded.

7. In spite of particular favors received from the divinity, the offering of a statue was sometimes ordered by the god himself through his oracle. K. Y. Namì, Nuqsù 'arabiyat gunubiyat, in Magallà Kulliyat al-Adab, is (Cairo, 1947), PP. 244-247.

(1) Kari'b'atát, (son of Ha)t'yan/ high (2) official of Wahab'atat, of [the tribe of] Gadánúm (3), dedicated to Il'múq Ilhawan, master of (4) 'Awwám, his characteristics.

8. A few Minaean fragmentary inscriptions discovered in El-'Ela have been interpreted as containing South-Arabian parallels to the Hebrew Levite; this opinion does not seem to be right. Euting 37 = D. H. Mûller, Epigraphische Denkmäler aus Arabien (Vienna, 1889.), pp. 42-43, no. 17 and pi. 11 = RES 3351.

(1) . . . and his [son] A[w]s . . . (2) . . . and all what he pos[s]ess to Waddm as pledge... (3) . . . disturbs Waddum . . . (4) . . . reduced him into his subjection; and when . . . (5) . . . A[ws] to Wadd against whoever would remove it . . . (6) . . . in the temple of . . . (7) . . . Yadkur'il, he of [the clan of] 'Ahrám. . . .

9. In a depression called el-Mihyar approximately twenty minutes from the ancient capital Main, J. Halevy found a stela, the four sides of which are covered with inscriptions, and only copied a part of them. On the basis of E. Glaser’s squeezes of the stela and several inscribed fragments, K. Mläker published Die Hierodulenlisten (pp. 1-72). These texts are written according to an almost identical formula mentioning the apportionment of women to the temple. The countries or the cities from which these women came are always indicated; from South-Arabia: the countries of 'Awsan (Glaser 1286), Qatabán (Glaser 1266) and Hadramawt (Glaser 1253); the cities of Yatrib (glrb: Medina; Glaser 1288); from northern countries and cities: Misr (msr; Egypt; Glaser 1272 = R£S 3445 bis, no. 351), Dedan (ddh': El-'Ela; Halevy 233/6-9 = RES 2773/1), Jawanum (yjm; probably Greece; Glaser 1247), Moab (in b; Glaser 1256), Lihyân, Gaza and Sidon. These texts allow us to make several hypotheses either about the exact acts of the men with regard to the women mentioned, or about the fate or the activities of these women inside the temple; the latter may be presented, e.g. as maids of any kind, hierodules, recluses, and so on.

Glaser 1278: (1) Ijlùw, son of 'Awys, he of [the family of] Hazmàn, (2) he of the clan of Niswar, appointed (?) and secluded (?)  (3) his wife 8 Masqi, free woman 9 of (4) Liyyan, 10 (Glaser 1256: (1) 'Ilwahab, son of fiayu, he of [the family of] NamMn, (2) he of the clan of Gaba'an, appointed (?) (3) and secluded (?) 'Abba' from (4) Gaza. 11
(Glaser 1252: (1) Wahab'il, son of Yaham'il, he of [the family of] Rada', he of the clan of Gaba'an, appointed (?) (3) and secluded (?) 'Absami from (4) Sidon. 12

10. The following text, engraved above the door of the temple located at el-Mihyar, mentions the restoration of this sanctuary by a Minaean king. Two symbols are on the sides of the text, a door on the left, and on the right, a hand on a square (cf. A. Grohmann, Gottesymbolle, pp. 53-54 and 44-46 and drawing on fig. 104). Halevy 257 = Glaser 1091 = R&S 2831 = M. Tawfiq, Atar Ma'in min gaaf al-Yemen (Cairo, 1951), pp. 31-32, no. 13 and photographs 71-77 on pis. 34-37; cf. also K. Y. Nami, Nuqus Haribat Ma'in (Cairo, 1952), p. 19.

(1) tjalkari sabdu, son of 'Abyada, 1 king of Ma'in, built and renewed 2 Riṣafum, 3 the temple of 'Attar, He of [the temple of] Qabdum, and entrusted 4 the temple (2) Risafum to the care of 'Attar Sarqan 5 and all the divinities of [the] tribes [united] by a god and a patron and a pact and a secret treaty 6 against 7 anyone who would change it 8 and against anyone who would (3) let it come to an end 9 and against anyone who would strip 10 [it] and against anyone who would commit foul acts 11 in the temple Riṣafum, in war 12 and peace, in both periods of earth and heaven. 13

"to hinder, obstruct" and in the Ethiopic 'et an 'a/aru "to be hindered, prohibited," Hebrew 'aru "to disturb, make turbid, dreggy, foul." 'a/aru, the 8th form, may refer to the profanation of the temple and be translated "to bring foul 9 or dreggy things" or "to commit foul acts" inside the sanctuary, ywmyl'rdmlwsmhm: expression meaning "for ever." 14

The number refers to the quantity of victims.

2. hbrwbd: hbr may not indicate the first construction of the building, but the recent masonry works which are specified by sidwa.
3. rj/hm, also the name of a Qatabanian temple located on the hill of Heid bin Aql (near Hajar Kull) and dedicated to the lunar god 'Anbay (A. Jamme, Pieces epigraphiques, e.g. pp. 6-7).
4. rj means "to entrust something to the care of" a divinity in order that the god protect it "against" (hbr) cf. note 7) any kind of damage.
5. hbr: epithet characterizing the star-god as "the eastern." 14
6. The Minaean formula 'sklm/mb'myn/whblm/whymrm is obviously identical with the Sabaean expression gwm/mb'myn/whblm/whmrm (cf. no. 1).
7. Br introduces the different kinds of malefactors that the god must turn aside from the temple.
8. dyaw/krs and not inyov (R&S); cf. A. Jamme, Pieces epigraphiques, p. 198.
9. dyawd's with dittography (R&S); cf. Hebrew ydaw "to cease, end, finish, go to the end." On the basis of the same Semitic root, R&S (v, p. 193) translates "to rob." 18
10. dygr: R&S suggestion is (v, p. 173) is definitively excluded by Tawfiq's photographs; cf. Hebrew dygr "to come out"; may be translated "to strip." 19
11. A large inscription engraved on the wall near the western door of the ancient Minaean capital mentions the building of towers and communication trenches and also the farming of a large estate granted by the king and the high council of Ma'in. Halevy 192 = Glaser 1150 = N. Rhodokanakis, Studien, 11, pp. 54-71 = R&S 2774 = M. Tawfiq, Atar, pp. 24-25 and photographs 30-35 on pis. 17-19; cf. K. Y. Nami, Nuqus Haribat, pp. 1-2.
12. 'Alman, son of 'Ammarib, he of [the family of] Had'ar, father of Ya'wis'il and Yadrkur'il and Wahab'il and Yasmi'il, [people of the clan of] Gaba'an, favourites of 'Abyada' Yata, 2 king of Ma'in, consecrated and built and dedicated 3 to 'Attar, He of Qabdum, and to Waddum and Nakrahum, all the upper building 4 and the pier support 5 of six communication trenches and of six towers in the wall of the city (2) Qarnawu, on the conduit of the quarter Ramsawu from the tower [which] the judges 7 built, to the crossroads 8 of the city; [those trenches and those towers] which he ['Alman] built and raised—where he covered with a roof 9—in wood and hewn stones, and the sloping banks 10 of their escarpments from the building of the counter escarpment to the top, with the taxes 11 [which] 'Attar, He of Qabdum, imposed on him and with the first fruits he has taken for the divinities and with what he added from his own, when

(3) he offered [perfumes to Wadd and sacrificed to 'Attar, He of Qabdum, and to Wadd victims in [the temple] courts//15//13]; and when 'Abyada' Yata', king of Ma'in, and the council of Ma'in, [deliberating] in

"to hinder, obstruct" and in the Ethiopic 'et an 'a/aru "to be hindered, prohibited," Hebrew 'aru "to disturb, make turbid, dreggy, foul." 'a/aru, the 8th form, may refer to the profanation of the temple and be translated "to bring foul or dreggy things" or "to commit foul acts" inside the sanctuary, ywmyl'rdmlwsmhm: expression meaning "for ever." 14

The number refers to the quantity of victims.
the high council,14 invested 'Almān with the administration and the organization15 of what16 has been commanded for his god and his patron and his king and his tribe in war and peace; and [when] they farmed out17 to him the land [which contributed to] the building

(4) by means of the income18 from the spinning mill of the king, forty-seven cubits //47// [in height] and in breadth19 seventeen cubits //17// and 20 to and of the contribution18 [granted] by the law of Ma'in through public allocation of cereal: forty-seven22 zbr //47//; and with regard to its24 boundaries and its directions: from the weir25 [which] the clan of Handar repaired and in the direction—upstream—of the water conduit of the clan of Hawar

(5) and the irrigation canal [which] the clan of Ganad repaired, and in the direction—on the west28—of the land of Tanuf, and in the direction—Yatil28—of the two water conduits of the clan of 'Amam and of the water conduit of the clan of 'Asar, in conformity with the document of his archives. By 'Attar Sarqan and by 'Attar, He of Qabd, and Wadd and Nakrah and by 'Attar, He of [the temple of] Yuhariq, and by all the divinities of Ma'in and Yatil, and by 'Abydā Yata',

(6) of Ma'in, and by their tribe of Ma'in and Yatil.27 And 'Alman and his sons entrusted their offering and their farming and their usufruct28 to 'At'tar Sarqan and 'Attar, He of Qabd, and Wadd and Nakrah and all the divinities of Ma'in and Yatil and Hirran, the torrent29 of Wadd against anyone who would change them and their documents during the days of earth.

12. The present inscription, found in Eibarat Ma'in in 1944, mentions several offerings of buildings, possessions and animals, brought to different divinities by a family of priests of high rank,30 who were in the service of the lunar god Waddum and whose chief was Jialyafa' Fays. M. Tawfiq, Atur, p. 26, no. 5, and drawing on pi. 22, fig. 41 = K. Y. Nami, Nuqs flaribat, p. 5, no. 5 = Jamme 404; cf. A. Jamme, Les inscriptions mineennes Ta'AM 4 et 5, in Cahiers de Byrsa, iv (1954), pp. 130-51.

(1) Jialyafa' Fays, priest of Waddum, (so)n of 'Abkarib, father of Na('b)akarib Riyam and 'Il'aduq, the two priests of Waddum, and their sons Jialyafa' Riyām and Sa'adalil and 'Ab(k)arib and 'Ammsami', [people of the] clan of Yada',4 consecrated and dedicated to 'Attar,

(2) He of [the temple of] Qabdum, and to Waddum and NakrahOum, all the building of the tower Yahir and of its passage Rata', in wood and in hewn stones, from the foundation to the top, from the jamb5 of the door to the tower [which] he dedicated [in] Du-Hadr6; when he sacrificed to 'Attar, He of Qabd, (3) four offerings,—each including forty-four [units] —; and when he sacrificed to the divinities black cattle and sucklings in the name of all Ma'in: freemen and workers and hirelings (and) overseers of employees'; and when he sacrificed to 'Attar, He of Qabd, and to Waddum victims on the [temple] courts; and when he built [and] dedicated to 'Attar, He of [the temple of] Yuhariq and to Nakrah(um) three cubits of the wall of Yatil, in hewn stones, from the foundation to the top; and when he consecrated (and) dedicated to (his) god 'Attar, (He) of Qabd, (what) he possessed.8

Qatabanian Inscriptions

13. A Qatabanian mukarrib tells us his tides, some connected with the lunar god and his sanctuaries, others relating to landed

\[14\] bnsa'm/min: bns corresponds to h in the parallel phrase bnsa'd/min: this expression means "in [delivering during a session of] the high council."

\[15\] bsr': N. Rhodokanakis (p. 67) relates to Ethiopian sar' "to regulate, arrange, ordain."

\[16\] bit 'in what'? - 'of what?'; neither N. Rhodokanakis (p. 56) nor RIS (V, p. 113) translates b, and both restore "of the first-fruit." The preceding restoration is superfluous.

\[17\] rth'd, the subject of which is 'Abydā Yata' and the council of Ma'in, indicates the juridical, rather than the political (N. Rhodokanakis, p. 67) transfer of the administration of the land.

\[18\] bā': N. Rhodokanakis (p. 37) relates it to Hebrew ba' (root: bw').

\[19\] yds 'its breadth'; cf. Arabic 'urd' 'wide, broad'; by opposition, the first measurement indicates the height of the building.

\[20\] The two preceding measures give the part of the construction mentioned in line 1 as built with the income from the factory (N. Rhodokanakis, p. 68).

\[21\] ibw, cf. Syriac sho 'to leave, leave over, leave by will'; this word means the contribution granted by the Minaean state and specified by dr' 'cereal'; N. Rhodokanakis (p. 69) thinks that ibw means the supply for the workers (indirectly true) and imposed on the country (which does not seem to be exact).

\[22\] The number refers to the quantity of ibw.

\[23\] zbr is a unit of capacity the exact value of which is still unknown; notice that the post-biblical Hebrew fibare means 'to measure the length from shoulder to belly' (J. M. Jastrow, A Dictionary of the Targumim, p. 510 B), and that the measure of the height of the building is exactly the same as that of zbr.

\[24\] Ewphs: the singular pronoun s refers to 'of line 3 and not to the buildings mentioned in line 1 which would require the plural sm; in addition, the site of these latter is described at the beginning of line 2; the end of line 4 and the line 5 mention grounds, a water conduit and an irrigation canal which were evidently located outside the city itself.

\[25\] j', a weir dividing the water into two directions (N. Rhodokanakis, p. 71, note 1).

\[26\] bissam/ll', cf. the two other parallels in line 5: bissam/ll' and bissan/ll'y. It is rather difficult to admit that it 'upward, upstream,' cf. "west" and yl 'Yajil' determine snn and are determined by the following word. These three terms may be considered as parentheticals with an adverbial meaning.

\[28\] ibw is the economic result of farming (N. Rhodokanakis, p. 67).
properties; and he finally mentions the dedication of some property to the moon divinity 'Anbay; from Wādī Beihan. SE 85 and 60 cannot be reunited as in RBS 3540 (cf. A. Jamme, La paléographie sud-arabe de /. Pirame [Washington, 1957], pp. 117-18 and 101-02), but SE 85 and the beginning of SE 60 are parts of a stereotyped formula.

(a 1) Sahar Hillîl . . . , son of Yada'âb,1 mu'arrîb (a 2) of Qatabân, first born2 of 'Anbay and Hawkum, He of 'Amar and Samar, (b 1) procurator3 of the clerk of the priest of 'Ammum (b 2) Tantum,4 priest5 and administrator6 of 'Amin Ray'an, (b 3) master of the possessions [which he measured]7 in Dabaltum (b 4) and including8 (the) stone-cased wells9 in the estate (b 5) [which the tribe] Hawrân possessed, dedicated to 'Anbay, (b 6) master of the feast, his possession against (b 7) calamity (?).10

14. The present text mentions the opening of a road in the mountains, commanded by the principal Qatabanian god 'Amm and executed by 'Aw'samm, the same man who opened the road at the Meblaqah pass,3 according to the order of the mu'arrîb of Qatabân, which he made on the left and the right of the lines 4-7, a bucranium and above it, a monogram (cf. A. Grohmann, Göttersymbole, p. 66, fig. 172). SE 90 (cf. R&Ś 3642 = M. Höfner, Die katabanischen und sabaischen Inschriften der südarabischen Expedition im Kunsthistorischen Museum in Wien, ii, in WZKM, LXI (1935), pp. 35 37 = RES 4328; cf. H. von Wissmann-M. Höfner, Beiträge, p. 43.

(1) Yada'âb Dubayyin, (2) son of Sahar, muqffirîb of Qatabân and all the (3) children of 'Amm and 'Amm'sin and Kâhid and (4) Dâhasum and Tâbânaw and Yarfa', the southerners (5) and the northerners, pierced and bored11 and put through the mountain road (6) and the pass of 'Arrum on the command of 'Amm, He of [the temple of] Saqr. By 'Amm and by (7) 'Anbay and by 'Amm, He of [the temple of] Rayumatum, and by 'Amm, He of Saqr, and by (8) Hawkum and by Dat-jantum2 and by Dat-zahrân3 and by Dat-râban.4 (9) 'Aw'samm, son of Ya'âurr'amm, of [the family of] Madahum, directed and controlled all (10) the work and the boring5 and the paving of the pass 'Arrum by the order of his lord (11) Yada'âb.

15. This inscription engraved on Jebel Seqir (northeast of Hajar Henri az-Zurîr) mentions a work which probably was the opening of a road, by an ordinary man who entrusted it to the care of several divinities not only for himself, but also for his children and his colonists. SE 99 = M. Höfner, Die katabanischen und sabaischen Inschriften, p. 41 = RTLS 4330 (correct copy; cf. Le Museon, LXI (1949), pp. 76-77) = quotation in my copybook: W[adî] B[eihan] 3/5/4.

(1) Nabat'âmm, son of Yaqâmalmîlî, he of [the tribe of] Dara'ân, performed and pierced a boring2 on the top of the fortified hill (2) Du-Mawzadum, for his ground Du-Dara'ât and Du-At'tar; and he entrusted it to the care of 'Attar and 'Amm, He of Saqr, and (3) of Hawkum and Dat-Râban for him and his children and his colonists. By 'Attar and by 'Amm and by (4) 'Amm, He of Saqr, and by 'Anbay and by Hawkum and by Dat-Râban and by Sahar Hillîl and his son (5) Nabat'âmm, both kings of Qatabân.2

(1) Sahar Hillîl Yuhan'im, son of Yada'âb, king of Qataban, granted and decreed on account of Hatabum, the temple of 'Amm, He of Dawanum, and on account of Risafum, the temple (2) of 'Anbay dayman and by obedience to Sams and Rub' Sahar' for his people 'Ammymâda and Hufnum, both sons of Haybar, and for Hawf'il, son of Haybar (3) 'Al'an, and for Ra'âb'amm, son of Hayu, and for 'Alayum and Yasir'h'âmm, both sons of Rabâb and to their brothers the administrators of 'Amm, He of Labah, and to their female relationship (4) and to their children: from [the] owed part2 and [the definitive] arrangement [as regards the preceding part] and [the] seizure and [the] income, [they may use them] to pay their due in voluntary offering and

\[\text{[668]}\]
gift and promise to 'Amm and 'Ajirat (5), so that will be informed the administrators of 'Amm, He of Labah, and their female relationship and their sons and their daughters according to this stipulation and this concession (6). And Sahar granted to his people the administrators of 'Amm, He of Labah, and to their female relationship and to their sons by privileging them according to this stipulation and this concession and (7) his [inscribed] lines. And Sahar ordered his people the administrators of 'Amm, He of Labah, to write and engrave these [inscribed] lines on the valley of Labah and in the inscription. And Sahar ordered his people the administrators of 'Amm, He of Labah, to write and engrave this concession and to the concessions which wrote for the second eponym of Saharum, he of [the tribe of] Yagur. (9) And may the administrators of 'Amm, He of Labah, to write and engrave this concession and to the concessions which wrote for

(1) 'Absaduq 'Arim [woman of the family of] Wahab'il, he of [the clan of] Hirran, (2) and he of [the clan of] Dara'än, dedicated to 'Anbay dayman (3) her votive offering in Risafum. She entrusted to ['Anbay's care] her female statue (4) against anyone from Sabwa; now in the British Museum, where its number is 30-47-28 = RiS 4569 = Faqad.²

(30-47-28 = RiS 4569) Yati'tum [of the family of] Faqad.²

(30-47-30 = RiS 4571) Na'amum [of the family of] Waqai».

Hadrami Inscriptions

20. An inscription in relief on a bronze plate commemorates its offering to the principal Hadrami lunar god and also the consecration to several deities of two very precious things: the light of his eye; from Sabwa; now in the British Museum, where its number is 6(48479) = RES 2693.

(1) $aduqdakar Barren, prefect of the property¹ of the king of Hadramawt,² son of (2) 'Isarah, dedicated to Sin, He of [the temple of] 'Illum, an offering in bronze of which the (3) weight is true, reddish-brown bronze—and he offered it—, which he promised to Sin (4) as He bade him by His oracle. And $aduqdakar consecrated in submission (5) to Sin, He of 'Illum, and to 'Attar, his father, and to the goddesses of His temple 'Illum, (6) and to the gods and goddesses of the city Sabwa, his person and his understanding and his (7) children and his possessions and the light of his eye² and the thought of his heart³ as homage (8) and submission which may be agreeable.

On the reverse of the plate, the monogram "Sa'adSamsum (7)."⁴

21. A Hadrami king commemorates the rebuilding of the temple and the fortress of his capital which he has transformed; on the occasion he gave a hunting party which was particularly successful; engraved on the cliff called 'Uqla about 15 km. west of Sabwa. Philby 84 = A. F. L. Beeston, Appendix on the Inscriptions Discovered by Mr. Philby, in H. St. J. B. Philby, Sheba's Daughters (London, 1939), pp. 446 c and 451-52. = RES 4912 = Jamme 949; cf. A. Jamme, The al-'Uqlah Texts (Washington, 1963).

(1) Yada'il Bayin,² king of Hadramawt, son of Rabbسامs, of the freemen of Yubah'ir, who transformed³ and altered⁴ the city Sabwat (2) and rebuilt in stone the temple, roofed [and] paved⁵ the fortress, when they [the temple and the fortress] collapsed and [when]³⁸ they [Yada'il and his party] killed thirty-

2. Cf. also A. Jamme, Pieces épigraphiques, p. 144, commentary of no. 287.
3. The upper half of the dividing stroke following şpd and wsp is damaged.
4. This inscription is considered as two verbs asyndetically united: "he roofed and paved."
five bovines and eighty-two young camels$^7$ and twenty-five gazelles and eight cheetahs$^7$ at the fortress 'Anwadum.

22. An inscription, engraved on the same cliff as the preceding, enumerates the people who accompanied their Hadrami king on a sojourn in the fortress where coronation honors were distributed. Philby 27 $^7$ 29/1-3 = A. F. L. Beeston, The Philby Collection of Old-South-Arabian Inscriptions, in Le Museon, LI (1938), pp. 316 and 317-18 = RES 4852 = Jamme 928 (cf. No. 21).

(1) Nasrum, son of Nahadum, and RaqSum, (2) son of 'Admar, and Wa'ilum, son (3) of Yu'allid, and Wa'ilum, son of Baqilum (4), and 'Abkarib, he of [the family of] Waddum, accompanied (5) their lord 'Il'add Yalut, king of Ha^ramawt (6), son of 'Ammdahar,$^8$ when he proceeded to the fortress (7) 'Anwadum in order to sojourn$^3$ and give titles.$^4$

$^2$ This king is contemporary of the Sabaean king Ta'ran Ya'ub Yuhan'im (RES 4909).

$^4$ hjl&. A. F. L. Beeston hesitatingly translates "to assume his title" (Appendix, pp. 442-43); according to J. Ryckmans, this verb must be rendered in "to give [the king] the cognomen, the epithet" (L'institution, pp. 328-29). The latter opinion is excluded by the fact that both hjlm and hjl& have the same subject, the king. hjl& designates the grant of coronation honors; cf. Arabic hjl& nd form "to entitle" (R. Dozy, Supplement aux dictionnaires arabes, ii, p. 542).

23. A fragmentary inscribed clay stamp unearthed at Beitin, biblical Bethel, in 1957, by James L. Kelso; 7 x 8 cm. and 1.5 cm. thick; almost identical with, but different from the one seen by Th. Bent at al-MaShad (about 62 km. in a straight line southeast of Sibam, in Hatframawt) and whose paper squeeze, A 727, belongs to the Glaser collection. The inscription, identical in the two stamps, although slightly different from a palaeographic viewpoint, is the seal of a Hadrami fbn "delegate" living at Bethel and whose function was to authenticate with his seal, shipments of goods sent back to Hadramawt. Cf. G. W. Van Beek and A. Jamme, An Inscribed South Arabian Clay Stamp from Bethel, in BASOR, No. 151, October, 1958, pp. 9-16 and 4 illustrations, and A. Jamme and G. W. Van Beek, in loccit., No. 163, October, 1961, pp. 15-18, 2 photographs and 2 tracings.

1 [. . . tfa-]
2 miyan, the de-
3 legate.

24. A Qatabanian rock inscription discovered by Major M. D. Van Lessen in the Soames Hill near the Yemeni border in the vicinity of Mukeras, with the name of a previously unknown name of a god, whose scriptio plena, 'lyn, may be graphically compared with the divine epitheton in the Old Testament, 'lydn ('lywn; e.g., Dt 32:8). Jamme 889; A. Jamme, Inscription rupestre et graffites qatabanites photographies par le Major M. D. Van Lessen, in RSO, xxxvn (1962), pp. 231-33 and tracings on p. 232.

1 Haziyan 'Ayizan
2 Lahay has written to the honor of 'Aliyan,$^2$
3 he of one hundred years.$^3$

$^1$ To the left of lines 1-2, the monogram of Haziyan.

$^2$ 7a (also in Qatabanian Jamme 1951/3; to be published) = in scriptio dejectiva 'lyn (e.g., in Qatabanian Jamme i'5i6; to be published).

$^3$dm't/hryftm·. it remains impossible at the present to figure out the exact value of this divine epitheton.
Addenda

Corrections and additions to the translations and notes of the second edition have been made at the appropriate places in the third edition wherever these changes fitted into the existing arrangement of lines and pages. However some important alterations would not fit into the text. They are given here with a reference to the quarter of the page on which they are to be read. An asterisk in the text or notes will alert the reader of the third edition to additional material in the Addenda. The Addenda has been included in the Supplement to the Ancient Near East in Texts and Pictures with the hope that in most instances the user may see, even without the asterisks, the line within the quarter of the page to which the additional material is relevant. Each column of the page is divided into two halves: the first column of the page into a and b, the second column, into c and d.

25a. Important improvements were made for the translation by Sir Alan Gardiner, Egypt of the Pharaohs (Oxford, 1961), 306-13, not all of them incorporated into the present edition.

27d. Gardiner’s translation (opcit., 310) is attractive: “And you stand chaffering over the Lebanon with Amün its lord.”

28a. Instead of papyrus, Gardiner (opcit., 311), translates “plain mats, 500.”

29c. Translated also by Lefebvre, opcit., 221-32; Brunner-Traut, opcit., 163-66; 293-94.

33a. For the Book of the Dead version, see Allen, opcit., 189-84.

33b. For a recent study of incantations with introductions similar to this one see T. Jacobsen and B. Landsberger, JNES, xiv (1955), 14-21 and JNES, xvn (1958), 56-58.

33a. There have been no additions to our sources for the Adapa myth but two recent studies deserve special attention. One was published by P. M. Th. de Liagre Böhl, “Die Mythe vom weisen Adapa” in WO, 11 (1954-59), 464-71. A note Plate xii on which is published photographs of fragments C and D. The other study is by G. Roux, “Adapa, Le Vent et l’Eau” in RA, LV (1961), 13-33. Concerning Adapa’s role in tradition as the first sage and his identity with the Oannes of Berossos see W. G. Lambert, JCS, xvi (1962), 73-74 and J.J.A. van Dijk in XVIII, vorläufiger Bericht über die von dem Deutschen Archäologischen Institut und der Deutschen Orient-Gesellschaft aus Mitteln der Deutschen Forschungsgemeinschaft unternom-119a. The text belongs to a genre known as Poetic Autobiography on which see A. K. Grayson, JCS, xvii (1964), 8.

123a. But on earth hunger and death.

125c. 2nd ed. (1957), 139 f.; E. Laroche, RHA, lxxvii (1965), 65-72.

129a. For a bibliography of all important studies on these texts down to about 1960, see the bibliographies preceding the transliterations of Nos. 1-19 in Andree Herdner, Corpus des tablettes en cuniformes alphabétiques découvertes a Ras Shamra-Ugarit de 1929 à 1939 (texte), 1963. Herdner’s No. 13 is not included in pp. 129-55, where her Nos. 3 and 4 figure there in the reverse order. Each of Herdner’s bibliographies is followed by an important new, annotated transliteration of the tablet in question. In the original Ugaritic script, the texts are published in the accompanying volume of the Corpus, which bears the same tide as the other except that the parentheses at the end contain the words “figures et planches” instead of the word “texte.” The figures are identical with the autographs which accompanied the editiones principes and have not been corrected in the light of observations contained in the volume of “textes”! The planches are photographic plates, on which the writing is probably as legible as it could be made.

162c. (requesting the delivery of his bride),

163. a naptarum

189b. But in case (she is) a woman, he shall give 3 minas of silver.

192c. an ox,

195c. 163: If anyone’s free roaming (herd of) animals falls victim to a god-sent disease and he (the herdsman) treats them magically and drives them home, but allows them to join up with the animals belonging to (his) clan, he does not tell it, however, to his fellow (herdsman), and his fellow (herdsman) unwittingly drives his animals to be with (the treated animals) and they die therefrom—(then) replacement (is in order).

164: If anyone proceeds to take (animals) for the performance of feudal services and starts a quarrel . . . (1654) he shall give 1 sheep, 10 loaves of bread (and) 1 jug of strong beer and he shall resanctify his (the other man’s) house. Till the year passes in (the course of) time, he shall let alone his (the other man’s) house.

199a. A recent study of the treaty is by W. Helck, Die Beziehungen Aegyptens zu Vorderasiien im und 2. lahrtausend v. Chr. (Wiesbaden, 1962), 224-31.

199b. Here and below Tili-Teshub or Tili-Teshup, following E. Edel in JNES, viii (1949), 44-45.

201a. On the name see Edel, opcit., 45-46.

201b. n. 17. For this context E. Edel, ZAsS, x (1963), 31-35, gives: “the goddess of the field; the goddess of Nineveh”;—which he believes was originally “Ishtar of the Field; Ishtar of Nineveh”—“the god Ninatta; the god Kulitta; the goddess Khebat, the Queen of the Sky”; and then argues that “the gods, the lords of oaths” should have had a cuneiform original, the moon-good, “Sin, Lord of the Oath.”

208d. Instead now read:

He who does not put up for sale a gift of the king upon which the name of the king is scratched, and puts up for sale in exactly the manner (here described) silver, gold, garments (or) implements of bronze, and (if) you celebrate the spring festival in the fall, but are used to celebrate the fall festival in the spring, of (if) 212a. We are indebted to Prof. Klaus Baer for a photograph, collation, and new translation of this decree.

(1) The Horus: User-kha. Royal decree (to) the Chief Prophet Hem-ur. I do not permit that any man have the right to—take away any prophets (5) who are in the nome in which you are, for the corvee, as well as any construction work of the nome, except to do service for his god who is in the temple in which he is, and to conserve the temples in which they are;

levy the corvee for any construction work against any god’s fields (15) on which there is priestly service by any prophets;

(17) take away any serfs who are thereon for the corvee, as well as any construction work of the nome.

(II) They are exempt in the length of eternity by command of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Nefer-iri-ka-Re. You have no title to them in any (kind of) service.

As for any man of the nome who shall take away (20) any prophets who are on god’s fields on which they do priestly service in this nome, (26) or the serfs who are on god’s fields—(22) for the corvee, as well as any construction work of the nome—you shall send him to the law court, he being placed . . . labor . . . plowing.

(28) Any official, royal intimate, or agricultural officer who shall act contrary to this which my majesty has decreed, which has been delivered to the law court, the house, fields, people, and everything that is in his possession shall be removed, he being put on any (kind of) corvee.

The royal person was present at the sealing. Second month of the third season, day 24+.

227a. In general, see Helck, _op cit._, 5-42, for inscribed and uninscribed material. The report of the name of Sahu-Re of the Fifth Dynasty in northeast Anatolia—Helck, _op cit._, 38; Mellarta, _Anatolia c. 4000-2300 B.C._ (Cambridge Ancient History, rev. ed., Cambridge, 1962), 31, cannot be critically judged in the absence of adequate publication.

227b. The supposed First Dynasty Semer-khet is now regarded as a Third Dynasty Sekhem-khet; J. Cerné, _The Inscriptions of Sinai_, 11, Text (London, 1955), 53.

228c. Helck, _op cit._, 43-48, 68-89.

228d, n. 11. Helck, _op cit._, 18, believes that Carmel is too distant and tentatively suggests Möns Casios on the outer perimeter of Lake Bardawil. Surely this is too near.

229c. See also Helck, _Die Beziehungen Aegyptens zu Vorderasien_ (Wiesbaden, 1962), 85-87, for Asiatics named in the Middle Kingdom inscriptions at the Sinai mines.

229d. Cerny, _The Inscriptions of Sinai_, 11, 97, translates "color" wherever the present translation uses "skin"—not the danger of a sunburned complexion, but the proper appearance of turquoise in summer.

231b, n. 2. For the argument that Avaris and the later city Ramses (255, n. 7) were located, not at Tanis, but further south in the eastern Delta, see L. Habachi, "Khata'ana-Qantir: Importance" in _ASAE_, LII (1954), 443-562, with 38 plates.

231c. Also translated by Lefebvre, _op cit._, 131-36, and Brunner-Traut, _op cit._, 145-47, 284-86.

232a. H. Goedicke, _Zas_, LXXXVII (1963), 91-96, argues that the "hippopotamus canal" was not near Thebes, but in the eastern Delta, and that Apophis was demanding that Seqnen-Re remove himself from Egypt.

239d, n. 11. Smith, _op cit._, 77-78, makes "Ullaza which is on the coast of Zaruna" twin cities on the north Phoenician coast.

240b, n. 18. Most commentators now place Ni further south and west. Smith, _op cit._, 48, locates the lake of Ni near modern Arudah, southeast of Aleppo. A. H. Gardiner, _Ancient Egyptian Onomastica_ (Oxford, 1947), 1, 158-68, suggests it was surrounded by the marshy Ghab, east of the Orontes.

241b, n. 34. Smith, _op cit._, 56, tentatively places Takhshi in the Jebel Barisha, just east of die Orontes and west of Aleppo. Gardiner, _op cit._, 1, 150-52; 11, 273, suggests more generally in "north Syria."

242b. Detailed study of the lists in Helck, _op cit._, 269-322.

245d. However, Smith, _op cit._, 51, places "Shamshatuma" in northwest Syria, near Antioch. See also Y. Aharoni, _JNES_, XIX (1960), 177-83.

246b, n. 20. Smith, _op cit._, 53, has Tjerekh = Zalkhi near Jebel Aqra and Sheshrem = Shashruma near Latakia, both on the Phoenician coast; with Mendjet = Mansatu and Hetjr = Hezra’a inland toward the Orontes. He places (p. 54) Rebi = Labwa near the source of the Orontes.

246b, n. 24. However, E. Edel, _ZDPV_, LIX (1953), 155, suggests a Tell Hashbeh, somewhat west of Baalbek.

247b, n. 42. Aharoni, _op cit._, 182, suggests "the vicinity of Megiddo."

248b. See the new note to p. 241, n. 34 above.

249b. See also Helck, _op cit._, 480-514.

250b, n. 12. Helck, _op cit._, 483,507, reads: "to Qadesh, to the (sacred) barque of Baal-Eaphon, to Sopdu, . . . ."

252d. Two better possibilities for the reign of Ramses II are 1304-1237 or 1290-1223 BC: M. B. Rowton, _JNES_, XIX (1960), 15-22.

253d. Also see R. O. Faulkner, _MDIK_, xvi (1958), 93-111; Helck, _op cit._, 204-19.

256, n. 8. An _iter_ is about 10.5 kilometers. Most commentators agree in the tentative location of Shabtuna at Riblah, which is nearly 12 kilometers south of Kadesh.

259a. Also _Caminos, op cit._, 293-96.

259c. Also _Caminos, op cit._, 255-58.

260a. J. von Beckerath, _Tunis und Theben_ (Glückstadt-Hamburg, 1951), 76, suggests: "The land of Egypt had been overthrown from outside," which would accord with a foreign usurpation.

260b, n. 6. He helck, _op cit._, 247-48, 255, n. 44, believes that Arsu/Irus is certainly a personal name; see the literature he cites. On the subject of Semitic officials in Egyptian service during the New Kingdom, see J.M.A. Janssen, _Chronique d’Egypte_, xxvi (1951), 50-62.

262d, n. 3. Further on the Peoples of the Sea, see Helck, _op cit._, 240-46, with his references to other studies.

263d. He helck, _op cit._, 480, points out that the text does not prove that Ptah had a temple at Ashkelon, since the woman might have been a singer of Ptah at Memphis and of the Prince of Ashkelon.

310a. _JCS_, x (1956), 94-97.

325b, n. 2. A later, undatable scene of circumcision in the northeast temple within the enclosure of Mut at Karnak was published by M. Pillet in _ASAE_, LII (1954), 93-104.

326d, n. 1. The most imposing of these, the Metternich Stela, is presented by Nora E. Scott in _Bulletin of the Metropolitan Museum of Art_, April, 1951, 201-17.
ADDENDA

328d. See also W. Helck, Die Beziehungen Aegyptens zu Vorderasien im j. und 2. Jahrtausend v. Chr. (Wiesbaden, 1962), 49-68.

350d, n. 1. Rost’s text oilers considerably more before KB0, n. 3 begins.

355b. and duplicate KUB, xxxvi, 92, 93, 94.

359c. The king while standing drinks the two (gods), the Throne(-god) and the War-god. The king libates into the basin. Small ishtar instruments (are played), the liturgists sing. (20) The entertainer recites, the psalmist offers psalmodies, the kifas calls.

373c. A. Herman, ZAeS, LXXXV (1960), 35-42, renders: "It’s abundance when you come; it’s abundance when you come, O Nile; it’s abundance when you come! Come, to keep men and cattle alive with your plants. It’s abundance when you come; it’s abundance when you come, O Nile!"

378b, n. 15. Tekten may be related to the f-^m-warriors of II Chron. 12:3—A. H. Gardiner, Old Testament Times, (1957), 3-5.

381d. In the necropolis at Hermopolis in Middle Egypt a priest of Thoth named Petosiris constructed a tomb in the fourth century BC. The following hymn is therein put into the mouth of his grandson.

Published by G. Lefebvre, Le Tombeau de Petosiris (Cairo, 1923-24), 1, 104-05; II, 36-37; III, Pl. XVIII.

It is good to go upon the way of god.

Great things happen to him who puts it in his heart.

He is the monument upon earth of him who puts his way into his heart.

He who is on the way of god, He fulfills his span of life in joy of heart, Richer than any peer of his.

He grows old in his own town;

He is in honor with his nome;

All of his body grows young as a child;

His many children before him are nobles of the villages, Son following upon son.

His countenance appears like the sun-disk, when it presents itself.

Awe of him is in the hearts of men,

Love of him in the hearts of women.

He reaches the necropolis in joy of heart,

With a good embalment of the work of Anubis,

While the children of his children are in his place.

When he has passed from life, Those in his town say of him:

"He was a follower of the Foremost of the Westerners in whom god found no fault."2 1 Oriris.

2 Lefebvre cites several biblical parallels, notably Psalm 128.

405a. Two recent studies are a translation and commentary by R. O. Faulkner, JEA, XLII (1956), 21-50; and a review of the meaning of the text by R. J. Williams, JEA, XLVIII (1962), 49-56. Williams argues that it is no skeptical denial of after-life, but rather a protest against "cosdy and elaborate preparations for the preservation of the body after death."

406b. Perhaps here and in the third stanza, "the stench of vultures": A. M. Blackman, Orientalia, VII NS (1938), 67-68.

406d, n. 18. Faulkner, op.cit., 28, renders: "(More than) a town belonging to the monarch(?) which mutters sedition when his back is turned."

406d, n. 19. Williams, op.cit., 55, n.4, notes several "literary reminiscences" from the Admonitions of Ipu-wer (pp. 441-44 below), "which afford patent evidence of the priority" of Ipu-wer.

407b, n. 27. In the soul’s final speech, Faulkner, op.cit., 30, translates the first sentence with "complaint," rather than "mourning." Williams, op.cit., 56, renders the following sentences: "You must make offering on the brazier, (or) cling to life, as you say. Desire that I (remain) here after you have rejected the West, or desire, rather, that you reach the West, your body be buried in the earth, and I alight after you have died. Then we shall make our abode together."

407c. Also translated by G. Lefebvre, Romans et contes égyptiens (Paris, 1949), 41-69.

407d, n. 1. The word here translated "peasant" ("field-dweller") might throughout be translated "oasis-dweller."

408a. E. F. Wente, JNES, xxiv (1965), 105-09, translates this sentence: "It is for its (i.e., the wisp’s) price that I will buy back my donkey if you seize possession of it (15) for a (mere) filling of its mouth with a wisp of Upper Egyptian barley." The peasant offers to buy back a confiscated donkey for the cost of the damaged grain.

408b. W. K. Simpson, JAOs, LXXVII (1958), 50-51, points out an allusion to this story on a Rameseside ostracon: "I am killed, my donkeys are seized, and (even) the complaint is taken from my mouth!"

410b, n. 29. Lefebvre, op.cit., 68, translates: "The complainant becomes a sufferer, and the sufferer will be a petitioner: (his) enemy is (his) murderer." All the peasant gained from his complaint was the prospect of being killed; he might as well appeal to Anubis.

412b. The text has been restudied by Z. zaba, Les Maximes de Ptahhotep (Prague, 1956). J. Spiegel, Das Werden der altägyptischen Hochkultur (Heidelberg, 1953), 455-91, feels that the difference between Ptah-hotep and most of the later instructions is that this document was directed toward a candidate for high office, rather than a relatively humble man. R. A. Caminos, Literary Fragments in the Hieratic Script (Oxford, 1956), Pis. 28-30, offers tattered additions to British Museum 10509.

412d, n. 8. G. Fecht, Der Habgerichte und die Maat in der Lehre des Ptahhotep (Glückstadt und Hamburg, 1958), 11-34, has an extended discussion of this maxim. For his translation he sees a parallel with the Instruction for King Meri-ka-Re, 54-56 (p. 415 below).

414b, n. 28. Spiegel, op.cit., 348-49, treats this section in terms of the ancient psychology of education.
ADDENDA

444. L. A. Volten, Zwei altägyptische politische Schriften (Kopenhagen, 1945), publishes the Papyrus Karlsruhe VI. Caminos, op.cit., Pis. 26-27, publishes additions to Papyrus Moscow 4658. G. Posener, Literature et politique (Paris, 1956), 16, points out that "a talker is a troublemaker" in II. 23 and 27 is a rejection of the encouragement to protest in the Peasant, the Prophecy of Neferti, and the Admonitions of Ipu-her; it leans to the loyalist advice of the Middle Kingdom.

418b, n. 1. W. C. Hayes, The Middle Kingdom in Egypt (Cambridge Ancient History, rev. ed.; Cambridge, 1961), 5 and back cover, makes Wah-ka-Re Kheti III, rather than II; makes the Prophecy of Neferti, and the Admonitions of Ipu-her; it points out that "a talker is a troublemaker" in II. 23 and 27 is a rejection of the encouragement to protest in the Peasant, the Prophecy of Neferti, and the Admonitions of Ipu-her; it leans to the loyalist advice of the Middle Kingdom.

424b. G. Posener, Revue d'Egyptologie, vi (1951), 27-48, lists several more instructions, many of them fragmentary or present only in allusion.

The text on an ostraca of early Nineteenth Dynasty date has more than 15 lines of advice similar to that in the Instruction of Amen-em-Opet:—A. H. Gardiner, WZKM, IV (1957), 43-45.

In JE, XLV (1962), 25-35, H. Goedicke published a stela of an overseer of priests, Mentu-hotep son of Hapi, of the Middle Kingdom, with moralizing phrases. Goedicke's translation, "My instruction to my children (is) as follows," was criticized by W. Scholten in JE, I (1954), 6-12, who translated, "(I am) an instructor of children in . . . speaking," and then took the ensuing "advice" as epithets of Mentu-hotep. There are still nuggets of advice: "Incline your heart. Do not be prejudiced against a petitioner until he has said what he came for . . . the good character of a man is more to him than a thousand gifts in acts. The testimony of men lies in that statement in the mouth of commoners: 'A man's monument is his goodness. The wicked of character is a forgotten man.'"

Late books of wisdom in demotic are: A. Volten, Kopenhagener Texte zum demotischen Weisheitsbuch (Kopenhagen, 1940); Das demotische Weisheitsbuch (Kopenhagen, 1941), including Papyrus Insering in translation; and S.R.K. Glanville, Catalogue of the Demotic Papyri in the British Museum. II. The Instructions of Onchsheshonqy (London, 1955). Glanville remarks that the demotic wisdom book is closely related in tone to the Instruction of Ani (pp. 420-21 here).

432c. We now credit the author Khety with other compositions. See Posener, op. cit., passim.

432d, n. 2. The Kemit or "Conclusion" or similar has now been identified as a Middle Kingdom practice manual for prospective government clerks—G. Posener, in B. van de Walle, La Transmission des textes littéraires égyptiens (Bruxelles, 1948), 41-50; Literature et politique, 4-5.

441b. For an argument that the document applies to the situation in the late Thirteenth Dynasty, see J. Van Seters, JEA, L (1964), 12-23.

445b. Posener, op. cit., 151, suggests that the attack by foreigners has crowded the fortresses where Egyptians might seek asylum, so that new refugees meet deaf ears.

445c. Posener, op. cit., 151-52, translates: "One bursts into laughter at illness; one will not weep because of death. One will not spend the night fasting because of death, the heart of man being absorbed in himself."

445d. Posener, op. cit., 157, translates in the sense: "Thus it is that a king will reveal himself to the south." He does not believe that the text necessitates a southern origin for Amen-em-het.

448c. Another example of a similar oracle given by C. F. Nims, JNES, vii (1948), 156-62.

467a. E. F. Wente, JNES, xxi (1962), 118-28, offers a commentary on harpers' songs shown in the tombs.

467d. There is comprehensive coverage by S. Schott, Altagyptische Liebeslieder (Zurich, 1950). Four of the songs below are also translated by J. M. Plumley in Documents from Old Testament Times, ed. by D. W. Thomas (London, 1958), 187-91.

469c. In WZKM, LIV (1957), 46-50, H. Goedicke translates the text simply as a call to the herd: "When the herdsman is in the water among the fish, he keeps talking with the shad and greets the oaryphynx fish: 'O our herdsman, O westerner (¿), the herdsman of the west!"

470d, n. 1. In agreement with Hayes is L. Habachi, ANAE, x (1954), 443-56.

475b. The most significant new fragments were presented by R. A. Caminos, JEA, xli (1958), 3-4. PIS. Pi. vii. W. Helck deals with the geography of Syria in his Beziehungen Aegyptiens zu Vorderasien im 3. un 2. Jahrtausend v. Chr. (Wiesbaden, 1962), 328-33.

476b. Another version (Caminos, op. cit., Pl. 11, 1-10) gives the name as Iry-iry.

477a. For Shawe, cf. "the mountain Saue, the mountain which abuts on the Lebanon proper" (p. 282 above). For "bears," see the article by G. Posener in Orientalia NS, xi, (1944), 193-204.

477c. The text of Caminos, op. cit., HI, 1. 10, gives biblical Edrei.

495c. A. Volten, Demotische Traumdeutung (Kopenhagen, 1942), compares two demotic texts with the text here presented. On the general subject, see L. Oppenheim, The Interpretation of Dreams in the Ancient Near East (Philadelphia, 1956).

653a. All the bibliographical references of the second edition of ANET have been retained for the record. Additional bibliographical information down to 1964 may be found in H. Donner and W. Röllig, Kanaäische und aramäische Inschriften (Wiesbaden, 1962-64). Only some of Donner-Röllig's references have been repeated here. Further bibliographical help on individual points can be obtained from (C.-F. Jean and) J. Hofftjer, Dictionnaire des inscriptions semitiques de l'ouest (Leiden, 1965).

Abbreviations

AAA Annals of Archaeology and Anthropology (Liverpool, 1908-).
AASOR Annual of the American Schools of Oriental Research (New Haven, 1920-).
ABL Assyrian and Babylonian Letters Belonging to the Kouyunjik Collection(s) of the British Museum, by R. F. Harper (Chicago, 1892-1914).
ABoT Angara arkeoloji müzesinde bulunan Bogazkýýy tabletleri (Istanbul, 1948).
AfK Archiv für Keilschriftforschung (Berlin, 1923-1925).
AFO Archiv für Orientforschung (Berlin, Vols, hi ff., 1926-).
AHw W. von Soden, Arkadisches Handwörterbuch (Wiesbaden, 1959-).
AJA American Journal of Archaeology (Concord, N.H. etc., 1885-).
AJSL American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures (Chicago, 1884-1941).
AKA See King
AKTRSch Die alphabetischen Keilschrifttexte von Ras Shamra, by H. Bauer (Berlin, 1936).
AnSt Anatolian Studies (London, 1951-).
AO Der alte Orient (Leipzig, 1900-).
APAW Abhandlungen der preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften (Berlin, 1804-).
AR See Breasted, Luckenbill
ARM Archives royales de Mari, TCL, xxn- (Paris, 1941-).
ARMT Archives royales de Mari (Paris, 1950-).
ArO Archiv Orientáliš (Prague, 1953-).
AS Assyriological Studies, Oriental Institute, University of Chicago (Chicago, 1931-).
ASAE Annales du service des antiquités de l’Égypte (1899-).
BA Beiträge zur Assyriologie und semitischen Sprachwissenschaft (Leipzig, 1889-).
BASOR (SS) Bulletin of the American Schools of Oriental Research (1919-). (Supplementary Studies [1945-])
BAWb. See Meissner
BE Babylonian Expedition of the University of Pennsylvania, Series A: Cuneiform Texts, edited by H. V. Hilprecht (1893-1914).
BG The Babylonian Genesis, by A. Heidel (Chicago, 1942).
BIFAO Bulletin de l’institut français d’archéologie Orientale (Cairo, 1901-).
BIN Babylonian Inscriptions in the Collection of James B. Nies (New Haven, 1918-).
BiOr. Bibliotheca Orientalis (Leiden, 1943-).
BoTU Die Boghazkýyýy-Texte in Umschrift (Leipzig, 1922 ff.).
BrM British Museum
CAD The Assyrian Dictionary of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago (Chicago 1956-).
Camb. See Strassmaier
CH Code of Hammurabi
CIS Corpus Inscriptionum Semiticarum (Paris, 1881-).
CT Cuneiform Texts from Babylonian Tablets, etc., in the British Museum (London, 1896-).
Cyr. See Strassmaier
Dar. See Strassmaier

GCC Goucher College Cuneiform Inscriptions (New Haven, 1923-).

GETh R. Campbell Thompson, The Epic of Gilgamesh (Oxford, 1930).

GGA Göttingische gelehrte Anzeigen (Göttingen, 1826).

HGE F. M. Böhl, Het Gilgamesj-Epos (Amsterdam, 1941).

HSS Harvard Semitic Series (Cambridge, Mass., 1912-).

HT Hitit Texts in the Cuneiform Character from Tablets in the British Museum (London, 1920).

HUCA Hebrew Union College Annual (Cincinnati, 1924-).

IBoT Istanbul arkeoloji müzelerinde bulunan Bogazkpy tableteri I ve II (Istanbul, 1944 and 1947).

IEJ Israel Exploration Journal (Jerusalem, 1951-).

JA Journal asiatique (Paris, 1822-).

JAOS Journal of the American Oriental Society (New Haven, 1843-).

JBL Journal of Biblical Literature and Exegesis (Middletown, Conn., etc., 1881-).

JBR Journal of Bible and Religion (Wolcott, N.Y., 1933-).

JCS Journal of Cuneiform Studies (New Haven, 1947-).

JEA Journal of Egyptian Archaeology (London, 1914-).

JEOL Jaarbericht, Vooraziaatsch-egyptisch Gezelschap “Ex Oriente Lux” (Leyden, 1933-).

JNES Journal of Near Eastern Studies (Chicago, 1942-).

JPOS Journal of the Palestine Oriental Society (Jerusalem, 1920-).

JQR Jewish Quarterly Review (London, etc., 1889-).

JRAS Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (London, 1834-).

JSS Journal of Semitic Studies (Manchester, 1956-).

K Kuyounjik (British Museum, London).

KAJ Keilschrifttexte aus Assur juristischen Inhalts (WVDOG, i [1927]) edited by E. Ebeling.

KA V Keilschrifttexte aus Assur verschiedenen Inhalts (WVDOG, xxxv [1920]) edited by O. Schroeder.

KB Keilschriftliche Bibliothek edited by E. Schräder (Berlin, 1889-1900).

KB 0 Keilschrifttexte aus Boghazkii, i-vi (WVDOG, xxx [1916] and xxxvi [1921]).

KUB Keilschrifturkunden aus Boghazkii, i-xxxiv (Berlin, 1921-1944).

LKA E. Ebeling, Literarische Keilschrifttexte aus Assur (Berlin, 1953).

MAOG Mitteilungen der alterorientalischen Gesellschaft (Leipzig, 1925-).

MDIK Mitteilungen des deutschen Instituts für ägyptische Altertumskunde in Kairo (Augsburg, Berlin, 1930-).

Meissner, BAWb. B. Meissner, Beiträge zum assyrischen Wörterbuch No. 1 (Assyriological Studies, No. 1), No. 11 (Assyriological Studies, No. 4) (Chicago, 1934, 1932).

MIO Mitteilungen des Instituts für Orientforschung (Berlin, 1953-).

678
ABBREVIATIONS

MVAG Mitteilungen der vorderasiatisch-aegyptischen Gesellschaft (Berlin, 1896-).

Nb. See Strassmaier

Nbn. See Strassmaier

NF Neue Folge.

NS Nova series.

OIP Oriental Institute Publications, Oriental Institute, University of Chicago (Chicago, 1924-).

OLZ Orientalistische Literaturzeitung (Berlin and Leipzig, 1898-).

PAPS Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society (Philadelphia, 1838-).

PBC Le potme babylonien de la creation, by R. Labat (Paris, 1935).

PBS See UM

PEQ Palestine Exploration Quarterly (London, 1869-).

PRT E. G. Klauber, Politisch-religiöse Texte aus der Sargonidenzeit (Leipzig, 1913).

RA Revue d'Assyriologie et d'archéologie Orientale (Paris, 1884-).

Rawlinson H. C. Rawlinson, The Cuneiform Inscriptions of Western Asia (London, 1861-1884).

KB Revue biblique (Paris, 1892-).

RHA Revue hittite et asiatique (Paris, 1930-).

RHR Revue de l'histoire des religions (Paris, 1880-).

RSO Rivista degli studi orientali (Rome, 1907-).

RT Recueil de travaux relatifs à la philologie et à l'archéologie égyptiennes et assyriennes (Paris, 1870-1923).

Sachau E. Sachau, editor, Aramäische Papyrus und ostraka aus einer jüdischen Militär-Kolonie zu Elephantine (Leipzig, 1911). Texts and plates in separate volumes. Citation by plate unless otherwise indicated.

SAOC Studies in Ancient Oriental Civilization (Chicago, 1931-).

SBAW Sitzungsberichte der bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften (Munich, 1871-).

Schott, GE A. Schott, Das Gilgamesch-Epos (Leipzig, 1934).

$L$ See Deimel

SLTN S. N. Kramer, Sumerian Literary Texts from Nippur, AASOR, xxi (New Haven, 1944).

SPA W Sitzungsberichte der preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften (Berlin, 1882-).

SRT Edward Chiera, Sumerian Religious Texts (Upland, Pa., 1924).

STC The Seven Tablets of Creation, by L. W. King, 2 Vols. (London, 1902).

STVC Edward Chiera, Sumerian Texts of Varied Contents, OIP, xvi (Chicago, 1934).

TB Talmud Babylonicum

TCL Textes cuniformes, Musee du Louvre (Paris, 1910-).

Thompson, EG R. Campbell Thompson, The Epic of Gilgarnish (London, 1928).

TLZ Theologische Literaturzeitung (Berlin, 1876).
ABBREVIATIONS

TRS Textes religieux sumSriens du Louvre, by Henri de Genouillac (Musée du Louvre, Textes cuneiformes, xv-xvi [Paris, 1930]).
TuM Texte und Materialien der Frau Professor Hilprecht Collection of Babylonian Antiquities im Eigentum der Universität fena (Leipzig, 1937-).
UCPSP University of California Publications in Semitic Philology (Berkeley, 1907).
UM University Museum, University of Pennsylvania, Publications of the Babylonian Section (Philadelphia, 1911-).
Unugnad A. Ungnad, editor, Aramäische Papyrus aus Elephantine (Leipzig, 1911). Citations are by number of the document unless otherwise indicated.
Untersuch. Untersuchungen zur Geschichte und Altertumskunde Ägyptens (Leipzig, 1896-).
Urk. Urkunden des ägyptischen Altertums (Leipzig, 1903-).
UVB Vorläufiger Bericht über die .. Ausgrabungen in Uruk-Warka (Berlin, 1930-).
VA Vorderasiatische Abteilung, Thontafelsammlung (Berlin).
VAB Vorderasiatische Bibliothek (Leipzig, 1907-1916).
BVoT A. Götze, Verstreute Boghazkpi-Texte (Marburg, 1930).
FS Vorderasiatische Schriftdenkmäler, Berlin, Staatliche Museen (Leipzig, 1907-).
VT Vetus Testamentum (Leyden, 1951).
WO Die Welt des Orients (Göttingen, 1947-).
WVDG Wissenschaftliche Veröffentlichungen der deutschen Orient-Gesellschaft, Berlin (Leipzig, 1900-).
WZKM Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes (Vienna, 1887-1940).
YOS Yale Oriental Series, Babylonian Texts (New Haven, 1915-).
ZA Zeitschrift für Assyriologie und verwandte Gebiete (Leipzig, 1886-).
ZAeS Zeitschrift für ägyptische Sprache und Altertumskunde (Leipzig, 1863-).
ZAW Zeitschrift für die alttestamentliche Wissenschaft (Berlin, Glessen, 1881-).
ZDMG Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft (Leipzig, 1847-).
ZDPV Zeitschrift des deutschen Palästina-Vereins (Leipzig, 1878-).

{680}
Indexes
THE purpose of the following index is to suggest to the student of the Old Testament some significant points of interest in the translations of the texts from the ancient Near Eastern world. The index includes two types of references: first, there are those references to the books of the Old Testament which are listed in the introductions and footnotes to the translations; secondly, there is a listing of biblical analogues suggested by the various contributors to the volume. By the listings of the latter category neither the translators nor the editor venture any scientific opinion with regard to the relationship between the biblical reference and the text cited. Since the noting of these possible biblical parallels was a by-product of the main work of attempting to render accurately the principal texts into English, it is not to be expected that the list be comprehensive. It is intended to be suggestive rather than exhaustive. Scholars who approach this work from a primary concern for the biblical material, it is to be hoped, will be able in subsequent years to enlarge greatly upon this list. This index should be used along with the index of names: many biblical names of persons and places will be found in the alphabetical listing there, rather than according to the chapter and verse of the Bible.

According to the system of reference used here each column of the page of this book is divided into two halves: the first column of the page, into a and b; the second column, into c and d. When the biblical reference does not actually appear printed in a footnote or in an introduction to a translation, the reader must read the entire quarter of the page of text or annotation in order to judge what portion of it is intended as a possible parallel to the biblical citation. The biblical references are listed according to the order and numbering of the Hebrew Bible. Numberings used in the English Bible have been given in parentheses.
INDEX OF BIBLICAL REFERENCES

71:20 .......................... 380c
72 ...................... 380c
72:5-8 .......................... 380c
73:18-19 .......................... 381c
73:22 .......................... 381c
73:27 .......................... 381c
74:6 .......................... 381c
79:11 .......................... 381c
80 ........................ 381c
80:6 (Eng. 80:5) .......................... 399d
82:1 .......................... 399d
82:2 .......................... 399d
86:16 .......................... 399d
88:1 .......................... 399d
90:4 .......................... 400c
90:8 .......................... 400c
90:10 .......................... 400c
92:10-7 (Eng. 92:5-6) .......................... 400c
92:10 (Eng. 92:9) .......................... 400c
95:3 .......................... 401c
97:6-10 .......................... 401c
97:9-10 .......................... 401c
102:1-12 (Eng. 102:1-11) .......................... 401c
102:18 .......................... 401c
103:14 .......................... 401c
104:6 .......................... 401c
104:10 .......................... 401c
104:11-14 .......................... 401c
104:14 .......................... 401c
104:18 .......................... 401c
104:20-21 .......................... 401c
104:22-23 .......................... 401c
104:24 .......................... 401c
104:25-26 .......................... 401c
104:27 .......................... 401c
104:28 .......................... 401c
104:30-31 .......................... 401c
107:20 .......................... 401c
109 .......................... 401c
114:8 .......................... 401c
115:17 .......................... 401c
116:10 .......................... 401c
116:10-19 .......................... 401c
121:4 .......................... 401c
136 .......................... 401c
136:12 .......................... 401c
139:6 .......................... 401c
139:7-12 .......................... 401c
145:7-9 .......................... 401c
147:4 .......................... 401c
147:8-9 .......................... 401c
147:15-18 .......................... 401c
148:1 .......................... 401c

PROVERBS
1:8-9 .......................... 412c
2:4-5 .......................... 412c
2:16-19 .......................... 412c
3:8 (LXX) .......................... 412c
3:9-10 .......................... 412c
3:17-28 .......................... 412c
4:22 .......................... 412c
4:23-24 .......................... 412c
5:1-5 .......................... 412c
5:18 .......................... 412c
5:25-26 .......................... 412c

SONG OF SONGS
1:9 .......................... 412c
1:13 .......................... 412c
1:13-14 .......................... 412c
1:16 .......................... 412c
1:19-20 .......................... 412c
1:29-30 .......................... 412c
3:6 .......................... 412c
3:28-29 .......................... 412c

LAMENTATIONS
11:1 .......................... 412c

ECCLESIASTES
1:1-2 .......................... 412c
1:4 .......................... 412c
1:10-11 .......................... 412c

JOB
3:11-12 .......................... 412c
4:10-12 .......................... 412c
5:2-6 .......................... 412c
9:10 .......................... 412c
9:24 .......................... 412c
17:6 .......................... 412c
19:14 .......................... 412c
20:6-9 .......................... 412c
21:23-24 .......................... 412c
22:22-23 .......................... 412c
23:3-4 .......................... 412c
26:14 .......................... 412c
29:12-13 .......................... 412c
30:9-10 .......................... 412c
30:25-26 .......................... 412c
31:13 .......................... 412c
31:13-20 .......................... 412c
31:16 .......................... 412c
31:19-20 .......................... 412c
31:29-30 .......................... 412c
33:6 .......................... 412c
34:28-29 .......................... 412c

RUTH
3:11 .......................... 412c

{685}
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>INDEX OF BIBLICAL REFERENCES</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>9:7 .................................. 467c</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9:8-9 .................................. 90a</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9:10 .................................. 467d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9:11 .................................. 425b,d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9:12 .................................. 425d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10:11 .................................. 326c</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10:18 .................................. 425b</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12:1 .................................. 433d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12:11-12 .................................. 412b</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12:15-17 .................................. 425c</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12:19-7 .................................. 475d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DANIEL</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8:5 .................................. 131b</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>263c 6:37-39 12:2-9 263d 288d 291b 34:4-15 4953 424d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II CHRONICLES</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4:15-16 .................................. 426d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4:16-16 .................................. 426c</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WISDOM OF SOLOMON</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9:5 .................................. 143ci</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ECCLESIASTICUS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7:29-31 .................................. 427b</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9:2-8 .................................. 427b</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26:20 .................................. 426a</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28:2 .................................. 426d</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>39:5 .................................. 427b</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

{686}
In this index are the names of deities, demons, persons, places, and other proper names which appear in the translations of the texts. In addition this listing includes the names of importance in the introductions and in the footnotes. In choosing the names from the footnotes and introductions some discretion has been exercised in excluding the more general geographical designations which, if included, would have made the index unnecessarily cumbersome.

The simpler forms of the names (the spellings without diacritics) have been used in the index, even though the reference is to a more technical spelling in the footnotes, in the introductions, or within parentheses in the text proper. In most cases the preferences of individual translators in the spelling of proper names have been preserved in the alphabetical listings; the one exception to this rule is in cases where the variant spellings appear in the adjacent positions in the index.

Identification of ancient place names should be sought in the footnotes or within the parentheses following the occurrence of the name in the translations, rather than in the index itself. This procedure will enable the reader to be more fully aware of the problems involved in some of the proposed identifications.

In the alphabetical arrangement of the list the 'aleph ('a') and the 'ayn ('a') have been disregarded for purposes of classification. Likewise the Arabic article, el-, either in this form, or when assimilated with the following consonant, does not generally figure in the arrangement of the names. In the transliteration of some names the Semitic 'ayn is transliterated by the 'aleph if the name is from a cuneiform text.
INDEX

Zababashumiddin, 272, 273
Zabar ... ga, 45, 46
Zahibe, 283
Zabina, 308
Zabiria, 308
Zabu, 612
Zabulanu, 329
Zahgurim, 71
Zahirim, 71
Zaiuran, 299
Zakar-Baal, 26-29
Zakir, 655, 656
Zakkur, 548, 549
Zalanuisas, 126
Zalkhi, 243
Zallul, 483
Zalpa, 192
Zalpuwa, 399
Zalul, 217
Zamama, 123
Zamban, 316
Zame, 308
Zampanas, 205
Zamua, 277, 558, 559
Za-nakht, 227
Zaphon, 133, 134, 136-142, 147, 148
Zappanas, 206
Zaqaq, 386
Zaribtu, 287
Zarpanitu, 533, 538
Zarqu, 486
Zarrum, 668
Zaruna, 558
Zashapunas, 126
Zatatna, 484
Zazzisa, 318
Zebrion, 329
Zedpet, 477
Zer-DU-lishir, 302
Zeria, 314
Zer-qiqisha, 221
Zerpanit, 659
Zibe-zibe, 218
Zigaratta, 125
Zihana, 399
Zike, 220
Ziku, 70
Zilu, 488
Zimarra, 283
Zimreda, 484, 489, 490
Zimri-Lim, 482, 556, 623, 625, 627, 630, 631, 632
Zimudar, 217
Zinjiri, 654, 655
Zintubis, 394
Zinu, 629
Zinzira, 352
Ziparwas, 497
Ziplanta, 191
Zippalanda, 201, 205, 394, 398
Zippalandy, 191
Zippor, 258
Zirdamyashda, 485
Ziria, 308
Zise, 558
Zisi, 70
Zisummu, 335
Zitanu, 283
Zitharias, Zithariyas, 201, 205, 354
Ziukkinna, 70
Ziusudra, 42-44, 88, 594
Zoan, 252
Zohah, 298
Zu, 110-113, 116, 337. 514-517
Zuabu, 564
Zu-bird, 109
Zu-Hadnim, 625
Zuliyas, 207
Zulkia, 318
Zulum, 71
Zulum, 131, 135
Zulummar, 71, 604
Zulummaru, 440
Zanzurih, 352
Zuqaqip, 265
Zurata, 485, 487
Zuruban, 482
Zuwa, 546
Zuzu, 217

{710}
The following material was unfortunately omitted from page 676.

499a. All the bibliographical references of the second edition of ANET have been retained for the record. Additional bibliographical information down to 1964 may be found in H. Donner and W. Röllig, Kanaänische und aramäische Inschriften (Wiesbaden, 1962-64). Only some of Donner-Röllig's references have been repeated here. Further bibliographical help on individual points can be obtained from (C.-F. Jean and) J. Hoftijzer, Dictionnaire des inscriptions simitiques de l'ouest (Leiden, 1965).

